THE CODEX OF JUSTINIAN

The Codex of Justinian is, together with the Digest, the core of the great Byzantine compilation of Roman law called the Corpus Iuris Civilis. The Codex gathers legal proclamations issued by Roman emperors from the second to the sixth centuries CE. Its influence on subsequent legal development in the medieval and early modern world has been almost incalculable. But the Codex has not, until now, been credibly translated into English. This translation, with a facing Latin and Greek text (from Paul Krüger's ninth edition of the Codex), is based on one made by Justice Fred Blume in the 1920s, but left unpublished for almost a century. It is accompanied by introductions explaining the background of the translation, a bibliography and glossary, and notes that help in understanding the text. Anyone with an interest in the Codex, whether an interested novice or a professional historian, will find ample assistance here.

FRED H. BLUME was appointed to the Wyoming Supreme Court in 1921 and retired from the bench in 1962 as a greatly honored jurist. He began his translation of the Codex of Justinian in 1919, a labor with which he continued for much of his life.

BRUCE W. FRIER is the John and Teresa D'Arms Distinguished University Professor of Classics and Roman Law at the University of Michigan, Ann Arbor. He is the author of numerous books and articles on economic and social history, focusing especially on Roman law. His publications include Landlords and Tenants in Imperial Rome (1980), The Rise of the Roman Jurists (1985), A Casebook on the Roman Law of Delict (1989), A Casebook on Roman Family Law (2003), and The Modern Law of Contracts, now in its third edition (2012) and written with Michigan Law School colleague J. J. White.

Justice Fred H. Blume, circa 1921, the year he acceded to the Wyoming Supreme Court and shortly after he had begun his translation of the Codex of Justinian.

THE CODEX OF JUSTINIAN

A New Annotated Translation, with Parallel Latin and Greek Text

BASED ON A TRANSLATION BY JUSTICE FRED H. BLUME

BRUCE W. FRIER, GENERAL EDITOR

EDITORS

Serena Connolly

Simon Corcoran

Michael Crawford

John Noël Dillon

Dennis P. Kehoe

Noel Lenski

Thomas A. J. McGinn

Charles F. Pazdernik

Benet Salway

With contributions by Timothy Kearley

THE CODEX OF JUSTINIAN

A New Annotated Translation, with Parallel Latin and Greek Text

VOLUME 1

Introductory matter and books I–III

CAMBRIDGE UNIVERSITY PRESS

CAMBRIDGE
UNIVERSITY PRESS

University Printing House, Cambridge CB2 8BS, United Kingdom

Cambridge University Press is part of the University of Cambridge.

It furthers the University's mission by disseminating knowledge in the pursuit of education, learning and research at the highest international levels of excellence.

www.cambridge.org
Information on this title: www.cambridge.org/9780521196826

© Cambridge University Press 2016

This publication is in copyright. Subject to statutory exception and to the provisions of relevant collective licensing agreements, no reproduction of any part may take place without the written permission of Cambridge University Press.

First published 2016

Printed in the United Kingdom by TJ International Ltd. Padstow Cornwall

A catalogue record for this publication is available from the British Library

Library of Congress Cataloging in Publication data
Codex (Corpus juris civilis). English.
The Codex of Justinian : a new annotated translation, with parallel Latin and Greek text based on a translation by Justice Fred H. Blume / Bruce W. Frier, General Editor ; Editors: Serena Connolly, Simon Corcoran, Michael Crawford, John Noël Dillon, Dennis P. Kehoe, Noel Lenski, Thomas A. J. McGinn, Charles F. Pazdernik, Benet Salway.
pages cm
Includes bibliographical references and index.
ISBN 978-0-521-19682-6 (hardback)
1. Codex (Corpus juris civilis). 2. Roman law – Sources. I. Blume, Fred H., 1875–1971, translator. II. Frier, Bruce W., 1943– editor. III. Connolly, Serena, editor. IV. Corcoran, Simon, editor. V. Crawford, Michael, editor. VI. Dillon, John Noel, editor. VII. Kehoe, Dennis P., editor. VIII. Lenski, Noel Emmanuel, editor. IX. McGinn, Thomas A. J., editor. X. Pazdernik, Charles Frederick, editor. XI. Salway, Benet, editor. XII. Title.
KJA1192.2 2016
340.5'4–dc23
2015015128

ISBN – 3 Volume Set 978-0-521-19682-6 Hardback
ISBN – Volume I 978-1-107-11975-8 Hardback
ISBN – Volume II 978-1-107-11981-9 Hardback
ISBN – Volume III 978-1-107-11982-6 Hardback

Cambridge University Press has no responsibility for the persistence or accuracy of URLs for external or third-party internet websites referred to in this publication, and does not guarantee that any content on such websites is, or will remain, accurate or appropriate.

Contents

VOLUME 1

VOLUME 2

VOLUME 3

Illustrations

Notes on contributors

SERENA CONNOLLY is Associate Professor of Classics at Rutgers, The State University of New Jersey, and a social historian of the Roman Empire. Her research has drawn on legal texts to increase our understanding of the legal problems faced by a wide array of Romans, the methods they used to solve them, and the social significance of their communication with Roman officials and the Emperor. She is the author of Lives behind the Laws: The World of the Codex Hermogenianus (2010), as well as related articles and chapters, including "Quasi ancilla, quasi libera: Diogenia and the Everyday Experience of Slaves," American Journal of Ancient History 3/4 (2004/5 [2007]): 171–88; "Women at the Edge: Gender and Ethnicity in Law at Dura-Europos," Diotima: Gender and Diversity in Place: Proceedings of the Fourth Conference on Feminism and Classics (2006); and "Roman Ransomers," Ancient History Bulletin 20 (2006): 115–31.

SIMON CORCORAN gained his doctorate from the University of Oxford in 1992. This was published in 1996 as The Empire of the Tetrarchs: Imperial Pronouncements and Government AD 284–324, for which he was awarded the Kupiszewski Prize in 1998. He joined the History Department at University College London in 1999, becoming Senior Research Fellow. Under the aegis of Projet Volterra, he has been researching Roman law in the early Middle Ages up to 1100, especially the manuscript transmission of legal texts. He and his project colleague, Benet Salway, identified fragments of the lost Gregorian Codex in 2010. He has also published other Roman legal texts from inscriptions, papyri, and medieval manuscripts, including material from the Codex of Justinian. He has published widely on the legal and administrative history of late antiquity.

MICHAEL CRAWFORD is the principal editor of Roman Statutes and of Imagines Italicae, which includes a significant body of Italic juridical epigraphy; he has been a Director or Co-Director of Law and Empire, Law after Empire at UCL since their inception; he is currently preparing an edition of the selections from the Digest and Institutions in the so-called Collectio Britannica (BL, MS Add.

8873), which requires the re-writing of much of the story of Roman law in the Middle Ages.

JOHN NOËL DILLON is an independent scholar and academic translator currently living in Berkeley, California. His research is dedicated foremost to Roman administrative and legal texts, and their interpretation. In 2012, he published The Justice of Constantine: Law, Communication, and Control, a study of the administrative legislation and policy of Emperor Constantine as witnessed by his extant legislation. Other research interests include Roman Republican religion and politics. He has taught at Heidelberg University, Exeter University, and Peking University.

BRUCE W. FRIER is the John and Teresa D'Arms Distinguished University Professor of Classics and Roman Law at the University of Michigan. He is the author of several books on Roman law, including Landlords and Tenants in Imperial Rome (for which he received the Goodwin Award of Merit), The Rise of the Roman Jurists, and casebooks on Roman delict and (with Thomas McGinn) on Roman family law, in addition to dozens of articles and book reviews on law-related subjects. His research interests turn primarily on studying Roman legal sources in relation to their social background.

TIMOTHY KEARLEY is Professor Emeritus of Law, and former Director of the Law Library, at the University of Wyoming. His scholarly interests revolved around public international law until he discovered Justice Fred H. Blume's unpublished manuscript translation of the Justinian Codex and Novellae Constitutiones at the University of Wyoming when he began his position there in 1993. Since then he has edited Justice Blume's manuscript and published it on the web; written about Justice Blume's translation, Samuel Parsons Scott's life, and the transmission history of the Novels; and co-authored (with David J. D. Miller) a selective translation of Wilhelm Kroll's informative Preface to the Novels.

DENNIS P. KEHOE teaches at Tulane University, where he is Professor of Classical Studies, and he was Andrew W. Mellon Professor in the Humanities 2010–2013. His scholarship focuses on the relationship between Roman law and the economy of the Roman Empire. His chief publications include The Jurists and the Roman Agrarian Economy (1997); Law and the Rural Economy in the Roman Empire (2007); with B. W. Frier, "Law and Economic Institutions," in W. Scheidel, I. Morris, R. Saller (eds.), The Cambridge Economic History of the Greco-Roman World (Cambridge University Press, 2007), pp. 113–43; and "The State and Production in the Roman Agrarian Economy," in A. Bowman, A. Wilson (eds.),The Agricultural Economy: Production and Consumption (2013), pp. 33–53.

NOEL LENSKI is Professor of Classics and History at Yale University. He is the author of Failure of Empire: Valens and the Roman State in the Fourth Century AD (2002) and Constantine and the Cities (2016). He has edited numerous publications on Late Antiquity, including the Cambridge Companion to the Age of Constantine (Cambridge University Press, 2006, rev. edn. 2011) and The Power of Religion in Late Antiquity (2009). He also is co-author of the textbook The Romans: From Village to Empire (2011). Lenski has published numerous articles on legal history, including "Evidence for the audientia episcopalis in the New Letters of Augustine" and "Constantine and Slavery: Libertas and the Fusion of Roman and Christian Values."

THOMAS A. J. MCGINN is Professor of Classical Studies at Vanderbilt University. He is the author of numerous articles on Roman law and social history. His first book, Prostitution, Sexuality, and the Law in Ancient Rome, was published in 1998. He is co-author with Bruce Frier of A Casebook on Roman Family Law (2004). His other books include The Economy of Prostitution in the Roman World: A Study of Social History and the Brothel (2004); Widows and Patriarchy: Ancient and Modern (2008); and his most recent book is an edited collection of essays, Obligations in Roman Law: Past, Present, and Future (2012).

CHARLES PAZDERNIK is Professor of Classics at Grand Valley State University in Allendale, Michigan. His work focuses on the political and legal history of the age of Justinian and on classical and classicizing historiography. Among other works, he is author of "The Quaestor Proclus," Greek, Roman and Byzantine Studies (2015); "Justinianic Ideology and the Power of the Past," in The Cambridge Companion to the Age of Justinian (2005); "'Our Most Pious Consort given us by God': Dissident Reactions to the Partnership of Justinian and Theodora, AD 525–48," Classical Antiquity (1994).

BENET SALWAY is a senior lecturer in Ancient History in the History Department, University College London. His main areas of research include Roman onomastics, Greek and Latin epigraphy, and geographical knowledge in the ancient world. He is co-director (with Michael Crawford) of the Volterra Roman law project and has published on the text of Diocletian's Prices Edict (BICS Suppl. 109 (2010)); the identification of the fragments of the Codex Gregorianus (with Simon Corcoran, in Roman Legal Tradition 8 (2012)); and on the geopolitical context of the publication and dissemination of the Theodosian Code (e.g., MEFRA 125.2 (2013)).

Index Titulorum Codicis Iustiniani

Liber Primus

List of Titles in the Codex of Justinian

Compilation of the New Codex
Confirmation of the Codex of Justinian
Correction of the Codex of Justinian and Its Second Edition

First Book

1. The High Trinity and the Catholic Faith, and That No One Shall Dare to Discuss It Publicly

2. Holy Churches, Their Property and Privileges

3. Bishops, Clerics, and the Superintendents of Orphanages, Foundling-Hospitals, Hospices, Hermitages, and Monasteries; Their Privileges; Military Peculium; The Ransoming of Captives; Marriages Forbidden and Permitted to Clergymen

4. Episcopal Adjudication and Various Chapters Relating to the Rights, Responsibilities, and Reverence of Bishops

5. Heretics, Manichaeans, and Samaritans

6. Holy Baptism Shall Not Be Repeated

7. Apostates

8. No One May Carve or Paint a Statue of the Savior Christ in Stone or Marble

9. Jews and Worshippers of the Heavens (Caelicolae)

10. No Heretic or Pagan or Jew May Have, Possess, or Circumcise a Christian Slave

11. Pagan Sacrifices and Temples

12. Those Who Flee to Churches and There Raise an Outcry

13. Those Who Are Manumitted in Churches

Liber Secundus

Second Book

Liber Tertius

Third Book

Liber Quartus

Fourth Book

Liber Quintus

Fifth Book

Liber Sextus

Sixth Book

Liber Septimus

Seventh Book

Liber Octavus

Eighth Book

Liber Nonus

Ninth Book

Liber Decimus

Tenth Book

Liber Undecimus

Eleventh Book

Liber Duodecimus

77. Palaces and Imperial Houses

78. Cypress Trees from the Grove of Daphne or Perseus in Egypt Are Not to Be Cut Down or Sold

Twelfth Book

1. Official Positions of Rank

2. Praetors and the Honor of the Praetorship, and the Abolition of the Gleba, Follis, and "7 Solidi"

3. Consuls, and That Money Not Be Scattered by Them; and Prefects, Masters of Soldiers, and Patricians

4. Equality in Rank of the Praetorian Prefect, the City Prefect, and the Master of Soldiers

5. The Grand Chamberlain and All Chamberlains and Their Privileges

6. Quaestors, Masters of Offices, Counts of Imperial Benefactions and of the Privy Purse

7. The Chief Secretary, First Assistant Chief Secretary, and Notaries

8. That the Order of Rank Be Preserved

9. Masters of the Bureaus

10. Counts of the Imperial Council

11. Counts and Tribunes of the Imperial Guard

12. Counts of Military Affairs

13. Counts and Chief Physicians of the Imperial Palace

14. Counts Who Govern Provinces

15. Professors Who, Teaching in the City of Constantinople, Have Received the Countship by Statute

16. Decurions and Silentiaries

17. The Household Garrison and Guards

18. Color Guards

19. Chief Clerks of the Imperial Bureaus and Others Who Serve in the Imperial Bureaus

20. Imperial Couriers

21. Chiefs of Staff of the Couriers

22. Inspectors of the Public Post

Justice Fred H. Blume and the Translation of Justinian's Codex

Timothy Kearley

Friedrich Heinrich Blume, or Fred H. Blume, as he came to call himself, would be delighted to know that an expert panel had used his solitary work of more than two decades as the jumping-off point for this translation of Justinian's Codex. Blume, for over forty years a justice – sometimes chief justice – of the Wyoming Supreme Court, was an accomplished, but modest, man who was accustomed to collaborating.[1]

Born in Winzlar, Germany on January 9, 1875, Friedrich Blume immigrated to the United States by himself at age 12 to join his elder brother Wilhelm. After working on farms and in a law office, he studied at the State University of Iowa (now the University of Iowa), graduating as a member of the Phi Beta Kappa scholastic honor society in 1898. He "read law" and was admitted to practice in Iowa the next year. In 1905, Blume and his wife moved west to the young state of Wyoming where he entered into a law firm partnership and began a promising political career as a member of the Republican Party's progressive wing. This latter career lost its momentum in 1912, however, when the party splintered and Blume supported Theodore Roosevelt, the presidential candidate of its reform-oriented offshoot, the Progressive, or Bull Moose, Party.[2] When Roosevelt lost, Blume knew a further political career in Wyoming would be problematic.

Justice Blume later recalled: "I decided on that day that I would quit politics and spend the time which I had devoted [to politics] to something else."[3] This "something else" began with extensive readings on the history of Western civilization and ended up as a solo effort to create an annotated English-language translation of Justinian's Codex and Novels. In 1919, in the course of reading

[1] For details of Justice Blume's life, and especially his judicial career, see Golden (1993). For an extensive description of his work on Justinian's Codex and with Clyde Pharr on the Theodosian Codex, see Kearley (2007).

[2] See Golden (1993: 216), for a discussion of Blume's political career.

[3] The archival sources for this and subsequent references to Justice Blume's correspondence are cited in Kearley (2007).

Roman history, he discovered to his great surprise that no one had yet translated either Justinian's Codex or the Theodosian Codex into his adopted language. Writing to Professor Clyde Pharr of this in 1943, Blume recollected:

> So ruminating on the subject, I wondered if I might not be able to add my little mite to the culture of the world by translating at least one of these Codices. Here was the germ of the thought of the translation of the Justinian Code, although I did not realize at that time the difficulties that lay ahead.

Those difficulties included working on his translation while also ably carrying out his duties as a justice of the Wyoming Supreme Court, to which he was appointed in 1921, and struggling with what probably was carpal tunnel syndrome. In describing his translation work to Pharr, Justice Blume explained:

> I devoted to it substantially every evening until eleven o'clock or later, and every Saturday afternoon and Sunday with few exceptions. I limited my social life to the minimum. I wrote everything in long hand, until, after a year or two after I began, my right hand and arm would work no longer, so I had to resort to a typewriter, which is not so good for a translator. It took me a year or so before I could write long hand again.

Justice Blume had recently finished the first draft of Justinian's Codex translation when, in February 1924, he wrote to Thomas W. Swann, Dean of the Yale University Law School about it and received an encouraging response that renewed his enthusiasm for the endeavor.

For the remainder of the 1920s and throughout the 1930s, Justice Blume studied Roman law using the extensive private collection he had developed. He then employed his learning in revising the first draft of his translation and in writing extensive annotations for it. During this period he also taught Roman law at the Northwestern University Law School one summer at the request of its eminent Dean, John Wigmore; wrote on Roman law for American law reviews; addressed the Riccobono Seminar of Roman Law in America (at the Catholic University of America) on the topic of "The Code of Justinian and its Value";[4] and used Roman law in many of his Wyoming Supreme Court opinions. (In Justice Blume's 700 published opinions, he cited Roman law seventy-nine times in nineteen cases and referred to Roman law or Roman history in twelve other cases.[5])

Perhaps more importantly for Justice Blume, the decades of the 1920s and 1930s also saw him come to the attention of Pharr, Professor of Greek and Latin at Vanderbilt University. Having heard of Blume's draft Codex translation, Professor Pharr wrote to him in 1933 to ask if he would join the board of his "Project for a Variorum Translation into English of the Entire Body of Roman Law," which he was in the process of organizing. Pharr proposed to use Justice Blume's Codex translation as the basis for the project's version of that document. Blume readily agreed, but he also asked Pharr if he was familiar with S. P. Scott's translation of the Codex that had been published the previous year.[6] Blume told Pharr that seeing it had nearly halted his own work on the Annotated Justinian Code, but he went on to note: "I have gone through one book of the Code and found what I thought so many glaring mistakes that I concluded to go on with my work ..." Responding three weeks later, Pharr replied in a similar vein: "A more careful examination [of Scott's translation] has unfortunately confirmed my earlier impression and I am convinced his work is valueless."[7] So, the two agreed to pursue the proposed project.

[4] For a description and history of the seminar, see Randazzo (2002).

[5] Evjen (1980: 214).

In the end, Professor Pharr's ambitious plans yielded only two works: The Theodosian Code and Novels, and the Sirmondian Constitutions (Princeton University Press, 1952), and Ancient Roman Statutes: A Translation (University of Texas Press, 1961). However, the correspondence between the classics professor and the Wyoming Supreme Court justice continued sporadically for more than two decades. Moreover, Justice Blume was pleased to participate actively on Pharr's editorial board and to see his work on Justinian's Codex and Novels applied to the Theodosian Codex translation. Regarding the use he was making of Blume's earlier efforts, Pharr told him: "You will find how much we are plundering from your work when you receive our [draft] issue of the second book of the Theodosian Code." Recent scholarship has noted Pharr's "enormous debt to Blume" in Pharr's product.[8] When the Theodosian Codex was finally published, Pharr devoted a paragraph of his preface to highlighting Blume's contributions.[9]

After the Theodosian Codex translation was published in 1952, Justinian's Codex was to be taken up next. However, for several reasons, including the lack of a needed subvention for this expensive undertaking, Blume's long-hoped-for dream never came to fruition. By 1957, when Justice Blume wrote to University of Wyoming President George Humphrey concerning the honorary

[6] The Civil Law (S. P. Scott ed. and trans., 1932).

[7] For a further information about S. P. Scott and his work see Kearley (2014).

[8] Linda Hall Jones points out that in the first draft of the Theodosian Code translation Pharr mailed for criticism to his editorial consultants, he referred to Justice Blume's annotated translation of the Justinian Code and Novels, stating: "Several years ago we ... examine[d] Justice Blume's work and found it of much higher quality than anything else that has been done in this field ... We are finding both his translation and his notes invaluable in the interpretation of many difficult and obscure passages of the Theodosian Code." L. H. Jones (2012: 17) (quoting Pharr (gen. ed.) and T. S. Davidson (assoc. ed.) (1944) (unpublished manuscript)).

[9] Pharr (1952: viii).

Doctor of Laws degree being bestowed upon him, the justice expressed his resignation, saying he doubted the translation would be published in his lifetime. Despite this disappointment, Justice Blume retired from the bench in 1962 as a greatly honored jurist. His reputation in the American legal community was such that New York University's Annual Survey of American Law dedicated that year's issue to him,[10] and over the course of his career sixty-four of his decisions were chosen as the subjects of annotations in the American Law Reports.

When Justice Blume died in 1971, at the age of 96, Clyde Pharr's Roman law translation program had long since ceased, with only one publication other than the Theodosian Codex.[11] However, Blume's decades of effort are now springing back to life. Justice Blume bequeathed his manuscript Codex and Novels translation (along with his private library) to the University of Wyoming in the hope that, as he wrote to President Humphrey, "some day [you may have] a student at the University who will be interested in the subject, and if so my translation and the notes should be of immense value to him." That manuscript lay largely unknown for decades in the University of Wyoming College of Law Library's Blume Room, but it caught my attention when I was examining the room's contents upon becoming Director of the Law Library and Professor of Law at the university in 1993.

Over a decade more passed, however, before I was able to partially realize Justice Blume's dream by editing and publishing his Annotated Justinian Code on the Internet.[12] This Internet publication did not fully accomplish Justice Blume's goal, though. He knew that he, or any individual, would benefit greatly from working collegially on such a challenging undertaking. This is why he happily agreed to work with Professor Pharr and his board, and to allow his translation to be the basis for that group's proposed version of the Codex.[13]

Therefore, I was pleased to share with Professor Frier and his panel the electronic documents I was creating of Blume's work, in order that they might use it as the starting point for the translation you have before you. I knew Justice Blume would have been thrilled to see the results of his labors used in this way. Justice Blume's nephew and literary heir, Fred Blume, felt the same way and thus graciously gave his permission for this use. So here, after nearly a century of gestation, the seed Fred Blume sowed finally comes into full bloom after much careful cultivation by others.

[10] Reid (1962: VIII).

[11] Johnson, Coleman-Norton, and Bourne (1961).

[12] Blume, Code (n.d.), available at: www.uwyo.edu/lawlib/blume-justinian.

[13] In discussing his translation, Justice Blume had told Pharr: "In fact, it was my original idea that if it should come to the point when I should be able to find a publisher ... I not only wanted to go over the translation carefully again ... but wanted to find others who were competent to go over it as well."

Revising Justice Blume's Translation of Justinian's Codex

Bruce W. Frier

with a note on the dating of constitutions by Noel Lenski

Although the Emperor Justinian clearly intended that his Digest and Codex should be read together, as a single body of law, the Codex has long been less favored than the Digest when it comes to translation. The reason has surely to do with the format of the Codex: long lists of imperial legal pronouncements, mandates, and decrees, grouped by subject matter into titles, but then, within each title, arranged in a chronological order that stretches from Hadrian to Justinian, a span of just over four centuries during which the Roman Empire changed profoundly. There is, in the Codex, little of the agile, sustained play of intelligence that characterizes the writing of the Roman jurists in the Digest: the openness to possibilities, the drawing of adroit distinctions.

By contrast, the Emperors, in issuing their decisions, seldom strayed far from the sober industry of declaring law. And the Digest compilers also made at least a perfunctory effort to organize its contents through substance, so that its titles often have a bit of intellectual coherence that is missing in Codex titles. As compensation, however, the Codex offers an entirely unparalleled depiction of Roman law as a lived reality during the later Empire. The Emperor's gaze – or, at any rate, that of his bureaucrats – ranged far and wide, high and low: from the intricate details of building codes for Constantinople (Zeno, C. 8.10.12), to the size, composition, and provisioning of staffs for the newly re-conquered prefecture of Africa (Justinian, C. 1.27.1–2); from prohibitions on Consuls scattering money to crowds in order to garner popularity (Valentinian and Marcian, C. 12.3.2), to provisions on what happens when a legal formality, such as the execution of a will, is interrupted because one of the participants urgently needs to use the bathroom (Justinian, C. 6.23.28.1–3).

Only one complete English translation of Justinian's Codex has previously been published, that of Samuel P. Scott, as part of his seventeen-volume translation of most major Roman legal sources, published posthumously in 1932.[1] The dissatisfaction with Scott's entire project was immediate and has remained constant since its publication. Already in 1933, W. W. Buckland had declared that: "the work cannot be regarded as at all a safe guide to the Roman Law."[2] Roscoe Pound, in 1943, concurred: "This work must be used with caution since the best texts were not used and at some points the translations are not reliable."[3] The consensus of scholarly opinion was summed up by Stephen Sass in 1963:[4]

> Ironically, this tremendous task was based, without exception, on antiquated text editions. For the Corpus Juris, for instance, not the standard edition of Krüger, Mommsen, Schoell and Kroll was used, but the less reliable text established by the Kriegel Brothers which contains many medieval insertions. The resulting mistranslations are due, to a great degree, to the defects in the original texts. Added to that, the translator did not follow the well-established practice of Anglo-American translators and translated highly technical Roman law terms into doubtful English equivalents instead of leaving them untranslated with explanations in the footnotes. These shortcomings reduce the value of the work, but do not render it valueless. For reference purposes it can very well be used; moreover, occasionally one cannot avoid using it since it is the only complete translation of Justinian's enactments.

Generations of Roman law students have accordingly been advised to shun the Scott translation altogether, or to use it only "with great caution," as Arthur Schiller counseled.[5] Nonetheless, faute de mieux, the unwary still have not infrequently cited it without appreciating the risks. In the case of Justinian's Digest, such perils were obviated by the subsequent appearance of a generally reliable English translation in 1985.[6] But the Codex has, until now, languished.Unfortunately, the publication of Scott's massive translation may well have militated against subsequent publication of the far more scholarly [1] Scott (1932). It has often been reprinted and is also available online in several locations. On Scott himself (1846–1929), see Kearley (forthcoming) Although not much is known about the circumstances that led to Scott's translation of all major Roman legal sources, the scope of the enterprise was breathtaking, and Scott's influence – largely negative though it may be – is not to be denied. See Randazzo (2002: 125 n. 12). Scott's earlier translations of The Visigothic Code (1910) and Las Siete Partidas (1931; but apparently completed by 1913, information from Tim Kearley) were somewhat more scholarly.

[2] Buckland(1932–1933: 632). Riccobono's (1935: 318) reaction was a bit more positive, noting that the defects in translation "non infirmano il valore pratico della traduzione."

[3] Pound (1943: 212).

[4] Sass (1963: 229). The edition of the Corpus Iuris Civilis by Albert and Moritz Kriegel was published in three volumes from 1836 to 1853, and frequently reprinted thereafter in a revised form by Emil Herrmann and Edouard Osenbrüggen. The Codex is in the second volume.

[5] Schiller (1978: 31). Compare Donahue (1987: 1062).

[6] Watson (ed.) (1985), with facing text from Mommsen's editio maior of 1870. A somewhat updated version of the English translation only is available in Watson (ed.) (1998). Further corrections are listed in the Roman Law Resources website at: http://iuscivile.com/materials/digest/received .shtml. Translations of Justinian's Institutes have always abounded.

Codex translation by Justice Fred Blume, even though the large-scale translation project organized by Clyde Pharr – a project clearly undertaken in full awareness of the defects in the Scott translation – offered him some hope for a time. But the Blume translation, though seemingly lost to scholarship at the time of his death in 1971, was not entirely forgotten. Arthur Schiller took note of its existence in 1977, and Harold Evjen also discussed it briefly in a 1980 article on Blume's use of Roman law in his Wyoming judicial opinions.[7]

These two sources originally awakened my own interest in the fate of Blume's translation. Periodically thereafter I inquired about what had happened to his manuscript. However, apart from learning that it was preserved at the University of Wyoming School of Law library, I advanced no further until 2006, when an email from Noel Lenski arrived with details about Timothy Kearley's ambitious plan to digitize Blume's text and place it online. My subsequent communication with them led to the establishment of our Codex Project in May 2007; Prof. Kearley also served as an invaluable intermediary in subsequently arranging with Justice Blume's estate for us to use the electronic form of the manuscript as our starting point.[8]

The general goals of the project were first set out in a Prospectus dating from July 2007:

> In handling Blume's translation, the first aim must be to accurately represent the original Latin or Greek; all other aims are subordinate to this one ... [A]t times this may mean reproducing the vagueness of the original, or its florid style, simply so as not to mislead readers through a false clarity. After accuracy, there are two further aims. First, it is important that the translation read as easily as possible, even where this means, for instance, altering the order of Blume's clauses, or otherwise altering his phrases; while we may acknowledge obscurity in the source, we do not intend to introduce obscurity ourselves. Second, we hope to remain as faithful as possible to the spirit of Blume's translation. This is the major basis for guaranteeing a bit of stylistic unity within the finished product.

In order to carry out these goals, we used, as our target text for the Latin and Greek constitutions, the standard (so-called stereotype) edition, originally published by Paul Krüger in 1877 and frequently reprinted in slightly improved versions, the latest from 1914.[9] Krüger adapted this edition from his own editio maior published more or less simultaneously in 1877, a stunning reconstruction of the original text of the Codex, particularly by inclusion of Greek constitutions that were omitted in many medieval manuscripts.[10] In both the editio maior and the stereotype edition, Krüger also took pains to restore the correct headings and subscriptions of constitutions, where these could be known even through reasonable surmise. The subsequent stereotype editions contained further textual improvements, albeit generally of a less revolutionary nature; and it has frequently been reprinted since. Blume appears to have used this stereotype edition. For our facing original text, we were able to purchase the excellent, virtually error-free version that Dutch and Belgian scholars created for the Dutch translation.[11] Our textual deviations from the stereotype edition are footnoted; often these deviations originate in suggestions made by Krüger himself or by Theodor Mommsen.

[7] Schiller (1978: 39); Evjen (1980: 213, 215).

[8] By the terms of our agreement, all royalties from publication will go to a non-profit account that will be used to promote study of the Codex.

[9] Krüger (1877). Our target text was the 9th edition of 1914, the last overseen by Krüger. (This edition is often dated to 1915, erroneously.) Subsequent editions are virtually identical as to the text, but – readers should be warned! – in a few cases do not report Krüger's final text changes, particularly those from the Cologne fragment (Colon.) for C. 3.32.4–12. The likely reason is that later editions actually reproduce not the 9th, but the 7th or 8th edition. In addition, editions after the 11th of 1954 omit the Addendum of the 9th edition (514–516), which contained many of Krüger's final textual observations.

Once we had provisionally committed to the project, our first step was to determine whether the Blume translation was of sufficient scholarly quality to warrant a revised version. After we had inspected it, we unanimously felt that Blume's translation was a great deal more than adequate for our purposes.

Three brief, but fairly representative, passages may serve to illustrate the problems with Scott's translation and the virtues of Blume's. The first is C. 2.7.1, a 214 constitution of Caracalla from the Codex title De Advocatis Diversorum Iudiciorum ("The Advocates of the Various Courts"):

> Imp. Antoninus A. Doloni. Si patronum causae praevaricatum putas et impleveris accusationem, non deerit adversus eum pro temeritate commissi sententia, atque ita de principali causa denuo quaeretur. Quod si non docueris praevaricatum, et calumnia notaberis et rebus iudicatis, a quibus non est provocatum, stabitur.
>
> PP. III k. Oct. Antonino A. IIII et Balbino conss.

Here is Scott's translation:

> The Emperor Antoninus to Dolo. If you think that the advocate in the case has been guilty of prevarication, and you prove the charge, sentence shall be passed upon him in accordance with the gravity of the offence which he has committed, and the suit shall again be commenced. But if you do not establish the prevarication, you will be branded as guilty of false accusation, and the case shall stand as decided, unless an appeal has been taken.

[10] Krüger (1877). Krüger laid out his understanding of the textual tradition in Krüger (1867); see also Krüger (1888: 342–343). On Krüger's handling of Codex manuscripts, see Radding and Ciaralli (2007: 14–17).

[11] Spruit, Chorus, and de Ligt (eds.) (2005–2010). The Dutch text reproduces Krüger's editio maior; we have mechanically corrected to the text of the 9th stereotype edition.

> Given on the third of the Kalends of October, during the Consulate of Antoninus, Consul for the fourth time, and Albinus, 214.

There are a considerable number of difficulties with this version,[12] but much the most serious is the rendering of praevaricari through its derivative "prevaricate," an English verb with the normal meaning "to speak falsely or misleadingly; deliberately misstate or create an incorrect impression; lie." Thus, Caracalla's constitution is taken to establish liability if advocates speak falsely in court. In fact, however, the Latin verb refers to an entirely different kind of forensic dishonesty: collusion by an advocate with the other party, that is, not so much deception of the court, as betrayal of a client.[13] Scott's version, which imposes an unexpectedly high duty of truthfulness on trial advocates, is highly deceptive unless the reader consults the original text.

Now here is Blume's version of C. 2.7.1:

> Emperor Antoninus to Dolon. If you think that your advocate has been guilty of collusion with the opposite party, and you prove the accusation, condemnation of him for the temerity of his crime will not be lacking, and the principal cause will then be tried anew. But if you do not prove such collusion, you will be branded as one guilty of false accusation, and the adjudication in the main suit, from which no appeal has been taken, will stand.
>
> Promulgated September 29 (213).

This translation is self-evidently a huge improvement on Scott's, and so in numerous respects (including getting the constitution's date and the recipient's name correct); but above all else Blume correctly understood the meaning of praevaricatio. Our final version fairly closely follows Blume's, with changes mainly in format:

> Emperor Antoninus Augustus to Dolon. If you think that the advocate for your case has colluded (with the other side), and you prove the accusation, there will not be lacking a judgment against him in proportion to the rashness of his crime, and so the principal case will be heard anew. But if you fail to show such collusion, you will be branded for vexatious litigation (calumnia) and the (principal) issue, unless appealed, will stand as adjudicated.
>
> Promulgated September 29, in the consulship of Antoninus Augustus, for the fourth time, and Balbinus (213).

[12] Albinus stems from the pre-modern edition that Scott used; Krüger corrected to Balbinus, which was also already in the Kriegel edition.

[13] See, e.g., Ulpian (6 ad Ed.), D. 3.2.4.4: "Praevaricator autem est quasi varicator, qui diversam partem adiuvat prodita causa sua."

Similar is a second passage, C. 7.39.3, a constitution of Theodosius setting a thirty-year statute of limitations for most private actions; it comes from the Codex title De Praescriptione xxx vel xxxx Annorum ("Prescription of Thirty or Forty Years"). The first sentence reads:

> Impp. Honorius et Theodosius AA. Asclepiodoto pp. pr. Sicut in rem speciales, ita de universitate ac personales actiones ultra triginta annorum spatium minime protendantur ...
> D. XVIII k. Dec. Constantinopoli Victore cons.

Scott renders this:

> The Emperors Arcadius and Honorius to Asclepiodotus, Praetorian Prefect. The right to bring special actions in rem, or general personal actions, cannot be extended beyond the term of thirty years ...
> Given at Constantinople, on the Kalends of September, during the Consulate of Victor.

Scott gets the imperial heading and the date wrong, for reasons that pass understanding.[14] But the cardinal error stems once more from his failure to recognize and comprehend the technical vocabulary of Roman law. Actiones speciales in rem are suits for particular pieces of property (species); actiones de universitate are suits to claim an inheritance (the late Roman version of hereditatis petitiones; a universitas is an amalgamation of things or persons); and actiones personales are suits in personam – all three classes of actions, and only these, being now subjected to a new statute of limitations.[15] Scott's interpretation, constructing a dichotomy between "special" property claims and "general" personal claims, is misguided and misleading.

Now here is Blume's translation of C. 7.39.3:

> Emperors Honorius and Theodosius to Asclepiodotus. Just as actions in rem as to special pieces of property, so actions in rem as to an aggregation of properties (e.g., an inheritance) and personal actions shall not be extended beyond thirty years; ...
> Given at Constantinople November 14 (424).

As will be seen, Blume correctly captures the procedural distinctions in the original. This is our translation of 7.39.3:

[14] In fact, however, the Codex heading is also factually wrong; by 424 Theodosius was ruling alone, as Krüger notes (and so already the Kriegel edition). Both the lex geminata in the C.Th. (4.14.1) and the other excerpt in the C.Th. (2.12.7) get this right.

[15] On the statute of limitations, see Kaser and Hackl (1996: 607–608). On the procedural distinctions in C. 7.39.3 pr., see Berger (1953: s.v.) "iudicia generalia" and "actio de universitate."

> Emperors Honorius and Theodosius Augusti to Asclepiodotus, Praetorian Prefect. pr. As with actions in rem for specific property (speciales), so also with inheritance claims (de universitate) and personal actions, these may not be extended beyond thirty years.
>
> Given November 14, at Constantinople, in the consulship of Victor (424).

A third example is C. 11.16.1 pr., an undated constitution of Leo (457–465) from the title De Pistoribus ("Bakers"), with Scott's translation:

> Imp. Leo A. Viviano pp. pr. Quicumque ex mancipibus comitis horreorum dignitatem et officium vel ambitione vel gratia vel pecunia seu quolibet alio modo posthac fuerit adsecutus, exutus dignitate, quam contra interdictum nostrae serenitatis adeptus est, multatus etiam viginti libris auri ad mancipum denuo consortium collegiumque revocetur.

> The Emperors Gratian, Valentinian, and Theodosius. Any slave of the Superintendent of the Public Warehouses, who either through intrigue, favor, the use of money, or by any other means, may hereafter obtain a dignity or an office, shall be deprived of what he acquired in violation of Our order, and, having been fined 20 pounds of gold, shall be returned to the body to which he formerly belonged ...

Again, Scott inexplicably alters the heading.[16] He also badly mangles the substance, chiefly because he confuses manceps ("public contractor," here "public baker") with mancipium ("slave").[17]

Here is Blume's version:

> Emperor Leo to Vivianus, Praetorian Prefect. If any public baker (manceps) hereafter obtains the rank and office of count of storehouses by unlawful solicitation, favoritism, money or in any other manner, he shall be shorn of the rank which he received in violation of the interdict of Our Serenity, shall be punished [by] a fine of 20 pounds of gold and shall be recalled to the association and corporation of public bakers ...

And our version:

> Emperor Leo Augustus to Vivianus, Praetorian Prefect. pr. Whoever henceforth from among the baking contractors (mancipes) has gained the rank and office of Count of the Granaries (horrea), either by solicitation, influence, money, or any other means, shall be stripped of the [16] The later Kriegel editions already had the correct heading, but Scott follows some earlier editions.

[17] The reading in some inferior manuscripts, mancipiis for mancipibus, makes no sense in a title on bakers. The Kriegel edition already had it right.

> rank that he gained in violation of the interdict of Our Serenity, be fined 20 pounds of gold, and be recalled anew to his partnership with the contractors and to his guild (collegium).

The point is easily made. Such errors, repeated many, many hundreds or thousands of times, render Scott's translation almost entirely unsuited to its purpose. Blume's translation is indisputably preferable. In general, our translation aims to be fuller than Blume's in rendering both the heading and the subscription, and, within the constitutions themselves, to signal more clearly when we introduce supplementary wording or when the Latin or Greek technical vocabulary helps in understanding the original text. Still, our debt will be obvious.

However, we are not entirely faithful to Blume's translation. While broadly satisfying, it presents some real difficulties as well. His sentence structure tried faithfully to follow the original, even when the resulting sentences were too complex for ready English comprehension; we simplified, sometimes fairly radically, in one case, for instance, rendering a single coiling Latin sentence with four shorter English sentences. But there were also not infrequent instances, particularly with Greek, where Blume obviously had problems understanding the text. In general, and in accord with our agreement with the Blume estate, the editors of individual books were each given considerable latitude in determining how closely they wished to stick to Blume's wording for particular texts. Readers wishing to compare more closely can easily consult the online version of Blume's text.[18] Blume extensively annotated his translation, often at quite considerable length. The modern practice – witnessed in the Dutch, German, and Italian on-going translations of all or parts of the Justinianic Corpus Iuris Civilis, as well as in the English Digest edited by Alan Watson[19] – is to reduce such annotation to the minimum required for comprehensibility by a lay reader, and to eliminate bibliography from footnotes altogether.

However, the Codex presents obstacles in this regard. In the first place, the text of the Codex as we now most commonly know it (in its Krüger form) is, in fact, largely a scholarly re-creation.[20] The Codex was never entirely lost during the Middle Ages, but medieval European jurists and scribes, whose primary interest lay in the substantive rules laid down by Roman emperors, tended to omit the Greek constitutions and to treat with some indifference the headings and subscriptions to all the constitutions. Krüger's central achievement was to have restored the Codex to something resembling its original shape, or at any rate as close as may be possible in the light of surviving sources.[21] Also, even in its earliest form, the compilers of Justinian's Codex had used an extensive scissors-and-paste methodology: sometimes reproducing the same constitution in different titles of the Codex (so-called leges geminatae, which may contain variations of wording); sometimes breaking up and redistributing the same constitution into various titles; frequently rewriting or condensing their source materials; and so on. The technique of the compilers can often be reconstructed, especially by reference to constitutions drawn from the Theodosian Codex of 429–430 and from other late imperial collections.[22] All of this necessitates a considerably higher number of footnotes than is required, for instance, for Justinian's Digest.

[18] Blume, Code, available at: https://uwacadweb.uwyo.edu/blume&justinian.

[19] Dutch: Spruit, Chorus, and de Ligt (eds.) (1993–2011), now complete; on it, see at: http://rechtsgeschiedenis.wordpress.com/2011/10/17/twelve-volumes-of-roman-law-in-dutch-translation. German: Behrends et al. (eds.) (1990–), currently in the middle of the Digest. Italian: Schipani (ed.) (2005–), currently in the middle of the Digest. English: Watson (ed.) (1985); a corrected version of the translation alone was subsequently published as Watson (ed.) (1998). Compare also Crogiez-Pétrequin et al. (eds.) (2009), part of an on-going project. On general issues associated with translating Roman legal sources, see Minieri and Sacchi (2009).

[20] This point is rightly stressed in Dondorp and Schrage (2010: 7–56), esp. 15–16 on the Codex, which was a very different document before 1877.

Second, the constitutions themselves, generated over many centuries, evolved considerably in their form. The earlier constitutions, through Diocletian, tend to be rescripts written nominally by the Emperor in response to legal inquiries from around the Empire; usually, such inquiries raise questions of private law.[23] Here the obstacle is that, although the rescript is normally stating a rule, we do not have the inquiry and hence may find it difficult to appreciate the situation to which the rescript applies.

Blume's annotations are marvelous in this respect. Although they were patently informed by his extensive scholarly reading, he also had an indisputable "case sense," obviously derived from his long experience with common law, that often shines through in his restoration of the original dispute. For example, C. 8.26.1 pr. of 239 CE deals with the situation when a debt, which is secured by a pledge of a debtor's property, is, with the creditor's consent, "novated" by substituting a new debtor for the original debtor; essentially, although the creditor remains the same, the original debt is extinguished and the new one, from a different debtor, supersedes it.

> Imp. Gordianus A. Festo. pr. Pignus intercidit, si novatione facta in alium ius obligationis transtulisti nec, ut ea res pignoris nomine teneretur, cautum est ...

> Emperor Gordian Augustus to Festus. pr. A (right to a) pledge is lost if by novation (novatio) you transferred to a third party a right from an [21] This process has become clearer recently owing to the rediscovery of Krüger's notebooks: Hessler (2011), which makes use of the original materials preserved in the US Library of Congress.

[22] Of considerable help, in this respect, is the Projet Volterra, available at: www.ucl.ac.uk/volterra, although it is not yet complete.

[23] On forms of imperial law-making, see, e.g., Schiller (1978: 463–524); Peachin (forthcoming).

[24] See in addition D. 20.4.12.5, 21 pr.

> obligation, but it was not (also) provided that this property be held as a pledge (for the obligation) ...

This terse holding is a slog even when one is familiar with the legal institutions involved. Blume's note on the text sets out the situation in crystal-clear fashion:

> The case supposed is as follows: A, debtor of B and owner of property pledged to the latter, sold the land to C and the agreement was made [through a novation] that C should be held for the debt [of A]. Here was a new debtor, and in order to keep the lien alive, agreement to that effect was required to be made with C. See also D. 20.4.3 pr.[24]

This note, accurate and lucid, is invaluable to a translator. But in many instances such notes may also be of considerable service to all readers, and for this reason we have on occasion provided similar case statements or other explanatory material either from Blume's original manuscript, or of our own devising. Nonetheless, this translation does presume an elementary knowledge of Roman private law, though a glossary at the end should help with some technical terms – the translation of which we have tried to make reasonably uniform throughout.

Third, late imperial constitutions present a different array of perplexities. Almost entirely they take the form of instructions (edicta or mandata) directed by the Emperor to imperial officials, and they are also markedly more concerned with imperial administration rather than with private law. These constitutions, whether Latin or (less commonly) Greek, are also not infrequently written in a style that is grammatically complex and grandiloquent, rendering them potentially difficult to translate into plain English. The beginning of C. 4.18.2, a constitution of Justinian from 531, is an admittedly rather extreme example. Justinian is describing his decision to expand constitutum debiti, an informal device whereby a debtor expressly recognizes and promises to pay a pre-existing debt:[25]

> Imp. Iustinianus A. Iuliano pp. pr. Recepticia actione cessante, quae sollemnibus verbis composita inusitato recessit vestigio, necessarium nobis visum est magis pecuniae constitutae naturam ampliare. 1. Cum igitur praefata actio, id est pecuniae constitutae, in his tantummodo a veteribus conclusa est, ut exigeret res quae in pondere numero mensura sunt, in aliis autem rebus nullam haberet communionem et neque in omnibus casibus longaeva sit constituta, sed in speciebus certis annali spatio concluderetur, et dubitaretur, si pro debito sub condicione vel in diem constituto eam possibile est fieri et si pure constituta pecunia contracta valeret, hac apertissima lege definimus, ut liceat omnibus constituere non solum res quae pondere numero mensura sunt, sed etiam alias omnes sive mobiles sive immobiles sive se moventes sive instrumenta vel alias quascumque res, quas in stipulationem possunt homines deducere: et neque sit in quocumque casu annalis, sed (sive pro se quis constituat sive pro alio) sit et ipsa in tali vitae mensura, in qua omnes personales sunt actiones, id est in annorum metis triginta: et liceat pro debito puro vel in diem vel condicionali constitui:

[25] See Berger (1953: s.v.), "constitutum debiti"; Kaser (1975: II, 383–384).

[26] For these changes, important is A. H. M. Jones (1964).

et non absimilem penitus stipulationi habeat dignitatem, suis tamen naturalibus privilegiis minime defraudata: sed et heredibus et contra heredes competat, ut neque recepticiae actiones neque alio indigeat res publica in huiusmodi casibus adminiculo, sed sit pecuniae constitutae actio per nostram constitutionem sibi in omnia sufficiens, ita tamen, ut hoc ei inhaereat, ut pro debito fiat constitutum (cum secundum antiquam recepticiam actionem exigebatur et si quid non fuerat debitum), cum satis absurdum et tam nostris temporibus quam iustis legibus contrarium est permittere per actionem recepticiam res indebitas consequi et iterum multas proponere condictiones, quae et pecunias indebitas et promissiones corrumpi et restitui definiunt.

Emperor JUSTINIAN Augustus to Julian, Praetorian Prefect. pr. Since the action against a banker's undertaking is dormant (recepticia actione cessante), which, composed in customary words, has receded as an outmoded vestige, it has seemed necessary to Us to amplify the nature of the promise to pay an existing debt (constitutum). 1. Since, therefore, the aforesaid action, that is, for an existing debt of money (pecuniae constitutae), was confined by the ancient jurists solely to these circumstances, (namely) that there might be a claim for things that are calculable in weight, number, or volume, but that it might have nothing in common in other matters and not be established in all cases to be long-lasting, but to be confined in certain matters to the space of a year, and there was doubt whether it can arise for a debt under a condition or one due to be paid on a certain date (in diem constituto) and whether the promise for money contracted unconditionally was valid, in this pellucid law We define that it be permitted to everyone to establish a claim not only for things that are calculable in weight, number, or measure, but also for all other types of property, whether they are movable or immovable or self-propelling or documents or any other types of things that people can make part of a stipulation; and it should not be for a year in any case, but – whether one makes a claim for himself or for another – it should also be for such a duration of life that applies to all actions in personam, that is, within a limit of thirty years; and it should be permitted that a claim be made for a pure debt or for one due on a future date (in diem) or for a conditional one.

> And it should have a status not at all dissimilar from a stipulation, however not at all deprived of its natural privileges; but it should also be available to heirs and against heirs, so that the republic not require actions for a banker's undertaking (recepticiae actiones) or another support in cases of this type, but that the action on the payment of an existing debt of money be self-sufficient for all matters through Our constitution, with this restriction, that this remain part of it, that there be a claim for a debt – since in accordance with the old action on a banker's undertaking one could also make a claim if something had not been owed – since it is quite absurd and contrary both to Our times and to just laws to allow the pursuit of things not owed through the action on a banker's undertaking and again to set forth many types of claims (condictiones), which define how both sums of money not owed and promises are corrupted and restored.

Section 1 of this "pellucid law" (apertissima lex) – in reality, anything but! – unfolds as a single breathtaking sentence of more than 250 words. We have left this sprawling disquisition largely intact, apart from breaking it up into two sentences. In this circumstance as well, readers will need some orientation from footnotes. They may also want help when, especially, late imperial historical circumstances require some explication.

Fourth, the entire text of the Codex bears thinking about. The imperial constitutions in Justinian's Codex stretch over at least four centuries, during which the form and fortune of the Roman Empire altered profoundly.[26] Its law, as well, was hardly static; and this is true even if we look aside from the major reforms enacted by Justinian himself. The Codex amalgamates lightly edited sources in a way that might tend to conceal such changes, at any rate for the incautious reader. Words written by the chancellery of Septimius Severus in 200 CE could mean something quite different three centuries later, in a changed procedural and institutional context; they might acquire new connotations, or become embedded in novel legal constructions. Further, a process of deliberate selection was involved: what the compilers preserved, as balanced against what they decided, for whatever reason, to abbreviate or exclude. Finally, Justinian also permitted the compilers to adjust the original wording where deemed necessary, in order to bring the Codex into conformity with prevailing law. In some cases these interpolations are obvious, in others much more covert.[27] The problems here are considerably less significant than for the Digest, but they are still real, and readers may on occasion need to be alerted. (To assist with this, we have provided a glossary with definitions of the major technical terms in the Codex.) By and large, however, we have left the surviving text alone, as is the modern practice.

[27] Alleged interpolations detected before 1936 are collected by Broggini (ed.) (1969). On criticism of interpolations, Schiller (1978: 62–83); Johnston (1989).

[28] My thanks to Professor Lenski for compiling this information.

The long and the short of it is that our annotation is rather more copious than we had initially envisaged. Habent sua fata libelli. It is also probably fair to say that this edited translation remains true more to the spirit of Justice Blume's translation than to its format and exact wording. Nonetheless, my collaborators rightly feel that having Blume's translation before them as they worked made all the difference. Usually he at least indicated the right path for translation; and where one of us felt impelled to depart from his wording or his understanding, it was always still with respect. More broadly, if Blume's translation had not been available, the entire project of translating Justinian's Codex into English would have been far more laborious. The depth of our gratitude to Justice Blume, whose decades of work went largely unrewarded for so long, is enormous. As one co-editor wrote to me: "I think you've had more than one encomium from me about FB, but – if you can tolerate one more – against all my expectations, my esteem for the man has only increased over the arc of my translating. His knowledge of law is superb, and his skill in Latin not bad either. I don't know what the others are telling you, but this would have been a much less attractive endeavor without his translation. I trust you will allude to such in your Preface – to my mind you can't praise him enough. I'm not claiming perfection for him, but that's not the issue. His accomplishment amazes, and that it was done without a word processor, on-line Latin dictionaries, and the like."

The formulaic headings and subscriptions of imperial constitutions present a different kind of challenge. As noted above, they are poorly preserved. Many constitutions have lost one or both altogether, but even where they survive they are often corrupt or outright erroneous. These headings and subscriptions are of enormous historical significance; in some instances, it is even possible to follow an imperial court geographically as it pursues its daily business, or to study from them how a particular problem was taken up and dealt with over time. Because of their potential consequence, modern scholars have combed through them (along with those in the Theodosian Codex, which overlaps to a large degree, and other sources). A translation such as the present one simply cannot serve as an authoritative source of reference on vital questions of this kind. At best, we can convey only a reasonable sense of where problems may lie. We have contented ourselves, therefore, with noting many instances where problems may lurk; in his note at the end of this introduction, Noel Lenski explains the process we used.[28] For additional information, readers will need to consult more specialized literature. As always, caveat lector.

[29] Paul/Julian/Callistratus, D. 50.15.84, 201, 220.3.

Translation involves choices. One of these was how to render the technical vocabulary of Roman law: how much Latin to retain, how much to rely on common law vocabulary that often has a different conceptual background, and so on. By and large we have tried to limit Latin, except for some hard-to-render expressions like paterfamilias, suus heres, sui iuris, tutor and curator, dos profecticia, res mancipi, in factum, and in personam, and so on, plus some of the quasi-legal honorific titles of the late imperial elite like vir illustris and vir clarissimus. Otherwise, editors have been encouraged to translate into English, but place the Latin term in parentheses, to assist in orienting readers. A second choice concerned gender-neutral language. Although the Roman Empire's government and society were, obviously, strongly male-dominated, and although Roman legal sources regularly presume that legal actors are male, the rules of Roman law not infrequently apply to both sexes indifferently; and even strongly gendered words like filius, "son," could designate both sons and daughters.[29] But monotonous repetition of "he or she," "him or her," soon becomes distracting, while circumlocutions take one too far from the text. By and large, therefore, we have preserved the nominal gender bias of the sources.

Beyond these relatively superficial issues, there remains the far more important problem of the Codex language itself. For the unwary, dangers abound: technical terms and phrases, often looking temptingly like ordinary Latin words, but with unusual twists in a legal context. A splendid example, perfectly representative, is utiliter in C. 9.9.21 pr.; it is easy to miss the implied reference to annus or dies utilis, the "effective" time units prescribed for pressing claims, without counting, for instance, days when courts are not in session.[30] A humble word like collatio ("collection" or "contribution") is pressed into service to describe the requirement that an emancipated child with independently acquired property, or a daughter with a dowry, must add this property into a decedent's estate prior to the division of that estate among heirs (C. 6.20: collatio bonorum) – a concept unfamiliar to almost all modern readers, even under its modern common law equivalent the rarely encountered "hotchpot." And for some major social and legal institutions, like the late imperial colonate, the affected persons are usually just described as coloni, a maddeningly multivalent word that is the subject of persistent scholarly controversy.[31] We can do no more than vainly hope to have navigated these shoals successfully, without the loss of either cargo or passengers.

[30] "Ob commissa adulteria atque accusandas uxores certa tempora, quae utiliter computari solent, praescripta sunt." Blume got it right: "only judicial days are counted in that period."

[31] See the note on C. 11.48.

To make sure that readers are not shipwrecked, we have frequently given our best translation and then placed the technical term (terminus technicus) in parentheses. Admittedly, such parentheses, used also for ellipses in the text, are intrusive. They are meant to be. Their purpose is to slow down readers who may have been anticipating a nice easy read, and to alert them of possible significant dangers.

The Codex is just under 400,000 words in length, or somewhat less than half the size of Justinian's Digest. All of us are certainly conscious that we are unlikely to have the last word on the meaning and correct translation of many, many passages. In fact, we have on occasion argued among ourselves about the best translation of disputed texts; and what we print represents no more than our collective best judgment. Each book of the Codex was read by at least two of our collaborators, and corrections were continuous throughout the process of editing. Nonetheless, it is likely that some translation errors remain undetected, and that on occasion the true solutions simply eluded us. At our urging and with our thanks, Prof. Ernest Metzger, of the University of Glasgow, has established a website where readers are warmly invited to register their corrections, see at: www.iuscivile.com/materials/codex.

Finally, I am happy to acknowledge help received from Alex Conison, a former Michigan graduate student in Classical Studies, and from Sandy Zeff, a Michigan law librarian. Also, my work on this project was supported over many summers by the William W. Cook Faculty Research Fund of the Michigan Law School.

The work put into this publication by Cambridge University Press has been extraordinary in its extent and its quality. I, like my editors, am especially grateful to Michael Sharp, the Senior Editor who arranged for the project's submission in the first place and who has guided it to completion; and to Christina Sarigiannidou, the Content Manager who saw us through the various stages of production. We are all also indebted to Elizabeth Hanlon, the Editor who did much to prepare the manuscript for publication; Phil Treble, the Text Designer; Lyn Flight, the copy-editor, and Frances Hiller, the Senior Editorial Services Controller who helped a great deal with initial copy-editing; and Henry Maas, the inexhaustible proofreader for the press.

But above all I want to thank my fellow editors, whose immense knowledge and loving concern for the project over many years were a most important aid to me in bringing these volumes together. Work on the Codex is by no means easy; doubts as to meaning and context often obtrude, from several viewpoints. But the editors of this volume have assumed an intelligent, invariably optimistic attitude in confronting all the many difficulties. I am most profoundly appreciative. You are steely-eyed Codex wranglers, all of you!

Note on the dating of Constitutions, by Noel Lenski

Many laws in Justinian's Codex are transmitted with incorrect headings and subscriptions. Mistakes can involve, among other things, the name or names of recipients, the offices they held, the law's place of issuance, and the question of whether the text transmitted was "given," "written," "received," or "posted" on the date and in the place reported.

But far and away the most common errors affect the dating of the law. Such errors have several causes. First, both calendar and annual dates are almost always abbreviated, leading to mistakes in comprehension and transmission on the part of the copyists of manuscripts. To take just one example, "Ian(uarius)," "Iun(ius)," and "Iul(ius)" were regularly mistaken for each other. Second, Roman calendar dates are counted backwards from fixed days in a month: the kalends (which always fell on the first and was abbreviated as "k"), the nones (which fell on the fifth or seventh, depending on the month, and was abbreviated as "non." or even "n."), and the ides (which fell on the thirteenth or fifteenth, and was abbreviated as "id."). Here again, these abbreviations were regularly interchanged, esp. "k." and "id." So, too, the Roman numerals used to record calendar dates: II and V, for example, were regularly confused, and the vertical strokes recording individual digits were regularly omitted or falsely increased (I, II, III, IIII). Finally, solar years were calculated not using numerals, but were based on the names of the Consuls who took office each January 1. This too could lead to confusion, particularly in years where the Emperors held the consulship, for emperors generally held multiple consulships during their reigns, and copyists regularly failed to record the number of these many consulates accurately.

Scholars have done considerable work to emend headings and subscriptions of the laws in the Codex. This includes alterations to the names and offices of recipients, the place of issuance or receipt, the question of whether the transmitted copy of the law was given, received, or posted. Nevertheless, because of the problems described above, it is a law's dates that are far and away most likely to attract scholarly intervention. (See also below, cxli–cxliii.)

It is often abundantly evident that a mistake was made in the dating of a law, whether by the copyists of the law in its original form, by the compilers of the Codex, or by subsequent copyists of the manuscripts. Often two copies or parts of one original constitution bear different dates – this might be evident from leges geminatae, from two versions of the same law preserved in the Codex Justinianus and some other source like the Codes Theodosianus or the Collatio, or from two or more sections of what were clearly a single law transmitted under different titles in the same code. Furthermore, many laws record their place and date of issuance, so that, when these are analyzed in the chronological order in which they were produced, they can be used to reconstruct the itineraries of the Emperors who created them. Using these itineraries, historians have demonstrated with a high degree of probability that the date or place of issuance transmitted for a number of laws must be incorrect. Building on these same itineraries and applying the principles of paleography and textual criticism, historians have thus attempted to redate those laws that are clearly aberrant.

Scholars have suggested such emendations for centuries, in fact, so many of them and in such varied venues that it would be nearly impossible to take every possible emendation into account. Nevertheless, the editors of these volumes are well aware that readers will benefit from the ready availability of well-reasoned suggestions for emendations to the transmitted text. With this in mind, we have chosen to include limited references to emendations to the dates only of those constitutions that have been treated systematically by scholars since the publication of Krüger's text. For these purposes, we utilized five studies, all comprehensive in scope and devoted to the question of dating:

- Theodor Mommsen, Gesammelte Schriften (1905), which lays out the dates and places of issuance for all constitutions issued under the tetrarchs between 284 and 305. Mommsen's study had been published before Krüger's ninth edition of the Codex and was utilized by Krüger in his work. Nevertheless, Krüger did not always accept Mommsen's emendations in his printed text, even if he often mentioned them in his notes. Where Mommsen's datings differ from those published in the body of Krüger's text, we report these in footnotes.
- Otto Seeck, Regesten der Kaiser (1919), which examines all constitutions from 311 to 476, and offers detailed explanations for its principles and their application to individual laws. This and later studies were obviously never used by Krüger. Again, we report where Seeck's datings differ from Krüger's text.
- Timothy D. Barnes, New Empire (1982), which examines the dating of constitutions issued from 284 to 337, insofar as these impinge on the itinerary of the respective emperors. We print Barnes' datings only where they differ from Krüger, Mommsen, or Seeck. In instances where Barnes also differs from Mommsen or Seeck, we print their suggested emendations as well.[32]
- Sebastian Schmidt-Hofner, "Die Regesten der Kaiser Valentinian und Valens" (2008), which examines systematically the headings and subscriptions of all constitutions issued between 364 and 375.[33] We print

[32] A palingenesia of the tetrarchic rescripts with some new suggested datings is also offered by Tony Honoré, Emperors and Lawyers (1994); unfortunately, it is published only on 3.5-in. floppy disks that are no longer readable. The same is true of the palingenesia of Theodosian laws in Honoré, Crisis of Empire (1998).

[33] A similar study was completed by Pergami, La legislazione di Valentiniano e Valente (1993). Schmidt-Hofner takes Pergami's work into account and supersedes it.

Schmidt-Hofner's re-datings only where they differ from Krüger or Seeck; in these instances, we also print Seeck's suggested emendations.

- Tēlemachos C. Lounghis, Vasilikiī Vlysídou, and Stelios Lampakis, Regesten der Kaiserurkunden des Oströmischen Reiches (2005), which catalogs all known imperial legal pronouncements from the end of the Western Empire down to the death of Justinian. Lounghis et al. incorporate the important article of Krüger revising the chronology of the Justinianic constitutions in the Codex, material Krüger included in the notes, but not generally the text of his ninth edition.[34] They also offer ranges of dates for constitutions undated in Krüger's ninth edition by using the Prosopography of the Later Roman Empire to establish termini for the offices held by the laws' recipients.[35]

All these studies derived their conclusions from the principles of paleography (emending mistakes commonly made by scribes), codicology (emending mistakes based on preferable manuscript readings), prosopography (emending mistakes based on dates established for the offices held by a law's recipient or addressee), and the known itineraries of the Emperors who issued the laws. Additional suggestions for chronological emendations made by Tony Honoré on the basis of stylistic criteria were not incorporated into our text.[36]

To avoid cluttering the text with unnecessary citation, we kept references to emendations to a minimum, mentioning only instances where subsequent scholarship has emended the date transmitted in the text of Krüger, and even then mentioning only the first person to have suggested that emendation. At times, we have also mentioned instances where a subsequent scholar rejects an emendation proposed by his predecessor. It should also be noted that a small number of constitutions in Book 7 have been re-dated in accord with suggestions made from the Vallicelliana fragments republished by Corcoran in "New Subscripts" (2009). We have also not infrequently referred readers to the dates and other information given by the Projet Volterra's (still incomplete) online publication of late imperial constitutions.[37]

[34] Krüger (1873).
[35] Martindale, PLRE, vol. II (1980), vol. III (1992).
[36] Emperors and Lawyers (1994); Crisis of Empire (1998).
[37] See at: www.ucl.ac.uk/volterra/#intro. Thanks are due to Graham O'Toole for collating all redating of constitutions from Seeck's Regesten der Kaiser und Päpste.

The Codex of Justinian: The Life of a Text through 1,500 Years

Simon Corcoran

Justinian: the man and his projects[1]

Justinian became Roman Emperor on April 1, 527 CE in Constantinople, initially as co-ruler with his uncle, the ailing Justin I (r. 518–527), then as sole ruler on the latter's death on August 1 of the same year. Although already in middle age, Justinian was to reign for almost four decades, only dying in November 565. His long reign was marked by three great projects, undertaken with ceaseless energy, although differing greatly in their short-term and long-term results. The first was the defence of the Empire's existing territories and the recovery of those lost in the previous century. In this he was superficially very successful. By his death, a large portion of the western provinces had been reconquered from the Germanic rulers of the successor states: first Africa from the Vandals, then Italy from the Ostrogoths, and finally even a sliver of Spain from the Visigoths. The cost, however, in men and money was enormous, while the recovered territories, especially those in Italy, were left ravaged and exhausted, with the imperial grip less than firm. Even in the east, the Empire only just held its own against the challenge of Sasanian Persia under her own "Justinian," Khusro I Anoshiravan (r. 531–579), whose sack of Antioch in 540 was a particular humiliation for the Romans.[2] As a result, when the Lombards invaded Italy only three years after Justinian's death, much of it was swiftly lost and the rest held only with difficulty. Weaknesses elsewhere were punishingly exposed when, in the first half of the seventh century, first the Persians (temporarily) and then the Arabs (permanently) overran great swathes of the eastern provinces. Justinian's sixth-century empire was still a superpower, if resting to a great extent upon prestige and illusion. By the late seventh century, the diminished empire was struggling simply to survive. Justinian's territorial successes had proved to be short-lived.

[1] For general accounts of Justinian and his reign, see Moorhead, Justinian (1994); Evans, Age of Justinian (1996); Cameron, "Justin I and Justinian" (2000).

[2] For the Sasanian Empire, including Khusro and his reign, see Daryaee, Sasanian Persia (2008); Canepa, Two Eyes of the Earth (2009), 170–174 (sack of Antioch). For the Roman–Persian wars of this period, see Greatrex and Lieu, Roman Eastern Frontier (2002), 82–134.

The second great matter for Justinian was that of Christian unity. Ever since Constantine became Christian in the early fourth century, emperors had struggled with Christian dispute and schism over issues of authority, liturgy, and theology (especially Christology, disputes about the nature of Christ). Justinian was perhaps more forceful and dogmatic in these areas than many of his predecessors, with a pronounced tendency to intolerance of non-conformists, a habit of strong-arming senior clerics, as Pope Vigilius (r. 535–557) learned to his cost, and a belief in his own acumen as a theologian. However, despite a series of major meetings (the Synod of Constantinople in 536, the Council of Constantinople in 553),[3] the most important division in the church, essentially that between Chalcedonians and non-Chalcedonians (who disagreed about how Christ's human and divine natures could or should be combined or reconciled), was never resolved and perhaps contributed to the imperial weakness later revealed in Syria and Egypt.[4]

The final matter was that of the law. Here Justinian's efforts were soonest rewarded, with the rapid and successful codification of existing Roman laws and legal writings, and an overhaul of legal teaching, all carried out in the short period between 528 and 534. But, although hardly given to modesty, even Justinian would probably not have imagined that Roman law as he codified it would be legally authoritative into the modern age, and that the Civil Law tradition stemming from it would continue to provide the bedrock for numerous legal systems not only in many former parts of the Empire, but even in places far beyond the purview of Rome, right into the twenty-first century.[5] The only other achievement of Justinian to prove so durable is his Church of the Holy Wisdom (Hagia Sofia) in Constantinople.

Justinian's legal policy 528–534[6]

On February 13, 528 Justinian wrote to the Senate in Constantinople setting out his plan for a new codex (novus codex) of imperial constitutions (laws) (Const. Haec).[7] This codex was to subsume and supersede the three pre-existing codices of imperial constitutions, the Gregorian, Hermogenian and [3] Millar, "Rome, Constantinople" (2008); Price, The Acts of the Council of Constantinople (2009).

[4] Menze, Justinian and the Making of the Syrian Orthodox Church (2008).
[5] For the long-term legacy of Roman law, see Feenstra, "Law" (1992); Stein, Roman Law in European History (1999).
[6] For general accounts of Justinian's legal activities, see Jolowicz and Nicholas, Historical Introduction (1972), 478–500; Mousourakis, Legal History (2007), 183–191; Humfress, "Law and Legal Practice" (2005).
[7] As explained below in relation to the Gregorian and Hermogenian Codices, "codex" denotes here the physical format of a bound book, without having the modern connotations of the word "code" as a codified body of material. Therefore, the word "Codex" rather than "Code" is used in this chapter and throughout the rest of these volumes for the ancient works of Justinian, Theodosius, etc.

Theodosian (described below), as well as later imperial legislation, including the recent laws of Justinian himself, replacing them with a single authoritative recompilation, which was to carry Justinian's own name (Const. Haec. pr.; cf. Const. Summa 1).[8] The stated aim of this project was to reduce the complexity of the law and the length of litigation.[9] The commission of high officials and legal experts appointed to carry out this task was granted wide editorial powers, so it could cut away the irrelevant, harmonize the incongruent, suppress the obsolete, and, indeed, add, alter, remove, or merge material to make the law clearer (Const. Haec. 2; cf. Const. Summa 1). Texts were to be divided (if necessary) and arranged under suitable titles in chronological order. The resultant Codex in twelve books was promulgated by means of a letter from Justinian to Menas, Praetorian Prefect of the East, dated April 7, 529 (Const. Summa), to come into force on April 16. This seems to have been a complete project in and of itself. By creating a single authoritative, harmonised and coherent collection of laws issued by emperors over the previous 400 years (as far back as Hadrian), Justinian felt that he had superseded his predecessors. That he had already at this point conceived plans for even more amibitious legal reform and codification, to which the Codex was simply the prolegomenon, is far from certain.

What happened next was that over the following summer the Emperor's chief legal officer, the Quaestor Thomas, fell from power and, by September, his place had been taken by Tribonian (Quaestor 529–532 and 535–542), who had already served in a junior role on the Codex commission.[10] The energetic and visionary Tribonian soon formulated a far more ambitious codification project.[11] Roman law rested upon more than just the pronouncements of emperors, but comprised a patchwork of statutes (laws (leges) passed by the popular assemblies, decrees of the Senate), magistral edicts (primarily the Edict of the Urban Praetor, put into fixed form c. 130 CE[12]), and, most of all, the commentaries upon these by the classical jurists, which were not purely academic exercises, but were legally authoritative and had standing in court.[13] Although all these forms of legislation and legal writing had each in turn fallen

[8] At Buildings 1.10, Procopius publicly praises the Codex, but in his Secret History 11.2 opines that this was one of the Emperor's vanity projects intended simply to create something new for the sake of carrying his name.

[9] "To make law suits less long-winded" (Const. Haec. pr.). This claimed purpose is reflected also in the report on the Codex's publication in John Malalas' Chronicle 18.38 (Jeffreys and Scott, Chronicle (1986), 262). See also Scott, "Malalas" (1981).

[10] Corcoran, "Anastasius, Justinian" (2009), 201–202. Tribonian is listed sixth in Const. Haec 1 and Const. Summa 2, but is always named first among participants in the later law commissions.

[11] Honoré, Tribonian (1978); Honoré, Justinian's Digest (2010).

[12] The text does not survive intact, but has been partially reconstructed (Lenel, Das Edictum Perpetuum (1927) (English translation in ARS, No. 244)).

[13] Thus, Hadrian ruled that agreement among the jurists had the force of law (Gaius 1.7).

into obsolescence, so that the Emperors had come by the late third century to enjoy a monopoly of law-making, the existing laws and texts remained valid. In 429, Theodosius II had envisaged codifying not only imperial laws, but also the juristic writings (C.Th. 1.1.5), although this was never carried out. Instead, his Codex, which contained only imperial constitutions from Constantine onwards, included a fragment of a law from 426 (C.Th. 1.4.3), the so-called "Law of Citations," which limited use of jurists' works in court to a "Mighty Handful" (Papinian, Paul, Gaius, Ulpian, Modestinus), and under which, where juristic opinion differed, the majority would prevail (or Papinian's view in case of a tie).[14] This text, possibly modified, had been taken by Justinian into his new Codex.[15]

However, for Tribonian it was clearly not regarded as sufficient. Therefore, engaging with the opinions and controversies in the writings of the classical Roman jurists from almost the first constitutions he wrote as Quaestor in Justinian's name,[16] he conceived a plan to resolve numerous disagreements between these jurists. As a result, a series of laws, which came to be known as the Fifty Decisions (Quinquaginta Decisiones), was issued to settle various of these controversies definitively, promulgated in batches between summer 530 and spring 531.[17] This was only the start, however, for in December 530 Tribonian, again in Justinian's name, wrote to himself a long constitution setting out a plan to gather together and boil down into a "nutshell" all the writings of the great jurists who had flourished in the period between Augustus (r. 27 BCE–14 CE) and Diocletian (r. 284–305), thus making of them a reduced, manageable, clear, consistent, and harmonious whole (Const. Deo Auctore (= C. 1.17.1)). A commission was set up to put this into effect, and they toiled for three years. Even the Nika Riot, a serious disturbance that broke out at Constantinople in January 532 and turned into a revolt that almost toppled the Emperor,[18] did not derail the project, with Tribonian remaining in control of it, despite being dismissed as Quaestor as part of the appeasement of the rioters.

The major output of this industry, published on December 16, 533, was the Digest, a weighty fifty-book compilation, although slight compared with the great mass of writings from which it derived. Edited extracts from the jurists were woven together under suitable titles, although dominated by the writings

14 Honoré, Crisis of Empire (1998), 250; Watson, Law Out of Context (2000), 4–8.

15 P. Oxy. XV 1814, lines 44–45; Corcoran, "Justinian and His Two Codes" (2008). 96–99. Justinian also issued his own law on this matter, but its contents are unknown.

16 Already a mention of Paul at C. 3.28.33.1 (September 17, 529).

17 Honoré, Tribonian (1978), 142–146; Russo Ruggeri, Studi sulle Quinquaginta Decisiones (1999).

18 For the Nika revolt, see Greatrex, "Nika Riot" (1997); also Cameron, "Justin I and Justinian" (2000), 71–72.

of Ulpian (d. 223), which furnished some 40 percent of the text.[19] The content was supposed to be internally consistent and not contradictory, brought into harmony and updated in accord with the legal changes of the Fifty Decisions and other recent enactments. The Digest was accompanied by the Institutes (published on November 21, 533), a brief four-book work, which was to serve as an introductory text for first-year law students, modeled upon the Institutes of Gaius (second century), which it now replaced. Both these works formally came into force as legally authoritative, superseding absolutely all previous juristic writing, on December 30 (Const. Tanta (= C. 1.17.2); Const. Imperatoriam Maiestatem). There was also issued a law reforming legal education (Const. Omnem), which was now to be confined to the two law-schools of Constantinople and Beirut, and whose revised five-year syllabus was designed around Justinian's new materials, the Institutes, Digest, and Codex.

Given all this legal activity, the law as contained in the Codex of 529 was now seriously out of date. Therefore, Justinian ordered that his intervening legislation, including the Fifty Decisions, be edited into the Codex, with the existing material altered to reflect the changes he had enacted. As a result, texts were added and deleted, emended and relocated, to produce a second edition, the Codex repetitae praelectionis, which was published on November 16, 534 by means of a letter to the Senate of Constantinople (Const. Cordi), to come into force on December 29, superseding The Novus Codex and representing the concluding act of Justinian's codification of Roman law. It is this revised Codex that survives and is translated in these volumes.

The making of the Codex: the sources

Justinian is explicit about the source material that was to be used for his original Codex (the Novus Codex), namely, the three existing codices of imperial constitutions (the Gregorian, Hermogenian, and Theodosian) plus the subsequent legislation of emperors down to his own reign (Const. Haec pr.; Const. Summa 1). For the revised edition (the Codex repetitae praelectionis), the Fifty Decisions and the other laws he had himself issued between 529 and 534 were to provide the new material (Const. Cordi 2).

Of the various sources, the Theodosian Codex is best known, since it is the one most fully and independently preserved.[20] It was compiled on the orders of Emperor Theodosius II between 429 and 437, being issued in a public ceremony at the time of the wedding of Valentinian III, his cousin and [19] On the making of the Digest, see Honoré, Justinian's Digest (2010).

[20] Edition: Mommsen and Meyer, Codex Theodosianus (1905); English translation: Pharr, The Theodosian Code (1952).

Emperor in the west, to Theodosius' daughter Eudoxia at Constantinople in October 437, and promulgated throughout the Empire, both east and west, during the following year.[21] Taking as models the two earlier codices (Gregorian, Hermogenian; C.Th. 1.1.5), it comprised sixteen books of imperial constitutions from the reign of Constantine onwards (covering the years 313–437), edited and abbreviated, sliced and diced under appropriate titles. Books 6–16 survive almost intact; Books 1–5 much less so.[22] Almost all the material in Justinian's Codex dating between 313 and 437 must derive from the Theodosian Codex.[23] Indeed, for the deficient books of the Theodosian Codex, Justinian's Codex itself is often the only witness to otherwise missing material. Nonetheless, the fact that the Theodosian Codex survives so substantially means that there is a host of control texts for examining what Justinian's commissioners did to their sources, in terms of both selecting and editing material.[24] Sometimes, indeed, albeit rarely, we have control texts for the Theodosian Codex also, so that we can follow the manner in which an imperial law was transmitted and edited from its original issue through the successive codifications of Theodosius and Justinian. Thus, two laws attested in fuller forms in contemporary fourth-century inscriptions are found edited into each codex in turn.[25] As noted earlier, Theodosius had originally intended to proceed to a more comprehensive codification of all imperial constitutions and juristic texts (C.Th. 1.1.5), but, achieving only the first stage of his plan, had to be satisfied with his more modest, if still substantial, codex of recent imperial laws. It was Justinian who in due course succeeded where Theodosius failed.

[21] The story of the Codex's compilation and dissemination can be seen from four contemporary texts: C.Th. 1.1.5 (1st commission, 429); 1.1.6 (2nd commission, 435); Theodosius II, Novel 1 (promulgation in the east, 438); Gesta Senatus (in Mommsen, Codex Theodosianus, I.1, 1–4) (reception in Italy, 438). See Matthews, Laying Down the Law (2000); Salway, "The Publication of the Theodosian Code" (2012).

[22] For issues over the reconstruction of Books 1–5, see Matthews, Laying Down the Law (2000), 101–118. At least a half, perhaps even two-thirds, of these books is missing.

[23] Some texts, with their explicit mention of Licinius (r. 308–324), who was subsequently damned (C.Th. 15.14.1), appear anomalous and may have derived from the Hermogenian or perhaps Gregorian Codex (C. 3.1.8, 6.1.3, 7.16.41, 7.22.3). See Corcoran, Empire of the Tetrarchs (2000), 274–280.

[24] Mommsen's Theodosian Codex edition contains extensive and explicit indications in separate boxes next to the texts usefully indicating the Justinian Codex variants.

[25] Thus, Galerius' (or Constantine's) Edict on Accusations (305 or 314/320; FIRA 1.94; ARS No. 302) appears in a short edited version at C.Th. 9.5.1, shortened again at C. 9.8.3 (discussed by Matthews, Laying Down the Law (2000), 254–270, and Corcoran, "Galerius's Jigsaw Puzzle" (2007)). Similarly, Julian's letter on judges-delegate (362; CIL III 459 and 14198; now L'Année Épigraphique 2000.1370; ARS No. 309) appears at C.Th. 1.16.8, thence C. 3.3.5. See Salway, "Words and Deeds" (2012), 147–150. For the other editorial practices of the Theodosian compilers, see Matthews, Laying Down the Law (2000), chs 6, 8, and 9.

The Gregorian and Hermogenian Codices, which Theodosius had invoked as models and Justinian used as sources, do not survive.[26] Outside Justinian's Codex, only limited cannibalized fragments of them remain in other late Roman legal compilations.[27] It is presumed that all pre-Constantinian material in the Codex, covering the period from Hadrian (r. 117–138)[28] down to 305, must derive from one or other of these two Codices. Since the other sources to cite these Codices tend to give specific attributions to one or other of them, it is possible to get a broad picture of their chronology and content, although precision is impossible. Both the Codices were issued in the 290s, during the reign of Diocletian. The Gregorian Codex contained imperial constitutions, mostly private rescripts (thus addressed to ordinary petitioners rather than to office-holders), arranged under titles across at least thirteen books. Starting from some point in the second century (probably during the reign of Hadrian), it went down to 291, although it seems to have provided very uneven representation of emperors and years. It also contained some further material from later in the 290s. The Hermogenian Codex, by contrast, comprised overwhelmingly private rescripts of Diocletian from only the two years 293 and 294 arranged under titles in a single book.[29]

Hermogenian was magister libellorum (Master of Petitions) and later Praetorian Prefect to Diocletian,[30] so that his Codex may have been official or at least semi-official. Of Gregorius, however, nothing is known. By analogy with Hermogenian, it is sometimes supposed that he also held office at the court of Diocletian, but he may have been operating outside the administration.[31] We simply do not know. One or both Codices may have had later material added to them, but it is unclear whether either was issued in anything [26] Recently some meagre fragments have been identified as probably coming from a fifth-century manuscript of the Gregorian Codex, which reveals overlap with text in C. 7.62 (Corcoran and Salway, "Fragmenta Londiniensia Anteiustiniana" (2012)).

[27] On these Codices, see Corcoran, Empire of the Tetrarchs (2000), ch. 2; Corcoran, "The Gregorianus and Hermogenianus" (2013). No substantial full text reconstruction of the two Codices is possible. For partial attempts, see Hänel, Codicis Gregoriani (1837); Krüger et al., Collectio III (1890), 236–245. The most important pre-Justinian legal works to quote the codices are the Collatio Mosaicarum et Romanarum Legum or Lex Dei (fourth century), the Consultatio Veteris Cuiusdam Iurisconsulti (fifth century), and the Gregorian and Hermogenian sections in the Breviary of Alaric (506). Useful comparative material is also preserved in the so-called Fragmenta Vaticana (fourth century). On these various works, see Schiller, Roman Law (1978), 50–54; Jolowicz and Nicholas, Historical Introduction (1972), 456–458 and 466–467; Mousourakis, Legal History (2007), 165–167 and 182.

[28] For the single rescript of Hadrian in the Codex, see C. 6.23.1.

[29] On the material in Hermogenian's Codex, see Connolly, Lives Behind the Laws (2010).

[30] Corcoran, Empire of the Tetrarchs (2000), 85–90; Corcoran, "The Gregorianus and Hermogenianus" (2013), 293–295.

[31] Corcoran, Empire of the Tetrarchs (2000), 90; Corcoran, "The Gregorianus and Hermogenianus" (2013), 295–297.

like a formal "second edition."[32] One important point to note is that although these two collections soon came to be called codices, this was because they had been published in "codex" form; that is, they were not written on one side only of separate rolls, but on both sides of pages bound into volumes with hinged spines in the format still standard for books.[33] This major shift from roll to codex took place essentially during the third century, and meant that large legal collections could be navigated as reference works for teaching or practice more easily than ever before, with running headers and summary indexes. Thus, the legal "codices" were so called because of their format, and it is only modern usage that has given us the sense of a "code" as a codified body of material. The Gregorian and Hermogenian Codices are also notable as furnishing the paradigm for structured collections of imperial constitutions, which went beyond previous assemblages of emperors' pronouncements, although they were still very far from being complete or comprehensive "codes."[34] This is why, as noted earlier, this chapter and these volumes prefer to use the term "codex" rather than "code" to describe the ancient collections of constitutions.

The material in Justinian's Codex subsequent to the three earlier codices (i.e., post-437) must have derived principally from the imperial archives available at Constantinople. Following the issue of the Theodosian Codex, designed to apply to the entire Empire, it had been agreed that laws issued in one half of the Empire would be valid in the other half only if formally sent there and promulgated by the other Emperor.[35] No Emperor in the west appears ever to have sent material east, since the Codex contains no western material for this period. However, some eastern material was sent west,[36] and it is by this route that there survive independently collections of such Novels (i.e., novellae constitutiones = "new constitutions"), furnishing intact versions [32] Corcoran, "The Gregorianus and Hermogenianus" (2013) 297–300, is cautious on the question of editions, in contrast to Empire of the Tetrarchs (2000), 37 and 89–90. There are some limited pre-Theodosian texts in the Codex from the late 290s and up to 305, plus the anomalous constitutions of Licinius noted above (n. 23). It is impossible to be sure which of these were original to the Diocletianic codices.

[33] For the formats, see Johnson, "The Ancient Book" (2009), and, as reflected in surviving legal manuscripts, Ammirati, "Per una storia" (2010), and Ammirati, "The Latin Book" (2012).

[34] The closest earlier examples are the Libri Constitutionum of Papirius Justus (under Marcus Aurelius: Lenel, Palingenesia (1889), I, cols. 947–952; Volterra, "L'ouvrage de Papirius Justus" (1968)) and the Decreta of Paul (under Septimius Severus: Lenel, Palingenesia (1889), II, cols. 959–965; Honoré, Emperors and Lawyers (1994), 20–24).

[35] Thus, the de facto division of the Empire since the death of Theodosius I in 395 became legally formalized. The separate line of western emperors finally ended with the deposition of Romulus Augustulus (476) and then the death of Julius Nepos (480).

[36] Thus, Theodosius II sent a batch of Novels to Valentinian III in 447, which the latter officially promulgated (Nov. Theod. 2 and Nov. Val. 26).

of several laws present in edited form in the Codex.[37] Some other texts are also preserved independently in the acts of Church Councils (e.g., Chalcedon, 451) or other ecclesiastical sources.[38] Otherwise, most of the secular legislation of the late fifth and early sixth centuries is only known as preserved in the Codex.

Although sometimes proposed, it does not seem likely that any imperial constitutions were taken directly from the juristic writings into the Codex, and nothing Justinian says in the introductory constitutions indicates this possibility.[39] In fact, the compilation of the jurists' writings into the Digest meant that numerous imperial constitutions, which the jurists commonly cited or less commonly quoted verbatim, appear there quite comfortably.[40] Justinian had ruled in 529 that imperial constitutions embedded in the jurists' writings were valid only if not in conflict with his new Codex (Const. Summa 4), but the subsequent publication of the Digest conferred authority on everything in it, including embedded constitutions revised as necessary (Const. Tanta 10 = C. 1.17.2.10). Few rescripts are present in both Digest and Codex, coming via different routes, either the jurists or the Codex Gregorianus.[41] Justinian ruled that the Digest was to avoid unnecessary repetition of matters dealt with authoritatively in the Codex (Const. Deo Auctore 9 = C. 1.17.1.9; Const. Tanta 14 = C. 1.17.2.14) and, although he was thinking more of general provisions than exact textual doublets, this surely explains why the direct overlap is so limited. Indeed, not only could texts have been deliberately excluded from the Digest, but others also might have been removed later from the revised Codex. Further, the chronological range for which the jurists and the Gregorian Codex coincided substantially was only about twenty years (the reigns of Septimius Severus and Caracalla), so the chance of duplication was perhaps not great. In any case, the Gregorian Codex, whose own sources are not entirely clear, may itself have taken at least some texts from juristic writings. As it happens, there is only one truly anomalous text. This is C. 9.8.6, which consisted originally of a long, probably Justinianic, constitution in Greek (now lost), containing within it two passages in Latin from jurists (Paul; Marcian), who themselves cite (but [37] Edition by Meyer as vol. II of the Mommsen and Meyer, Codex Theodosianus edition; translated in Pharr's The Theodosian Code (1952), 487–572.

[38] See Coleman-Norton, Roman State (1966), for useful collected translations of imperial texts on religious affairs from all sources up to 535.

[39] Corcoran, Empire of the Tetrarchs (2000), 31–32.

[40] Imperial constitutions cited in the juristic sources are collected together in Gualandi, Legislazione imperiale (1963).

[41] E.g. Antoninus Pius: C. 6.37.1 closely matching D. 34.1.13.1 (Scaevola); Severus and Caracalla: C. 9.41.1 quite divergent from D. 48.18.1.16 (Ulpian), C. 10.41.1.1 closely matches D. 50.1.21.6 (Paul), and C. 11.32.1 reported in indirect speech at D. 50.1.21.7 (Paul); Caracalla: C. 7.49.1 paraphrased at D. 3.6.1.3 (Ulpian).

not verbatim) imperial rescripts.[42] Although jurists are sometimes mentioned in imperial constitutions both by earlier emperors and by Justinian himself, nowhere else are they quoted in this fashion. It is easiest to suppose that this unusual constitution was added into the revised Codex after the promulgation of the Digest, since it was only direct imperial legislation that could now bestow authority on uncodified juristic material.

The making of the Codex: types of imperial constitution

The imperial constitutions that ended up edited into the Codex via these various sources are of several types. The majority, deriving principally from the Theodosian Codex and later material, comprises letters addressed to officeholders, most often higher officials such as one of the Praetorian Prefects, or the Urban Prefect of either Rome or Constantinople. These usually form part of general legislative enactments, promulgated across the Empire or a large portion of it. Sometimes, however, these letters are more specific and are individual replies to officials submitting queries to the Emperor for answers. The process of editing, however, means that it is not always clear whether a letter is such a one-off reply or part of a more general enactment, especially as the latter may itself have been prompted by a specific case.[43]

The next most common type of text is the private rescript, typical of the second- and third-century material deriving from the Gregorian and Hermogenian Codices.[44] Indeed, there are no certain private rescripts in the Codex dating after 305, since these had lost general force other than for their individual case after 398 (C.Th. 1.2.11), and so were excluded from the Theodosian Codex.[45] This lack of general validity is restated in Justinian's Codex (C. 1.23). However, the old rescripts taken into the Codex acquired the force of general law from the very fact of their inclusion (Const. Haec 2; Const. Summa 3). Private rescripts are replies or rulings on points of law issued in answer to petitions from private individuals, and would have been posted up in batches outside the Emperor's residence. They were not generally sent to the [42] De Marini Avonzo, "Due giuristi" (1974); Bauman, "Leges publicorum iudiciorum" (1980), 229–230; Honoré, Tribonian (1978), 236.

[43] See, for instance, Corcoran, Empire of the Tetrarchs (2000), ch. 6. The Codex itself includes titles discussing the current status of various types of imperial pronouncement (C. 1.14, 15, 23).

[44] On rescripts, see Honoré, Emperors and Lawyers (1994), ch. 2; Corcoran, Empire of the Tetrarchs (2000), ch. 3; Connolly, Lives Behind the Laws (2010), ch. 2.

[45] Some fourth-century private rescripts do survive in other legal sources. See Corcoran, Empire of the Tetrarchs (2000), 42 and 301–302. Note, in particular, some late surviving examples from the 360s (Consultatio 9.2, 5, 6).

addressees. In terms of format, private rescripts were formally distinguishable from letters, since they lacked the opening greeting and closing valediction, which the latter originally carried.[46] Since, however, greeting formulae do not often survive the successive editorial processes that the texts have undergone, it is not always clear whether a constitution in the Codex was in origin a letter or a private rescript, although rescripts can be considered the default document type in the second- and third-century material.

Less frequent in the Codex are edicts, which were general declarations without specific addressees, typically in the form "The Emperor says" (Imperator dicit), although not all texts in the Codex considered to be edicts conform to this.[47] Further, general legislation was often issued in overlapping edictal and epistolary forms, so that the distinction between the two is blurred from the fourth century onwards.[48] Finally, there are extracts from the acta or proceedings of various types of hearing, which are the least common format encountered in the Codex.[49]

One notable feature of the imperial texts in the Codex is the existence of items in Greek, which shows how far law and administration in the Empire had become bilingual by the time of Justinian even at the highest level. Latin was the proper language of Roman law, and communication between the Emperor and officials was always in Latin. However, Greek was the dominant language in the eastern Mediterranean, so that, from the moment Roman power arrived there in the second century BCE, correspondence with local communities was usually in Greek, as was most lower-level administration. With the extension of Roman citizenship to all free inhabitants of the Empire in 212 CE, and then the rise of Christianity, which involved emperors in much business and dispute generally debated in Greek, there was a tendency for Greek to percolate upwards to the higher echelons of the eastern administration.[50] As far as this affects the imperial texts gathered into the codices, the Gregorian, Hermogenian, and Theodosian contained [46] Some examples of greeting formulae survive in the Codex; e.g., C. 1.3.1, 1.21.2, 2.13.1, 3.28.26, 9.2.11, 9.1.21, 10.72.7, 12.33.1. Valedictions, which would have been written personally by the emperor in the original document (Corcoran, "State Correspondence" (2014), 194–195), are not attested in the Codex except in the anomalous text C. 1.1.8.24, 39.

[47] For edicts and issues of edictal format, see Corcoran, Empire of the Tetrarchs (2000), 170–171. For some Codex examples, note C. 3.3.2, 3.11.1, 7.51.4, 7.62.6, 10.61.1. Texts addressed "ad populum" or "ad provinciales" are usually taken as edictal.

[48] See Corcoran, Empire of the Tetrarchs (2000), 198–203; Matthews, Laying Down the Law (2000), ch. 9. Note in particular that the epigraphically attested Edict on Accusations appears in the Theodosian and Justinian Codices as deriving from a letter to the Urban Prefect (C.Th. 9.5.1; C. 9.8.3; Corcoran, "Galerius's Jigsaw Puzzle" (2007), 242–243).

[49] C. 1.3.7, 7.26.6, 7.62.1, 9.1.17, 9.41.3, 9.47.12, 9.51.1, 10.48.2, 12.46.1. On records of hearings, see Corcoran, Empire of the Tetrarchs (2000), 254–260; Connolly, "Constantine Answers the Veterans" (2010).

[50] For the language situation in the fifth century, see especially Millar, A Greek Roman Empire (2006).

very little Greek, and this is reflected also in the material taken from them into Justinian's Codex.[51] However, from the later fifth century, Greek texts become more common, especially for matters concerning the Church.[52] And yet, despite the fact that the Empire became linguistically weighted towards Greek, since the territories lost in the fifth century were Latin-speaking, the issue of laws in Greek was not yet the norm and Justinian had to justify promulgating one law in Greek on the grounds of making it more accessible.[53] After the end of the "codification" process in 534, however, the Novels issued from 535 onwards tended to be in Greek, unless dealing with the limited Latin-speaking portions of the Empire.[54] Indeed, it may be surmised that the legal work of Justinian and Tribonian was carried out only just in time, before Roman law in Latin was overwhelmed by the realities of a largely Greek-speaking polity.

Given the press of business upon them, emperors seldom composed the documents sent out in their names.[55] Instead, during the early Empire, different types of text came to be dealt with by freedmen in the Emperor's household, and then, by the early second century CE, by salaried officials of equestrian rank.[56] Letters were the responsibility of the Master of Letters (magister epistularum), although Greek correspondence was dealt with by a separate Master of Greek Letters (magister epistularum Graecarum). Rescripts in answer to petitions were the province of the Master of Petitions (magister libellorum). The Master of Memory (magister memoriae) may have dealt with edicts (which were relatively rare) and adnotationes (special grants), but perhaps mainly managed the imperial records. The Master of Hearings (magister cognitionum) arranged imperial audiences and trials, although it is not clear if he wrote any documents generated by them.[57] From the mid-fourth century, however, [51] From the Gregorianus: C. 4.24.1 and probably 1.9.2, 4.20.1, 9.6.1 (Corcoran, Empire of the Tetrarchs (2000), 38); cf. C. 10.48.2 (advocate speaks in Greek: Corcoran, Empire of the Tetrarchs (2000), 255). For the Theodosianus, note C.Th. 9.45.4–5 (C. 1.12.3); C.Th. 11.39.5; C.Th. 15.1.9 (C. 11.8.3); cf. C.Th. 8.15.1 (litigant speaks in Greek). C. 9.36.1 (perhaps of Julian) presumably came from the Theodosianus. See Stolte, "The Use of Greek" (2009).

[52] Especially the first five titles of Codex 1.

[53] Justinian, Inst. 3.7.3, relating to C. 6.4.4. Cf. C. 8.10.12 (law of Zeno in Greek, on private buildings)

[54] Kaiser, "Zweisprachigkeit" (2012). Even with the Novels, however, it is not always clear when, or if, now lost original Latin versions might have existed. It was only in the 530s that the Praetorian Prefect, John the Cappadocian, ordered all official material in the eastern prefecture to be in Greek (Kelly, Ruling the Later Roman Empire (2004), 34–35).

[55] Unsurprisingly, Justinian appears particularly proactive in this area (Honoré, "Some Constitutions" (1975)), earning predictable criticism from Procopius (Secret History 14.3–4).

[56] Millar, Emperor in the Roman World (1992), 69–110; Corcoran, "State Correspondence" (2014) 187–190.

[57] Before the mid-third century, the official title was of the form "procurator ab epistulis/a libellis," more often shortened simply to "ab epistulis," "a libellis," etc.

these "palatine secretaries" (as they are often called in English) were joined by a more senior official, called the Quaestor, who was in charge of drafting laws.[58] It should be noted that the men given the responsibility of dealing with laws and correspondence were not necessarily experts in law or administration, although those with suitable legal or literary skill could be chosen to hold these posts. Given the uneven presence of different types of imperial text in the Codex, most of the third-century material deriving from the Gregorian and Hermogenian Codices comprises private rescripts, which would have been written by the Master of Petitions. Most of the material from the mid-fourth century onwards, representing general legislation, will have been composed by the Quaestor.

This background is the starting point for the work of Tony Honoré, who has examined the imperial constitutions in the codices as texts with authors whose style and legal approach can be analyzed.[59] Even allowing for the fact that the texts have been redacted and recycled, often more than once, Honoré has argued that, by reading the texts in chronological order (rather than Codex order), it is possible to discern stylistic changes over time. He has used his results to construct sequences of composers of imperial constitutions, and has even been able to propose identifications with known historical figures, especially when they are the authors of other surviving texts, so allowing comparison. Thus, on the basis of reading the third-century rescripts mostly from the Codex, he has proposed a list for the holders of the office of a libellis/magister libellorum from 193–305, including among their number Papinian, Ulpian, Modestinus, and Hermogenian.[60] He has suggested similar sequences of authors for the office of Quaestor at various points in the fourth, fifth and sixth centuries.[61] The results of Honoré's work have not been universally accepted, there being scepticism especially in North America with regard to both his methods and his vision of how the palatine bureaus operated, underestimating the role of the office staff and its procedures.[62] Nonetheless, his work is a useful reminder that imperial texts are not straightforward creations of emperors, but can be analyzed otherwise than simply by the reign of an emperor, and that officials and advisors provided key input into the production of imperial pronouncements.

58 Harries, "The Roman Imperial Quaestor" (1988); Honoré, Crisis of Empire (1998), 11–23. The process for drafting laws in the fifth and sixth centuries is described at C. 1.14.8.

59 See especially Honoré, Emperors and Lawyers (1994); Honoré, Crisis of Empire (1998).

60 Honoré, Emperors and Lawyers (1994), 190–191.

61 Honoré, Crisis of Empire (1998), 275–277; Honoré, Tribonian (1978), ch. 8.

62 For example, criticisms of the first edition of Emperors and Lawyers by Watson, "Review" (1982). More supportive have been Millar ("A New Approach" (1986)), Liebs (e.g., in his recent Hofjuristen (2010)), and the author of this chapter (Corcoran, Empire of the Tetrarchs (2000), ch. 4; Corcoran, "State Correspondence" (2014), 188–189).

One key feature common to all imperial pronouncements needs to be highlighted. The imperial office in the Roman Empire could be collegial, and, indeed, for some two-thirds of the total period covered by the Codex (130s–530s) there were two, three, or even more Emperors reigning jointly.[63] Pronouncements, therefore, were promulgated in the names of all co-emperors, irrespective of which individual ruler actually issued them and where they were to be applied. In the headings to these texts the Emperors appeared in order of seniority according to their dies imperii, that is, from the day when they first entered the imperial college. However, where a college included junior rulers with the rank of Caesar (who lacked the titles Imperator and Augustus), the Augusti took precedence. In headings to constitutions, therefore, the Emperor named first was not necessarily the actual issuer. This system was made more complex by the fact that emperors frequently disagreed or changed their minds about whom they regarded as legitimate colleagues or what their relative seniority was. The headings in the Codex reflect the collegial nature of the emperorship. However, they have been through various processes of redaction or recreation. Headings can be affected by outright error, inadvertence, or confusion caused by problematic dates or the numerous rulers with the same or similar names. Even in the absence of such factors, headings do not preserve fully or accurately the original formats. Imperial names and titles are abbreviated,[64] while the Emperors listed may be more retrospective choice than faithful snapshot of the past. For instance, Constantine is most often shown alone, despite having always had at least one colleague throughout his long reign (306–337).[65] The preserved headings, therefore, are not necessarily authentic and can mislead.

The making of the Codex: editorial practice

Even as Justinian was explicit in the sources to be used for the Codex, so he gave clear instructions with regard to how they were to be treated (Const. Haec 2). In pursuit of a harmonious whole not only was the material to be distributed across appropriate thematic titles, but, more significantly, the commissioners were given powers to manipulate the individual imperial texts to a remarkable extent. Thus, they could cut up constitutions, discard the irrelevant portions and divide the remainder between different titles as needed. Further, although obsolete law was to be excluded, this meant not only leaving out some constitutions that contained it, but also emending others by deletion, addition, or alteration of passages to make them congruent with current law.

[63] On the imperial colleges and imperial titulature, see Barnes, New Empire (1982), chs. 1–3; Kienast, Römische Kaisertabelle (2011); Corcoran, "The Augusti and Caesars Say" (2015).

[64] In the Codex, extensive imperial titles seldom appear outside the introductory constitutions (Const. Haec; Const. Summa; Const. Cordi; C. 1.27.1, 8.10.12).

[65] Corcoran, Empire of the Tetrarchs (2000), 279–281.

Overall, sufficient "control" texts from the Theodosian Codex and elsewhere survive to give a good idea of the range of editorial interventions made by Justinian's commissioners. In previous times, especially during the later nineteenth and earlier twentieth centuries, scholars engaged in a frenetic "hunt for interpolations," seeing the hand of Justinian's commissioners anywhere and everywhere in the texts of both Codex and Digest. This mania has now subsided and there is a more measured approach. It is recognized that changes are most likely to be found where we know Justinian reformed the law, and that, even so, the form and style of the originals were not casually erased.[66] Nonetheless, the source texts have indeed been manipulated and this remains a difficulty for anyone using the Codex as a historical sourcebook to gaze back at earlier periods. While numerous texts were taken over with little or no change, some were drastically abbreviated, or cut up and redistributed. More significantly, others were edited to bring them into line with current law, even if this meant altering or inverting the original meaning.[67] Some texts were actually amalgamated,[68] or a phrase from one interpolated into another.

A couple of examples should suffice to illustrate some of the issues. First, C. 5.4.17 comprises a list of the forbidden degrees for marriage. This is all that was chosen from a lengthy and elaborately rhetorical edict of Diocletian about incest from 295, whose full Codex Gregorianus version survives independently (quoted verbatim at Collatio 6.4). However, unlike Justinian's version, the original list omits a brother's daughter (and her daughter). This is no error, but reflects the fact that this had been permitted since Claudius married Agrippina in 49 CE (Tacitus, Ann. 12.6–7; Gaius 1.62). It is then first attested as having been forbidden once again in a constitution of Constantius II (C.Th. 3.12.1; 342), which was not itself taken into Justinian's Codex. Instead, the Diocletianic text was augmented and adapted to reflect the re-introduced prohibition and thus to provide a single comprehensive list.[69]

[66] Lokin, "End of an Epoch" (1995); Johnston, Roman Law (1999), 17–24; Watson, Law Out of Context (2000), ch. 1. An added problem is that texts might have been altered already before Justinian's time. A list of interpolations suspected up to 1936 was published by Broggini (1969).

[67] For example, temporary donations were ruled invalid by Diocletian at Frag. Vat. 283, while the Codex version of this same rescript makes them valid (C. 8.54.2). C.Th. 2.1.10 loses a "non" at C. 1.9.8, although the exact consequences are complex to interpret (Linder, The Jews (1987), 204–211; Rabello, "Civil Jewish Jurisdiction" (1999)).

[68] For example, Frag. Vat. 42 (Diocletian in 293) incorporated into C. 3.33.3 (Caracalla in 213) and Frag. Vat. 315 (Maximian in 291) into C. 3.32.15 (Diocletian in 293).

[69] Corcoran, "Sins of the Fathers" (2000), 13–14; Corcoran, Empire of the Tetrarchs (2000), 174.

For our second example, we start with Sirmondian Constitution 4, which preserves an almost intact version of a letter of Constantine to the Praetorian Prefect Felix dating to 335.[70] This bans Jews from acquiring and circumcising Christian or other non-Jewish slaves, who in such circumstances will be granted their freedom. It also threatens punishment against Jews who harass any former co-religionists who convert to Christianity. The Constantinian letter was in due course divided up by the Theodosian commissioners. The two measures contained in the original are reflected separately in the Theodosian Codex. One edited extract deals with the harassment of converts (C.Th. 16.8.5), while a second, placed under a different title, deals with the matter of the slaves (C.Th. 16.9.1). Neither passage was taken over directly into Justinian's Codex. Instead, a law of similar content attributed to Constantius II, forbidding Jewish ownership and circumcising of Christian slaves or any non-Jewish slaves (C.Th. 16.9.2) was edited into the equivalent title as C. 1.10.1. However, this text was modified also from the content of two other source texts, C.Th. 16.9.1 and 4.[71] As a result, the key point present in C.Th. 16.9.1, but absent from C.Th. 16.9.2, that the wrongly circumcised slaves are to be granted their freedom, is interpolated into C. 1.10.1. Thus, we can see how the full original text, which we know from Sirmondian 4, was abbreviated and divided in the Theodosian Codex, but then discarded, with only a single, if key, point from one of its Theodosian extracts incorporated into a different law in Justinian's Codex. As a result, a long and varied Constantinian law ended up only obliquely reflected in the Codex. Indeed, without the source texts, we would be unaware of the true history behind this measure.

Our final example illustrates the editing undertaken for the revised edition of 534. In November 533, Justinian issued a law to Hermogenes, the Master of Offices, on raptus or abduction marriage. This law superseded a Constantinian law present in the Theodosian Codex (C.Th. 9.24.1), which must have been incorporated into Book 9 of the Novus Codex of 529 and was now discarded. Justinian's provisions differed in various ways from those of Constantine, but a key feature was that his interest extended to encompass women dedicated to the religious life. In editing this law into the revised Codex of 534, Justinian's commissioners cut up, but also repeated, much of the law in at least three places, possibly more.[72] The major part of the law was put at a place equivalent to that of the Constantinian law that it had superseded among the criminal law material of Book 9 (C. 9.13.1). But a section was also placed in Book 5 (C. 5.17.11), where it was relevant for matters of divorce and dowry. Finally, a near-doublet of C. 9.13.1 was repeated in Book 1, at C. 1.3.53 under the title on clerics, adapted to reflect its focus on the female religious. This repetition of the text in Book 1 is a good example of how in the revised edition, the commissioners, perhaps reflecting Justinian's own wishes, greatly expanded and emphasized the religious material in the opening portion of the Codex.

[70] Linder, The Jews (1987) 138–143; Matthews, Laying Down the Law (2000) 145–147. The set of Sirmondian Constitutions, an independent ecclesiastical assemblage, is edited by Mommsen in his Codex Theodosianus, vol. I.i, 907–921 (trans. Pharr, Theodosian Code (1952), 477–486).

[71] Linder, The Jews (1987), 144–151. There is much debate over the correct dates and emperors for these laws, but this does not affect the key issue of how their contents were edited.

[72] Two further passages may be from this law (C. 7.24.1, 11.48.24), suggesting that it perhaps dealt with wider marriage issues than just raptus. On raptus, see Evans-Grubbs, Law and Family (1995), 183–193.

A further point to note is that Constantine's raptus law had offered a reward to those denouncing the crime, so that slaves were to be granted freedom with Latin status, while Latins were to be upgraded to become full Roman citizens (C.Th. 9.24.1.4). This short passage on rewards is the only portion of Constantine's law to survive in the revised Codex at C. 7.13.3, except that it has been significantly adapted. Whether it had been placed here already in the first edition, when the full law still stood in Book 9, is unclear. However, Justinian had remodeled the law regarding manumission and freed status very significantly since 529, and this had a knock-on effect upon the shape and content of the first part of Book 7, where such topics were treated. In particular, in 531 Justinian had abolished the status of Junian Latin (C. 7.6.1). It is no surprise, therefore, that the Constantinian extract at C. 7.13.3 has been adapted to provide only one level of reward, namely, the grant of freedom (with full citizenship) to a slave; for there no longer existed Latins to be rewarded, nor Latin status to be given in reward. This is a good example, therefore, where we can clearly see the effect of a known Justinianic legal reform leading to textual emendation.[73]

The making of the Codex: shape and organization

The overall shape of the Codex is easy to explain, having been derived with adaptation from the earlier codices.[74] Book 1 is by far the longest, although this imbalance does not seem to have existed in the 529 Codex. Rather it was mostly the result of very long new constitutions being added into the revised edition, including numerous, often lengthy, texts on ecclesiastical matters in Greek (especially in titles 1–5), two additional titles, C. 1.12–13, relocated from elsewhere in the Novus Codex, and, most of all, the introductory constitutions to the Digest (C. 1.17) and the detailed administrative provisions for Africa

[73] See Corcoran, "Justinian and His Two Codes" (2008), 78 and 92–93, and Corcoran, "Softly and Suddenly" (2011), 142. We can also see Latins edited out of C. 5.5.7 (from Nov. Marc. 4.3) and C. 5.27.1 (from C.Th. 4.6.3). The law of abolition, C. 7.6.1, contains the only references to Latins present in the Codex.

[74] For a good analysis of the shape of the Codex and how this relates to its source-texts, see Giomaro, Il Codex repetitae praelectionis (2001).

after its recovery from the Vandals (C. 1.27). Book 1 covers three themes. First, come ecclesiastical affairs (C. 1.1–13), including orthodox belief, the powers of bishops, and the privileges of the clergy and Christian institutions, and also issues concerning the non-Orthodox, that is, all heretics, whether deviant Christians, Jews, Samaritans, Manichees, or pagans. Next, there are the sources of law and constitutional matters, especially the position of the Emperor and his pronouncements (C. 1.14–25). Finally, come the higher administrative offices of the Empire, both central and regional, starting with the Praetorian Prefects (C. 1.26–57). The constitutional and administrative sections largely follow the pattern of the first book of the Theodosian Codex. The first section, however, takes its shape from the Theodosian Codex's sixteenth and final book. This merging of the two books, with the relocation of material from the end of one Codex to the beginning of the other, is the most significant innovation in structure introduced by Justinian, and was present already in the Novus Codex of 529.[75] He thus established from the outset that this was a law book for a right-believing Christian empire. This type of religious material was largely alien to the core of previous Roman legal works, with their focus on civil law. Of course, we would expect pagan religious matters to have been removed from the Roman legal tradition in the course of the Christianizing centuries (fourth–sixth centuries), and no doubt religious issues would appear more prominent if we had the earlier texts unmediated. But much of such material had always been largely separable and had generally been treated in quite different works from other matters of law, even if sometimes written by the same specialists.[76] Thus, excluding religious issues from the juristic material reused for the Digest and the Institutes may not have involved great effort. Similarly, this may explain why Theodosius added Christian and other religious affairs at the end of his Codex, as they otherwise had no natural place within earlier legal formats. Justinian, with typical boldness, turned this on its head.

Books 2–8 of the Codex deal with matters of private law, the major areas for litigation between citizens. These, therefore, cover such topics as the grounds for going to court, judicial procedures, contract, delict, marriage, dowry, tutorship, freedmen, succession testate and intestate, manumission, pledges, court orders, and appeals. To a great extent they seem to have followed the order of [75] As attested by P. Oxy. XV 1814. See Corcoran, "Justinian and His Two Codes" (2008), and Corcoran, "Anastasius, Justinian" (2009).

[76] Rives, "Control of the Sacred" (2012). Some distinctions in the status of land were taken over into Christian Roman law (e.g., Inst. 2.1.7–10; D. 1.8.1, 6, 8, 9). For the survival of pontifical law in the city of Rome in the fourth and fifth centuries, see Lizzi Testa "Augures et Pontifices" (2009).

the Gregorian Codex, which itself had followed previous legal compilations in shadowing the Praetor's Edict (the most important single influence over structure), plus aspects of the core Civil Law (deriving ultimately from the Twelve Tables) and various statutes (leges or senatorial decrees). The Gregorian pattern is difficult to prove definitively. Since that Codex does not survive directly, the Justinian Codex is itself a major source for understanding it and there is a risk of arguments becoming circular. Further, the private law books (mainly Books 2–5) of the possible rival structural source, the Theodosianus, are very incompletely attested, making their shape also uncertain. However, the sheer size and detail of the Gregorianus with its clear civil law focus (criminal or public law may have been limited to one or two concluding books only) do make it the more plausible candidate.[77]

Book 9 deals with criminal law (the iudicia publica) and shadows Theodosian Codex Book 9, although the last two Theodosian titles (C.Th. 9.44–45), which seem to have been kept in Book 9 of the Novus Codex, were relocated to Book 1 of the revised edition (at C. 1.12 and 1.25).[78] The final three books, 10–12, deal with various administrative affairs, including Treasury law, taxes, state industries and provisioning, local government and its offices and duties, and the army. Much of this also follows the pattern of the Theodosian Codex. In all books, however, the earlier codices were not a straitjacket that constrained Justinian's commissioners, especially where the law had changed significantly since the time of Diocletian or Theodosius II.

Within titles the constitutions were ordered by date (Const. Haec 2), following the practice of the earlier codices. Every constitution had to carry a subscript, those lacking dates being assigned the formula "without day and consul" (sine die et consule) and given the closest suitable position within the correct reign. However, the sequence did not affect an individual constitution's authority, with the result that in cases of conflict the later did not override the earlier. This is in contrast to the policy of the Theodosianus (C.Th. 1.1.5–6), which had even sometimes included repealed and repealing laws next to one another.[79] Justinian's intention was quite clear, that there would be nothing [77] Corcoran, "The Gregorianus and Hermogenianus" (2013), 289–291. Note that material present early in Codex Book 2 was by contrast present early in Book 1 of the Gregorianus: Cod. Greg. 1.10 (de pactis; Consultatio 9.17; Krüger et al., Collectio III, 236) matches C. 2.3 (de pactis); cf. C.Th. 2.9 (de pactis et transactionibus).

[78] Corcoran, "Justinian and His Two Codes" (2008), 94–95.

[79] For example, C.Th. 4.12 on the Senatusconsultum Claudianum, dealing with women co-habiting with slaves, in which the constitutions confusingly change the rules one way and then the other. See Evans Grubbs, Law and Family (1995), 263–272. Although it is not clear which of these texts were taken into the Novus Codex, Justinian finally repealed the Senatusconsultum entirely in 533 (C. 7.24.1; probably part of the same law as C. 9.13.1).

inconsistent in the Codex. Where conflicts were later identified, the chronological sequence of constitutions was irrelevant and it was the Emperor who had to rule to resolve such matters.[80]

Nonetheless, the clear chronological order under titles makes it easy to see the pattern of the sources. For titles do not draw consistently upon all the earlier codices and novels, but rather reflect the thematic balances and biases of the source material. Thus, in the private law books (2–8), the third-century rescripts from the Gregorian and Hermogenian Codices often dominate, appearing in lengthy sequences either by themselves or with only limited later texts appended. Indeed, this dominance is precisely why the Gregorianus seems such a likely origin for the structure of these books. By contrast, Book 1 in general contains very little from the two earliest codices and, not surprisingly, almost nothing in the opening titles on religion.[81] In the books on criminal and public law, both the Theodosianus and post-Theodosian legislation are more prominent sources, although there are exceptions with a topic such as local government and its burdens in Book 10, where the concerns of third-century petitioners continued to resonate. Finally, the legislation of Justinian himself is fairly ubiquitous across the Codex. Not only is it common for a title to be rounded off or even dominated by often lengthy Justinianic measures, but sometimes his reform is so radical as to supersede everything else entirely and stand by itself (e.g., C. 1.17.1–2, 7.6.1, 7.13.1, 7.24.1). This feature was undoubtedly more pronounced in the revised edition, given the Fifty Decisions and numerous other significant constitutions issued after 529.

It is perhaps also useful to note here that the treatment of private law in the Codex is quite different to the far more coherent "institutional" scheme used in introductory works for students, originally developed by Gaius in the second century and best known from Justinian's own reworking in his Institutes.[82] Under this scheme, the law was divided into three major topics: persons, things (subdivided into property, succession, and obligations), and actions.[83] This systematic classification of the law, with its divisions and subdivisions, has proved not only a help to students, but an important intellectual [80] Thus, Just. Nov. 158 on C. 6.30.18–19. See further in the next section.

[81] The exception is two items concerning the Jews (C. 1.9.1–2, with Corcoran, Empire of the Tetrarchs (2000), 38 n. 87).

[82] See Stein, "The Development of the Institutional System" (1983). Apart from the surviving Institutes of Gaius and Justinian, some fragments of others are known, mostly via the Digest (Florentinus, Marcian, Paul, Ulpian; Lenel, Palingenesia (1889), I, cols. 171–178, 652–675, 1114, and II, cols. 926–930). A good current guide to Justinian's Institutes is Metzger's Companion (1998).

[83] Constitutional law is touched on briefly at the beginning of both Gaius (1.1–7) and Justinian (Inst. 1.1–2), and criminal law at the end of Justinian only (Inst. 4.18).

basis for the structure of Civil Law systems down to this day. In the Codex, however, Justinian was consciously imitating the earlier codex-makers, even if with the intent to supersede them. Indeed, the speed with which the 529 edition was produced is best explained by the commissioners taking over exisiting paradigms, rather than trying out radically new structures (religion excepted). Further, the Codex was not intended as an introductory work, but as a resource for advanced students and professionals, who would already have learned their Institutes, whether those of Gaius (up to 533) or Justinian, and so had a strong grounding in the basics. However, the sometimes opaque structure of the Codex does also explain why annotations with cross-references and small thematic treatises came to be created to help navigate the material (see the next section).

The life of the Codex in the Empire

When he published the Institutes and Digest in November 533, Justinian also issued a law which reformed legal education (C. Omnem). All law schools except for Constantinople and Beirut (and theoretically Rome) were suppressed and the existing law syllabus was revised. The full law course was lengthy and, after furnishing first-year students with a basic legal outline through the Institutes, it concentrated on the Digest. Study of the imperial constitutions in the Codex was left for the fifth year and was supposed to be largely a matter of self-study.[84] A key feature of law-school teaching was that the codified legal texts, which existed overwhelmingly in Latin, had to be taught to a student body whose primary language, at least of learning and literacy, was Greek. This meant that the law professors (antecessores) had to provide materials in Greek to mediate the highly technical Latin content. Justinian had restricted translations and commentaries and even legal abbreviations in an attempt to prevent his codification being swamped and obscured by an uncontrollable mass of contradictory interpretation (Const. Deo Auctore 12 = C. 1.17.1.12; Const. Tanta 21 = C. 1.17.2.21). Permitted supplementary writings included summary indexes (brief précis); paratitla (marginalia and cross-references to help navigate around the material); and kata podas ("in the footsteps") translations (interlinear literal word-for-word cribs).[85]

[84] For the law schools and their syllabus, see Scheltema, L'enseignement de droit (1970); Scheltema, "Byzantine Law" (1967), 56–60; Liebs, "Roman Law" (2000), 252–258. Zacharias of Mytilene in his life of Severus of Antioch depicts the latter, while at law school in Beirut c. 490, conscientiously attending lectures, but also studying the imperial constitutions on his own (Brock and Fitzgerald, Two Early Lives of Severos (2013), 57–58, 61, and 84).

[85] Such cribs were most often used for elementary teaching of Latin or Greek, and are well attested in the papyri and in some early medieval manuscripts (see Dickey, Colloquia (2012–2015)).

In practice, however, the professors had to write detailed expository lecture courses, as well as translations that often went beyond the literal. Very swiftly a vast corpus of teaching texts was produced. Of such works in Greek, only one has surivived intact, that of Theophilus for the Institutes.[86] But substantial portions of similar teaching aids produced for the Codex are also known. The principal authors of these were Thalelaeus (PLRE III Thalelaeus), Isidorus (PLRE III Isidorus 3), and Anatolius (PLRE III Anatolius 3),[87] all active in the 530s, and, somewhat later in time than the rest, Theodore of Hermopolis in the 570s (PLRE III Theodorus 64).[88] It was inevitable that the works of these men would in due course, for most practical purposes, supersede the original Latin texts in the majority Greek-speaking parts of the Empire. In fact, the full panoply of legal education did not long survive. The law school of Beirut seems never to have recovered after the city was destroyed by a tsunami in 551.[89] In Constantinople, teaching remained vibrant, with new materials created for giving instruction in Justinian's more recent legislation, the Novels (i.e., the new laws issued since 535, mostly in Greek), such as the Epitome of Julian (a basic lecture course) and the Authenticum (a kata podas translation from Greek), both in Latin, which, therefore, became important in the medieval west.[90] But even at Constantinople the system of instruction seems to have faded away not long after Justinian's death (565). Despite the ending of the formal syllabus, however, much teaching still survived, tied rather more to practice. Even in the 570s further materials were created to help navigate and learn the Novels.[91] There were also small thematic guides for practitioners to help them locate relevant material within the vast corpus of texts they were supposed to have mastered.[92]

86 See the new edition by Lokin et al., Theophili Antecessoris Paraphrasis Institutionum (2010) (with an English translation by A. F. Murison).

87 Scheltema, L'enseignement de droit (1970), 32–43; Lokin and Meijering, Anatolius (1999).

88 Scheltema, "Fragmenta Breviarii Codicis" (1972); Lug, "Ein Bruchstück" (1976).

89 Hall, Berytus (2008), 70–76. Agathias, Hist. 2.15.1–4 (trans. Frendo (1975), 47–48) talks of relocation of the school to Sidon, with the intention to return, and there appears to have been some teaching later in Antioch (Liebs, "Roman Law" (2000), 253), but the glory days were over.

90 For the Epitome, see the edition of Hänel, Iuliani Epitome (1873), with a detailed study by Kaiser, Die Epitome Iuliani (2004). For the Authenticum, see the edition of Heimbach (1846–1851). Its nature as a kata podas was for long unrecognized (Scheltema, Opera Minora (2004), 133–137; Lokin, "Ad Novellam 159" (1990)). The Novels being overwhelmingly in Greek, it was Latin speakers who required particular help, although Greek materials were also produced. Some scholars place the creation, or at least some editing, of the Authenticum rather in Rome (Liebs, "Roman Law" (2000), 252; more cautious, Loschiavo, "Codex graecus" (2010), 148–149).

91 Thus, the summaries of Theodore of Hermopolis and Athanasius of Emesa, both from the 570s (Liebs, "Roman Law" (2000), 252), each based on a different permutation of Novels.

92 Thus, two short Latin tracts associated with the writings of the antecessor Julian (active at Constantinople in the 550s) on procedure and tutorship, respectively. See Humfress, "Law and Legal Practice" (2005), 172. Liebs, "Roman Law" (2000), 157, regards them as texts for students near the end of study.

While we know much of how the Codex was taught and studied in the Empire, we know much less of how it was used in real court cases. Justinian had made it clear that, although his codification was supposed to be internally consistent, any future problems that might arise should be referred to him for settlement (Const. Tanta 18 = C. 1.17.2.18; cf. C. 1.14.12). Procopius cynically suggests that Justinian was ever ready to interfere with cases and, for a price, to change the law in a litigant's favour, and even to change it back again (Secret History 14.9–10). Certainly, some of his Novels were designed to resolve legal ambiguities or conflicts raised by real cases. Indeed, we are fortunate that the Novels, existing in unabbreviated forms (unlike materials edited into the Codex), contain much explanatory background. Thus, we know that Justinian intervened twice in specific inheritance disputes that turned upon the interpretation of imperial constitutions from the Codex, and that he issued rulings designed to solve not only the apparent contradictions of the cases in question, but to apply in future similar cases.[93] The Codex, therefore, was a resource that was actively used in real situations that reached the courts.

Following the catastrophes of the seventh century, which left the Empire fighting for its life, detailed knowledge of legal texts became largely confined to the capital.[94] Such works as were produced in the seventh and eighth centuries were rather brief, even provincial, although tending to draw on the Justinianic material.[95] It was in the late ninth century that serious and extended attention was again paid by emperors to law and codification. In a process begun by Basil I (r. 867–886), but finally completed by his son, Leo VI "the Wise" (r. 886–912), the Justinianic corpus (Institutes, Digest, Codex, plus the Novels) was recompiled into a single authoritative collection in sixty books, the Basilika.[96] This work was entirely in Greek and so consisted principally of selections from the sixth-century law-school teaching materials and similar works. For the Codex, the version of Thalelaeus with an associated kata podas was the default one used, except for Book 8 supplied from the work of Anatolius.[97] The Basilika effectively superseded Justinian's original work, [93] Novel 2 (535; conflict of C. 5.9.3 and 5 with 6.56.7; Humfress, "Law and Legal Practice" (2005), 173–174) and Novel 158 (544; conflict between C. 6.30.18 and 19; Humfress, Orthodoxy and the Courts (2007), 54).

[94] For this complaint, see the preface to the Ecloga of 741 (Burgmann, Ecloga (1983), 162–163; Humphreys, The Laws (forthcoming). For a brief history of Byzantine law up to the eleventh century, see Scheltema, "Byzantine Law" (1967).

[95] Brubaker and Haldon, Byzantium in the Iconoclast Era (2001), ch. 17.

[96] Lokin, "The Significance of Law" (1994); Scheltema, "Byzantine Law" (1967), 65–6; van Bochove, To Date and Not To Date (1996). The now standard modern edition was published at Groningen in seventeen volumes between 1953 and 1988 (Scheltema and van der Wal, Basilicorum libri LX).

[97] Lokin, Analecta Groningana (2010), 81. Earlier views, predating the completion of the new Basilika edition, saw Isidorus as the key source for versions from Book 8 (e.g., Scheltema, L'enseignement de droit (1970), 40–41).

although it appears that only in 1169 was there a formal ruling that the original Justinianic versions were no longer valid in court.[98] And so the story of the Codex in the Empire, except as vicariously reused through the Basilika and certain other legal works, comes to an end.

The life of the Codex in the early medieval West

The reconquest of Italy began in 536, not long after the promulgation of the revised edition of the Codex. However, in contrast to the easy recovery of Africa from the Vandals, this proved to be far more difficult than Justinian had anticipated and victory was only definitively achieved after the defeat of the Goths at the battle of Busta Gallorum in 552 (and there was mopping up even after that). Thus, only in 554, at the request of Pope Vigilius, then in Constantinople, did Justinian properly organize the civil government of Italy and formally introduce there his new codified materials, including the Codex.[99] He seems to have envisaged also the re-establishment of a law school in Rome, with paid professors, although it is not clear that this ever happened.[100] Nonetheless, from this time onwards, use was certainly made of the Codex. Its text was borrowed for the Tripartite Ecclesiastical History sponsored by Cassiodorus at Vivarium in southern Italy,[101] while Pope Gregory the Great made detailed reference to it and other parts of Justinian's legislation in an often-cited letter of 603.[102] However, in the confused situation in Italy following the Lombard invasion (which began in 568), routine and detailed engagement with Justinian's material seems to have become relatively rare, as indeed did the sort of legal professional who could most easily have utilized it.

Imperial territory in Italy shrank quite rapidly, and in due course, after the final fall of Ravenna in 751, was for the most part confined to the far south, where imperial control was only finally extinguished in 1071.[103] This had two consequences. First, even where the Empire no longer ruled, the law that [98] Scheltema "Byzantine Law" (1967), 65–66. This probably meant the sixth-century Greek versions rather than any original Latin!

[99] Justinian, Novels Appendix 7.11 (Schoell and Kroll, Corpus Iuris Civilis III (1912), 800).

[100] Justinian, Novels Appendix 7.22 (Schoell and Kroll, Corpus Iuris Civilis III (1912), 802). Liebs, "Roman Law" (2000), 253 and 256–257, is keen to see a continuing or revived law school, contra the skeptical Radding and Ciaralli, Corpus Iuris (2007), 38 and 113–114. See now Loschiavo, "Legal Culture" (2015).

[101] Cassiodorus and Epiphanius, Historia Tripartita (Corpus Scriptorum Ecclesiasticorum Latinorum 71, 1952) 9.7 and 9.40 (= C. 1.1.1 and 9.47.20).

[102] Gregory, Reg. XIII.49[50] (Martyn, The Letters of Gregory the Great (2004), III, 863–866). The citations are of C. 1.3.10, 1.12.2. 1.12.6, 7.44.3, 7.48.4, 9.1.20: also D. 48.4.7.3 and Novels 90 and 123.

[103] For imperial Italy after Justinian, see Brown, "Byzantine Italy" (2008); Loud, "Byzantium and Southern Italy" (2008).

applied to the existing inhabitants remained Roman. Law was more often considered to be "personal" than "territorial," so that those living under Lombard rule, for instance, did not suddenly start using Lombard law, unless defined as Lombards.[104] As a result, in Italy, as in most other former imperial territories except Britain, Roman law in some form remained relevant. But there was a second consequence. There was no longer a central authority to create new Roman legislation or review the validity of the old. Even the most proactive successor kings tended at most to produce compendia of existing Roman materials, and not all even did as much as that. Thus, pre-existing Roman legal texts would remain current, as they had been at the moment when Roman rule ceased, and, although they might be repeatedly recycled and even thereby often changed, this was in a rather haphazard manner.

Therefore, outside Italy in territories where Justinian's writ had never run, his legislation had limited impact, although Julian's Epitome of the Novels, which dealt extensively with ecclesiastical matters, was quite widely cited by churchmen. Thus, to Hincmar of Rheims (archbishop 845–882), lex Iustiniana (Justinianic law) was in essence the Epitome.[105] The Roman law used in the Frankish kingdoms tended to be that deriving from the earlier Theodosian Codex (437), principally as mediated through selections taken into the Breviary of Alaric (issued by the Visigothic king, Alaric II, in 506) and its epitomes.[106] Within Italy, however, Justinian's material had greater purchase.

"The Church lives according to Roman law."[107] This was a standard catchphrase and Roman legal texts on ecclesiastical matters were often taken into Canon Law collections. It is no surprise, therefore, that the next detailed engagement with the Codex was in an ecclesiastical compilation, probably made in northern Italy in the mid- to late ninth century, but only known from a single late ninth-/early tenth-century manuscript now in Paris (BN Par. Lat. 12448), the so-called Lex Romana canonice compta. This, as its title suggests, was an arrangement of Roman law extracts suited for ecclesiastical needs. The collection draws on more than 120 Codex constitutions, taken from the [104] Charles-Edwards, "Law in the Western Kingdoms" (2000), 62–63 and 282–284.

[105] For example, Hincmar, De Presbiteris Criminosis 10 and 13 (ed. Schmitz (2004), 75 and 107); Letter 30.32 (Patrologia Latina 126.207); and BN Par. Lat. 12445 ff. 236–237. See Corcoran, "Hincmar" (2015), 138 and 139–140.

[106] Jolowicz and Nicholas, Historical Introduction (1972), 466–467; Gaudemet, Le Bréviaire (1965). The standard, if now rather dated, edition of the Breviary is Hänel, Lex Romana Visigothorum (1849). The Visigothic kings were the most energetic of the successor-state legislators, and their direct legacy through their heavily Romanized Visigothic law code, the Lex Visigothorum or Forum Iudicum (654), had a long-lasting effect upon Spain in particular (their Gallic territory was mostly lost in 507). For Roman law in Gaul/Francia, see Liebs, Jurisprudenz in Gallien (2002), 109–120 and 157–267.

[107] For example, Lex Ribuaria 61[58].1 (Monumenta Germaniae Historica: Leges nationum Germanarum 3.2, 109).

"private law" books (2–8), and is otherwise principally made up of extracts from the Institutes and the Epitome of Julian.[108] It was also the source in its turn for most of the Roman law material in a near-contemporary ecclesiastical work, the Collectio Anselmo Dedicata (associated with Archbishop Anselm of Milan, 882–896).[109]

In the tenth century, our evidence for extensive interest in the Codex moves south, to the area around Rome and below. First, there is the Collectio Gaudenziana, a legal compilation known only in a single manuscript written in Beneventan script and now in the British Library (Ms Add. 47676), of which the first part is an imaginative rearrangement of mostly Roman law materials from the Institutes, the Epitome of Julian, and a mere ten constitutions taken from just four titles of the Codex (1.2, 1.3, 8.4, 11.48).[110] At about the same time there came into existence another even more interesting work, the so-called Summa Perusina, known only from a single early eleventh-century manuscript now in Perugia (Bibl. Cap. 32).[111] This is a curious work, which appears to have been created by taking a manuscript of the Codex rich in annotations and glosses (probably of the seventh century), and then copying out the original headings to the constitutions (naming emperors and recipients), but accompanied only by the associated annotations, while retaining the overall Codex structure of books and titles (although the surviving text breaks off before the end of Book 8). This produced a highly abbreviated, if more manageable, Codex, with summaries that are sometimes garbled and inaccurate, but more often baffling to someone without the full Codex text to make things clear. Its weaknesses, however, would not necessarily have been obvious to someone with only the Summa before him, and indeed this reduced version of the Codex was regarded as authoritative for a time in the late tenth and early eleventh centuries. It was even cited successfully in a hearing before that most Roman of medieval emperors, Otto III, in December 999.[112] It is often presumed that it was in fact the Summa, not the full Codex, that Otto had in mind when he supposedly instructed his judges to swear to follow

[108] The standard (rather rare) edition is Mor, Lex Romana (1927). The Projet Volterra at University College London is preparing an online digital edition.

[109] See Radding and Ciaralli, Corpus Iuris (2007), 55–60.

[110] Fullest account is by Kaiser, Die Epitome Iuliani (2004), 655–846 (he is also preparing a full edition); briefly in English, Radding and Ciaralli, Corpus Iuris (2007), 70–72.

[111] Facsimile published as part of the 700th anniversary celebrations of the University of Perugia (see Crifò and Campolunghi, Adnotationes Codicum (2008)). The standard edition is by Patetta, Adnotationes Codicum (1900). Brief discussion in English at Radding and Ciaralli, Corpus Iuris (2007), 42–43 and 68–70.

[112] Monumenta Germaniae Historica: Diplomata Regum et Imperatorum Germaniae, vol. II, No. 339 = Giorgi and Balzani, Il Regesto di Farfa (1879–1914), vol. III, doc. 437 (quoting Summa 7.43.8–9). On Otto, see Althoff, Otto III (2003).

Justinian's law and said to them "According to this book judge Rome, the Leonine city, and the whole world."[113]

The revivification of the Codex in the eleventh century

During the course of the eleventh century, there was an explosion of interest in the Codex, as indeed in the other parts of the Justinianic corpus. Not only are manuscripts of the Codex itself now attested as being directly copied for the first time in over 400 years, but citation and quotation of the Codex in other legal texts and commentaries and in documents becomes common, even unremarkable. For instance, where documents of the Abbey of Farfa (victor in the case before Otto III) cite the Summa Perusina early in the century, by the second half they are quoting the Codex directly.[114] How the fortunes of the Codex and the other Justinianic works were so dramatically altered during the century represents a significant step in European legal history. At one time scholars believed that the full Codex was effectively "lost" in the early medieval period, with only mutilated epitomes available (minus the Greek, the last three books, and much of the rest), and that the story of the eleventh century was the "recovery" of the lost Codex. This is no longer an adequate account of what happened. The Codex was never lost, even if it was not necessarily easily accessible at all times and in all places, and engagement with it was often limited (as seen above). Key to the change in scholarly interpretation is the redating of the Pistoia manuscript (AC 106), previously thought to be tenth-century and so to represent the early medieval epitomized Codex as it started its halting progress to recovering its lost content. However, this manuscript is now dated to the mid-eleventh century and bears witness to a rather different story.[115] As we have seen, the Codex was mined for texts in the early medieval period, mainly by clerics. In the eleventh century, however, it seems to have [113] Graphia aureae urbis Romae, ch. 52 (quoted at Schramm, Kaiser, Könige und Päpste III (1969) 353).

[114] Thus, Summa 7.43.8–9 are quoted in Giorgi and Balzani, Il Regesto di Farfa, 1879–1914, vol. III, doc. 492 (1014), while C. 7.65.1 and 7.52.6 are quoted in vol. IV, doc. 906 (1060), and C. 7.52.6 alone in vol. V, doc. 1006 (1072). Note also several Veronese documents from 1085 onwards which quote verbatim C. 2.27.1 (Radding and Ciaralli, Corpus Iuris (2007), 107). The Codex is quoted at Ravenna already by the late tenth century (Radding and Ciaralli (2007), 74; e.g., Benericetti, Le Carte del Decimo Secolo (2002), Nos. 236 and 272 (C. 2.3.20) and No. 265 (2.4.16)). Many such quotations are likely to be tralatician between documents, but some direct contact with the Codex and certainly its high status are clearly demonstrated. Note similarly that some of the Roman law material present in the Canon Law Collectio Caesaraugustana (*c.*1115; southern France) must reflect direct use of Justinianic sources, including the Codex, even if much else is tralatician (Blumenthal, "Collectio canonum" (2012)).

[115] Ciaralli, "Ancora sul manoscritto pistoiese" (2000); Radding and Ciaralli, Corpus Iuris (2007), 87–89; Radding, "Reviving Justinian's Corpus" (2007).

been principally lawyers, including those working in the Lombard as well as the Roman traditions, who started to see that Roman legal texts were useful also to them.[116] Therefore they epitomized the Codex, making their own selections of suitable material. However, they continually chose further material to supplement their selections, as the Pistoia manuscript bears witness, with its numerous constitutions added into the margins or pasted-in on slips. The handwriting of some two dozen individual scribes can be identified in the manuscript. Eventually, it was decided that the Codex was simply too useful just to pick and choose texts, but that the whole should be employed. In the light of this, it might be thought that the complete Codex text would have been copied from intact manuscripts.

This is not what generally happened. In central and southern Italy, it does appear that full Codices were being copied at this time in a tradition that became a dead-end.[117] But in the north, where use of the Codex appears most lively, people preferred to add missing constitutions into their existing epitomized manuscripts, usually as marginal scholia (as classically in the Pistoia manuscript), and then make further copies from these, incorporating the additions, perhaps because they were written in more familiar and comfortable contemporary scripts and were more readily available.[118] Indeed, some manuscripts show evidence of all the missing texts being gathered into a supplementary appendix, as with the Pesaro manuscript.[119]

This whole process lasted about 100 years, starting perhaps in the second quarter of the eleventh century and finishing in the early twelfth century, when a reintegrated Codex came into existence. The Codex that emerged from this was not quite Justinian's original. The Greek was abandoned, and even Latin translations or paraphrases of Greek constitutions seldom ended up in Codex manuscripts.[120] The subscripts with their dates were also quickly dropped, while the headings generally became attenuated (e.g., often reduced to "Imp." (for "Imperator") without any emperor's name). Some limited non-Codex material was also added probably by inadvertence, being thought genuinely part of the [116] The importance of Lombard lawyers is a key feature of the interpretation of Radding, The Origins (1988); now also Radding and Ciaralli, Corpus Iuris (2007), 73–84, 90–99; Witt, Two Latin Cultures (2012), 169–172.

[117] Thus, the Vallicelliana and Würzburg fragments. See Radding and Ciaralli, Corpus Iuris (2007), 86–87; Corcoran, "New Subscripts" (2009); Corcoran, "After Krüger" (2009); Corcoran, "Würzburg fragment" (2016).

[118] Radding and Ciaralli, Corpus Iuris (2007), 163.

[119] Radding and Ciaralli, Corpus Iuris (2007), 152–153; Tort-Martorell, "En torno a Pesaro 26" (2008).

[120] Thus, the texts reproduced by Krüger to supply C. 3.43.1–2 (see Hallebeek, "Alearum lusus" (2013)). Krüger also gives in his footnotes Latin versions for C. 3.2.2, 3.10.2, and 6.4.4.

Codex.[121] In the twelfth century there came also to be added deliberate supplements, called authenticae, as they mostly derive from the Authenticum of the Novels of Justinian, which itself only came into use at that time.[122]

The last three books of the Codex seem to have been taken up more slowly than the rest.[123] Evidence for them and their use in the early medieval period is very thin,[124] and they are virtually absent from the manuscripts that represent the eleventh-century epitomizing and re-expansion. However, that they were "lost" any more than the other books and only found later need not be the explanation.[125] Rather, the fact that they mostly related to a defunct system of imperial finance, administration, and local government meant that their relevance was not immediately apparent to potential users. The grammarian Alexander Neckam (1157–1217) reflected the view that they were of both great difficulty and little utility.[126] Thus, revival of interest in them was delayed until later in the twelfth century. As a result, they always remained somewhat apart, being copied in separate manuscripts, and did not, for instance, acquire any authenticae.

The medieval Vulgate and the Bologna School

In view of what has just been said, it will occasion no surprise that the standard version of the Codex used in the later medieval period was not the same as [121] See nn. 204–207 below. Note that the the uneven evidence of the early manuscripts has enabled one scholar to argue recently that the first thirteen titles of the Codex were only assembled and added in at this time of "re-creation" (Waelkens, "L'hérésie" (2011)). However, it has been definitively demonstrated from sixth-century evidence that this thesis is wrong and that the titles are original to the Codex. See Stolte, "A Heretical Hypothesis" (2013), arguing in particular on the basis of P. Oxy. XV 1814 and the Collection of 25 Chapters (Heimbach, ANEKDOTA II (1840)); cf. Gregory's letter cited above n.102).

[122] Wallinga, "Authenticum and authenticae" (2009); Wallinga, "Authenticae of Irnerius" (2011). These additions became standardized during the twelfth century. Parts of constitutions of the emperors Frederick I (d. 1190) and Frederick II (d. 1250) were also added in due course. The authenticae are listed in an appendix to Krüger's editio minor. They are most recently printed as appendices to the Dutch Codex translation (Spruit et al., Corpus Iuris Civilis VII (2005–2010), pp. xlvi–xlvii, 617–642, VIII, pp. 1005–1042, IX, pp. 565–569). They are also included in Scott's Codex translation in his Civil Law. For the ways to cite the authenticae, see Dondorp and Schrage, "Sources" (2010), 19.

[123] Conte, Tres Libri (1990), gives a detailed account the "recovery" of the books.

[124] Two tenth-century sources quote from the same title (C. 11.48, on coloni), which may have circulated on its own, as suggested by Conte, Tres Libri (1990), 27, but rejected by Bellettini et al., Biografia di un manoscritto (2009), 45–46. These are the Collectio Gaudenziana (Kaiser, Die Epitome Iuliani (2004), 672) and some scholia to Cesena Bibl. Malatestiana S.XXI.5 (Bellettini et al., Biografia (2009), 35–38). There is also an allusion in a scholion to LRCC 173 (Conte, Servi Medievali (1996), 38 n. 5).

[125] Conte, Tres Libri (1990), 17–28; Radding and Ciaralli, Corpus Iuris (2007), 154–155, 166.

[126] Sacerdos ad Altare XVII.6–8 and 88–90 (ed. McDonough (2010), 204 and 207). See Kantorowicz, Rechtshistorische Schriften (1970), 93–110; Conte, Tres Libri (1990), 13–14; English translation of relevant passages at Copeland and Sluiter, Medieval Grammar (2009), 540.

Justinian's original nor the one encountered by the reader of these volumes. The Vulgate (as it is called) of the medieval Corpus Iuris Civilis covered all the Justinianic legal materials, which had returned to regular use in the eleventh and twelfth centuries, and it came to consist of five volumes.[127] The first three comprised the Digest, divided between the Digestum Vetus (D. 1–24.2), the Infortiatum (D. 24.3–38), and the Digestum Novum (D. 39–50). The fourth volume was the Codex, but this contained only Books 1–9. The final volume, often referred to simply as the Volumen or Volumen Parvum ("Little volume"), was a miscellany containing the Institutes, the Authenticum (a Latin version of the Novels of Justinian),[128] Books 10–12 of the Codex (the "Tres Libri"),[129] and later the Liber Feudorum.[130] It should be noted here that there is no modern edition of the medieval Corpus Iuris, whether with or without the gloss (explained below), beyond some trial publications. However, some of the early modern printed editions, which reflect it, have been reprinted in facsimile, or can now be read online courtesy of Googlebooks and other scanning enterprises.[131]

Following almost a century of increasingly active engagement with Justinian's corpus in northern Italy, it was at Bologna that Roman law teaching took off in the early twelfth century. The exact chronology is not secure, and Irnerius, the key founding father, remains a shadowy figure. Further, current scholarly dispute over the development (also at Bologna) of Canon Law teaching and the editions of its foundational text, the Decretum of Gratian, means that the extent to which the teaching of Roman ("Civil") law and Canon Law were catalysts for one another is not entirely clear. Certainly, the Decretum seems to have had less Roman law in its original version, only much expanded in its second recension.[132] Nonetheless, formal teaching of Roman law developed rapidly in the twelfth century, and a series of commentators at Bologna called

[127] Dondorp and Schrage, "Sources" (2010), 12–18.

[128] The Authenticum came into use in the twelfth century (Loschiavo, "Codex graecus" (2010); Loschiavo, "La Riscoperta dell'Authenticum" (2011)), although only 97 of the more than 130 Novels it originally contained were finally adopted for the Volumen Parvum. It superseded the most common early medieval version of the Novels, the Epitome of Julian. Apart from some texts, which were originally issued in Latin, the Authenticum mostly consists of literal kata podas translations from Greek to Latin, made as a teaching aid in the 550s. This was not, however, apparent to medieval jurists, who in due course came to regard it as the "authentic" Justinianic version. As with so many other works, the standard modern edition is to a large extent a reconstruction (Heimbach, Authenticum (1846–1851)).

[129] The Tres Libri generally follow on from the Novels, as these latter were in nine groupings (Collationes), so that Books 10–12 of the Codex would appear to be in sequence.

[130] For the incorporation of feudal law in the Corpus, see Dondorp and Schrage, "Sources" (2010), 49–52.

[131] Note Torelli's experimental edition (1943) of Book 1 only of the Institutes with the Accursian Gloss. For the older Corpus Iuris editions and their reprints, see Dondorp and Schrage, "Sources" (2010), 14–15.

[132] Winroth, Making of Gratian's Decretum (2000); Dondorp and Schrage, "Sources" (2010), 35.

glossators gained pre-eminence, the most notable being the "Four Doctors" (Bulgarus, Martinus, Jacobus, Hugo).[133]

The twelfth and thirteenth centuries saw the creation of a large body of material generated by the teaching activities at Bologna, even as it developed into a formal university.[134] There was vigorous legal writing and teaching elsewhere, not only in other Italian cities, but also in France[135] and even England.[136] The influence of the Justinianic material percolated across much of Latin Europe, even where previously little known and, consequently, important pre-Justinian texts such as the Breviary of Alaric largely fell into desuetude. However, it was Bologna that came to provide the authoritative and standard texts, and to define what the "Vulgate" of the Corpus Iuris was, even if there was never a monopoly of interpretation.[137] The range of works was varied.[138] Among the most notable for the Codex were summaries or summae, usually based upon lectures, of which several exist for the twelfth century,[139] and which culminated in the early thirteenth century with the "Golden Summary" of Azo (d. c. 1225).[140] As with the text itself, such summaries were generally of Books 1–9, with separate [133] Stein, Roman Law in European History (1999), 45–54; Winroth, "Teaching of Law" (2006); Winroth, "The Legal Revolution" (2012); Brundage, Medieval Origins (2008), 80–89; Witt, Two Latin Cultures (2012), 235–252.

[134] For the development of the formal university system, see Brundage, Medieval Origins (2008), 219–282.

[135] Stein, Roman Law (1999), 54–56. Perhaps the most notable text relating to the Codex north of the Alps in this period was "lo Codi," a vernacular summary of Codex Books 1–9, composed in Provençal in the mid-twelfth century, and later turned into other Romance versions plus Latin (Brundage, Medieval Origins (2008), 91–92; Fitting, Lo Codi (1906), the Latin text; Kabatek, "Lo Codi" (2000); Kabatek, Lo Codi (n.d., website with Provençal, Castilian, and Latin versions)). The Summa Trecensis is now also generally regarded as of southern French origin. See Dondorp and Schrage, "Sources" (2010), 25; cf. Kantorowicz and Buckland, Glossators (1938), 146–180; text: Fitting, Summa Codicis (1894).

[136] The Liber Pauperum of Vacarius is best known, which made heavy use of both Codex and Digest and was organized according to the structure of the Code Books 1–9: edition by de Zulueta (1927); cf. Taliadoros, Law and Theology (2006), ch. 1. There is also a slightly later lecture course on the Institutes, not necessarily by Vacarius (de Zulueta and Stein, The Teaching of Roman Law (1990)). See also Stein, Roman Law (1999), 56–57; Brundage, Medieval Origins (2008), 92–94.

[137] For instance, in the thirteenth century there developed a signficant law school at Orleans (Feenstra, "Law" (1992), 407; Stein, Roman Law (1999), 67–68). Note, in particular, the lectures of de Belleperche (d. 1308) on the Codex, a key influence upon fourteenth-century Italian jurists (Bezemer, Pierre de Belleperche (2005)).

[138] For a detailed description, see Dondorp and Schrage, "Sources" (2010), 21–29.

[139] Thus, the Casus Codicis of William of Cabriano, a summary of Bulgarus' lectures on the Codex from the academic year 1156/7 (Wallinga, Casus Codicis (2005); Kantorowicz and Buckland, Glossators (1938), 206–212); also from the twelfth century the Summa Codicis Berolinensis (ed. Loschiavo 1996). The Summa Trecensis is no longer attributed to Irnerius (see n. 135, above).

[140] The 1506 Pavia edition was reprinted as Azonis Summa super Codicem (Corpus Glossatorum Juris Civilis 11; Turin, 1966).

summaries being created for the Tres Libri.[141] Other self-standing works included those discussing disputed and differing interpretations.[142] However, most typical are the glosses of various character, generated by teaching but added to manuscripts of the Codex, that explained terms, gave cross-references to parallel passages, discussed both similar and discordant texts, resolved contradictions, and so forth. These grew in volume, so that the glosses of particular teachers, sometimes taken and layered within those of their successors, came to form large and coherent apparatuses.

The climax of this process, which essentially defines the era of the "Glossators," was the production of a fixed and stable commentary by Accursius (c. 1185–c. 1263), whose set of glosses on the Codex (as on the rest of the Corpus Iuris), the Glossa Magna, became the standard one added to its manuscripts, thus generally referred to as the Glossa Ordinaria (the term also used for the matching gloss added to manuscripts of Gratian's Decretum, the Canon Law equivalent to the Corpus Iuris[143]). The Gloss thus acquired authoritative textual status alongside the Codex itself, and indeed largely defined and circumscribed how the Codex could be used and interpreted, encapsulated in the maxim "What the Gloss does not recognize, the court does not recognize." The typical Codex manuscript of the later Middle Ages was usually laid out with two, often quite short, columns of text in the center of each page, surrounded and indeed dwarfed by the gloss written to cover every margin, top and bottom, left and right (see Figure 4; cf. Figure 6). The text became particularly stable, because the university in Bologna controlled publishing through licensed stationers. One notable feature of this was the "pecia" system, whereby those students too poor to buy outright the complete texts needed for their Civil and Canon Law courses could borrow short portions of the Corpus Iuris to copy during their studies and so gradually assemble a full text at a rate they could afford.[144] Commentary and intepretation continued after the period of the glossators, but essentially the form of the text was fixed.

The use of a common corpus of Civil Law accompanied by standard glosses and commentaries, together with a predominant law school at Bologna, helped to create a common legal culture across much of Europe, by combining with [141] Apart from the title on coloni (C. 11.48; Conte, Servi Medievali (1996), 259–278), Azo did not create a summa for the Tres Libri, while Placentinus only covered part of Book 10, his work apparently finished by Pillius. There is a recent edition of a complete summa of the Tres Libri by Rolando of Lucca (1153–1221), in a version revised after his death (Conte and Menzinger, Summa Trium Librorum (2012)).

[142] Thus, Hänel, Dissensiones Dominorum (1834).

[143] For details of canon law texts and materials (the Decretum and various later supplements), see Dondorp and Schrage, "Sources" (2010), 31–46.

[144] Brundage, Medieval Origins (2008), 272–273.

the parallel structures in the teaching and practice of Canon Law based upon the Decretum of Gratian and its supplements.[145] Known together as utrumque ius, "the two laws," this has come to be referred to as the ius commune (the term is kept in Latin in modern languages to avoid confusion with the English "Common Law" and its tradition).[146] It is important to emphasize, however, that this did not mean that Roman law provided the secular law of Europe. While civilians (lawyers trained in the Civil Law) and indeed canonists shared both texts and many modes of thinking and arguing about the law, the numerous jurisdictions of cities and principalities each had their own customary law and statutes. While Roman law was sometimes regarded as the proper law in Italy, especially in territories theoretically part of the Holy Roman Empire, it was more usually employed as the default resource, when existing local law and custom were silent or failed to provide solutions.[147] Further, Canon Law tended to predominate, as is reflected in the relatively high number of surviving manuscripts of Canon Law texts and commentaries compared with the equivalent Roman law materials. Since Canon Law was significant wherever the Church was, it was often only by holding onto the coat-tails of Canon Law that Roman law exerted influence, especially as some Roman law texts were directly present in Gratian's Decretum. Thus, in England, where Roman law was ultimately not "received," its influence was generally felt only in ecclesiastical courts (whose competence included both marriage and wills), or in some courts where transnational legal issues favored following the procedure and substance of the Civil Law.[148] Despite these reservations, it is nonetheless true that medieval Roman law did provide for a powerful and congruent legal influence across a wide area.

Humanism and the beginnings of textual criticism

With the spread of humanism and its interest in classical texts and manuscripts during the Renaissance, there also developed an interest in the Roman legal texts not only as current law, but in their historical and philological perspectives. The medieval lawyers had been interested in the Corpus Iuris as a [145] For canon law teaching, see Brundage, Medieval Origins (2008), 107–117 and ch. 6.

[146] On the ius commune, see Bellomo, Common Legal Past of Europe (1995); Stein, Roman Law (1999), chs. 3–4. For a good and recent series of essays examining the nature of medieval civil law culture, see Cairns and du Plessis, The Creation of the "Ius Commune" (2010).

[147] For the relationship of Roman law to local statute and custom, see Stein, Character and Influence (1988), ch. 6; Stein, Roman Law (1999), 61–67; Conte, "Roman Law vs Custom" (2009).

[148] Barton, Roman Law in England (1971); Stein, Character and Influence (1988), ch. 11; Helmholz, The "Ius Commune" (2001); Helmholz, Oxford History, vol. 1 : The Canon Law (2004).

fixed and authoritative text (which would no doubt have pleased Justinian), the bedrock from which their further legal argument and exploration could progress.[149] They were little interested in thinking of the Corpus in the light of its sixth-century historical context or worrying about how far their received text faithfully represented Justinian's original. Even less were they interested in excavating behind Justinian's codification to reveal the shape of Roman law in earlier periods. This attitude and practice came to be known as the mos Italicus (the Italian way) and remained very influential throughout the early modern period.

However, contrasting historical and philological approaches were now taken up. Perhaps most famously Lorenzo Valla (1407–1457) used arguments of language and history to demonstrate that the so-called Donation of Constantine, which purported to be an imperial constitution of Constantine the Great granting temporal power over the Western Empire to the Pope, was a later forgery (it even had a fictive subscript like a genuine imperial constitution).[150] But Valla also criticized the inelegant Latin of the medieval civilian commentators, while praising that of the classical jurists.[151]

Other scholars attacked the legal tradition of the whole Corpus Iuris, characterizing it as suffering from "Tribonianism" and representing a law that was both debased and irrelevant. This was an especially important development in France, where there was the desire to establish a broader national French law, deriving from French customs. However, it also meant an attempt to recover pure classical Roman law from the accretions of the glossators and commentators. This approach became known as the mos Gallicus (the French way) and began with the work of Guillaume Budé (1467–1540), and then Andrea Alciato (1492–1550) and his pupils.[152] Its iconic text was François Hotman's Anti-Tribonian (1567).[153] These shifts in attitude meant that the texts of the Corpus Iuris no longer needed to be approached in such a reverential manner, but could be considered in their historical context, and used to peer back into earlier Roman history. Scholars also began to engage seriously with pre-Justinian texts, trying to recover or reconstruct the legal monuments that had [149] Gordley, "Ius Quaerens Intellectum" (2010).

[150] Bowersock, On the Donation of Constantine (2007).

[151] Nauta, In Defense of Common Sense (2007), 159–161. The passage praising the classical jurists is De Linguae Latinae Elegantia III.proem. (Mantovani, Studi Nicosia, v (2007)); cf. Valla's Letter to Giovanni Serra 13 and 16 (Copenhaver and Nauta, Dialectical Disputations (2012), vol. 2, 440–441).

[152] Kelley, Foundations of Modern Historical Scholarship (1970), 53–85 (Budé; but see also Osler, "Budaeus and Roman Law" (1985)), and 87–148 (Alciato and pupils).

[153] Kelley, Foundations (1970), 106–112.

been lost, such as the Twelve Tables, or those eclipsed by the Corpus Iuris, such as the Theodosian Codex[154] or the Epitome of Julian.

As a consequence of such new approaches, legal scholars quickly began to examine how the text of Justinian's Corpus itself should be reconstructed. For instance, the fact that reading Greek was now a routine accomplishment of the educated meant that Justinianic law in Greek, whether recovered from later Byzantine works[155] or from the Florentine manuscript of the Digest,[156] became more widely known, and indeed lawyers could dispute as to whether it was proper to cite these Greek passages in legal argument.[157]

What was the effect of all this upon the text of the Codex? First, with the advent of printing, the Corpus Iuris Vulgate with its Gloss was published repeatedly from the later fifteenth to the earlier seventeenth centuries, retaining its medieval divisions, with the three volumes for the Digest, one for the Codex Books 1–9, and the concluding Volumen Parvum containing Books 10–12, with the remainder of the Justinianic material.[158] However, scholars started to try to recreate something closer to Justinian's original.[159] For the Codex, the classic edition for this process is that by Gregor Haloander (1501–1531), published at Nuremberg in 1530.[160] Using a now lost manuscript, he attempted to remedy the deficiencies of the previous tradition, bringing together all twelve books into a single volume, printing all the headings and subscripts that he could find (legally unimportant, but historically interesting),[161] and excluding the authenticae (relegated to an appendix). However, he made little progress on restoring the Greek, beyond an occasional notice of a missing "Graeca constitutio." The edition of Miraeus (Paris, 1550) was the [154] For the Theodosian Codex, the two most significant scholars were the pioneering Jacques Cujas (Jacobus Cuiacius, 1520–1590; Kelley, Foundations (1970), 112–115) and the magisterial Jacques Godefroy (Jacobus Gothofredus, 1587–1652), whose famous edition appeared posthumously in 1665.

[155] Note in particular Agustín's letter of 1544 to Diego Hurtado de Mendoza, mainly concerned with the Novels, which lays out very clearly the issues surrounding attempts to recover the lost Greek material. See Barker, "Antonio Agustín" (1993), with a translation of the Mendoza letter at pp. 271–277.

[156] On the restoration of the Greek of Modestinus to the Digest (the most substantial absence from the medieval tradition), see Troje, "Crisis digestorum" (2011), 95–135.

[157] See, as an example, contrasting views of the Greek and Latin texts of Novel 159 (= Authenticum 126) in a case from the 1540s (Lokin, Analecta Groningana (2010), 261–272).

[158] Dondorp and Schrage, "Sources" (2010), 14–15.

[159] What follows relies heavily on the details in Troje, "Graeca leguntur" (1971), 51–55; cf. Troje, Crisis digestorum (2011), 156–158.

[160] Recently reprinted by Vico Verlag: Codicis Iustiniani ex repetita praelectione libri XII (Ius Commune: Rechtstradition der europäischen Länder 99 = Rechtsquellen 19; Frankfurt, 2011).

[161] Also important for recovering subscripts were the twelve-book unglossed editions of Russardus (Lyon, 1561) and Contius (Paris, 1562, 1571).

first to include the lengthy lists of staff and salaries for Africa (not present in the Vulgate).[162] The edition printed by Hugo à Porta (Lyon, 1551) contained some Greek constitutions drawn from the Council of Ephesus in Latin translations made by François Hotman (1524–1590). Contius (Antoine Leconte, 1517–1586), having already included some Greek with Latin translations in his unglossed twelve-book edition of 1562 (Fig. 5 below), gathered together most missing items into his "Libri praetermissorum,"[163] and later printed them as an appendix to his revised Codex edition (Paris, 1571). In 1575 these were finally incorporated into the Codex edition of Charondas (Louis Le Caron, c. 1538–c. 1617) printed in Antwerp. Also notable was the work of Cujas on the last three books of the Code, [164] and of Antonio Agustín (1516–1586; a pupil of Alciato), who published a separate volume of the Greek constitutions alone (Lerida, 1569).[165] Finally, Denis Godefroy (Dionysius Gothofredus; 1549–1622; father of Jacques Godefroy of the famed Codex Theodosianus edition) produced an influential edition of the whole Corpus Iuris (Geneva, 1583), which enjoyed a long life and contained a twelve-book Codex with the Greek constitutions represented in the main text in as complete a manner as then possible, even if primarily through Latin translations and summaries (Fig. 6 below). Nonetheless, Godefroy still included an adapted version of the Accursian Gloss, and his version of the Novels remained the Latin Authenticum in its nine collations.[166]

Once we reach the seventeenth century, however, the medieval Codex was soon left behind. The Accursian Gloss was abandoned, the last major edition to use it being that of Johann Fehe in 1627 based on Gothofredus.[167] The Codex itself now appeared routinely as a single twelve-book entity,[168] and its missing constitutions, headings and subscripts were substantially restored in some fashion. However, no single standard Codex text emerged that was as authoritative as the Bolognese Vulgate had been, although most editions proclaimed their dependence upon the sixteenth-century restorers and editors named [162] C. 1.27.1.21–42 and 1.27.2.19–34; Corcoran, "Würzburg Fragment" (forthcoming).

[163] Praetermissorum in XII libris Codicis Iustinianei classes II, 2 vols. (Paris, 1566). This first part dealt with Books 1–9, the second, Books 10–12.

[164] Ad tres postumos libros codicis Justiniani commentarii (Lyon, 1562).

[165] Antonio Agustín, Constitutionum Graecarum Codicis Iustinianei collectio et interpretatio (Lerida, 1567); cf. his letter of 1544 to Hurtado noted above (Barker, "Antonio Agustín" (1993)).

[166] Not all the Gothofredus editions included the Gloss. For something of their complex history, see the bibliographic notes in Spangenberg, Einleitung in das Römisch-Justinianeische Rechtsbuch (1817), 838–845.

[167] Corpus Iuris Civilis Iustinianei cum commentariis Accursii, scholiis Contii, et D. Gothofredi lucubrationibus ad Accursium ... Lyon, 1627; Spangenberg, Einleitung (1817), 882–883; Dondorp and Schrage, "Sources" (2010), 15. This edition is available in a facsimile printed at Osnabrück in 1965–1966.

[168] The last edition to separate out Books 1–9 from Books 10–12 seems to have been printed in Venice in 1621 (so Spangenberg, Einleitung (1817), 946 and 948).

above, especially Contius and Gothofredus. Variant approaches to Roman law and its use were reflected in differing editorial and publication practices for Roman legal texts across Europe, broadly divisible into three groups: the Counter-Reformation South, including Italy; the Protestant North, including Germany; and France.[169] In many ways, therefore, the Codex text was still conservative, with much of the shape of the Vulgate retained, often including the authenticae. The wider implications of the Greek sources in particular were not fully worked out or incorporated. This was inevitable, since the Codex and the whole Corpus Iuris were still part of living law and contemporary legal practice and learning, rather than serving as a source for purely historical scholarship.

Towards the modern Codex edition

In fact, despite the rise of philological and historical approaches to law in the Renaissance, the reach of Roman law as a current system had rather expanded in the sixteenth century. Of great significance in the longer term for the future of the text of the Corpus Iuris, this was the period of the extensive reception of Roman law in Germany, the iconic moment being the establishment of the Imperial Court (Reichskammergericht) in 1495 as the supreme court for the Holy Roman Empire, whose territory by this point was largely German-speaking. This high court was to use Roman law as being the common law of the whole Empire, irrespective of the patchwork of legal traditions and customs prevailing at the regional or local level.[170] There even developed a legend that, on the advice of the Bolognese jurist Irnerius, Emperor Lothar III (d. 1137) had formally adopted Roman law as the imperial law.[171] The status of the law professors was also enhanced, as there was a strong tradition of Aktenversendung, whereby important cases were referred to university faculties for rulings on points of law, a practice which mirrored the earlier prestige of the medieval glossators and the classical jurists as authoritative interpreters.[172] While the status of Roman law was not unchallenged or unchanging in the Empire during this period, it always mattered.

[169] Thus, Osler, Jurisprudence of the Baroque (2009) (vol. 1) A–G, ix–xxi. There was much censorship in the Catholic south of legal works from the Protestant north.

[170] Whitman, Legacy of Roman Law (1990), 13–17; Feenstra, "Law" (1992), 411–412; Stein, Roman Law (1999), 88–92.

[171] Whitman, Legacy of Roman Law (1990) 32–33 and 41. The legend was not discredited until 1643.

[172] Whitman, Legacy of Roman Law (1990), 34–35. Even today Civilian jurisdictions give considerable weight to academic opinions in a manner quite alien to the Common Law tradition, in which judges tend to play this role. Lokin gives a lively account of his consultation in 1990 on a point of law arising from Justinian's Novel 159, although this did relate to the terms of a will of someone who had died in 1792! (Lokin, "Ad Novellam 159" (1990)).

There was still a strong tendency, as with the mos Italicus, to see the Corpus Iuris as a seamless whole, a complete self-contained system. This was a characteristic especially of those who by the early nineteenth century came to be called Pandectists (after the Pandects, an alternative name for the Digest), and were often considered to place system above practicality and social need.[173] As a result, as long as the Corpus Iuris retained such legal weight, editions of its text remained fairly conservative. Two processes led to a change. First, was the trend towards national codifications of law, which, starting in the later eighteenth century, reached a seminal moment with the publication of the Code Napoléon in France (1804). This quickly spread to territories under French control or influence, and throughout the nineteenth century codification proceeded apace across much of Europe. Although most such codes tended to be squarely in the Civil Law tradition, the result of their promulgation was that they directly superseded the laws and texts that went before.[174] This meant that the Corpus Iuris gradually ceased to be part of living law. Germany was almost the last major Civilian jurisdiction to produce its own code, which appeared as the Bürgerliches Gesetzbuch (BGB) in 1900.[175] This is not to say that Justinianic texts could not (and cannot) be used in legal argument, and Roman texts have even been cited before the English courts, which are, of course, outside the Civil Law orbit.[176] However, they could no longer be truly authoritative or binding. This slow eclipse of Justinian's law in legal practice has meant that editions have become solely matters of philology and history.

This process coincided with the second major trend, the adoption of systematic textual criticism developed especially by German scholarship in the later eighteenth and nineteenth centuries, the full weight of which was now turned upon the Justinianic legal sources. Indeed, the Pandectists themselves, as their name indicates, privileged the Digest and went in search of a supposedly pure (if rather ahistorical) classical Roman law of the jurists that lay behind the medieval or even Justinianic encrustations that distorted it. Serious attempts were also made to engage with how the law evolved from Justinian through the Middle Ages, as in Savigny's great history of medieval Roman law (Geschichte des römischen Rechts im Mittelalter), whose first edition appeared between 1815 and 1831.[177] Further, the early nineteenth century also saw a

[173] Stein, Roman Law (1999), 119–123.

[174] Stein, Roman Law (1999), ch. 5; Watkin, Historical Introduction (1999), ch. 7.

[175] Crosby, The Making of a German Constitution (2008), ch. 6. Switzerland followed in 1907 (Watkin, Historical Introduction (1999), 145–146). It is important to note for the spreading influence of the Civil Law tradition that Japan adopted the German BGB even before Germany in 1898, while the new Turkish Republic adopted the Swiss Civil Code in 1926 (Watkin, Historical Introduction (1999), 146).

[176] For example, Lewis, "What Marcellus Says" (1994); Stein, Roman Law (1999) 128; Lee, "Confusio" (2009).

[177] An English translation of the first part only, taking the story up to Irnerius, appeared in Edinburgh in 1829.

transformation in the resources available for the study of the texts of Roman law, as numerous important manuscripts were discovered and utilized. One key event was the identification by Niebuhr in 1816 of a palimpsested[178] manuscript at Verona as containing the only surviving intact work of pre-Justinian classical jurisprudence, the Institutes of Gaius (which had themselves served as a model for Justinian's Institutes).[179] But it was also at Verona that the only substantial portions of Justinian's Codex in its original form were identified, again in palimpsest (1817).[180] Manuscripts of the "Epitome Codicis" were discovered and began to be studied systematically, such as the important early Pistoia manuscript, whose significance was first properly appreciated by Friedrich Bluhme in 1822 during his travels investigating Italian libraries.[181] The Summa Perusina was identified and first published in 1840.[182] Further, the close relationship between the contents of the Justinian and Theodosian Codices meant that discoveries relating to the latter were significant also for the former, such as the palimpsested Theodosian Codex discovered at Turin in 1820, which provided substantial portions of its incomplete first five books.[183] There was as well major engagement with the Byzantine legal sources with, for instance, a new and authoritative edition of the Basilika appearing between 1833 and 1870.[184] It became clear that Justinian's Codex needed significant revision, and academic studies of what was needed, as well as new editions themselves, began to appear.[185]

In retrospect, all this activity seems to be simply the Vorarbeit to the work of Paul Krüger (1840–1926), since his edition superseded all others and is yet to be superseded in its turn. Indeed, not only the Codex, but the whole of the [178] A palimpsest is a manuscript where the original text is erased and a new text written over it. The older text often remains at least partly visible, especially with some technological help. Regrettably, in the nineteenth century this often involved the use of chemicals, which furnished temporary visibility, but caused long-term damage. The most famous palimpsest studied in recent times (outside Roman law circles) is probably the Archimedes palimpsest, on which see Netz and Noel, The Archimedes Codex (2007).

[179] The story of the manuscript is brillianty retold by Briguglio, Il Codice Veronese (2012).

[180] Krüger, Fragmenta Veronensia (1874).

[181] Bluhme, Iter Italicum, vol. 2 (1827), 113–120; Radding and Ciaralli, Corpus Iuris (2007), 135. Bluhme had gone to Pistoia on behalf of Heinrich von Schrader, who published the landmark Prodromus in the following year (1823), notable for its systematic examination of the manuscript evidence.

[182] Heimbach, ANEKDOTA II (1840), 1–144.

[183] Most accessible as Krüger, Fragmenta Taurinensia (1880), which was the version upon which Mommsen relied for its readings in his Theodosian Codex edition (Croke, "Mommsen's Encounter" (2010), 225, 227). The palimpsest was later destroyed in a great fire at the Turin library in 1904.

[184] Published at Leipzig in six volumes by Gustav Heimbach. Note also the three volumes of Heimbach's ANEKDOTA (1838–1843).

[185] Note, in particular, Witte, Die Leges Restitutae (1830); Biener and Heimbach, Beiträge zur Revision (1833).

Justinianic corpus ended up edited into a new Corpus Iuris Civilis, which has proved as fixed and influential as its medieval predecessor, being the resource to which most modern users of this material tend to turn, which they are most likely to encounter in libraries, which is still readily available in print, and which provides the base text for most derivative editions and translations (as in the current work).[186]

This new Corpus consists of three volumes, originally published by Weidmanns in Berlin between 1868 and 1895.[187] The first volume (completed 1872) contained the Institutes, edited by Krüger (based on his stand-alone edition of 1867), and the Digest, edited by Theodor Mommsen, who also produced a separate but parallel larger Digest edition (editio maior) in two volumes (1868, 1870). Krüger was editor of the second volume (completed 1877), which contained the full twelve-book Codex, although, as with the Digest, a separate but parallel editio maior appeared (completed also 1877).[188] The third volume (1895) contained the Novels, edited by Rudolf Schoell and completed after his death by Wilhelm Kroll. This consists of the Greek collection of 168 Novels, with parallel Latin texts from the Authenticum, where these exist, and two supplementary sets of material (the Thirteen Edicts and an Appendix of nine items).

The nature of Krüger's editions

It is important for any user of these volumes to be aware of the nature of Krüger's editions of the Codex.[189] The original editions of the editio maior and editio minor were completed together in 1877. Although the basic text of the two editions is the same, the formats differ. The maior is laid out with full-page text, the minor in two columns per page as for the other volumes of the Corpus Iuris Civilis.[190] The maior also contains a forty-page introduction discussing the manuscripts, earlier editions, and Krüger's editorial policy,[191] as compared to little more than a single page introduction in the minor. The [186] But strangely not used by Scott for his translation in his Civil Law (Kearley, "Enigma" (2014), 30).

[187] All the volumes originally appeared piecemeal in fascicles, as did the editiones maiores of Digest and Codex.

[188] The fascicles of the two Codex editions (maior and minor) appeared between 1873 and 1877. There was also a preliminary study (Krüger, Kritik des Justinianischen Codex (1867)). For a bibliography of Krüger's scholarship, see Schulz, "Paul Krüger" (1927), xxxiii–xxxix.

[189] See also Corcoran, "Anastasius, Justinian" (2009), 189–193. As explained elsewhere, the text printed and translated in these volumes is that of the 11th edition of the editio minor, essentially that of the 9th edition (1914), the last that Krüger was able to emend.

[190] Krüger's stand-alone Institutes edition (1867) and Mommsen's editio maior of the Digest were also full-page, in contrast to the Corpus Iuris Civilis editions.

[191] Editio maior, pp. v–xxxxiiii and lx–lxii. This introduction has recently been published in a German translation (Hillner, "Praefatio" (2010)).

apparatus criticus (textual footnotes) is much fuller in the maior, which also lists on each and every page, which the minor does not, the most significant manuscript witnesses upon which the text of that page relies. For passages in Greek, the minor, but not the maior, includes at the foot of the page a modern Latin translation.[192] Other differences need not detain us, but it is clear that for those interested in the relationship between the manuscripts and Krüger's text, the maior remains an essential resource. It is certainly a pity that it was not reprinted until 1998 and is relatively rare in academic libraries, certainly in English-speaking countries, although now available on-line.

In contrast to the maior, the minor was reprinted in numerous later editions, and indeed remains in print. Although these editions were largely the same, they were not identical, and Krüger continued to tamper with them up until the 9th edition of 1914, the last before his death. This is the point at which the text became fixed and it was used for most later editions, including the 11th edition of 1954, upon which this translation is based.[193] It is certainly clear that Krüger was constantly revisiting the text of the Codex, not least because of the work for his incomplete edition of the Theodosian Codex, into which he restored directly from the Justinian Codex numerous constitutions excluded by Mommsen from the now standard Theodosianus edition of 1905.[194] Yet in practice these constitutions were taken over from Krüger's latest Codex edition unchanged.[195] No doubt the notes and annotated editions in the Krüger archive in Washington DC will reveal more of his thoughts than ever made it into his revised editiones minores or the Theodosian Codex edition.[196] However, in case the reader is now alarmed at the shifting and changeable nature of the editions, [192] This is a feature also of the other volumes in the Corpus Iuris Civilis series. Until the twentieth century it was not uncommon for editions of Greek texts to be furnished with Latin translations to make them more widely accessible, some competence in Latin being almost universal amongst the educated.

[193] The 1954 edition removed most of Krüger's speculative notes about interpolations, but the text is otherwise that of 1914. For reasons I cannot fathom, the 13th edition of 1963 went back to the 8th edition of 1906, but other reprints, including the most recent (2008), follow the 1954 edition.

[194] Only two fascicles of Krüger's edition (Books 1–6, 1923, and Books 7–8, 1926) made it into print, the unpublished remainder being destroyed during the Second World War. However, since the greatest deficiencies of content and structure affect Books 1–5, Krüger's final choices of what to restore and where to restore it are almost fully known. On Mommsen, Krüger, and the Theodosianus, see Croke, "Mommsen's Encounter" (2010); Matthews, Laying Down the Law (2000), 97–118; Crogiez-Pétrequin et al., Codex Theodosianus (2009), 54–60.

[195] Krüger did on occasion emend in order to restore pre-Justinian rules and so get closer to the presumed Theodosian original: thus, the "quadriennium" appearing correctly (for Justinian's Codex) at C. 7.37.1 was changed to "quinquennium" when it was relocated to C.Th. 4.16.1a (Krüger, Codex Theodosianus, fasc. 1 (1923), 147).

[196] For discussion of the archive, see Hessler, "Editing Justinian's Corpus" (2011).

it should be stated that the alterations introduced by Krüger were few, and that overall the differences between editions are limited. Even then they are generally only introduced to reflect new manuscript witnesses. Among the most significant changes are: (1) some minor additions to the apparatus, plus a single textual alteration under title C. 3.32 taken from the Cologne manuscript published in 1890;[197] (2) a newly discovered subscript added to C. 7.38.1;[198] (3) and the substitution of one Greek version for another at C. 8.11.3.[199] Sometimes, however, Krüger did alter his text to reflect his own change in judgment, as with the list of the seven provinces of Africa at C. 1.27.1.12.[200]

These aspects of the later editions, however, are less important than the basic nature of Krüger's 1877 text, and his approach to the manuscripts and tradition of the Codex. As will be clear from the brief history of the work in the medieval period given earlier, the full text of the Codex does not survive, so that Krüger's editions, as with those of his predecessors going back to Haloander, remain to a considerable extent reconstructions.[201] Initially Krüger engaged with the problems of the text of the Codex through earlier editions and the descriptions or facsmiles of manuscripts made by others, and indeed when he published his first thoughts on the text of the Codex (his Kritik of 1867), he had yet to engage significantly with the manuscripts. However, he soon immersed himself in them, not only taking advantage of four important ones easily available in Berlin, but making visits to see the other key early manuscripts between 1868 and 1876.[202]

Since, with the exception of the fragments in the Verona palimpsest, no manuscript of any substance preserved the Codex in its full original form, Krüger realized that the "Epitome" lay between the ancient Codex and the medieval Vulgate, and that for much of the text the Epitome manuscripts or those of the first generation of the "restored" Codex were the earliest witnesses (except for the final three books, for which somewhat later manuscripts had to be used). This situation generated two separate issues. One was the basic one of the Latin text of the individual constitutions. Although of the highest importance, this was relatively straightforward, since Krüger tended to follow the readings of [197] Gundermann, "Das Kölner Fragment" (1890); Corcoran, "After Krüger" (2009), 431. The Cologne fragment was first reflected in the 9th edition (1914).

[198] First published by Patetta, "Contributi alla storia del diritto romano", in 1891, and already present in the 6th Codex edition (1895).

[199] Stolte, "The Use of Greek" (2009), 151. The change was made in the 7th edition (1900).

[200] Zeugi replacing Tingi in the 4th edition of 1888 (Corcoran, "Würzburg Fragment" (2016)).

[201] Aside from Krüger's own introduction to the editio maior, discussions in English of his engagement with the Codex can be found in Radding and Ciaralli, Corpus Iuris (2007), 14–17 and 135–137; Hessler, "Editing Justinian's Corpus" (2011).

[202] See editio maior, v–x for when and where he encountered the manuscripts. Note that these were sometimes sent to him in Berlin. A listing of the Codex manuscripts is given below in the Appendix.

the earliest witnesses where available (especially P, L, and D), without wild conjecture, except where the text was very corrupt, and even then his proposals were cautious. His judgments were bolstered by his belief that P and L derived from a common tradition and so provided independent confirmation of one another's readings (whereas now it appears that L was copied directly from P). However, Krüger also drew upon the Byzantine sources, since the Greek texts, especially the "word-for-word" versions of the Latin that were often preserved in the Basilika and their scholia, were frequently decisive in deciding between rival readings, confirming the Latin word order or the probable number, tense, or meaning of particular words, or for supplying words deemed missing from the surviving Latin versions. Finally, there were the source-works of the Codex, such as the Theodosian Codex, which could also illuminate the text, although it might be hard to distinguish manuscript variants from deliberate Justinianic editing, especially as so much of the Theodosian text itself rested upon single manuscript witnesses.

The second, and often more complex, issue was the structure of titles and constitutions, since the Epitome manuscripts were so disordered that it could be questioned how far the medieval reconstruction that led to the Vulgate had been correctly performed. Three things were key to confirming or revising the structure of the Codex. First, since the constitutions were supposed to be in date order under each title, details of emperors and dates, if preserved and attached to the correct constitutions, would fix the order. Second, the Summa Perusina appeared to preserve a Codex structure independent of the Epitome tradition, and so could act as a control upon it. Finally, not only did the Basilika present many texts from the Codex in their probable original sequence, but in the scholia and in several other Byzantine sources there were frequent numerical references to Codex texts. Despite the ease of numerals being miscopied or corrupted (possibly less easy with Greek than with Roman numerals), these provided plenty of evidence not only for the placement of the missing Greek texts, but also for whether the Latin texts were complete and in order.

How, therefore, did the shape of Krüger's Codex differ from what went before? First, the medieval Vulgate had essentially contained the main Latin text of the constitutions in full and in the correct order. However, there were occasions when the numeration of titles and constitutions, which in any case was not the principal means the medieval jurists employed for citing the Codex,[203] was divergent, because of titles either missing or incorrectly subdivided (e.g., at C. 2.7.20, where the Vulgate started a new title 2.8). Second, there were some dozen texts ascribed to the Codex in various manuscripts from the time of the eleventh-century epitomising and restoration onwards, some of which had even made it into the Vulgate, and which appear unevenly in later printed editions. These Krüger relegated to the notes,[204] either as genuine ancient texts, but not pertaining to the Codex, or else as "suppositious." Their sources are seldom clear, but some, at least, were adapted from the "barbarian" law codes,[205] others probably from genuine but non-Justinian Roman law sources,[206] while the remainder were possibly forged or otherwise confected, although context and date remain opaque.[207] The bracketed numbers in Krüger's edition help to identify divergences between Krüger and the standard still Vulgate-influenced numeration of earlier editions (principally that of Herrmann as reprinted in the Kriegels' editions, but deriving ultimately from Gothofredus, which is also the numeration of Scott's Civil Law translation). It was quite common in the past (less so now) for the Codex to be cited with the inclusion of these bracketed figures (e.g., C. 2.7(8).20(1)), especially in the early years after the publication of Krüger's edition, in order to aid clarity by providing the alternative numerations. Finally, the authenticae were also permanently removed by Krüger, although listed in an appendix to the editio minor.[208]

[203] For details of how to cite the Codex in the medieval manner, see Dondorp and Schrage, "Sources" (2010), 18–20.

The headings to the Latin constitutions (naming emperors and recipients), although generally absent or attenuated in most later manuscripts, were sufficiently attested in the earlier manuscripts, including also the Summa Perusina, so as to be known more or less complete, although the forms in which names are transmitted can be quite bizarre.

[204] See Krüger editio maior, xxii; cf. Conrat, Geschichte der Quellen und Literatur (1891), 355 n. 4.

[205] Thus, the Aegidian epitome of the Lex Romana Visigothorum 2.8.1–3 (Hänel, Lex Romana Visigothorum (1849), 43–44) at C. 3.12 (Kr. maior, 248, cf. minor, 127 n. 9; present in the Vulgate); the Lombard Laws (Liutprand 105.II/Lombarda 2.8.6 (Monumenta Germaniae Historica Leges in folio 4, 150–151 and 615)) at C. 6.58 (Kr. maior, 610. n. 1, minor, 285 n. 16); and the Edict of Theoderic 15 at C. 9.16.(3) (Kr. maior, 835, minor, 379 n. 13; present in the Vulgate). It seems clear that this last was regarded as being Justinianic law from at the least the ninth century, when it was included along with other Roman law sources in the Lex Romana canonice compta (LRCC 204.1; Mor, Lex Romana (1927), 147).

[206] Thus, possibly deriving via some intermediate source from the Codex Gregorianus: C. 4.35 (Kr, editio maior, 359 n. 3 (ignored in the minor); Corcoran, "The Sins of the Fathers" (2000); but see Moreau, "The Invisible Children" (2010), 327–328); C. 5.4 (Kr. editio maior, 409, editio minor, 195 n. 18); C. 5.5 (Kr. maior, 415 n. 1, minor, 198 n. 8); C. 8.39.(1) (Kr. maior, 766 n. 1, minor, 351 n. 11); C. 8.58/9.1 (Kr. maior, 807 n. 2, minor, 368 n. 2); C. 9.9.(23) (Kr. maior, 825 n. 1, minor, 375 n. 10). All except the first were added by Krüger into his 1890 reconstruction of the Gregorianus (Krüger et al., Collectio III (1890), 236–245).

[207] C. 2.58 (Kr. maior, 232, minor, 119 n. 10); C. 4.21.(18) (Kr. maior, 328, minor, 162 n. 1); C. 11.54 (Kr. maior, 991 n. 6, minor, 444 n. 8; present in Vulgate).

[208] The authenticae are printed and translated as appendices in the volumes of the Dutch Codex translation (see n. 122, above).

The problems were greater with the subscripts (the dating clauses), which had been more swiftly abandoned by medieval copyists. Consequently, these are attested, if at all, only in the earlier manuscripts (up to the first part of the twelfth century), or sometimes in printed editions, which used such now lost manuscripts (e.g., Haloander 1530). The loss is especially acute in the Tres Libri (Books 10–12), since the latter are poorly attested until the later twelfth century, and, by the time they appear in the tradition, the subscripts had already been abandoned. A further problem is that, with so many similar names among the Consuls present in the dating formulae and the difficulties of correctly copying Roman numerals, the reliability of the text for those subscripts that do survive may not always inspire confidence. And this is aside from the question of what Justinian's commissioners had done to the subscripts by accident or design.

The problems were greatest, however, with the Greek constitutions. These are absent from all Codex manuscripts except the fragmentary Veronensis, although their previous existence is often, albeit irregularly, noted by phrases such as "Graeca constitutio."[209] Very occasionally manuscripts attempt to copy Greek, but the garbled results have defied interpretation.[210] The Greek, therefore, could not (and cannot) be restored from the Latin manuscript tradition, and had to be sought elsewhere. As noted earlier, the Codex does not itself directly survive, even in Greek, in the Byzantine tradition. However, the extensive excerpting and recycling of the sixth-century teaching materials, which, unlike the western medieval tradition, generally use numerical references, together with the sequences in which these were reused in the Basilika, mean that the structure of the original Codex can be recreated, as stated above. Unfortunately, the Greek texts themselves are seldom preserved in their original forms, and it is even rarer for information to survive regarding their headings or subscripts.

These features of the manuscript transmission mean that, while the Latin text proper of the Codex is reasonably well attested, the subscripts and the Greek text are not, with the headings better attested but not without problem. Krüger dealt with these three issues as follows:

(1) The subscripts

It must first be stated clearly that where a subscript is missing this always represents a deficiency in the tradition, even though this is not explicitly indicated in the printed text.[211] Justinian himself said (Const. Haec 2) that an undated constitution should have this fact indicated by a subscript in the form "sine die et consule" ("without day and consul [i.e., consular year]"), so that, at the least, this style of subscript should have been present. Second, in the editio maior, although sadly not in the minor, Krüger always includes a specific entry in the apparatus criticus (the textual footnotes) entitled "s.a." (subscriptionis auctor/auctores), which describes the manuscript or other authority for each and every subscript that he does print. This is especially important, not just because the manuscript witnesses for subscripts are so few, but because he sometimes relies on witnesses that are not, strictly speaking, those to the Codex itself directly. Thus, the Theodosian Codex and other late antique legal sources are cited in support of the printed text, not simply as additional witnesses, but even if they are the only evidence.[212] In such cases, therefore, and especially if using the editio minor, the unwary might think that the Codex was providing independent attestation of a subscript date. This is precisely the case with C. 5.4.17, where the date in fact derives only from the Gregorian Codex version of the text quoted at Collatio 6.4, and is not attested in any Justinian Codex manuscript.[213] Similar problems can also be encountered in Krüger's treatment of headings as well (see next section). Given the thinness of subscript attestation and yet the importance often attached to matters of dating for analysing both the reigns of emperors and the development of law, these textual issues must be kept in mind.

[209] This is attested already in the Summa Perusina manuscript; e.g., SP 1.29, 3.2.2, 4.59.1.

[210] Thus, C. 9.36.1 (Mor, "Avranches" (1977), 72 n. 31; Fig. 3 below); C. 10.48.2, 11.41.7, 12.63.2 (Krüger, editio maior, 929, 976, 1101).

It should be noted, however, that the few more recent manuscript discoveries relating to the Codex, although limited in extent, have generally been most significant in supplying previously missing subscripts.[214]

Another important point needs to be made. Many users of the Codex and of this translation will no doubt be most interested in treating them as source books to be mined for the legislation of particular emperors and to read individual constitutions as isolated fragments of law from a particular period or year. It was not Krüger's aim, however, to get the emperor or date historically correct, but rather to print what the Codex originally read.[215] Although this might [211] Rare exceptions are some records of hearings (acta), where such details may already be in the protocol (e.g., C. 9.1.17). Mistaken understanding of the nature of the subscripts and their presence or absence can lead scholars into error; for example, as discussed at Corcoran, "Anastasius, Justinian" (2009), 190, in relation to C. 1.11.9–10.

[212] Thus, for example, the subscripts printed under title C. 10.1 all derive solely from the Theodosian Codex (a quite common phenomenon in the last three books).

[213] Barnes, "Damascus or Demessus?" (2005).

[214] In particular, the Vallicelliana fragments (Corcoran, "New Subscripts" (2009)). See also vol. 3, p. 3176 below.

[215] By contrast, Mommsen's study of Diocletian's rescripts primarily from the Codex (Gesammelte Schriften II (1905), 195–291; originally published 1860) was focused on identifying as far as possible the actual dates of rescripts, irrespective of what the Codex might have recorded. Most of Mommsen's judgments have been accepted by later scholars including Krüger and Barnes (New Empire (1982), 50–60).

often have amounted to the same thing, it was not always so. Two examples taken from the same title (C. 4.19) should illustrate the point. Krüger prints C. 4.19.18 as being issued from Byzantium in April 294 (in the consulship of the Caesars). It is in the correct chronological order for the Codex, sandwiched between rescripts of February and November 294. Mommsen, however, noted that Diocletian issued numerous rescripts from Byzantium in April 293 (in the consulship of the Augusti), while in April 294 he was at Sirmium. Thus, he proposed to emend the date to 293.[216] Krüger records the "true" year in the textual footnotes, but leaves the "wrong" year in his text, since that is the correct Codex text. In the second case, Krüger prints C. 4.19.21 as issued from Singidunum in December 294 (again the consulship of the Caesars). The year transmitted by the sole source for the subscript (Haloander) was 293 (the consulship of the Augusti). However, Krüger has emended it to 294, since it is sandwiched between two other rescripts of December 294 and that must have been the Codex date. However, Krüger also included the information, again in his footnotes, that the "true" month, according to Mommsen's reconstruction of Diocletian's movements, must have been September of the same year.[217] In both cases, Krüger printed the subscripts as he believed they would have originally stood in the Codex. However, when he drew up a chronological list of constitutions precisely for scholars interested in using the Codex as a sourcebook for emperors' legislation, he placed the items in their true historical order, at least as far as he judged it could be recovered.[218]

(2) The headings

Although much better attested than the subscripts, there are still difficulties with the headings. The limited and divergent early witnesses mean that the exact form of recipients' names may not have been correctly preserved, and Krüger often prints the closest convincing classical name, especially for the recipients of private rescripts who are otherwise unknown.[219] A further problem is that similar names can have the same dative (the most common case ending for names in headings), and it may not even be apparent whether a name is male or female. The transmitted text may also be inconsistent. For instance, two rescripts generally believed to be to same addressee give a male name for [216] Mommsen, Gesammelte Schriften II (1905), 218 and 274.

[217] Mommsen, Gesammelte Schriften II (1905), 218 and 282.

[218] Krüger, Codex editio maior, *14 and *17, minor, 495–496 (vol. 3, pp. 3124, 3132 below).

[219] But the apparently obvious is not necessarily correct. Thus, "Abydonius" at C. 7.72.5 should probably be "Abidimus" (Corcoran, "New Subscripts" (2009), 420–422); "Leontogonus" at C. 6.6.2, should probably be "Leontogenes". The existence of current resources such as the Lexicon of Greek Personal Names (LGPN) (www.lgpn.ox.ac.uk) means that we are now in a better position to judge which names are at least the more plausible.

one, and the equivalent female name in the other (C. 1.19.1: Firmina; 7.13.1: Firminus).[220] Generally, Codex manuscripts preserve only a single name for an addressee, but where further names are known from pre-Justinian sources (commonly "Aurelius"), which often seem to be much fuller, Krüger usually includes these additional names (or offices). In his editio maior, such additions are indicated by appearing in italics, but unfortunately this typographical feature is not used in the minor (nor in these volumes).[221] In fact, it is not entirely clear whether the curtailing of addressees' nomenclature was a policy of the Codex compilers or later copyists, and therefore whether Krüger is justified in restoring "lost" names. However, there are two curious features of the manuscript transmission of names. First, the private recipients in the last titles of Book 4 (mostly as recorded in the Summa Perusina) are generally addressed by at least two names, in contrast to the rest of the Codex. Second, there are some odd cases where all that is left is a word apparently indicating someone's status, with the proper name excised, suggesting poor editing.[222] Some newer evidence for the Codex, such as the index list for the first edition (P. Oxy. XV 1814), provides some additional names, but not consistently.[223] Therefore, clarity is not currently possible and perhaps the Codex compilers were themselves inconsistent in how they treated nomenclature. Nonetheless, the private rescripts in Justinian's Codex are a rich, generally under-utilized, source for nomenclature in the Empire, provided their textual history is appreciated.[224]

As was explained earlier, several emperors are often named in headings, reflecting the collegial nature of the imperial office, and ordered by seniority, so that the ruler named first is not necessarily the actual issuer of the text. As with subscripts, however, Krüger's headings are designed to show how the Codex represented them, not to create historically accurate colleges.[225] With so much repetition and so many similar imperial names, however, it can be hard to know what represents editorial choice against later error or confusion. Overall, therefore, the forms in which the names and offices of emperors and recipients appear in Krüger's edition require careful scrutiny.

[220] Corcoran, Empire of the Tetrarchs (2000). 108; Evans Grubbs, "The Slave Who Avenged" (2000).
[221] E.g., names: C. 3.29.4, 7; 3.31.8; 4.21.5; 4.28.5; 7.62.13. Offices: 7.62.15, 18, 21.
[222] Thus, "augustali" (C. 11.35.1); "emerito" (C. 5.34.4); "evocato" (C. 2.4.5; 3.33.5; 8.16.4); "heredi" (C. 8.56.3). Some of these could conceivably be names.
[223] For example, for C. 1.18.1–2. See comments by Corcoran, "Justinian and His Two Codes" (2008), 89; Corcoran, "After Krüger" (2009), 429–430.
[224] See Connolly, Lives Behind the Laws (2010), 80–83.
[225] For example, Krüger prints "Idem A." at C. 1.18.2 (confirmed later also by P. Oxy. XV 1814), even though from both the transmitted subscript and the parallel Breviary text the correct emperor was Gordian III (C. Greg. Visig. 3.6.1; Corcoran, "After Krüger" (2009), 430–431).

(3) The Greek texts

Krüger indicates the Greek texts in three different ways (not reflected in the layout of these volumes). Where he believes that a Greek text was present, but that there is no evidence as to its content, he will indicate only the position of the constitution by a number followed with an ellipsis.[226] Where he finds a Greek text which conveys the sense of the missing constitution, he will print that text, but inset, so as to indicate that it is not the original text.[227] Finally, if he believes the text is indeed that of the original Codex, the text will appear within normal margins.[228] Sometimes the same constitution contains both styles. Thus, C. 6.4.4 is mostly inset, as representing a Basilika summary (a partial Latin summary is also printed in the apparatus criticus), but this changes toward its end where the Verona palimpsest preserves part of the original, including the Latin subscript.[229] Occasionally, only the opening word ("incipit") of a constitution is preserved, which Krüger will still print on its own, but then add a summary from elsewhere.[230] Finally, there are also doublets, where the text of the duplicate is supplied solely from its twin.[231] The headings of Greek constitutions are especially poorly attested.[232] As a result, Krüger sometimes restores headings on the basis of inference from other sources or information, but prints them within square brackets.[233]

It must be recognized, therefore, that the Greek of the Codex remains very incompletely attested and care should be taken in using the restored portions. Although Krüger's judgments are generally sound, there is always room for revision of his choices. Thus, it has been suggested that, although Greek constitutions were clearly present at both C. 1.26.6 and C. 10.16.1, the summary [226] Thus, C. 1.16.2, 1.26.6, 1.51.15, 2.7.28, 3.3.6, 4.20.21, 4.33.1, 5.9.11–18, 6.23.32, 6.46.8, 6.61.9–11, 8.11.23, 10.9.2, 10.31, 10.32.65, 10.32.68, 10.34.4–5, 10.35.4–5, 12.8.3. Note also Krüger's comments under C. 11.18.

[227] In only one title is this a Latin summary, there being only a few words of the Greek surviving (C. 3.43.1–2; Hallebeek, "Alearum lusus" (2013)).

[228] For example, C. 1.11.9–10. Numerous substantially intact texts are preserved in the "Collection of 25 Chapters" (Heimbach, ANEKDOTA II (1840), 145–201).

[229] Cf. C. 9.4.6.

[230] Typically as quoted in cross-references in the Collectio Tripartita (see the edition by van der Wal and Stolte (1994)); for example, C. 1.4.18, 1.5.17, 10.27.4.

[231] For example, C 1.4.17 from 10.27.3; 1.4.32 = 4.66.4; 3.2.4.3–5 from 1.4.26.11–13; 9.5.2 partly from 1.4.23; 12.63.2.pr from 1.4.26.6–7. Latin examples: C. 1.55.11 from 1.4.19; 5.61.1 from 2.12.11.

[232] See note 235 below. The subscripts to Greek constitutions are also poorly attested, but, as they were nearly always in Latin, they sometimes survive in western sources, even if attached to incorrect constitutions.

[233] For example, C. 1.2.17, 1.34.1–2, 6.4.4. Note that the heading inferred at C. 1.14.10 was later confirmed from P. Oxy. XV 1814 (Corcoran, "After Krüger" (2009), 429; Corcoran, "Justinian and His Two Codes" (2008), 109).

text restored by Krüger in the second should in fact be assigned to the first.[234] It should also be borne in mind that there have been new editions of some key Byzantine texts, most notably the Basilika (new edition, 1953–1988), and even fresh manuscript discoveries, so that there may be alternative or even superior Greek texts available.[235]

The foregoing account is intended to aid the interested reader in how to approach the edition of the Codex upon which this translation is based, and to highlight the sorts of difficulties facing Krüger and other editors of the text. I hope this is of help to those who wish to use it with their eyes open. It must be stressed, however, that we do indeed possess the Codex very substantially and that its shape and content are well known, even if some text and detail remain lacking or uncertain. There have, of course, been discoveries relating directly or indirectly to the text of the Codex in the century since Krüger last revised his editio minor, which are noted where relevant throughout these volumes (cf. vol. 3, p. 3176). But none has yet been so extensive as to solve or remedy the outstanding issues or deficiencies of the Latin or the Greek in a dramatic, let alone definitive, manner. In detail, however, both new discoveries and the recent reassessment of the manuscript tradition of the Codex during the early medieval period might cause numerous minor adjustments to the text. For instance, one item appears to remain incongruously in the Codex, while possibly not having been original to it: the anomalous letter of Pope John II encapsulating a declaration of faith by Justinian (C. 1.1.8).[236] But were a new Codex edition to be attempted today, revisiting all the old and new textual witnesses, it would probably not look startlingly different to that of Krüger.

Appendix: the manuscripts

It will be clear to any reader of the preceding chapter that the pattern of manuscript survival has been crucial to the state of the text of the Codex as we know it today. It therefore seems pertinent to describe summarily here, for those who may want to know more about this complex history, the key early manuscripts of the Codex and other witnesses to the text (complete as far as possible up to 1100), especially but not only those upon which Krüger relied. A list of the manuscripts he used appears at the beginning of every edition of the editio minor, while a more detailed list and discussion was included in the introduction to the editio maior.[237] A fuller listing and description of Codex manuscripts up to c. 1300 was published by Dolezalek in 1985, and further extensive and detailed analysis was undertaken by Tort-Martorell for her study of Book 2 published in 1989.[238] Neither work is concerned much with Books 10–12, which have a largely separate transmission history as the Tres Libri in the Volumen Parvum, and for which the discussion in Conte's 1990 book is invaluable.[239] Revised datings for many early manuscripts were proposed by Radding and Ciaralli in their article in the Zeitschrift der Savigny Stiftung in 2000, with further discussion in their book of 2007, and I generally follow these dates where they differ from Dolezalek or other sources.[240] However, manuscript dates are seldom explicit and usually rest upon subtle palaeographical analysis and comparison, and so are far from invulnerable to challenge and dispute.

[234] Stolte, "The Use of Greek" (2009), 158–159.

[235] The new Basilika edition was edited by H. J. Scheltema and others in seventeen volumes, published at Groningen. Some palimpsest Basilika fragments have recently been identified in Vienna. See Stolte, "Zwei neue Basiliken-Handschriften" (2010). For a new view of how Leo VI's Basilika related to its ill-understood precursors created under his father, Basil I, see now van Bochove, "Preluding the Basilica" (2014), 277–280. He suggests that these earlier versions may have preserved some elements of Codex constitutions such as their headings, which were only edited out later (citing the examples of C. 10.3.7, 10.16.13, 10.19.9, 12.40.12).

[236] Thus, argued by Stolte, "Not in the Code" (2010/11), suggesting it was added later in the sixth century. This is otherwise the only Codex text that overlaps with material otherwise known from a mid-sixth-century ecclesiastical compilation called the Collectio Avellana (Coll. Avell. 84 and 91; Coleman-Norton, Roman State (1966) vol. 3, No. 645).

Rather than a bare listing, I have divided the manuscripts by date and type, including significant witnesses that are not themselves actual manuscripts of the Codex. This is intended to reflect the story of the Codex as told in this chapter. Where Krüger assigned a siglum (abbreviation sign) for the manuscript, this appears first in bold, in accordance with his usage in the editio maior.[241]

First edition of 529: the Novus Codex

The first edition does not survive, and much about its nature and content has to be inferred from the revised edition of 534. However, there are two direct, if fragmentary, witnesses on papyrus from Egypt, which necessarily must date to the period 529–534.

[237] Krüger, editio maior, v–x (discussion) and LX–LXII (list) (German translation in Hillner, "Praefatio" (2010)).

[238] Dolezalek, Repertorium Manuscriptorum Veterum Codicis Iustiniani (1985), vol. 1; Tort-Martorell, Tradición textual del Codex Iustinianus (1989). Dolezalek has now produced a more wide-ranging and easily consultable online database of legal manuscripts, not just those of the Codex, "Manuscripta Juridica", available at: http://manuscripts.rg.mpg.de. However, much of this is more the digitization of his existing materials than substantial new research.

[239] Conte, Tres Libri (1990), 17–38, deals with the earliest witnesses, 123–149 with later but pre-Accursian manuscripts. His main interest focuses on the developing tradition of glosses.

[240] Radding and Ciaralli, "Corpus Iuris Civilis" (2000); Radding and Ciaralli, Corpus Iuris (2007).

[241] Abbreviations: CPL = R. Cavenaile, Corpus Papyrorum Latinarum (Wiesbaden, 1958); CLA = E. Lowe, Codices Latini Antiquiores, 11 vols. and supplement (Oxford, 1934–1971).

P. Oxy. XV 1814 (Fig. 1 below) (Amelotti and Migliardi Zingale, Costituzioni Giustinianee (1985), 17–23; CPL No. 101; CLA suppl. 1713). This lacunose papyrus contains an index of titles/constitutions for titles C. 1.11–16 = 2nd edn. 1.11 and 14–18. Krüger was aware of this text (published 1922), but died before he could emend any further Codex editions.[242] This fragment provides the fullest direct evidence for the shape of the first edition and how material was added, removed, replaced, or relocated between the two editions.[243]

P. Reinach Inv. 2219 (Amelotti and Migliardi Zingale, Costituzioni Giustinianee (1985), 24–26; CPL No. 100; CLA V 700). This highly fragmentary papyrus text contains part of C. 12.59.10–12.62.4. It seems likely to be from the first edition since it contains abbreviations banned under Const. Cordi 5.[244]

Second edition of 534: the Codex repetitae praelectionis

(a) The sixth-century witnesses

Colon. = Cologne, Best. 7050B (Fragmente B) 130 (Gundermann, "Das Kölner Fragment" (1890); Dolezalek, Repertorium (1985), I, 229; CLA VIII 1167). This is a parchment palimpsest fragment of C. 3.32.4–12, probably overwritten in the late seventh century in Italy. Although published in 1890, readings from it were not added by Krüger to his Codex edition until 1914. The fragment survived the collapse of the Cologne Historisches Archiv building in March 2009 with only slight damage, although it has not yet been repaired.[245]

PSI XIII 1347 (Amelotti and Migliardi Zingale, Costituzioni Giustinianee (1985), 27–31; CPL No. 99; CLA III 293). This fragmentary Egyptian papyrus of C. 7.16.41–7.17.1 was first published in 1953.

V = Verona Bibl. Cap. LXII(60) (Dolezalek, Repertorium (1985), I, 443; CLA IV 513). This is the famous palimpsest, containing extensive parts of Books 4–8 and 11–12 in their full original form, including the Greek constitutions, and fortified by contemporary scholia in Greek. Although written and then probably used in the east, it must have soon come west and was palimpsested in the eighth century in northern Italy. First identified in 1817, it was later published by Krüger in a fine apograph edition in 1874 (Fig. 2).[246] The contemporary Greek scholia were published separately by Zachariä von Lingenthal in 1850.[247]

[242] Krüger, "Neue juristische Funde" (1922). Krüger was able to make reference to P. Oxy. XV 1813 (parchment fragment of C.Th. 7.8; CPL No. 98; CLA II 211) in his Codex Theodosianus, fasc. 2 (1926), 250–251.

[243] See the recent discussions in Corcoran, "Justinian and His Two Codes" (2008); Corcoran, "Anastasius, Justinian" (2009).

[244] Corcoran, "After Krüger" (2009), 432.

[245] Information by e-mail from the Historisches Archiv, October 2013.

[246] Krüger, Fragmenta Veronensia (1874).

[247] Zachariä, "Die griechischen Scholien" (1850).

For the Codex the Veronensis has a paleographic primacy roughly comparable to the famous sixth-century Florentine manuscript of the Digest, but it is only fragmentary.

(b) Witnesses between the seventh and early eleventh centuries

No fragments of complete Codex manuscripts survive for this period. Such witnesses as exist are given here in approximate chronological order.

Greg. = Gregory the Great, Register XIII.49[50].[248] This item reflects not a sole manuscript, but a whole independent manuscript tradition of the Register of correspondence of Pope Gregory I (r. 590–604), which contains this letter from 603 quoting C 1.3.10, 1.12.2. 1.12.6, 7.44.3, 7.48.4, and 9.1.20. Not only was the pope's Register itself copied extensively (although no single manuscript of the whole survives and modern editions are reconstructions), but during the medieval period its contents were repeatedly recycled through canonical collections in a complex manner.[249] It is only vicariously from this papal letter that Hincmar of Rheims in the ninth century quotes the Codex verbatim, perhaps unwittingly.[250]

F = Munich, Bayerische Staatsbibl. Clm 6375 (originally from Fulda; Dolezalek, Repertorium (1985), I, 307; Glauche, Katalog (2011), 142–144). This fragment of the ninth or possibly the tenth century was apparently copied by mistake at the beginning of a manuscript of the Ecclesiastical History of Eusebius/Rufinus.[251] The extract contains C. 3.12.2–3.17.1, with headings and subscripts intact and the constitutions numbered in Greek. It is the only witness from the period 600–1000 that can be considered a proper Codex manuscript.

U = Leipzig, Universitätsbibl. 3493–4 (= Hänel 8–9) (previously at Udine = Utinensis for Krüger, editio maior, viiii; Kaiser, Die Epitome Iuliani (2004), 106–118; Kaiser, Authentizität und Geltung (2007), 7–13; Macino, Sulle tracce delle Istituzioni (2008), No. 3). This ninth-century manuscript contains mostly material relating to the Epitome of Julian, but also several constitutions from Book 7 of the Codex.[252]

[248] Editions: Hartmann, Registrum (1899), II, 414–418; Norberg, Registrum (1982), 1058–1064. Translation: Martyn, The Letters of Gregory the Great (2004), III, 863–866. Note that Krüger also uses "Greg." for the Codex Gregorianus.

[249] Something of this complexity can be seen in Kaiser, "Nachvergleichungen von Novellen- und Codexzitaten" (2008).

[250] For example, C. 7.44.3 in the Opusculum LV capitulorum at Patrologia Latina 126.429 = Schieffer, Die Streitschriften (2003), 295 (cf. Corcoran, "Hincmar" (2015), 138–139). Justinian's codified works do not seem to have been easily available in Francia at this time.

[251] Radding and Ciaralli, Corpus Iuris (2007), 51.

[252] Kaiser, Die Epitome Iuliani (2004), 111–112 and 373–374. Kaiser suggests this was a thematic collection of Codex texts on manumission already assembled in late antiquity.

Modena, Bibl. Cap. O I.4 (Patetta, "Contributi" (1891), 253–254; Russo, Tradizione manoscritta (1980), 73–74; Kaiser, Die Epitome Iuliani (2004), 606). This is a ninth-century canon law manuscript which quotes C. 9.16.1 and 4, with headings, but no subscripts. Note that Book 9 was not one of those excerpted for the next two collections below.

A = Lex Romana Canonice Compta in Paris, Bibl. Nat. Lat. 12448 (Mor, Lex Romana (1927); Kaiser, Die Epitome Iuliani (2004), 493–508, called by him Capitula legis Romanae). This work, preserved only in a manuscript dating from c. 900, is not of the Codex itself, but rather a miscellany of Roman law material arranged for ecclesiastical use in northern Italy in the mid-ninth century. Nonetheless, in a selection dominated by extensive material from the Institutes and the Epitome of Julian, it contains over 120 Codex texts taken from Books 2–8 only; that is, the private law books. It is an important early witness, especially as it cites book, title, and constitution numbers, and gives headings and subscripts. The standard edition was published by Mor in 1927. The Roman law material in the slightly later Collectio Anselmo Dedicata (CAD), known from several manuscripts,[253] derives almost entirely from the Lex Romana.[254]

Ambr. = Excerpta Bobiensia (Milan, Bibl. Ambrosiana G58 sup.) (Mor, "Bobbio, Pavia" (1925); Kaiser, Die Epitome Iuliani (2004), 523–533). This ecclesiastical miscellany (dubbed Regulae Ecclesiasticae by Kaiser) contains eighteen constitutions from Codex Books 1 and 3. It does not cite book or title derivations, but it does preserve both headings and subscripts to constitutions. It was only known to Krüger from a single ninth-century manuscript in Milan, upon which Mor's edition of 1925 was also based. A second manuscript is now known (Livorno, Bibl. Com. Labronica 40).[255] This work is unrelated to the Lex Romana Canonice Compta and the Collectio Anselmo Dedicata.[256]

Collectio Gaudenziana* = London, British Museum (now British Library) Add. Ms. 47676, previously at Holkham Hall, Norfolk (Gaudenzi, "Un' Antica Compilazione" (1886); Kaiser, Die Epitome Iuliani (2004), 655–846).[257] This is not a Codex manuscript, but a tenth-century miscellany of Roman and [253] Krüger only cites one manuscript of the CAD, Vercelli Bibl. Cap. 15 (=A[u]). No modern edition of the full Collectio exists, but the Roman law extracts were published by Russo, Tradizione manoscritta (1980).

[254] On the relationship of the Lex Romana to the CAD, see Kaiser, Die Epitome Iuliani (2004), 556–559; Radding and Ciaralli, Corpus Iuris (2007), 55–57; and the helpful tables in Russo, Tradizione manoscritta (1980), 251–265. Some Justinian texts are cited at CAD 3.21 only via Gregory the Great's letter (Russo, Tradizione (1980), 68–70 and 245–248).

[255] Kaiser, Die Epitome Iuliani (2004), 533–536.

[256] Kaiser, Die Epitome Iuliani (2004), 562–581; Radding and Ciaralli, Corpus Iuris (2007), 57–60.

[257] Note also Macino, Sulle tracce (2008), No. 5.

Visigothic legal material from southern Italy containing a handful of Codex constitutions from Books 1, 8, and 11, generally without headings or subscripts.[258]

Cesena, Bibl. Malatestiana S.XXI.5 (Bellettini et al., Biografia di un Manoscritto (2009)). This is a ninth-century manuscript of Isidore's Etymologies, containing later tenth- and eleventh-century scholia, including quotations from C. 11.48. Together with quotations from the same title in the Collectio Gaudenziana (above), these are unusual and early witnesses to texts from the last three books.[259]

S = Summa Perusina (Perugia, Bibl. Cap. 32) (facsimile: Crifò and Campolunghi, Adnotationes Codicum (2008); text: Patetta, Adnotationes Codicum (1900); Ciaralli and Longo, "Due contributi" (2001); Radding and Ciaralli, Corpus Iuris (2007), 69–70; Ciaralli, "Per le Adnotationes Codicum" (2010)). This is not a manuscript of the Codex itself, although closely reflecting one. It is a composite work marrying constitution headings to summaries, deriving from a probably antique copy of the Codex fortified with seventh-century Latin annotations and glosses. It is a key witness to the shape and content of the original Codex and to the headings of the constitutions. On occasion it does quote the Codex verbatim (e.g., 1.1.1 and 1.57.1). The manuscript contains several short gaps and it runs out in the middle of 8.53.8. The work was probably put together in its current form in the later tenth century, although this sole surviving manuscript is early eleventh century.[260] The Summa is quoted in documents and elsewhere in the late tenth and eleventh centuries, the latest known citation being in the short secular legal miscellany known as the Lectio legum preserved at the end of a Canon Law manuscript dating to 1059/1070 (Rome, Bibl. Vallicelliana B.32).[261] It is also quoted in another mid-eleventh-century manuscript, which also includes other Codex summaries and glosses (Vercelli, Bibl. Cap. 122).[262]

258 Gaudenzi, "Un' Antica Compilazione" (1886), 202 and 205–208; Kaiser, Die Epitome Iuliani (2004), 670–672 and 703–706; Kaiser, "Collectio Gaudenziana" (2015).

259 Bellettini et al., Biografia (2009), 45–46, argue against the idea of Conte, Tres Libri (1990), 27, that, because of the interest of its topic (coloni, i.e., tied tenants), title C. 11.48 came to be copied as a separate text.

260 Patetta, Adnotationes Codicum (1900); Ciaralli and Longo, "Due contributi" (2001); Radding and Ciaralli, Corpus Iuris (2007), 69–70.

261 Patetta, Adnotationes Codicum (1900), 294–296; Radding and Ciaralli, Corpus Iuris (2007), 72–73. Lectio legum 2 = Summa 8.4.7.

262 Patetta, Adnotationes Codicum (1900) 292–294; Dolezalek, Repertorium (1985), I, 441–442; Kaiser, Die Epitome Iuliani (2004), 122–132; Radding and Ciaralli, Corpus Iuris (2007), 69; Macino, Sulle tracce (2008), No. 6. The Summa passages are 5.71.1 and 4. Further Codex summaries are found among some Justinianic texts in another ecclesiastical collection of the later eleventh century (Rome, Bibl. Casanatense 2010 (B.V.17); Patetta, Adnotationes Codicum (1900), 291–292; Kaiser, Die Epitome Iuliani (2004), 621), but perhaps deriving from an earlier now incomplete manuscript also in Rome (Bibl. Vallicelliana T. XVIII; Kaiser, Die Epitome Iuliani (2004), 615–619).

(c) Fragments of eleventh-century complete Codex texts

These two sets of surviving folios of perhaps the third quarter of the eleventh century from Rome or southern Italy present complete sequences of constitutions with full headings and subscripts. This tradition was soon overwhelmed by the epitomizing trend of northern Italy and was never resurrected. These fragments were unknown to Krüger, only having been identified towards the end of the last century.

Rome, Biblioteca Vallicelliana Carte Vallicelliane XII.3. These two folios contain C. 7.64.2–9 and 7.71.8–7.72.6, respectively (published in Corcoran, "New Subscripts" (2009)). The constitutions are numbered with Roman numerals.

Würzburg, Universitätsbibl. M.p.j.f.m.2. These two folios contain C. 1.27.1–2 (published in Corcoran, "Würzburg Fragment" (2016)) and 2.43.3–2.51.2 (partially published in Corcoran, "After Krüger" (2009), 432–438). The constitutions are numbered with Greek numerals.

(d) Eleventh-/early twelfth-century "Epitome Codicis" manuscripts

There are five manuscripts usually considered as true Epitome manuscripts, of which only the first three were known to and used by Krüger.

P = Pistoia, Arch. Cap. 106 (Dolezalek, Repertorium (1985), I, 379; Ciaralli, "Ancora sul Manoscritto Pistoiese" (2000); Radding and Ciaralli, Corpus Iuris (2007), 87–90 and 143–147). This epitome manuscript, now dated to the mid-eleventh century, currently ends in the middle of Book 8, title 46. Many constitutions are added in the margins or pasted in on slips, attesting to its active use and expansion in the later eleventh century. Both headings and subscripts are extensively present. This is the key manuscript, and the earliest, for understanding the process of epitomizing and re-expansion of the Codex. Previously it was often dated to the tenth century.

L = Paris, Bibl. Nat. Lat. 4516 (Dolezalek, Repertorium (1985), I, 343; Radding and Ciaralli, Corpus Iuris (2007), 148–150). This manuscript was almost certainly copied from a still intact P (whereas Krüger thought it derived from a source in common with P), incorporating marginal/additional texts from the latter, and keeping full headings and subscripts. It ends with the opening title heading from Book 10, but does not actually contain any text from the final three books.

D = Darmstadt, Hessische Landes- und Hochschulbibl. 2000 (Dolezalek, Repertorium (1985), I, 185; Radding and Ciaralli, Corpus Iuris (2007), 150–151). This is slightly later in date than P, finishing in the middle of Book 9. The crossing-out of subscripts and their absence after Book 3 show the lack of interest in maintaining these features intact in the developing manuscript tradition.

Avranches, Bibliothèque municipale Ms 141 (Fig. 3) (plus a fragment in Ms 6) (Mor, "Il Manoscritto del Codice Giustinianeo" (1977); Dolezalek, Repertorium (1985), I, 121–123; Tort-Martorell, Tradición Textual (1989), 49–51). This early twelfth-century manuscript of Books 1–9, which also contains the Institutes, differs from most others of this period by being probably French rather than Italian. The headings are present, but almost no subscripts.

Pesaro, Bibl. Com. Oliveriana 26 (Dolezalek, Repertorium (1985), I, 379; Tort-Martorell, "En torno a Pesaro 26" (2008)). This early twelfth-century epitomized manuscript of Books 1–9 has most of the missing texts from the main sequence gathered into a supplementary appendix, although several folios of both main text and appendix are lost. Headings are present, but subscripts almost entirely absent.

The following are more fragmentary manuscripts representing Epitome-style texts, of which none was known to Krüger.

Bologna, Collegio di Spagna 73 (Dolezalek, Repertorium (1985), I, 171). This folio fragment from c. 1100 contains C. 7.40.1–7.43.2, with headings but no subscripts.

Rouen, Bibl. Mun. A.137 (Dolezalek, Repertorium (1985), I, 381–382; Conte, Tres Libri (1990), 25–26; Roumy, "Excerpta Rotomagensia" (2009)). This early twelfth-century manuscript appears to represent excerpts from an epitomized manuscript, although it generally ignores headings and subscripts. It is most notable for containing some limited material from the last three books, suggesting that these were not entirely ignored in the epitomizing process.

Stuttgart, Württembergische Landesbibl. Cod. fr. 62 (Dolezalek, Repertorium (1985), I, 392; Corcoran, "After Krüger" (2009), 438–439). This later eleventh-century folio fragment contains C. 4.20.12–4.21.11, with full headings but no subscripts.

Yale, Beinecke Ms 974 (Dolezalek and Ciaralli, "Epitome Beinecke" (2010)). This recently published eleventh-century folio, probably written in Rome or central Italy, contains parts of C. 1.14.5–1.18.3, with full headings, but few subscripts.

(e) Late eleventh-/early twelfth-century substantially restored Codex manuscripts

These manuscripts are generally full Latin versions of Books 1–9, but many still have missing and disordered constitutions bearing witness to the complex process of reintegration. Although I list these separately from those in the previous section, the distinction between Epitome and restored manuscripts should not be too sharply drawn.

The Berlin manuscripts: T, R, Q = Berlin, Staatsbibliothek Preußischer Kulturbesitz lat. fol. 272, 273, 275 (Dolezalek, Repertorium (1985), I, 148–166; Radding and Ciaralli, Corpus Iuris (2007), 158–166). These manuscripts conveniently in Berlin were extremely important for Krüger's work.[263] Each is of Books 1–9 and of the late eleventh or earlier twelfth century (perhaps in chronological order R, T, then Q), although differing somewhat in their degree of restoration, and showing the difficulties scribes must have faced trying to copy full Codex texts from complex source manuscripts.

C = Montecassino, Archivio dell'Abbazia 49 (Dolezalek, Repertorium (1985), I, 276–280). This is an early twelfth-century manuscript of Books 1–9, probably copied near Rome (Radding and Ciaralli, Corpus Iuris (2007), 165–166). It was used by Krüger also as an early witness for the introductory constitutions.

M = Montpellier, Bibliothèque universitaire, Ms H.82 (Dolezalek, Repertorium (1985), I, 281–291; Radding and Ciaralli, Corpus Iuris (2007), 163–165). This is an early twelfth-century manuscript of Books 1–9. It also contains a palimpsest fragment from Book 11.[264]

Vienna, Österreichische Nationalbibl. 2065 (Dolezalek, Repertorium (1985), I, 446–447). This is a fourteenth-century legal manuscript containing two folios of an early twelfth-century Codex with part of C. 5.8.1–5.9.6.

W = Vatican, Bibl. Vat. lat. 1427 (Dolezalek, Repertorium (1985), I, 431–434; Conte, Tres Libri (1990), 18–24). This is an early twelfth-century manuscript of Books 1–9 that unusually contains material from the beginning of Book 10. It is an early witness for the introductory constitutions and was so utilized by Krüger.

(f) Manuscripts of the Tres Libri

Aside from V (the Veronensis), as the only surviving manuscript of the full twelve-book Codex containing anything substantial from the last three books, four manuscripts were the chief early witnesses used by Krüger for Books 10–12. These are rather later in date than those used for the first nine books, since the Tres Libri became separated from the rest of the Codex and were copied instead with other Justinianic materials (Institutes, Authenticum). The two principal ones used were:

[263] A fourth Berlin manuscript, lat. fol. 274, was less significant, used only for C. 11.48, where it is U. See Conte, Tres Libri (1990), 26–28.

[264] Conte, Tres Libri (1990), 24–25.

K = Paris, Bibl. Nat. Lat. 4537 (late twelfth century; Conte, Tres Libri (1990), 137–138). As it survives, this manuscript contains the Tres Libri only, but probably originally included the Authenticum.

O = Oxford, Bodleian 3361 = Selden Arch. B 15 (later thirteenth century). This manuscript contains also the Institutes and the Authenticum. Although of all Codex manuscripts used by Krüger this is probably the latest in date, he chose it because its constitution headings were particularly complete.

In the second rank Krüger used two other manuscripts:

I = Vienna, Österreichische Nationalbibl. 2130 (c. 1200; Conte, Tres Libri (1990), 143–146). This manuscript contains also the Institutes and Authenticum. For the latter it is an important early witness, as it contains a larger selection of the Novels than became standard in the Vulgate tradition.[265]

X = Oxford, Oriel College 22 (previously A.2.7) (thirteenth century; Conte, Tres Libri (1990), 132–133; Loschiavo, "Verso la costruzione" (2014)). The Tres Libri seem to have been copied into this manuscript about half a century after the rest of its contents (the Institutes, the Authenticum, the Epitome of Julian). Krüger used X where O was deficient, but it is cited only in the editio maior.

(g) Other miscellaneous Codex manuscripts

The uneven evidence for the Codex means that numerous manuscripts were used by Krüger sometimes only for limited portions of his text, for which they were particularly early or rare witnesses, especially where other key manuscripts were lacunose. Examples are:

E = Leipzig, Universitätsbibl. 883 (Dolezalek, Repertorium (1985), 1, 232–240). This mid-twelfth-century manuscript (Radding and Ciaralli, "Corpus Iuris Civilis" (2000), 303) was used by Krüger to supplement a lacuna in M in title C. 4.63. This manuscript also carries on beyond Book 9 to give a few constitutions from early titles of Book 10.[266]

N = Paris, BN Par. Lat. 16910 (Dolezalek, Repertorium (1985), 1, 375–376). This manuscript of the first half of the twelfth century was used by Krüger to supplement the lacunose R for the first titles of Book 5 (1–17).

[265] Loschiavo "La Riscoperta dell'Authenticum" (2011), 137–139, lists the key manuscripts for the Authenticum, where he dates this Vienna manuscript to the mid-twelfth century.

[266] Conte, Tres Libri (1990), 26–28.

U = Vercelli, Bibl. Cap. 127 (Dolezalek, Repertorium (1985), I, 442–443; twelfth century). This was used for the introductory constitutions, Const. Haec, Summa, and Cordi.

Y = Bamberg, Staatsbibl. Jur. 22 (previously D I 5) (Dolezalek, Repertorium (1985), I, 138–139; thirteenth century). This was used for the notitiae to C. 1.27.1–2.

(h) Some eleventh-century quotations

By the later eleventh century, citations and quotations from the Codex in other works of Roman, Lombard, or Canon law, or in documents become very common.[267] Most of these are not important for the text of the Codex, and may indeed be at several removes from contact with an actual copy of it. However, a few are significant enough to deserve mention:

Montecassino, Archivio dell'Abbazia Comp. XI Jur. 1 (Dolezalek, Repertorium (1985), I, 280; Radding and Ciaralli, Corpus Iuris (2007), 86; Macino, Sulle tracce (2008), No. 9). These are mid-eleventh-century (or possibly earlier) fragments of the Institutes, containing also C. 2.4.21 and 23–24 written in the margins, with headings, but no subscripts.

Rome, Bibl. Vallicelliana F. 54 (Patetta, "Contributi" (1891), 249–253). This is a canon law collection which contains four constitutions (C. 1.2.23, 7.38.1–3), with headings and subscripts, including the otherwise unknown subscript for C. 7.38.1, first added by Krüger to the 6th edition of the editio minor of 1895.

Bamberg, Staatsbibliothek Jur. 2 (Dolezalek, Repertorium (1985), I, 123; Radding and Ciaralli, Corpus Iuris (2007), 86; Macino, Sulle trace (2008), No. 12). This manuscript from c. 1100 is of the Institutes, which are followed by a single Codex constitution, C. 9.13.1. This constitution seems to have traveled with some Institutes texts, as it is similarly attested in half-a-dozen other manuscripts up to at least the thirteenth century,[268] including
I = Paris Bibl. Nat. Lat. 4421 (twelfth century; Macino, Sulle tracce (2008), No. 13; Radding and Ciaralli, Corpus Iuris (2007), 22), which Krüger cited as a witness for the text of that constitution.

[267] See n. 114, above.

[268] Dolezalek, Repertorium (1985), I, 81. Further details: Bamberg, SB Jur. 4 (Dolezalek, Repertorium (1985), I, 123); Brussels, Bibl. Royale de Belgique IV.384 (Macino, Sulle tracce (2008), No. 15); Florence. Bibl. Laur. Ashburnam 1560 (Dolezalek, Repertorium (1985), I, 191; Macino, Sulle tracce (2008), No. 21); Warsaw, Bibl. Uniw. 2 (earlier 223) (Macino, Sulle tracce (2008), No. 18). Oxford, Bodleian D'Orville 94 is the latest of the manuscripts. Paris and Brussels each contains a small selection of further Codex constitutions (Macino, Sulle tracce (2008) Nos. 89 and 116).

(i) Greek texts

For the Greek texts there are no direct Codex manuscripts aside from V, so that use has to be made of more indirect Byzantine sources. Although the amount and variety of useful Byzantine materials are very great, among these there are four key works which Krüger used:[269]

B and BΣ = The Basilika and their Scholia: these are a recompilation of all the Justinianic materials in their Greek versions, started under Basil I[270] and completed by Leo VI in sixty books, c. 900. Krüger had recourse to the edition of Heimbach (1833–1870), which includes also the numerous scholia. Few verbatim Codex texts are transmitted by this route, the Basilika being rather a rich source of the summaries printed by Krüger. However, one manuscript is significant in containing much intact material taken from Codex Book 1 (Paris, Bibl. Nat. Coislinianus 151).

Coll. = The Collection of 25 Chapters (Collectio XXV Capitulorum): this sixth-century collection consists mostly of intact versions of twenty-one constitutions taken from the first four titles of the first book of the Codex.[271] Krüger did consult manuscripts of this work himself.

Const. (and Parat.) = Constitutionum ecclesiasticarum collectio (and its Paratitla): this late sixth-century work, generally referred to today as the Collectio Tripartita, consists of summaries of Justinianic legal material relating to religious matters.[272] Part 2 covers items from the Institutes and Digest, and Part 3 the Novels. Part 1 comprises a précis of the first thirteen titles of Book 1 of the Codex, giving summaries of the constitutions in their original sequence. Numerous paratitla (marginalia with cross-references) provide much additional information, and often quote the exact opening word of a constitution, even when it is in Latin. Krüger consulted manuscripts of this work himself.

Nomoc. = the Nomocanon in 14 Titles (Nomocanon XIV Titulorum). Nomocanons are Byzantine legal works which combine secular and ecclesiastical legislation, of which the Nomocanon in 14 Titles was perhaps the most important, and much Justinianic legislation was recycled through it. It went through several editions, and its transmission history remains complex and difficult to unpick.[273] Krüger consulted several relevant manuscripts himself.

[269] Krüger, editio maior, x.

[270] For a recent attempt to unpick how Basil's precursor version(s) differed from that of his son, Leo, see now van Bochove, "Preluding the Basilica" (2014).

[271] Troianos, "Byzantine Canon Law" (2012), 132–133. The standard edition is still that of 1840 by Heimbach in ANEKDOTA II (1840), 145–201.

[272] Troianos, "Byzantine Canon Law" (2012), 135–136. There is an excellent edition published by van der Wal and Stolte, Collectio Tripartita (1994).

[273] Troianos, "Byzantine Canon Law" (2012), 138–141. The standard edition, not entirely easy to use, is still that of 1868 by Pitra, Juris Ecclesiastici II (1868), 433–640.

(j) Printed editions

Finally, some of the early printed editions contain readings otherwise unattested and deriving from now lost manuscript witnesses. Apart from the classic edition by Haloander (Nuremberg, 1530), other key editions used by Krüger were those of Miraeus (Paris, 1550), Russardus (Lyon, 1561), and Contius (Paris, 1562 [Fig. 5] and later editions).[274]

Addendum. A strip from a leaf of an eleventh-century Codex manuscript in late Caroline minuscule was sold at auction by Dreweatts and Bloomsbury in London in July 2015, and is now in a private collection also in London. The owner has kindly supplied me with images. The strip comprises two adjoining fragments, containing C. 8.35.5-7 (recto) and 8.36.3-5 (verso), with subsequent twelfth-century additions, notably the authentica deriving from Nov. 112 in the margin adjacent to 8.36.3, but also typical interlinear and marginal legal glosses, including citations of the Digest. The text contains complete sequences of constitutions with subscripts, except for the lost Greek of 8.36.4, but is not written in a typical southern script. Therefore it would seem to represent a rather early restored form of the Codex from northern Italy or France, assignable to the late eleventh century. It provides the sole manuscript witness for Viminacium as the place of posting for C. 8.35.6, otherwise known only from Haloander's edition, and possibly a more correct diurnal date for C. 8.36.4 (xvi k. Ian = 17 Dec. 501).

[274] Krüger, Kritik (1867), 18–32; editio maior, XI–XIII. See also pages cxxxi–cxxxii above.

Figure 1. The first edition. P. Oxy. XV 1814, verso (c.530). Fragmentary papyrus with title rubrics and constitution headings from Book One of the first edition of the Codex (C¹. 1.12.10-1.16.11).

χωρις,συγγενειας,απασης,τελευτω̄
των,μονους,τον,πατρωνα,και,την,πα τρωνισσαν,τους,τε,αυτων,υιους,και θυγατερας,καλεισθαι,και,μεχρι,τουτου ταυτην,ιστασθαι,την,διαθηκην,ουκ,α πελευθερικης,της,κλησεως,αυτοις αλλ,εκ,της,παρουσης,ημων,διαταξε ως,διδομενης,κακεινο,δε,τω,νομω προσθειναι,καλον,τε,και,αναγκαιον ωηθημεν,ωσει ... φαιη,τους,ελευθε ρωτας,αποκληρονομων,ποιησασθαι τους,εαυτων,παιδας,και,μηδεν,αυ τοις,της,εαυτων,περιουσιας,καταλι πειν,μη,δυνηθηναι,τε,εαυτους,μα την,υβρισμενους,αποδειξαι,μητε τουτους,εξειν,κατα,των,διαθηκω̄ των,απελευθερων,πατρωνικα,δι καια,αδιαθετων,μεντοι,και,απαιδω̄ τελευτωντων,των,απελευθερων κακεινους,ισως,μεν,ουκ,αξιως,δια φιλανθρωπιαν,δε,ομως,καλουμε̄ και,μαλιστα,επει,παρα,παντα,τον,ημε τερον,νομον,προς,την,φυσιν,ηρμο σαμεν,σωζεσθαι,γε,μην,και,τουτω̄ υπεξουσιων,η,την,υπεξουσιαν,εχο̄ τι,και,τουτον,η,ταυτην,ελευθερωκο τι,το,πατρωνικον,δικαιον,οπερ,και προσθεν,ειχεν,θεσπιζομεν,οπως ει,αδιαθετος,και,απαις,ο,ελευθερω θεις,τελευτησειεν,η,γραψας,εξωτι κους,κληρονομους,η,εις,το,παν,εξα διαθετου,η,προς,το,τετραουγκιον,κα τα,της,διαθηκης,ο,ελευθερωσας,κλη θειη,ως,αν,ει,δοκουσης,contracta fiducia,της,emancipationis,γε γενησθαι,ταυτα,μεν,τοι,κρατειν,επι των,την,ελευθεριαν,επιθεντων θεσπιζομεν,ους,δη,και,μονους,χρη σθαι,τη,του,πατρωνος,προσηγορια συγχωρουμεν,τους,γαρ,δη,κατα,τι να,περινοιαν,νομισθεντας,εν,τοις παλαιοις,βιβλιοις,πατρωνας,ειναι,κ, τοι,γε,ουκ,ελευθερωσαντας,οποιο̄ δητον,ελεγξαντα,την,συμπαιγνιᾱ του,απελευθερου,τον,ουκ,οντα,με τα,γε,αληθειας,πατρωνα,εξωνδε,ωμο σεν,ψευδως,πειρωμενον,εαυτω πατρωνικα,περιτιθεναι,δικαια ει,και,τις,ολως,ετερος,τοιουτος,εν τοις,βιβλιοις,εστιν,τουτον,παντε

XXXII ΛΒ'

λως,παντος,κερδους,εκ,πατρωνικου δικαιου,χωριζομεν,ην,αυτω,την,ρε βερεντιαν,φυλαττεσθαι,παρα,των τοιουτων,δηθεν,απελευθερων,συγ χωρουντες,εκεινους,ειναι,μονους πατρωνας,ταις,αληθειαις,κρινοντες οσοι,ταις,αληθειαις,την,ελευθεριαν επιτιθεασιν,τα,αυτα,δε,δικαια,διδο μεν,και,τοις,κατιουσιν,και,τη,λοιπη φαμιλια,των,εν,διαθηκαις,η,τελευ ταιαις,ολως,βουλησεσιν,ελευθερω σαντων,τινας,κατα,των,καλουμε νων,ορκινων,απελευθερων,ως, αν,ει,παρ,αυτων,τουτων,ηλευθερω μενων pp · k · dec · cp · p · post · ss · lamp · et · or · uu · cc ·

℟ SIINFRAVDEPATRONI ALIENATIOFACTASIT ℟

α Impp · dioclet · et max · aa · et cc · claudio ;
Si,in,fraudem,patroni,libertus,ali quid,alienauerit,quatenus,legiti ma,pars,deminuta,est,reuocandi, tributam,conuenit,esse,potesta tem ; s · xv · kal · noembr · sirmi · cc · css ·

β Id · aa · et cc · iuliae ; defuncto,quidem liberto,patronus,intestato,succe dens,per,actionem,caluisianam,in,ei us,fraudem,alienata,reuocare potest,uerum,cum,patronum,post liberti,sui,mortem,ab,eo,fundo,col latam,donationem,habuisse,ra tam,adseueras,manumissoris factum,infirmare,successores eius,minime,possunt ; s · uiii · k · ian · sirmi cc · css ·

℟ DEOBSEQVVMPATRONIS PRAESTAND.S

α Imp · alex · a · zωtico ; contra pa tronum,tuum,famosam,actio nem,instituere,non,potes ; pp · prid · id · mai · max · iiet · ael · css ·

β Id · a · leontogono ; libertae,quae,uo luntate,patroni,aut,iure,nuptae sunt,non,coguntur,officium,pa tronis,suis,praestare ; pp · xiiii k ·

Figure 2. The second edition. Page from the printed version (1874) of Krüger's apograph of the sixth-century Verona palimpsest, containing C. 6.4.4.23-6.6.2, showing text in Greek and Latin with full constitution headings and subscripts.

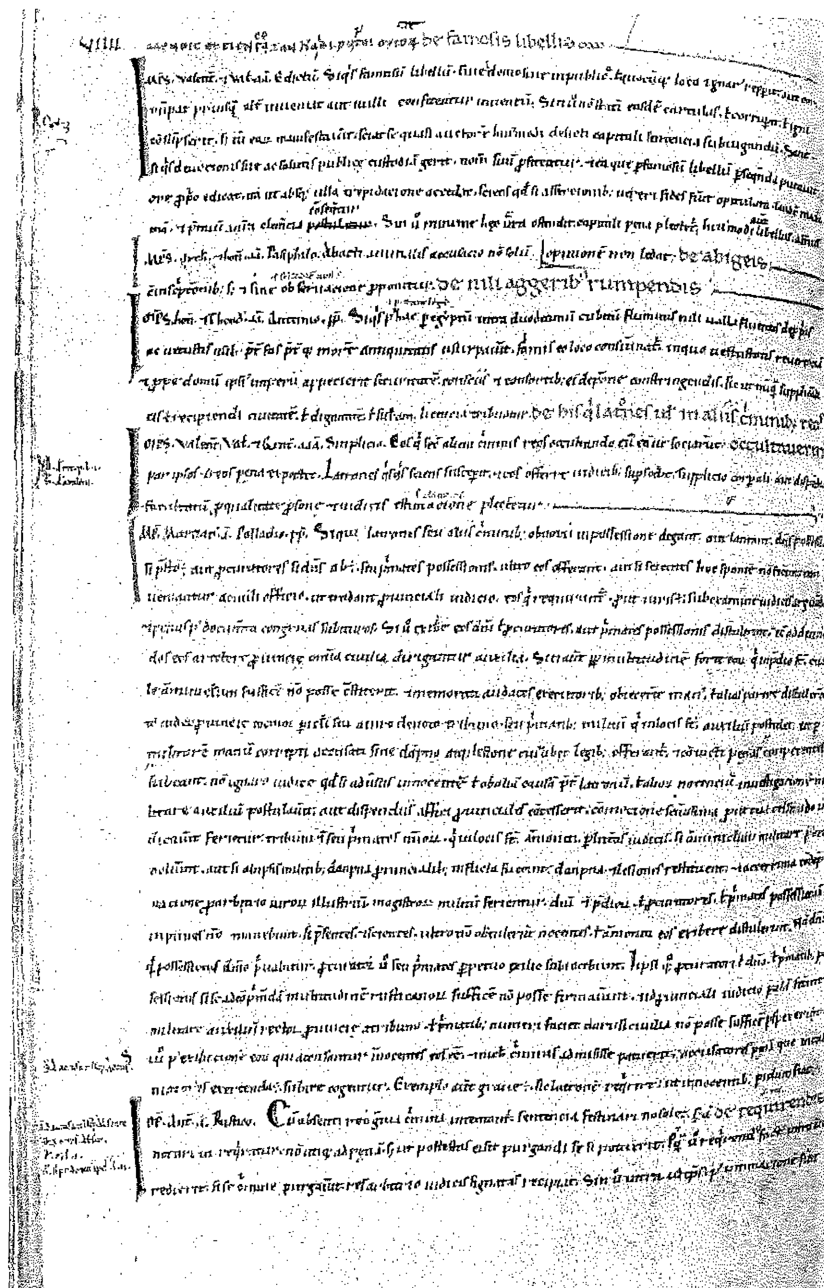

Figure 3. The 'Epitome'. Avranches Ms 141, f. 186ᵛ (early twelfth century). Page from a Codex 'epitome'-style manuscript, containing C. 9.36.1–9.40.1, with rubricated titles, headings to constitutions but no subscripts, and with some marginal and interlinear glosses. There is a strange attempt to copy Greek at the top left.

Figure 4. The Vulgate. Miami University, Ohio, KJA1192.22.D47 1300z (c.1300). A page from a medieval Vulgate of the Codex, containing C. 7.7.2.7b–7.8.5, illuminated with rubricated titles, attentuated headings, and no subscripts, surrounded on all sides by the gloss.

Codicis lib.I. Tit. II.

τοῦ αὐτοῦ ὀνόματος ἐν ἐκείνῃ τῇ πόλει ἢ τῇ περιοικίδι εὑρεθείη πολλὰ καθεστῶτα, εἰ μὲν ἔν τινι τούτων συχνῶς ὁ τελευτήσας ἐφοίτα καί τινα πρὸς αὐτὸ μείζονα εἶχε προσπάθειαν, ἐκεῖνο δοκεῖν καταλελεῖφθαι τὸ πρεσβεῖον. εἰ δὲ οὐδὲν τοιοῦτον εὑρεθείη, μᾶλλον ἐκ τῶν τοῦ αὐτοῦ ὀνόματος ἐνδεεστέρῳ οἴκῳ καὶ δεομένῳ βοηθείας τυχεῖν δοκεῖ τὸ τοιοῦτον καταλελεῖφθαι πρεσβεῖον, ἤτοι τὴν κληρονομίαν. Dat. XIII. Kal. Nouemb. C.P. Lāpa. & Orest. v v. c c. Cons.

Eadem constitutio latinè reddita per Anto. Contium.

QVoniam in plerisque nuper testamentis inuenimus eiusmodi institutiones quibus ex asse quis scripserat Dominū nostrū Iesum Christū heredē nō adiiciens oratorium aut templum vllum, aut ipsum Dominum Iesum Christum ex semisse vel aliis inæqualibus partibus, alium vero quempiam ex dimidia vel alia portione, Iam enim in complura huiusmodi testamenta incidimus, cum videremus multam exinde incertitudinem secundum veteres leges exoriri, Nos hoc etiam emendantes sancimus, si quidem dominum nostrum Iesum Christum scripsit quis heredem vel ex asse vel pro parte, manifeste videri ipsius ciuitatis vel castelli vel agri in quo constitutus erat defunctus, ecclesiam sanctissimam institutam esse heredem, & hereditatem peti debere per Deo amātissimos ei⁹ œconomos ex asse vel pro parte ex qua heres institutus est, eodem obtinente & si legatum vel fideicommissum relictum sit, vt ipsa competant sanctissimis ecclesiis ad hoc quidem vt ad pauperum alimoniam conferant. Si vero vnius ex archāgelis meminerit, vel venerandorum martyrum, nulla facta ædis mētione (quod quidē etiam nouimus à quodam factum qui ex illustribus erat, & in omni verborum & legum doctrina spectatissimus) si quidem aliquis sit in illa ciuitate vel vicinia eius venerabilis locus in honorem illius reuerentissimi archangeli, vel martyris constructus, videri ipsum scriptum esse heredem. si vero nullus talis locus est in illa ciuitate viciniave eius, tunc venerabilia loca quæ in metropoli eius sunt videri instituta, & si quidem in ipsa metropoli inuentus fuerit talis aliquis locus, illi proculdubio videri relictam vel hereditatem vel legatum vel fideicommissum. Si vero illic nullus talis locus apparet, denuo ecclesias quæ in illo loco sunt, capere id debere. Sane sanctissimis ecclesiis omnes aliæ domus cedunt, nisi constet defunctum aliud nomen sensisse & voluisse adiicere, & aliud dixisse dixisse. nam tale quid accidisse & nos scimus in cuiusdam Pontici testamento, & tunc etiam constitutum fuisse vt contra scriptum veritas obtineret. Si autem testator certum locum non apposuerit, multa autem templa eiusdem tituli aut nominis in illa ciuitate inuenta fuerunt vel eius vicinia, si quidem in aliquo illorum defunctus frequenter versabatur, & maiorē erga illud habebat affectionem, illi templo videri legatum relictum. Si vero nihil tale inuenietur, maxime ei templo ex multis eiusdem nominis videatur relictum legatum vel hereditas, quod est cæteris indigentius, & magis opis & eleemosynæ egens. Dat. XIII. Kal. Nou. C P. Lampad. & Orest. v v. c c. Conss.

De sacrosanctis ecclesiis &c. 16

XVII. Imp. IVSTINIANVS. A. Mennæ. PP.

ILlud, quod ex veteribus legibus, licet obscurè positis, à quibusdam attentabatur, vt donationes super piis caussis factæ, licet minus in actis intimatæ essent, tamen valerent: certo & dilucido iure taxamus, vt in aliis quidem casibus iura vetera super intimādis donationibus intacta maneant. Si quis verò donationes vsque ad quingentos solidos in quibuscunque rebus fecerit, vel in sanctam ecclesiam, vel in xenodochium, vel in nosocomium, vel in orphanotrophium, vel in ptochotrophium, vel in gerontocomiū, [vel in curotrophium, vel in brephotrophium] vel in ipsos pauperes, vel in quamcunque ciuitatem: istæ donationes etiam citra actorum confectionem conualescant. Sin verò amplioris quantitatis donatio sit (excepta scilicet imperiali donatione) nō aliter valeat, nisi actis intimata fuerit: nulli danda licentia, quacunque alia caussa quasi pietatis iure subnixa, præter eas, quas specialiter exposuimus, introducenda, veterum scita super intimandis donationibus permutare.*

Inclusa desunt in manuscrip.

 Data videtur Iustiniano A. II. Cons.*

Res mobiles etiam sacræ non possunt alienari vel pignorari, nisi in redemptionem captiuorum, vel si debitum vrget quod aliunde solui non valet, & alteri ecclesiæ tantum: aliàs vindicantur extantes, & consumptarum æstimatio condicitur. Salyc.

XVIII. Idem A. Demostheni. P.P.

SAncimus, nemini licere sacratissima atque arcana vasa, vel vestem, cæteráque donaria quæ ad diuinam religionem necessaria sunt: quum etiam veteres leges ea quæ iuris diuini sunt, humanis nexibus non illigari sanxerint, vel ad venditionem, vel hypothecam, vel pignus trahere: sed ab iis qui hæc suscipere ausi fuerint, modis omnibus vindicari, tam per

Figure 5. Renaissance restoration 1. Two pages from Contius' twelve-book edition (Paris, 1562), including part of a restored Greek constitution with his own translation (showing C.1.2.25, 19, 21).

215 Codicis Lib. III. Tit. XIII. 216

DE IVRISDICTIONE OMNIVM iudicum, & de foro competenti.

TIT. XIII.

Figure 6. Renaissance restoration 2. A posthumous edition of Gothofredus in twelve books (Geneva, 1626), Latin only, still with extensive marginal gloss (showing C. 3.12.5(6)–3.13.2).

Bibliography

Althoff, Gerd (2003). Otto III.

Amelotti, Mario and Livia Migliardi Zingale (1985). Le Costituzioni Giustinianee nei Papiri e nelle Epigrafi, 2nd edn., Legum Iustiniani Imperatoris Vocabularium, Subsidia I.

Ammirati, Serena (2010). "Per una Storia del Libro Latino Antico: Osservazioni Paleografiche, Bibliologiche e Codicologiche sui Manoscritti Latini di Argomento Legale dalle Origini alla Tarda Antichità," Journal of Juristic Papyrology 40: 55–110.

(2012). "The Latin Book of Legal Content: A Significant Type in the History of the Ancient Book," in Paul Schubert (ed.), Actes du 26e Congrès international de papyrologie Genève, 16–21 août 2010, 19–25.

Avotins, Ivars (1989). On the Greek of the Code of Justinian: A Supplement to Liddell-Scott-Jones together with Observations on the Influence of Latin on Legal Greek.

Barker, Nicholas (1993). "Antonio Agustín's Letter to Diego Hurtado de Mendoza," in Michael Crawford (ed.), Antonio Agustín Between Renaissance and Counter-Reform, 21–29 (with 265–277) (Latin text, ed. Crawford).

Barnes, Timothy D. (1982). The New Empire of Diocletian and Constantine.

(1993). Athanasius and Constantius: Theology and Politics in the Constantinian Empire.

(2005). "Damascus or Demessus?" Zeitschrift für Papyrologie und Epigraphik 151: 266–268.

Barton, John L. (1971). Roman Law in England.

Bauman, Richard A. (1980). "The Leges Publicorum Iudiciorum and their Interpretation in the Republic, Principate and Later Empire," in Aufstieg und Niedergang der Römischen Welt, II.13, 103–233.

Behrends, Okko et al. (eds.) (1990–). Corpus Iuris Civilis: Text und Übersetzung (5 vols. to date, covering the Institutes and the Digest as far as Book 34, but ongoing).

Bellettini, Anna, Paola Errani, Marco Palma, and Filippo Ronconi (eds.) (2009). Biografia di un Manoscritto: L'Isidoro Malatestiano S.XXI.5.

Bellomo, Manlio (1995). The Common Legal Past of Europe, 1000–1800, trans. Lydia G. Cochrane.
Benericetti, Ruggero (2002). Le Carte del Decimo Secolo nell'Archivio Arcivescovile di Ravenna, vol. 3.
Berger, Adolf (1953). Encyclopedic Dictionary of Roman Law.
Bezemer, Kees (2005). Pierre de Belleperche: Portrait of a Legal Puritan.
Bianchini, Mariagrazia (1999). "La Subscriptio nelle Leges Giustinianee del 30 ottobre 529," in Mariagrazia Bianchini and Gloria Viarengo (eds.), Studi in Onore di Franca De Marini Avonzo, 47–54.
Biener, Friedrich August and Karl Wilhelm Ernst Heimbach (1833). Beiträge zur Revision des Justinianischen Codex.
Bluhme, Friedrich (1827). Iter Italicum, vol. 2.
Blume, Fred H. (n.d.). Annotated Justinian Code, 2nd edn. by Timothy Kearley, available online at: www.uwyo.edu/lawlib/blume-justinian/ajc-edition-2/index.html.
Blumenthal, Ute-Renate (2012). "The Collectio Canonum Caesaraugustana and Roman Legal Sources," in Ute-Renate Blumenthal et al. (eds.), Canon Law, Religion and Politics. Liber Amicorum Robert Somerville, 15–27.
Bochove, Thomas E. van (1996). To Date and Not To Date: On the Date and Status of Byzantine Law Books.
(2014). "Preluding the Basilica, But How? The Final Paragraph of the Preface to the Prochiron Reconsidered," Subseciva Groningana IX: 267–318.
Bowersock, Glen W. (2007). Lorenzo Valla: On the Donation of Constantine.
Briguglio, Filippo (2012). Il Codice Veronese in Trasparenza: Genesi e Formazione del Testo delle Istituzioni di Gaio.
Brock, Sebastian and Brian Fitzgerald (2013). Two Early Lives of Severos, Patriarch of Antioch, Translated Texts for Historians 59.
Broggini, Gerardo (ed.) (1969). Index Interpolationum Quae in Iustiniani Codice Inesse Dicuntur.
Brown, Thomas S. (2008). "Byzantine Italy (680–876)," in Jonathan Shepard (ed.), The Cambridge History of the Byzantine Empire, c. 500–1492, 433–464.
Brubaker, Leslie and John Haldon (2001). Byzantium in the Iconoclast Era (c. 680–850): The Sources: An Annotated Survey.
Brundage, James A. (2008). The Medieval Origins of the Legal Profession: Canonists, Civilians, and Courts.
Buckland, William W. (1932). "Review of Scott," Tulane Law Review 7: 627–632.
Burgmann, Ludwig (1983). Ecloga: das Gesetzbuch Leons III. und Konstantinos' V.
Cairns, John W. and Paul J. du Plessis (eds.) (2010).The Creation of the "Ius Commune": From "Casus" to "Regula".
Cameron, Averil (2000). "Justin I and Justinian," in Averil Cameron et al. (eds.), The Cambridge Ancient History, vol. XIV: Late Antiquity: Empire and Successors, A.D. 425–600, 63–85.

Canepa, Matthew P. (2009). The Two Eyes of the Earth: Art and Ritual of Kingship Between Rome and Sasanian Iran.

Charles-Edwards, Thomas M. (2000). "Law in the Western Kingdoms between the Fifth and Seventh Century," in Averil Cameron et al. (eds.), The Cambridge Ancient History, vol. XIV: Late Antiquity: Empire and Successors, A.D. 425–600, 260–287.

Ciaralli, Antonio (2000). "Ancora sul Manoscritto Pistoiese del Codex (Arch. Cap. C 106). Note Paleografiche e Codicologiche," Scrittura e Civiltà 24: 173–226.

(2010). "Per le Adnotationes Codicum Domini Iustiniani (Summa Perusina), Perugia, Bibl. dell'Archivio Capitolare, MS. 32," Studia et Documenta Historiae et Iuris 76: 861–869.

Ciaralli, Antonio and Valentina Longo (2001). "Due contributi a un riesame della Summa Perusina (Perugia, Bibl. Cap. ms 32)," Scrittura e Civiltà 25: 1–62.

Clauss, Manfred (1980). Der Magister Officiorum in der Spätantike (4.–6. Jahrhundert).

Coleman-Norton, Paul R. (1966). Roman State and Christian Church: A Collection of Legal Documents to A.D. 535, 3 vols.

Connolly, Serena (2010). "Constantine Answers the Veterans," in Scott McGill et al. (eds.), From the Tetrarchs to the Theodosians: Later Roman History and Culture, 284–450 CE, 93–114.

(2010). Lives Behind the Laws: The World of the Codex Hermogenianus.

Conrat, Max (1891). Geschichte der Quellen und Literatur des Römischen Rechts im Frühen Mittelalter.

Conte, Emanuele (1990).Tres Libri Codicis: La Ricomparsa del Testo e l'Esegesi Scolastica Prima di Accursio.

(1996). Servi Medievali: Dinamiche del Diritto Commune.

(2009). "Roman Law vs Custom in a Changing Society: Italy in the Twelfth and Thirteenth Centuries," in Per Andersen and Mia Münster-Swendsen (eds.), Custom: The Development and Use of a Legal Concept in the Middle Ages, Carlsberg Conference 5, 33–49.

Conte, Emanuele and Sara Menzinger (eds.) (2012). La Summa Trium Librorum di Rolando da Lucca (1195–1234): Fisco, politico, scientia iuris.

Copeland, Rita and Ineke Sluiter (eds.) (2009). Medieval Grammar and Rhetoric: Language, Arts and Literary Theory, AD 300–1475.

Copenhaver, Brian and Lodi Nauta (2012). Lorenzo Valla: Dialectical Disputations, 2 vols.

Corcoran, Simon (1993). "Hidden from History: The Legislation of Licinius," in Jill Harries and Ian N. Wood (eds.), The Theodosian Code: Studies in the Imperial Law of Late Antiquity, 97–119 (repr. 2010).

(2000). The Empire of the Tetrarchs: Imperial Pronouncements and Government AD 284–324, rev. edn.

(2000). "The Sins of the Fathers: A Neglected Constitution of Diocletian on Incest," Journal of Legal History 21(2): 1–34.
(2006). "The Tetrarchy: Policy and Image as Reflected in Imperial Pronouncements," in Dietrich Boschung and Werner Eck (eds.), Die Tetrarchie: Ein Neues Regierungssystem und Seine Mediale Präsentation, 31–61.
(2007). "Galerius's Jigsaw Puzzle: The Caesariani Dossier," Antiquité Tardive 15: 221–250.
(2008). "Justinian and His Two Codes: Revisiting P. Oxy. 1814," Journal of Juristic Papyrology 38: 73–111.
(2009). "After Krüger: Observations on Some Additional or Revised Justinian Code Headings and Subscripts," Zeitschrift der Savigny-Stiftung für Rechtsgeschichte. Romanistiche Abteilung 126: 423–439.
(2009). "Anastasius, Justinian and the Pagans: A Tale of Two Law Codes and a Papyrus," Journal of Late Antiquity 2: 183–208.
(2009). "New Subscripts for Old Rescripts: The Vallicelliana Fragments of Justinian Code Book VII," Zeitschrift der Savigny-Stiftung für Rechtsgeschichte: Romanistische Abteilung 126: 401–422.
(2011). "'Softly and Suddenly Vanished Away': The Junian Latins from Caracalla to the Carolingians," in Karlheinz Muscheler (ed.), Römische Jurisprudenz – Dogmatik, Überlieferung, Rezeption: Festschrift für Detlef Liebs zum 75. Geburtstag, 129–152.
(2013). "The Gregorianus and Hermogenianus Assembled and Shattered," Mélanges de l'École Française de Rome: Antiquité 125-2: 285–304 [http://mefra.revues.org/1772].
(2014). "State Correspondence in the Roman Empire. Imperial Communication from Augustus to Justinian," in Karen Radner (ed.), State Correspondence in the Ancient World from New Kingdom Egypt to the Roman Empire, 172–209.
(2015). "Hincmar and His Roman Legal Sources," in Rachel Stone and Charles West (eds.), Hincmar of Rheims. Life and Work, 129–155.
(2015). "The Augusti and Caesars Say': Imperial Communication in a Collegiate Monarchy," in Stefan Procházka et al. (eds.), Official Epistolography and the Language(s) of Power. Proceedings of the Ist International Conference of the NFN Imperium and Officium, Papyrologica Vindobonensia 8, 219–236.
(2016). "The Würzburg Fragment of Justinian's Constitutions for the Administration of Recovered Africa," in Christel Freu et al. (eds.), Libera curiositas. Mélanges d' histoire romaine et d'Antiquité tardive offerts à Jean-Michel Carrié, Bibliothèque de l' Antiquité Tardive 31, 96–113.
Corcoran, Simon and Benet Salway (2012). "Fragmenta Londiniensia Anteiustiniana: Preliminary Observations," Roman Legal Tradition 8: 63–83.
Crawford, Michael (ed.) (1996). Roman Statutes, 2 vols.

Crifò, Giuliano and Maria Campolunghi (2008). Adnotationes Codicum Domini Justiniani (Summa Perusina), Florence (facsimile of manuscript, along with a re-publication of the edition by Federico Patetta, 1900).

Crogiez-Pétrequin, Sylvie, Pierre Jaillette, and Jean-Michel Poinsotte (eds.) (2009).Codex Theodosianus = Le code Théodosien, v. (Texte latin d'après l'édition de Mommsen. Traduction, introduction et notes).

Croke, Brian (2010). "Mommsen's Encounter with the Code," in Jill Harries and Ian Wood (eds.), The Theodosian Code: Studies in the Imperial Law of Late Antiquity, rev. edn., 217–239.

Crook, John (1955). Consilium Principis: Imperial Councils and Counsellors from Augustus to Diocletian.

Crosby, Margaret Barber (2008). The Making of a German Constitution: A Slow Revolution.

Cuneo, Paola Ombretta (1997). La Legislazione di Costantino II, Costanzo II e Costante (337–361), Materiali per una Palingenesi delle Costituzioni Tardo-Imperiali 2.

Daryaee, Touraj (2008). Sasanian Persia: The Rise and Fall of an Empire.

Delmaire, Roland (1989). Largesses sacrées et res privata: L'aerarium impérial et son administration du IVe au VIe siècle.

(1995). Les institutions du Bas-Empire romain de Constantin à Justinien, vol. I: Les institutions civiles palatines.

de Zulueta, Francis (1927). The Liber Pauperum of Vacarius.

de Zulueta, Francis and Peter Stein (1990). The Teaching of Roman Law in England around 1200.

Dickey, Eleanor (2012–2015). The Colloquia of the Hermeneumata Pseudodositheana, 2 vols.

Dillon, John Noël (2015). "Conjectures and Criticism in Book I of the Codex Justinianus," Classical Quarterly 65: 321–343.

Dolezalek, Gero R. (1985). Repertorium Manuscriptorum Veterum Codicis Iustiniani, 2 vols.

Dolezalek, Gero R. and Antonio Ciaralli (2010). "Codicis Justiniani Epitome Beinecke and Summa Perusina," in H. Dondorp et al. (eds.), Ius Romanum, Ius Commune, Ius Hodiernum: Studies in Honour of Eltjo Schrage, 75–98.

Donahue, Charles, Jr. (1987). "On Translating the 'Digest'," Stanford Law Review 39: 1057–1077.

Dondorp, Harry and Eltjo J. H. Schrage (2010). "The Sources of Medieval Learned Law," in John W. Cairns and Paul J. Du Plessis (eds.), The Creation of the "Ius Commune": From "Casus" to "Regula", 7–56.

Evans, J. A. S. (1996). The Age of Justinian: The Circumstances of Imperial Power.

Evans Grubbs, Judith (1995). Law and Family in Late Antiquity: the Emperor Constantine's Marriage Legislation.

(2000). "The Slave Who Avenged Her Master's Death: Codex Justinianus 1.19.1 and 7.13.1," Ancient History Bulletin 14: 81–88.
Evjen, Harold (1980). "Rome on the Range: Roman Law and Justice Blume of Wyoming," Zeitschrift der Savigny-Stiftung für Rechtsgeschichte. Romanistische Abteilung 97: 213–231.
Falchi, Gian Luigi (1990). "Osservazioni sulla Situazione Giuridica dei Liberti Latini," in Atti dell'Accademia Romanistica Costantiniana VIII, 567–577.
Feenstra, Robert (1992). "Law," in Richard Jenkyns (ed.), The Legacy of Rome: A New Appraisal, 399–420.
Fitting, Hermann (1894). Summa Codicis des Irnerius (an edition of the Summa Trecensis).
(1906). Lo Codi, Teil 1: Lo Codi in der Lateinischen Übersetzung des Ricardus Pisanus: Eine Summa Codicis in Provenzalischer Sprache aus der Mitte des XII. Jahrhunderts.
Frendo, Joseph (1975). Agathias: The Histories.
Gaudemet, Jean (1965). Le Bréviaire d'Alaric et les Epitomes.
Gaudenzi, Augusto (1886). "Un' Antica Compilazione di Diritto Romano e Visigoto con Alcuni Frammenti delle Leggi di Eurico Tratta da un Manoscritto della Biblioteca di Holkham," in Documenti e Studi II, 5–227.
Giomaro, Anna M. (2001). Il Codex Repetitae Praelectionis.
Giorgi, Ignazio and Ugo Balzani (eds.) (1879–1914). Il Regesto di Farfa Compilato da Gregorio di Catino, 5 vols.
Glauche, Günter (2011). Katalog der Lateinischen Handschriften der Bayerischen Staatsbibliothek München. Die Pergamenthandschriften aus dem Domkapitel Freising, Bd. 2.
Golden, Michael (1993). "Journey for the Pole: The Life and Times of Fred H. Blume, Justice of the Wyoming Supreme Court" (Parts 1–2), Land & Water Law Review 28: 195–270, 511–592.
Gordley, James (2010). "Ius Quaerens Intellectum. The Method of the Medieval Civilians," in John W. Cairns and Paul du Plessis (eds.), The Creation of the Ius Commune: From "Casus" to "Regula", 77–101.
Greatrex, Geoffrey (1997). "The Nika Riot: A Reappraisal," Journal of Hellenic Studies 117: 60–86.
Greatrex, Geoffrey and Samuel N. C. Lieu (2002). The Roman Eastern Frontier and the Persian Wars, Part II: AD 363–630.
Gualandi, Giovanni (1963). Legislazione Imperiale e Giurisprudenza, 2 vols.
Gundermann, G. (1890). "Das Kölner Fragment des Codex Justinianus," Rheinisches Museum für Philologie N.S., 45: 361–370.
Hall, Linda Jones (2008). Roman Berytus: Beirut in Late Antiquity.
Hallebeek, Jan (2013). "On the Origin of the Constitution Alearum Lusus (C. 3,43,1) and its Insertion into the Codex Justinianus," Tijdschrift voor Rechtsgeschiedenis 81: 129–143.

Hänel, Gustav (1834). Dissensiones Dominorum sive Controversiae Veterum Iuris Romani Interpretum.

(1837). Codicis Gregoriani et Codicis Hermogeniani Fragmenta.

(1849). Lex Romana Visigothorum.

(1873). Iuliani Epitome Latina Novellarum Iustiniani.

Harries, Jill (1988). "The Roman Imperial Quaestor from Constantine to Theodosius II," Journal of Roman Studies 78: 148–172.

Hartmann, Ludovicus (1899). Gregorii I Papae Registrum Epistolarum, II, Monumenta Germaniae Historica Epistulae 2.

Heimbach, Gustav Ernst (1833–1870). Basilicorum Libri LX, 6 vols. (plus two supplements in 1846 and 1897).

(1838–1843). ANEKDOTA, 3 vols.

(1846–1851). Authenticum: Novellarum Constitutionum Iustiniani versio vulgata, 2 vols.

Helmholz, Richard (2001). The "Ius Commune" in England: Four Studies.

(2004). The Oxford History of the Laws of England, vol. I: The Canon Law and Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction from 597 to the 1640s.

Hessler, John (2011). "Editing Justinian's Corpus: A Study of the Paul Krueger Archive," Law Library Journal 103: 459–472.

Hillner, Gisela (2010). "Die Praefatio zum Codex Iustinianus von Paul Krüger," Zeitschrift der Savigny-Stiftung für Rechtsgeschichte. Romanistische Abteilung 127: 364–428.

Honoré, Tony (1975). "Some Constitutions Composed by Justinian," Journal of Roman Studies 65: 107–123.

(1978). Tribonian.

(1994). Emperors and Lawyers: With a Palingenesia of Third-Century Imperial Rescripts 193–305 AD, 2nd edn.

(1998). Law in the Crisis of Empire 379–455 AD: The Theodosian Dynasty and Its Quaestors.

(2010). Justinian's Digest: Character and Compilation.

Humfress, Caroline (2005). "Law and Legal Practice in the Age of Justinian," in M. Maas (ed.), The Cambridge Companion to the Age of Justinian, 161–184.

(2007). Orthodoxy and the Courts in Late Antiquity.

Humphreys, Michael (forthcoming). The Laws of the Iconoclast Era, Translated Texts for Byzantinists.

Jeffreys, Elizabeth and Roger Scott (1986). The Chronicle of John Malalas, Byzantina Australiensia 4.

Johnson, Allan Chester, Paul Robinson Coleman-Norton, and Frank Card Bourne (1961). Ancient Roman Statutes: A Translation with Introduction, Commentary, Glossary, and Index (ARS).

Johnson. William A. (2009). "The Ancient Book," in R. S. Bagnall (ed.), The Oxford Handbook of Papyrology, 256–281.

Johnston, David (1989). "Justinian's Digest: The Interpretation of Interpolation," Oxford Journal of Legal Studies 9: 149–166.

(1999). Roman Law in Context.

Jolowicz, Herbert F. and Barry Nicholas (1972). Historical Introduction to the Study of Roman Law, 3rd edn.

Jones, A. H. M. (1964). The Later Roman Empire 284–602: A Social, Economic and Administrative Survey, 3 vols.

Jones, A. H. M., John R. Martindale, and John Morris (eds.) (1971). The Prosopography of the Later Roman Empire, vol. I: AD 260–395 (PLRE I).

Jones, Linda Hall (2012). "Clyde Pharr, the Women of Vanderbilt, and the Wyoming Judge: The Story behind the Translation of the Theodosian Code in Mid-Century America," Roman Legal Tradition 8: 1–41.

Kabatek, Johannes (2000). "Lo Codi und die Okzitanischen Texttraditionen im 12. und 13. Jahrhundert," in A. Rieger (ed.), Provenzalistik, Altokzitanistik und Okzitanistik. Geschichte und Auftrag einer europäischen Philologie, 147–163.

(n.d., ongoing). Lo Codi – Eine Okzitanische Rechtssumma aus dem 12. Jahrhundert und Ihre Übersetzungen, available at: http://www.romling.uni-tuebingen.de/codi.

Kaiser, Wolfgang (2004). Die Epitome Iuliani: Beiträge zum Römischen Recht im Frühen Mittelalter und zum Byzantinischen Rechtsunterricht.

(2007). Authentizität und Geltung Spätantiker Kaisergesetze: Studien zu den Sacra privilegia concilii Vizaceni.

(2008). "Nachvergleichungen von Novellen- und Codexzitaten in einer frühmittelalterlichen Sammlung mit Exzerpten aus dem Register Gregors d. Gr. (Reg. 13, 49[50]," Zeitschrift der Savigny-Stiftung für Rechtsgeschichte. Romanistische Abteilung 125: 603–644.

(2012). "Die Zweisprachigkeit reichsweiter Novellen unter Justinian," Zeitschrift der Savigny-Stiftung für Rechtsgeschichte: Romanistische Abteilung 129: 392–474.

(2015). "Collectio Gaudenziana und Textkritik des Codex Justinianus," Zeitschrift der Savigny-Stiftung für Rechtsgeschichte: Rom. Abr. 132: 201–298.

Kantorowicz, Hermann (1970). Rechtshistorische Schriften.

Kantorowicz, Hermann and William W. Buckland (1938). Studies in the Glossators of the Roman Law.

Karlowa, Otto (1885). Römische Rechtsgeschichte vol. I: Staatsrecht und Rechtsquellen.

Kaser, Max (1971/1975). Das Römische Privatrecht, vol. I: Das Altrömische, das Vorklassische und Klassische Recht; vol. II: Die Nachklassischen Entwicklungen.

Kaser, Max and Karl Hackl (1996). Das Römische Zivilprozessrecht, 2nd edn.

Kearley, Timothy G. (2007). "Justice Fred Blume and the Translation of Justinian's Code," Law Library Journal 99: 525–554.
(2014). "The Enigma of S. P. Scott," Roman Law Tradition 10: 1–37.
Kelley, Donald (1970). Foundations of Modern Historical Scholarship: Language, Law, and History in the French Renaissance.
Kelly, Christopher (2004). Ruling the Later Roman Empire.
Kienast, Dietmar (2011). Römische Kaisertabelle: Grundzüge einer Römischen Kaiserchronologie, 5th edn.
King, Cathy (1980). "The Sacrae Largitiones: Revenues, Expenditure and the Production of Coin," in Cathy King (ed.), Imperial Revenue, Expenditure and Monetary Policy in the Fourth Century AD, BAR International Series 76, 141–173.
Kriegel, Albert and Moritz Kriegel (1836–1853). Corpus Juris Civilis, 3 vols. (rev. and reprinted by Emil Hermann and Edouard Osenbrüggen, 5th edn, 14th impression, 1872).
Krüger, Paul (1867). Kritik des Justinianischen Codex.
(1873). "Über die Zeitfolge der im Justinianischen Codex Enthaltenen Constitutionen Justinians," Zeitschrift für Rechtsgeschichte 11: 166–186.
(1874). Codicis Iustiniani Fragmenta Veronensia.
(1877). Codex Iustinianus (the editio maior; reprinted in 1998 by Keip Verlag and in 2014 by Vico Verlag). (A reproduction is available online at: www.archive.org/stream/codexiustinianuookruegoog#page/n16/mode/2up.)
(1877). Corpus Iuris Civilis Volumen Secundum: Codex Iustinianus (the basis for the so-called stereotype edition) (9th edn. 1914, the last edition substantially altered by Krüger; 10th edn. 1929, 11th edn. 1954, 12th edn. 1959, all without major textual changes). The 1914 text is largely available online at: http://web.upmf-grenoble.fr/Haiti/Cours/Ak.
(1880) Codicis Theodosiani fragmenta Taurinensia (from Abhandlungen der Königlichen Akademie der Wissenschaften, Berlin, Phil.-Hist. Kl. (1879) 2: 1–104).
(1888; 2nd edn. 1912). Geschichte der Quellen und Literatur des Römischen Rechts.
(1922). "Neue juristische Funde aus Ägypten," Zeitschrift der Savigny-Stiftung für Rechtsgeschichte. Romanistische Abteilung 43: 560–563.
(1923–1926). Codex Theodosianus, 2 fasc.
Krüger, Paul and Theodor Mommsen (1911). Corpus Iuris Civilis Volumen Primum: Institutiones (Krüger), Digesta (Mommsen and Krüger), stereotype edition, 12th edn. (1st edn. 1872)).
Krüger, Paul, Theodor Mommsen, and Wilhelm Studemund (1878–1890). Collectio Librorum Iuris Anteiustiniani, 3 vols.
Lee, James (2009). "Confusio: Reference to Roman Law in the House of Lords and the Development of English Private Law," Roman Legal Tradition 5: 24–66.

Lenel, Otto (1889). Palingenesia Iuris Civilis, 2 vols.

(1927). Das Edictum Perpetuum. Ein Versuch zu Seiner Wiederherstellung, 3rd edn. (often reprinted).

Lewis, Andrew D. E. (1994). "'What Marcellus Says is Against You': Roman Law and Common Law," in Andrew D. E. Lewis and David Ibbetson (eds.), The Roman Law Tradition, 199–208.

Liebeschuetz, John H. W. G. (1972). Antioch: City and Imperial Administration in the Later Roman Empire.

Liebs, Detlef (1987). Die Jurisprudenz im Spätantiken Italien (260–640 n. Chr.).

(2000). "Roman Law," in Averil Cameron et al. (eds.), The Cambridge Ancient History, vol. XIV: Late Antiquity: Empire and Successors, A.D. 425–600, 238–259.

(2002). Römische Jurisprudenz in Gallien (2. bis 8. Jahrhundert).

(2010). Hofjuristen der Römischen Kaiser bis Justinian.

Linder, Amnon (1987). The Jews in Roman Imperial Legislation.

Lizzi Testa, Rita (2009). "Augures et Pontifices: Public Sacral Law in Late Antique Rome (Fourth–Fifth Centuries AD)," in Andrew Cain and Noel Lenski (eds.), The Power of Religion in Late Antiquity, 251–278.

Lokin, Jan H. A. (1990). "Ad Novellam 159," in Subseciva Groningana IV, Groningen, 131–150 (repr. in Analecta Groningana, 243–260).

(1994). "The Significance of Law and Legislation in the Law Books of the Ninth to Eleventh Centuries," in A. E. Laiou and D. Simon (eds.), Law and Society in Byzantium, Ninth–Twelfth Centuries, 71–91 (repr. in Analecta Groningana, 183–99).

(1995). "The End of an Epoch: Epilegomena to a Century of Interpolation Criticism," in Robert Feenstra et al. (eds.), Collatio Iuris Romani: études dédiées à Hans Ankum à l'occasion de son 65e anniversiare, vol. 1, 261–273 (repr. in Analecta Groningana, 17–30).

(2010). Analecta Groningana ad Ius Graeco-Romanum Pertinentia.

Lokin, Jan H. A. and Roos Meijering (1999). Anatolius and the Excerpta Vaticana et Laurentiana.

Lokin, Johannes, Roos Meijering, Bernard Hendrik Stolte, and Nicolaas van der Wal (eds.), and Alexander Falconer Murison, trans. (2010). Theophili Antecessoris Paraphrasis Institutionum.

Loschiavo, Luca (1996). Summa Codicis Berolinensis: Studio ed Edizione di una Composizione "a Mosaico."

(2010). "Il codex graecus e le origini del Liber Authenticorum," Zeitschrift der Savigny-Stiftung für Rechtsgeschichte. Romanistische Abteilung 127: 115–171.

(2011). "La Riscoperta dell'Authenticum e la Prima Esegesi dei Glossatori," in L. Loschiavo et al. (eds.), Novellae Constitutiones: L'Ultima Legislazione di Giustiniano tra Oriente e Occidente da Triboniano a Savigny, 111–139.

(2014). "Verso la Costruzione del Canone Medievale dei Testi Giustinianei. Il ms. Oxford, Oriel College 22 e la composizione del Volumen Parvum," in Jan Hallebeck et al. (eds.), Inter Cives Necnon Peregrinos: Essays in Honour of Boudewijn Sirks, 443–458.
(2015). "Was Rome still a Centre of Legal Culture Between the 6th and 8th Centuries?," Rechtsgeschichte 23: 83–108.
Loud, Graham A. (2008). "Byzantium and Southern Italy (876–1000)," in Jonathan Shepard (ed.), The Cambridge History of the Byzantine Empire, c. 500–1492, 560–582.
Lounghis, Télémaque, Vasilikī Vlysídou, and Stelios Lampakis (2005). Regesten der Kaiserurkunden des Oströmischen Reiches von 476 bis 565.
Lug, Hans Robert (1976). "Ein Bruchstück des Codex-Kommentars des Theodoros," in D. Simon (ed.), Fontes Minores, I: Forschungen zur Byzantinischen Rechtsgeschichte, 1–15.
McDonough, Christopher (2010). Alexandri Neckam Sacerdos ad Altare, Corpus Christianorum Continuatio Mediaeualis 227.
Macino, Francesca (2008). Sulle tracce delle Istituzioni di Giustiniano nell' alto Medioevo.
Mantovani, Dario (2007). "Per Quotidianam Lectionem Digestorum Semper Incolumis et in Honore Fuit Lingua Romana: L'Elogio dei Giuristi Romani nel Proemio al III Libro delle Elegantiae di Lorenzo Valla," in Studi per Giovanni Nicosia V, 143–208.
Marini Avonzo, Franca de (1974). "Due Giuristi Severiani per un Imperatore Sconosciuto," in Giovanni Tarello (ed.), Materiali per una Storia della Cultura Giuridica IV, 13–33 (repr. in Dall'Impero Cristiano al Medioevo: Studi sul Diritto Tardoantico (2001), 93–113).
Martindale, John R. (ed.) (1980). The Prosopography of the Later Roman Empire, vol. II: AD 395–527 (PLRE II).
(ed.) (1992). The Prosopography of the Later Roman Empire, vol. III: AD 527–641 (PLRE III).
Martyn, John R. C. (2004). The Letters of Gregory the Great, 3 vols.
Matthews, John F. (2000). Laying Down the Law: A Study of the Theodosian Code.
Menze, Volker L. (2008). Justinian and the Making of the Syrian Orthodox Church.
Metzger, Ernest (1998). A Companion to Justinian's Institutes.
Millar, Fergus (1986). "A New Approach to the Roman Jurists," Journal of Roman Studies 76: 272–280 (repr. in Fergus Millar, Rome, the Greek World and the East, vol. 2: Government, Society and Culture in the Roman Empire (2004), 417–434).
(1992). The Emperor in the Roman World (31BC–AD337), 2nd edn.
(2006). A Greek Roman Empire: Power and Belief under Theodosius II (408–450).

(2008). "Rome, Constantinople and the Near Eastern Church under Justinian: Two Synods of CE 536," Journal of Roman Studies 98: 62–82.

Minieri, Luciano and Osvaldo Sacchi (2009). Problemi della Traduzione dei Digesta Giustinianei nelle Lingue Europee.

Mommsen, Theodor (1868–1870). Digesta Iustiniani, 2 vols. (The editio maior, used as a parallel text in Watson 1985; for the editio minor, see Krüger/ Mommsen.)

(1905). Gesammelte Schriften II. Juristische Schriften II, 195–291 (originally published as "Über die Zeitfolge der Verordnungen Diocletians und seiner Mitregenten," Abhandlungen der Königlichen Akademie der Wissenschaften zu Berlin (1860), 349–447).

(1911). Digesta, see Krüger and Mommsen (1911).

Mommsen, Theodor, Paul Krüger, and Paul M. Meyer (1905). Theodosiani libri XVI cum Constitutionibus Sirmondianis et Leges Novellae ad Theodosianum Pertinentes, 2 vols.

Moorhead, John (1994). Justinian.

Mor, Carlo Guido (1925). "Bobbio, Pavia e gli Excerpta bobiensia," in Contributi alla Storia dell'Università di Pavia, 43–114.

(1927). Lex Romana Canonice Compta: Testo di Leggi Romano-Canoniche del Sec. IX, Pubblicato sul Ms. Parigino Bibl. Nat. 12448.

(1977). "Il manoscritto del Codice Giustinianeo della Biblioteca Comunale di Avranches (n. 141)," in Scritti di storia giuridica altomedievale, 63–76.

Moreau, Philippe (2007). "Le lexique de Festus. Témoin de la naissance d'une science de la parenté à Rome," in Fay Glinister and Clare Woods (eds.), Verrius, Festus and Paul: Lexicography, Scholarship, and Society, Bulletin of the Institute of Classical Studies, Supplement 93, 69–86.

(2010). "Rome: The Invisible Children of Incest," in Véronique Dasen and Thomas Späth (eds.), Children, Memory, and Family Identity in Roman Culture, 311–329.

Mouritsen, Henrik (2011). The Freedman in the Roman World.

Mousourakis, George (2007). A Legal History of Rome.

Nauta, Lodi (2007). In Defense of Common Sense: Lorenzo Valla's Humanist Critique of Scholastic Philosophy.

Netz, Reviel and William Noel (2007). The Archimedes Codex: How a Medieval Prayer Book is Revealing the True Genius of Antiquity's Greatest Scientist.

Norberg, Dag Ludvig (1982). S. Gregorii Magni opera: Registrum epistularum Libri VIII–XIV, Corpus Christianorum Series Latina 140A.

Osler, Douglas J. (1985). "Budaeus and Roman Law," Ius Commune 13: 195–212.

(2009). Jurisprudence of the Baroque: A Census of Seventeenth-Century Italian Legal Imprints, 3 vols., Bibliographica Iuridica 4–6.

Patetta, Federico (1891). "Contributi alla storia del diritto romano nel Medio Evo," Bullettino dell'Istituto di Diritto Romano 4: 249–253 (repr. in Studi sulle fonti giuridiche medievali (1961), 121–125).

(1900). Adnotationes Codicum Domini Justiniani (Summa Perusina), Bulletino dell' Istituto di Diritto Romano 12 (repr. in 2008 to accompany the facsimile manuscript).

Peachin, Michael (forthcoming). "Weitere Gedanken zum Verfassungsprozeß von kaiserlichen Reskripten," in Anne Kolb and Ulrike Babisiaux (eds.), Das Recht der Soldatenkaiser: Rechtliche Stabilität in Zeiten Politischen Umbruchs?

Pergami, Federico (1993). La Legislazione di Valentiniano e Valente (364–375), Materiali per una Palingenesi delle Costituzioni Tardo-Imperiali 4.

Pharr, Clyde (gen. ed.) and Teresa Sherrer Davidson (assoc. ed.) (1944). "The Theodosian Code: A Translation, with Annotations," 1 (unpublished manuscript).

Pharr, Clyde (ed.), and Theresa Sherrer Davidson and Mary Brown Pharr (collaborators) (1952). The Theodosian Code and Novels, and the Sirmondian Constitutions: A Translation with Commentary, Glossary, and Bibliography.

Pitra, Jean Baptiste (1868). Juris Ecclesiastici Graecorum Historia et Monumenta II.

Pound, Roscoe (1943). Outlines of Lectures on Jurisprudence, 5th edn.

Price, Richard (2009). The Acts of the Council of Constantinople of 553, Translated Texts for Historians 51.

Projet Volterra, see at: www.ucl.ac.uk/volterra/.

Rabello, Alfredo M. (1999). "Civil Jewish Jurisdiction in the Days of Emperor Justinian (527–565): Codex Justinianus 1.9.8," Israel Law Review 33: 51–66 (repr. in The Jews in the Roman Empire: Legal Problems, from Herod to Justinian (2000), ch. XIII).

Radding, Charles M. (1988). The Origins of Medieval Jurisprudence: Pavia and Bologna, 850–1150.

(2007). "Reviving Justinian's Corpus: The Case of the Code," in Per Andersen et al. (eds.), Law before Gratian: Law in Western Europe c. 500–1100, 35–50.

Radding, Charles M. and Antonio Ciaralli (2000). "The Corpus Iuris Civilis in the Middle Ages: A Case Study in Historiography and Medieval History," Zeitschrift der Savigny-Stiftung für Rechtsgeschichte: Romanistische Abteilung 117: 274–310.

(2007). The "Corpus Iuris Civilis" in the Middle Ages: Manuscripts and Transmission from the Sixth Century to the Juristic Revival.

Randazzo, Salvo (2002). "Roman Legal Tradition and American Law: The Riccobono Seminar of Roman Law in Washington," Roman Legal Tradition 1: 123–144.

Reid, John (1962). "Foreword," Annual Survey of American Law 1962, vii–viii.

Riccobono, Salvatore (1935). "Il Diritto Romano negli Stati Uniti di America," Bulletino dell' Istituto di Diritto Romano 43: 314–324.

Rives, James (2012). "Control of the Sacred in Roman Law," in Olga Tellegen-Couperus (ed.), Law and Religion in the Roman Republic, 165–180.

Rodaro, Silvia (2010). "Le Costituzioni Geminae (o Leges Geminatae) nel Codex Repetitae Praelectionis di Giustiniano," in Atti dell'Accademia Romanistica Costantiniana XVII, vol. 2, 939–973.

Roumy, Franck (2009). "Excerpta Rotomagensia: un des plus anciens Témoignages de la diffusion du droit de Justinien en France au XII Siècle," in Bernard d'Alteroche et al. (eds.), Mélanges en l'honneur d'Anne Lefebvre-Teillard, 917–947.

Russo, Giuseppe (1980). Tradizione Manoscritta di Leges Romanae nei Codici dei Secoli IX e X della Biblioteca Capitolare di Modena, Modena.

Russo Ruggeri, Carmela, (1999). Studi sulle Quinquaginta decisiones.

Salway, Benet (2012). "The Publication of the Theodosian Code and Transmission of its Text: Some Observations," in Sylvie Crogiez-Pétrequin and Pierre Jaillette (eds.), Société, économie, administration dans le code Théodosien, 21–61.

(2012). "Words and Deeds: Julian in the Epigraphic Record," in Nicholas Baker-Brian and Shaun Tougher (eds.), Emperor and Author: the Writings of Julian the Apostate, 137–157.

Sass, Stephen L. (1963). "Research in Roman Law. A Guide to the Sources and Their English Translations," Law Library Journal 56: 210–233.

Savigny, Friedrich Carl von, (1815–1831). Geschichte des Römischen Rechts im Mittelalter, 6 vols. (2nd edn., 1834–1851).

Scheltema, Herman Jan (1967). "Byzantine Law," in J. M. Hussey (ed.), The Cambridge Medieval History, vol. IV.2, 55–77 (repr. in Opera minora, 38–57).

(1970). L'Enseignement de droit des antécesseurs, Byzantina Neerlandica B1 (repr. in Opera minora, 58–110).

(1972). "Fragmenta breviarii codicis a Theodoro Hermopolitano Confecti e Synopsi Erotematica Collecta," in Willem F. Bakker et al. (eds.), Studia Byzantina et Neohellenica Neerlandica, Byzantina Neerlandica 3, 9–35 (repr. in Opera minora, 371–94).

(2004). Opera minora ad Iuris Historiam Pertinentia.

Scheltema, Herman Jan and Nicolaas van der Wal (1953–1988). Basilicorum libri LX, Series A, Textus, 8 vols., Series B, Scholia, 9 vols.

Schieffer, Rudolf (2003). Die Streitschriften Hinkmars von Reims und Hinkmars von Laon 869–871, MGH Concilia 4, suppl. 2.

Schiller, A. Arthur (1978). Roman Law: Mechanisms of Development.

Schipani, Sandro (ed.) (2005–). Iustiniani Augusti Digesta, seu Pandectae = Digesti o Pandette dell'Imperatore Giustiniano: Testo e Traduzione (5 vols. to date, reaching Book 32).

Schmidt-Hofner, Sebastian (2008). "Die Regesten der Kaiser Valentinian und Valens in den Jahren 364–375 n. Chr.," Zeitschrift der Savigny-Stiftung für Rechtsgeschichte, Rom. Abt. 125: 498–602.

Schmitz, Gerhard (2004). De Presbiteris Criminosis: Ein Memorandum Erzbischof Hinkmars von Reims über Straffälige Kleriker, Monumenta Germaniae Historica Studien und Texte 34.

Schoell, Rudolf and Wilhelm Kroll (eds.) (1912). Corpus Iuris Civilis, III: Novellae (4th stereotype edn.; substantially identical with later editions).

Schrader, Heinrich Eduard Siegfried von, et al. (1823). Prodromus Corporis Juris Civilis.

Schramm, P. E. (1969). Kaiser, Könige und Päpste: Gesammelte Aufsatze zur Geschichte des Mittelalters: Bd. 3: Vom 10. bis zum 13. Jahrhundert.

Schulz, Fritz (1927). "Paul Krüger, ein Nachruf," Zeitschrift der Savigny-Stiftung für Rechtsgeschichte: Romanistische Abteilung 47: ix–xxxix.

Scott, Roger (1981). "Malalas and Justinian's Codification," Byzantine Papers, Byzantina Australiensia 1, 12–31 (repr. in Byzantine Chronicles and the Sixth Century (2012), ch. VIII).

Scott, S. P. (trans.) (1910). The Visigothic Code.

(trans.) (1931). Las Siete Partidas.

(ed. and trans.) (1932). The Civil Law (seventeen volumes bound in seven; the Codex of Justinian is in vols. 12–15. Available online at: www.constitution.org/sps/sps.htm).

Seeck, Otto (1919). Regesten der Kaiser und Päpste für die Jahre 311 bis 476 n. Chr.: Vorarbeit zu einer Prosopographie der christlichen Kaiserzeit.

Sirks, Boudewijn (1993). "Reconsidering the Roman Colonate," Zeitschrift der Savigny-Stiftung für Rechtsgeschichte. Romanistische Abteilung 110: 331–369.

Spangenberg, Ernst (1817). Einleitung in das Römisch-Justinianeische Rechtsbuch oder Corpus Juris Civilis Romani.

Spruit, Johannes E., J. M. J. Chorus, and L. de Ligt (eds.) (1993–2011). Corpus Iuris Civilis Compleet; Instituten, Digesten, Codex en Novellae: Tekst en Vertaling, 12 vols. (Codex is in vols. VII–IX (2005–2010)).

Stein, Peter (1983). "The Development of the Institutional System," in Peter Stein and Andrew D. E. Lewis (eds.), Studies in Justinian's Institutes in Memory of J. A. C. Thomas, 151–163.

(1988). The Character and Influence of the Roman Civil Law: Historical Essays.

(1999). Roman Law in European History.

Stolte, Bernard H. (2009). "The Use of Greek in the Theodosian Code," Subseciva Groningana 8: 147–159.

(2010). "Zwei neue Basiliken-Handschriften in der Österreichischen Nationalbibliothek II: Rechtshistorische Analyse," in Christian Gastgeber (ed.), Quellen zur byzantinischen Rechtspraxis, 139–182.

(2010/11) "Not in the Code, Nor in the Basilica: C. 1.1.8 and its Translation in the Basilica," Annali del seminario giuridico (AUPA) 54: 291–300.

(2013). "A Heretical Hypothesis: On the Beginning of the Codex Justinianus," Tijdschrift voor Rechtsgeschiedenis 81: 109–128.

Taliadoros, Jason (2006). Law and Theology in Twelfth-Century England: The Works of Master Vacarius (c. 1115/20–c. 1200).

Torelli, Pietro (1943). Accursii Florentini Glossa ad Institutiones Iustiniani Imperatoris (Liber I).

Tort-Martorell, Carmen (1989). Tradición Textual del Codex Iustinianus: un estudio del Libro 2.

(2008). "En torno a Pesaro 26, un Manuscrito Epitomado del Codex Iustinianus," in Vincenzo Colli and Emanuele Conte (eds.), Iuris Historia: Liber Amicorum Gero Dolezalek, 37–60.

Treggiari, Susan (1996). "Social Status and Social Legislation," in Alan Bowman, Edward Champlin, and Andrew Lintott (eds.), Cambridge Ancient History, vol. x: The Augustan Empire, 43 BC–AD 69, 873–904.

Troianos, Spyros (2012). "Byzantine Canon Law to 1100," in Wilfried Hartmann and Kenneth Pennington (eds.), The History of Byzantine and Canon Law to 1500.

Troje, Hans Erich (1971). "Graeca leguntur": Die Aneignung des Byzantinischen Rechts und die Entstehung eines Humanistischen Corpus iuris civilis in der Jurisprudenz des 16. Jahrhunderts.

(2011). "Crisis digestorum": Studien zur Historia Pandectarum.

Van der Wal, N. and Bernard H. Stolte (1994). Collectio Tripartita: Justinian on Religious and Ecclesiastical Affairs.

Volterra, Edoardo (1968). "L'Ouvrage de Papirius Justus Constitutionum Libri xx," in Symbolae Iuridicae et Historicae Martino David Dedicatae, I: Ius Romanum, 215–223 (repr. in Scritti Giuridici v (1993), 165–173).

Waelkens, Laurent (2011). "L'hérésie des premiers titres du Code de Justinien. Une hypothèse sur la rédaction tardive de C. 1, 1–13," Tijdschrift voor Rechtsgeschiedenis 79: 253–296.

Wallinga, Tammo (2005). The Casus Codicis of Wilhelmus de Cabriano.

(2009). "Authenticum and authenticae: What's in a Name? References to Justinian's Novels in Medieval Manuscripts," Tijdschrift voor Rechsgeschiedenis 77: 43–59.

(2011) "The Authenticae of Irnerius and Their Tradition," in L. Loschiavo et al. (eds.), Novellae Constitutiones: L'Ultima Legislazione di Giustiniano tra Oriente e Occidente da Triboniano a Savigny, 141–154.

Watkin, Thomas Glyn (1999). An Historical Introduction to Modern Civil Law.

Watson, Alan (1982). "Review of Honoré, Emperors and Lawyers," Tijdschrift voor Rechtsgeschiedenis 50: 409–414.

(ed.) (1985). The Digest of Justinian, 4 vols. (with text drawn from Mommsen's editio maior of the Digest, and a facing translation).
(ed.) (1998). The Digest of Justinian, 2 vols. (corrected translation only; reissued in 4 vols. (2008)).
(2000). Law Out of Context.
Whitman, James Q. (1990). The Legacy of Roman Law in the German Romantic Era.
Wieacker, Franz (1995). A History of Private Law in Europe: With Particular Reference to Germany.
(1988 and 2006). Römische Rechtsgeschichte: Quellenkunde, Rechtsbildung, Jurisprudenz und Rechtsliteratur, vol. I: Einleitung; Quellenkunde; Frühzeit und Republik; vol. II: Die Jurisprudenz vom Frühen Prinzipat bis zum Ausgang der Antike.
Wieling, Hans Josef (1995). "Die Gesetze der Herculier," in Robert Feenstra et al. (eds.), Collatio iuris romani II: études dédiées à Hans Ankum à l'occasion de son 65e anniversaire, 619–632.
Winroth, Anders (2000).The Making of Gratian's Decretum.
(2006). "The Teaching of Law in the Twelfth Century," in Helle Vogt and Mia Münster-Swendsen (eds.), Law and Learning in the Middle Ages, 41–62 (repr. as "Law Schools in the Twelfth Century," in Bernard d'Alteroche et al. (eds.), Mélanges en l'honneur d'Anne Lefebvre-Teillard (2009). 1057–1064).
(2012). "The Legal Revolution of the Twelfth Century," in Thomas F. X. Noble and John Van Engen (eds.), European Transformations: The Long Twelfth Century, 338–353.
Witt, Ronald (2012). The Two Latin Cultures and the Foundation of Renaissance Humanism in Medieval Italy.
Witte, Carl (1830). Die Leges Restitutae des Justinianeischen Codex.
Zachariä von Lingenthal, Carl Eduard (1850). "Die griechischen Scholien der Rescribirten Handschrift des Codex in der Bibliothek des Domcapitels zu Verona," Zeitschrift für Geschichtliche Rechtswissenschaft 15: 90–132.

Abbreviations

I. The Corpus Iuris Civilis of Justinian

C. — Codex, cited from Paul Krüger (ed.), Corpus Iuris Civilis, vol. II (9th stereotype edn., 1914; superior to later editions).

C^{1}. — The first Codex of Justinian, promulgated in 529 and almost entirely lost after it was replaced by the final version in 534. In subscripts to constitutions, the initial abbreviations refer to the process whereby they were promulgated, although the terminology is not necessarily stable: S. (scripta or subscriptua), "written" or "subscribed," the emperor's formal handwritten signature of the constitution; D. (data), "given," the emperor's official approval or the issuance of a text: Acc. (accepta), "received," when the recipient takes delivery of the text; PP. (proposita), "posted," the formal display of the constitution outside the emperor's residence or at some nearby public venue (for private rescripts), or in a prominent location in the receiving city (for letters or edicts); Lecta, "read," the public recital of a document, sometimes into a record of a hearing or assembly. S.D. signifies either the date of issuance (sub die or scripta die), or the date on which the constitution was written and given (scripta et data). See briefly Matthews, Laying Down the Law (2000), 180–187; Connolly, Lives Behind the Laws (2010), 44–45.

Const. — Constitutio. The Digest, Institutes, and Codex are accompanied by introductory constitutions explaining the nature and purpose of each work. These constitutions have their own titles, but are traditionally referred to by their opening words: for the Digest, the Const. Deo Auctore, the Const. Omnem, the Const. Tanta, and the Const. Δέδωκεν; for the Institutes, the Const. Imperatoriam Maiestatem; and for the Codex, the Const. Haec and the Const. Summa (both issued for C^1 and then reused), and the Const. Cordi.

D. Digesta, cited from Theodor Mommsen (ed.), Corpus Iuris Civilis, vol. I (12th stereotype edn., 1911; substantially identical with later editions).

Inst. Institutiones, cited from Paul Krüger (ed.), Corpus Iuris Civilis, vol. I (12th stereotype edn., 1911; substantially identical with later editions).

Nov. Novellae, cited from Rudolf Schoell and Wilhelm Kroll (eds.), Corpus Iuris Civilis, vol. III (4th stereotype edn., 1912; substantially identical with later editions). (Justinian's Corpus Iuris Civilis is cited using a traditional numeration: in the case of the Codex, a book number, followed by a title number within the book and a fragment number within the title. Longer fragments (as well as the introductory constitutions and the Inst. titles) are broken into sections, where the opening section is cited as pr. = principium ("beginning") and the remaining sections numbered in sequence. Thus, C. 10.16.12.1 equals Codex Book 10, title 16, fragment 12, section 1.)

II. Other sources for Roman law

ARS Johnson et al., Ancient Roman Statutes (1961).

B. or Bas. Basilika, cited from H. J. Scheltema and N. van der Wal (eds.), Basilicorum Libri LX. Series A, Textus, 8 vols. (1953–1988) and Series B, Scholia, 9 vols. (1953–1985). The Basilika is a ninth-century Byzantine law code based on the Justinianic Corpus, which it substantially reworks.

C. Greg. Codex Gregorianus, fragments cited from Paul Krüger, Collectio Librorum Iuris Anteiustiniani: in Usum Scholarum, vol. III (1890), 221–263, esp. 236–245. Codex Gregorianus Visigothorum (= C. Greg. Visig.) refers to the fragments contained in the Breviarium Alarici (= Lex Romana Visigothorum). New fragments are discussed in Simon Corcoran and Benet Salway, "Fragmenta Londiniensia Anteiustiniana: Preliminary Observations," Roman Legal Tradition 8 (2012): 63–83 (accessible online). See also Tony Honoré, Emperors and Lawyers, 2nd edn. (1994), 139–185.

C.Th. Codex Theodosianus, cited from Theodor Mommsen, Paul Krüger, and Paul M. Meyer, Theodosiani libri XVI cum Constitutionibus Sirmondianis et Leges Novellae ad Theodosianum Pertinentes, 2 vols. (1905). The standard English translation is Clyde Pharr (ed.), and Theresa Sherrer Davidson and Mary Brown Pharr (collaborators), The Theodosian Code and Novels, and the Sirmondian Constitutions: A Translation with Commentary, Glossary, and Bibliography (1952).

Coll. Tripartita Collectio Tripartita, cited from N. van der Wal and B. H. Stolte, Collectio Tripartita: Justinian on Religious and Ecclesiastical Affairs (1994).

Coll., Collatio Mosaicarum et Romanarum Legum Collatio, cited from Robert M. Frakes, Compiling the Collatio Legum Mosaicarum et Romanarum in Late Antiquity (2011). Text also in FIRA, vol. II, 543–589.

Collectio Collectio XXV Capitulorum, cited from G. E. Heimbach, ANEKDOTA, vol II (1840) 145–201.[1]

Consultatio Consultatio Veteris Cuiusdam Iurisconsulti, cited from Paul Frédéric Girard and Félix Senn, Textes de Droit Romain, vol. I (7th ed. 1977) 605–623. Text also in FIRA, vol. II, 593–613.

Ed. Theodor. Edictum Theodorici (Lex Romana Ostrogothorum), cited from Friedrich Bluhme, ed., Monumenta Germaniae Historica: Legum Sectio I, vol. V.1: Leges Nationum Alamannorum (1888) 145–179. Text also in FIRA vol. II, 682–710.

FIRA I–III Fontes Iuris Romani Anteiustiniani, vol. I: Leges, ed. Salvatore Riccobono (2nd edn. 1941); vol. II: Auctores, ed. Giovanni Baviera et al. (1940); vol. III: Negotia, ed. Vincenzo Arangio-Ruiz (1943; appendix 1968)

[1] A possible confusion here deserves note, at least for Krüger's edition of the Codex. Coll. for Krüger refers to both the Collatio and the Collectio XXV Capitulorum, while Const. refers to the Collectio Tripartita.

Frag. Vat.	Fragmenta Quae Dicuntur Vaticana, cited from Paul Krüger, Theodor Mommsen, and Wilhelm Studemund, eds., Collectio Librorum Iuris Anteiustiniani: in Usum Scholarum, vol. III (1890), 20–106. Text also in FIRA, vol. II, 460–540.
Gaius	Gai Institutiones, cited from M. David, Gai Institutiones Secundum Codicis Veronensis Apographum Studemundianum et Reliquias in Aegypto Repertas (ed. minor, 1964). Text also in FIRA, vol. II, 5–192.
Lex Rom. Burg.	Lex Romana Burgundionum, cited from Friedrich Bluhme, ed., Monumenta Germaniae Historica: Legum Sectio I, vol. II.1: Leges Nationum Germanicarum (1892), 123–163. Text also in FIRA vol. II, 713–750.
Nomocanon	Nomocanon XIV Titulorum, cited from I. B. Pitra, Iuris Ecclesiastici Graecorum Historia et Monumenta, vol. II (1868), 433–640.
Not. Dig.	Notitia Dignitatum, cited from Otto Seeck, Notitia Dignitatum (1876); it is divided into In Partibus Occidentis (c. 420 CE) and In Partibus Orientis (c. 395 CE). There are several more recent editions.
Nov. Marc.	Novellae Marciani, cited from C.Th. above.
Nov. Theod.	Novellae Theodosiani, cited from C.Th. above.
Nov. Val.	Novellae Valentiniani, cited from C.Th. above.
Paul, Sent.	Pauli Sententiarum Libri Quinque, cited from the edition of Emil Seckel and Bernard Kübler, in Philipp Eduard Huschke, Seckel, and Kübler, Iurisprudentiae Anteiustinianae Reliquiae, vol. II.1 (6th edn. 1911), 1–161. Text also in FIRA, vol. II, 319–417. Detlef Liebs, "Die Pseudopaulinischen Sentenzen II," Zeitschrift der Savigny-Stiftung für Rechtsgeschichte 113 (1996), 132–242, has a much superior reconstruction, with the fragments renumbered.
PLRE I	A. H. M. Jones, J. R. Martindale, and J. Morris, eds., The Prosopography of the Later Roman Empire, vol. I: AD 260–395 (1971)
PLRE II	J. R. Martindale, ed., The Prosopography of the Later Roman Empire, vol. II: AD 395–527 (1980)

PLRE III	J. R. Martindale, ed. The Prosopography of the Later Roman Empire, vol. III: AD 527–641 (1992)
Rhopai	Cited from Francesco Sitzia, Le Rhopai (1984).
Sch. Sinaitica	Scholia Sinaitica ad Ulpiani Libros ad Sabinum, cited from Salvatore Riccobono, Scholia Sinaitica (1898). Text also in FIRA, vol. II, 637–652.
Sirm.	Constitutiones Sirmondianae, cited from C.Th. above.
Theophilus	Theophili Antecessoris Paraphrasis Institutionum, cited from Johannes Lokin, Roos Meijering, Bernard Hendrik Stolte, and Nicolaas van der Wal, eds., and Alexander Falconer Murison, trans., Theophili Antecessoris Paraphrasis Institutionum (2010).
XII Tab.	Duodecim Tabulae (Twelve Tables), cited from Paul Frédéric Girard and Félix Senn, Les Lois des Romains (1977), 22–73. See also Michael H. Crawford, Roman Statutes, vol. II (1996), 555–721, with somewhat different numbering.
Ulp. Tit.	Ulpiani Liber Singularis Regularum (Tituli ex Corpore Ulpiani), cited from Martin Avenarius, Der Pseudo-Ulpianische Liber Singularis Regularum (2005), based mainly on Paul Krüger, "Ulpiani Liber Singularis Regularum," in Paul Krüger, Theodor Mommsen, and Wilhelm Studemund, Collectio Librorum Iuris Anteiustiniani: in Usum Scholarum, vol. II (1878), 1–38.

On sources for Roman law generally, still incomparable is Leopold Wenger, Die Quellen des Römischen Rechts (1953). Most major Latin sources are available online in the Roman Law Library: http://webu2.upmf-grenoble.fr/DroitRomain. See also Roman Law Resources: http://iuscivile.com. Greek sources are more difficult to locate online; the numerous Greek constitutions of Justinian's Codex, for instance, involve much unusual grammar and vocabulary (see Avotins, (1989)), but they are not included in the Roman Law Library nor (astonishingly) in the Thesaurus Linguae Graecae.

The Codex of Justinian: Text and Translation

De Novo Codice Componendo

Imperator Iustinianus Augustus ad Senatum. pr. Haec, quae necessario corrigenda esse multis retro principibus visa sunt, interea tamen nullus eorum hoc ad effectum ducere ausus est, in praesenti rebus donare communibus auxilio dei omnipotentis censuimus et prolixitatem litium amputare, multitudine quidem constitutionum, quae tribus codicibus Gregoriano et Hermogeniano atque Theodosiano continebantur, illarum etiam, quae post eosdem codices a Theodosio divinae recordationis aliisque post eum retro principibus, a nostra etiam clementia positae sunt, resecanda, uno autem codice sub felici nostri nominis vocabulo componendo, in quem colligi tam memoratorum trium codicum quam novellas post eos positas constitutiones oportet.

1. Ideoque ad hoc maximum et ad ipsius rei publicae sustentationem respiciens opus efficiendum elegimus tanto fastigio laborum tantaeque sollicitudini sufficientes IOHANNEM virum excellentissimum ex quaestore sacri nostri palatii consularem atque patricium, LEONTIUM virum sublimissimum magistrum militum ex praefecto praetorio consularem atque patricium, PHOCAM virum eminentissimum magistrum militum consularem atque patricium, Basilidem virum excellentissimum ex praefecto praetorio Orientis et patricium, THOMAM virum gloriosissimum quaestorem sacri nostri palatii et ex consule, TRIBONIANUM virum magnificum magisteria dignitate inter agentes decoratum, CONSTANTINUM virum illustrem comitem largitionum inter agentes et magistrum scrinii libellorum sacrarumque cognitionum, THEOPHILUM virum clarissimum comitem sacri nostri consistorii et iuris in hac alma urbe doctorem, DIOSCORUM et PRAESENTINUM disertissimos togatos fori amplissimi praetoriani.

2. Quibus specialiter permisimus resecatis tam supervacuis, quantum ad legum soliditatem pertinet, praefationibus quam similibus et contrariis, praeterquam si iuris aliqua divisione adiuventur, illis etiam,

The Introductory Constitutions

edited by John Noël Dillon and Bruce W. Frier

Compilation of the New Codex[1]

Emperor JUSTINIAN Augustus to the Senate. pr. This material, which many past emperors have considered to be in urgent need of correction, though none of them, in the meantime, ventured to bring such a project to completion, We, with the aid of Almighty God, have now determined to provide for the common good: (namely,) to make lawsuits less long-winded by abridging the host of constitutions contained in the three Codices – the Gregorian, the Hermogenian, and the Theodosian – as well as those (constitutions) that, after these Codices, were issued by Theodosius of blessed memory and by other emperors in the past following him, and further those issued by Our Clemency; and by compiling, under Our auspicious name, a single Codex, in which should be collected both the constitutions of the three aforesaid Codices and the new constitutions issued after them.

1. And in order to accomplish this supreme work, which touches the preservation of the State itself, We have chosen men equal to such towering labors and so great a responsibility, namely, vir excellentissimus JOHN, ex-Quaestor of Our Imperial Palace, consular and patrician; vir sublimissimus LEONTIUS, Master of the Soldiers, consular and patrician; vir eminentissimus PHOCAS, Master of Soldiers, consular and patrician; vir gloriosissimus BASILIDES, ex-Praetorian Prefect of the East, and patrician; vir gloriosissimus THOMAS, Quaestor of Our Imperial Palace and ex-Consul; TRIBONIAN, vir magnificus, decorated with the rank of acting Master (of the Offices); vir illustris CONSTANTINE, acting Count of the Imperial Finances and Master of the Bureau of Petitions and Imperial Appeals; vir clarissimus THEOPHILUS, Count of Our Imperial Council and Professor of Law in this Generous City; DIOSCORUS and PRAESENTINUS, most learned advocates in the Most Exalted Praetorian Court.

2. We have given them specific permission to cut away prefaces that are superfluous as regards the completeness of the laws, as well as all repetitions and contradictions unless they contain a legal distinction, as well as whatever quae in desuetudinem abierunt, certas et brevi sermone conscriptas ex isdem tribus codicibus, novellis etiam constitutionibus leges componere et congruis subdere titulis, adicientes quidem et detrahentes, immo et mutantes verba earum, ubi hoc rei commoditas exigebat, colligentes vero in unam sanctionem, quae in variis constitutionibus dispersa sunt, et sensum earum clariorem efficientes, ita tamen, ut ordo temporum earundem constitutionum non solum ex adiectis diebus et consulibus, sed etiam ex ipsa compositione earum clarescat, primis quidem in primo loco, posterioribus vero in secundo ponendis et, si quae earum sine die et consule in veteribus codicibus vel in his, in quibus novellae constitutiones receptae sunt, inveniantur, ita his ponendis nullaque dubietate super generali earum robore ex hoc orienda, sicut et illas vim generalis constitutionis obtinere palam est, quae ad certas personas rescriptae vel per pragmaticam ab initio datae eidem novo codici propter utilitatem sanctionis inditae fuerint.

[1] This constitution is named, from its first word, the Constitutio Haec. It authorizes the so-called First Codex (Codex Novus), which in 534 was replaced by the Codex that is today preserved.

3. Haec igitur ad vestram notitiam ferre properavimus, ut sciatis, quanta nos diurna super rerum communium utilitate cura sollicitat, studentes certas et indubitatas et in unum codicem collectas esse de cetero constitutiones, ut ex eo tantummodo nostro felici nomine nuncupando codice recitatio constitutionum in omnibus ad citiores litium decisiones fiat iudiciis.

Data id. Febr. Constantinopoli dn. Iustiniano pp. A. II cons.

De Iustiniano Codice Confirmando

Imperator Iustinianus Pius Felix Inclitus Victor ac Triumphator Semper Augustus Menae viro illustri Praefecto Praetorio II Ex Praefecto Huius Almae Urbis ac patricio. pr. Summa rei publicae tuitio de stirpe duarum rerum armorum, atque legum veniens vimque suam exinde muniens felix Romanorum genus omnibus anteponi nationibus omnibusque dominari tam praeteritis effecit temporibus quam deo propitio in aeternum efficiet. istorum etenim alterum alterius auxilio semper viguit, et tam militaris res legibus in tuto collocata est, quam ipsae leges armorum praesidio servatae sunt. merito igitur ad prima communium rerum sustentationis semina nostram mentem nostrosque labores referentes militaria quidem agmina multiplicibus et omnem providentiam continentibus modis correximus tam veteribus ad meliorem statum brevi has fallen out of use; and to arrange unambiguous and concisely worded laws out of the three Codices and the new constitutions, and to put them under appropriate titles; adding and striking out, even changing their words where the suitability of the material has required this; to collect into one ordinance provisions scattered throughout various constitutions, and to clarify their meaning – provided that the chronological order of these constitutions shall appear clearly not only by indication of days and consuls (their dates), but also by the arrangement itself, the older constitutions being put first with the later ones following. And if any constitutions without day or consul are discovered in the ancient Codices or where the new constitutions are collected, they too shall be inserted, and no doubt as to their general force shall arise from this fact, just as it is clear that rescripts which were written to specific persons or were originally issued by pragmatic sanction[2] have the force of a general constitution and have been included in the New Codex on account of the usefulness of the enactment they contain.

3. We have hastened, therefore, to bring these matters to your attention, so that you may know the extent of Our daily solicitude for the common welfare, desiring that constitutions shall hereafter be certain, authoritative, and collected in one Codex. Thus, on the basis of this Codex to be called by Our own auspicious name, the citation of constitutions may expedite the resolution of litigation in all trials.

Given February 13, at Constantinople, in the consulship of Our Lord Justinian, Ever Augustus, Consul for the second time (528).

Confirmation of the Codex of Justinian[3]

Emperor Justinian, Pious, Fortunate, Renowned, Victor and Triumpher, Ever Augustus, to vir illustris Menas, Praetorian Prefect for the second time, ex-Prefect of this Generous City, and patrician. pr. The supreme safeguard of the State, stemming from two sources, (namely) arms and laws, and through them reinforcing its vitality, has made the fortunate Roman race preeminent above all peoples in the past, and, God willing, will do so forever. Each of these (arms and laws) has always flourished through the help of the other; as military affairs are safeguarded by the laws, so the laws themselves are maintained by the protection of arms. We have, therefore, fittingly turned Our thought and labor to the basic elements for preservation of the commonwealth and have improved the armed forces

[2] Blume: "An imperial decree or order or constitution addressed to a community, guild, municipality or other body of men concerning their public affairs." The issue here is that a constitution, though narrowly directed to one recipient, may still have, on occasion, the force of a general law.

[3] The Constitutio Summa (from its first word) promulgates the First Codex as law.

tempore reductis, quam novis non solum exquisitis, sed etiam recta dispositione nostri numinis sine novis expensis publicis constitutis, legum vero praesidia primo servando positas, deinde novas ponendo firmissima subiectis effecimus.

1. Sed cum sit necessarium multitudinem constitutionum tam in tribus veteribus codicibus relatarum quam post eorum confectionem posterioribus temporibus adiectarum ad brevitatem reducendo caliginem earum rectis iudicum definitionibus insidiantem penitus extirpare, ad hoc commune praestandum beneficium deo praesule prono animo nos dedidimus et electis viris gloriosissimis tam doctrina legum quam experientia rerum studioque pro re publica indefesso et laudabili proposito polientibus sub certis finibus magnum laborem commisimus, per quem tam trium veterum Gregoriani et Hermogeniani atque Theodosiani codicum constitutiones quam plurimas alias post eosdem codices a Theodosio divinae memoriae ceterisque post eum retro principibus, a nostra etiam clementia positas in unum codicem felici nostro vocabulo nuncupandum colligi praecepimus: tollendis quidem tam praefationibus nullum suffragium sanctioni conferentibus quam contrariis constitutionibus, quae posteriore promulgatione vacuatae sunt, similibus etiam praeter eas, quae eadem paene sanciendo divisionem iuris aliquam facere noscuntur, ex qua dividendo vetera novum aliquid nasci videtur, multis insuper aliis ad rectam huiusmodi codicis compositionem pertinentibus isdem prudentissimis viris a nostro numine mandatis.

2. Et nostro studio pro re publica instituto suum praesidium deus omnipotens adnuit ad istum enim laborem et tanti operis consummationem electi vir excellentissimus ex quaestore nostri palatii consularis ac patricius Iohannes et vir sublimissimus ex praefecto praetorio consularis atque patricius Leontius virque eminentissimus magister militum consularis atque patricius Phocas et vir excellentissimus ex praefecto praetorio per Orientem et patricius et nunc praefectus praetorio per Illyricum Basilides et vir gloriosissimus quaestor sacri nostri palatii et ex consule Thomas, immo et vir magnificus magisteria dignitate inter agentes decoratus Tribonianus virque illustris comes largitionum inter agentes et magister scrinii libellorum et sacrarum cognitionum Constantinus et vir illustris ex magistro et iuris doctor in hac alma urbe Theophilus, viri etiam disertissimi togati amplissimi fori tuae sublimitatis Dioscorus atque Praesentinus omnia, quae eis mandavimus, cum sedula et pervigili industria moderataque digestione cum eundem novum Iustinianum codicem nobis obtulerunt ita compositum, ut et rebus profuturus esset communibus et nostro convenisset imperio.

through manifold measures abounding in forethought. We both swiftly restored current troops to a better state, and not only recruited new ones but also established them at no additional public expense, through the right management of Our Divine Majesty. As for the bastions of the laws: first by preserving established laws, then by establishing new laws, We have made them impregnable for Our subjects. 1. But since it is necessary, by abridging the multitude of constitutions recorded in the three ancient Codices and those added in later times after their completion, to eradicate entirely the obscurity that undermines correct decisions by judges, We, by the grace of God, earnestly devoted Ourselves to providing this universal benefit; and, having chosen men of the greatest renown for their knowledge of the laws and experience in affairs and distinguished for their indefatigable patriotism and zeal, We have entrusted to them, within specified restrictions, this great task, whereby We directed that the constitutions of the three ancient Codices – the Gregorian, Hermogenian, and Theodosian – and as many others enacted, after (the compilation of) these Codices, by Theodosius of blessed memory and by other past emperors after him, as well as by Our Clemency, be collected into one Codex that is to be called by Our auspicious name. The prefaces, which contribute nothing to an enactment, are to be removed, as well as contradictory constitutions that have been annulled by a subsequent enactment, and also repetitions except for those that, though enacting nearly the same thing, yet are recognized as making some legal distinction whereby, by refining the old, something new seems to emerge. Many other things pertinent to the proper compilation of this Codex have been entrusted by Our Divine Majesty to these most learned men.

2. And Almighty God has granted his support to Our zealous undertaking on behalf of the State. For there was chosen, for the labor and completion of such great work, vir excellentissimus JOHN, ex-Quaestor of Our Palace, consular and patrician; and vir sublimissimus LEONTIUS, ex-Praetorian Prefect, consular and patrician; and vir eminentissimus PHOCAS, Master of the Soldiers, consular and patrician; and vir excellentissimus BASILIDES, ex-Praetorian Prefect of the Orient, patrician and now Praetorian Prefect of Illyria; and vir gloriosissimus THOMAS, Quaestor of Our Imperial Palace and ex-consul; and, indeed, vir magnificus TRIBONIAN, decorated with the rank of acting Master (of the Offices); and vir illustris CONSTANTINE, acting Count of the Imperial Finances and Master of the Bureaus of Petitions and Appeals; and vir illustris THEOPHILUS, ex-Master and Professor of Law in this Generous City; and DIOSCORUS and PRAESENTINUS, most learned advocates in the Most Exalted Court of Your Sublimity. They, with diligent and careful labor and judicious reflection, have with God's help brought to a happy conclusion everything that We entrusted to them, and have delivered to Us this new Codex of Justinian, composed in such a way that it should both benefit the common welfare and conform to Our rule.

3. Hunc igitur in aeternum valiturum iudicio tui culminis intimare prospeximus, ut sciant omnes tam litigatores quam disertissimi advocati nullatenus eis licere de cetero constitutiones ex veteribus tribus codicibus, quorum iam mentio facta est, vel ex iis, quae novellae constitutiones ad praesens tempus vocabantur, in cognitionalibus recitare certaminibus, sed solis eidem nostro codici insertis constitutionibus necesse esse uti, falsi crimini subdendis his, qui contra haec facere ausi fuerint, cum sufficiat earundem constitutionum nostri codicis recitatio adiectis etiam veterum iuris interpretatorum laboribus ad omnes dirimendas lites, nullaque dubitatione emergenda vel eo, quod sine die et consule quaedam positae sunt, vel quod ad certas personas rescriptae sunt, cum omnes generalium constitutionum vim obtinere procul dubio est. sed et si quae earundem constitutionum detractis vel additis vel permutatis certis verbis, quod et ipsum praefatis excellentissimis viris specialiter permisimus, compositae sunt, nulli concedimus ex libris veteris iuris interpretatorum aliter eas habentes recitare, sed solam iuris interpretatoris sententiam commendare, ut tunc teneat, cum minime adversetur eiusdem nostri codicis constitutionibus.

4. Si quae vero pragmaticae sanctiones, quae minime in eodem nostro codice receptae sunt, civitatibus forte vel corporibus vel scholis vel scriniis vel officiis vel alicui personae impertitae sunt, eas, si quidem aliquod privilegium speciali beneficio indulgent, omni modo ratas manere, sin vero pro certis capitulis factae sunt, tunc tenere, cum nulli nostri codicis adversantur constitutioni, praecipimus. sed et si qua regesta in tui culminis iudicio vel in aliis iudiciis civilibus vel militaribus vel apud principia numerorum pro publicis expensis vel quibuscumque titulis ad publicum pertinentibus posita sunt, ea etiam, prout communis rei commoditas exigit, firma esse censemus.

5. Illustris igitur et magnifica auctoritas tua pro innato sibi circa rem publicam nostrasque dispositiones explendas studio ad omnium populorum notitiam eundem codicem edictis ex more propositis pervenire faciat, ipso etiam textu codicis in singulas provincias nostro subiectas imperio cum nostra divina subnotatione mittendo ut eo modo ad omnium notitiam eiusdem nostri codicis constitutiones valeant pervenire, ut extantibus festis diebus, id est ex die sexto decimo kalendas Maias praesentis septimae indictionis consulatu Decii viri clarissimi recitationes constitutionum ex eodem nostro codice fiant.

Data VII id. April. Constantinopoli Decio viro clarissimo consule.

3. This Codex, which will endure forever, We have seen fit to communicate to the court of Your Highness, so that all litigants and learned lawyers may know that they will not hereafter be permitted, in court proceedings, to cite the constitutions of the three ancient Codices already mentioned, or the constitutions hitherto called "new" (novellae); instead, they are required to use only the constitutions included in Our Codex. Persons who dare to violate these provisions shall be subject to prosecution for forgery (falsum), since citation of these same constitutions in Our Codex, together with the works of the ancient interpreters of the law,[4] suffices to settle all lawsuits, and no doubt can arise either because some of the constitutions are without day and consul, or because they are written to specific individuals, since all of them have, without question, the force of general constitutions. And if some of the constitutions were composed by subtracting, adding, or changing certain words, which We have expressly permitted the aforesaid viri excellentissimi to do, We allow no one to recite them out of the books of the ancient interpreters of the law, which present different texts (of the constitutions); but one may cite only the opinion of the interpreter of the law, which shall prevail as long as it does not contradict the constitutions of Our Codex.

4. If any pragmatic sanctions, not collected in this Our Codex, have, perchance, been issued to cities, legal persons, groups, bureaus, offices, or any person, they shall remain entirely in force if they grant any privilege by special favor; but if issued on specific points (of law), We order that they shall be valid only if not contrary to any constitution of Our Codex. Also, if any records (regesta)[5] are found in the court of Your Highness, or in other civil or military courts or in the headquarters of the army, relating to public expenses or to any other public matters, We ordain that these, too, shall remain in force to the extent that the public advantage requires.

5. Your Illustrious and Magnificent Authority will, therefore, in accord with your inborn zeal for the State and for executing Our commands, bring the said Codex to the attention of all peoples through edicts published in the customary way, and send the text of the Codex, with Our imperial signature, to every province under Our sway, in order that the constitutions of Our Codex may thereby become known to all, (and) that citations of the constitutions in Our Codex may begin from the coming holidays, that is to say, from the April 16 on, of the current seventh indiction in the consulship of Decius, vir clarissimus.

Given April 7, at Constantinople, in the consulship of vir clarissimus Decius (529).

[4] In 529, Justinian refers to the uncodified writings of the Roman jurists, which were later to be authoritatively recast in the Digest (530–533).

[5] Blume: "These were the records of an official ... The records here mentioned, were doubtless those that were made up from orders directed to the official, relating to expenses and other similar matters, and were more in the nature of orders rather than laws."

De Emendatione Codicis Iustiniani et Secunda Eius Editione

In nomine Domini Nostri Ihesu Christi Imperator Caesar Flavius Iustinianus Alamannicus Gothicus Francicus Germanicus Anticus Alanicus Vandalicus Africanus Pius Felix Inclitus Victor ac Trimphator Semper Augustus Senatui Urbis Constantinopolitanae S. pr. Cordi nobis est, patres conscripti, semper nostri animi curas rebus omnibus avidissime impendere, ut nihil a nobis coeptum imperfectum relinquatur. igitur in primordio nostri imperii sacratissimas constitutiones, quae in diversa volumina fuerant dispersae et quam plurima similitudine nec non diversitate vacillabant, in unum corpus colligere omnique vitio purgare proposuimus. et hoc iam per viros excelsos et facundissimos perfectum est et a nobis postea confirmatum: quod geminae constitutiones nostrae quae ante positae sunt ostendunt.

1. Postea vero cum vetus ius considerandum recepimus, tam quinquaginta decisiones fecimus quam alias ad commodum propositi operis pertinentes plurimas constitutiones promulgavimus, quibus maximus antiquarum rerum articulus emendatus et coartatus est omneque ius antiquum supervacua prolixitate liberum atque enucleatum in nostris institutionibus et digestis reddidimus. 2. Sed cum novellae nostrae tam decisiones quam constitutiones, quae post nostri codicis confectionem latae sunt, extra corpus eiusdem codicis divagabantur et nostram providentiam nostrumque consilium exigere videbantur, quippe cum earum quaedam ex emersis postea factis aliquam meliore consilio permutationem vel emendationem desiderabant, necessarium nobis visum est per TRIBONIANUM virum excelsum magistrum ex quaestore et ex consule, legitimi operis nostri ministrum, nec non virum magnificium quaestorium et Beryti legum doctorem DOROTHEUM, MENAM insuper et CONSTANTINUM et IOHANNEM viros eloquentissimos togatos fori amplissimae sedis easdem constitutiones nostras decerpere et in singula discretas capitula ad perfectarum constitutionum soliditatem competentibus supponere titulis et prioribus constitutionibus eas adgregare.

3. Supra dictis itaque magnificis et prudentissimis viris permisimus haec omnia facere et, si qua emendatione opus fieret, hanc facere non titubante animo, sed nostra auctoritate fretos, constitutiones vero superfluas vel ex posterioribus sanctionibus nostris iam vacuatas, vel si quae similes vel contrariae invenirentur, circumducere et a prioris codicis congregatione separare et tam imperfectas replere quam nocte obscuritatis

Correction of the Codex of Justinian and its second edition[6]

In the name of Our Lord Jesus Christ, the Emperor Caesar Flavius JUSTINIAN, Alamannicus, Gothicus, Francicus, Germanicus, Anticus, Alanicus, Vandalicus, Africanus, pious, fortunate, famous, victorious, and triumphant, Ever Augustus, to the Senate of the City of Constantinople, greetings. pr. We have it at heart, conscript Senators, to direct the concerns of Our thoughts always most earnestly on all matters, so that nothing We undertake should be left incomplete. Therefore We proposed at the beginning of Our reign to collect into one compendium, and to cleanse of every fault, the imperial constitutions that were scattered through various volumes and that wavered under frequent repetition and even contradiction (i.e., were indecisive as law). This collection has already been completed by eminent and most eloquent men, and thereafter confirmed by Us, as Our two preceding constitutions show.

1. But after We came to consider the ancient law,[7] We made Fifty Decisions and promulgated many other constitutions for the betterment of the proposed work, and thereby a very large portion of the old legal system was corrected and shortened, and We redacted all of the ancient law, freed from verbosity and reduced to its core, in Our Institutes and Digest. 2. But since Our new legislation (novellae), both judicial decisions and constitutions made after the completion of Our Codex, were scattered outside the compendium of this same Codex and appeared to demand Our care and consideration, especially since some of the laws, by reason of facts arising later and after fuller deliberation, required some change or correction, We thought it necessary – through (the agency of) vir excelsus TRIBONIAN, Master (of the Offices), ex-Quaestor, ex-Consul, promoter of Our legal work; along with vir magnificus DOROTHEUS, Quaestor and Professor of Law at Beirut; and MENAS, CONSTANTINE, and JOHN, most eloquent advocates in the Most Exalted (Praetorian) Court – to gather Our constitutions, to distribute them into individual chapters and insert them under titles relevant to the content of the completed constitutions, and to add them to the former constitutions.

3. We have permitted the aforesaid magnificent and most learned men to do all this, and, if there should be any need for correction, to make it unhesitatingly, bolstered by Our authority: to delete and discard from the collection of the prior Codex superfluous constitutions, or those repealed by Our subsequent decrees, or if any repetitions or contradictions are found; to supplement incomplete constitutions, and to illuminate with the new light of explication those enveloped in dismal obscurity – in order not only that the path of the Institutes and Digest might lie clear and intelligible, but also that the full brilliance of the constitutions of Our Codex may shine forth for all, leaving nothing obductas nova elimationis luce retegere, ut undique non solum institutionum et digestorum via dilucida et aperta pateret, sed etiam constitutionum nostri codicis plenum iubar omnibus clareat, nulla penitus nec simili nec diversa nec inusitata relicta, cum nemini venit in dubium, quod repetita praelectio probavit, hoc satis validum satisque esse formosum. in antiquis etenim libris non solum primas editiones, sed etiam secundas, quas repetitae praelectionis veteres nominabant, subsecutas esse invenimus, quod ex libris Ulpiani viri prudentissimi ad Sabinum scriptis promptum erat quaerentibus reperire.

[6] The Constitutio Cordi of 534, promulgating the (second) Codex as law.

[7] I.e., began to compile the Digest (vetus ius).

4. His igitur omnibus ex nostra confectis sententia, cum memoratus Iustinianus codex a praedictis gloriosissimis et facundissimis viris purgatus et candidus factus omnibus ex nostra iussione et circumductis et additis et repletis nec non transformatis, nobis oblatus est, iussimus in secundo eum ex integro conscribi non ex priore compositione, sed ex repetita praelectione, et eum nostri numinis auctoritate nitentem in omnibus iudiciis solum, quantum ad divales constitutiones pertinet, frequentari ex die quarto kalendarum Ianuariarum quarti nostri felicissimi consulatus et Paulini viri clarissimi, nulla alia extra corpus eiusdem codicis constitutione legenda, nisi postea varia rerum natura aliquid novum creaverit, quod nostra sanctione indigeat. hoc etenim nemini dubium est, quod, si quid in posterum melius inveniatur et ad constitutionem necessario sit redigendum, hoc a nobis et constituatur et in aliam congregationem referatur, quae novellarum nomine constitutionum significetur. 5. Repetita itaque iussione nemini in posterum concedimus vel ex decisionibus nostris vel ex aliis constitutionibus, quas antea fecimus, vel ex prima Iustiniani codicis editione aliquid recitare: sed quod in praesenti purgato et renovato codice nostro scriptum inveniatur, hoc tantummodo in omnibus rebus et iudiciis et obtineat et recitetur. cuius scripturam ad similitudinem nostrarum institutionum et digestorum sine ulla signorum dubietate conscribi iussimus, ut omne, quod a nobis compositum est, hoc et in scriptura et in ipsa sanctione purum atque dilucidum clareat, licet ex hac causa in ampliorem numerum summa huius codicis redacta est.

6. Ut igitur, sanctissimi atque florentissimi patres, nostri labores vobis manifesti fiant et per omne tempus obtineant, hanc praesentem legem ad frequentissimum ordinem vestrum duximus destinandam.

D. XVI k. Dec. Constantinopoli dn. Iustiniano pp. A. IIII et Paulino vc. conss.

repetitive or contradictory or obsolete, since no one may doubt whether what has been approved in a second revision is sufficiently legitimate and normative. For in ancient books we find that not only first, but also second editions ensued – what the ancients called a "subsequent reading" – as inquirers may readily learn from the writings of the most learned Ulpian on Sabinus.

4. When all these things were, therefore, completed according to Our wish, and the aforesaid Codex of Justinian was delivered to Us by the aforementioned most eloquent viri gloriosissimi – after it was purged and rendered lucid, with all things, in accord with Our command, having been omitted, added, supplemented, and at times recast – We ordered again that it be copied afresh, not on the basis of the first composition, but from the "subsequent reading"; and, pursuant to the authority of Our Divine Majesty, insofar as imperial constitutions are concerned, it alone shall be consulted in all courts as of December 29 in Our fourth most auspicious consulship and that of Paulinus, vir clarissimus; and no constitution outside of the collection in this Codex shall be read, unless the changing nature of things should thereafter create something new demanding Our legislation. For no one may doubt that if anything better is found in the future, which must be put into a constitution, this may both be issued by Us and be recorded in another collection designated by the name of New Constitutions (Novellae). 5. Repeating Our order, We permit no one hereafter to cite (in court) anything either from Our Decisions or from constitutions made by Us previously, or from the first edition of the Codex of Justinian; rather, the contents of Our present purged and revised Code, and they alone, shall be in force and be cited in all matters and in all courts. We have ordered that, as in the case of Our Institutes and Digest, the text shall be free of all ambiguous symbols (i.e., abbreviations), so that everything composed by Us may be pure and plain in the writing just as in the enactment itself, even though the size of this Codex has thereby been increased greatly.

6. Therefore, most holy and excellent Senators, in order that Our labors might become known to you and effective for all time, We have thought it best to address this present law to your plenary assembly.

Given November 16, at Constantinople, in the consulship of Our Lord Justinian, Ever Augustus, Consul for the fourth time, and the vir clarissimus Paulinus (534).

In Nomine Domini Nostri Ihesu Christi
Codicis Domini Nostri
Sacratissimi Principis
Repetitae Praelectionis

Liber Primus

I De Summa Trinitate et de Fide Catholica et Ut Nemo de Ea Publice Contendere Audeat

[1] Imppp. Gratianus Valentinianus et Theodosius AAA. ad populum urbis Constantinopolitanae. pr. Cunctos populos, quos clementiae nostrae regit temperamentum, in tali volumus religione versari, quam divinum Petrum apostolum tradidisse Romanis religio usque ad nunc ab ipso insinuata declarat quamque pontificem Damasum sequi claret et Petrum Alexandriae episcopum virum apostolicae sanctitatis, hoc est ut secundum apostolicam disciplinam evangelicamque doctrinam patris et filii et spiritus sancti unam deitatem sub pari maiestate et sub pia trinitate credamus. 1. Hanc legem sequentes Christianorum catholicorum nomen iubemus amplecti, reliquos vero dementes vesanosque iudicantes haeretici dogmatis infamiam sustinere, divina primum vindicta, post etiam motus nostri, quem ex caelesti arbitrio sumpserimus, ultione plectendos.

D. III k. Mart. Thessalonica Gratiano V et Theodosio AA. conss.

[2] Idem AAA. Eutropio pp. pr. Nullus haereticis mysteriorum locus, nulla ad exercendam animi obstinatioris dementiam pateat occasio. sciant omnes, etiamsi quid speciali quolibet rescripto per fraudem elicito ab huiusmodi hominum genere impetratum sit, non valere. arceantur

In the Name of Our Lord Jesus Christ, of the Revised Edition of the Codex of Our Lord,
the Most Sacred Emperor
JUSTINIAN

First Book

edited by John Noël Dillon

First Title The High Trinity and the Catholic Faith, and That No One Shall Dare to Discuss It Publicly

[1][1] Emperors GRATIAN, VALENTINIAN, and THEODOSIUS Augusti to the People of Constantinople. pr. We desire that all peoples who are governed by the moderation of Our Clemency shall practice that religion which was handed down by the divine Apostle Peter to the Romans, as shown by the religion introduced by him and transmitted down to this day – the religion which, it is clear, is now followed by the (Roman) Pontiff Damasus, and by Peter, Bishop of Alexandria, a man of apostolic sanctity; that is, according to apostolic learning and the teaching of the evangelists, we shall believe in one deity of the Father and the Son and the Holy Spirit, in equal majesty and in a pious[2] Trinity. 1. We order all who obey this law to embrace the name of Catholic Christians, and all others, whom We deem mad and insane, to suffer the infamy of heretical doctrine; they shall be stricken, first, by divine vengeance and, second, also by the vengeance of Our wrath, which We shall take in accordance with the judgment of Heaven.

Given February 28, at Thessalonica, in the consulship of Gratian, for the fifth time, and Theodosius, Augusti (380).

[2][3] The same Augusti to Eutropius, Praetorian Prefect. pr. No place for celebrating the mysteries, no opportunity for indulging the madness of an obstinate mind, shall be open to heretics. Let all know that even if some privilege has been obtained by such men in the form of a surreptitious rescript, it shall not be valid. The throngs of all heretics shall be kept from their unlawful congregations.

[1] = C.Th. 16.1.2; combine with C. 9.29.1.
[2] Beyond religiosity, the adjective pius in the Latin suggests the harmonious, quasi-familial relationship of all three members of the Trinity according to Nicene doctrine.
[3] = C.Th. 16.5.6.

cunctorum haereticorum ab illicitis congregationibus turbae: unius et summi dei nomen ubique celebretur: Nicaenae fidei dudum a maioribus traditae et divinae religionis testimonio atque adsertione firmatae observantia semper mansura teneatur. 1. Is autem Nicaenae adsertor fidei et catholicae religionis verus cultor accipiendus est, qui omnipotentem deum et Christum filium dei uno nomine confitetur, deum de deo, lumen ex lumine, qui spiritum sanctum, quem ex summo rerum parente speramus et accipimus, negando non violat, apud quem intemeratae fidei sensu viget incorruptae trinitatis indivisa substantia, quae Graeco verbo οὐσία recte credentibus dicitur. haec profecto nobis magis probata, haec veneranda sunt. 2. Qui vero isdem non inserviunt, desinant affectatis dolis alienum verae religionis nomen adsumere et suis apertis criminibus denotentur: ab omnium submoti ecclesiarum limine penitus arceantur, cum omnes haereticos illicitas agere intra oppida congregationes vetemus. ac si quid eruptio factiosa temptaverit, ab ipsis etiam urbium moenibus exterminato furore propelli iubemus, ut cunctis orthodoxis episcopis, qui Nicaenam fidem tenent, catholicae ecclesiae toto orbe reddantur.

D. IIII id. Ian. Constantinopoli Eucherio et Syagrio conss.

[3] Αὐτοκράτορες Θεοδόσιος καὶ Οὐαλεντινιανός ΑΑ. Ὁρμίσδᾳ ἐπάρχῳ πραιτωρίων. 1. Θεσπίζομεν πάντα, ὅσα Πορφύριος ὑπὸ τῆς ἑαυτοῦ μανίας ἐλαυνόμενος ἢ ἕτερός τις κατὰ τῆς εὐσεβοῦς τῶν Χριστιανῶν θρησκείας συνέγραψε, παρ᾽ οἱῳδήποτε εὑρισκόμενα πυρὶ παραδίδοσθαι. πάντα γὰρ τὰ κινοῦντα τὸν θεὸν εἰς ὀργὴν συγγράμματα καὶ τὰς ψυχὰς ἀδικοῦντα οὐδὲ εἰς ἀκοὰς ἀνθρώπων ἐλθεῖν βουλόμεθα. 2. Ἔτι θεσπίζομεν τοὺς ζηλοῦντας τὴν ἀσεβῆ Νεστορίου πίστιν ἢ τῇ ἀθεμίτῳ αὐτοῦ διδασκαλίᾳ ἀκολουθοῦντας, εἰ μὲν ἐπίσκοποι εἶεν ἢ κληρικοί, τῶν ἁγίων ἐκκλησιῶν ἐκβάλλεσθαι, εἰ δὲ λαϊκοί, ἀναθεματίζεσθαι. ἐξουσίαν ἐχόντων τῶν βουλομένων ὀρθοδόξων τῶν ἑπομένων τῇ εὐσεβεῖ ἡμῶν νομοθεσίᾳ δίχα φόβου καὶ βλαβῆς δημοσιεύειν αὐτοὺς καὶ ἐλέγχειν.

3. Ἐπειδὴ δὲ ἦλθεν εἰς τὰς εὐσεβεῖς ἡμῶν ἀκοάς, ὥς τινες διδασκαλίας τινὰς συνέγραψαν καὶ ἐξέθεντο ἀμφιβόλους καὶ οὐκ ἀκριβῶς συμφωνούσας τῇ ἐκτεθείσῃ ὀρθοδόξῳ πίστει παρὰ τῆς ἁγίας συνόδου τῶν συνελθόντων ἐν Νικαίᾳ καὶ ἐν Ἐφέσῳ ἁγίων πατέρων καὶ Κυρίλλου τοῦ τῆς εὐσεβοῦς μνήμης τοῦ γεγονότος τῆς μεγάλης Ἀλεξανδρέων πόλεως ἐπισκόπου, κελεύομεν τὰ μὲν γεγονότα τοιαῦτα συγγράμματα ἢ πρὸ τούτου ἢ καὶ

The name of the One and Supreme God shall be worshipped everywhere. The Nicene Creed, handed down to us long ago by our elders and strengthened by the testimony and affirmation of divine religion, shall be kept with enduring obedience. 1. He moreover shall be considered a follower of the Nicene Creed and a true adherent of the Catholic religion, who confesses Almighty God and Christ the Son of God with one name, God from God, light from light; who does not, by denying him, dishonor the Holy Spirit that we hope for and receive from the Supreme Creator of all things; (and) in which, through the perception of untainted faith, thrives the indivisible essence of the uncorrupted Trinity, which those of correct belief call by the Greek word ousía ("essence"). This indeed is what We prefer, this is what should be worshipped. 2. Those who do not conform thereto shall cease to usurp deceitfully the name of the true religion, which is not theirs, and shall be branded for their blatant crimes. They shall be removed and entirely barred from the threshold of all churches, for We forbid all heretics to hold unlawful meetings in towns. If any sectarian uprising should attempt anything, We order that their frenzy be banished and that they be driven from the very walls of the cities, so that the Catholic churches all over the world may be returned to all[4] orthodox bishops who abide by the Nicene Creed.

Given January 10, at Constantinople, in the consulship of Eucherius and Syagrius (381).

[3]Emperors THEODOSIUS and VALENTINIAN Augusti to Hormisdas, Praetorian Prefect. 1. We decree that everything that Porphyrius, driven by his own madness, or anyone else has written against the pious religion of the Christians, regardless in whose possession it should be found, shall be consigned to the fire. For We wish that no writings that provoke God to anger and outrage souls should even come into the knowledge of men. 2. We also decree that those who accept the impious faith of Nestorius or follow his nefarious doctrine shall, if they are bishops or clergymen, be expelled from the Holy Churches; if they are laypersons, they shall be anathematized. Orthodox Christians who so wish, in obedience to Our pious legislation, shall have the freedom to denounce and accuse them without fear or harm to themselves.

3. Since it has, moreover, come to Our pious ears that some persons have written and published ambiguous doctrines, which are not in exact harmony with the orthodox faith laid down by the holy council of the holy fathers who assembled at Nicaea and Ephesus, and by Cyril of blessed memory, formerly bishop of the great city of Alexandria, We order that such books, whether written before this time or now, and especially those of Nestorius, shall be burned and given over to complete destruction, so that they may not come to be read νῦν ἐμπίπρασθαι καὶ διαφερόντως τὰ Νεστορίου, καὶ τελείῳ ἀφανισμῷ παραδίδοσθαι, ὥστε μηδὲ εἰς ἀνάγνωσίν τινος ἐλθεῖν· τῶν τὰ τοιαῦτα συγγράμματα ἤτοι βιβλία ἔχειν καὶ ἀναγινώσκειν ἀνεχομένων τὴν ἐσχάτην τιμωρίαν ὑφορωμένων. τοῦ δὲ λοιποῦ μηδενὶ ἐξεῖναι παρὰ τὴν ἐκτεθεῖσαν πίστιν, καθάπερ εἰρήκαμεν, τὴν ἐν Νικαίᾳ καὶ ἐν Ἐφέσῳ λέγειν τι ἢ διδάσκειν.

[4] It is possible that cunctis means that churches will be returned strictly to orthodox bishops.

D. XIIII k. Mart. Constantinopoli Zenone et Postumiano conss.

[4] Imp. Marcianus A. Palladio pp. pr. Nemo clericus vel militans vel alterius cuiuslibet condicionis de fide Christiana publice turbis coadunatis et audientibus tractare conetur in posterum, ex hoc tumultus et perfidiae occasionem requirens. 1. Nam iniuriam facit iudicio reverentissimae synodi, si quis semel iudicata ac recte disposita revolvere et publice disputare contendit, cum ea, quae nunc de Christiana fide a sacerdotibus, qui Chalcedone convenerunt, per nostra praecepta statuta sunt, iuxta apostolicas expositiones et instituta sanctorum patrum trecentorum decem et octo et centum quinquaginta definita esse noscuntur. 2. Nam in contemptores huius legis poena non deerit, quia non solum contra fidem vere expositam veniunt, sed etiam Iudaeis et paganis ex huiusmodi certamine profanant veneranda mysteria. 3. Igitur si clericus erit, qui publice tractare de religione ausus fuerit, consortio clericorum removebitur: si vero militia praeditus sit, cingulo spoliabitur: ceteri etiam huiusmodi criminis rei, si quidem liberi sint, de hac sacratissima urbe pellentur, pro vigore iudiciario etiam competentibus suppliciis subiugandi, sin vero servi, severissimis animadversionibus plectentur.

D. VII id. Febr. Constantinopoli Sporacio cons.

[5] Αὐτοκράτωρ Ἰουστινιανὸς Αὔγουστος. pr. Τῆς ὀρθῆς καὶ ἀμωμήτου πίστεως, ἥνπερ κηρύττει ἡ ἁγία τοῦ θεοῦ καθολικὴ καὶ ἀποστολικὴ ἐκκλησία, κατ' οὐδένα τρόπον καινισμὸν δεξαμένης ἀκολουθοῦντες ἡμεῖς τοῖς τῶν ἁγίων ἀποστόλων καὶ τῶν μετ' ἐκείνους διαπρεψάντων ἐν ταῖς ἁγίαις τοῦ θεοῦ ἐκκλησίαις διδάγμασι δίκαιον ᾠήθημεν ἅπασι ποιῆσαι φανερόν, ὅπως ἔχομεν περὶ τῆς ἐν ἡμῖν ἐλπίδος, ἀκολουθοῦντες τῇ παραδόσει καὶ ὁμολογίᾳ τῆς ἁγίας τοῦ θεοῦ καθολικῆς καὶ ἀποστολικῆς ἐκκλησίας.

1. Πιστεύοντες γὰρ εἰς πατέρα καὶ υἱὸν καὶ ἅγιον πνεῦμα μίαν οὐσίαν ἐν τρισὶν ὑποστάσεσι προσκυνοῦμεν, μίαν θεότητα, μίαν δύναμιν, τριάδα by anyone. Those who continue to possess and read such writings or books shall suffer supreme punishment (death). No one hereafter shall be permitted to say or teach anything against the faith established, as We have said, in Nicaea and Ephesus.

Given February 16, in Constantinople, in the consulship of Zeno and Postumianus (448).

[4] Emperor MARCIAN Augustus to Palladius, Praetorian Prefect. pr. No clergyman or member of the imperial service, or any person of any status, shall hereafter attempt to lecture on the Christian faith before crowds assembled to listen, thereby seeking to foment disorder and treachery.[5] 1. For whoever strives to revisit and publicly discuss questions already decided and correctly settled, insults the judgment of the Most Holy Synod. For it is recognized that the decisions concerning the Christian faith, made at Our behest by the bishops who convened at Chalcedon, are in accord with the teachings of the Apostles and the decrees of the 318 and 150 holy fathers.[6] 2. Punishment shall not be lacking for those who disregard this law, for they not only act contrary to the rightly expounded faith, but also, by such strife, profane the venerable mysteries before the eyes of Jews and Pagans. 3. If a clergyman, therefore, dares to discuss religion in public, he shall be expelled from the community of the clergy; if he holds a position in the imperial service, he shall be stripped of his rank (cingulum). All others guilty of this crime shall, if they are free men, be banished from this Most Sacred City and shall be subjected to appropriate punishments in accordance with judicial vigor; if they are slaves, however, they shall be stricken with the severest punishments (death).

Given February 7, at Constantinople, in the consulship of Sporacius (452).

[5] Emperor JUSTINIAN Augustus. pr. As the true and immaculate faith professed by the Holy Catholic and Apostolic Church of God in no way admits of innovation, We, following the precepts of the holy apostles and those who after them were renowned in the Holy Churches of God, believe it proper to make manifest to all where We stand concerning the hope within Us, following the tradition and confession (of faith) of the Holy Catholic and Apostolic Church of God.

1. Believing, therefore, in the Father, the Son, and the Holy Spirit, We worship one substance in three persons,[7] one deity, one power, a consubstantial Trinity. We confess the Only Begotten Son of God, God of God, begotten of the Father before the ages and without time, coeternal with the Father, from [5] The Latin word perfidia also evokes the "bad faith," i.e., wrong belief, of heretics.

[6] The bishops who convened at Nicaea in 325 and at Constantinople in 381, respectively.

[7] Greek ὑπόστασις also means substance (see Latin substantia) but, in this context, the prefix ὑπο- suggests an underlying essence (οὐσία) of the Trinity, or "sub-substance."

ὁμοούσιον. Ἐπ' ἐσχάτων δὲ τῶν ἡμερῶν ὁμολογοῦμεν τὸν μονογενῆ υἱὸν τοῦ θεοῦ, τὸν ἐκ τοῦ θεοῦ θεόν, τὸν πρὸ αἰώνων καὶ ἀχρόνως ἐκ τοῦ πατρὸς γεννηθέντα, τὸν συναΐδιον τῷ πατρί, τὸν ἐξ οὗ τὰ πάντα καὶ δι' οὗ τὰ πάντα, κατελθόντα ἐκ τῶν οὐρανῶν, σαρκωθῆναι ἐκ πνεύματος ἁγίου καὶ τῆς ἁγίας ἐνδόξου ἀειπαρθένου καὶ θεοτόκου Μαρίας, καὶ ἐνανθρωπῆσαι σταυρόν τε ὑπομεῖναι, ταφῆναί τε καὶ ἀναστῆναι τῇ τρίτῃ ἡμέρᾳ· ἑνὸς καὶ τοῦ αὐτοῦ τά τε θαύματα καὶ τὰ πάθη, ἅπερ ἑκουσίως ὑπέμεινε σαρκί, γινώσκοντες. 2. Οὐ γὰρ ἄλλον τὸν θεὸν λόγον καὶ ἄλλον τὸν Χριστὸν ἐπιστάμεθα, ἀλλ' ἕνα καὶ τὸν αὐτὸν ὁμοούσιον τῷ πατρὶ κατὰ τὴν θεότητα καὶ ὁμοούσιον ἡμῖν τὸν αὐτὸν κατὰ τὴν ἀνθρωπότητα. ἔμεινε γὰρ τριὰς ἡ τριὰς καὶ σαρκωθέντος τοῦ ἑνὸς τῆς τριάδος θεοῦ λόγου· οὔτε γὰρ τετάρτου προσώπου προσθήκην ἐπιδέχεται ἡ ἁγία τριάς.

3. Τούτων τοίνυν οὕτως ἐχόντων ἀναθεματίζομεν πᾶσαν αἵρεσιν, ἐξαιρέτως δὲ Νεστόριον τὸν ἀνθρωπολάτρην, τὸν διαιροῦντα τὸν ἕνα κύριον ἡμῶν Ἰησοῦν Χριστὸν τὸν υἱὸν τοῦ θεοῦ καὶ θεὸν ἡμῶν, καὶ μὴ ὁμολογοῦντα κυρίως καὶ κατὰ ἀλήθειαν τὴν ἁγίαν ἔνδοξον ἀειπάρθενον Μαρίαν θεοτόκον, ἀλλὰ ἄλλον μὲν τὸν ἐκ τοῦ πατρὸς θεὸν λόγον λέγοντα, ἄλλον δὲ τὸν ἐκ τῆς ἁγίας ἀειπαρθένου Μαρίας, χάριτι δὲ καὶ οἰκειώσει τῇ πρὸς τὸν θεὸν λόγον θεὸν αὐτὸν γεγενῆσθαι· οὐ μὴν ἀλλὰ καὶ Εὐτυχέα τὸν φρενοβλαβῆ, τὸν φαντασίαν εἰσάγοντα ἀρνούμενόν τε τὴν ἐκ τῆς ἁγίας ἀειπαρθένου καὶ θεοτόκου Μαρίας ἀληθινὴν σάρκωσιν, τουτέστι τὴν ἡμετέραν σωτηρίαν, καὶ μὴ ὁμολογοῦντα κατὰ πάντα ὁμοούσιον τῷ πατρὶ κατὰ τὴν θεότητα καὶ ὁμοούσιον ἡμῖν τὸν αὐτὸν κατὰ τὴν ἀνθρωπότητα· τὸν αὐτὸν δὲ τρόπον καὶ Ἀπολλινάριον τὸν ψυχοφθόρον, τὸν ἄνουν λέγοντα τὸν κύριον ἡμῶν Ἰησοῦν Χριστὸν τὸν υἱὸν τοῦ θεοῦ καὶ θεὸν ἡμῶν καὶ σύγχυσιν ἤτοι φυρμὸν εἰσάγοντα τῇ ἐνανθρωπήσει τοῦ μονογενοῦς υἱοῦ τοῦ θεοῦ, καὶ πάντας τοὺς τὰ αὐτῶν φρονήσαντας ἢ φρονοῦντας. 4. Εἰ γάρ τινες μετὰ ταύτην ἡμῶν τὴν προαγόρευσιν καὶ τὴν τῶν κατὰ τόπον θεοφιλεστάτων ἡμῶν ἐπισκόπων πληροφορίαν εὑρεθῶσι τοῦ λοιποῦ γνώμης ἐναντίας ὄντες, μὴ προσδοκήσωσι συγγνώμης ἀξιωθῆναι· κελεύομεν γὰρ τοὺς τοιούτους ὡς ὁμολογουμένους αἱρετικοὺς τῷ προσήκοντι ὑποβάλλεσθαι σωφρονισμῷ.

Dat. ...

[6] Ὁ αὐτὸς βασιλεὺς Κωνσταντινουπολίταις. pr. Τὸν σωτῆρα καὶ δεσπότην τῶν ὅλων, Ἰησοῦν Χριστὸν τὸν ἀληθινὸν θεὸν ἡμῶν θεραπεύοντες διὰ πάντων σπουδάζομεν, ὅσον ἐνδέχεται νοῦν καταλαμβάνειν ἀνθρώπινον, μιμεῖσθαι τὴν αὐτοῦ συγκατάβασιν. 1. Καὶ εὑρόντες τινὰς τῇ νόσῳ καὶ μανίᾳ κρατουμένους τῶν ἀσεβῶν Νεστορίου καὶ Εὐτυχοῦς τῶν ἐχθρῶν τοῦ θεοῦ καὶ τῆς ἁγίας καθολικῆς καὶ ἀποστολικῆς ἐκκλησίας, ἀρνουμένους τὴν ἁγίαν ἔνδοξον ἀειπάρθενον Μαρίαν θεοτόκον εἰπεῖν κυρίως καὶ whom and through whom all things were made; who in the last days descended from Heaven and was made flesh through the Holy Spirit and Mary, the Holy, Glorious, Ever-Virgin Mother of God; became man and suffered on the cross, was buried and rose again on the third day. We recognize the miracles and sufferings of this one and the same, which He willingly suffered in the flesh. 2. For We do not understand one as God the Word and another as Christ, but one and the same, consubstantial with the Father according to His divine nature, and consubstantial with us according to His human nature. For the Trinity remained a Trinity even as one member of the Trinity of God the Word became flesh; for the Holy Trinity does not admit of a fourth person.

3. Since these things are so, We anathematize every heresy, and especially Nestorius, the worshipper of man, who divides in two Our One Lord Jesus Christ, the Son of God and Our God, and denies that the Holy, Glorious, Ever-Virgin Mary was really and in truth the Mother of God, but claims that one person is God the Word, begotten of the Father, and another is the one born of the Holy, Ever-Virgin Mary, made God by the grace and affection of God the Word. And We further anathematize Eutyches the deranged, who introduces an apparition and denies the true incarnation, that is our salvation, through Mary the Holy, Ever-Virgin Mother of God; and who does not confess that Christ is consubstantial with the Father in all regards according to His divine nature and consubstantial with us according to his human nature. Likewise, (We anathematize) Apollinarius the destroyer of souls, who claims that Our Lord Jesus Christ, the Son of God and Our God, did not have a mind, and who introduces confusion or rather chaos to the incarnation of the Only Begotten Son of God; and (We anathematize) all who have followed and now follow the doctrines of these men. 4. No one shall expect to be found worthy of pardon, if, after this Our proclamation and the full assurance (plerophoria) of Our most reverend local bishops, they should be found to be of the contrary opinion: for We order such persons to be subjected as confessed heretics to the appropriate punishment.

Given (...) (527).

[6] The same Augustus to the People of Constantinople. pr. Serving the Savior and Lord of All, Jesus Christ, Our true God in all things, We also wish to imitate His humility, as far as the human mind can comprehend it. 1. And having found certain persons overcome by the disease and madness of the impious Nestorius and Eutyches, enemies of God and the Holy Catholic and Apostolic Church, who deny that the Holy, Glorious, Ever-Virgin Mary is really and in truth Mother of God, We were eager that they be taught the correct faith of Christians. 2. These men, however, have proven incurable and, concealing κατὰ ἀλήθειαν, ἐσπουδάσαμεν τούτους τὴν ὀρθὴν τῶν Χριστιανῶν διδαχθῆναι πίστιν. 2. Οἱ δὲ ἀνιάτως ἔχοντες, κρύπτοντες τὴν ἑαυτῶν πλάνην περιέρχονται, καθὰ μεμαθήκαμεν, τὰς τῶν ἁπλουστέρων ψυχὰς ἐκταράσσοντές τε καὶ σκανδαλίζοντες καὶ ἐναντία τῆς ἁγίας καθολικῆς καὶ ἀποστολικῆς ἐκκλησίας λέγοντες. 3. Ἀναγκαῖον τοίνυν ἐνομίσαμεν καταλῦσαι μὲν τὰς τῶν αἱρετικῶν ψευδολογίας, σαφηνίσαι δὲ πᾶσιν, ὅπως δοξάζει ἡ ἁγία τοῦ θεοῦ καθολικὴ καὶ ἀποστολικὴ ἐκκλησία, κηρύττουσι δὲ οἱ ταύτης ὁσιώτατοι ἱερεῖς, οἷς καὶ ἡμεῖς ἑπόμενοι φανερὰ καθιστῶμεν τὰ περὶ τῆς ἐν ἡμῖν ἐλπίδος, οὐ καινίζοντες πίστιν, μὴ γένοιτο, ἀλλ' ἐλέγχοντες τὴν μανίαν τῶν φρονούντων τὰ τῶν ἀσεβῶν αἱρετικῶν. ὅπερ καὶ ἤδη ἐν προοιμίοις τῆς ἡμετέρας βασιλείας πράξαντες πᾶσι κατάδηλον ἐποιήσαμεν.

4. Πιστεύομεν γὰρ εἰς ἕνα θεὸν πατέρα παντοκράτορα καὶ εἰς ἕνα κύριον Ἰησοῦν Χριστὸν τὸν υἱὸν τοῦ θεοῦ καὶ εἰς τὸ ἅγιον πνεῦμα, μίαν οὐσίαν ἐν τρισὶν ὑποστάσεσιν προσκυνοῦντες, μίαν θεότητα, μίαν δύναμιν, τριάδα ὁμοούσιον. 5. Ἐπ' ἐσχάτων δὲ τῶν ἡμερῶν ὁμολογοῦμεν τὸν κύριον ἡμῶν Ἰησοῦν Χριστὸν τὸν μονογενῆ υἱὸν τοῦ θεοῦ, τὸν ἐκ θεοῦ ἀληθινοῦ θεὸν ἀληθινόν, τὸν πρὸ αἰώνων καὶ ἀχρόνως ἐκ τοῦ πατρὸς γεννηθέντα, τὸν συναΐδιον τῷ πατρί, τὸν ἐξ οὗ τὰ πάντα καὶ δι' οὗ τὰ πάντα, κατελθόντα ἐκ τῶν οὐρανῶν, σαρκωθῆναι ἐκ πνεύματος ἁγίου καὶ τῆς ἁγίας ἐνδόξου ἀειπαρθένου καὶ θεοτόκου Μαρίας καὶ ἐνανθρωπῆσαι σταυρόν τε ὑπομεῖναι ὑπὲρ ἡμῶν ἐπὶ Ποντίου Πιλάτου, ταφῆναί τε καὶ ἀναστῆναι τῇ τρίτῃ ἡμέρᾳ, ἑνὸς καὶ τοῦ αὐτοῦ τά τε θαύματα καὶ τὰ πάθη, ἅπερ ἑκουσίως ὑπέμεινεν σαρκί, γινώσκοντες. 6. Οὐ γὰρ ἄλλον τὸν θεὸν λόγον καὶ ἄλλον τὸν Χριστὸν ἐπιστάμεθα, ἀλλ' ἕνα καὶ τὸν αὐτὸν ὁμοούσιον τῷ πατρὶ κατὰ τὴν θεότητα καὶ ὁμοούσιον ἡμῖν τὸν αὐτὸν κατὰ τὴν ἀνθρωπότητα. ὡς γὰρ ἔστιν ἐν θεότητι τέλειος, οὕτως ὁ αὐτὸς καὶ ἐν ἀνθρωπότητι τέλειος. τὴν γὰρ καθ' ὑπόστασιν ἕνωσιν δεχόμεθα καὶ ὁμολογοῦμεν. ἔμεινε γὰρ τριὰς ἡ τριὰς καὶ σαρκωθέντος τοῦ ἑνὸς τῆς τριάδος θεοῦ λόγου· οὔτε γὰρ τετάρτου προσώπου προσθήκην ἐπιδέχεται ἡ ἁγία τριάς.

7. Τούτων τοίνυν οὕτως ἐχόντων ἀναθεματίζομεν πᾶσαν αἵρεσιν, ἐξαιρέτως δὲ Νεστόριον τὸν ἀνθρωπολάτρην καὶ τοὺς τὰ αὐτοῦ φρονήσαντας ἢ φρονοῦντας, τοὺς διαιροῦντας τὸν ἕνα κύριον ἡμῶν Ἰησοῦν Χριστὸν τὸν υἱὸν τοῦ θεοῦ καὶ θεὸν ἡμῶν καὶ μὴ ὁμολογοῦντας κυρίως καὶ κατὰ ἀλήθειαν τὴν ἁγίαν ἔνδοξον ἀειπάρθενον Μαρίαν θεοτόκον, τουτέστι μητέρα θεοῦ, ἀλλὰ δύο υἱοὺς λέγοντας, ἄλλον μὲν τὸν ἐκ τοῦ πατρὸς θεὸν λόγον, ἄλλον δὲ τὸν ἐκ τῆς ἁγίας ἀειπαρθένου καὶ θεοτόκου Μαρίας, χάριτι δὲ καὶ σχέσει καὶ οἰκειώσει τῇ πρὸς τὸν θεὸν λόγον θεὸν αὐτὸν γεγενῆσθαι, καὶ ἀρνουμένους καὶ μὴ ὁμολογοῦντας τὸν δεσπότην ἡμῶν Ἰησοῦν Χριστὸν τὸν υἱὸν τοῦ θεοῦ καὶ θεὸν ἡμῶν, τὸν σαρκωθέντα καὶ ἐνανθρωπήσαντα καὶ σταυρωθέντα ἕνα εἶναι τῆς ἁγίας καὶ ὁμοουσίου τριάδος. οὗτος γὰρ μόνος ἐστὶν ὁ συμπροσκυνούμενος καὶ συνδοξαζόμενος τῷ πατρὶ καὶ τῷ ἁγίῳ πνεύματι.

their errors, go about, as We have learned, troubling and shocking the minds of simple folk and asserting doctrine contrary to the Holy Catholic and Apostolic Church. 3. We have, accordingly, deemed it necessary both to dispel the falsehoods of the heretics and to make clear to all what the Holy Catholic and Apostolic Church believes and what its most holy priests profess. As We too adhere to these (authorities), We shall make manifest the hope within Us, making no innovation in the faith – God forbid! – but refuting the madness of those who follow the doctrines of the impious heretics. This same thing We made manifest to all, already at the beginning of Our reign.[8]

4. We believe, therefore, in one God, the Father Almighty, and in one Lord Jesus Christ, the Son of God, and in the Holy Spirit, worshipping one substance in three persons, one deity, one power, a consubstantial Trinity. 5. We confess that, in the last days, Our Lord Jesus Christ, the Only Begotten Son of God, True God of True God, begotten of the Father before the ages and without time, coeternal with the Father, from whom and through whom all things were made, descended from Heaven and was made flesh through the Holy Sprit and Mary, the Holy, Glorious, Ever-Virgin Mother of God, and became man, suffered for us on the cross under Pontius Pilate, was buried and rose on the third day; and We confess the miracles and sufferings of this one and the same, which He willingly suffered in the flesh. 6. We do not understand one as God the Word and another as Christ, but one and the same, consubstantial with the Father according to His divine nature and consubstantial with us according to His human nature. For as He is perfect in His divine nature, so too is He perfect in His human nature. We acknowledge and confess this unity in substance, for the Trinity remained a Trinity, although one member of the Trinity of God the Word became flesh; for the Holy Trinity does not admit of a fourth person.

7. Since this is so, We anathematize every heresy, and especially Nestorius, the worshipper of man, and those who have followed and now follow his doctrine, who divide in two Our One Lord Jesus Christ, the Son of God and Our God, and deny that the Holy, Glorious, Ever-Virgin Mary was really and in truth Mother of God,[9] but claim that there are two sons, one being God the Word, begotten of the Father, the other one born of the Holy, Ever-Virgin Mary, Mother of God, made God by the grace, the nature, and the affection of God the Word, and deny and do not confess that Our Lord Jesus Christ, Son of God and Our God, who was made flesh and became man and was crucified, is one part of the Holy and Consubstantial Trinity. For He alone is worshipped and glorified beside the Father and the Holy Spirit.

[8] See the preceding constitution.

[9] θεοτόκον. The following gloss "that is, the mother of God" (τουτέστι μητέρα θεοῦ) has not been translated to avoid redundancy in English.

8. Ἀναθεματίζομεν δὲ καὶ Εὐτυχέα τὸν φρενοβλαβῆ καὶ τοὺς τὰ αὐτοῦ φρονήσαντας ἢ φρονοῦντας, τοὺς φαντασίαν εἰσάγοντας ἀρνουμένους τε τὴν ἐκ τῆς ἁγίας παρθένου καὶ θεοτόκου Μαρίας ἀληθινὴν σάρκωσιν τοῦ κυρίου καὶ σωτῆρος ἡμῶν Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ, τουτέστι τὴν ἡμετέραν σωτηρίαν, καὶ μὴ ὁμολογοῦντας αὐτὸν ὁμοούσιον τῷ πατρὶ κατὰ τὴν θεότητα καὶ ὁμοούσιον ἡμῖν κατὰ τὴν ἀνθρωπότητα. 9. Τὸν αὐτὸν δὲ τρόπον καὶ Ἀπολλινάριον τὸν ψυχοφθόρον καὶ τοὺς τὰ αὐτοῦ φρονήσαντας ἢ φρονοῦντας, τοὺς ἄνουν λέγοντας τὸν κύριον ἡμῶν Ἰησοῦν Χριστὸν τὸν υἱὸν τοῦ θεοῦ καὶ θεὸν ἡμῶν καὶ σύγχυσιν ἤτοι φυρμὸν εἰσάγοντας τῇ ἐνανθρωπήσει τοῦ μονογενοῦς υἱοῦ τοῦ θεοῦ, καὶ πάντας τοὺς τὰ αὐτῶν φρονήσαντας ἢ φρονοῦντας.

D. id. Mart. dn. Iustiniano pp. A. III cons.

Τὸ αὐτὸ Ἐφεσίοις, τὸ αὐτὸ Καισαρεῦσι, τὸ αὐτὸ Κυζικηνοῖς, τὸ αὐτὸ Ἀμιδηνοῖς Τραπεζουντίοις Ἱεροσολυμίταις Ἀπαμεῦσιν Ἰουστινιανουπολίταις Θεουπολίταις Σεβαστηνοῖς Ταρσεῦσιν Ἀγκυρανοῖς.

[7] Ὁ αὐτὸς βασιλεύς. Ἐπιφανίῳ τῷ ἁγιωτάτῳ καὶ μακαριωτάτῳ ἀρχιεπισκόπῳ τῆς βασιλίδος ταύτης πόλεως καὶ οἰκουμενικῷ πατριάρχῃ. pr. Γινώσκειν βουλόμενοι τὴν σὴν ἁγιωσύνην πάντα τὰ εἰς ἐκκλησιαστικὴν ὁρῶντα κατάστασιν ἀναγκαῖον ἡγησάμεθα ταύταις πρὸς αὐτὴν χρήσασθαι ταῖς θείαις συλλαβαῖς καὶ δι' αὐτῶν δῆλα αὐτῇ καταστῆσαι τὰ κινηθέντα, ἅπερ καὶ αὐτὴν εἰδέναι πεπείσμεθα.

1. Εὑρόντες γάρ τινας ἀλλοτρίους τῆς ἁγίας καθολικῆς καὶ ἀποστολικῆς ἐκκλησίας, τῇ τῶν ἀσεβῶν Νεστορίου καὶ Εὐτυχέος ἀκολουθοῦντας πλάνῃ καὶ ταῖς τούτων βλασφημίαις κεχρημένους, θεῖον προεθήκαμεν ἤδικτον, ὅπερ καὶ ἡ σὴ γινώσκει ἁγιωσύνη, δι' οὗ τὴν τῶν αἱρετικῶν μανίαν ἠλέγξαμεν, οὐδὲν παντελῶς ἐναλλάξαντες ἢ ἐναλλάττοντες ἢ παρεξελθόντες τῆς μέχρι νῦν σὺν θεῷ κρατούσης ἐκκλησιαστικῆς καταστάσεως, καθὰ καὶ ἡ σὴ γινώσκει μακαριότης, ἀλλὰ διὰ πάντων φυλάττοντες τὴν κατάστασιν τῆς ἑνώσεως τῶν ἁγιωτάτων ἐκκλησιῶν τῆς πρὸς τὸν ἁγιώτατον πάπαν τῆς πρεσβυτέρας Ῥώμης καὶ πατριάρχην, πρὸς ὃν καὶ τὰ ὅμοια τούτοις γεγράφαμεν.

2. Οὔτε γὰρ ἀνεχόμεθά τι τῶν εἰς ἐκκλησιαστικὴν ὁρώντων κατάστασιν μὴ καὶ τῇ αὐτοῦ ἀναφέρεσθαι μακαριότητι, ὡς κεφαλῇ οὔσῃ πάντων τῶν ἁγιωτάτων τοῦ θεοῦ ἱερέων, καὶ ἐπειδή, ὁσάκις ἐν τούτοις τοῖς μέρεσιν αἱρετικοὶ ἀνεφύησαν, τῇ γνώμῃ καὶ ὀρθῇ κρίσει ἐκείνου τοῦ σεβασμίου θρόνου κατηργήθησαν. 3. Ἐκ γὰρ τῶν παρουσῶν θείων ἡμῶν συλλαβῶν μαθήσεται ἡ σὴ ἁγιωσύνη τὰ παρ' ἡμῶν προτεθειμένα, ἐφ' ᾧ τοὺς ἐπιχειροῦντας πονηρῶς νοεῖν ἢ ἑρμηνεύειν τὰ παρ' ἡμῶν ὀρθῶς ἐν τῷ ἠδίκτῳ λεχθέντα ἐκ τῶν παρουσῶν θείων ἡμῶν ἐλέγχεσθαι συλλαβῶν.

8. And We further anathematize Eutyches the deranged and those who have followed and now follow his doctrine, who introduce an apparition and deny the true incarnation of Our Lord and Savior, that is our salvation, through Mary, the Holy, Ever-Virgin Mother of God, and who do not confess that Christ is consubstantial with the Father according to His divine nature and consubstantial with us according to His human nature. 9. Likewise, (We anathematize) Apollinarius the destroyer of souls, and all who have followed and now follow his doctrine, who claim that Our Lord Jesus Christ, the Son of God and Our God, did not have a mind, and introduce confusion or rather chaos to the incarnation of the Only Begotten Son of God; and (We anathematize) all who have followed and now follow their doctrines.

Given March 15, in the consulship of Our Lord Justinian, Ever Augustus, for the third time (533).

The same (decree was sent) to the people of Ephesus, Caesarea, Cyzicus, Amida, Trapezus, Jerusalem, Apamea, Justinianopolis, Theopolis (Antioch), Sebaste, Tarsus, Ancyra.

[7] The same Augustus to Epiphanius, Most Holy and Most Blessed Archbishop of This Imperial City and Ecumenical Patriarch. pr. Desiring Your Holiness to know of everything concerning the state of the Church, We have deemed it necessary to write this divine letter to you and, through it, reveal what actions have been taken, although We are confident you already know of them.

1. Therefore, since We found that some persons had turned away from the Holy Catholic and Apostolic Church, following the error of the impious Nestorius and Eutyches and indeed adopting their blasphemies, We issued a divine edict, also known to Your Holiness, in which We refuted the madness of the heretics; yet We neither have changed nor now change nor have neglected the status of the Church, which has hitherto prevailed with the help of God, as Your Blessedness also knows; but in all things We have protected the unity of the most holy churches with the most holy Pope and Patriarch of ancient Rome, to whom We have written a similar letter.

2. For We suffer nothing concerning the state of the Church to be withheld from His Blessedness, inasmuch as he is the head of the most holy priests of God, and because whenever heretics have arisen in those parts (the West), they have been restrained by the counsel and the correct judgment of his Venerable See. 3. Your Holiness, therefore, will learn by this present divine letter what has been expounded by Us, so that those who dare to understand or interpret evilly what has been correctly stated in the edict may be refuted by this Our divine letter.

4. Ὀλίγοι τινὲς ἄπιστοι καὶ ἀλλότριοι τῆς ἁγίας τοῦ θεοῦ καθολικῆς καὶ ἀποστολικῆς ἐκκλησίας ἀντειπεῖν Ἰουδαϊκῶς ἐθάρρησαν πρὸς τὰ παρὰ πάντων τῶν ἱερέων ὀρθῶς κρατούμενα καὶ δοξαζόμενα καὶ κηρυττόμενα, ἀρνούμενοι τὸν κύριον ἡμῶν Ἰησοῦν Χριστὸν τὸν μονογενῆ υἱὸν τοῦ θεοῦ καὶ θεὸν ἡμῶν, τὸν σαρκωθέντα ἐκ πνεύματος ἁγίου καὶ τῆς ἁγίας ἐνδόξου ἀειπαρθένου καὶ θεοτόκου Μαρίας καὶ ἐνανθρωπήσαντα καὶ σταυρωθέντα ἕνα εἶναι τῆς ἁγίας καὶ ὁμοουσίου τριάδος, συμπροσκυνούμενον καὶ συνδοξαζόμενον τῷ πατρὶ καὶ τῷ ἁγίῳ πνεύματι, ὁμοούσιον τῷ πατρὶ κατὰ τὴν θεότητα καὶ ὁμοούσιον ἡμῖν τὸν αὐτὸν κατὰ τὴν ἀνθρωπότητα, παθητὸν σαρκί, τὸν αὐτὸν ἀπαθῆ θεότητι. 5. Παραιτούμενοι δὲ τὸν κύριον ἡμῶν Ἰησοῦν Χριστὸν τὸν μονογενῆ υἱὸν τοῦ θεοῦ καὶ θεὸν ἡμῶν ὁμολογεῖν ἕνα εἶναι τῆς ἁγίας καὶ ὁμοουσίου τριάδος δῆλοί εἰσι καὶ ἐλέγχονται τῇ τοῦ ἀσεβοῦς Νεστορίου ἀκολουθοῦντες πονηρᾷ διδασκαλίᾳ, κατὰ χάριν αὐτὸν λέγοντες υἱὸν τοῦ θεοῦ καὶ ἄλλον τὸν θεὸν λόγον καὶ ἄλλον τὸν Χριστὸν λέγοντες. οὓς ἀναθεματίζομεν καὶ τὰ αὐτῶν δόγματα καὶ τοὺς τὰ αὐτῶν φρονήσαντας ἢ φρονοῦντας ὡς ἀλλοτρίους ὄντας τῆς ἁγίας τοῦ θεοῦ καθολικῆς καὶ ἀποστολικῆς ἐκκλησίας.

6. Πάντες γὰρ οἱ ἱερεῖς τῆς ἁγίας καθολικῆς καὶ ἀποστολικῆς ἐκκλησίας καὶ οἱ εὐλαβέστατοι τῶν εὐαγῶν μοναστηρίων ἀρχιμανδρῖται ἀκολουθοῦντες τῇ τῶν ἁγίων πατέρων παραδόσει καὶ μηδὲν παντελῶς ἐναλλάξαντες ἢ ἐναλλάττοντες τῆς μέχρι νῦν κρατούσης, καθὰ εἴρηται, ἐκκλησιαστικῆς καταστάσεως, συμφώνως ὁμολογοῦσι καὶ δοξάζουσι, κηρύττοντες τὸν δεσπότην ἡμῶν Ἰησοῦν Χριστὸν τὸν μονογενῆ υἱὸν τοῦ θεοῦ καὶ θεὸν ἡμῶν, τὸν πρὸ αἰώνων καὶ ἀχρόνως ἐκ τοῦ πατρὸς γεννηθέντα καὶ ἐπ' ἐσχάτων τῶν ἡμερῶν κατελθόντα ἐκ τῶν οὐρανῶν καὶ σαρκωθέντα ἐκ πνεύματος ἁγίου καὶ τῆς ἁγίας ἐνδόξου ἀειπαρθένου καὶ θεοτόκου Μαρίας καὶ ἐνανθρωπήσαντα καὶ σταυρωθέντα ἕνα εἶναι τῆς ἁγίας καὶ ὁμοουσίου τριάδος.

7. Ὁμοούσιον γὰρ αὐτὸν ἴσμεν τῷ πατρὶ κατὰ τὴν θεότητα καὶ ὁμοούσιον ἡμῖν τὸν αὐτὸν κατὰ τὴν ἀνθρωπότητα, παθητὸν σαρκί, τὸν αὐτὸν ἀπαθῆ θεότητι, συμπροσκυνούμενον τῷ πατρὶ καὶ τῷ ἁγίῳ πνεύματι. οὐ γὰρ ἄλλον τὸν θεὸν λόγον καὶ ἄλλον τὸν Χριστὸν ἐπιστάμεθα, ἀλλ' ἕνα καὶ τὸν αὐτὸν ὁμοούσιον τῷ πατρὶ κατὰ τὴν θεότητα καὶ ὁμοούσιον ἡμῖν τὸν αὐτὸν κατὰ τὴν ἀνθρωπότητα, παθητὸν σαρκί, τὸν αὐτὸν ἀπαθῆ θεότητι. 8. Ὡς γὰρ ἐστιν ἐν θεότητι τέλειος, οὕτως ὁ αὐτὸς ἐν ἀνθρωπότητι τέλειος· τὴν γὰρ καθ' ὑπόστασιν ἕνωσιν δεχόμεθα καὶ ὁμολογοῦμεν.

4. A certain few persons, unfaithful and alien[10] to the Holy Catholic and Apostolic Church, have dared, in Jewish fashion, to speak out against those tenets that are rightly upheld, glorified, and preached by all priests. They deny that Our Lord Jesus Christ, the Only Begotten Son of God and Our God, who was made flesh through the Holy Sprit and Mary, the Holy, Glorious, Ever-Virgin Mother of God, became man and was crucified, is one of the Holy Consubstantial Trinity, worshipped and glorified beside the Father and the Holy Spirit, consubstantial with the Father according to His divine nature and consubstantial with us according to His human nature, capable of suffering in the flesh, but incapable of suffering as a deity. 5. And as they refuse to confess Our Lord Jesus Christ, the Only Begotten Son of God and Our God, as one part of the Holy Consubstantial Trinity, they are manifestly proven to be followers of the evil doctrine of the impious Nestorius, and claim that He is the Son of God only by grace, and that God the Word is one person and Christ another. We anathematize them and their teachings and those who have followed or now follow their doctrine, as alien to the Holy Catholic and Apostolic Church of God.

6. For all priests of the Holy Catholic and Apostolic Church and the most pious abbots of the holy monasteries, following the tradition of the holy fathers, who neither have changed nor now change the constitution of the Church that, as has been said, has prevailed to this day, unanimously confess, believe, and preach that Our Lord Jesus Christ, the Only Begotten Son of God and Our God, begotten of the Father, before the ages and without time, who descended from heaven, was made flesh through the Holy Spirit and Mary, the Holy, Glorious, Ever-Virgin Mother of God, became man and was crucified, is one part of the Holy and Consubstantial Trinity.

7. For We know Him to be consubstantial with the Father according to His divine nature and consubstantial with us according to His human nature; capable of suffering in the flesh, but incapable of suffering as a deity; worshipped beside the Father and the Holy Spirit. Nor do We understand God the Word to be one person and Christ another, but one and the same, consubstantial with the Father according to His divine nature, and consubstantial with us according to His human nature, capable of suffering in the flesh, but incapable of suffering as a deity. 8. For as He is perfect in His divine nature, so, too, is He perfect in His human nature; for We acknowledge and confess His unity of essence.

[10] The Greek ἀλλότριος (Latin alienus) captures both sides of the doctrinal strife. The basic meaning is "belonging to another," indicating that the Church no longer claims these persons as its own (they have been excommunicated), hence "alien." But the word also suggests the feelings of the heretics (from Justinian's perspective) as "disaffected" or "alienated" from the Catholic Church.

9. Ἐπειδὴ τοίνυν ὁ μονογενὴς υἱὸς καὶ λόγος τοῦ θεοῦ, ὁ πρὸ αἰώνων καὶ ἀχρόνως ἐκ τοῦ πατρὸς γεννηθείς, ὁ αὐτὸς καὶ ἐπ' ἐσχάτων τῶν ἡμερῶν κατελθὼν ἐκ τῶν οὐρανῶν καὶ σαρκωθεὶς ἐκ πνεύματος ἁγίου καὶ τῆς ἁγίας ἐνδόξου καὶ θεοτόκου Μαρίας καὶ ἐνανθρωπήσας, τουτέστιν ὁ κύριος ἡμῶν Ἰησοῦς Χριστὸς κυρίως καὶ κατὰ ἀλήθειαν θεός ἐστι, διὰ τοῦτο καὶ τὴν ἁγίαν ἔνδοξον ἀειπάρθενον Μαρίαν κυρίως καὶ κατὰ ἀλήθειαν μητέρα θεοῦ λέγομεν, οὐχ ὡς τοῦ θεοῦ λόγου τὴν ἀρχὴν ἐξ αὐτῆς λαβόντος, ἀλλ' ἐπ' ἐσχάτων τῶν ἡμερῶν κατελθόντος ἐκ τῶν οὐρανῶν καὶ ἐξ αὐτῆς σαρκωθέντος καὶ τεχθέντος καὶ ἐνανθρωπήσαντος. 10. Ὃν ὁμολογοῦμεν, καθὰ εἴρηται, ὁμοούσιον εἶναι τῷ πατρὶ κατὰ τὴν θεότητα καὶ ὁμοούσιον ἡμῖν τὸν αὐτὸν κατὰ τὴν ἀνθρωπότητα, τοῦ αὐτοῦ τά τε θαύματα καὶ τὰ πάθη, ἅπερ ἑκουσίως ὑπέμεινε σαρκί, γινώσκοντες. 11. Ταῦτα τοίνυν ἐστίν, ἅπερ διὰ τοῦ θείου ἡμῶν εἰρηκότες ἠδίκτου τοὺς αἱρετικοὺς ἠλέγξαμεν, ᾧτινι θείῳ ἠδίκτῳ καὶ πάντες οἱ εὑρεθέντες ἐνταῦθα ὁσιώτατοι ἐπίσκοποι καὶ εὐλαβέστατοι ἀρχιμανδρῖται ἅμα τῇ σῇ ἁγιωσύνῃ καθυπέγραψαν, ἀκολουθοῦντες διὰ πάντων ταῖς ἁγίαις τέτρασι συνόδοις καὶ τοῖς παρ' ἑκάστης αὐτῶν διατυπωθεῖσι, τουτέστι τῆς τε ἐν Νικαίᾳ τῶν τιη' καὶ τῆς ἐν ταύτῃ τῇ βασιλευούσῃ πόλει τῶν ρν', καὶ τῆς ἐν Ἐφέσῳ προτέρας καὶ τῆς ἐν Χαλκηδόνι, δήλου πᾶσι καθεστῶτος, ὅτι τὸν πᾶσι τοῖς ἅμα ἡμῖν πιστοῖς τῆς ἁγίας καθολικῆς καὶ ἀποστολικῆς ἐκκλησίας παραδοθέντα ὅρον τῆς πίστεως, τουτέστι τὸ ἅγιον μάθημα ἤτοι σύμβολον κρατοῦμέν τε καὶ φυλάττομεν, τὸ παρὰ τῶν τιη' ἁγίων πατέρων ἐκτεθέν, ὅπερ καὶ οἱ ἐν ταύτῃ τῇ βασιλευούσῃ πόλει ρν' ἅγιοι πατέρες σαφηνίσαντες ἐτράνωσαν, οὐχ ὡς ἐλλιπῶς ἔχοντος αὐτοῦ, ἀλλ', ἐπειδήπερ οἱ τῆς ἀληθείας ἐχθροὶ οἱ μὲν ἀθετεῖν ἐπεχείρησαν τὴν τοῦ ἁγίου πνεύματος θεότητα, οἱ δὲ τὴν ἐκ τῆς ἁγίας ἀειπαρθένου θεοτόκου Μαρίας ἀληθινὴν σάρκωσιν τοῦ θεοῦ λόγου ἠρνήσαντο, διὰ τοῦτο γραφικαῖς μαρτυρίαις τὸ αὐτὸ ἅγιον μάθημα οἱ εἰρημένοι ρν' ἅγιοι πατέρες σαφηνίσαντες ἐτράνωσαν.

12. Τοῦτο καὶ αἱ λοιπαὶ ἅγιαι σύνοδοι, τουτέστιν ἡ ἐν Ἐφέσῳ προτέρα καὶ ἡ ἐν Χαλκηδόνι, τῇ αὐτῇ πίστει ἀκολουθήσασαι ἐδέξαντο καὶ ἐφύλαξαν καὶ τὴν ἁγίαν ἔνδοξον ἀειπάρθενον Μαρίαν θεοτόκον ἐκήρυξαν καὶ τοὺς μὴ ὁμολογοῦντας αὐτὴν θεοτόκον ἀνεθεμάτισαν. 13. Ὡμοίως δὲ ἀνεθεμάτισαν καὶ τοὺς ἕτερον σύμβολον ἢ ἅγιον μάθημα παραδιδόντας παρὰ τὸ ὑπὸ μὲν τῶν τιη' ἁγίων πατέρων ἐκτεθέν, σαφηνισθὲν δὲ καὶ τρανωθὲν παρὰ τῶν ἐν ταύτῃ τῇ βασιλευούσῃ πόλει ρν' ἁγίων πατέρων. 14. Καὶ ἡ μὲν ἐν Ἐφέσῳ προτέρα τόν τε ἀσεβῆ Νεστόριον καὶ τὰ αὐτοῦ δόγματα καθεῖλέ τε καὶ ἀνεθεμάτισε καὶ τοὺς τὰ αὐτοῦ φρονήσαντας ἢ φρονοῦντας καὶ τοὺς συναινέσαντας αὐτῷ ἢ συναινοῦντας ἀνεθεμάτισεν. 15. Ἡ δὲ ἐν Χαλκηδόνι ἁγία σύνοδος καθεῖλέ τε καὶ ἐξέβαλε τῶν ἁγίων τοῦ θεοῦ ἐκκλησιῶν καὶ ἀνεθεμάτισε καὶ τὸν ἀσεβῆ Εὐτυχέα καὶ τὰ αὐτοῦ δόγματα καὶ τοὺς τὰ αὐτοῦ φρονήσαντας ἢ φρονοῦντας καὶ τοὺς συναινέσαντας αὐτῷ ἢ συναινοῦντας· καὶ πάντας τοὺς αἱρετικοὺς καὶ τὰ αὐτῶν δόγματα καὶ τοὺς τὰ αὐτῶν φρονήσαντας ἢ φρονοῦντας ἀνεθεμάτισεν. 16. Ὁμοίως

9. Since, therefore, the Only Begotten Son and Word of God, begotten of the Father before the ages and without time, descended from heaven in the last days, was made flesh through the Holy Spirit and Mary, the Holy, Glorious Mother of God, and became man; that is, since Our Lord Jesus Christ is really and in truth God, We therefore say that the Holy, Glorious, Ever-Virgin Mary was really and in truth the Mother of God, not because God the Word took His beginning from her, but because He descended from Heaven in the last days and through her was made flesh, was born, and became man. 10. Him We confess, as stated, to be consubstantial with the Father according to His divine nature and consubstantial with us according to His human nature, and we acknowledge His miracles and sufferings, which He willingly suffered in the flesh.

11. These, therefore, are the words with which We refuted the heretics in Our divine edict, and all most holy bishops and most pious abbots who could be found here, as well as Your Holiness, signed this divine edict; adhering in all things to the four holy synods and to the resolutions made by each, that is, the synod of Nicaea of the 318, of This Imperial City of the 150, the first synod of Ephesus, and that at Chalcedon. For it is manifest to all that We uphold and protect the definition of the faith handed down to Us and to all the faithful of the Holy Catholic and Apostolic Church, that is, the holy teaching or creed that was established by the 318 holy fathers, which also the 150 holy fathers in This Imperial City clarified and elucidated, not because it was found deficient, but because some enemies of the truth commenced to attack the divinity of the Holy Spirit, while others denied the true incarnation of God the Word through Mary, the Holy, Ever-Virgin Mother of God. For this reason the aforementioned 150 holy fathers clarified and elucidated this holy teaching in written depositions.

12. This teaching the other holy synods, that is, the first at Ephesus and that at Chalcedon, following the same faith, also acknowledged and protected, and proclaimed the Holy, Glorious, Ever-Virgin Mary Mother of God, anathematizing those who do not confess that she is the Mother of God. 13. They similarly anathematized those who teach a creed or holy teaching other than that established by the 318 holy fathers and clarified and elucidated by the 150 holy fathers assembled in This Imperial City. 14. And the first synod of Ephesus condemned and anathematized the impious Nestorius and his teachings, and also anathematized those who have followed or now follow his doctrine or who have agreed or now agree with him. 15. Moreover, the holy synod of Chalcedon condemned and expelled from the Holy Churches of God and anathematized Eutyches and his teachings, and those who have followed or now follow them or who have approved or now approve of them. It also anathematized all heretics and their teachings and those who have followed or do δὲ ἀνεθεμάτισε καὶ Νεστόριον καὶ τὰ αὐτοῦ δόγματα καὶ τοὺς τὰ αὐτοῦ φρονήσαντας ἢ φρονοῦντας καὶ τοὺς συναινέσαντας αὐτῷ ἢ συναινοῦντας. 17. Ἡ αὐτὴ δὲ ἐν Χαλκηδόνι ἁγία σύνοδος καὶ τὴν τοῦ μεγάλου Πρόκλου πρὸς Ἀρμενίους γραφεῖσαν ἐπιστολὴν περὶ τοῦ χρῆναι λέγειν τὸν δεσπότην ἡμῶν Ἰησοῦν Χριστὸν τὸν υἱὸν τοῦ θεοῦ καὶ θεὸν ἡμῶν ἕνα τῆς ἁγίας τριάδος διὰ τῆς οἰκείας ἀναφορᾶς ἐδέξατό τε καὶ ἐβεβαίωσεν.

18. Εἰ γὰρ τὰς εἰρημένας τέσσαρας ἁγίας συνόδους παρεξέλθωμεν ἢ τὰ παρ' αὐτῶν διατυπωθέντα, δίδομεν ἄδειαν τοῖς καθαιρεθεῖσιν ὑπ' αὐτῶν αἱρετικοῖς καὶ τοῖς αὐτῶν δόγμασι τὴν ἑαυτῶν λύμην πάλιν εἰς τὰς ἁγίας τοῦ θεοῦ ἐκκλησίας ἐνδείκνυσθαι. 19. Ὅπερ οὐκ ἐνδέχεται πραχθῆναί ποτε (μὴ γένοιτο), ἐπειδὴ αἱ εἰρημέναι τέσσαρες ἅγιαι σύνοδοι διὰ τῶν οἰκείων δογμάτων τοὺς αἱρετικοὺς καὶ τὰ τούτων δόγματα ἐξέβαλον. 20. Καὶ εἴ τις πρὸς μίαν τῶν εἰρημένων ἁγίων συνόδων ἀμφιβάλλει, πρόδηλός ἐστιν ἐκεῖνα φρονῶν τὰ δόγματα τὰ παρ' αὐτῆς ἐκβληθέντα τε καὶ ἀναθεματισθέντα. 21. Μηδεὶς τοίνυν μάτην ἡμᾶς ταραξάτω ἐλπίδι ματαίᾳ κρατούμενος, ὅτι ἡμεῖς ἐναντίον τι τῶν εἰρημένων ἁγίων δ' συνόδων ἐπράξαμεν ἢ πράξομεν ἢ πραχθῆναι παρά τινος συγχωρήσομεν ἢ περιαιρεθῆναι τὴν τῶν αὐτῶν ἁγίων δ' συνόδων ὁσίαν μνήμην ἐκ τῶν ἱερῶν τῆς ἐκκλησίας διπτύχων ἀνεξόμεθα. 22. Πάντας γὰρ τοὺς παρ' αὐτῶν καθαιρεθέντας καὶ ἀναθεματισθέντας καὶ τὰ τῶν καθαιρεθέντων δόγματα καὶ τοὺς τὰ αὐτῶν φρονήσαντας ἢ φρονοῦντας ἀναθεματίζομεν.

23. Ὅθεν εὐχέσθω ἡμῖν τε καὶ τῇ ἡμετέρᾳ πολιτείᾳ ἡ μακαριότης σου, πάντας περὶ τοῦ ἡμετέρου σκοποῦ καὶ τῆς περὶ τὴν ἀμώμητον πίστιν σπουδῆς διδάσκουσά τε καὶ πληροφοροῦσα.

D. VII k. April. Constantinopoli dn. Iustiniano pp. A. III cons.

[8] Gloriosissimo et clementissimo filio Iustiniano Augusto Iohannes episcopus urbis Romae. pr. Inter claras sapientiae mansuetudinis vestrae laudes, christianissime principum, puriore luce tamquam aliquod sidus irradiat, quod amore fidei, quod caritatis studio, edocti ecclesiasticis disciplinis, Romanae sedis reverentiam conservatis et ei cuncta subicitis et ad eius deducitis unitatem, ad cuius auctorem, hoc est apostolorum primum, domino loquente praeceptum est: 'pasce oves meas'.

1. Quam esse omnium vere ecclesiarum caput et patrum regulae et principum statuta declarant et pietatis vestrae reverentissimi testantur affatus. patet igitur in vobis impletum fore, quod scripturae loquuntur: 'per me reges regnant et potentes scribunt iustitiam'. 2. Nihil est enim, follow their opinions. 16. Likewise, it anathematized Nestorius and his teachings, and those who have followed or do follow them or who have agreed or do agree with him. 17. And the same holy synod of Chalcedon adopted and confirmed in its report the letter of the great Proclus written to the Armenians on the necessity of acknowledging Lord Jesus Christ, the Son of God and Our God, as one part of the Holy Trinity.

18. If we disregard the four holy synods mentioned or their resolutions, we give the heretics and heretical doctrines which these synods condemned freedom once again to propagate their poison in the Holy Churches of God. 19. This can never happen – God forbid! – for by their own resolutions, the four holy synods mentioned expelled these heretics and their doctrines. 20. If anyone casts doubt on any one of the aforementioned synods, he manifestly holds the doctrines rejected and anathematized by that synod. 21. Let no one, therefore, vainly disturb Us, swayed by the vain hope that We have done or will do anything contrary to the four holy synods, or will permit such to be done by another or shall suffer the hallowed remembrance of the same four holy synods to be erased from the sacred tablets[11] of the Church. 22. For We anathematize all those condemned and anathematized by them, as well as their doctrines and those who have followed or now follow them.

23. May Your Blessedness therefore pray for Us and Our State, and teach and guarantee completely Our goal and Our zeal for the immaculate faith.

Given March 26, at Constantinople, in the consulship of Our Lord Justinian, Ever Augustus, for the third time (533).

[8] John,[12] Bishop of the City of Rome, to his Most Glorious and Most Merciful Son, Emperor Justinian.

pr. Amid the glowing praise of the wisdom of Your Mildness, Most Christian of Emperors, there shines with an especially pure light, like that of a star, the fact that You, in Your zeal for the faith and Your Christian charity, well instructed in the teachings of the Church, keep (Your) reverence of the See of Rome, submit everything to it, and lead everything to its unity; to whose founder, that is, the First of the Apostles, Our Lord gave this precept: "Feed my sheep."[13]

1. That this See is truly the head of all churches, both the regulations of the fathers and the statutes of emperors declare, as the most reverent utterances of Your Piety also attest. It is clear, therefore, that in You will be fulfilled what the scriptures say: "By me kings reign and the powerful decree justice."[14] 2. For there is nothing that burns with a brighter light than correct faith in an [11] δίπτυχα ("diptychs"): Justinian refers to tablets that could be folded together and sealed as a means of record-keeping.

[12] Pope John ii (533–535).
[13] John 21:17.
[14] Proverbs 8:15. Literally: "write justice."

quod lumine clariore praefulgeat, quam recta fides in principe: nihil est, quod ita nequeat occasui subiacere, quam vera religio. nam cum auctorem vitae vel luminis utraque respiciant, recte et tenebras respuunt et nesciunt subiacere defectui.

3. Quam ob rem, gloriosissime principum, votis omnibus exorabitur divina potentia, ut pietatem vestram in hoc ardore fidei, in hac devotione mentis, in hoc integrae religionis studio sine defectu sui in tempora longiora conservet: hoc enim et sanctis credimus ecclesiis expedire. scriptum est enim: 'labiis regit rex', et iterum: 'cor regis in manu dei, et ubi voluerit, inclinabit illud'. 4. Hoc est enim, quod vestrum firmat imperium, hoc, quod vestra regna conservat. nam pax ecclesiae, religionis unitas, auctorem facti in sublime provectum grata sibi tranquillitate custodit. 5. Neque enim parva ei vicissitudo a potentia divina tribuitur, per quem nullis rugis ecclesia divisa secernitur, nullis insertis maculis variatur. scriptum est enim: 'quia cum rex iustus sederit supra sedem, non adversabitur sibi quicquam malignum'.

6. Proinde serenitatis vestrae apices per Hypatium atque Demetrium sanctissimos viros fratres et coepiscopos meos reverentia consueta suscepimus: quorum etiam relatione comperimus, quod fidelibus populis proposuissetis edictum amore fidei pro submovenda haereticorum intentione secundum apostolicam doctrinam, fratrum et coepiscoporum nostrorum interveniente consensu. Quod quia apostolicae doctrinae convenit, nostra auctoritate confirmamus.

7. Textus autem epistulae talis est:

> Victor Iustinianus pius felix inclitus triumphator semper Augustus Iohanni sanctissimo archiepiscopo almae urbis Romae et patriarchae. 8. Reddentes honorem apostolicae sedi et vestrae sanctitati, quod semper nobis in voto fuit et est, ut decet, patrem honorantes vestram beatitudinem omnia, quae ad ecclesiarum statum pertinent, festinamus ad notitiam deferre vestrae sanctitatis, quoniam semper magnum nobis fuit studium unitatem vestrae apostolicae sedis et statum sanctarum dei ecclesiarum custodiri, qui hactenus obtinet et incommote permanet nulla intercedente contrarietate.
>
> 9. Ideoque omnes sacerdotes universi orientalis tractus et subicere et unire sedi vestrae sanctitatis properavimus. 10. Et in praesenti ergo quae hic commota sunt, quamvis manifesta et indubitata sint et secundum apostolicae vestrae sedis doctrinam ab omnibus semper sacerdotibus firme custodita et praedicata, necessarium duximus, ut ad notitiam vestrae sanctitatis perveniant. 11. Nec enim patimur quicquam, quod ad ecclesiarum statum

emperor; there is nothing less subject to decline than true religion. For as both behold the author of life or light, they rightly both reject darkness and know not how to succumb to eclipse.

3. Wherefore, Most Glorious of Emperors, divine might will be entreated in all our prayers, so that it may, without fail, long preserve Your Piety in this ardor of faith, in this devotion of mind, in this zeal for untainted religion. We believe this is also for the good of the holy churches. For it is written, "the king rules by his lips," and again: "the king's heart is in the hand of God: He turneth it whithersoever He will."[15] 4. For it is this that strengthens Your rule; this that preserves Your reign. For the peace of the Church, the unity of religion protect its author with grateful tranquility, when he has been borne up on high (after death). 5. For no small thanks will be bestowed by divine might on him through whom the Church has been divided and sundered by no cracks; through whom it has been tainted by no blemishes. For it is written: "because when a just king sits upon his throne, no evil will oppose him."[16]

6. We moreover have received with accustomed reverence the letter of Your Serenity from Hypatius and Demetrius, most reverend men, my brothers and co-bishops. We also learned from this report that You, in Your ardor for the faith, in accord with apostolic teaching and with the consent of Our brothers and co-bishops, issued an edict to the peoples of the faithful to destroy the designs of the heretics. Since this edict conforms to apostolic doctrine, We confirm it by Our authority.

7. The text of the letter is as follows:

> The Conqueror JUSTINIAN, Pious, Fortunate, Renowned, Triumphant, Ever Augustus, to the Most Holy John, Archbishop and Patriarch of the Generous City of Rome. 8. Rendering honor to the Apostolic See and to Your Holiness, which has always been and remains Our wish, as it ought to be, and honoring Your Blessedness as a father, We hasten to bring to the notice of Your Holiness everything concerning the status of the churches, since We have always greatly desired to preserve the unity of Your Apostolic See and to maintain the status of the Holy Churches of God, as it has heretofore prevailed and continues undisturbed without the interference of anything to the contrary.
>
> 9. We have therefore hastened to make all priests of the whole Orient subject to the See of Your Holiness and to unite them with it. 10. And We therefore deemed it necessary to bring to the notice of Your Holiness what action presently has been taken here, although it is clear and unquestioned and has ever been resolutely observed and preached by all priests in accord with the teaching of Your Apostolic See. 11. For [15] Proverbs 16:10(?), 21:1.

[16] Proverbs 20:8.

pertinet, quamvis manifestum et indubitatum sit, quod movetur, ut non etiam vestrae innotescat sanctitati, quia caput est omnium sanctarum ecclesiarum. per omnia enim, ut dictum est, properamus honorem et auctoritatem crescere vestrae sedis.

12. Manifestum igitur facimus vestrae sanctitati, quod pauci quidam infideles et alieni sanctae dei catholicae atque apostolicae ecclesiae contradicere Iudaice ausi sunt adversus ea, quae ab omnibus sacerdotibus secundum vestram doctrinam recte tenentur et glorificantur atque praedicantur, denegantes dominum nostrum Ihesum Christum, unigenitum filium dei et deum nostrum, incarnatum ex sancto spiritu et sancta atque gloriosa virgine et dei genetrice Maria hominem factum atque crucifixum, unum esse sanctae et consubstantialis trinitatis, coadorandum et conglorificandum patri et spiritui sancto, consubstantialem patri secundum divinitatem et consubstantialem nobis eundem ipsum secundum humanitatem, passibilem carne, eundem ipsum impassibilem deitate. 13. Recusantes enim dominum nostrum Ihesum Christum unigenitum filium dei et deum nostrum fateri unum esse sanctae et consubstantialis trinitatis videntur Nestorii malam sequentes doctrinam, secundum gratiam dicentes eum filium dei et alium dicentes deum verbum et alium Christum.

14. Omnes vero sacerdotes sanctae catholicae atque apostolicae ecclesiae et reverentissimi archimandritae sacrorum monasteriorum sequentes sanctitatem vestram et custodientes statum et unitatem sanctarum dei ecclesiarum, quam habent ad apostolicam vestrae sanctitatis sedem, nihil penitus immutantes de ecclesiastico statu, qui hactenus obtinuit atque obtinet, uno consensu confitentur et glorificant, praedicantes dominum nostrum Ihesum Christum, unigenitum filium et verbum dei et deum nostrum, ante saecula et sine tempore de patre natum, in ultimis diebus descendisse de caelis et incarnatum ex spiritu sancto et sancta atque gloriosa virgine et dei genetrice Maria natum et hominem factum et crucifixum unum esse sanctae et consubstantialis trinitatis, coadorandum et conglorificandum patri et sancto spiritui. 15. Nec enim alium deum verbum et alium Christum cognoscimus, sed unum atque eundem ipsum consubstantialem patri secundum divinitatem et consubstantialem nobis eundem ipsum secundum humanitatem, passibilem carne, eundem ipsum impassibilem deitate. 16. Ut enim est in divinitate perfectus, ita idem ipse et in humanitate perfectus est: in una enim subsistentia unitatem suscipimus et confitemur,

We permit no action to be taken concerning the status of the churches, however clear and unquestioned it may be, but that it should come to the notice of Your Holiness, because You are the head of all holy churches. For in all ways, as stated, We strive to increase the honor and authority of Your See.

12. We therefore make known to Your Holiness that a few persons, unfaithful and alien to the Holy Catholic and Apostolic Church of God, have dared, in Jewish fashion, to contradict those tenets which, according to Your teaching, are correctly believed, glorified, and preached by all priests. They deny that Our Lord Jesus Christ, Only Begotten Son of God and Our God, who became flesh through the Holy Spirit and the Holy and Glorious Virgin Mary, Mother of God, was made man and was crucified, is one part of the Holy and Consubstantial Trinity, to be worshipped and glorified beside the Father and Holy Spirit; consubstantial with the Father according to His divine nature, and the same One consubstantial with us according to His human nature; capable of suffering in the flesh, but incapable of suffering in his divine nature. 13. Refusing, therefore, to acknowledge that Our Lord Jesus Christ, the Only Begotten Son of God and Our God, is one part of the Holy and Consubstantial Trinity, they seem to follow the evil doctrine of Nestorius, claiming that He is the Son of God by grace, and that God the Word is one person and Christ another.

14. But all priests of the Holy Catholic and Apostolic Church and the most reverend abbots of the holy monasteries, following Your Holiness and protecting the status and the unity of the Holy Churches of God with the Apostolic See of Your Holiness, in no way changing the status of the Church that has heretofore obtained and now obtains, with universal consensus confess and glorify and preach that Our Lord Jesus Christ, the only begotten Son and Word of God and Our God, begotten of the Father before the ages and without time, (who) descended[17] from heaven in the last days, was made flesh through the Holy Spirit and the Holy and Glorious Virgin Mary, Mother of God, became man and was crucified, is one part of the Holy and Consubstantial Trinity, to be worshipped and glorified beside the Father and the Holy Spirit. 15. Nor do We acknowledge God the Word as one person and Christ as another, but as one and the same, consubstantial with the Father according to His divine nature, and the same One consubstantial with us according to his human nature; capable of suffering in the flesh, and the same incapable of suffering as a deity. 16. For as He was perfect in His divine nature, so too was He perfect in His human nature. We acknowledge quod dicunt Graeci τὴν καθ' ὑπόστασιν ἕνωσιν ὁμολογοῦμεν. 17. Et quoniam unigenitus filius et verbum dei, ante saecula et sine tempore de patre natus, idem ipse et in ultimis diebus descendens de caelis, incarnatus ex sancto spiritu et sancta atque gloriosa virgine et dei genetrice Maria et homo factus, dominus noster Ihesus Christus proprie et vere deus est, ideo et sanctam et gloriosam virginem Maria proprie et vere dei matrem dicimus: non quia deus verbum principium ex ipsa sumpserit, sed quod in ultimis diebus descendit de caelis et ex ipsa incarnatus et homo factus natus est. 18. Quem confitemur et credimus, sicut dictum est, consubstantialem esse patri secundum deitatem et consubstantialem nobis eundem ipsum secundum humanitatem, eiusdem miracula et passiones, quas sponte carne sustinuit, cognoscentes.

[17] The Latin supplies two verbs to this indirect statement, descendisse and esse; descendisse, however, seems to be in error, perhaps due to difficulty in translating the Greek expression usual in this context, κατελθόντα, since the corresponding descensus is used only impersonally by most authors. The controversy revolves not around whether Christ descended from Heaven, but whether he is part of the Trinity.

19. Suscipimus autem sancta quattuor concilia, id est trecentorum decem et octo sanctorum patrum, qui in Nicaea congregati sunt, et centum quinquaginta sanctorum patrum, qui in hac regia urbe convenerunt, et sanctorum patrum, qui in Epheso primo congregati sunt, et sanctorum patrum, qui in Chalcedone convenerunt, sicut vestra apostolica sedes docet atque praedicat. 20. Omnes ergo sacerdotes sequentes doctrinam apostolicae vestrae sedis ita credunt et confitentur et praedicant. 21. Unde properavimus haec ad notitiam deferre vestrae sanctitatis per Hypatium et Demetrium, beatissimos episcopos, ut nec vestram sanctitatem lateat, quae a quibusdam paucis monachis male et Iudaice secundum Nestorii perfidiam denegata sunt.

22. Petimus ergo vestrum paternum affectum, ut vestris ad nos destinatis litteris et ad sanctissimum episcopum huius almae urbis et patriarcham vestrum fratrem, quoniam et ipse per eosdem scripsit ad vestram sanctitatem festinans in omnibus sequi sedem apostolicam beatitudinis vestrae, manifestum nobis faciatis, quod omnes, qui praedicta recte confitentur, suscipit vestra sanctitas et eorum, qui Iudaice ausi sunt rectam denegare fidem, condemnat perfidiam. 23. Plus enim ita et circa vos omnium amor et vestrae sedis crescit auctoritas et quae ad vos est unitas sanctarum ecclesiarum inturbata servabitur, quando per vos didicerint omnes beatissimi episcopi eorum, quae ad vos relata sunt, sinceram vestrae sanctitatis doctrinam. petimus autem vestram beatitudinem orare pro nobis et dei nobis adquirere providentiam.

24. Et alia manu: Divinitas te servet per multos annos, sancte ac religiosissime pater.

D. VIII id. Iun. Constantinopoli dn. Iustiniano perpetuo Augusto III consule.

and confess (His) unity in one substance, as the Greeks say: "We confess His unity in essence." 17. And since the Only Begotten Son and Word of God, begotten of the Father before the ages and without time, who descended in the last days from heaven, was made flesh through the Holy Spirit and the Holy and Glorious Virgin Mary, Mother of God, and became man, is really and truly God, We therefore also aver that the Holy and Glorious Virgin Mary is really and truly the Mother of God; not because God the Word took His beginning from her, but because in the last days He descended from Heaven and, through her becoming flesh and man, was born of her. 18. Him We confess and believe, as stated, to be consubstantial with the Father according to His divine nature and consubstantial with us according to His human nature; and We acknowledge His miracles and sufferings, which He willingly endured in the flesh.

19. We accept, moreover, the four holy councils, that is, that of the 318 fathers who assembled in Nicaea, that of the 150 holy fathers who met in This Imperial City, that of the holy fathers who assembled in Ephesus the first time, and that of the holy fathers who met in Chalcedon, as Your Apostolic See teaches and preaches. 20. All priests, therefore, following the teaching of Your Apostolic See, thus believe and confess and preach. 21. Hence We have hastened to bring these things to the notice of Your Holiness through Hypatius and Demetrius, most blessed bishops, so that it may not escape Your Holiness what a few monks, evilly and in Jewish fashion, have denied, according to the perfidy of Nestorius.

22. We therefore beseech Your Paternal Love to make known to Us, in a letter addressed to Us and to the Holy Bishop and Patriarch of This Generous City, Your brother – for he too has through the same men sent messages to Your Holiness, hastening to follow, in all things, the Apostolic See of Your Blessedness – that Your Holiness accepts all who rightly confess the foregoing, and condemns the perfidy of those, who in Jewish fashion have dared to deny the true faith. 23. For the love of all people for You and the authority of Your See will thus increase, and the unity of the holy churches, which is with You, will be kept undisturbed, once all the most blessed bishops have learned from You that what has been reported to you is the genuine doctrine of Your Holiness. We moreover beseech Your Blessedness to pray for Us and to gain for Us the grace of God.

24. In another hand:[18] May the Deity preserve You for many years, Holy and Most Pious Father.

Given June 6, at Constantinople, in the consulship of Our Lord Justinian, Ever Augustus, for the third time (533).

[18] That is, the following line was written by the emperor in his own hand as his signature (subscriptio).

25. Liquet igitur, gloriosissime imperator, ut lectionis tenor et legatorum vestrorum relatio patefecit, vos apostolicis eruditionibus studere, cum de religionis catholicae fide ea sapitis, ea scripsistis, ea populis fidelibus publicastis, quae, sicut diximus, et sedes apostolica docet et patrum veneranda decrevit auctoritas et nos confirmavimus in omnibus. 26. Opportunum est ergo voce clamare prophetica: 'Iucundetur caelum desuper, effundant montes iucunditatem et colles laetitia laetabuntur'. 27. Haec igitur in tabulis cordis fideles scribere, haec ut pupillas oculorum convenit observare.

28. Neque enim quisquam est, in quo Christi caritas fervet, qui tam rectae, tam verae confessionis vestrae fidei refragator existat, cum impietatem evidenter Nestorii Eutychisque et omnium haereticorum damnantes, unam veram catholicam fidem domini et dei nostri salvatoris Ihesu Christi magisterio institutam et propheticis apostolicisque praedicationibus ubique diffusam et sanctorum per totum orbem confessionibus roboratam, patrum atque doctorum sententiis adunatam et nostrae doctrinae consentaneam inconcusse atque inviolabiliter devota deo et pia mente servatis. 29. Soli etenim vestris professionibus adversantur, de quibus divina scriptura loquitur dicens: 'posuerunt mendacium spem suam et mendacio operiri speraverunt': et iterum qui secundum prophetam dicunt domino: 'recede a nobis, vias tuas scire nolumus', propter quos Salomon dicit: 'semitas propriae culturae erraverunt, colligunt autem manibus infructuosa'.

30. Haec est igitur vestra vera fides, haec certa religio, hoc beatae recordationis, ut diximus, patres omnes praesulesque Romanae ecclesiae, quos in omnibus sequimur, hoc sedes apostolica praedicavit hactenus et inconvulse custodivit: huic confessioni, huic fidei quisquis contradictor extiterit, alienum a sancta communione, alienum se ipse ab ecclesia iudicavit esse catholica.

31. Nos enim in Romana Cyrum cum sequacibus suis invenimus civitate, qui de Acoemetensi monasterio fuit, quos apostolicis suasionibus ad rectam fidem et velut oves, quae perierant errantes, ad ovile contendimus revocare dominicum, ut agnoscerent secundum prophetam

25. It is clear therefore, Most Glorious Emperor, as the tenor of Your epistle and the report of Your legates demonstrated, that You support the apostolic teachings, since You know, You have written, and You have published for the faithful the tenets of the faith of the Catholic religion which, as We have said, the Apostolic See teaches, the venerable authority of the fathers has decreed, and We in all things confirm. 26. It is therefore seasonable to proclaim with prophetic voice: "Let the heavens above be gladdened, let the mountains pour forth mirth and the hills abound with happiness."[19] 27. It behooves the faithful to write these things into the tablets of the heart, to cherish them as the apple of their eyes.[20]

28. Nor is there anyone, in whom burns the love of Christ, who can oppose the confession of Your faith, so correct, and so true. For You, clearly condemning the impiety of Nestorius, of Eutyches, and of all heretics, with a pious mind devoted to God steadfastly and unshakeably preserve the one true Catholic faith, established by the instruction of Our Lord God, Jesus Christ the Savior, diffused everywhere by the preaching of the prophets and Apostles, strengthened by the confessions of the saints across the entire world, one with the views of the fathers and the learned, and in harmony with Our teaching. 29. They alone oppose Your professions of whom Holy Scripture speaks, saying: "They have placed their hope in lies, and by lies have hoped to be concealed";[21] and again those, who according to the prophet say to the Lord: "Depart from us, for we desire not the knowledge of thy ways";[22] on account of whom Solomon says: "They have traveled the paths of their own cultivation, but have gathered in their hands things unfruitful."[23]

30. This then is Your true faith, this Your unshakeable religion; this all the fathers of blessed memory, as We have said, and the heads of the Roman Church, whom We follow in all things; this the Apostolic See has preached to this day and unshakeably guarded. Every opponent of this confession, of this faith, has declared himself alien to Holy Communion, alien to the Catholic Church.[24]

31. We found Cyrus from the monastery of the Acoemetae[25] along with his lackeys in the City of Rome, and We attempted, by apostolic persuasion, to recall them to the correct faith and, like wandering sheep that had been lost, to the master's fold, so that, according to the prophet, their "stammering tongues [19] Cf. Isaiah 45:8, 44:23, 55:12; Psalms 96:11, 97:1. 8, 98:8.

[20] Cf., e.g., Deut. 32:10.
[21] Isaiah 28:15.
[22] Job 21:14.
[23] Compare Sapientia Solomonis 15:4; the actual source has not been identified.
[24] On "alien" for Latin alienus, see n. 10 above.
[25] The Acoemetae ("the sleepless ones") were a sect of monks who held perpetual religious vigils, day and night. John excommunicated them for their support of the Nestorian heresy.

linguae balbutientes loqui quae ad pacem sunt. 32. Non credentibus autem per nos primus apostolorum Esaiae prophetae verba dicit: 'pergite lumini ignis vestri et flammae, quam accendistis'. sed obduratum est cor eorum, ut scriptum est, ut non intellegerent, et pastoris vocem oves, quae meae non erant, audire minime voluerunt. 33. In quibus servantes ea, quae ab ipsorum sunt statuta pontifice, eos minime in nostra communione recepimus et ab omni ecclesia catholica esse iussimus alienos, nisi errore damnato doctrinam nostram quantocius sequi habita regulari professione signaverint. 34. Aequum quippe est, ut, qui nostris minime oboedientiam commodant statutis, ecclesiis habeantur extorres. 35. Sed quia gremium suum numquam redeuntibus claudit ecclesia, obsecro clementiam vestram, ut, si proprio errore deposito et prava intentione depulsa ad unitatem ecclesiae reverti voluerint, in nostra communione receptis indignationis vestrae removeatis aculeos et nobis intercedentibus benigni animi gratiam condonate.

36. Deum autem et salvatorem nostrum Ihesum Christum exoramus, quatenus longaevis et pacificis vos dignetur custodire temporibus in hac vera religione et unitate et veneratione apostolicae sedis, cuius principatum ut christianissimi et pii conservatis in omnibus. 37. Praeterea, serenissime principum, laudamus legatorum vestrorum personas, Hypatii et Demetrii fratrum et coepiscoporum nostrorum, quos clementiae vestrae gratos fore ipsa manifestavit electio. 38. Nam tantae causae pondus non nisi perfectis in Christo potuisset iis iniungi, tantae vero pietatis, tantae reverentiae plenos affatus nisi per amantes minime dignaremini destinare.

39. Et alia manu: Gratia domini nostri Ihesu Christi et caritas dei patris et communicatio spiritus sancti sit semper vobiscum, piissime fili. item subscriptio: Omnipotens deus regnum et salutem vestram perpetua protectione custodiat, gloriosissime et clementissime fili imperator Auguste.

D. VIII k. April. Roma dn. Iustiniano pp. A. IIII et Paulino iuniore vc. conss.

should learn to speak" the things that lead to peace.[26] 32. The First of the Apostles moreover speaks to the unbelievers through Us in the words of Isaiah: "Walk in the light of your fire and in the sparks that ye have kindled."[27] But their heart was hardened, as it is written,[28] so they did not understand, and the sheep which were not mine would not hear the voice of the shepherd.[29] 33. Following the same course with regard to them as decided by their own pontiff, We did not receive them into Our communion and ordered them to be alien to every Catholic church, unless they renounced their error and, having made the prescribed declaration, immediately guaranteed (by signature) their willingness to follow Our teaching. 34. For it is only just that those who do not show obedience to Our decrees should be banished from the churches. 35. But because the Church never closes its bosom to those that return to it, I beseech Your Clemency, that if they lay aside their error, abandon their evil course, and wish to return to the unity of the Church, You might call off the stings of Your wrath once they have been received into Our communion and, by Our intercession, bestow on them the grace of Your kind heart.

36. Moreover, We pray to God and Jesus Christ Our Savior that He may deign to protect You through long and peaceful years in this true religion and unity and veneration of this Apostolic See, the preeminence of which You maintain in all things with a most Christian and pious spirit. 37. Besides this, Most Serene of Emperors, We praise the persons of Your ambassadors, Hypatius and Demetrius, Our brothers and fellow bishops, whose very selection will show them grateful to Your Clemency. 38. For a matter of such importance could not have been imposed on any but those perfect in Christ, and You scarcely would have deigned to send such utterances so full of piety, so full of reverence, through any but those who possess Your affection.

39. And in another hand:[30] The grace of Our Lord Jesus Christ and the love of God the Father and the communion of the Holy Spirit be always with You, Most Pious Son. Also this subscription: May Almighty God guard Your kingdom and Your safety with eternal protection, Most Glorious and Most Clement Son, Emperor Augustus.

Given March 25, in Rome, in the consulship of Our Lord Justinian, Ever Augustus, for the fourth time, and of the vir clarissimus Paulinus the Younger (534).

[26] Isaiah 32:4.
[27] Isaiah 50:11.
[28] Isaiah 6:10.
[29] John 10:26–27.
[30] Namely, that of Pope John.

II De Sacrosanctis Ecclesiis et de Rebus et Privilegiis Earum

[1] Imp. Constantinus A. ad populum. Habeat unusquisque licentiam sanctissimo catholicae venerabilique concilio decedens bonorum quod optavit relinquere. non sint cassa iudicia. nihil est quod magis hominibus debetur, quam ut supremae voluntatis, post quam iam aliud velle non possunt, liber sit stilus et licitum quod iterum non redit arbitrium.
PP. v non. Iul. Romae Crispo II et Constantino II CC. cons.

[2] Imppp. Gratianus Valentinianus et Theodosius AAA. Pancratio pu. Nemo apostolorum vel martyrum sedem humandis corporibus existimet esse concessam.
D. III k. Aug. Heracliae Eucherio et Syagrio conss.

[3] Idem AAA. Cynegio pp. Nemo martyres distrahat, nemo mercetur.
D. IIII k. Mart. Constantinopoli Honorio np. et Euodio conss.

[4] Impp. Honorius et Theodosius AA. Aetio pu. Non plures quam nongenti quinquaginta decani sacrosanctae huius amplissimae urbis deputentur ecclesiae nullique his addendi mutandive vel in defuncti locum substituendi pateat copia: nulli alii corporatorum praeter praedictum numerum per patrocinia immunitate concessa negataque omni novationis facultate similia vindicandi his, quae in honorem vel necessaria obsequia sacrosanctae ecclesiae indulta sunt.
D. XII k. Sept. Eudoxiopoli Honorio VIII et Theodosio III AA. conss.

[5] Idem AA. Melitio pp. Placet rationabilis consilii tenore perpenso destricta moderatione praescribere, a quibus specialiter necessitatibus ecclesiae urbium singularum habeantur immunes. prima quippe illius usurpationis contumelia depellenda est, ne praedia usibus caelestium secretorum dedicata sordidorum munerum faece vexentur. nihil extraordinarium ab hac superindicticiumve flagitetur, nulla translationum

Second Title Holy Churches, Their Property and Privileges

[1][31] Emperor CONSTANTINE Augustus to the People. Each and everyone, at the time of death, shall have the freedom to leave to the Holy Catholic and venerable Church any property that he chooses. Their decisions shall not be void. There is nothing that men deserve more than to have a free pen with which to express their last will – after which they can wish no more – and the permission to use their judgment, the opportunity for which shall not come again.

Posted July 3, at Rome, in the consulship of the Caesars Crispus, for the second time, and Constantine, for the second time (321).

[2][32] Emperors GRATIAN, VALENTINIAN, and THEODOSIUS Augusti to Pancratius, Urban Prefect. No one shall think that the abodes (sedes) of apostles or martyrs may be used for the burial of bodies.

Given July 30, at Heraclea, in the consulship of Eucherius and Syagrius (381).

[3][33] The same Augusti to Cynegius, Praetorian Prefect. No one shall sell,[34] no one shall trade in (the relics of) martyrs.

Given February 26, at Constantinople, in the consulship of Honorius, Most Noble Boy, and Euodius (386).

[4][35] Emperors HONORIUS and THEODOSIUS Augusti to Aetius, Urban Prefect. No more than 950 burial-men (decani) shall be assigned to the Holy Church of This Most Exalted City, and no one shall have power to add to or to change this number or to substitute others for those who have died. No other guild member beyond the prescribed number shall be granted exemption from liturgies through patronage, and all power of innovation for claiming privileges similar to those that have been bestowed on the Holy Church, in its honor or for its necessary functions, shall be denied.

Given August 21, at Eudoxiopolis, in the consulship of Honorius, for the eighth time, and Theodosius, for the third time, Augusti (409).

[5][36] The same Augusti to Melitius, Praetorian Prefect. Having deliberated what should constitute a reasonable plan, We have resolved to regulate strictly and prescribe specifically from which obligations the churches of individual cities shall be exempt. First of all, that outrageous practice, whereby estates dedicated to the heavenly mysteries are afflicted by the filth of menial liturgies (munera

[31] = C.Th. 16.2.4.
[32] = C.Th. 9.17.6.
[33] = C.Th. 9.17.7; combine with C. 3.44.14.
[34] The Latin word used, distrahat, also suggests literally the "tearing apart" of their bodies.
[35] Partly duplicated in C. 4.63.5. Seeck gives August 21, 420.
[36] = C.Th. 16.2.40, Sirm. 11. Dated by Seeck to June 24, 411.

sollicitudo gignatur, postremo nihil praeter canonicam illationem, quam[i] adventiciae necessitatis sarcina repentina depoposcerit, eius functionibus adscribatur. si quis contra venerit, post debitae ultionis acrimoniam, quae erga sacrilegos iure promenda est, exilio perpetuae deportationis uratur.

D. VIII k. Iun. Ravenna Honorio VIIII et Theodosio V AA. conss.

[6] Idem AA. Philippo pp. Illyrici. Omni innovatione cessante vetustatem et canones pristinos ecclesiasticos, qui nunc usque tenuerunt, et per omnes Illyrici provincias servari praecipimus, ut, si quid dubietatis emerserit, id oporteat non absque scientia viri reverentissimi sacrosanctae legis antistitis urbis Constantinopolitanae, quae Romae veteris praerogativa laetatur, conventui sacerdotali sanctoque iudicio reservari.

D. prid. id. Iul. Eustathio et Agricola conss.

[7] Idem AA. Asclepiodoto pp. Ad instructiones itinerum pontiumque etiam divinas domos et venerabiles ecclesias tam laudabili titulo libenter adscribimus, quia non est inter sordida munera numeratum.

D. XV k. Mart. Constantinopoli Asclepiodoto et Mariniano conss.

[8] Imp. Theodosius A. Isidoro pp. Illyrici. Sacrosancta Thessalonicensis ecclesia civitatis aperte sciat propriae tantummodo capitationis modum beneficio mei numinis sublevandum nec externorum gravamine tributorum rem publicam ecclesiastici nominis abusione laedendam.

D. VI id. Oct. Constantinopoli Victore cons.

[i] et quam

sordida), shall be abolished.[37] No extraordinary levy or superindiction shall be demanded of it; they shall not be troubled by transportation duties (translatio); in summary, nothing shall be added to their obligations beyond their regular tax payment, and what the sudden burden of unforeseen need may require. If anyone violates this law, after he has tasted the bitterness of his due punishment, which is rightly inflicted on the sacrilegious, he shall be branded with the banishment of permanent deportation.

Given May 25, at Ravenna, in the consulship of Honorius, for the ninth time, and Theodosius, for the fifth time, Augusti (412).

[6][38] The same Augusti to Philippus, Praetorian Prefect of Illyricum. We order all innovation to cease and the ancient practice and the original ecclesiastical canons, which have been in force to this day, to be observed also throughout all the provinces of Illyricum. If any doubt should emerge, the matter must be brought to the attention of the most reverend bishop of the Holy Law in the City of Constantinople, which is blessed by the prerogative of Ancient Rome, so that the matter may be left to a priestly assembly and its holy judgment.

Given July 14, at the consulship of Eustathius and Agricola (421).

[7][39] The same Augusti to Asclepiodotus, Praetorian Prefect. For constructing of roads and bridges, We also gladly assign even the imperial estates and the venerable churches to such a laudable purpose, because such work is not numbered among menial liturgies.

Given February 15, at Constantinople, in the consulship of Asclepiodotus and Marinianus (423).

[8][40] Emperor THEODOSIUS Augustus to Isidorus, Praetorian Prefect of Illyricum. The Holy Church of the city of Thessalonica shall know clearly that only the amount of its own capitation tax may be relieved by the benefit of My Imperial Majesty, and that the State must not be harmed by the weight of unrelated exemptions through misuse of the name of the Church.

Given October 10, at Constantinople, in the consulship of Victor (424).

[37] Sirm. 11 inserts here: nulla iugationem, quae talium privilegiorum sorte gratulatur, muniendi itineris constringat iniuria ("The insult of roadwork shall not burden their tax assessment, which rejoices in the fortune of such privileges"). The phrase "of it" in the following sentence refers to these omitted words.

[38] = C.Th. 16.2.45; combine with C. 11.21.1.

[39] = C. 11.75.4, C.Th. 15.3.6.

[40] = C. 10.16.12.1; C.Th. 11.1.33. Seeck dates to 423.

[9] Impp. Theodosius et Valentinianus AA. Cyro pu. pr. Qui sub praetextu decanorum seu collegiatorum, cum id munus non impleant, aliis se muneribus conantur subtrahere, eorum fraudibus credidimus obviandum, ne quis sub specie muneris, quod minus exequitur, alterius muneris oneribus relevetur, ne argentariorum vel nummulariorum munera declinentur ab his, qui dici tantum collegiati vel decani festinant. 1. Ideoque si quis eorum sub nudae appellationis velamine collegiatum se seu decanum appellat, sciat pro se alium subrogandum, qui praedicto muneri sufficiens adprobatur, subrogatione videlicet memoratorum vel eorum qui moriuntur primatum eius qui subrogatur admisso iudicio: ab hac dispositione nemine se excusante sacrosanctarum ecclesiarum reverentia.

D. x k. April. Theodosio XVII et Festo conss.

[10] Idem AA. Florentio pp. pr. Iubemus nullam navem ultra duorum millium modiorum capacem ante felicem embolam vel publicarum specierum transvectionem aut privilegio dignitatis aut religionis intuitu aut praerogativa personae publicis utilitatibus excusari posse subtractam: nec si caeleste contra proferatur oraculum, sive adnotatio sit sive divina pragmatica, providentissimae legis regulas expugnare debebit. 1. Quod etiam in omnibus causis cupimus observari, ut generaliter, si quid eiusmodi contra ius vel utilitatem publicam in quolibet negotio proferatur, non valeat. quidquid enim in fraudem istius legis quolibet modo fuerit attemptatum, id navigii quod excusatur publicatione corrigimus.

D. VIII id. April. Constantinopoli Theodosio A. XVII et Festo conss.

[11] Idem AA. ad Taurum pp. Neminem angariis vel parangariis vel plaustris vel quolibet munere excusari praecipimus, cum ad felicissimam expeditionem numinis nostri omnium provincialium per loca, [9][41] Emperors Theodosius and Valentinian Augusti to Cyrus, Urban Prefect. pr. We have believed that we must oppose the fraud of those who, under the pretext of being corpse bearers (decani) or members of the guild (sc. of firemen),[42] when (in fact) they do not fulfill this service, endeavor to withdraw themselves from other compulsory services, lest anyone, under the pretext of one compulsory service that he does not carry out be relieved of the burdens of another, so that the duties of the bankers (argentarii) and the money changers (nummularii) not be refused by those who hasten to be merely called members of the guild or burial men. 1. If anyone, therefore, calls himself, under cover of a mere title, fireman or burial-man, he should know that someone else, who is certified as suitable for the aforementioned liturgy, must be enrolled in his place – that is to say, substitution of the aforementioned persons or of those who die shall be made at the discretion of the superiors of the one to be substituted. No one shall excuse himself from this regulation out of reverence for the holy churches.

Given March 23, at Constantinople, in the consulship of Theodosius Augustus, for the seventeenth time, and Festus (439).

[10][43] The same Augusti to Florentius, Praetorian Prefect. pr. We order that no ship of a capacity greater than 2,000 modii may be exempted and withdrawn from public duties before the Felicitous Embarkment[44] or the shipment of public goods (publicae species), whether by reason of privilege of rank, by observance of religion, or by personal prerogative. Not even if the divine oracle[45] itself is adduced, whether in the form of an annotation (adnotatio) or pragmatic sanction, should it override the rules of this most providential law. 1. We desire this to be observed in all cases: thus generally, if any such document is produced in any case against the law or public good, it shall be void. For We shall reprove any attempt to circumvent this law, whatever the means, by confiscation of the ship exempted.

Given April 6, at Constantinople, in the consulship of Theodosius Augustus, for the seventeenth time, and Festus (439).

[11][46] The same Augusti to Taurus, Praetorian Prefect. We order that no one shall be excused from providing post-wagons or supplementary post-wagons

[41] = C. 11.18.1.

[42] The guild referred to here is that of the firemen of Constantinople; see C. 4.63.5 and note ad loc. Blume identifies the decani as people in charge of burials; cf. C. 1.2.4, 9.

[43] = C. 11.4.2, Nov. Theod. 8.1 (April 7, preferred by Seeck).

[44] The "Felicitous Embarkment" (felix embola) of the grain fleet that served Constantinople. Two thousand modii is about 13.5 metric tons of grain.

[45] That is a document procured from the imperial chancellery.

[46] = C. 10.49.2 (in part).

qua iter arripimus, debeant nobis ministeria exhiberi, licet ad sacrosanctas ecclesias possessiones pertineant.

D. XIII k. Mart. Constantinopoli Valentiniano A. VI et Nomo conss.

[12] Impp. Valentinianus et Marcianus AA. Palladio pp. pr. Privilegia, quae generalibus constitutionibus universis sacrosanctis ecclesiis orthodoxae religionis retro principes praestiterunt, firma et illibata in perpetuum decernimus custodiri. 1. Omnes sane pragmaticas sanctiones, quae contra canones ecclesiasticos interventu gratiae et ambitionis elicitae sunt, robore suo et firmitate vacuatas cessare praecipimus. 2. Et quia humanitatis nostrae est prospicere egenis ac dare operam, ut pauperibus alimenta non desint, salaria etiam, quae sacrosanctis ecclesiis in diversis speciebus de publico hactenus ministrata sunt, iubemus nunc quoque inconcussa et a nullo prorsus imminuta praestari liberalitatique huic promptissimae perpetuam tribuimus firmitatem.

D. pridie id. Nov. Constantinopoli Marciano A. cons.

[13] Idem AA. Palladio pp. Generali lege sancimus, sive vidua sive diaconissa vel virgo deo dicata vel sanctimonialis mulier, sive quocumque alio nomine religiosi honoris vel dignitatis femina nuncupatur, testamento vel codicillo suo, quod tamen alia omni iuris ratione munitum sit, ecclesiae vel martyrio vel clerico vel monacho vel pauperibus aliquid vel ex integro vel ex parte in quacumque re vel specie credidit seu crediderit relinquendum, id modis omnibus ratum firmumque consistat, sive hoc institutione sive substitutione seu legato aut fideicommisso per universitatem seu speciali, sive scripta sive non scripta voluntate fuerit derelictum: omni in posterum in huiusmodi negotiis ambiguitate submota.

D. X k. Mai. Constantinopoli Valentiniano VIII et Anthemio conss.

[14] Impp. Leo et Anthemius AA. Armasio pp. pr. Iubemus nulli posthac archiepiscopo in hac urbe regia sacrosanctae ecclesiae praesidenti, nulli oeconomo, cui res ecclesiastica gubernanda mandatur, esse facultatem fundos vel praedia urbana seu rustica, res postremo immobiles (angariae, parangariae), from providing carts, or from any liturgy whatsoever; for service must be rendered Us for the most blessed progress of Our Godhead through the lands by all provincials through which We journey, even if they belong to the Holy Church.

Given February 17, at Constantinople, in the consulship of Valentinian Augustus, for the sixth time, and Nomus (445).

[12] Emperors VALENTINIAN and MARCIAN Augusti to Palladius, Praetorian Prefect. pr. We decree that the privileges, which former emperors granted in general constitutions to all holy churches of the orthodox religion, shall forever be kept valid and undiminished. 1. We order, however, that all pragmatic sanctions contrary to the ecclesiastical canons which have been obtained by influence and solicitation, shall be bereft of their strength and validity and be void. 2. And since it behooves Our Compassion to provide for the needy and to ensure that nourishment for the poor is not lacking, We order that the pensions, which have heretofore been paid in sundry goods to the holy churches from the public treasury, shall also now be furnished intact and diminished by no man, and on this most ready generosity We confer permanent validity.

Given November 12, at Constantinople, in the consulship of Marcian Augustus (451).

[13][47] The same Augusti to Palladius, Praetorian Prefect. We decree by general law, that if a widow or deaconess, a virgin dedicated to God or a holy woman (sanctimonialis mulier), or a woman called by any other title of religious honor or station, has deemed or shall deem it best in her will or in a codicil – which, however, is fortified by every other rule of law – to leave her property in whole or in part, whatever the objects or goods of which it may consist, to a church, martyr's shrine, cleric, monk, or to the poor, her bequest shall in every respect stand valid and firm, whether the property is left by the institution or substitution (of an heir), by legacy or trust, general or special, by written or unwritten wish. Thus all uncertainty in matters of this nature will hereafter be banished.

Given April 22, at Constantinople, in the consulship of Valentinian Augustus, for the eighth time, and Anthemius (455).

[14] Emperors LEO and ANTHEMIUS Augusti to Armasius, Praetorian Prefect. pr. We order that no archbishop presiding over a holy church in This Imperial City, no steward to whom the administration of church property has been entrusted, shall hereafter have the power to transfer to any person, by any form

[47] = Nov. Marc. 5.2.

aut in his praediis colonos vel mancipia constituta aut annonas civiles cuiuscumque suprema vel superstitis voluntate ad religiosam ecclesiam devolutas sub cuiuscumque alienationis specie ad quamcumque transferre personam, sed ea praedia dividere quidem, colere augere et ampliare nec ulli isdem praediis audere cedere. 1. Verum sive testamento quocumque iure facto seu codicillo vel sola nuncupatione, legato sive fideicommisso, aut mortis causa aut alio quocumque ultimo arbitrio aut certe inter viventes habita largitate sive contractu venditionis sive donationis aut alio quocumque titulo quisque ad praefatam venerabilem ecclesiam patrimonium suum partemve certam patrimonii in fundis praediis seu domibus vel annonis mancipiis et colonis eorumque peculiis voluerit pertinere, inconcussa ea omnia sine ulla penitus imminutione conservent scientes nulla sibi occasione vel tempore ad vicissitudinem beneficii colorati vel gratiae referendae, donandi vel certe volentibus emere alienandi aliquam facultatem permissam, nec si omnes cum religioso episcopo et oeconomo clerici in earum possessionum alienatione consentiant. 2. Ea enim, quae ad beatissimae ecclesiae iura pertinent vel posthac forte pervenerint, tamquam ipsam sacrosanctam et religiosam ecclesiam intacta convenit venerabiliter custodiri, ut, sicut ipsa religionis et fidei mater perpetua est, ita eius patrimonium iugiter servetur illaesum.

3. Sane, si haec nostrae perennitatis statuta audaci spiritu et mente sacrilega quisquam oeconomorum vel hominum temeranda crediderit, ipse quidem, qui protervo ausu ecclesiastica praedia donationis vel emptionis seu commutationis aut cuiuscumque contractus alterius nomine nisi eo quo nunc statuimus adquirere vel habere temptaverit, omnem huiusmodi fructum propriae temeritatis amittat: et pretia quidem et munera, quae eius rei gratia data fuerint oeconomo seu aliis quibuscumque personis, ecclesiae lucris et commodis adquirantur. 4. Praedia autem et in his omnia constituta ab ipsis clericis et temporalibus oeconomis cum fructibus seu pensionibus et accessionibus totius medii temporis vindicentur, ut tamquam penitus a nullo empta vel vendita teneantur, quia ea, quae contra leges fiunt, pro infectis habenda sunt.

5. Oeconomus autem, qui hoc fecerit, immo fieri passus fuerit vel in quacumque prorsus huiusmodi venditione seu donatione vel commutatione nisi ea quam praesenti lege concedimus, postremo in quacumque alienatione consenserit, commissa sibi oeconomatus administratione privetur deque bonis eius quodcumque exinde incommodum ecclesiae contigerit reformetur heredesque eius et successores ac posteri super

of conveyance, any farms or urban or rural estates, or indeed any immovable property, or the tenants (coloni) or slaves upon these lands, or any civic bread rations (annonae civiles), which have devolved to the Holy Church by the last will of any man, or by the will of one who survives him. They may, indeed, divide, cultivate, increase, and extend such estates yet not dare to yield them to anyone. 1. And if anyone by a will, by whatever right it is made, by codicil or merely orally, or by legacy or trust, whether in anticipation of death or by any other last wish, or if one exercises his munificence while among the living, whether by contract of sale, donation, or any other description, has wished that his property or a definite portion thereof in farms, estates or houses, in civic bread rations, in slaves and tenants and their peculia, should belong to the aforesaid Venerable Church, they (the archbishop and steward) shall maintain all these things intact, without the slightest diminution, knowing that they shall on no pretext and at no time have the power to give it in return for some specious favor or to pay thanks, or indeed alienate it to parties wanting to buy it; not even if all the clergy, together with the pious bishop and the steward, consent to the alienation of these properties. 2. For it is proper that what belongs to the Most Blessed Church or is acquired hereafter should reverently be kept intact just like the Sacrosanct and Holy Church itself, so that just as the Church is the eternal mother of religion and faith, so her property should perpetually be kept unscathed.

3. Certainly, if any steward or other person should resolve, in brazen arrogance and sacrilegious conceit, to violate these the decrees of Our Eternity, he who in his rashness attempts to acquire or hold church estates as a gift, purchase, exchange, or by any other contract except in the manner We presently decree, shall lose the fruits of his own audacity; and the payments and gifts, which have been given for that reason to the steward or any other persons, shall accrue to the profit and advantage of the Church. 4. Such estates, moreover, and all things in them, with their revenues or rents and acquisitions gained over the entire intervening time, shall be claimed by the clergy and the acting stewards, as if they had been held by no man as things bought or sold; because acts made against the laws must be considered void.

5. The steward who does this, moreover, or rather who permits it to be done, or who has at all consented to such a sale, gift, or exchange other than that which We permit by this law, or indeed to any kind of alienation, shall be stripped of the administration of the stewardship entrusted to him, and all loss caused thereby to the Church shall be repaid out of his property; and his heirs, successors, and descendants may be sued with the appropriate claim by the church authorities for this act or consent. 6. The legal clerks (tabelliones) who hoc facto sive consensu competenti ab ecclesiasticis actione pulsentur: 6. his tabellionibus, qui huiusmodi contractuum vetitorum ausi fuerint instrumenta conscribere, irrevocabilis exilii animadversione plectendis: 7. his quoque iudicibus vel ius gestorum habentibus, qui huiusmodi donationum vel contractuum gesta confecerint, dignitatis propriae et bonorum omnium spoliatione damnandis.

8. Sane ne omnis religiosis oeconomis provisionis commodae via et occasio venerandis ecclesiis profutura videatur exclusa, id, quod utile plerumque iudicatur, cautelae observatione necessario procedere concedimus. 9. Si quando igitur vir religiosus oeconomus huius regiae urbis ecclesiae perspexerit expedire, ut desideranti cuiquam certarum possessionum atque praediorum, urbanorum scilicet sive rusticorum, ad ius ecclesiasticum pertinentium temporaria usus fructus possessio pro ipsius petitione praestetur, tunc eius temporis, quod inter utrosque convenerit, sive in diem vitae suae ab eo qui desiderat postuletur, pacta cum eo qui hoc elegerit ineat oeconomus atque conscribat, per quae et tempus, intra quod hoc praestari placuerit, statuatur et manifestum sit, quid quacumque acceperit ad vicem huius beneficii gratia, praestando quidem ecclesiastici praedii pro tempore usu fructu, post statutum autem tempus et placitum temporum redituum proprietate ad ius et dominium ecclesiasticum recurrente firmiter: ita scilicet, ut sive completo spatio, quod inter eos fuerit constitutum, seu mortis suae tempore, si hoc quoque convenerit, is, qui possessionem ecclesiasticam et certorum redituum usum fructum habendi gratia pacto interveniente susceperit, non minus quam alterius tantae quantitatis, quantae acceperat reditus, cum ipso praediorum dominio et rebus immobilibus eorumque colonis et mancipiis ecclesiae derelinquat. 10. Nisi enim hac condicione pacta inita fuerint, ea quoque decernimus non valere, sed possessionem ecclesiasticam tamquam nullo iure transcriptam in ipsius iure ac dominio permanere et ab ecclesiasticis sive oeconomis decernimus vindicari.

D. Constantinopoli Iordane et Severo conss.

[15] [Αὐτοκράτωρ Ζήνων Α.] pr. ... [Θεσπίζομεν] εἴ τις δωρεὰν κινητῶν ἢ ἀκινήτων ἢ αὐτοκινήτων πραγμάτων ἢ οἱουδήποτε δικαίου ποιήσοιτο εἰς πρόσωπον οἱουδήποτε μάρτυρος ἢ ἀποστόλου ἢ προφήτου ἢ τῶν ἁγίων ἀγγέλων, ὡς μέλλων εὐκτήριον οἶκον οἰκοδομεῖν εἰς μνήμην, οὗπερ ὀνόματι τὴν εὐσεβῆ διατυποῖ δωρεάν, τὴν αὐτὴν δωρεάν, εἰ μόνον τὴν πρᾶξιν τῶν ὑπομνημάτων κατὰ τὰς θείας διατάξεις ἐνεφάνισεν, ἐφ᾽ ὧν τοῦτο ἀναγκαῖόν ἐστι μαθεῖν, κρατεῖν καὶ ἐν ἀπαιτήσει ἐκ παντὸς εἶναι dared to draft the documents of such forbidden contracts shall be stricken with the penalty of irrevocable exile. 7. The judges or those who have the right to authorize public records, who have made records of such gifts or contracts, shall be condemned to the loss of their rank and of all their property.

8. But, lest every avenue for profitable action and every opportunity beneficial to the venerable churches seem closed to the pious stewards, We permit what is generally considered beneficial to proceed if necessary caution is observed. 9. If, then, a reverend steward of a church of This Imperial City shall find it advantageous that temporary possession of the usufruct of certain possessions or landed estates belonging to the church – urban or rural estates, namely – should be granted to a petitioner desirous of them at his own request, then for that amount of time, on which both have agreed or for the life of the petitioner, the steward may enter into a contract and draft the terms, by which it is made, and the time, during which he has decided the property should be made available, and it shall be clear what each party has received in turn on account of this award. The usufruct of the church property shall indeed be granted temporarily, but after the fixed and agreed time, ownership of the revenue made during that time shall revert absolutely to the control and ownership of the Church. Thus, namely, on the expiration of the appointed time or on the death of the lessee, if that was the agreed term, he who contracted to receive ecclesiastical property for the purpose of having the usufruct of certain revenue, shall leave to the Church no less than twice the amount of the revenue which he received, together with absolute ownership of the estates themselves, and the immovable property, tenants, and slaves on them. 10. For if contracts are not made on this condition, We decree that they are void; and We decree that the ecclesiastical property shall remain under the control and ownership of the Church and shall be claimed by the clergy or stewards, as if it had been transferred unlawfully.

Given at Constantinople, in the consulship of Jordanes and Severus (470).

[15] (Emperor Zeno Augustus ...).[48] pr. (We decree that), if anyone should donate immovable, movable, self-moving, or any category of property to the person of any martyr, apostle, or prophet, or to the holy angels, to build a chapel in the memory of the person in whose name he makes this pious gift; if he (the donor) has only produced the public records completed according to the imperial constitutions, in which it is compulsory to know this, the donation shall be valid and subject to collection, whether construction of the building has commenced or not, but the generous donor has only shown his own τρόπου, κἂν ἀρχθέντος ἢ καὶ μὴ ἀρχθέντος, ἀλλὰ προδηλωθέντος μόνον διὰ τῆς δωρεᾶς τοῦ εὐαγοῦς οἰκοδομήματος ὁ φιλοτιμούμενος τὴν οἰκείαν δηλώσῃ γνώμην, ὥστε καὶ αὐτὸν καὶ τοὺς αὐτοῦ κληρονόμους τοῖς εὐσεβῶς ἐπηγγελμένοις ἐνόχους ὄντας καὶ προδηλούμενον, ὡς εἴρηται, ἐκ τῆς δωρεᾶς εὐαγὲς εὐκτήριον οἰκοδομεῖν καὶ οἰκοδομηθέντι ἢ οἰκοδομουμένῳ τὴν ἐκ τῆς αὐτῆς φιλοτιμίας ἀνελλιπῶς παρέχειν ἀπόλαυσιν.

[48] The inscription has been inferred from the following constitution. The subscription is also lost. Lounghis et al. date to before December 17, 476.

1. Τὰ δὲ αὐτὰ καὶ ἐπὶ ταῖς τῶν καλουμένων ξενοδοχείων ἢ νοσοκομείων ἢ πτωχείων οἰκοδομεῖσθαι καθ' ὃν προείρηται τρόπον ἐπαγγελθέντων δωρεαῖς κατὰ πάντα τρόπον κρατείτω. 2. Ἀδείας διδομένης τοῖς κατὰ τόπον θεοφιλεστάτοις ἐπισκόποις ἤτοι τοῖς εὐλαβεστάτοις οἰκονόμοις τὴν ἐκ ταύτης ἡμῶν τῆς θείας διατάξεως ἁρμόζουσαν ἀγωγὴν κινεῖν κατ' αὐτῶν ἐφ' οἷς εὐσεβῶς ἐπηγγείλαντο· δικαστικῆς, ὅπερ καὶ λέγειν ἀπρεπές, δεομένων ἀνάγκης. 3. Ἐπὶ τούτῳ μέντοι τῷ ὅρῳ, ἐφ' ᾧ τε πληρωθέντων τῶν δοκούντων τούτῳ τῷ νόμῳ καὶ τῆς εὐσεβοῦς τῶν δωρησαμένων ἐπαγγελίας ἔργῳ παραδοθείσης συγχωρεῖσθαι κατὰ τὰ δόξαντα τοῖς φιλοτιμησαμένοις καὶ κατὰ τοὺς ἐπιτεθέντας αὐτοῖς ὅρους προβαίνειν τὴν τῶν δωρηθέντων διοίκησιν.

[16] Idem A. Sebastiano pp. pr. Decernimus, ut antiquatis ac infirmatis funditus, quae contra ipsum orthodoxae religionis deum quodammodo facta sunt, in integrum restituantur universa et ad suum ordinem revocentur, quae ante profectionem nostrae mansuetudinis de orthodoxae religionis fide et sanctissimarum ecclesiarum et martyriorum statu firmiter obtinebant: his, quae contra haec tempore tyrannidis innovata sunt tam contra venerabiles ecclesias, quarum sacerdotium gerit beatissimus ac religiosissimus episcopus patriarcha nostrae pietatis pater Acacius, quam ceteras, quae per diversas provincias collocatae sunt, nec non et reverentissimos earum antistites seu de iure sacerdotalium creationum seu de expulsione cuiusquam episcopi a quolibet illis temporibus facta seu de praerogativa in episcoporum concilio vel extra concilium ante alios residendi vel de privilegio metropolitano vel patriarchico sub isdem impiis temporibus, penitus antiquandis, ut cassatis et rescissis, quae per huiusmodi sceleratas iussiones aut pragmaticas sanctiones aut constitutiones impias sive formas subsecuta sunt, quae a divae recordationis retro principibus ante nostrum imperium et deinceps a nostra mansuetudine indulta vel constituta sunt super sanctis ecclesiis et martyriis et religiosis episcopis clericis aut monachis, inviolata serventur. 1. Sacrosanctam quoque huius religiosissimae civitatis ecclesiam matrem nostrae pietatis et Christianorum orthodoxae religionis omnium et eiusdem regiae urbis sanctissimam sedem privilegia et honores omnes super episcoporum creationibus et iure ante alios residendi et cetera omnia, quae ante nostrum imperium vel nobis imperantibus intentions by the gift of the promised chapel. Thus he and his heirs shall be bound to their pious declarations and must build the chapel, promised, as has been said, by gift; and they must unstintingly furnish the proceeds of their ambition, whether the chapel has been or is being built.

1. The same shall apply fully to so-called hospices, infirmaries, and poorhouses, which anyone has in the aforesaid manner promised to build as a gift. 2. Pursuant to this Our imperial decree, We grant the most reverend bishops and most pious stewards of each place the freedom to bring the corresponding action against those (donors) for what they have piously promised, should they require – which it is unseemly even to say – the compulsion of the court. 3. On this condition, that everything decreed in this law has been observed and the pious promise of the donors has been realized in deed, the management of the things donated shall be allowed to proceed at the discretion of the donors and according to the terms established by them.

[16] The same Augustus to Sebastianus, Praetorian Prefect. pr. We repeal and annul utterly everything that has been done by whatever means against the God of the orthodox religion, and We decree that everything pertaining to the faith of the orthodox religion and to the status of the most holy churches and martyrs' shrines shall be fully restored and returned to the condition that prevailed before the departure of Our Clemency.[49] The innovations made during the tyranny both against the venerable churches – of which the Most Blessed and Reverend Acacius, the Father of Our Piety, holds the priestly office of Bishop Patriarch – and against all other churches located in sundry provinces, as well as those innovations against their most reverend bishop, whether on the right of ordaining priests, on the expulsion of any bishops caused by anyone during those times, on the privilege of sitting before others inside or outside of the council of bishops, on any privilege granted to a metropolitan bishop or Patriarch in those impious times, shall be repealed entirely. Thus, the innovations that issued from such wicked decrees or pragmatic sanctions, impious constitutions, or documents shall be annulled and rescinded, and whatever was conceded or established by past emperors of blessed memory prior to Our reign or thereafter by Our Clemency with regard to the holy churches and martyrs' shrines and the pious bishops, clergymen, and monks, shall be preserved inviolate. 1. And We rule and decree that the Holy Church of This Most Religious City, the Mother of Our Piety and of all Christians of the orthodox faith, and the Most Holy See of This Imperial City shall, in the interest of the Imperial City, forever firmly possess all privileges and honors with regard to habuisse dignoscitur, habere in perpetuum firmiter regiae urbis intuitu iudicamus et sancimus.

[49] Zeno had been forced to flee Constantinople during the revolt of Basiliscus (475–476), whose brief rule is the "tyranny" in the following sentence.

D. XVI k. Ian. post cons. Armati vc.

[17] Αὐτοκράτωρ Ἀναστάσιος Α. pr. ... Θεσπίζομεν τὰ ἐπὶ τῇ ἁγιωτάτῃ μεγάλῃ ἐκκλησίᾳ τῇσδε τῆς βασιλίδος πόλεως (ᾗ συνυπάγεσθαι προσήκει καὶ τοὺς ἁγιωτάτους οἴκους, ὧν αὐτὴ τά τε πράγματα καὶ τὴν τῶν καλουμένων διαρίων καὶ λοιπῶν δαπανημάτων εἰς ἑαυτὴν ἀνεδέξατο χορηγίαν) ὁρισθέντα καὶ κρατήσαντα μένειν ἐφ' ἑαυτῶν ἀσάλευτα καὶ ἄτρωτα κατὰ πάντα τρόπον φυλαττόμενα· βέβαια δὲ εἶναι καὶ πάντα τὰ προνόμια τὰ τῇ αὐτῇ μεγάλῃ ἐκκλησίᾳ καὶ τῷ θρόνῳ ταύτης τῆς βασιλίδος πόλεως καθ' οἱονδήποτε χρόνον ἢ τρόπον ὑπάρξαντα καὶ ἐποφειλόμενα.

1. Θεσπίζομεν, ὥστε πᾶσαν ἐκποίησιν πραγμάτων ἀκινήτων ἢ πολιτικῶν σιτηρεσίων τοῖς σεβασμίοις οἴκοις διαφερόντων ἢ διοισόντων καθ' οἱονδήποτε τρόπον γινομένην ἢ μελετωμένην ἢ ἐπινοεῖσθαι δυναμένην σχολάζειν· πλὴν εἰ μήπου χρείας τινὸς ἀναγκαίας καὶ ἐπωφελοῦς τοῖς αὐτοῖς σεβασμίοις οἴκοις ἀνακυπτούσης λυσιτελὴς εἴη τούτοις ἡ πρᾶσις τοῦ τοιούτου πράγματος ἢ ὑποθήκη ἢ ἀνταλλαγὴ ἢ διηνεκὴς ἐμφύτευσις, τουτέστιν ἐπειδὰν τὰ τιμήματα τοῦ πιπρασκομένου πράγματος εἰς διευλύτωσιν χρεῶν, οὐχ ἁπλῶς οὐδ' ὡς ἔτυχε συστάντων, ἀλλ' ἐκ διαδοχῶν τινων ἤτοι κληρονομιῶν ἢ ἐξ αἰτιῶν ἀναγκαίων καὶ χρειωδῶν ἑνὶ τῶν προδηλωθέντων σεβασμίων οἴκων ἐπικειμένων, ἢ καὶ εἰς πράγματος αὐτοῖς ἑτέρου χρειωδεστέρου τε καὶ ἀναγκαιοτέρου κτῆσιν καὶ ἀγορασίαν μέλλοι προχωρεῖν, ἢ καὶ εἰς ἀνανέωσιν ἤτοι ἐπιμέλειαν τοῦ αὐτοῦ οἴκου κατεπείγουσαν καὶ μακρᾶς ἀναβολῆς οὐκ ἀνεχομένην δαπανᾶσθαι· τῶν αὐτῶν αἰτιῶν καὶ ἐπὶ τοῖς δανείσμασι καὶ ταῖς ἐπ' αὐτοῖς ὑποθήκαις τῆς κωλύσεως ἐξῃρημένων. τὰ δὲ τῆς ἀνταλλαγῆς, ὅταν ἐπὶ χρειωδεστέρῳ κατὰ τὸν ἴσον τρόπον καὶ ἀναγκαιοτέρῳ καὶ πρόσοδον ἀξίαν καὶ οὐκ ἐλάττονα τοῦ διδομένου πράγματος ἑνὶ τῶν αὐτῶν σεβασμίων οἴκων περιποιεῖν δυναμένῳ ἐπιζητεῖται· τὰ δὲ τῆς ἐμφυτεύσεως, ἡνίκα ἡ τῆς προσόδου μηδαμῶς ἀπομειοῖτο ποσότης ἢ καὶ ἄπορον εἴη παντελῶς τὸ διδόμενον· ἐπὶ γὰρ τοῖς τοιούτοις πράγμασι τοῖς μηδὲν μὲν κέρδος δι' ἀπορίαν προσφέρουσι, ζημίαν δὲ προστριβομένοις οὐδὲ δωρεὰς τοῖς αὐτοῖς οἴκοις ἢ ἐκχωρήσεις ἀπαγορεύομεν.

2. Τὸ δὲ γινόμενον οὐκ ἄλλως ἰσχύει, εἰ μὴ μία τῶν εἰρημένων αἰτιῶν ἐν ὑπομνήμασι φανερωθῇ, ἐν μὲν Βυζαντίῳ παρὰ τῷ μαγιστροκήνσῳ, ἐν δὲ ταῖς ἐπαρχίαις παρὰ τοῖς ἐκδίκοις, προκειμένων τῶν ἁγίων γραφῶν, καὶ ἐπὶ μὲν τῶν ἐκκλησιῶν παρόντων τῶν οἰκονόμων καὶ τῶν ἐνδημούντων κληρικῶν, ἐπὶ δὲ τῶν μοναστηρίων δεῖ παρεῖναι τοὺς ἡγουμένους καὶ τοὺς ἄλλους μοναχούς, ἐπὶ δὲ τῶν πτωχείων τοῦ διοικητοῦ καὶ τῶν ὑπουργούντων καὶ τῶν πτωχῶν,|| ἐπὶ δὲ τῶν ξενώνων τοῦ διοικητοῦ καὶ τῶν εὑρισκομένων πάντων ὑπουργῶν τῆς διοικήσεως καὶ ὁμοίως ἐπὶ τῶν the ordination of bishops, the right of sitting before others, and all other privileges, which it is known to have possessed before or during Our reign.

Given December 17, in the post-consulate of vir clarissimus Armatus (477).[50]

[17][51] Emperor ANASTASIUS Augustus. pr. We decree that the provisions established and in force concerning the Great and Most Holy Church of This Imperial City – under which the holy houses should also be comprehended, the business of which and payment of so-called day-wages (diaria) and other expenses the Church has taken upon itself – shall remain in their present state unshaken and intact, protected in every way. The privileges that at any time or in any manner belonged or are due to the same Great Church and See of This Imperial City shall stand firm.

1. We decree that any alienation of immovable property or civic bread rations that do or shall belong to the religious houses, regardless of how it should be made, attempted, or devised, is void, unless, if some business should emerge that is indispensable or useful to the aforementioned holy houses, a sale or security arrangement or exchange or emphyteusis (long-term lease) of such property should seem advantageous. That is, if the proceeds of the property sold go toward the discharge of debts, not those incurred normally as it may be, but those that occur from successions or inheritances, or for reasons essential or advantageous to one of the aforesaid venerable houses; or if it should go toward the acquisition and purchase of another thing more useful and essential to them, or toward defraying the renovation or maintenance of the same house, provided it is urgent and does not permit long delay. The same reasons are excepted from the prohibition on contracting debts and on security arrangements given for them. As for an exchange: when it is sought for a property that is more useful and essential in the same manner and can produce for one of the venerable houses an appropriate income not less than the property given in exchange. As for emphyteusis: when the amount of the income is in no way diminished or the property given is altogether unproductive. For We do not forbid these houses to give or alienate such property that brings no profit on account of its unproductiveness but rather causes loss.

2. The transaction shall not be valid, unless one of the aforesaid reasons is made explicit in the public records: in Byzantium, before the Master of the Census; in the provinces, before the defenders (ékdikoi), with the holy scripture set before them; with respect to churches, in the presence of the stewards and resident clergymen; with respect to monasteries, the abbots and other monks must be present; with respect to poorhouses, the superintendent, his ministers, and the attendants of the poor; with respect to hospices, the superintendent and ὀρφανοτροφείων, ὥστε κρατεῖν τὸ τοῖς πλείοσιν ἀρέσκον· συναινοῦντος καὶ τοῦ ἐπισκόπου τῶν τόπων, ἐν οἷς τοῦτο σύνηθες ἐπιγίνεσθαι. 2a. Μὴ δυναμένου τοῦ μαγιστροκήνσου ἢ τοῦ ἐκδίκου παραιτεῖσθαι καταλαμβάνειν τὸν σεβάσμιον οἶκον, ἐν ᾧ ἡ τοιαύτη συνίσταται πρᾶξις, ἀζημίως καὶ ἐκδικούντων αὐτήν. ὑπόκεινται γὰρ ἐκ παραβασίας ποινῇ χρυσίου λιτρῶν κ'. 2b. Καὶ μετὰ ταῦτα γίνεται συμβόλαια μνημονεύοντα τῶν αἰτιῶν καὶ τῆς τῶν ὑπομνημάτων πράξεως καὶ τῆς προσηγορίας τῶν παραγενομένων καὶ παρ' ᾧ συνέστη. 3. Εἰ δέ τι τῶν εἰρημένων παροφθείη, ὁ μὲν δανειστὴς καὶ ὁ ἀγοραστὴς ἐκπίπτει τοῦ πράγματος καὶ τοῦ χρέους καὶ τῶν τιμῶν· ὁ δὲ λαβὼν εἰς ἀνταλλαγὴν καὶ οὗπερ ἔδωκε καὶ οὗπερ ἔλαβεν ἐκπίπτει· ὁ δὲ εἰς ἐμφύτευσιν ὑπὲρ τὴν ἰδίαν ζωὴν λαβὼν ἢ δωρεὰν ἢ ἐκχώρησιν ἀπηγορευμένην ἀναδίδωσιν ὅπερ εἴληφε καὶ ποσότητα ἑτέραν, ἧς ἄξιόν ἐστι τὸ δοθέν.

[50] Lounghis et al. date this constitution to December 17, 476.

[51] The Greek text of this constitution has been reassembled from various sources. Lounghis et al. date it to between 491 and 518.

4. Χώραν δὲ ἔχει τὰ εἰρημένα καὶ ἐπὶ τοῖς μέλλουσι γίνεσθαι ἐκκλησιαστικοῖς καὶ τοῖς ἐσομένοις εὐαγέσιν. 5. Ὑπόντων δὲ κινητῶν ἔξωθεν τῶν ἱερῶν σκευῶν καὶ ἀρκούντων εἰς τὰς εἰρημένας αἰτίας ἀργεῖ τῶν ἀναγκαίων ἀκινήτων καὶ τῶν ἄρτων ἡ ἐκποίησις καὶ ἡ ὑποθήκη.

[18] [Ὁ αὐτὸς βασιλεύς.] pr. Ἡ διάταξις ἀφορίζει τῇ μεγάλῃ ἐκκλησίᾳ Κωνσταντινουπόλεως ἑβδομήκοντα λίτρας χρυσίου πρόσοδον εἰς τὸ τὰς κηδείας ἀδαπάνους ἐν Κωνσταντινουπόλει γίνεσθαι καὶ μέχρι τῶν νέων τειχῶν καὶ Βλαχέρναις· αἱ γὰρ Συκαῖ μέρος εἰσὶ τῆς πόλεως. 1. Ὁρίζει κατὰ τῶν παραβαινόντων ποινὴν ἀνὰ πεντήκοντα χρυσίου λιτρῶν.

[19] Imp. Iustinianus A. Menae pp. Illud, quod ex veteribus legibus licet obscure positis a quibusdam attemptabatur, ut donationes super piis causis factae, licet minus in actis intimatae sint, tamen valeant, certo et dilucido iure taxamus, ut in aliis quidem casibus vetera iura super intimandis donationibus intacta maneant: si quis vero donationes usque ad quingentos solidos in quibuscumque rebus fecerit vel in sanctam ecclesiam vel in xenodochium vel in nosocomium vel in orphanotrophium vel in ptochotrophium vel in ipsos pauperes vel in quamcumque civitatem, istae donationes etiam citra actorum confectionem convalescant: sin vero amplioris quantitatis donatio sit, excepta scilicet imperiali donatione, non aliter valeat, nisi actis intimata fuerit: nulli danda licentia quacumque alia causa quasi pietatis iure subnixa praeter eas, quas specialiter exposuimus, introducenda veterum scita super intimandis donationibus permutare.

ii πτωχοτρόφων

all available ministers under his supervision, and likewise for orphanages. Thus what the majority decides shall be valid, with the consent of the bishop of the places in which it is customary that this occurs.

2a. The Master of the Census or defender cannot refuse to accommodate the religious house for which such a transaction is made, but must represent it free of charge. For they are liable to a penalty of 20 pounds of gold for a violation. 2b. Thereafter receipts will be made recording the reasons for the transaction, its registration in the public records, the names of the parties present, and before whom it was made. 3. If any of the things mentioned are omitted, the creditor and purchaser lose the property, the debt, and the price paid; he who makes an exchange loses both what he gave and what he received; he who received property by a forbidden long-term lease for the term of his life, by gift, or by alienation, shall return what he received and an additional amount equal in value to what was given.

4. The aforesaid applies to all future property of the churches and of the religious houses. If there exists movable property besides the sacred vessels, and it is sufficient for the reasons given, the alienation of or a security arrangement made on indispensable immovable property and civic bread rations is void.

[18][52] (The same Emperor.) pr. The decree fixes an income of 70 pounds of gold for the Great Church of Constantinople, so that funerals in Constantinople may be free, even as far as the new walls and (the district of) Blachernae; for Sykae is part of the city. 1. It sets a penalty of 50 pounds of gold for violators.

[19] Emperor Justinian Augustus to Menas, Praetorian Prefect. pr. What certain persons attempted (to argue) on the authority of ancient but vaguely worded laws, namely, that gifts made for pious purposes, though not registered in the public records, should nonetheless be valid, We define by a sure and clear law. Thus, the ancient laws concerning the registration of gifts shall remain intact in other cases, but if anyone makes a gift worth up to 500 solidi in any form, whether to a holy church, hospice, infirmary, orphanage, poorhouse, to the poor themselves, or to any city, these donations shall be valid even without registration in the public records. If, though, the gift is of a greater amount, naturally with the exception of an imperial donation, it shall not be valid unless registered in the public records. No one shall be permitted to change the decrees of the ancients concerning the registration of gifts for any other reason founded, as it were, on the law of piety, besides those that We have specifically laid out.

[52] The inscription of this constitution is inferred from Nov. 59 pr. Lounghis et al. date to between 491 and 518.

D. … dn. Iustiniano pp. A. (II cons.)

[20] Ὁ αὐτὸς βασιλεύς. Μηδὲ ἀπὸ θείου τύπου ἢ ἀρχικῆς προστάξεως ἢ οἱουδήποτε δικαστηρίου στρατιωτικὴ σίτησις εἰς εὐκτηρίους οἴκους ἢ κληρικοὺς ἢ μοναστήρια μεταγέσθω, ὡς ἐλλειπόντων δῆθεν τοῖς ἀριθμοῖς σωματείων.

[21] Idem A. Demostheni pp. pr. Sancimus nemini licere sacratissima atque arcana vasa vel vestem ceteraque donaria, quae ad divinam religionem necessaria sunt (cum etiam veteres leges ea, quae iuris divini sunt, humanis nexibus non illigari sanxerunt) vel ad venditionem vel hypothecam vel pignus trahere, sed ab his, qui haec suscipere ausi fuerint, modis omnibus vindicari tam per religiosissimos episcopos quam oeconomos nec non etiam sacrorum vasorum custodes: nullam eis actionem relinquendam vel super recipiendo pretio vel fenore exigendo, pro quo res pignoratae sunt, sed omnibus huiusmodi actionibus respuendis ad restitutionem earum modis omnibus coartari. 1. Sin autem vel conflata sunt vel fuerint vel alio modo immutata vel dispersa, nihilo minus vel ad ipsa corpora vel ad pretia eorum exactionem competere sive per in rem sive per condictionem sive per in factum actionem, cuius tenor in multis et variis iuris articulis saepe est admissus, excepta videlicet causa captivitatis in locis, in quibus hoc (quod abominamur) contigerit. 2. Nam si necessitas fuerit in redemptione captivorum, tunc et venditionem praefatarum rerum divinarum et hypothecam et pignorationem fieri concedimus, cum non absurdum est animas hominum quibuscumque causis[iii] vel vestimentis praeferri: hoc obtinente non solum in futuris negotiis, sed etiam in iudiciis pendentibus.

[22] Idem A. Demostheni pp. pr. Sancimus res ad venerabiles ecclesias vel xenones vel monasteria vel ptochotrophia vel brephotrophia vel orphanotrophia vel gerontocomia vel si quid aliud tale consortium descendentes ex qualicumque curiali liberalitate sive inter vivos sive mortis causa sive in ultimis voluntatibus habita lucrativorum inscriptionibus liberas immunesque esse: lege scilicet, quae super huiusmodi inscriptionibus posita est, in aliis quidem personis suum robur obtinente, in parte autem ecclesiastica vel aliarum domuum, quae piis consortiis deputatae sunt, suum vigorem pietatis intuitu mitigante. cur enim non

[iii] vasis

Given ... in the consulship of Our Lord JUSTINIAN, Ever Augustus, (Consul for the second time) (528).

[20][53] The same Emperor. Neither by imperial rescript nor by prefectural order may title to a military grain ration be transferred to chapels, or to clerics, or to monasteries, on the alleged grounds that they are short in numbers.[54]

[21] The same Augustus to Demosthenes, Praetorian Prefect. pr. We decree that no one shall be permitted to carry off for sale, security arrangement, or pledge, the most sacred and mysterious vessels, vestments, and other offerings required for the divine worship (for even the ancient laws decreed that things under sacred law are not bound by human bonds); but these things shall be recovered by every means by the most reverend bishops and by the stewards, as well as by the guards of the sacred vessels, from those who dare to take them. The latter shall have no claim left them for recovering the price paid or for collecting interest, for which the property was pledged. All such claims will be rejected, and they will be constrained to make restitution of the property by every means. 1. If, however, the vessels have been melted down, or changed or dispersed in some other way, the claim to recover them is nonetheless valid whether for the objects themselves or for their value, whether by a real action or by claim for restitution or by an actio in factum. This principle is permitted in many various articles of law, except by reason of captivity in the places where – God forbid! – this happens. 2. For if it is necessary to ransom captives, then We permit both sale, security arrangement, and pledge of the aforementioned holy objects, since it is not outrageous that the souls of men should come before any vessels or vestments. This law shall be observed not only in future cases but also in pending trials.

(529). [55]

[22] The same Augustus to Demosthenes, Praetorian Prefect. pr. We decree that property made over to venerable churches, hospices, monasteries, poorhouses, foundling-hospitals, orphanages, elderly homes, or to any other such establishment, by any act of generosity whatsoever by someone of curial status, whether during his lifetime, by reason of death, or according to his last wishes, shall be free and exempt from charges assessed on bequests (inscriptiones lucrativorum). The law established concerning charges of this kind shall retain its force for other persons but, as regards the Church or other houses that are dedicated to pious societies, it shall mitigate its vigor in respect for piety. For why [53] = Basilika 5.1.9. Lounghis et al. date to 528 or 529.

[54] The meaning of this last clause is obscure.
[55] Lounghis et al. date to between September 17 and October 30, 529.

faciamus discrimen inter res divinas et humanas, et quare non competens praerogativa caelesti favori conservetur? 1. Quae oportet non solum in casibus, quos futurum tempus creaverit, sed etiam in adhuc pendentibus et iudiciali termino vel amicali compositione necdum sopitis obtinere.

Recitata septimo miliario huius inclitae civitatis in novo consistorio palatii Iustiniani.

[23] Idem A. Iuliano pp. pr. Ut inter divinum publicumque ius et privata commoda competens discretio sit, sancimus, si quis aliquam reliquerit hereditatem vel legatum vel fideicommissum vel donationis titulo aliquid dederit vel vendiderit sive sacrosanctis ecclesiis sive venerabilibus xenonibus vel ptochiis vel monasteriis masculorum vel virginum vel orphanotrophiis vel brephotrophiis vel gerontocomiis nec non iuri civitatum, relictorum vel donatorum vel venditorum eis sit longaeva exactio nulla temporis solita praescriptione coartanda. 1. Sed et si in redemptione captivorum quaedam pecuniae vel res relictae vel legitimo modo donatae sunt, et earum exactionem longissimam esse censemus. 2. Et nobis quidem cordi erat nullis temporum metis huiusmodi actionem circumcludi. sed ne videamur in infinitum hanc extendere, longissimum vitae hominum tempus eligimus et non aliter eam actionem finiri concedimus, nisi centum annorum curricula excesserint: tunc enim tantummodo huiuscemodi exactionem evanescere sinimus. 3. Sive itaque memoratis religiosissimis locis vel civitatibus hereditas sive legatum sive fideicommissum fuerit relictum, vel donatio vel venditio processerit in quibuscumque rebus mobilibus vel immobilibus vel se moventibus, sive pro redemptione captivorum quaedam fuerint derelicta vel donata, sit eorum paene perpetua vindicatio et ad annos centum, secundum quod dictum est, extendatur, nulla alia exceptione temporis inhibenda, sive contra primas personas sive contra heredes vel successores earum moveatur. 4. In his autem omnibus casibus non solum personales actiones damus, sed etiam in rem et hypothecariam secundum nostrae tenorem constitutionis, quae legatariis et hypothecarias donavit, et supra dictis omnibus unum tantummodo terminum vitae suae imponimus, id est centum metas annorum. 5. Haec autem omnia observari sancimus in iis casibus, qui vel postea fuerint nati vel iam in iudicium deducti sunt.

D. v k. April. Constantinopoli Lampadio et Oreste vv. cc. conss.

[24] [Ὁ αὐτὸς βασιλεύς ...] pr. Πάντων τῶν ἐκκλησιαστικῶν πραγμάτων καὶ διαφερόντως τῶν προσηκόντων τῇ ἁγιωτάτῃ μεγάλῃ ἐκκλησίᾳ τῆς should We not make a distinction between divine and human property, and why should not the appropriate prerogative for divine favor be maintained? 1. This prerogative shall obtain, not only in cases that the future brings about, but also in cases still pending and not yet laid to rest by judicial ruling or amicable settlement.

Read in the New Consistory of the Palace of Justinian at the seventh milestone of This Famous City (529).[56]

[23][57] The same Augustus to Julian, Praetorian Prefect. pr. In order that proper distinction may be made between divine and public law and private privileges, We decree that if anyone leaves an inheritance or legacy or trust, or gives something as a donation, or sells something, whether to holy churches, venerable hospices, poorhouses, monasteries of men or virgins, orphanages, foundling-hospitals, elderly homes, or even into the ownership of cities, the property left, given, or sold, may be claimed over a long period of time, unconstrained by any customary limitation. 1. And also if any money or property is left or given in lawful manner for the ransoming of captives, We rule that the action to claim it may be filed over the longest time. 2. It was indeed Our desire to circumscribe an action of this nature by no time limits at all. But lest We seem to extend it indefinitely, We have chosen the longest span of human life and do not permit this action to be barred unless a period of more than 100 years has elapsed. Only then do We allow an action exclusively of this nature to lapse. 3. If, then, an inheritance, legacy, or trust has been left, or a gift or sale has been made to the aforementioned most holy places or to cities, whether consisting of movable, immovable, or self-moving property, or if any property has been left or given for the ransom of captives, the action to claim it shall be all but perpetual and be extended to 100 years. No other defense of limitation shall prevent this, whether the action is against the original parties or against their heirs or successors. 4. In all these cases, We permit not only personal actions but also real actions, and actions on security arrangements, according to the tenor of Our decree,[58] which permitted actions on security arrangements also to legatees; and upon all the above We place a single time limit only, that is, a period of 100 years. 5. We decree that these provisions shall be observed in cases that arise in the future and in those that have already been brought to trial.

Given March 28, at Constantinople, in the consulship of viri clarissimi Lampadius and Orestes (530).

[24] (The same Emperor ...). pr. With foresight for all ecclesiastical property and especially for that belonging to the Most Holy Great Church[59] of This [56] Lounghis et al. date to October 30, 529.

[57] Combine with C. 7.40.1. Lounghis et al. date to March 18, 530.
[58] = C. 6.43.1.
[59] The Hagia Sophia.

εὐδαίμονος ταύτης πόλεως τῇ ἡμετέρᾳ καὶ πάντων μητρί, ἥτις κεφάλαιόν ἐστι τῶν ἄλλων ἁπασῶν, ποιούμενοι πρόνοιαν θεσπίζομεν παροικικῷ μὲν δικαίῳ μηδεμίαν τοῦ λοιποῦ γίνεσθαι ἐκκλησιαστικῶν πραγμάτων ἔκδοσιν, ἀλλ' ἀναιρεῖσθαι τὸ μηδενὶ νόμῳ γνωριζόμενον ὄνομα. 1. Τὰ μέντοι λοιπὰ συναλλάγματα, ὅσα ἐφεῖται τοῖς θεοφιλεστάτοις ἐπισκόποις τῆς αὐτῆς ἁγιωτάτης μεγάλης ἐκκλησίας ποιεῖν, ἐξεῖναι αὐτοῖς τίθεσθαι, πρὸς οὓς ἂν δοκιμάσωσι, δίχα τῶν ἐνδοξοτάτων ἢ μεγαλοπρεπεστάτων ἐμπράκτων ἀρχόντων ταύτης τῆς βασιλίδος πόλεως· πρὸς γὰρ τούτους κατ' οὐδένα τρόπον ποιεῖσθαι αὐτοὺς οἱανδήποτε ἔκδοσιν ἀκινήτων πραγμάτων, ἀλλὰ μηδὲ ἄλλου παρεντιθεμένου προσώπου ἐπὶ περιγραφῇ τῆς θείας ἡμῶν διατυπώσεως συγχωροῦμεν, εἴτε τινὰ οἰκειότητα οὗτος ἔχει πρὸς τὸν ἄρχοντα τὸν ἐπὶ τῇ ἐξουσίᾳ τελοῦντα, εἴτε δίχα παλαιᾶς οἰκειότητος νεωστὶ παρ' αὐτοῦ πρὸς τοῦτο παρείληπται. 2. Γινωσκόντων μὲν αὐτῶν τῶν θεοφιλεστάτων οἰκονόμων, ὡς, εἴ τι παρ' αὐτὰ γένοιτο, τὴν τοῦ ἐκδικουμένου πράγματος διατίμησιν οἴκοθεν αὐτοὶ καταθεῖναι συναχθήσονται τῇ ἁγιωτάτῃ μεγάλῃ ἐκκλησίᾳ. τῶν δὲ πρὸς τὴν τοιαύτην ἔκληψιν χωρούντων ἐνδοξοτάτων μεγαλοπρεπεστάτων ἐμπράκτων ἀρχόντων, ὡς, εἰ καὶ πᾶσι περινενοημένοις λαθεῖν σπεύσαιεν τρόποις καὶ πρόσωπα τοιαῦτα παρενθεῖεν, ἅπερ οἴονται λήσειν μέχρι παντός, ὅτιπερ ἑαυτοῖς τὸ πρᾶγμα πράττουσιν, ὅμως μετὰ ταῦτα διαφαινομένης τῆς ἀληθείας ἀκυρωθήσεται μὲν παντελῶς τὸ συνάλλαγμα, ποινῆς δὲ χάριν καὶ αὐτοὶ τὴν τοῦ πράγματος καταθήσουσι τῇ ἁγιωτάτῃ μεγάλῃ ἐκκλησίᾳ διατίμησιν.

3. Εἰ δὲ καὶ καθ' ἕτερον τρόπον πείσει ἢ ἀναγκάσει περιελθεῖν εἰς αὐτὸν ἐκκλησιαστικὸν πρᾶγμα, καὶ τὸ πραχθὲν ἄκυρον καὶ τὸ δοθὲν ὑπὲρ τούτου εἰς πρόσωπον τῆς ἐκκλησίας ἀποδίδοται αὐτῇ καὶ πρὸς τοῖς εἰρημένοις ὑπόκειται ποινῇ κ' χρυσίου λιτρῶν αὐτὸς καὶ ὁ τὸ πρᾶγμα δούς, καὶ ὁ λαβὼν ἐπὶ τὸ παρασκευάσαι γενέσθαι τὸ συνάλλαγμα τὸ δοθὲν αὐτῷ διπλοῦν δίδωσι, καὶ πάντα προσκυροῦνται τῇ ἐκκλησίᾳ.

4. Περαιτέρω τῶν κ' ἐτῶν ἀκίνητον τῇ ἐκκλησίᾳ οὐ μισθοῦται. 5. Μόνοις εὐπόροις δεῖ τὰ ἐκκλησιαστικὰ ἐμφυτεύειν διὰ τὴν ἀποκατάστασιν τῆς ὄψεως, καὶ μὴ περαιτέρω αὐτοῦ τοῦ ἐμφυτευομένου καὶ δύο ἑξῆς κληρονόμων, καὶ μὴ κουφίζειν πλέον τοῦ ἕκτου μέρους τοῦ σωζομένου κανόνος ἐν τῷ καιρῷ τῆς ἐκδόσεως. 6. Εἰ δὲ βλάψει τὸ πρᾶγμα, ἐνισταμένου τοῦ χρόνου ἐξεοῦται καὶ τὴν ζημίαν ἀποθεραπεύει. 7. Εἰ δὲ ῥαθυμήσῃ ὁ οἰκονόμος ἢ ἀπόροις ἐκδῷ, ἐπιγινώσκει τὴν βλάβην.

8. Οἱ χαρτουλάριοι τῆς ἐκκλησίας τῆς μεγάλης οὔτε διὰ μέσου προσώπου δύνανται λαβεῖν ἀκίνητον αὐτῆς κατὰ μίσθωσιν ἢ ἐμφύτευσιν ἢ ἕτερον τρόπον. 9. Γίνονται οἱ χαρτουλάριοι ἡγουμένου λιβέλλου καὶ

Blessed City, Our mother and mother of all, the head of all other churches, We decree that no lease of ecclesiastical property by the law of tenancy shall hereafter be made, but its very name shall be abolished and recognized by no law. 1. Other contracts that the most reverend bishops of the same Most Holy Great Church are permitted to make, they may make with whomever they please except the Most Glorious or Magnificent Prefects of This Imperial City currently in office. For We do not permit them to make any alienation of property to the Prefects in any way, nor through another person introduced to circumvent this Our imperial decree, whether he is related in some way to the Prefect in office or has recently been approached by the Prefect for this purpose without a long-standing relationship. 2. The most reverend stewards shall know that if any transaction is made contrary hereto, they will be compelled to pay the Most Holy Great Church from their own means the assessed value of the property to be recovered. If the Most Glorious Magnificent Prefects currently in office are party to such a letting, even if they strive by every conceivable means to escape detection and introduce third parties as intermediaries, who they believe will never be discovered, as if these intermediaries were conducting their own business; nonetheless, when afterwards the truth is revealed, the contract shall be utterly annulled, and the Prefects shall, as punishment, pay the Most Holy Great Church the assessed value of the property.

3. If in another way he brings church property into his possession by persuasion or force, the transaction shall be invalid, and whatever has been given for this property to the person of the Church shall be surrendered to it; and in addition to the aforesaid, he and the person who gave the property shall each pay a fine of 20 pounds of gold, and he who received payment[60] for having such a contract made shall pay double the amount given to him, and everything shall be made over to the Church.

4. Immovable property shall not be let by the Church for more than 20 years. 5. Ecclesiastical property must given by emphyteusis exclusively to persons of means for the purpose of restoration, for no longer than (the lifetime of) the person to whom it is let and two successive heirs; nor may more than one-sixth of the rent collected during the lease be remitted. 6. But if the lessee damages the property during the period of the lease, he shall be driven out and shall make good the loss. 7. If the steward is careless or lets the property to persons without sufficient means, he shall acknowledge the damage.

8. Record-keepers (chartularii) of the Great Church may not receive immovable property of the Church through an intermediary by lease, long-term lease, or any other means. 9. Record-keepers are appointed upon presenting a document bearing the signature of the Patriarch and the steward. 10. And if one of φέροντος ὑπογραφὴν τοῦ πατριάρχου καὶ τοῦ οἰκονόμου. 10. Καὶ ἐάν τις αὐτῶν φανῇ κλέπτων ἢ παραδιδοὺς ἢ ἄλλως ἀνεπιτήδειος, ἔξεστι τῷ πατριάρχῃ καὶ τοῖς οἰκονόμοις ἐκβάλλειν αὐτὸν τοῦ καταλόγου.

[60] Three persons are punished: the prefect (the "recipient" of the property); the clergyman (the "giver"); and the intermediary, who "received" money vel sim. from the prefect for a contract with the Church.

11. Γίνονται δὲ εἰς σκρίνιον τῆς Ἀνατολῆς χαρτουλάριοι ιε', εἰς τὸ Ἀσιανῆς ις', εἰς τὸ Πόντου ιε', εἰς τὸ ἐνοίκιον ιε', εἰς τὸ Θρᾴκης η', εἰς τὸ τοῦ Ἀντιόχου ς', εἰς τὸ τοῦ Καλοποδίου ς', εἰς τὸ τοῦ ἀναλώματος ι', εἰς τὸ τῶν ληγάτων θ'. 12. Καὶ λαμβάνουσι λόγῳ συνηθειῶν ἐπὶ μὲν τοῖς ἐμφυτευτικοῖς συμβολαίοις πεντηκοστάς, ἐπὶ δὲ τοῖς μισθωτικοῖς καὶ λοιποῖς συναλλάγμασιν ἑκατοστήν. 13. Εἰ δὲ ὑπὲρ τὸν εἰρημένον ἀριθμὸν γένηται χαρτουλάριος, ἐκπίπτει καὶ δίδωσι τῇ ἐκκλησίᾳ ιε' λίτρας, καὶ ὁ ποιήσας αὐτὸν κ'.

14. Μετὰ ζητήσεως ἀκριβοῦς οἱ οἰκονόμοι λογιζέσθωσαν γνώμῃ τοῦ πατριάρχου τὴν γινομένην δαπάνην τοῖς ἐμφυτευταῖς καὶ μισθωταῖς καὶ διοικηταῖς, ἑκάστου μὲν οἰκονόμου ζητοῦντος τὰ τῆς ὑφ' ἑαυτὸν διοικήσεως, τῶν δὲ λοιπῶν κατὰ πρόσταξιν ἔγγραφον τοῦ πατριάρχου τοῖς λογισμοῖς ὑπογραφόντων τὸ 'ἀνέγνων'· καὶ τὸ χωρὶς τοιαύτης παρατηρήσεως λογιζόμενον οἴκοθεν οἱ οἰκονόμοι διδόασιν.

15. Τῆς δὲ λογιζομένης δαπάνης καὶ τῶν εἰσκομιζομένων χρημάτων λαμβάνουσιν οἱ χαρτουλάριοι ἑκατοστάς· ὁ δὲ πλέον λαμβάνων καὶ τῆς ὑπουργίας τοῦ χαρτουλαρίου καὶ τῆς ἱερατικῆς ἀξίας ἐκπίπτει παραχρῆμα. 16. Κἀκεῖνο δὲ θεσπίζομεν, ὥστε καὶ αὐτοὺς τοὺς θεοφιλεστάτους οἰκονόμους τούς τε νῦν ὄντας καὶ κατὰ καιρὸν ἐσομένους κατὰ μῆνα ἢ τόγε μήκιστον κατὰ δύο μῆνας ποιεῖσθαι τοὺς λογισμοὺς πρὸς τοὺς ἀρκαρίους τῆς ἁγιωτάτης μεγάλης ἐκκλησίας, εἰδότας ὡς, εἰ τοῦτο καταρρᾳθυμήσειαν, κινδύνου πειραθήσονται.

[25] Ὁ αὐτὸς βασιλεὺς Ἰουλιανῷ ἐπάρχῳ πραιτωρίων. pr. Ἐπειδήπερ ἐν πολλαῖς ἤδη διαθήκαις εὕρομεν τοιαύτας ἐνστάσεις, καθ' ἃς ἢ ἐξ ὁλοκλήρου τις ἔγραψε τὸν δεσπότην ἡμῶν Χριστὸν κληρονόμον, μὴ προσθεὶς εὐκτήριον οἶκον μηδένα, ἢ αὐτὸν τὸν δεσπότην ἡμῶν Ἰησοῦν Χριστὸν ἐξ ἡμισείας ἢ ἐξ ἑτέρων ἀνίσων μερῶν, ἕτερον δέ τινα ἐξ ἡμισείας, ἢ ἄλλης μοίρας (ἤδη γὰρ πλείοσι διαθήκαις κατὰ τοῦτον γενομέναις τὸν τρόπον ἐνετύχομεν) καὶ πολλὴν ἀδηλίαν ἐντεῦθεν οὖσαν κατὰ τοὺς παλαιοὺς ὁρῶμεν νόμους. Καὶ τοῦτο ἐπανορθούμενοι θεσπίζομεν, εἰ μὲν τὸν δεσπότην ἡμῶν Ἰησοῦν Χριστὸν γράψειέ τις κληρονόμον ἢ ἐξ ὁλοκλήρου ἢ ἐκ μέρους, ἄντικρυς δοκεῖν τὴν κατὰ τὴν αὐτὴν πόλιν ἢ τὴν κώμην ἢ τὸ χωρίον, ἐφ' ἧς καθέστηκεν ὁ τελευτήσας, ἁγιωτάτην ἐκκλησίαν ἐνίστασθαι κληρονόμον καὶ εἰς ὁλόκληρον τὴν ἔνστασιν ἀπαιτεῖσθαι παρὰ τῶν θεοφιλεστάτων αὐτῆς οἰκονόμων, ἢ εἰς τὸ μέρος καθ' ὅσον κληρονόμος γραφῇ· αὐτοῦ τούτου κρατοῦντος, εἰ καὶ ληγάτον ἢ fideicommisson καταλειφθείη· καὶ ταῦτα διαφέρειν ταῖς ἁγιωτάταις ἐκκλησίαις, ἐφ' ᾧτε εἰς πτωχῶν ἀποτροφὴν αὐτὰ προχωρεῖν.

them should be discovered stealing or betraying (the interests of the Church?) or found otherwise unsuitable, the Patriarch and stewards may strike his name from the list.

11. There shall be 15 record-keepers in the bureau of the East, 16 in that of Asiana, 15 in that of Pontus, 15 in the domestic bureau, 8 in that of Thrace, 6 in that of Antioch, 6 in that of Calopodium, 10 in the bureau for expenditures, 9 in that for legacies. 12. And they shall receive, as is customary, 2 percent for the drafting of an emphyteusis and 1 percent for rental and other contracts. 13. If anyone is made a record-keeper above the aforementioned number, he will be expelled and will pay the Church 15 pounds (of gold), and he who appointed him 20 pounds.

14. With close scrutiny, the stewards shall, at the discretion of the Patriarch, calculate the expenditure caused by the holders of long-term leases, by other lessees, and by superintendents, each steward investigating the accounts of the diocese entrusted to him; the rest shall, at the written order of the Patriarch, subscribe the accounts with "I have read";[61] and if this rule is not observed, the stewards shall pay from their own funds the amount thus calculated.

15. The record-keepers shall receive one percent of all expenditures and revenue. He who takes more shall immediately be stripped of his office as record-keeper and of his rank in the Church. 16. We also decree that present and future most reverend stewards shall, every month or at least every two months, present their accounts to the treasurers (arcarii) of the Most Holy, Great Church, knowing that if they neglect this duty, they do so at their peril.

(530)

[25] The same Augustus to Julian, Praetorian Prefect. pr. Since We find in many wills provisions whereby the testator appoints Our Lord Christ as sole heir, without adding any sacred building, or appoints Our Lord Jesus Christ as heir to one half or another, unequal portion, and someone else as heir to a half or another share – for We have already encountered many wills made in this way – We perceive that much uncertainty derives thence with respect to the old laws. Correcting this, We decree that if anyone appoints Our Lord Jesus Christ as heir, whether to all or to part, the most holy church of the city or village or place, in which the deceased dwelt, shall immediately be instituted heir, and the inheritance of the entire estate shall be claimed by the most reverend stewards of the same church, or the inheritance of the portion to which it is named heir. The same shall be true if a legacy or testamentary trust is left; and this property shall belong to the most holy churches, as long as it is dedicated to the sustenance of [61] ἀνέγνων in Greek and recognovi in Latin. The subscriber thereby authenticates the document.

1. Εἰ δὲ ἑνὸς τῶν ἁγίων ἀρχαγγέλων ἐμνήσθη ἢ τῶν προσκυνητῶν μαρτύρων, μὴ ποιησάμενος οἴκου μνείαν (τοῦτο ὅπερ ἴσμεν παρά τινος διατυπωθὲν καίτοι τῶν ἐπιφανῶν γεγονότος καὶ τῇ περὶ νόμους καὶ λόγους ἐνευδοκιμηκότος παιδείᾳ), εἰ μὲν ἔστι κατὰ τὴν πόλιν ἐκείνην ἢ τὴν ἐνορίαν αὐτῆς εὐκτήριος οἶκος εἰς τιμὴν ἐκείνου τοῦ σεβασμιωτάτου ἀρχαγγέλου ἢ τοῦ ἁγιωτάτου μάρτυρος, αὐτὸν δοκεῖν γεγράφθαι κληρονόμον· εἰ δὲ οὐκ ἔστι κατὰ τὴν αὐτὴν πόλιν ἢ τὴν ἐνορίαν τοιοῦτος οἶκος, τηνικαῦτα τοὺς κατὰ τὴν μητρόπολιν σεβασμίους οἴκους. καὶ εἰ κατ' αὐτὴν γοῦν εὑρεθείη τοιοῦτός τις οἶκος, ἐκείνῳ δοκεῖν τὸν κλῆρον ἢ τὸ πρεσβεῖον ἢ τὸ fideicommisson καταλελεῖφθαι· εἰ δὲ μηδὲ ἐκεῖσε φανείη τοιοῦτός τις οἶκος ὤν, αὖθις τὰς κατὰ τόπον ἁγιωτάτας ἐκκλησίας καὶ τοῦτο λαμβάνειν.

2. Δηλονότι ταῖς ἁγιωτάταις ἐκκλησίαις ἅπαντες οἱ λοιποὶ δικαίως παραχωροῦσιν οἶκοι, πλὴν εἰ μὴ γένοιτο πρόδηλος ὁ τελευτήσας ἕτερον μέντοι ἐνθυμηθεὶς ὄνομα προσθεῖναι, ἕτερον δὲ εἰπών· διὰ τὸ καί τι τοιοῦτον ἡμᾶς γνόντας κατά τινα διαθήκην ἐπὶ τοῦ Πόντου γενέσθαι κἀκεῖσε πάλιν τὸ ἀληθὲς ἀντὶ τοῦ γεγραμμένου παρασκευάσαι κρατῆσαι. 3. Εἰ μέντοι ὁ μὲν διαθέμενος ῥητὸν μὴ θείη τόπον, εὑρεθείη δὲ τοῦ αὐτοῦ ὀνόματος ἐν ἐκείνῃ τῇ πόλει ἢ τῇ περιοικίδι εὐκτήρια πολλὰ καθεστῶτα, εἰ μὲν ἔν τινι τούτων συχνῶς ὁ τελευτήσας ἐφοίτα καί τινα πρὸς αὐτὸ μείζονα εἶχε προσπάθειαν, ἐκείνῳ δοκεῖν καταλελεῖφθαι τὸ πρεσβεῖον· 4. Εἰ δὲ οὐδὲν τοιοῦτο εὑρίσκοιτο, τῷ μᾶλλον ἐκ τοῦ αὐτοῦ ὀνόματος ἐνδεεστέρῳ οἴκῳ καὶ δεομένῳ βοηθείας δοκεῖν τὸ τοιοῦτο καταλελεῖφθαι πρεσβεῖον ἤτοι τὴν κληρονομίαν.

D. XIII k. Nov. Constantinopoli Lampadio et Oreste vv. cc. conss.

III De Episcopis et Clericis et Orphanotrophis et Brephotrophis et Xenodochis et Asceteriis et Monachis et Privilegio Eorum et Castrensi Peculio et de Redimendis Captivis et de Nuptiis Clericorum Vetitis seu Permissis

[1] Imp. Constantius A. clericis salutem dicit. Iuxta sanctionem, quam dudum meruistis, et vos et mancipia vestra nullus novis collationibus obligabit, sed vacatione gaudebitis. praeterea neque hospites suscipietis.

D. VI k. Sept. Placido et Romulo conss.

[2] Idem A. Felici episcopo. pr. Omnis a clericis indebitae conventionis iniuria et iniquae exactionis repellatur improbitas nullaque conventio sit circa eos munerum sordidorum. et cum negotiatores ad aliquam

the poor. 1. But if anyone cites one of the holy archangels or worshipful martyrs without making mention of a religious house – this, as We know, was done by someone despite his illustrious rank and reputation for learning in law and letters – then, if there is in that city or its territory a chapel in honor of that most reverend archangel or holy martyr, it will be regarded as having been named the heir; if there is no such house in the same city or its territory, then the houses in the metropolis. And if such a house should be found in the metropolis, the estate or legacy or testamentary trust will be considered as having been left to it. If, though, it appears that there is no such house there, then the most holy churches of the area shall receive it.

2. It is self-evident that all other (religious) houses rightfully must yield to the most holy churches, unless the deceased manifestly intended to designate one house but named another. For We learned that such a thing occurred in a will in Pontus and ordered in that case that the truth should prevail over what was written. 3. If, though, the testator has named no specific place, and several chapels of the same name are found in his city or district, then if the deceased frequently attended one of them and harbored greater affection for it, the share of the legacy shall be considered as having been left to it. 4. But if no such chapel is found, the portion of the legacy or estate shall be considered as having been left to the poorer one called by that name or to the one in greater need of aid.

Given October 18,[62] at Constantinople, in the consulship of the viri clarissimi Lampadius and Orestes (530).

Third Title Bishops, Clerics, and the Superintendents of Orphanages, Foundling-Hospitals, Hospices, Hermitages, and Monasteries; Their Privileges; Military Peculium; the Ransoming of Captives; Marriages Forbidden and Permitted to Clergymen

[1][63] Emperor Constantius Augustus to the Clergy, greetings. According to the decree that you obtained long ago, no one shall obligate you and your slaves to new levies, but you shall rejoice in your exemption. Moreover, you shall not quarter guests.[64]

Given August 27, in the consulship of Placidus and Romulus (343).

[2][65] The same Emperor to Felix, Bishop. pr. Clergymen shall be protected from the injustice of every unwarranted demand and the iniquity of any illegal exaction, nor may they be called upon for menial liturgies (munera sordida). And [62] Emended from October 20; cf. C. 1.3.45.

[63] = C.Th. 16.2.8.
[64] That is, members of the army or imperial administration.
[65] = C.Th. 16.2.14 (where the constitution is ascribed also to Julian). The date is more probably 356 (Seeck).

praestationem competentem vocantur, ab his universis istiusmodi strepitus conquiescat. si quid enim vel parsimonia vel provisione vel mercatura, honestati tamen conscia, congesserint, in usum pauperum atque egentium ministrari oportet aut id, quod ex eorundem ergasteriis vel tabernis conquiri potuerit et colligi, collectum id religionis aestiment lucrum.

1. Verum etiam hominibus eorundem, qui operam in mercimoniis habent, divi principis, id est nostri genitoris, statuta multimoda observatione caverunt, ut idem clerici privilegiis pluribus redundarent. 2. Itaque extraordinariorum a praedictis necessitas atque omnis molestia conquiescat. 3. Ad parangariarum quoque praestationem non vocentur nec eorundem facultates atque substantiae. 4. Omnibus clericis huiusmodi praerogativa succurrat, ut coniugia clericorum ac liberi quoque et ministeria, id est mares pariter ac feminae, eorumque etiam filii immunes semper ab huiusmodi muneribus perseverent.

D. VIII id. Dec. Mediolano, lecta V k. Ian. apud acta Constantio A. VIIII et Iuliano C. II conss.

[3] Idem A. ad Taurum pp. De his clericis, qui praedia possident, sublimis auctoritas tua non solum eos aliena iuga nequaquam statuet excusare, sed etiam pro his, quae ab ipsis possidentur, eosdem ad pensitanda fiscalia perurgueri. universos namque clericos possessores dumtaxat provinciales pensitationes fiscalium translationesque faciendas recognoscere iubemus.

Data epistula prid. k. Iul. Mediolano Constantio A. X et Iuliano C. III conss.

[4] Idem A. ad Taurum pp. pr. Officiales rationales, si exhibitione cursus seu primipili necessitate neglecta, interversa etiam ratione fiscali ad clericatus honorem putaverint transeundum, ad priorem condicionem retrahantur. 1. Si vero obnoxii ratiociniis vel necessitatibus non sint, sub notione iudicum officiis consentientibus, si id probabilis vitae studium postularit, transferantur nec cessionem metuant facultatum. 2. Quod si clandestinis artibus putaverint inrependum, duas concedant liberis aut, si proles defuerit, propinquis e propria substantia portiones tertiam sibimet retenturi: si vero propinquorum necessitudo defuerit, when merchants are called to make some appropriate payment, such clamor shall be stilled with respect to all clergymen. If they have accumulated anything by thrift, foresight, or trade, as long as it is consistent with virtue, it must be distributed for the benefit of the poor and needy; or they should regard what could be acquired and collected from the workshops and shops of the same men as profit collected for the faith.

1. In sundry measures, the provisions of the divine emperor, that is, Our progenitor, have provided for the interests of the agents of the clergy employed in commerce, so that these clergymen should abound in numerous privileges. 2. Thus, the necessity of performing extraordinary liturgies, and every annoyance connected to them shall cease with respect to the aforementioned. 3. They shall not be called upon to provide supplementary post-wagons (parangariae), nor may their means and property. 4. The following privilege shall benefit all clergy: their wives, children, and servants, that is, both male and female, and even their children, shall always remain exempt from such liturgies.

Given December 6, at Milan; read into the public records December 28, in the consulship of Constantius Augustus, for the ninth time, and the Caesar Julian, for the second time (357).

[3][66] The same Emperor to Taurus, Praetorian Prefect. Concerning those clerics who possess estates, Your Sublime Authority shall decree not only that they attempt to exempt the lands of others in vain, but also that they shall be compelled to pay the fiscal taxes on the lands that they possess. For We order all clergy residing in the provinces, provided they are landholders, to acknowledge the payment of fiscal taxes and provision of transport duties.

A letter given June 30, at Milan, in the consulship of Constantius Augustus, for the tenth time, and the Caesar Julian, for the third time (360).

[4][67] The same Augustus to Taurus, Praetorian Prefect. pr. If fiscal officials should resolve to take up clerical office, having neglected the provision of the imperial post or supplies as commissary officer,[68] or having even falsified fiscal accounts, they shall be dragged back to their former status. 1. But if they are not liable for the accounts or compulsory duties, they may, if their zeal for a commendable life requires it, be transferred with the knowledge of the governors and consent of the official staff; nor need they fear loss of their property. 2. But if they think they must sneak into the clergy through subterfuge, they shall give two-thirds of their own property to their children or, if they have no offspring, to their relatives, retaining a third to themselves. If, however, they [66] = C.Th. 16.2.15 (where the constitution is ascribed to Julian). Krüger conjectures that this constitution was actually accepted, not given, on June 30.

[67] = C.Th. 8.4.7; combine with C.Th. 12.1.49.

[68] The pastus primipili, a kind of tax related to the transport of the annona.

geminae portiones officiis in quibus militant relinquantur, portione tertia tantummodo retenta.

D. IIII k. Sept. Tauro et Florentio conss.

[5] Imp. Iovianus A. Secundo pp. Si quis non dicam rapere, sed attemptare tantum matrimonii iungendi causa sacratissimas virgines ausus fuerit, capitali poena ferietur.

D. XI k. Mart. Antiochiae Ioviano A. et Varroniano conss.

[6] Imppp. Valens Gratianus et Valentinianus AAA. ad Cataphronium. Presbyteros diaconos subdiaconos atque exorcistas et lectores, ostiarios etiam personalium munerum expertes esse praecipimus.

D. III non. Mart. Gratiano A. IIII et Merobaude conss.

[7] Pars actorum habitorum in sacro consistorio apud imperatores Gratianum Valentinianum et Theodosium consulatu Syagrii et Eucherii virorum clarissimorum die IIII k. Iul. Constantinopoli. Imp. Theodosius A. dixit: Nec honore nec legibus episcopus ad testimonium flagitatur. Item dixit: episcopum ad testimonium dicendum admitti non decet: nam et persona oneratur et dignitas sacerdotis excepta confunditur.

[8] Idem AAA. Paulino praef. Augustali. pr. Presbyteri citra iniuriam quaestionis testimonium dicant, ita tamen, ut falsa non simulent. ceteri vero clerici, qui eorum gradum vel ordinem sequuntur, si ad testimonium dicendum petiti fuerint, prout leges praecipiunt, audiantur. 1. Salva tamen sit litigatoribus falsi actio, si forte presbyteri, qui sub nomine superioris loci testimonium dicere citra aliquam corporalem iniuriam sunt praecepti, hoc ipso, quod nihil metuant, vera suppresserint. multo magis etenim poena sunt digni, quibus cum plurimum honoris per nostram iussionem delatum est, occulto inveniuntur in crimine.

D. VIII k. Aug. Arcadio A. et Bautone conss.

lack familial connections, then two equal portions shall be left to the bureaus in which they serve, with only one-third retained.

Given August 29, in the consulship of Taurus and Florentius (361).

[5][69] Emperor JOVIAN Augustus to Secundus, Praetorian Prefect. If anyone should dare merely to solicit, let alone ravish, most holy virgins for the purpose of marriage, he shall be put to death.

Given February 20, at Antioch, in the consulship of Jovian Augustus and Varronianus (364).

[6][70] VALENS, GRATIAN, and VALENTINIAN Augusti to Cataphronius. We order that presbyters, deacons, sub-deacons, exorcists, readers, and even sextons shall be exempt from personal liturgies.

Given March 5, in the consulship of Gratian Augustus, for the fourth time, and Merobaudes (377).

[7][71] Excerpt of proceedings held in the imperial consistory before emperors GRATIAN, VALENTINIAN, AND THEODOSIUS, June 28, in Constantinople, in the consulship of viri clarissimi Syagrius and Eucherius (381). Emperor THEODOSIUS Augustus said: Neither by reason of his office nor by law is a bishop required to give testimony. He said moreover: It is unbecoming that a bishop should be summoned to give testimony, for (thereby) both his person is burdened and his privileged status as priest flouted.

[8][72] The same Augusti to Paulinus, Augustal Prefect. pr. Presbyters may give testimony without the injury of torture, as long as they do not tell lies. The rest of the clergy who follow them in rank and order must, if they are summoned to give testimony, be interrogated as the laws stipulate. 1. An action for falsehood (actio falsi) shall, however, remain available to litigants if perchance the presbyters, who have been directed to give testimony without corporal injury on account of their superior position, should suppress the truth for the very reason that they have nothing to fear. For much more deserving of punishment are those on whom great honor has been bestowed by Our command, if they are detected in secret crime.

Given July 25, in the consulship of Arcadius Augustus and Bauto (385).

[69] = C.Th. 9.25.2. The date of this constitution falls three days (364 was a leap year) after Jovian's death; Krüger attributes it to Julian in 363.

[70] = C.Th. 16.2.24.

[71] = C.Th. 11.39.8 (June 29, preferred by Seeck).

[72] = C.Th. 11.39.10.

[9] Imppp. Valentinianus Theodosius et Arcadius AAA. Tatiano pp. Nulla nisi emensis sexaginta annis secundum praeceptum apostoli ad diaconissarum consortium transferatur.

D. XI k. Iul. Mediolano Valentiniano A. IIII et Neoterio conss.

[10] Impp. Arcadius et Honorius AA. Theodoro pp. pr. Si quis in hoc genus sacrilegii proruperit, ut in ecclesias catholicas inruens, sacerdotibus et ministris vel ipso cultu[iv] locoque aliquid importet iniuriae, quod geritur, a provinciae rectoribus animadvertatur. 1. Atque ita provinciae moderator sacerdotum et catholicae ecclesiae ministrorum, loci quoque ipsius et divini cultus iniuriam capitali in convictos sive confessos reos sententia noverit vindicandam nec expectet, ut episcopus iniuriae propriae ultionem deposcat, cui sanctitas ignoscendi gloriam dereliquit: sitque cunctis laudabile factas atroces sacerdotibus aut ministris iniurias veluti publicum crimen persequi ac de talibus reis ultionem mereri. 2. Quod si multitudo violenta civilis apparitionis exsecutione et adminiculo ordinum possessorumve non potuerit praesentari, quod se armis aut locorum difficultate tueatur, praesides provinciarum etiam militari auxilio per publicas litteras appetito competentem vindictam tali excessui imponere non morentur.

D. VI k. Mai. Mediolano Honorio A. IIII et Eutychiano conss.

[11] Idem AA. Eutychiano pp. Ecclesiis, quae in possessionibus, ut adsolet, diversorum, vicis etiam vel quibuslibet locis sunt constitutae, clerici non ex alia possessione vel vico, sed ex eo, ubi ecclesiam esse constiterit, ordinentur, ut propriae capitationis onus ac sarcinam recognoscant: ita ut pro magnitudine vel celebritate uniuscuiusque vici ecclesiis certus iudicio episcopi clericorum numerus ordinetur.

D. VI k. Aug. Mnizo Honorio A. IIII et Eutychiano conss.

[iv] ipsi cultui?

[9][73] Emperors VALENTINIAN, THEODOSIUS, AND ARCADIUS Augusti to Tatianus, Praetorian Prefect. According to the precept of the Apostle, no woman shall be transferred to a convent of deaconesses unless she is 60 years old.

Given June 21, at Milan in the consulship of Valentinian Augustus, for the fourth time, and Neoterius (390).

[10][74] Emperors ARCADIUS and HONORIUS Augusti to Theodorus, Praetorian Prefect. pr. If anyone should rashly commit this kind of sacrilege, namely, bursting into Catholic churches and inflicting some outrage on the priests and ministers, or on the service itself and the place, what has been done shall be punished by the provincial governors. 1. And the provincial governor shall know that the outrage to the priests and ministers of the Catholic Church, and to the place itself and the holy service, shall be avenged by capital punishment pronounced on convicted or confessed criminals. Nor should he wait for the bishop, whose sanctity has bequeathed him the glory of forgiveness, to demand retribution for the outrage visited upon him. And it shall be praiseworthy for all to prosecute the aggravated outrages done to priests and their ministers as a public crime and to exact vengeance from such criminals. 2. But if a violent multitude cannot be produced in court by the executive power of the civil staff with the support of the orders (of curials) or landholders, because it defends itself with arms or the difficulty of the terrain, the provincial governors shall not hesitate to visit proper punishment on such madness even with military aid to be summoned by public letter.

Given April 26, at Milan, in the consulship of Honorius Augustus, for the fourth time, and Eutychianus (398).

[11][75] The same Augusti to Eutychianus, Praetorian Prefect. For churches located on the property of various persons, as happens, in villages, or in any other places, the clergy ordained there shall not be taken from another estate or village, but from where it is known that the church is located, so that they may acknowledge the weight and burden of their own capitation tax. Thus, at the discretion of the bishop, a fixed number of clergymen shall be ordained in the churches according to the size and population of each village.

Given July 27, at Mnizum, in the consulship of Honorius Augustus, for the fourth time, and Eutychianus (398).

[73] = C.Th. 16.2.27.pr. The constitution refers to Paul, 1 Timothy 5:9.

[74] = C.Th. 16.2.31, Sirm. 14. Dated by Seeck to January 15, 409.

[75] = C.Th. 16.2.33; combine with C. 1.3.12, 1.4.6–7, 7.62.29, and C.Th. 16.2.32.

[12] Impp. Arcadius et Honorius AA. Eutychiano pp. Si quis curialis clericus fuerit ordinatus nec statim conventione praemissa pristinae condicioni reddatur, is vigore et sollertia iudicantium ad pristinam sortem velut manu mox iniecta revocetur. clericis enim ulterius legem prodesse non patimur, quae cessione patrimonii subsecuta decuriones clericos esse non vetabat.

D. VI k. Aug. Mnizo Honorio A. IIII et Eutychiano conss.

[13] Idem AA. Sapidiano vicario Africae. Si ecclesiae venerabilis privilegia cuiusquam fuerint vel temeritate violata vel dissimulatione neglecta, commissum quinque librarum auri condemnatione plectetur.

D. VII k. Iul. Brixiae Theodoro cons.

[14] Idem AA. Hadriano pp. Quicumque residentibus sacerdotibus fuerit episcopali loco et nomine detrusus, si aliquid vel contra custodiam vel contra quietem publicam moliri fuerit deprehensus rursusque sacerdotium petere, a quo videtur expulsus, procul ab ea urbe, quam conturbavit, centum milibus vitam agat. nec nostra adeat secreta nec impetrare rescripta speret, sed etiam impetratis careat: defensoribus etiam eorum indignationem subituris.

D. prid. non. Febr. Ravenna Stilichone et Aureliano conss.

[15] Idem AA. Studio pu. Conventicula illicita extra ecclesiam in privatis aedibus celebrari prohibemus, proscriptionis domus periculo imminente, si dominus eius in ea clericos nova ac tumultuosa conventicula extra ecclesiam celebrantes susceperit.

D. IIII k. Sept. Constantinopoli Honorio A. VI et Aristaeneto conss.

[16] Impp. Honorius et Theodosius AA. Anthemio pp. Quisquis censibus fuerit adnotatus, invito agri domino ab omni temperet clericatu, adeo ut etiam, si in eo vico, in quo noscitur mansitare, clericus fuerit, sub hac lege religiosum adsumat sacerdotium, ut et capitationis sarcinam

[12][76] The same Augusti to Eutychianus, Praetorian Prefect. If any curial is ordained as a clergyman, and he is not returned to his former status immediately upon the issue of a summons, he shall be recalled to his former lot by the energy and prudence of the governors, as if they were to lay hands upon him (manus iniectio). For We no longer permit the clergy to benefit from the law[77] that allowed decurions to become clergymen upon forfeiture of their property.

Given July 27, at Mnizum, in the consulship of Honorius Augustus, for the fourth time, and Eutychianus (398).

[13][78] The same Augusti to Sapidianus, Vicar of Africa. If the privileges of the venerable Church are violated by the rashness or neglected by the dissimulation of anyone, the crime shall be punished by a fine of 5 pounds of gold.

Given June 25, at Brescia, in the consulship of Theodorus (399).

[14][79] The same Augusti to Hadrianus, Praetorian Prefect. If someone who has been expelled from the position and office of bishop by an assembly of priests is caught plotting against the public security or against the general peace and seeking the clerical office from which he was expelled, he shall live his life at a distance of 100 miles from the city that he put in disorder. He shall neither approach Our audience chamber nor hope to obtain a rescript, but he shall lose even those he already has. His advocates will also incur Our displeasure for these things.

Given February 4, at Ravenna, in the consulship of Stilicho and Aurelianus (400).

[15][80] The same Augusti to Studius, Urban Prefect. We forbid unlawful assemblies to be held outside a church[81] in private houses. A house will be in danger of public sale if its owner uses it to host clergymen who hold rebellious and seditious assemblies outside a church.

Given August 29, at Constantinople, in the consulship of Honorius Augustus, for the sixth time, and Aristaenetus (404).

[16] Emperors Honorius and Theodosius Augusti to Anthemius, Praetorian Prefect. Whosoever has been registered by the census (as a bound tenant, colonus) shall refrain from joining any clerical order without the consent of the owner of the land. Thus, if such a person becomes a clergyman in the village in [76] = C.Th. 9.45.3; combine with C. 1.3.11 (cf. Krüger, ad loc.).

[77] C.Th. 12.1.121.
[78] = C.Th. 16.2.34; Seeck dates to June 7.
[79] = C.Th. 16.2.35; probably issued in 405, in Stilicho's second consulate (Seeck).
[80] = C.Th. 16.2.37; Seeck dates to September 11, 404.
[81] One may also interpret the expression extra ecclesiam institutionally, i.e., "outside the Church" as in "unauthorized by the Church."

per ipsum dominum agnoscere compellatur et ruralibus obsequiis quo maluerit subrogato fungatur, ea scilicet immunitate indulta, quae certae capitationis venerandis ecclesiis relaxatur: nullo contra hanc legem valituro rescripto.

D. prid. k. Mart. Honorio A. VIII et Theodosio A. III conss.

[17] Idem AA. Monaxio pp. pr. Placet nostrae clementiae, ut nihil commune clerici cum publicis actibus vel ad curiam pertinentibus, cuius corpori non sunt adnexi, habeant. 1. Praeterea eis, qui parabalanin vocantur, neque ad quodlibet publicum spectaculum neque ad curiae locum neque ad iudicium accedendi licentiam permittimus, nisi forte singuli ob causas proprias et necessitates iudicem adierint aliquem lite pulsantes vel ab alio ipsi pulsati vel in communi totius corporis causa syndico ordinato: sub ea definitione, ut, si quis eorum haec violaverit et brevibus parabalanin eximatur et competenti supplicio subiugetur nec umquam ad eandem sollicitudinem revertatur.

D. III k. Oct. Constantinopoli Theodosio A. VII et Palladio conss.

[18] Idem AA. Monaxio pp. pr. Parabalanin, qui ad curanda debilium aegra corpora deputantur, sescentos constitui praecipimus, ita ut pro arbitrio viri reverentissimi antistitis Alexandrinae urbis de his, qui ante fuerant et qui pro consuetudine curandi gerunt experientiam, sescenti parabalanin ad huiusmodi sollicitudinem eligantur, exceptis videlicet honoratis et curialibus. 1. Si quis autem ex his naturali sorte fuerit absumptus, alter in eius locum pro voluntate eiusdem sacerdotis exceptis honoratis et curialibus subrogetur, ita ut hi sescenti viri reverentissimi sacerdotis praeceptis ac dispositionibus obsecundent et sub eius cura consistant: reliquis, quae dudum latae legis forma complectitur, super his parabalanin vel de spectaculis vel de iudiciis ceterisque sicut iam statutum est custodiendis.

which he is known to reside, he shall assume the holy priesthood on this condition: he shall be compelled by the same owner to acknowledge the burden of his capitation tax and to perform his rural liturgies through a substitute of his choosing. He shall enjoy, namely, the exemption from the fixed capitation tax that is granted to the venerable churches. No rescript shall be valid against this law.

Given February 28, at the consulship of Honorius, for the eighth time, and Theodosius, for the third time, Augusti (409).

[17][82] The same Augusti to Monaxius, Praetorian Prefect. pr. Our Clemency has resolved that the clergy shall have nothing to do with public affairs or matters concerning the municipal curia, to which body they are not bound. 1. Moreover, We deny those called sick-nurses (parabalanin)[83] the freedom to attend any public spectacle, the place of the curia, or a court, unless perchance they go individually before a judge for their own cases and interests, suing someone at law or themselves sued by another, or if appointed representative (syndicus) in the common cause of the entire body, with this proviso: if any of them violates these orders, he shall be removed from the register of sick-nurses and subjected to proper punishment, and he shall never again return to his former position.

Given September 29, at Constantinople, in the consulship of Theodosius Augustus, for the seventh time, and Palladius (416).

[18][84] The same Augusti to Monaxius, Praetorian Prefect. pr. We order 600 sick-nurses to be appointed who shall be assigned to tend to the sick bodies of the weak. Thus, 600 sick-nurses shall be selected at the discretion of the most reverend bishop of the city of Alexandria from among those who were such formerly and have experience on account of their long-standing practice in healing, excepting, of course, men of rank (honorati) and of curial status. 1. If any of these men should succumb to the natural fate of man, another shall be appointed in his place at the wish of the aforementioned priest, excepting men of rank and of curial status. Thus, these 600 men shall obey the orders and decisions of the most reverend bishop and remain under his supervision. All other regulations embraced in the provisions of the previously enacted law[85] concerning these sick-nurses, whether on spectacles or courts etc., shall be observed as has already been established.

[82] = C.Th. 16.2.42; combine with C. 10.65.6; Seeck dates to October 5.
[83] These were religious attendants of the sick who frequently contracted their patients' diseases.
[84] = C.Th. 16.2.43.
[85] C. 1.3.17.

D. III non. Febr. Constantinopoli Honorio XII et Theodosio VIII AA. conss.

[19] Idem AA. Palladio pp. pr. Eum, qui probabilem saeculo disciplinam agit, decolorari consortio sororiae appellationis non decet. quicumque igitur cuiuscumque gradus sacerdotio fulciuntur vel clericatus honore censentur, extranearum sibi mulierum interdicta consortia cognoscant: hac eis tantum facultate concessa, ut matres filias atque germanas intra domorum suarum saepta contineant: in his enim nihil scaevi criminis aestimari foedus naturale permittit. 1. Illas etiam non relinqui castitatis hortatur adfectio, quae ante sacerdotium maritorum legitimum meruere coniugium: neque enim clericis incompetenter adiunctae sunt, quae dignos sacerdotio viros sui conversatione fecerunt.

D. VIII id. Mai. Ravenna Theodosio A. VIIII et Constantio III conss.

[20] Impp. Theodosius et Valentinianus AA. ad Taurum pp. pr. Si quis presbyter aut diaconus aut diaconissa aut subdiaconus vel cuiuslibet alterius loci clericus aut monachus aut mulier, quae solitariae vitae dedita est, nullo condito testamento decesserit nec ei parentes utriusque sexus vel liberi vel si qui agnationis cognationisve iure iunguntur vel uxor extiterit, bona, quae ad eum vel ad eam pertinuerint, sacrosanctae ecclesiae vel monasterio, cui fuerat destinatus aut destinata, omnifariam socientur. 1. Exceptis his facultatibus, quas forte censibus adscripti vel iuri patronatus subiecti vel curiali condicioni obnoxii clerici vel monachi cuiuscumque sexus relinquunt: nec enim iustum est bona seu peculia, quae aut patrono legibus debentur aut domino possessionis, cui quis eorum fuerat adscriptus, aut ad curias pro tenore dudum latae constitutionis sub certa forma pertinere noscuntur, ab ecclesiis vel monasteriis detineri: actionibus videlicet competenter[v] sacrosanctis ecclesiis vel monasteriis reservatis, si quis forte praedictis condicionibus obnoxius aut ex gestis negotiis aut ex quibuslibet aliis ecclesiasticis actibus obligatus obierit.

D. XVIII k. Ian. Ariobindo et Aspare conss.

[v] competentibus

Given February 3, at Constantinople, in the consulship of Honorius, for the twelfth time, and Theodosius, for the eighth time, Augusti (418).

[19][86] The same Augusti to Paladius, Praetorian Prefect. pr. It is unseemly that a man who practices the discipline commended by this age should be tainted by cohabitation with a so-called sister (i.e., nun). Whosoever, therefore, are endowed with any rank of priesthood or are distinguished by clerical office shall recognize that the society of outside women is forbidden them. Permission is granted them only for this: they may keep within the confines of their homes their mothers, daughters, and sisters. For the law of nature permits no suspicion of any perverse crime to attach to these women. 1. The pursuit of chastity further demands that those women who, prior to the ordination of their husbands, were found worthy of lawful wedlock, should not be deserted. For such women, who by their company have made their husbands worthy of the priesthood, shall not unsuitably be joined to members of the clergy.

Given May 8, at Ravenna, in the consulship of Theodosius, for the ninth time, and Constantius, for the third time, Augusti (420).

[20][87] Emperors THEODOSIUS and VALENTINIAN Augusti to Taurus, Praetorian Prefect. pr. If any presbyter, deacon, deaconess, subdeacon, or clergyman of any other rank, or monk or woman who is devoted to monastic life, dies without writing a will, and there are no parents of either sex, children, persons connected to them by the right of agnation or consanguinity, or wife, the property that belonged to him or to her shall be made over entirely to the holy church or monastery to which he or she was tied. 1. The property left behind by clergymen or monks of either sex, who perchance are enrolled on the tax registers, bound by the law of patronage, or subject to curial status, is exempted. For it is not just that churches or monasteries should retain property or peculia that belong by law either to a patron or to the owner of the land on which any of these persons is registered, or which are known by a fixed rule to belong to municipal curias, according to the tenor of a constitution enacted long ago.[88] The appropriate actions are reserved to the holy churches or monasteries, if anyone perchance should die who is subject to the abovementioned conditions, or who is obligated to them because of business transacted on their behalf (gesta negotia) or because of any other ecclesiastical transactions.

Given December 15, in the consulship of Ariobindus and Aspar (434).

[86] = C.Th. 16.2.44.
[87] = C.Th. 5.3.1.
[88] C.Th. 5.3.1.

[21] Idem AA. Thomae pp. Ad similitudinem tam episcoporum orthodoxae fidei quam presbyteri et diaconi ii, qui honorario titulo illustrem dignitatem consecuti sunt, per substitutos periculo suarum facultatum curiae muneribus satisfacere non vetentur.

D. v k. Mart. Constantinopoli Eudoxio et Dioscoro conss.

[22] Idem AA. Florentio pp. pr. Si qua per calumniam postulatio super criminalibus causis apud competentem iudicem deposita exhibitionis causa fuerit sacrosanctae religionis antistitis, triginta pondo auri condemnatione publicis calculis inferenda ut percellatur, praecipimus. 1. Quin etiam omnia privilegia, quae sacrosanctis ecclesiis confugarum aut clericorum, decanorum vel aliorum ecclesiasticorum causa legibus sunt praestita, intacta atque illibata servari. 2. Praeterea iubemus, ut omnes clerici atque monachi, qui de suis civitatibus ad hanc almam urbem ecclesiastici negotii vel religionis causa proficiscuntur, litteris episcopi, cui unusquisque iter faciens obsequitur, muniti adveniant: scituri quod, si citra hanc fiduciam accesserint, sibimet imputabunt, quod non clerici vel monachi esse putabuntur.

D. III id. Febr. Constantinopoli Valentiniano A. VI et Nomo conss.

[23] Impp. Valentinianus et Marcianus AA. Palladio pp. Quoniam venerabilis recordationis Flavianus huius almae urbis episcopus cum[vi] venerabili synodo innumerabilium paene sacerdotum, qui Chalcedone convenerunt, tanto ac tali decoratus est testimonio, ut Eutyches, qui contra senserat, cum sceleratis dictis suis ab omnibus uno ore damnaretur, aboleatur quidem Eutychetis damnosa memoria, Flaviani autem laudabilis recordatio reveletur.

D. Constantinopoli pridie nonas Iulias Sporacio cons.

[24] Idem AA. Palladio pp. Id, quod pauperibus testamento vel codicillis relinquitur, non ut incertis personis relictum evanescat, sed modis omnibus ratum firmumque consistat.

D. VIII k. Mai. Anthemio cons.

[vi] cum in

[21][89] The same Augusti to Thomas, Praetorian Prefect. Just as in the case of bishops of orthodox faith or of a presbyter and deacon, those who have attained the rank "Illustrious" (vir illustris) by honorary title are not prohibited, at the peril of their own property, from performing their curial duties through substitutes.

Given February 25, at Constantinople, in the consulship of Eudoxius and Dioscorus (442).

[22] The same Augusti to Florentius, Praetorian Prefect. pr. If any criminal accusation, maliciously made before a competent judge, should cause a bishop of the Holy Faith to be summoned, We order that it be punished by a fine of 30 pounds of gold, payable to the public accounts. 1. Indeed, all privileges that have been conferred on the holy churches by law on behalf of refugees, clergymen, deacons, or other persons related to the church, shall remain intact and undiminished. 2. We moreover order all clergymen and monks who come from their cities to This Generous City on ecclesiastical business or for religious reasons to be equipped with a letter from the bishop to whom each person making the journey is subordinated. They must know that if they come without this certificate, they will have themselves to blame when they are not recognized as clergymen or monks.

Given February 11, in the consulship of Valentinian Augustus, for the sixth time, and Nomus (445).[90]

[23] Emperors Valentinian and Marcian Augusti to Palladius, Praetorian Prefect. Since Flavianus of blessed memory, bishop of This Generous City, was honored with so much and such outstanding testimony in the venerable synod of almost innumerable priests who convened at Chalcedon (in 451), that Eutyches, who held a contrary opinion, was condemned along with his wicked words by all unanimously, the accursed memory of Eutyches shall be abolished, the laudable remembrance of Flavianus celebrated.

Given July 6, at Constantinople, in the consulship of Sporacius (462).[91]

[24] The same Augusti to Palladius, Praetorian Prefect. What is left by will or codicil to "the poor" shall not be invalidated, as if left to unspecified persons, but shall in every way be valid and binding.

Given April 24, in the consulship of Anthemius (455).

[89] = C. 10.32.60.
[90] Seeck dates this constitution to 430. Krüger suggests the recipient is Taurus, not Florentius.
[91] This constitution, which appears out of order, is placed by Seeck in 452.

[25] Imp. Marcianus A. Constantino pp. pr. Cum clericis in iudicium vocatis pateat episcopalis audientia, volentibus tamen actoribus, si actor disceptationem sanctissimi archiepiscopi noluerit experiri, eminentissimae tuae sedis examen contra catholicos sub viro reverentissimo archiepiscopo huius urbis clericos constitutos vel contra reverentissimum oeconomum tam de ipsius quam de ecclesiasticis negotiis sibimet noverit expetendum neque in ullo alio foro vel apud quemquam alterum iudicem eosdem clericos litibus irretire et civilibus vel criminalibus negotiis temptet innectere.

1. Memorati autem reverentissimi clerici orthodoxarum ecclesiarum, quae sub viro religioso antistite huius inclitae urbis sunt, in causa, in qua vel ipsi vel procuratores, quos pro se dederint, sententiarum auctoritate pulsantur, exsecutoribus, per quos coeperint conveniri, fideiussorem sacratissimae huius urbis ecclesiae oeconomum vel defensorem praebeant, qui usque ad quinquaginta libras auri fideiussor existat. 1a. Ipse vero reverentissimus oeconomus almae huius urbis ecclesiae lite pulsatus fideiussorem pro se non praebeat, utpote qui et aliorum clericorum fideiussor futurus est, sed fidei suae committatur. 1b. Quod si lis diversorum (excepto reverentissimo oeconomo) clericorum, quae agitanda sit, memoratam summam videtur excedere, clericus lite pulsatus det executori pro residua quantitate cautionem suam: cui nullum tamen insertum erit iusiurandum, quia ecclesiasticis regulis et canone a beatissimis episcopis antiquitus instituto clerici iurare prohibentur.

2. Statuimus autem, ut executoribus idem reverentissimus oeconomus vel alii diversi clerici sub beatissimo archiepiscopo huius splendidissimae civitatis sententiarum tuarum auctoritate commoniti solidos duos tantummodo dent pro commonitione sua et pro institutione procuratoris, si per eum voluerint litigare. 3. Quod circa alios quoque diversos apparitores eminentiae tuae in his, quae ex consuetudine praebentur officio, observari in causis praedictorum clericorum iubemus, ut litis sumptus vel expensae a clericis pauciores humanioresve praestentur.

D. ...

[25][92] Emperor MARCIAN Augustus to Constantinus, Praetorian Prefect. pr. Although episcopal adjudication (episcopalis audientia) is open to all clergymen summoned to court, as long as the plaintiffs consent, if the plaintiff does not want to submit to the jurisdiction of the most holy archbishop, he shall know that he must seek the judgment of Your Most Eminent Tribunal against the Catholic clergy under the most reverend archbishop of this city or against the most reverend steward, concerning both his own and ecclesiastical affairs; nor shall he attempt to enmesh the aforementioned clergymen in lawsuits or entangle them in civil or criminal cases in any other venue or before any other judge.

1. If the aforementioned most reverend clergymen of the orthodox churches, who are under the jurisdiction of the pious bishop of This Famous City, or the procurators they have appointed, are accused under the authority of (your) rulings, they shall name as surety to the court clerks (exsecutores), by whom they are first summoned, the steward or defender of the Most Sacred Church of This Generous City, who will be surety up to the amount of 50 pounds of gold. 1a. The most reverend steward of the Church of This Generous City himself, however, shall, if accused at law, not give surety on his own behalf, since it is he who gives surety for others, but shall rely on his own good faith. 1b. But if the suit of various clergymen (excepting the most reverend steward) appears to exceed the aforementioned sum, the cleric accused at law shall give his guarantee to the court clerk for the remaining amount. However, no oath shall be inserted in it, because clergy are forbidden to swear on account of ecclesiastical regulations and the canon adopted by the most blessed bishops long ago.

2. We decree moreover that when they are admonished by the authority of your rulings, the same most reverend steward or other various clergymen under the jurisdiction of the most blessed archbishop of This Most Splendid City shall give only 2 solidi to the court clerk for the summons or for the appointment of a procurator, if they wish to litigate through him. 3. We order that this shall be observed also by the other various officials of Your Eminence in cases concerning the aforesaid clergy, with respect to what is customarily given to your staff. Thus, smaller, or rather more reasonable, costs or expenses for litigation shall be paid by the clergy.

Given ... (456?).[93]

[92] Perhaps to be combined with C. 1.4.13 (dated to 456).

[93] Seeck suggests March 25, 456.

[26] Imp. Leo A. Viviano pp. Decernimus, ut posthac neque monachi aut quicumque alius cuiuslibet status aut fortunae in aedes publicas vel in quaecumque loca populi voluptatibus fabricata venerabilem crucem et sanctorum martyrum reliquias illicite inferre conentur vel occupare audeant ea, quae vel ad publicas causas vel ad populi oblectamenta constructa sunt. cum enim religiosae aedes non desunt, possunt ibi, consultis prius ut oportet religiosissimis episcopis, reliquias martyrum non quorundam usurpatione, sed arbitrio reverentissimorum antistitum collocare. ideo patientiam et modestiam suam, quam leges nostrae et publica disciplina et ipsorum monachorum nomen exposcit, studiose unusquisque tam monachus quam cuiuslibet alterius professionis retineat et perpetuo observare procuret.

D. xv k. Oct. Patricio cons.

[27] Idem A. Erythrio pp. Quisquis emensis militiae suae stipendiis expletisque officiis sive muneribus, quae cuicumque condicioni aut consuetudine vel lege debebat, ad consortium se contulerit clericorum et inter ministros verae orthodoxae fidei maluerit et elegerit numerari, nullius prorsus sententiae acerbitate revocetur nec a dei templis quibus se consecravit inopportunis intentionibus abstrahatur, sed isdem beatissimis ministeriis securus permaneat et quietus, ad quae post longi laboris lassitudinem ob reliquae vitae requiem consilio meliore protractus est: his actionibus, si quae contra eum eiusque patrimonium legitima intentione competunt, pro iuris ordine responsurus: exceptis primipilaribus, quos praeceptis tui culminis et publicis utilitatibus in perpetuum esse subiectos sacratissimae constitutionis statuta sanxerunt.

D. prid. non. Mart. Constantinopoli Leone A. III cons.

[28] Idem A. Nicostrato pp. pr. Nulli licere decernimus, si testamento heres sit institutus seu ab intestato succedat seu fideicommissarius vel legatarius inveniatur, dispositionem pii testatoris infringere vel improba mente violare, adserendo incertum esse legatum vel fideicommissum, quod redemptioni relinquitur captivorum, sed modis omnibus exactum pro voluntate testatoris piae rei negotio proficere. 1. Et si quidem testator significaverit, per quem desiderat redemptionem fieri captivorum, is qui specialiter designatus est legati seu fideicommissi habeat exigendi licentiam et pro sua conscientia votum adimpleat testatoris. sin autem persona non designata testator absolute tantummodo

[26] Emperor Leo Augustus to Vivianus, Praetorian Prefect. We decree that hereafter neither monks or anyone else of whatever status or lot in life shall attempt to carry the venerable cross or the relics of the holy martyrs into public buildings or into any places erected for the pleasure of the people, or dare to occupy places constructed for public functions or the amusements of the people. For, since religious houses are not wanting, they can upon consulting most pious bishops, as is proper, place the relics of martyrs there, not by the unauthorized actions of certain persons but at the discretion of the most reverend bishops. Therefore, every monk and every person of any other vocation shall maintain and strive perpetually to observe the forbearance and restraint that Our laws, public order, and the very name of "monk" demand.

Given September 17, in the consulship of Patricius (459).

[27][94] The same Augustus to Eurythrius, Praetorian Prefect. Whoever has completed his term of military service and has fulfilled the duties or liturgies to which he was obligated by his status, by custom or by law, and betakes himself to the community of the clergy and prefers and chooses to be numbered among the ministers of the true orthodox faith, he shall not be recalled by any harsh ruling whatsoever, nor shall he be dragged by any vexatious accusations from the temples of God to which he has dedicated himself, but he shall abide undisturbed and in peace in the most blessed ministry to which he has been drawn by better counsel, so as to enjoy, after the weariness of long labor, peace in his remaining years. He must, however, in accordance with regular legal procedure, respond to legal claims, if any are brought against him or his property in a legitimate accusation. Excepted herefrom are commissaries (primipilares), who the ordinances of the most sacred imperial constitution have decreed shall forever be subject to the orders of Your Eminence and to public service.

Given March 6, at Constantinople, in the consulship of Leo Augustus, for the third time (466).

[28] The same Augustus to Nicostratus, Praetorian Prefect. pr. We decree that no one, whether he is instituted heir by will, inherits by intestacy, or is found to be the beneficiary of a trust or legacy, shall be permitted to invalidate or wickedly violate the arrangement of a dutiful testator by claiming that a legacy or trust that has been left for the ransom of captives is uncertain. On the contrary, the sum shall be claimed by every means according to the will of the testator and go toward this pious transaction. 1. And if the testator has indicated by whom he wishes the ransoming of captives to be made, the person specifically indicated shall have the right to claim the legacy or trust and shall fulfill the wish of the testator in good conscience. If, however, the testator has merely summam legati vel fideicommissi taxaverit, quae debeat memoratae causae proficere, vir reverentissimus episcopus illius civitatis, ex qua testator oritur, habeat facultatem exigendi, quod huius rei gratia fuerit derelictum, pium defuncti propositum sine ulla cunctatione ut convenit impleturus. 2. Cum autem vir religiosissimus episcopus huiusmodi pecunias pio relictas arbitrio fuerit consecutus, statim gestis intervenientibus earum quantitatem et tempus quo eas susceperit apud rectorem provinciae publicare debebit. post unius vero anni spatium et numerum captivorum et data pro his pretia eum manifestare praecipimus, ut per omnia impleantur tam piae deficientium voluntates: ita tamen, ut religiosissimi antistites gratis et sine ullo dispendio praedicta gesta conficiant, ne humanitatis obtentu relictae pecuniae iudiciorum dispendiis erogentur. 3. Quod si testator, qui huiusmodi legatum vel fideicommissum non designata persona reliquit, barbarae sit nationis et de eius patria aliqua emerserit ambiguitas, vir reverentissimus episcopus civitatis eius, in qua idem testator defunctus est, itidem habeat legati seu fideicommissi petitionem defuncti propositum modis omnibus impleturus. 4. Quod si in vico vel in territorio testator mortem obierit, illius civitatis vir reverentissimus episcopus exactionem habebit, sub qua vicus vel territorium esse dignoscitur. 5. Et ne pium defunctorum propositum improba fraudatorum calliditate celetur, quidquid pro huiusmodi causa a testatore relictum fuerit, universi, qui id quocumque modo cognoverint, vel in viri clarissimi rectoris provinciae vel in urbis episcopi notitiam deferendi habeant liberam facultatem: nec delatoris nomen suspicionemque formident, cum fides atque industria eorum tam laude quam honestate non careat ac pariter pietate, cum veritatem in publicas aures lucemque deduxerint.

[94] Combine with C. 1.12.6 and 9.30.2.

D. XV k. Sept. Constantinopoli Anthemio II cons.

[29] Αὐτοκράτορες Λέων καὶ Ἀνθέμιος ΑΑ. Ζήνωνι στρατηγῷ. pr. Οἱ ἐν τοῖς μοναστηρίοις διατρίβοντες μὴ ἐχέτωσαν ἐξουσίαν ἐξιέναι τῶν μοναστηρίων ἢ καὶ ἐν τῇ Ἀντιοχέων ἢ καὶ ἐν ἑτέραις πόλεσιν ἀναστρέφεσθαι, ὑπεξαιρουμένων μόνων τῶν καλουμένων ἀποκρισιαρίων, οἷς ἄδειαν παρέχομεν ἐθέλουσι διὰ μόνας ἀναγκαίας ἀποκρίσεις εἰσιέναι. 1. Καὶ οὗτοι δὲ αὐτοὶ οἱ ποιούμενοι τὰς εἰσόδους φυλαττέσθωσαν περὶ θρησκείας ἢ δόγματος διαλέγεσθαι, ἢ συμβουλαῖς τισι πρὸς στάσιν ἢ ταραχὴν ὁρώσαις τὰς ἁπλουστέρας ψυχὰς τοῦ δήμου παρατρέπειν· γινώσκοντες, ὡς ἀμελοῦντες τῶν προστεταγμένων παρὰ τῆς ἡμετέρας εὐσεβείας τῇ τῶν νόμων ὑποβληθήσονται αὐστηρίᾳ.

fixed the amount of the legacy or trust that should go toward the aforementioned cause without designating a person, the most reverend bishop of the city where the testator was born shall have the power to claim what was left for that purpose, so as to carry out the pious intentions of the deceased without delay, as is proper. 2. When, moreover, the most holy[95] bishop has obtained this money left for pious intentions, he shall immediately declare the amount of the money and the time when he received it on public record made before the governor of the province. We also order that, after an interval of one year, he shall make known both the number of captives and the prices paid for them, so that the so pious wishes of the deceased may in every way be fulfilled. However, the most holy bishops shall have the aforesaid official records made free of charge and at no expense, so that no money left in the name of compassion should be spent on court expenses. 3. But if the testator who has left this kind of legacy or trust, without designating any person, derives from a barbarian people and doubt arises as to his homeland, the most reverend bishop of the city in which the testator died shall in the same manner have a right to claim the legacy or trust, so as carry out the intentions of the deceased in every way. 4. But if the testator has passed away in a village or in a rural district (territorium), the most reverend bishop of that city, under the jurisdiction of which the village or district is known to be, will have the right to claim it. 5. And that the pious intention of the deceased may not be concealed through the dishonest cunning of frauds, whatsoever has been left by the testator for such a purpose, all who know of it by whatever means shall have the freedom to bring it to the attention either of the vir clarissimus provincial governor or of the bishop of the city;[96] nor need they fear the name "informer" (delator) and the suspicion attached to it, for their good faith and diligence shall not be lacking in praise and honor, as well as in piety, since they bring the truth to the ears of the public and into the light of day.

Given August 18, at Constantinople, in the consulship of Anthemius, for the second time (468).

[29] Emperors LEO and ANTHEMIUS Augusti to Zeno, Duke. pr. Those who dwell in monasteries shall not have the freedom to leave their monasteries or to reside either in Antioch or in other cities, with the sole exception of the so-called monastic stewards (responsales), to whom, if they wish, We grant permission to enter cities only for necessary business. 1. And the men who make these visits shall take care not to discuss worship or doctrine or to turn the simpler souls of the people to any counsels tending toward sedition and disorder, knowing that if they neglect the decrees of Our Piety they will be subjected to the severity of the laws.

[95] The epithet religiosissimus also suggests "scrupulous" in this context.

[96] The Nomocanon supports the reading "of the vir reverentissimus bishop" (Krüger).

D. k. Iun. Constantinopoli Leone A. IIII et Probiano conss.

[30] Idem AA. Armasio pp. pr. Si quemquem vel in hac urbe regia vel in ceteris provinciis, quae toto orbe diffusae sunt, ad episcopatus gradum provehi deo auctore contigerit, puris hominum mentibus nuda electionis conscientia sincero omnium iudicio proferatur. 1. Nemo gradum sacerdotii pretii venalitate mercetur: qualiter quisque mereatur, non quantum dare sufficiat aestimetur. 2. Profecto enim quis locus tutus et quae causa esse poterit excusata, si veneranda dei templa pecuniis expugnantur? quem murum integritati aut vallum fidei providebimus, si auri sacra fames penetralia veneranda proserpit? quid denique cautum esse poterit aut securum, si sanctitas incorrupta corrumpitur? 3. Cesset altaribus imminere profanus ardor avaritiae et a sacris adytis repellatur piaculare flagitium. ita castus et humilis nostris temporibus eligatur episcopus, ut, locorum quocumque pervenerit, omnia vitae propriae integritate purificet. 4. Non pretio, sed precibus ordinetur antistes. tantum ab ambitu debet esse sepositus, ut quaeratur cogendus, rogatus recedat, invitatus effugiat. 5. Sola illi suffragetur necessitas excusandi. profecto enim indignus est sacerdotio, nisi fuerit ordinatus invitus, cum sane quisquis hanc sanctam et venerandam antistitis sedem pecuniae interventu subiisse aut si quis, ut alterum ordinaret vel eligeret, aliquid accepisse detegitur, ad instar publici criminis et laesae maiestatis accusatione proposita a gradu sacerdotii retrahatur. 6. Nec hoc solum deinceps honore privari, sed perpetuae quoque infamiae damnari decernimus, ut eos, quos facinus par coinquinat et aequat, utrosque similis poena comitetur.

D. VIII id. Mart. Constantinopoli Zenone et Marciano conss.

[31] Idem AA. Dioscoro pp. pr. Orphanotrophos huius inclitae urbis nulla subtilitate iuris obsistente eorum quidem qui pupilli sunt quasi tutores, adulescentium vero quasi curatores sine ullo fideiussionis gravamine in emergentibus causis tam in iudicio quam extra iudicium, ut opus exegerit, ad similitudinem tutoris et curatoris personas et negotia eorum, si qua possint habere, defendere ac vindicare iubemus: ita videlicet, ut praesentibus publicis personis, id est tabulariis, aut intervenientibus gestis in hac quidem inclita urbe apud virum perfectissimum

Given June 1, at Constantinople, in the consulship of Leo Augustus, for the fourth time, and Probianus (471).

[30] The same Augusti to Armasius, Praetorian Prefect. pr. If it should happen that anyone in This Imperial City or in the other provinces scattered over the whole world is by the will of God raised to the rank of bishop, he shall be elevated by the unsullied minds of men, by the naked choice of conscience, and by the genuine judgment of all. 1. Let no man purchase rank in the priesthood at the price of a bribe; each man shall be judged not by what he can pay but by the nature of his merits. 2. Indeed, what place could be safe, and what cause defended, if the venerable temples of God are conquered by money? What wall shall we raise for integrity, or what rampart for honesty, if the accursed hunger for gold slithers into the innermost sanctuaries? What can be safe or secure, if uncorrupted sanctity itself is corrupted? 3. The profane ardor of greed shall cease to loom over the altars and sinful wantonness shall be driven from the inner sanctums. An unpolluted and humble man shall be elected bishop in Our age, so that, whatever station he attains, he shall purify everything by the blamelessness of his own conduct. 4. He shall be ordained not by price but by prayers. He should be so far removed from electoral bribery (ambitus) that he must be sought out and prevailed upon; when asked, he retreats; when invited, he flees. 5. This man's only recommendation should be his urgent requests to excuse himself.[97] For truly he is unworthy of the priesthood – unless he was ordained unwillingly. Whenever indeed someone is discovered to have attained to the Holy and Venerable Episcopal See by means of money, or to have received something for ordaining or electing someone else, he shall be removed from his priestly rank when the accusation is made on the analogy of public crime and high treason (laesa maiestas). 6. And We decree not only that he then be stripped of office, but also that he be condemned to permanent infamy. Thus a similar punishment shall befall both those whom an equal crime equally taints.

Given March 8, at Constantinople, in the consulship of Zeno and Marcianus (469).

[31] The same Augusti to Dioscorus, Praetorian Prefect. pr. We order the superintendents of orphanages in This Famous City, unimpaired by any legal subtlety, to represent and defend, as quasi-tutores of minors, quasi-curatores of adolescents, the persons and business affairs, if they may have any, (of their wards) in cases arising both in and out of court as necessary, on the analogy of magistrum census, in provinciis vero apud moderatores earum vel defensores locorum res eorum eis tradantur, a quibus sunt custodiendae: ut, si quas earundem rerum propter fenus forsitan vel aliam urguentem causam vel eo quod servari non possunt alienare[vii] perspexerint, prius habita aestimatione licebit eis alienationis inire contractum, ut pretia eorum quae exinde colliguntur, ab isdem personis custodiantur. 1. Huiusmodi autem pium atque religiosum officium pro tempore orphanotrophos ita peragere convenit, ut minime ratiociniis tutelaribus seu curationibus obnoxii sint. grave enim atque iniquum est callidis quorundam, si ita contigerit, machinationibus eos vexari, qui propter timorem dei a parentibus atque substantiis destitutos minores sustentare ac velut paterna adfectione educare festinant.

[97] That is, the humble candidate for bishop paradoxically supports his candidacy only by his reluctance to run, reminiscent of Plato's philosopher king.

D. k. Iun. Constantinopoli Marciano cons.

[32] Idem AA. Erythrio pp. pr. Omnes, qui ubicumque sunt vel posthac fuerint orthodoxae fidei sacerdotes et clerici, cuiuscumque gradus sunt, monachi quoque in causis civilibus ex nullius penitus maioris minorisve sententia iudicis ad extranea iudicia pertrahantur aut provinciam vel locum aut regionem quam habitant exire cogantur. nullus eorum ecclesias vel monasteria propria, quae religionis intuitu habitant, relinquere miserabili necessitate iubeatur, sed apud suos iudices ordinarios, hoc est provinciarum rectores, locis quibus degunt et ecclesiarum ministeriis obsecundant, omnium contra se agentium suscipiant actiones, ut his saltem horis atque temporibus, quibus religiosos viros a turbulenta observatione praetorii vacare contigerit cumque eos ad tempus petitorum intentio calumniosa laxaverit, ad sua se monasteria et venerabiles ecclesias conferentes sapienti animo, precatione sollicita faciliusque de proximo sacrosanctis altaribus obsecundent in suis laribus et domiciliis constituti.

1. In hac autem regia urbe si quando cuiuscumque rei causa episcopos vel presbyteros ceterosque clericos, qui sacrosanctis ecclesiis obsequuntur, sive monachos ex aliis quibuscumque provinciis contigerit reperiri, quos tamen in litem quisquam vocare voluerit, in nullo alio sit licitum memoratos cuiquam pulsare iudicio, nisi in tuae sublimitatis dumtaxat examine, ubi eis et beatitudinis honor debitus reservetur et oratorum tutores and curatores, without the burden of giving surety. The property of the wards shall be delivered to those who shall protect it in the presence of public officials, that is, the clerks (tabularii), or registered in the public records: in This Famous City, before the vir perfectissimus Master of the Census; in the provinces, before the governors or before the local defenders. Thus, if they perceive that some of the property should be alienated, perhaps because of interest or some other pressing reason, or because it cannot be maintained, after an assessment of its value is made they shall be permitted to enter a contract for the alienation thereof, so that the price collected for it may be safeguarded by the same persons. 1. It is fitting that the acting superintendents of orphanages should perform this pious and religious duty without being liable to give accounts as is required of tutores or curatores. For it would be onerous and unjust if they, who out of their fear of God support minors deprived of parents and property and eagerly raise them with virtually paternal affection, should be harassed by the cunning machinations of certain persons.

[vii] possunt debere alienari

Given June 1,[98] at Constantinople, in the consulship of Marcianus (472).

[32][99] The same Augusti to Erythrius, Praetorian Prefect. pr. All persons everywhere who are or hereafter shall be clergymen of the orthodox faith, whatever their rank, and monks too, shall not be dragged by the ruling of any greater or lesser judge at all to outside courts (iudicia externa) in civil cases or be compelled to leave the province, place, or region in which they live. None of them may be ordered under wretched compulsion to abandon the churches or monasteries that they inhabit in the interest of religion, but they shall answer the actions of all complainants against them before their ordinary judges, that is, the provincial governors, in the places where they live and attend to their ecclesiastical duties. Thus at least at those hours and times when it should chance that these holy men are free from the hectic audience at the governor's court, and when the malicious accusation of the plaintiffs grants them a momentary reprieve, they may betake themselves to their own monasteries and venerable churches and, with a wise spirit and in earnest prayer – and more easily from a short distance – attend to the holy altars while residing in their own homes and habitations.

1. In This Imperial City, however, if it should happen that bishops or presbyters or any other clergymen who serve holy churches, or indeed monks, are found from any other provinces, whom someone wishes to summon to trial; no one shall be permitted to accuse the aforementioned in any other court than the tribunal of Your Sublimity, where both the respect due their blessedness adfluens in defensionibus copia large praestetur. 2. Praeterea cum in provinciis ex eius qui regit provinciam fuerint sententia vel interlocutione conventi sive illi sacerdotes seu cuiuscumque gradus clerici sive monachi habeantur, dummodo approbentur orthodoxi, qui in propriis causis contractibusve pulsantur non alios quam ecclesiae propriae defensores seu quos oeconomos appellant fideiussores praebeant, ne, dum executoris pertinax et avara protervitas extraneos fideiussores flagitat, multiplex innoxiae paupertati adfligatur incommodum. 3. In hac autem regia urbe inventi ex quacumque provincia venientes, cum in tuae amplitudinis iudicio, quod eis solum delegavimus, lite pulsati fuerint, reverentissimi orthodoxae fidei sacerdotes certe oeconomi aut ecclesiae defensores seu clerici in causis civilibus suis sive ecclesiasticis nulla praebendi fideiussoris molestentur iniuria, sed aut vicariis fideiussionibus contradantur, quas tamen stipulationum sollemnis cautela vallaverit, aut cautionibus et professioni propriae ac facultatum suarum obligationibus committantur.

[98] Seeck dates to December 23.
[99] Combine with C. 1.3.33.

4. Hoc nihilo minus observando, ut in causis ecclesiasticis nullum alium conveniri fas sit nisi eum, quem dispensatorem pauperum, id est oeconomum ecclesiae, episcopi tractatus elegerit (hunc enim sine dubio a sacerdote convenit ordinari): quem tamen conventum defensoris ecclesiae fidei committi praecipimus.

5. Executoribus in minoribus quidem iudiciis omnibus in ipsa conventione sacerdotum seu clericorum non amplius quam unum semissem aut sperantibus aut etiam audentibus accipere. si vero apparitor tuae magnitudinis ex sententia tuae sedis amplissimae in provincia degentes eos monuerit, iubemus non amplius eum quam duos solidos sportularum nomine percipere. in hac vero urbe magnifica idem apparitor tuae magnitudinis uno aureo sportularum gratia a provincialibus clericis contentus sit, quantaelibet summae qui conventus fuerit exponatur obnoxius. 6. Praeterea nullus executor vexare contumeliis clericos ullos, nullis impulsionibus molestare, nullis exprobrare conviciis aut corporalibus iniuriis fatigare conetur: his, qui huiusmodi aliquid adgressi fuerint, post amissionem cinguli et patrimonii ultima protinus animadversione plectendis.

shall be maintained and they may generously be provided with an abundant supply of pleaders for their defense. 2. Moreover, when they are summoned in the provinces by the pronouncement or interlocutory decree of the governor of the province, then, whether they are considered priests or clergy of whatever rank, or monks – as long as they are certifiably orthodox – those who are sued in regard to their own affairs and contracts need furnish no one as surety other than the defenders of their church or those they call stewards. In this way, although the obstinate and covetous impudence of the court clerk demands other sureties, manifold grievance shall not be inflicted on innocent poverty. 3. If, however, most reverend priests of the orthodox faith, stewards, defenders of the Church, or clergy found in This Imperial City, from whatever province they have come, are sued in the court of Your Magnificence, which We have exclusively assigned them, they shall not be inconvenienced by the affront of giving surety in their own civil or ecclesiastical suits; but they shall either be entrusted to one another as sureties – which, however, the solemn formula of a stipulation shall fortify – or they shall be held accountable by their own guarantees (cautiones), declarations, and property liability.

4. This nonetheless must be observed: it shall be law in ecclesiastical cases that no one may be summoned other than he whom the discretion of the bishop has selected to be the giver of alms to the poor, namely, the steward of the church; for there is no doubt that he must be ordained by the priest (i.e., by the bishop). We order, however, that when he is sued, he shall be placed under the protection of the defender of the church.

5.[100] Court clerks in all minor courts shall, when summoning priests or clergymen, neither hope nor indeed dare to receive more than half a solidus. If, pursuant to an order of Your Most Exalted Tribunal, an official of Your Greatness should serve a summons on those living in the provinces, We order that he shall receive no more than 2 solidi as a fee. In This Magnificent City, however, the same official of Your Greatness shall be content with 1 solidus as a fee from provincial clergymen, no matter what sum the person sued is alleged to owe. 6. Moreover, no court clerk shall attempt to harass with insults, vex with influence, abuse with reproaches, or weary with bodily injuries any clergymen. Those who undertake anything of the sort shall, after loss of their rank (cingulum) and property, be stricken with the ultimate punishment.

[100] The Greek manuscripts suggest that a passage approximately to this effect has fallen out of the text: "Non-orthodox court clerks shall not summon a bishop or clergyman. And heretics may not become court clerks to begin with. But if a heretic serves (as court clerk) and summons a bishop or clergyman of any rank whatsoever, he shall be punished by death. Orthodox court clerks," etc.

7. Privilegiis sane singulis quibuscumque sacrosanctis ecclesiis orthodoxae fidei, xenodochiis sive ptochiis tam generaliter quam specialiter attributis perpetuo reservandis, nullis eas earumque sacerdotes aut clericos cuiuslibet gradus aut monachos vel ptochos[viii] aut xenodochos orthodoxae fidei deputatos extraordinariis muneribus praecipimus praegravari. eas enim sarcinas oneris, quas plerisque personis diversa ratione remittimus, imponi beatissimis viris nostro saeculo inconveniens esse iudicamus.

8. Praeterea ne cui temeritas sua lucrativa concedatur et ut impudens calumniantium refrenetur audacia, iubemus, quotiens ii, qui sacerdotes seu clericos seu monachos ceterosque superius designatos vel in tuae magnitudinis examine vel in provinciali iudicio proposita actione convenerint, si causa cognita convicti fuerint sine iusta eos et legitima petitione pulsasse, omnes eis legitimas expensas sumptusque, quos ab exordio coeptae controversiae ipsorum vitio tolerasse eos constiterit, redhibere cogantur, ut hac saltem censurae iustissimae formidine revocati improbis adsidue conflictationibus occupati adquiescant se iam sopitis clamoribus iurgiorum magistra deinceps necessitate retinere.

Datum Constantinopoli pridie nonas April. Marciano cons.

[33] Idem AA. Erythrio pp. Sacrosanctae orthodoxae fidei episcopi atque presbyteri, diaconi quoque, qui semel probatis moribus integritate castissima ad hunc gradum meruerint pervenire, ea, quaecumque in eodem clericatus gradu locoque viventes adquirere et habere potuerint, etiamsi in patris avique aut proavi potestate constituti sunt et adhuc superstites habentur, tamquam bona propria vindicent: de his, si quando eis libitum fuerit, testandi vel donandi vel quolibet alio titulo alienandi libera facultate concessa, ut ea bona quoquo tempore numquam fratribus vel sororibus aut ex his genitis conferantur, sed ad eorum filios posteros et quoscumque extraneos heredes perveniant nec a patribus avis aut proavis, sed ab ipsorum liberis tamquam praecipua vindicentur, certe his procedant, quibus ipsi id peculium vel inter vivos alienatione habita vel mortis tempore ultima et vere cognita voluntate concesserint.

D. prid. non. April. Marciano cons.

[viii] ptochotrophos

7. The individual privileges conferred generally and specifically on the various holy churches of the orthodox faith, hospices, or poorhouses shall be maintained permanently. We order that neither they nor their bishops or clerics of whatever rank, monks, or superintendents of poorhouses or hospices, of orthodox faith, should be burdened by assignment to extraordinary liturgies. For We consider it incongruous with Our age to impose the burden of those liturgies, which We remit for many people for various reasons, on the most blessed of men.

8. Furthermore, so that no one shall be permitted to profit from his own brazenness, and so that the impudent audacity of false accusers may be curbed, We order that whenever those who summon priests, clergymen, monks, and the others indicated above, having brought suit against them either before the tribunal of Your Greatness or in a provincial court, are found to have accused the defendants without a just and legitimate claim once the case has been heard, they shall be compelled to pay the defendants all legal costs and expenses that they are found to have suffered at the fault of the plaintiffs from the beginning of the controversy. Thus, deterred at least by this fear of most righteous chastisement, they who are constantly involved in disreputable disputes may, at the urging of necessity itself, submit to restrain themselves from the clamor of their quarrels, now stilled.

Given April 4, at Constantinople, in the consulship of Marcianus (472).

[33][101] The same Augusti to Erythrius, Praetorian Prefect. The bishops and presbyters, and deacons too, of the holy orthodox faith who have deservedly attained their rank by proving their good character and immaculate integrity may claim as their own all property that they could acquire and possess in their lifetime in the same clerical rank and station, even if they were under the power of their father and grandfather or great-grandfather and are presently considered their survivors. They shall have free permission to alienate any of this property by will, gift, or on any other premise, whenever they please. Thus, this property will at no time be made over to their brothers or sisters or to the offspring of the latter but shall pass to their own children, descendants, and outside heirs, and may not be claimed by their fathers, grandfathers, or great-grandfathers, but by their own children as if it were their own property. Surely they shall have precedence, to whom these clergymen have given this property as a peculium or by legal alienation in their lifetime, or at the time of their death in their last, sincere wish.

Given April 4, in the consulship of Marcianus (472).

[101] Combine with C.1.3.32.

[34] Idem AA. Dioscoro pp. pr. Omnia privilegia, quae a retro principibus aut a nostra serenitate vel iudiciariis dispositionibus aut liberalitatibus pro singulis quibuscumque temporibus vel consuetudine sive circa ius metatorum sive in aliis quibuslibet rebus praestita sunt orphanotrophio sive asceteriis vel ecclesiis aut ptochiis seu xenodochiis aut monasteriis atque ceteris hominibus etiam ac rebus iuris eorum ad curam Niconis viri religiosissimi presbyteri et orphanotrophi vel ad eos, qui post eum loco eius successerint, pertinentibus ad similitudinem Zotici beatissimae memoriae, qui prius huiusmodi pietatis officium invenisse dicitur, per hanc pragmaticam sanctionem firma illibataque in perpetuum custodiri decernimus. valde etenim hoc videtur esse necessarium, cum exinde sustentatio vel educatio orphanis atque egenis et usibus ecclesiasticis vel ptochiis vel asceteriis comparetur.

1. Domus etiam aliasque res superius nominatas ad curam memorati viri pertinentes vel postmodum quolibet modo ad eius sollicitudinem vel qui post eum ad eiusdem orphanotrophii curam vocati fuerint perventuras ad instar maioris venerabilis ecclesiae huius inclitae urbis omnibus privilegiis, quae eadem sancta ecclesia vel nunc adipiscitur vel postea merebitur, perpetuo potiri pietatis intuitu decernimus.

D. x k. Ian. Constantinopoli Marciano cons.

[35] [Αὐτοκράτωρ Ζήνων Α. ...] pr. Πᾶσαν πόλιν εἴτε ἀνανεωθεῖσαν κατὰ τοὺς προλαβόντας χρόνους εἴτε οὐκ οὖσαν μὲν πρότερον, διὰ δὲ βασιλικῆς φιλοτιμίας ἀποδειχθεῖσαν πόλιν ἔχειν ἐκ παντὸς τρόπου ἀχώριστον καὶ ἴδιον τὸν ἐπιμελησόμενον τῶν κατ᾽ αὐτὴν ἐκκλησιαστικῶν πραγμάτων ἐπίσκοπον θεσπίζομεν· μηδενὶ παντάπασιν οὔσης ἀδείας δι᾽ οἱουδήποτε τρόπου, μηδὲ μὴν διὰ θείας βασιλικῆς κελεύσεως ἀφαιρεῖσθαι πόλιν οἱανδήποτε τοῦ τῆς ἰδιαζούσης ἐπισκοπῆς ἢ καὶ τῆς ἀφορισθείσης αὐτῇ περιοικίδος ἢ ἄλλου τινὸς δικαίου καὶ κατὰ τοῦτο τὸ μέρος ἢ καὶ ἄλλως ὁπωσδήποτε πόλεσιν ἑτέραις ὑποτελῆ ποιεῖν. 1. Τοῦ δὲ παρὰ ταῦτα ποιοῦντος καὶ ποιεῖν[ix] πειρωμένου ἢ τῶν ἤδη ἀνανεωθεισῶν πόλεων ἢ καὶ τῶν πολισθέντων τόπων ἢ μετὰ ταῦτα τυχὸν ἀνανεουμένων ἢ πολιζομένων τὸ τῆς ἰδιαζούσης ἐπισκοπῆς ἀφαιρεῖσθαι δίκαιον ἢ ἄλλο τι παραιρεῖσθαι τῶν παρασχεθέντων ἢ καὶ παρασχεθησομένων αὐταῖς προνομίων μὴ μόνον ἡ ἐπιχείρησις ἔστω ματαία, ἀλλὰ καὶ αὐτὸς ὁ τοῖς κοινῶς καὶ ἰδίᾳ λυσιτελοῦσιν ἑκάστῳ μαχόμενος ἀτιμωθεὶς τῶν ὄντων γυμνούσθω· τῶν αὐτῶν κρατούντων ἐπιτιμίων καὶ κατὰ τοῦ καθὼς προείρηται ἐπιχειροῦντος καὶ διὰ βασιλικῆς τοιοῦτόν τι πράττειν ἀντιφωνήσεως.

[ix] [ποιεῖν]

[34] The same Augusti to Dioscorus, Praetorian Prefect. pr. By this pragmatic sanction, We decree that all privileges are to be kept valid and undiminished forever that have been granted by past emperors or by Our Serenity in judicial rulings or acts of liberality, at various times or customarily, as to the right of quartering (ius metatorum) or concerning other matters; to an orphanage, to hermitages or churches, to poorhouses or hospices, to monasteries, or to other men and their property that are under the care of Nico, most pious presbyter and orphanage superintendent; or those who afterwards succeed to his place, in the same manner as Zoticus of most blessed memory, who is said to have invented this kind of service in the name of piety. Indeed, this seems absolutely necessary, since the means of maintaining and raising orphans and the poor, as well as the means necessary to the Church, poorhouses, and hermitages, are derived from that source.

1. In the interest of piety, We also decree that the houses and other things designated above under the supervision of the aforementioned man, or such that hereafter in any manner come under his supervision or that of those who are called to manage the same orphanage after him, shall, on the analogy of the Greater Venerable Church of This Famous City, forever possess all the privileges that the same Church either now acquires or shall afterward merit.

Given December 23, at Constantinople, in the consulship of Marcianus (472).

[35] (Emperor Zeno Augustus.)[102] pr. We decree that every city, whether restored to its former status or not previously a city, but declared a city by imperial benefaction, shall have a bishop, in every way unique and its own, to attend to ecclesiastical affairs therein. No one, by any means whatsoever, not even pursuant to a divine imperial command, may deprive any city whatsoever of its own bishopric or the territory established for it, or of any other right, and, in that respect or indeed in any other way, make it tributary to other cities. 1. If anyone acts contrary hereto and dares to take from a city its right to its own bishopric, whether from cities already restored or from places raised to the status of cities, or from those hereafter restored or made cities, or dares to deprive a city of any other privileges that have been or will be bestowed on them, not only shall his attempt be in vain, but he himself, who opposes what is publicly and privately beneficial to every man, shall be declared infamous and stripped of his property. The same punishments shall be inflicted on him who attempts to do such a thing in the manner described above even by means of an imperial rescript. 2. Although We have decreed these provisions generally, We have also taken note of the state of the most holy churches under the jurisdiction of Tomis in the province of Scythia; and that it is impossible in any other way to save the aforesaid most holy churches, damaged by continuous barbarian incursions or otherwise afflicted by want, but that they should receive the foresight of the reverend bishop of Tomis, which city is also the capital of the province. We thus decree that they are excepted from the present imperial enactment and in no way subject to its compulsoriness, but shall remain in their own special form. 3. In the same way, We wish to except from the present provisions the city of the Isaurians, which was recently elevated in honor and in veneration of the glorious martyr Conon, that is, Leontopolis. Thus, it too shall remain in the form it now has – for many have hotly debated whether it should receive a bishop of its own or be subject to the supervision and care of the most reverend bishop of Isauropolis; yet, although it has been granted city status and shall enjoy the rights of cities permanently and fully, it shall remain under the supervision of the aforementioned bishop.

[102] The inscription has been restored from the following constitution. Lounghis et al. date this constitution to between 474 and 484.

2. Ταῦτα δὲ γενικῶς διατάξαντες καὶ εἰς νοῦν εἰληφότες τὴν κατάστασιν τῶν ἁγιωτάτων ἐκκλησιῶν τῶν διακειμένων ὑπὸ Τόμιν τῆς τῶν Σκυθῶν ἐπαρχίας καὶ ὅτι οὐκ ἐγχωρεῖ τὰς αὐτὰς ἁγιωτάτας ἐκκλησίας συνεχέσι βαρβάρων ἐπιδρομαῖς καταβλαπτομένας ἢ καὶ ἄλλως πως πενίᾳ συζώσας ἑτέρως διασώζεσθαι, εἰ μὴ διὰ τῆς τοῦ θεοφιλοῦς ἐπισκόπου Τόμεως, ἥτις ἐστὶ καὶ τοῦ ἔθνους μητρόπολις, τυγχάνοιεν προμηθείας, θεσπίζομεν ὑπεξαιρεῖσθαι τῆς παρούσης θείας νομοθεσίας καὶ μηδαμῶς αὐτὰς ὑπάγεσθαι τῇ ταύτης ἀνάγκῃ, ἀλλ' ἐπὶ τοῦ οἰκείου σχήματος μένειν. 3. Κατὰ δὲ τὸν αὐτὸν τρόπον ὑπεξαιρεῖσθαι τῶν ἐπὶ τοῦ παρόντος νενομοτεθημένων βουλόμεθα καὶ τὴν ἔναγχος πολισθεῖσαν κατὰ τὸ Ἰσαύρων ἔθνος πρὸς τιμὴν καὶ θεραπείαν τοῦ καλλινίκου μάρτυρος Κόνωνος πόλιν, τουτέστι τὴν Λεοντοπολιτῶν, ὥστε καὶ αὐτήν, ὥσπερ νῦν ἔχει σχήματος, διαμένειν διὰ τὸ (πολλῶν σφόδρα φιλονεικηθέντων, εἴτε αὐτὴν προσήκει ἰδιαζόντως τυχεῖν ἐπισκόπου, εἴτε ὑπὸ τὴν φροντίδα καὶ πρόνοιαν τοῦ θεοφιλεστάτου ἐπισκόπου τῆς Ἰσαυροπόλεως συντελεῖν) δεδόχθαι πόλιν μὲν αὐτὴν εἶναι καὶ τῶν πολιτικῶν ἀνελλιπῶς καὶ εἰς πλῆρες ἀπολαύειν δικαίων, ὑπὸ δὲ τὴν φροντίδα τοῦ μνημονευθέντος ἐπισκόπου διὰ παντὸς διαμένειν.

[36] Idem A. Sebastiano pp. pr. Iubemus adscripticiorum creationes secundum veterem constitutionem, nisi dominorum possessionum, unde oriundi sunt, evidens concurrerit consensus, nullius penitus esse momenti, sed isdem fundorum dominis, qui faciendae creationi non sicut dictum est evidenter consenserint, ius proprium ad similitudinem ceterorum colonorum in suos adscripticios exercendi, tamquam si nulla creatio intercessisset, tribui facultatem. idemque hoc super illis quoque agricolis decernimus observari, qui cum essent adscripticiae nexibus condicionis conscripti, solitariam vitam videlicet appetentes quibuslibet sese monasteriis contra voluntatem dominorum fundorum duxerint offerendos. 1. Servos sane sociari clericorum consortiis volentibus quoque et consentientibus dominis modis omnibus prohibemus, cum liceat eorum dominis, data servis prius libertate licitum eis ad suscipiendos honores clericorum iter, si hoc voluerint, aperire. 2. Omnes praeterea virorum clarissimorum provincias moderantium sententiis absque ulla privilegii differentia (qui tamen praesidali iurisdictioni subiecti sunt, sive episcopi vel quilibet clerici aut monachi aut cuiuslibet sint condicionis) pariter respondere decernimus: nulla in posterum viris clarissimis provinciarum rectoribus ad loca, in quibus incusatae personae consistunt, perveniendi necessitate penitus imponenda, cum non solum legibus, verum etiam naturali quoque iuri conveniat, quos res exegerit, iudicialibus ad iudicium vocari sententiis, non ipsos iudices, quod dici etiam iniustum est, ad subiectos deduci, sed per datos ab his iudices causae examinationem in locis ubi incusati degunt procedere.

[36] The same Augustus to Sebastianus, Praetorian Prefect. pr. We order, in accordance with an old constitution, that the ordinations of unfree tenants (adscripticii) are of no substance unless the manifest consent of the owners of the properties from which they come is obtained. The owners of the estates who have not manifestly consented to the ordination as stated are granted the freedom to exercise their right over their unfree tenants just as in the case of other tenants (coloni), as if no ordination had taken place. We decree that the same shall be observed in the case of those farmers who, though registered in the bonds of unfree tenancy, have seen fit to offer themselves to some monastery, as if desirous of monastic life, against the wish of the owners of the estates. 1. We utterly forbid slaves to join the communities of the clergy, even if their owners willingly consent, since their owners are permitted to open the legitimate path to receiving clerical offices by first giving them their freedom. 2. We moreover decree that all clergymen shall answer to the rulings of viri clarissimi provincial governors without any distinction of privilege (provided that they are subject to gubernatorial jurisdiction, whether bishops, clergy of any sort, or monks, and of any status). The necessity of traveling to the places where the accused persons reside shall no longer be imposed on senatorial provincial governors, for it accords not only with the laws but with the law of nature that those whom the dispute requires should be summoned to court by the judge's orders rather than that the judges themselves – it is unjust even to say so! – should be brought to their subjects. Instead, the examination of the case shall proceed in the place where the accused reside before delegate judges appointed by the governors.

D. v k. April. Constantinopoli Theodorico cons.

[37] Idem A. Sebastiano pp. Servis, si dominorum fuerint voluntate muniti, solitariam vitam participandi licentia non denegetur, dum tamen eorum domini non ignorent, quod, si servis suis ad monasteriorum cultum migrandi tribuerint facultatem, eorundem servorum dominio, donec idem servi in eodem monachorum habitu duraverint, spoliandos: alioquin si relicta forte vita solitaria ad aliam se condicionem transtulerint, certum est eos ad servitutis iugum, quam monachicae professionis cultu evaserant, reversuros.

D. id. April. Theodorico cons.

[38] pr. Οἱ τὰ ἴδια μοναστήρια καταλιμπάνοντες οὐ λαμβάνουσιν ἃ προσήγαγον αὐτοῖς κινητὰ ὅσης δήποτε ποσότητος ὄντα, κἂν μὴ συνέστη πρᾶξις ὑπομνημάτων ἐπ' αὐτοῖς. 1. Ἐπὶ δὲ ταῖς δωρεαῖς τῶν ἀκινήτων δεῖ τὰ νόμιμα φυλάττεσθαι, ἐπεὶ οὐκ ἀναιρεῖται τῷ δωρησαμένῳ ἡ ἐκνίκησις. 2. Καὶ τοῦτο δὲ θεσπίζομεν, ὥστε μηδένα τῶν θεοφιλεστάτων ἐπισκόπων ἢ χωρεπισκόπων ἢ περιοδευτῶν ἢ κληρικῶν ἄκοντας τοὺς λαϊκοὺς συνελαύνειν πρὸς τὴν τῶν καρποφοριῶν τῶν ἐν τοῖς τόποις καλουμένων ἀπαρχῶν ἤτοι προσφορῶν ἔκτισιν ὥσπερ τι τέλος ταῦτα μεθοδεύοντας, ἢ καὶ γεωργοῖς μέν, ἐν κλήρῳ δὲ καταλεγομένοις, καὶ μάλιστα ἐκείνοις, οἵ μηδ' ὑπὸ δεσποτείαν εἰσὶν αὐτῶν τῶν θεοφιλεστάτων ἐπισκόπων ἢ τῶν κατ' αὐτοὺς ἁγιωτάτων ἐκκλησιῶν, ἢ τὰς καλουμένας ἀγγαρείας ἢ ἑτέρας τοιουτοτρόπους ἐπαχθείας ἢ ὑπηρεσίας ἐπιφέρειν, μηδ' ἀφορισμοὺς τούτων ἕνεκα τῶν αἰτιῶν ἢ ἀναθεματισμοὺς τούτοις ἐπάγειν καὶ τῆς τῶν ἁγίων μυστηρίων μεταλήψεως καὶ αὐτοῦ τοῦ σεβασμίου καὶ σωτηριώδους βαπτίσματος, ὅπερ καὶ λέγειν ἀθέμιτον, ἐντεῦθεν ἀποστερεῖν (τοῦτο γὰρ παρά τινων πεπονθέναι μεμαθήκαμεν καὶ κώμας ὅλας ἤτοι καὶ ἀγροὺς καὶ κληρικοὺς κατὰ ταὐτὸν καὶ τοὺς ἔξω κληρικοὺς καθεστῶτας ὑπὸ τοῖς τοιούτοις ἀφορισμοῖς ἤτοι ἀναθεματισμοῖς γενομένους) τῆς τοιαύτης ἀτοπωτάτης καὶ πάσης δυσσεβείας γεμούσης καὶ εἰς ὕβριν αὐτῆς τῆς ὀρθοδόξου πίστεως ὁρώσης πράξεως κατὰ πάντα τρόπον εἰργομένης καὶ μηδενὸς ἔθους κρατεῖν δυναμένου τὴν οὕτως ἄλογον ἀπαίτησιν εἰσάγοντος. 3. Καὶ γάρ ἐστι πρόδηλον, ὡς προσήκει μάλιστα ἕκαστον ἐκ τῶν οἰκείων πόνων ἑκόντα τῷ θεῷ καὶ τοῖς ὑπηρετουμένοις αὐτῷ προσφέρειν, ἅπερ ἂν αὐτὸς δοκιμάσοι, οὐ μὴν συνωθεῖσθαι πρὸς τοῦτο καὶ ἀναγκάζεσθαι καὶ ἀποροῦντα ἴσως καὶ οὐδὲ τῶν ἐκ τῆς γεωργίας καρπῶν διά τινας συμβαινούσας οἷα εἰκὸς ἀφορίας ἀπολαύοντα. 4. Διὰ γὰρ τοῦτο τὴν μὲν ἀνάγκην κωλύομεν, τὴν δ' αὐθαίρετον γνώμην τῶν προσφερόντων οὐ μόνον οὐκ εἴργομεν, ἀλλὰ καὶ ἀποδεχόμεθα. 5. Διὸ καὶ μεγίστοις ἐπιτιμίοις ὀχυροῦντες τὰ παρ' ἡμῶν ὁρισθέντα παρακελευόμεθα τὸν θαρροῦντά τι

Given March 28, at Constantinople, in the consulship of Theodoricus (484).

[37] The same Augustus to Sebastianus, Praetorian Prefect. The freedom to participate in monastic life shall not be refused slaves, if they are supported by the wish of their owners, as long as their owners are aware that, if they grant their slaves the freedom to pursue monastic worship, they shall be stripped of ownership of these slaves while they remain in a monk's habit. However, if the slaves abandon monastic life and affect a different status, they are sure to return to the yoke of servitude that they escaped through cultivation of the monastic life.

Given April 13, in the consulship of Theodoricus (484).

[38] (...) pr. Those who leave their monasteries shall not receive the movable property they brought there, whatever the amount, even if no public record was made of it. 1. The laws must be observed, however, concerning gifts of immovable property, since the donor is not deprived of his right of revocation (ekníkesis). 2. This too We decree: that no most reverend bishop or country-bishop (chorepískopos), or itinerant priest (periodeutēs), or clergyman should compel unwilling laymen to pay what are called first fruits in the provinces or rather rents, collecting them as if they were a tax. Nor shall they impose on farmers who are numbered among the clergy, and least of all on those who are not under the jurisdiction of the most reverend bishops or their most holy churches, either the so-called duty of furnishing post-wagons (angaria) or other such burdens or liturgies. Nor shall they place interdicts or anathemas upon them for these reasons and thereby deprive them of participation in the sacred mysteries and of venerable and saving baptism itself – it is wrong even to speak of such a thing! For We have learned that this has befallen some, and that whole villages or tracts and the clergymen in them, as well as those outside, have been subjected to such interdicts and anathemas. Such a most opprobrious practice, which teems with every impiety and does outrage to the orthodox faith, is to be stopped altogether, and no customary practice that introduces such an unreasonable demand shall be permitted to stand. 3. For it is self-evident that each person should voluntarily offer God and those who serve Him what he thinks right, and should not be driven to it and forced although he perhaps lacks the means to do so and does not enjoy the fruits of his tilling of the soil because of some misfortune, as it happens. 4. For this reason We abolish such compulsion; the spontaneous resolution of the contributors We not only permit but even welcome. 5. Therefore, fortifying the provisions made by Us with the heaviest penalties, We order that he who dares to violate any of the aforementioned provisions shall be expelled from the most holy church that has been entrusted to him and from its property; and everyone παραβῆναι τῶν προαναφερομένων αὐτῆς τε τῆς ἁγιωτάτης ἐκκλησίας, ἣν ἐγκεχείρισται, καὶ τῶν αὐτῆς πραγμάτων ἐξωθεῖσθαι, καὶ πάντα δὲ τοιοῦτόν τι πράττειν ἐπιχειροῦντα τῶν πραγμάτων ἀποκινεῖσθαι τῶν διαφερόντων τοῖς οἰκείοις,[x] ὧν τὴν φροντίδα ἐμπεπίστευται, καὶ αὐτῆς δὲ τῆς διοικήσεως, ἐπείπερ ἀνάξιον ἑαυτὸν ταύτης καὶ αὐτῆς τῆς ἱερωσύνης δείκνυσι. πρὸς τούτοις δὲ καὶ χρυσίου λιτρῶν δέκα προστίμῳ σωφρονιζέσθω. 6. Τὰ δὲ παρ' ἡμῶν διὰ τοῦδε τοῦ θείου πραγματικοῦ νόμου τυπωθέντα κρατεῖν καὶ παραφυλάττεσθαι θεσπίζομεν κατὰ ταύτην μέντοι μόνην τὴν βασιλίδα πόλιν καὶ τὴν αὐτῆς ἐνορίαν καὶ τοὺς λοιποὺς τόπους καὶ κλίματα ὑπὸ τὴν χειροτονίαν τοῦ θρόνου τῆσδε τῆς ἐνδόξου πόλεως καὶ τῶν ὑπ' αὐτοῦ χειροτονουμένων θεοφιλεστάτων μητροπολιτῶν ἐπισκόπων, ὥστε καὶ αὐτοὺς τοὺς ὑπὸ τῶν αὐτῶν μητροπολιτῶν ἐπισκόπους τὴν ἐπισκοπὴν ἤτοι ἱερωσύνην καὶ τοὺς τὰς λοιπὰς τὰς μνημονευθείσας ἡγεμονίας τε καὶ φροντίδας παραλαμβάνοντας τοῖς αὐτοῖς ὑπάγεσθαι τύποις καὶ τούτους παραφυλάττειν.

[39] Θεσπίζομεν μηδένα δύο ἡγεῖσθαι μοναστηρίων, ἀλλὰ εἶναι μὲν ταῦτα ὑπὸ τὸν τῆς ἐνορίας, καθ' ἣν διάγουσι, θεοφιλέστατον ἐπίσκοπον, ἕκαστον δὲ ἡγούμενον ἔχειν ἕνα, ἐφ' ᾧ τε τῇ μὲν τοῦ ἡγουμένου καταστάσει καὶ τοῖς παρ' αὐτοῦ γινομένοις ἐγκινδυνεύειν τὸν ἐπίσκοπον, τῇ δὲ τῶν μοναχῶν τὸν ἡγούμενον· καὶ κατὰ τοῦτον τὸν τρόπον πᾶσαν εὐταξίαν φυλάττεσθαι καὶ μηδένα τοῦ λοιποῦ κατὰ σύγχυσιν ἢ ἐπήρειαν μάλιστα παρὰ τῶν τὸ εὐαγὲς τοῦτο σχῆμα περιβεβλημένων γίνεσθαι· ἅπερ χρὴ νῦν τε καὶ εἰς τὸν μετὰ ταῦτα χρόνον διηνεκῶς παραφυλάττεσθαι.

[40] Imp. Iustinus A. Archelao pp. Repetita promulgatione non solum iudices quorumlibet tribunalium, verum etiam defensores ecclesiarum huius almae urbis, quos turpissimum insinuandi ultimas deficientium voluntates genus irrepserat, praemonendos censemus, ne rem attingant, quae nemini prorsus omnium secundum constitutionum praecepta quam census magistro competit. absurdum etenim clericis est, immo etiam opprobrium, si peritos se velint disceptationum esse forensium: feriendis temeratoribus huius sanctionis poena quinquaginta librarum auri.

D. XIII k. Dec. Constantinopoli Iustino A. II et Opilione conss.

[41] Αὐτοκράτωρ Ἰουστινιανὸς Α. Ἀταρβίῳ ἐπάρχῳ πραιτωρίων. pr. Πᾶσαν ἀεὶ ποιούμενοι πρόνοιαν τῶν ἁγιωτάτων ἐκκλησιῶν εἰς τιμήν τε καὶ δόξαν τῆς ἁγίας ἀχράντου καὶ ὁμοουσίου τριάδος, δι' ἧς σώζεσθαι ἡμᾶς τε αὐτοὺς καὶ τὴν κοινὴν πολιτείαν πεπιστεύκαμεν, ἀκολουθοῦντες who attempts to do any such thing shall be removed from the property belonging to the (religious) houses, the supervision of which has been placed in his care, and from the management itself, since he has shown himself unworthy of it and unworthy of the priesthood itself. In addition, he shall be chastised by a fine of 10 pounds of gold. 6. We decree that what We have ordained in this sacred pragmatic sanction shall obtain and be observed in This Imperial City alone and its territory and in the other places and regions subject to appointment by the See of This Famous City[103] and to the most reverend metropolitan bishops appointed by it. Thus, also the bishops, who themselves received their episcopate or priesthood from the same metropolitans, as well as those who received the other aforementioned prefectures and charges from them, shall be subject to and observe the same enactments.

[x] οἴκοις

[39] (...) We decree that no one shall preside over two monasteries, but that monasteries shall be subject to the most reverend bishop of the territory in which they (the monasteries) reside; and that each shall have one abbot, whereby the bishop shall be accountable for the appointment and acts of the abbot, the abbot for that of the monks. In this manner, all good order will be preserved and no one shall be appointed in confusion and in contempt by those who have assumed this holy (monk's) habit.[104] These provisions must be observed now and forever after.

[40][105] Emperor JUSTIN Augustus to Archelaus, Praetorian Prefect. By this second promulgation, We believe we must warn not only judges presiding over any tribunal, but also the defenders of the churches of This Generous City, who have been infiltrated by the vilest manner of recording the last will of the deceased: they shall not meddle in something that according to the provisions of the imperial constitutions belongs to no man but the Master of the Census. For it ill suits clerics – no, it is a disgrace! – if they wish to be knowledgeable in forensic disputes. Violators of this decree shall be struck by a fine of 50 pounds of gold.

Given November 19, at Constantinople, in the consulship of Justin Augustus, for the second time, and of Opilio (524).

[41] Emperor JUSTINIAN Augustus to Atarbius, Praetorian Prefect. pr. Always with every consideration on behalf of the most holy churches for the honor [103] The patriarchate of Constantinople.

[104] παρὰ τῶν τὸ εὐαγὲς τοῦτο σχῆμα περιβεβλημένων: translated as "monk's habit" because the law seems to prohibit the appointment of abbots irregularly by the monks themselves.
[105] = C. 6.23.23.

δὲ καὶ τῇ διδασκαλίᾳ τῶν ἁγίων ἀποστόλων περὶ τοῦ ἀνεπιλήπτους ὀφείλειν χειροτονεῖσθαι τοὺς ἱερέας, οἵτινες μάλιστα διὰ τῶν οἰκείων εὐχῶν τὴν εὐμένειαν τοῦ φιλανθρώπου θεοῦ τοῖς κοινοῖς περιποιεῖν ἐτάχθησαν πράγμασι, διὰ τοῦ παρόντος νόμου θεσπίζομεν, ὁσάκις ἂν ἐν οἱᾳδήποτε πόλει ἱερατικὸν θρόνον σχολάσαι συμβαίη, ψήφισμα γίνεσθαι παρὰ τῶν οἰκούντων τὴν αὐτὴν πόλιν ἐπὶ τρισὶ τοῖς ἐπὶ ὀρθῇ πίστει καὶ βίου σεμνότητι καὶ τοῖς ἄλλοις ἀγαθοῖς μεμαρτυρημένοις, ὥστε ἐκ τούτων τὸν ἐπιτηδειότερον εἰς τὴν ἐπισκοπὴν προχειρίζεσθαι.

1. Εἰ γὰρ οἱ ἅγιοι καὶ ἔνδοξοι ἀπόστολοι οἱ τὴν ἱερωσύνην παρὰ τοῦ δεσπότου Χριστοῦ τοῦ θεοῦ ἡμῶν δεξάμενοι καὶ πάντων τῶν ἀγαθῶν τὴν γῆν πληρώσαντες καὶ τὴν αὐτοῦ διδασκαλίαν ἅπασι παραδεδωκότες οὐδὲ αὐτῆς τῆς ἐν τῷ κόσμῳ τούτῳ ζωῆς αὐτῶν ὑπὲρ τῆς ἡμετέρας σωτηρίας ἐφείσαντο, πῶς οὐ δίκαιόν ἐστι τοὺς ὑπεισιόντας εἰς τὴν αὐτῶν τάξιν καὶ ἐγκαθισταμένους τῶν ἁγιωτάτων ἐκκλησιῶν ἱερέας καθαρὰν κεκτῆσθαι προαίρεσιν καὶ τῶν μὲν χρημάτων ὑπερφρονεῖν, πᾶσαν δὲ τὴν ἑαυτῶν ζωὴν εἰς τὸν φιλάνθρωπον ἀνατείνειν θεόν; 2. Ὥστε προσήκει τοιούτους ἐπιλέγεσθαι καὶ χειροτονεῖσθαι ἱερέας, οἷς οὐκ ἔστιν οὔτε τέκνα οὔτε ἔγγονοι, ἐπειδὴ οὐχ οἷόν τέ ἐστι τὸν περὶ τὰς βιωτικὰς ἠσχολημένον φροντίδας, ἃς οἱ παῖδες μάλιστα τοῖς γονεῦσι παρέχουσι, τὴν πᾶσαν σπουδήν τε καὶ εὔνοιαν περὶ τὴν θείαν λειτουργίαν καὶ τὰ ἐκκλησιαστικὰ ἔχειν πράγματα. 3. Τινῶν γὰρ διὰ τὴν εἰς θεὸν ἐλπίδα καὶ διὰ τὸ τὰς ἑαυτῶν περισῶσαι ψυχὰς προστρεχόντων ταῖς ἁγιωτάταις ἐκκλησίαις καὶ τὰ ὑπάρχοντα αὐτοῖς ταύταις προσφερόντων καὶ καταλιμπανόντων ἐπὶ τῷ εἰς πτωχοὺς καὶ πένητας καὶ ἑτέρας εὐσεβεῖς ταύτας δαπανᾶσθαι χρείας, ἄτοπόν ἐστι τοὺς ἐπισκόπους εἰς οἰκεῖον ταῦτα ἀποφέρεσθαι κέρδος ἢ περὶ ἴδια τέκνα καὶ συγγενεῖς καταναλίσκειν. 4. Χρὴ γὰρ καὶ τὸν ἐπίσκοπον μὴ ἐμποδιζόμενον προσπαθείᾳ σαρκικῶν τέκνων πάντων τῶν πιστῶν πνευματικὸν εἶναι πατέρα. διὰ ταῦτα τοίνυν ἀπαγορεύομεν τὸν ἔχοντα τέκνα ἢ ἐγγόνους χειροτονεῖσθαι ἐπίσκοπον.

5. Τοὺς δὲ νῦν ὄντας ἐπισκόπους ἢ μέλλοντας γίνεσθαι θεσπίζομεν μηδαμῶς ἔχειν ἐξουσίαν διατίθεσθαι ἢ δωρεῖσθαι ἢ καθ' ἑτέραν οἱανδήποτε περίνοιαν ἐκποιεῖν τι τῆς ἑαυτῶν περιουσίας, ἣν μετὰ τὸ γενέσθαι ἐπίσκοποι ἐκτήσαντο ἢ ἀπὸ διαθηκῶν ἢ ἀπὸ δωρεῶν ἢ καθ' ἕτερον οἱονδήποτε τρόπον, πλὴν εἰ μὴ μόνα, ἃ πρὸ τῆς ἐπισκοπῆς ἐξ οἱασδήποτε αἰτίας ἔσχον ἢ μετὰ τὴν ἐπισκοπὴν ἀπὸ γονέων καὶ θείων καὶ ἀδελφῶν εἰς αὐτοὺς περιῆλθεν ἢ καὶ περιελεύσεται. 6. Πάντα δὲ, ὅσα μετὰ τὴν χειροτονίαν ἐξ οἱασδήποτε αἰτίας, καθὰ εἴρηται, χωρὶς τῶν εἰρημένων προσώπων εἰς αὐτοὺς περιῆλθε, τῇ παρ' αὐτῶν ἐπισκοπουμένῃ ἁγιωτάτῃ ἐκκλησίᾳ διαφέρειν κελεύομεν καὶ ἐκδικεῖσθαι παρ' αὐτῆς, οὐδενὸς ἑτέρου προσώπου δυναμένου ἐκ τούτου εἰς οἰκεῖον ἀπενεγκεῖν κέρδος. 7. Τίς γὰρ ἂν ἀμφισβητήσειεν, ὡς οἱ τούτοις τὰς ἰδίας οὐσίας καταλείψαντες ἢ καὶ καταλιμπάνοντες ἢ καὶ καθ' ἕτερον τρόπον παραπέμψαντες ἢ παραπέμποντες οὐκ ἀφεωράκασιν and glory of the Immaculate and Consubstantial Trinity, through which We believe that We Ourselves and the Commonwealth are saved; and following the teaching of the Holy Apostles that the blameless should be elected priests, whose duty it is to secure by their prayers the benevolence of merciful God toward our common affairs, We decree by the present law that whenever it happens in any city that the episcopal see is vacant, a decree shall be made by the inhabitants of that city concerning three persons of acknowledged right belief, upright life, and other virtues, so that the most suitable of these men may be elected to the episcopate.

1. For if the Holy and Glorious Apostles, who received the priesthood from the Lord, Christ, Our God, and filled the earth with every good and passed on His teachings to all, did not spare even their own life in this world for our salvation, how could it but be right that those who succeed to their office and preside as bishops over the most holy churches should have a pure character, despise wealth, and strive their whole life toward merciful God? 2. Therefore, such men should be chosen and elected as bishop who have neither children nor grandchildren; for he who is preoccupied by the everyday cares that children give their parents cannot give all his attention and devotion to divine worship and ecclesiastical matters. 3. For although some men resort to the most holy churches out of their hope in God and to save their own souls, and offer their possessions, leaving them behind to be spent on beggars and the poor and other such pious uses, it would be perverse if the bishops diverted this property to their own profit or spent it on their own children and relations. 4. The bishop must be the spiritual father of all faithful, unimpeded by affection for children of the flesh. For this reason, We forbid anyone who has children or grandchildren to be elected bishop.

5. We further decree that present or future bishops shall by no means have the right to leave by will, give, or alienate, by any conceit whatsoever, any of their own property, which they acquire after becoming bishops, whether by will, by gift, or in any other manner, excepting only what they had for any reason before they became bishops, or what has or shall come to them thereafter from their parents, uncles, or brothers. 6. We order that all property that comes to them for any reason after their election, except from the aforementioned persons, as has been said, shall belong to the most holy church of which they are bishops and shall be claimed by it, nor shall any other person hereafter be able to divert it to his own profit. 7. For who would dispute that those who have left or may leave their own property to bishops, or who in any other way have transferred or may transfer it to them, have not intended the bishopric itself and do this in the belief that the bishops not only would spend what they εἰς τὴν αὐτὴν ἱερωσύνην καὶ πιστεύσαντες, ὡς οὐ μόνον τὰ παρ' αὐτῶν καταλειφθέντα εὐσεβῶς δαπανήσουσιν, ἀλλὰ καὶ τὰς ἰδίας αὐτῶν οὐσίας τούτοις προσθήσουσι, τοῦτο ποιοῦσι;

8. Τῆς δὲ γενικῆς ἡμῶν ταύτης νομοθεσίας μόνα ἐξαιροῦμεν τὰ περιγινόμενα οἱαδήποτε πράγματα Ἐπιφανίῳ τῷ ἁγιωτάτῳ ἀρχιεπισκόπῳ τῆς εὐδαίμονος ταύτης πόλεως καὶ πατριάρχῃ μέχρι τῆς παρούσης ἡμέρας· ἐπὶ γὰρ τοῖς ἀπὸ τοῦ παρόντος μέλλουσιν αὐτῷ προσγίνεσθαι κρατεῖν τὰ παρ' ἡμῶν διατυπωθέντα καὶ τῇ ἁγιωτάτῃ μεγάλῃ ἐκκλησίᾳ προσήκειν ταῦτα θεσπίζομεν. 9. Μετὰ δὲ τὴν τῶν θεοφιλεστάτων ἐπισκόπων τελευτὴν τοὺς κατὰ καιρὸν οἰκονόμους λόγους ἀπαιτεῖσθαι τῶν παρ' αὐτῶν καταλελειμμένων πραγμάτων καὶ τῇ ἁγιωτάτῃ ἐκκλησίᾳ προσήκειν ἐκ ταύτης ἡμῶν τῆς νομοθεσίας ὀφειλόντων. 10. Καὶ αὐτοὺς δὲ τοὺς οἰκονόμους κατὰ κρίσιν καὶ δοκιμασίαν γίνεσθαι κελεύομεν, εἰδότας, ὡς παντὶ τρόπῳ καθ' ἕκαστον ἐνιαυτὸν λόγους ὑφέξουσι τῷ ἁγιωτάτῳ ἐπισκόπῳ τῆς οἰκείας διοικήσεως καὶ πᾶν, ὅπερ ἂν φανεῖεν τὰ ἐκκλησιαστικὰ πράγματα καταβλάψαντες ἢ κέρδος οἰκεῖον ποιησάμενοι, τοῦτο τοῖς ἐκκλησιαστικοῖς ἀποδώσουσι πράγμασιν· ὥστε, εἰ μὲν περιόντες τοὺς τοιούτους ὑπόσχοιεν λόγους, γίνεσθαι τὰ εἰρημένα, εἰ δὲ τελευτήσαιεν πρὶν τοὺς αὐτοὺς λόγους ὑποσχεῖν, τότε τοὺς αὐτῶν κληρονόμους ὑπαχθῆναι τῇ τοιαύτῃ ζητήσει καὶ συνελαθῆναι πρὸς ἀποκατάστασιν πάντων, ὧν ἂν ἐντεῦθεν φανεῖεν ὀφείλοντες.

11. Δεῖν δὲ ᾠήθημεν καὶ τὰ ἐπὶ τοῖς τὴν φροντίδα ἀναδεδεγμένοις ἢ καὶ ἀναδεξομένοις τῶν τε εὐαγῶν ξενώνων καὶ νοσοκομείων καὶ πτωχείων καὶ ὀρφανοτροφείων καὶ βρεφοτροφείων διατυπῶσαι. καὶ γὰρ αὐτοῖς πᾶσαν ἄδειαν ἀναιροῦμεν τοῦ τὰ κτηθέντα αὐτοῖς μετὰ τὸ παραλαβεῖν τὰ εἰρημένα φροντίσματα ἢ κατὰ διαθήκας ἢ καθ' ἕτερον οἱονδήποτε τρόπον ἢ περίνοιαν εἰς ἕτερα μετατιθέναι πρόσωπα, πλὴν εἰ μὴ ὅσα πρώην ἔτυχον ἔχοντες ἢ μετὰ ταῦτα ἀπὸ γονέων ἢ θείων καὶ ἀδελφῶν εἰς αὐτοὺς περιῆλθε. 12. Πάντα δέ, ὅσα τοῖς εἰρημένοις εὐαγέσιν οἴκοις προσήκει ἢ εἰς τοὺς τούτων προεστῶτας μετὰ τὸ τὴν τοιαύτην ἀναδέξασθαι φροντίδα περιῆλθεν ἢ περιελεύσεται, τοῖς αὐτοῖς εὐαγέσι διαφέρειν οἴκοις καὶ εὐσεβῶς περὶ τοὺς ἐν αὐτοῖς ὄντας ἢ θεραπευομένους διοικεῖσθαι κελεύομεν. 13. Πρόδηλον γάρ ἐστιν, ὅτι ὁ καταλιμπάνων ἢ δωρούμενος ἐγγράφως ἢ ἀγράφως ξενοδόχῳ ἢ νοσοκόμῳ ἢ πτωχοτρόφῳ ἢ ὀρφανοτρόφῳ ὑπὲρ τούτου δίδωσιν, ἵνα δι' αὐτοῦ εὐσεβῶς διοικηθῇ, ὡς καὶ πολλὴν εὐσεβείας ἀφορμὴν αὐτοῦ ἔχοντος διὰ τοὺς ὑπ' αὐτοῦ φροντιζομένους. 14. Καὶ οὐ δίκαιόν ἐστι τοῦτον, ἅπερ προφάσει τῶν ὑπ' αὐτοῦ φροντιζομένων λαμβάνει, μὴ περὶ αὐτοὺς ἢ καὶ ὑπὲρ αὐτῶν ἀναλίσκειν, ἀλλ' εἰς ἴδιον αὐτὰ πρόσωπον ἀποφέρεσθαι καὶ οἰκεῖον ποιεῖσθαι κέρδος τοῦ φόβου τοῦ θεοῦ καταφρονήσαντα. 15. Τίς γὰρ τὸν τὴν τοιαύτην ἔχοντα φροντίδα μὴ νομίσειε διὰ τοῦτο ταύτην ἀναδέξασθαι, ἵνα μὴ μόνον ὅσα αὐτῷ ἔξωθεν περιγίνεται, ἀλλὰ καὶ ὅσα ἔτυχεν ἐσχηκὼς περὶ αὐτὴν δαπανήσῃ; 16. Ἔτι καὶ τοῦτο κελεύομεν, ὅσα μετὰ τὴν δεόντως παρὰ τῶν τοιούτων have left behind on pious purposes, but would contribute their own property in addition?

8. From this Our general law, We except any property left to Epiphanius, Most Holy Archbishop and Patriarch of This Blessed City, up to the present day. We decree, however, that Our statutes shall apply to property that is henceforth acquired by him, and that this property shall belong to the Most Holy Great Church. 9. After the death of the most reverend bishops, the current stewards shall demand an account of the property they have left behind, which by this legislation of Ours shall belong to the Most Holy Church. 10. And We order that the stewards themselves be appointed upon review and official examination, knowing that they must in every way, every year, render an account of their administration to the most holy bishop and restore to the property of the church all damage they have caused to ecclesiastical property or anything they have diverted to their own profit. Thus, if they render such an account while living, the aforesaid measures shall be carried out; if, though, they die before they render account, then their heirs shall be subjected to such an inquiry and shall be compelled to restore everything that they thereby are found to owe.

11. We have also thought it necessary to issue legislation concerning those who have undertaken or will undertake the management of holy hospices, infirmaries, poorhouses, orphanages, and foundling-hospitals. We accordingly take from them all freedom to transfer to other persons by will or in any other manner, or by any conceit, any property that they acquire after they have assumed the aforementioned positions, except what they may have had beforehand or what has afterwards come to them from their parents or uncles and brothers. 12. All property that belongs to the aforementioned holy houses, or has or will come into the possession of their superintendents after they have assumed such office, We order shall belong to the selfsame holy houses and be managed piously for those who live or receive care there. 13. For it is manifest that he who leaves or gives anything, whether or not in writing, to the superintendent of a hospice, infirmary, poorhouse, or orphanage, gives it for this reason: that it may be managed piously by the latter, since he has ample occasion for acts of piety on account of those under his care. 14. And it is not right that he should not spend on or for those under his care what he receives on their behalf, but rather divert it to his own person and personal gain in contempt of the fear of God. 15. For who would not think that a person entrusted with such a position had undertaken it for this reason: to expend on it not only what he acquires from outside but even what he himself had? 16. And this too We order: whatever surplus should happen to remain after the expense incurred by such persons on behalf of those under their care and after their attention προσώπων γινομένην περὶ τοὺς ὑπ' αὐτῶν φροντιζομένους δαπάνην καὶ ἐπιμέλειαν περί τε τὰ πράγματα καὶ τοὺς οἴκους ἐκπεριττεῦσαι συμβαίη, ταῦτα προχωρεῖν εἰς ἀγορασίαν προσόδων. 17. Πανταχοῦ γὰρ ἡμῖν σκοπὸς εἰς ἐπίδοσιν ἤτοι αὔξησιν ἄγεσθαι τὰ εἰς εὐσεβεῖς ἀφορισμένα χρείας πράγματα· οὕτως γὰρ ἕκαστος ὑπὲρ τῆς ἑαυτοῦ ψυχῆς τι πρᾶξαι βουλόμενος προθυμότερον ἐπιδώσει, ἐὰν τὰ παρ' αὐτοῦ παρεχόμενα εὐσεβῶς μέλλειν διοικεῖσθαι πιστεύσειεν. 18. Εἰ δὲ συμβῇ τινὰ τούτων παύσασθαι τῆς φροντίδος, ἧς εἶχε, θεσπίζομεν τοῦτον εἰς τόπον αὐτοῦ καθισταμένου μετὰ τοῦ φόβου τοῦ δεσπότου θεοῦ λόγους ἀπαιτεῖσθαι πάσης τῆς παρ' αὐτοῦ γενομένης διοικήσεως, καθὰ τῇ θείᾳ ἡμῶν ταύτῃ περιέχεται νομοθεσίᾳ, εἰδότος καὶ τοῦ μετ' αὐτὸν καθισταμένου, ὡς τῷ δεσπότῃ θεῷ τὸν ὑπὲρ τούτου λόγον ὑφέξει.

19. Ἔτι θεσπίζομεν, καθὰ τοῖς θείοις διώρισται κανόσι, μήτε ἐπίσκοπον μήτε χωρεπίσκοπον μήτε περιοδευτὴν μήτε πρεσβύτερον μήτε ἄλλον οἱασδήποτε ἀξίας κληρικὸν ἐπὶ δόσει χειροτονεῖσθαι. 20. Ἀλλὰ μηδὲ οἰκονόμον ἢ ἐκκλησιέκδικον ἢ ξενοδόχον ἢ νοσοκόμον ἢ πτωχοτρόφον ἢ ὀρφανοτρόφον ἢ βρεφοτρόφον ἢ τὸν ἐπὶ τῆς πτωχείας παρασχόντα τι γίνεσθαι, ἀλλὰ κατὰ κρίσιν καὶ δοκιμασίαν τῶν κατὰ τόπον θεοφιλεστάτων ἐπισκόπων τούτους προβάλλεσθαι. 21. Εἰ δέ τις εὑρεθείη προφάσει τῶν εἰρημένων χειροτονιῶν καὶ φροντισμάτων διδούς τι ἢ λαμβάνων, εἴτε ἐπίσκοπος εἴη εἴτε κληρικός, καὶ τὸν παρέχοντα καὶ τὸν λαμβάνοντα ἔξω τῆς ἱερωσύνης καὶ τοῦ κλήρου γίνεσθαι κελεύομεν, μετὰ τὸ ὑπὸ τὴν κατάκρισιν αὐτοὺς εἶναι τοῦ δεσπότου θεοῦ. 22. Εἰ δέ τις διὰ προστασίας γένηται καὶ εὑρεθείη διδούς τι, τὸν γινόμενον ἔξω τοῦ κλήρου γίνεσθαι κελεύομεν. 23. Εἰ δὲ οἰκονόμος ἢ ἐκκλησιέκδικος ἢ χωρεπίσκοπος ἢ περιοδευτὴς ἢ ξενοδόχος ἢ νοσοκόμος ἢ πτωχοτρόφος ἢ ὀρφανοτρόφος ἢ βρεφοτρόφος ἢ ὁ καλούμενος ἐπὶ τῆς πτωχείας παρασχών τι φανείη ἐπὶ τῷ τὴν τοιαύτην ἑαυτῷ περιποιῆσαι φροντίδα, καὶ τοῦτον ἀποκινεῖσθαι τῆς τοιαύτης φροντίδος κελεύομεν.

24. Ἔτι θεσπίζομεν πάντας τοὺς κληρικοὺς τοὺς ἐν ἑκάστῃ ἐκκλησίᾳ δι' ἑαυτῶν ψάλλειν τά τε νυκτερινὰ καὶ τὰ ὀρθρινὰ καὶ τὰ ἑσπερινά, καὶ μὴ μόνον ἐν τῷ δαπανᾶν τὰ ἐκκλησιαστικὰ πράγματα κληρικοὺς φαίνεσθαι, ὄνομα μὲν ἔχοντας κληρικῶν, μὴ ἐπιτελοῦντας δὲ τὸ πρᾶγμα τοῦ κληρικοῦ πρὸς τὴν λειτουργίαν τοῦ δεσπότου θεοῦ. 25. Ἄτοπον γάρ ἐστιν ἀντ' αὐτῶν γραπτοὺς ἀνάγκης ἐπαγομένης αὐτοῖς ψάλλειν. εἰ γὰρ πολλοὶ τῶν λαϊκῶν διὰ τὸ τὴν οἰκείαν ὠφελῆσαι ψυχὴν ταῖς ἁγιωτάταις ἐκκλησίαις προσεδρεύοντες σπουδαῖοι περὶ τὴν ψαλμῳδίαν δείκνυνται, πῶς οὐκ ἄτοπον τοὺς κληρικοὺς τοὺς ἐπὶ τούτῳ τεταγμένους μὴ πληροῦν τὸ οἰκεῖον ἐπάγγελμα; 26. Διὸ παντὶ τρόπῳ τοὺς κληρικοὺς ψάλλειν κελεύομεν. καὶ καταζητεῖσθαι αὐτοὺς παρὰ τῶν κατὰ καιρὸν θεοφιλεστάτων ἐπισκόπων καὶ δύο πρωτοπρεσβυτέρων ἑκάστης ἐκκλησίας καὶ τοῦ καλουμένου ἄρχοντος ἤτοι ἐξάρχου καὶ τοῦ ἐκδίκου ἑκάστης ἁγιωτάτης ἐκκλησίας, to business and the (holy) houses, this amount shall be let out to earn interest. 17. For it is Our goal to multiply and increase the property destined for pious purposes on every occasion. Thus, everyone who desires to do something for the good of his soul will more readily give, if he is confident that what he offers will be piously administered. 18. If, though, one of these men should resign the administrative post that he has held, We decree that he who succeeds to his position shall demand of him, in fear of the Lord God, an account of his entire administration, just as it is prescribed by this Our divine law. For he who succeeds him shall know that, concerning this, he will render account to the Lord God.

19. We further decree, just as it has been established in the sacred canons, that no bishop, country-bishop, itinerant priest, presbyter, or other clergyman of any rank shall be appointed through bribery. 20. Indeed, no one who gives anything shall be made steward, defender of the church, superintendent of a hospice, infirmary, poorhouse, orphanage, or foundling-hospital, or the dispenser of alms, but they shall be promoted upon review and official examination by the most reverend local bishops. 21. If, though, someone is found to have given or received something on account of the aforementioned appointments and offices, whether he be bishop or clergyman, We order that both the giver and the taker shall be removed from the priesthood and clergy, in addition to being made subject to the condemnation of the Lord God. 22. If someone is appointed through patronage and is found to have given something, We order that he be removed from the clergy. 23. If a steward, defender of the church, country-bishop, itinerant priest, superintendent of a hospice, infirmary, poorhouse, orphanage, or foundling-hospital, or a dispenser of alms is revealed to have given something to obtain such an office for himself, We order that he too be removed from that office.

24. We further decree that all clergymen in every church shall personally chant the nocturnal, morning, and vesper prayers, and (thereby) shall not appear to be clergy merely by their use of ecclesiastical property, bearing the title but neglecting the duty of a clergyman to the service of the Lord God. 25. For it is absurd that hired men (graptous) should sing in their place, when the responsibility falls on them. For if many of the laity, for the benefit of their souls, flock to the holy churches and show themselves eager for psalmody, how could it not be absurd if the clergymen assigned this task fail to fulfill their duty? 26. Therefore We absolutely order the clergy to chant, and they shall be examined by the currently serving bishops and by two senior presbyters, by the so-called leader or precentor, and by the defender of every most holy church; and those who are not found to have blamelessly acquitted themselves καὶ τοὺς μὴ εὑρισκομένους ἀμέμπτως ταῖς λειτουργίαις προσκαρτεροῦντας ἔξω τοῦ κλήρου καθίστασθαι. 27. Οἱ γὰρ καταστήσαντες ἤτοι κτίσαντες τὰς ἁγιωτάτας ἐκκλησίας ὑπὲρ τῆς ἑαυτῶν σωτηρίας καὶ τῆς κοινῆς πολιτείας κατέλιπον αὐταῖς οὐσίας, δι' ὧν ὤφειλον αἱ θεῖαι λειτουργίαι γίνεσθαι, ἐφ' ᾧτε διὰ τῶν λειτουργούντων ἐν ταῖς ἁγιωτάταις ἐκκλησίαις εὐλαβεστάτων κληρικῶν θεραπεύεσθαι τὸν δεσπότην θεόν. 28. Ἄδειαν δὲ παρέχομεν παντὶ προσώπῳ τῷ γινώσκοντι τούτων τι παραβαινόμενον τοῦτο προσαναγγέλλειν καὶ φανεροῦν.

29. Τὰ δὲ παρ' ἡμῶν θεσπισθέντα πέρατι παραδοῦναι καὶ εἰς ἔργον ἀχθῆναι μετὰ τῆς τοῦ θεοῦ εὐμενείας κελεύομεν, ὑφορωμένων τῶν παραβαίνειν ταῦτα τολμώντων πρῶτον μὲν τὸν ἐκ τῆς τοῦ δεσπότου θεοῦ κρίσεως κίνδυνον, ἔπειτα δὲ καὶ τὰς ἐγκειμένας τῇ αὐτῇ νομοθεσίᾳ ποινάς.
D. k. Mart. Constantinopoli dn. Iustiniano pp. A. II cons.

[42] Ὁ αὐτὸς βασιλεὺς Ἐπιφανίῳ ἀρχιεπισκόπῳ Κωνσταντινουπόλεως καὶ πατριάρχῃ. pr. Πᾶσαν ἀεὶ ποιούμενοι πρόνοιαν τῶν ἁγιωτάτων ἐκκλησιῶν, δι' ὧν καὶ τὴν ἡμετέραν βασιλείαν κρατύνεσθαι καὶ τὰ κοινὰ πράγματα τῇ τοῦ φιλανθρώπου θεοῦ χάριτι τειχίζεσθαι πεπιστεύκαμεν, ἀλλὰ μὴν καὶ τὰς ἡμῶν τε καὶ τῶν ἄλλων ἁπάντων ψυχὰς σπουδάζοντες περισώζεσθαι καὶ τούτου χάριν ἐπιμελούμενοι διὰ παντὸς τοῦ μήτε τὰ συμφέροντα ταῖς ἁγιωτάταις ἐκκλησίαις καθ' οἱανοῦν πόλιν οὔσαις τρόπῳ τινὶ κατολιγωρεῖσθαι μήτε τὰς ἐν αὐταῖς θείας λειτουργίας ἐκ τῆς τῶν θεοφιλεστάτων ἱερέων ἀπουσίας ἐμποδίζεσθαι ἢ μὴ προσηκόντως ἐπιμελεῖσθαι, ἀλλὰ μηδὲ τὰ τῶν ἁγιωτάτων ἐκκλησιῶν ἐκδαπανᾶσθαι πράγματα διά τε τῶν ἐν ταῖς ὁδοῖς καὶ διὰ τῶν ἐνταῦθα περί τε τοὺς ἀνιόντας ἱερέας καὶ τοὺς σὺν αὐτοῖς ὄντας κληρικοὺς ἢ οἰκέτας δαπανωμένων, ὥστε πολλάκις καὶ δανείων γίνεσθαι χρείαν καὶ τὸ ἐντεῦθεν ἔρχεσθαι βάρος ἐπὶ τὰς αὐτὰς ἁγιωτάτας ἐκκλησίας, πρὸς τὸ μηδὲ τὴν τῶν ἐκκλησιαστικῶν πραγμάτων δεόντως προϊέναι διοίκησιν παρὰ τὸν τῆς ἀποδημίας τῶν θεοφιλεστάτων ἱερέων καιρόν, ταύταις πρὸς τὴν σὴν μακαριότητα ταῖς θείαις συλλαβαῖς χρήσασθαι δεῖν ᾠήθημεν.

1. Δι' ὧν αὐτῇ παρακελευόμεθα καταστῆσαι πᾶσι φανερὸν τοῖς κατὰ τὰς μητροπόλεις ἑκάστης ἐπαρχίας ὑπ' αὐτῇ τεταγμένοις ὁσιωτάτοις ἱερεῦσιν, ὡς οὐ προσήκει τινὰ τούτων ἢ τῶν ἐν ταῖς ἄλλαις τῆς ἐπαρχίας πόλεσι ταῖς ὑπὸ τῷ μητροπολίτῃ τεταγμέναις θεοφιλεστάτων ἐπισκόπων κατ' οἰκείαν γνώμην δίχα θείας ἡμῶν ἰδικῆς προστάξεως ἀπολιμπάνειν μὲν τὴν παρ' αὐτοῦ διοικουμένην ἁγιωτάτην ἐκκλησίαν, εἰς δὲ τὴν εὐδαίμονα ταύτην ἀνιέναι πόλιν οἱουδήποτε πράγματος ἀνακύπτοντος, ἀλλὰ πέμπειν ἐνταῦθα ἕνα ἢ δύο τοῦ ὑπ' αὐτὸν εὐαγοῦς κλήρου καὶ ποιεῖν φανερὰ τῇ ἡμετέρᾳ εὐσεβείᾳ, περὶ ὧν δέονται, ἢ δι' αὐτῶν ἐξ εὐθείας προσιόντων ἡμῖν ἢ διὰ μέσης τῆς σῆς μακαριότητος, οὕτω τε τυγχάνειν δικαίας τε καὶ συντόμου τῆς ἡμετέρας βοηθείας. 2. Εἰ γάρ τι τῶν εἰς ἡμᾶς φερομένων τοιοῦτον ἡμῖν εἶναι φανείη, ὡς δεῖσθαι τῆς αὐτῶν τῶν of their service shall be removed from the clergy. 27. For those who established or rather founded the most holy churches for their own salvation and for the public good left them property, by means of which the religious service should be held; so that, through the service rendered in the most holy churches by the most pious clerics, the Lord God might be worshipped. 28. We grant every person who knows of any violation hereof the freedom to denounce and make it publicly known.

29. By the grace of God, We order that these things which We have decreed be brought to fruition and carried into effect. Those who dare to transgress these provisions shall expect, first, the peril of the judgment of the Lord God and, second, also the punishments included in the law itself.

Given March 1, at Constantinople, in the consulship of Our Lord Justinian, Ever Augustus, for the second time (528).

[42] The same Augustus to Epiphanius, Archbishop and Patriarch of Constantinople. pr. Always with every consideration for the most holy churches, through which We believe Our Empire is strengthened and the common welfare is fortified by the grace of Merciful God; and indeed fervently wishing that both Our own and all others' souls should be saved, and on this account continually ensuring that the benefits of the most holy churches in every city are in no way diminished, that the divine services are not impeded by the absence of the most reverend priests or are not properly performed, and also that the property of the most holy churches is not consumed by the expenses incurred both on journeys and for priests traveling hither and the clergymen and servants with them, whereby it often is necessary to contract debts, and the burden incurred falls upon the most holy churches, in addition to the fact that the administration of ecclesiastical property does not proceed as it should during the temporary absence of the most reverend bishops – We have thought it necessary to address this divine letter to Your Blessedness.

1. With this letter, We urge Your Blessedness to make clear to all most holy priests (bishops) throughout the metropolitan cities of each province under your jurisdiction that none of them or the most reverend bishops of the other cities of the province subordinated to the metropolitan may, of their own accord, leave the holy church governed by them and come to This Blessed City without a divine order specifically given by Us, whatever the business that arises, but rather they should send hither one or two of the holy clergy under them and make clear to Our Piety what they need, whether by approaching Us directly or by way of Your Blessedness, and thus obtain Our just and instant aid. 2. If anything reported to Us should appear to be such as to require the presence of the most reverend priests, We shall then instruct them to come.

θεοφιλεστάτων ἱερέων παρουσίας, τηνικαῦτα παραγενέσθαι προστάξομεν αὐτούς. δίχα δὲ τοιαύτης θείας ἡμῶν κελεύσεως οὐδένα παραγίνεσθαι συγχωροῦμεν· εἰδότος τοῦ ταῦτα ὑπερβαίνοντος καὶ τὴν ὀρθῶς καὶ ὁσίως εἰσενεχθεῖσαν παρ' ἡμῶν ἐπὶ τῇ τῶν ἁγιωτάτων ἐκκλησιῶν τιμῇ παραφυλακὴν παρεξιόντος, ὡς οὐ μικρᾶς ἀγανακτήσεως πειραθήσεται, ἀλλὰ καὶ ὑπὸ ἀφορισμὸν γενήσεται, εἰ μὲν μητροπολίτης εἴη, παρὰ τῆς σῆς μακαριότητος, εἰ δὲ τῶν ὑπὸ τὸν μητροπολίτην πόλεων, δι' αὐτοῦ τοῦ μητροπολίτου. χρηματικὴν γὰρ ποινὴν ὁρίσαι κατὰ τῶν ὑπερβαινόντων τὴν θείαν ἡμῶν ταύτην διατύπωσιν οὐκ ἀναγκαῖον ᾠήθημεν, ὡς ἂν μὴ εἰς τὰς ἁγιωτάτας ἐκκλησίας ἡ ἐντεῦθεν περισταίη βλάβη, ὧν τὰ πράγματα πάσης μειώσεως ἐλεύθερα μένειν σπουδάζομεν.

3. Ταῦτα τοίνυν εἰς τὴν ἑκάστου γνῶσιν τῶν ὑπ' αὐτῇ τεταγμένων θεοφιλεστάτων μητροπολιτῶν ἐπισκόπων ἀγαγεῖν ἡ σὴ ὁσιότης σπουδασάτω, καὶ τὰς παρ' ἑκάστου πεμπομένας ἀποκρίσεις διά τε τῶν μητροπολιτῶν καὶ δι' αὐτῶν τῶν λοιπῶν τῆς ἐπαρχίας πόλεων θεοφιλεστάτων ἐπισκόπων, ἃ περὶ τούτων μεμαθήκασιν, εἰς τὴν ἡμετέραν εὐσέβειαν ἀνενεγκεῖν.

D. k. Mart. Constantinopoli dn. Iustiniano pp. A. II cons.

[43] Ὁ αὐτὸς βασιλεὺς Μηνᾷ ἐπάρχῳ πραιτωρίων. pr. Τῆς τῶν ἁγιωτάτων ἐκκλησιῶν καὶ τῶν εὐαγῶν μοναστηρίων προνοοῦντες σεμνότητος ἀπαγορεύομεν πᾶσι τοῖς οἰκοῦσι μοναστήρια συνδιαιτᾶσθαι γυναιξὶ μοναστρίαις ἢ πρόφασίν τινα ἐπινοεῖν τοῦ κοινωνίαν τινὰ πρὸς αὐτὰς ἔχειν (τοῦτο γὰρ δικαίαν ὑποψίαν εἰσάγει τοῦ συνεχῶς καὶ ἡνίκα ἂν βούλοιντο συντυγχάνειν αὐταῖς), ἀλλ' οὕτω κεχωρισμένους εἶναι, ὥστε μηδεμίαν μετουσίαν πρὸς ἀλλήλους καθ' οἱανοῦν αἰτίαν ἔχειν αὐτοὺς μηδὲ ἐξευρίσκεσθαί τινα πρόφασιν ἢ τούτοις ἢ ἐκείναις τῆς μετ' ἀλλήλων διαγωγῆς.

1. Ἀλλὰ μόνους μὲν καθ' ἑαυτοὺς ἄνδρας ἐν ἑκάστῳ μοναστηρίῳ διάγειν τῶν καθ' οἱανοῦν αἰτίαν πλησιαζουσῶν αὐτοῖς μοναστριῶν κεχωρισμένους, μόνας δὲ καθ' ἑαυτὰς γυναῖκας οὐκ ἀναμιγνυμένας ἀνδράσιν ὑπὲρ τοῦ πᾶσαν ὑπόνοιαν ἀσέμνου συνδιαγωγῆς παντελῶς ἀναιρεθῆναι. 2. Ἀλλ' εἰ μὲν ἄνδρες εἶεν οἱ πλείονες, προσήκει προνοίᾳ τῶν ἐν ἑκάστῃ πόλει θεοφιλεστάτων ἐπισκόπων τὰς γυναῖκας εἰς ἕτερον ἐπιτήδειον τόπον μεθίστασθαι καὶ δοθῆναι μοναστήριον αὐταῖς, ἐν ᾧ δεήσει καθ' ἑαυτὰς τοῦ λοιποῦ σεμνῶς διαιτᾶσθαι. 3. Εἰ δὲ πλείονες εὑρεθεῖεν αἱ γυναῖκες οὖσαι ἢ καὶ ἰσάριθμοι, τοὺς μὲν ἄνδρας μεθίστασθαι, τὰς δὲ γυναῖκας ἐν τῷ μοναστηρίῳ μένειν. 4. Ὥστε μέντοι τὰ πράγματα τοῦ αὐτοῦ μοναστηρίου κινητὰ καὶ ἀκίνητα καὶ αὐτοκίνητα τοὺς ἐξιόντας πρὸς τοὺς μένοντας κατ' ἀναλογίαν μερίζεσθαι.

5. Ταῖς δὲ ἀναγκαίαις ἀποκρίσεσι τῶν καθ' ἑαυτὰς μοναζουσῶν γυναικῶν ἕνα γέροντα παρὰ τοῦ θεοφιλεστάτου ἐπισκόπου τῆς πόλεως ἀφορίζεσθαι,

We permit none to come without such a divine order from Us. He who transgresses these commands and violates this observance, rightly and piously introduced by Us in honor of the most holy churches, shall know that he will experience no small indignation but will be excommunicated:[106] if he is a metropolitan, by Your Blessedness; if he is from the cities under the jurisdiction of the metropolitan, then by the metropolitan himself. We have deemed it unnecessary to fix a pecuniary penalty for the transgressors of this Our divine decree, lest the loss thereby incurred redound to the most holy churches, the property of which We desire to remain free of any diminution.

3. Your Holiness, therefore, shall hasten to bring these provisions to the attention of every one of the most reverend metropolitan bishops subject to You and to return to Our Piety the answers sent by each of the metropolitans and the rest of the most reverend bishops of the cities of the province, concerning what they have learned of these things.

Given March 1, at Constantinople, in the consulship of Our Lord Justinian, Ever Augustus, for the second time (528).

[43] The same Augustus to Menas, Praetorian Prefect. pr. Out of respect for the dignity of the most holy churches and the venerable monasteries, We forbid all inhabitants of monasteries to dwell together with nuns or to devise any pretext for having any association with them – for their meeting with them continually and whenever they wish arouses a just suspicion – but they shall be separated so that they shall enjoy no contact with one another for any reason whatsoever, nor shall any pretext be invented, whether by these men or by those women, for conversing with one another.

1. Men in every monastery shall dwell alone, by themselves, separated from nuns who are in their vicinity for any reason; and women shall dwell alone, by themselves, not mingling with the men, so that every suspicion of indecorous cohabitation may utterly be removed. 2. If, however, the men should form the majority, it falls to the foresight of the most reverend bishops of each city to see to it that the women are transferred to a different, suitable place and that a monastery is granted them in which they must thereafter dwell honorably by themselves; 3. but if the women are found to be the majority or equal in number to the men, he shall see to it that the men are transferred and the women remain in the monastery. 4. Those who leave shall proportionally divide the movable, immovable, and self-moving property of the monastery with those that remain.

5. For the necessary business of the women living by themselves, one old man shall be designated by the most reverend bishop of the city; for the performance εἰς δὲ τὸ τὰς θείας ἐκτελεῖσθαι λειτουργίας καὶ τῆς ἁγίας αὐταῖς μεταδίδοσθαι κοινωνίας ἕνα πρεσβύτερον καὶ ἕνα διάκονον σεμνοῦ βίου τυγχάνοντας δίδοσθαι τοὺς μόνα τὰ εἰρημένα πράττειν ὀφείλοντας, οὐ μὴν διαιτᾶσθαι καὶ συνοικεῖν αὐτοῖς. 6. Τούτων γὰρ δὴ φυλαττομένων καὶ αὐτοῖς εὐδαίμων ὁ βίος ἔσται τοῖς μονάζειν αἱρουμένοις καὶ τὰ τῆς κοινῆς ἡμῶν πολιτείας πράγματα ἑτοιμοτάτης τεύξεται τῆς τοῦ φιλανθρώπου θεοῦ βοηθείας. 7. Ἃ μὲν οὖν ὑπὲρ τῶν κοινῶν πραγμάτων καὶ νῦν καλῶς ἔχειν ἐδοκιμάσαμεν, ταῦτά ἐστι καὶ πεποίθαμεν, ὡς οὐ μικρὰ κἀνταῦθα διαφανήσεται προστιθεμένη τούτοις ἐκ τῆς θείας ἡμῶν ταύτης διατάξεως ὠφέλεια.

[106] Excommunication rather than simple banishment appears intended.

8. Δεῖ δὲ παραφυλακῆς ἀκριβεστάτης εἰς τὸ κατὰ μηδένα τρόπον ὑπερβαίνεσθαι ταῦτα, ἥτις οὐκ ἄλλως ἂν γένοιτο ἢ τῶν θεοφιλεστάτων ἑκάστης πόλεως ἐπισκόπων ἐφορώντων ἐπιμελῶς τὰς τῶν μοναχῶν τῶν διαγόντων ἐν μοναστηρίοις τεταγμένοις ὑπὸ τὴν αὐτῶν φροντίδα διατριβάς, καὶ εἴ τινος αἴσθοιντο τοιούτου πταίσματος, πᾶσι τρόποις εἰργόντων τὸ παρ' αὐτῶν ἐγχειρούμενον καὶ ποιναῖς μὲν ὑπαγόντων τοὺς μετὰ τὴν ἡμετέραν ἀπαγόρευσιν ἔτι τῶν αὐτῶν ἀνεχομένους, ἀναγκαζόντων δὲ τὰς αὐτῶν διατριβὰς καθαρὰς καὶ κεχωρισμένας εἶναι γυναικείας συνδιαγωγῆς. 9. Καὶ αὐτοῖς γὰρ τοῖς θεοφιλεστάτοις ἐπισκόποις, εἰ μέλλοιεν ὀρθῶς τὰ περὶ τούτου διαλογίζεσθαι, γνώριμόν ἐστιν, ὡς ἐκ τοῦ φυλάττεσθαι τὴν σεμνὴν ταύτην τῶν εὐλαβεστάτων μοναχῶν διαγωγὴν καὶ μηδὲν ἀπρεπὲς ἢ ἄσεμνον αὐτῇ προσγίνεσθαι τὸν φιλάνθρωπον θεὸν εὐμενῆ τὰ κοινὰ πράγματα τῆς ἡμετέρας ἕξει πολιτείας.

10. Ἀλλ' ὡς ἂν μηδὲ αὐτοὶ οἱ θεοφιλέστατοι ἐπίσκοποι πάρεργον ἡγήσωνται τὸ θεῖον ἡμῶν τοῦτο παράγγελμα, γινώσκειν αὐτοὺς βουλόμεθα, ὡς, εἴ τις αὐτῶν φανείη μὴ σὺν ἀκριβείᾳ πάσῃ ταῦτα διερευνώμενος ἢ διαφανὲν τὸ πταῖσμα μὴ κατὰ τοὺς εἰρημένους ἐπανορθῶν τρόπους, ἔνοχος μὲν ἔσται τῷ κρίματι τοῦ δεσπότου θεοῦ καὶ νῦν δὲ ἐπ' αὐτὸν ἥξει τὰ τῆς βασιλικῆς ἡμῶν κινήσεως καὶ περὶ αὐτὴν κινδυνεύσει τὴν ἱερωσύνην, οὐδὲ ἄλλης μείζονος ἐνδεούσης ἀγανακτήσεως.

11. Ἡ τοίνυν σὴ ὑπεροχὴ τὴν θείαν ἡμῶν ταύτην νομοθεσίαν φανερὰν καταστησάτω τοῖς ἐν ἑκάστῃ μητροπόλει θεοφιλεστάτοις ἐπισκόποις καὶ τοῖς λαμπροτάτοις ἄρχουσι τῶν ἐπαρχιῶν, προστιθέμενος τὸ καὶ αὐτούς, εἰ δεήσειε, πᾶσαν διδόναι βοήθειαν τοῖς εὐλαβεστάτοις τῶν πόλεων ἐπισκόποις, ἐφ' ᾧ ταῦτα κωλύειν, ἅπερ ἀναιρεθῆναι προσετάξαμεν, καὶ εἴ τινι ῥᾳθυμίᾳ χρωμένους αὐτοὺς εὕροιεν, φανερὰν ἡμῖν ταύτην δι' οἰκείας ποιεῖν μηνύσεως, ὡς ἂν ἅπαντες εἰδεῖεν τὰ παρ' αὐτῶν ὀφείλοντα διαφυλάττεσθαι καὶ τὴν ἐξ ἀμελείας διωρισμένην ποινήν. 12. Φροντίσειάν τε οἱ θεοφιλέστατοι μητροπολῖται τοῦ καὶ τοῖς ἄλλοις εὐλαβεστάτοις τῶν πόλεων ἐπισκόποις τῆς αὐτῆς ἐπαρχίας ποιῆσαι φανερὸν τὸν θεῖον ἡμῶν τοῦτον νόμον καὶ παρεγγυῆσαι πᾶσιν ἀγρύπνῳ σπουδῇ ταῦτα φυλάττειν, δεδιόσι τὸ διορισθὲν ἐπιτίμιον.

13. Ὑπὲρ δὲ τοῦ μὴ παρελκυσθῆναι τὴν ἀποπλήρωσιν τῆς θείας ἡμῶν ταύτης νομοθεσίας, ἀλλὰ μηδὲ αὐτοὺς τοὺς εὐλαβεστάτους μοναχοὺς τοὺς ἐπὶ τοῦ παρόντος συνδιαιτωμένους μοναστρίαις ὀλίγον νομίσαι χρόνον of divine services and the giving of holy communion itself, one presbyter and one deacon of upright character shall be appointed, who may perform only the aforesaid services, not live and cohabit with them (the old man and the women). 6. If these precepts are kept, blessed will be the life of those who have chosen the monastic life, and the affairs of Our Commonwealth shall meet with the most ready aid of merciful God. 7. These precepts are what We presently have deemed good for the Commonwealth, and We are confident no small benefit shall be seen to accrue to it from this Our divine decree.

8. That these precepts are in no manner broken requires the utmost care, which is not otherwise to be procured unless the most reverend bishops of each city diligently scrutinize the way of life of the monks living in the monasteries placed under their supervision and, if they learn of some such lapse, stop their attempt by all means, and both subject to punishment those who yet persist in the same conduct after Our prohibition and force their way of life to be chaste and sundered from female society. 9. And if they are to think rightly about this matter, the most reverend bishops themselves must acknowledge that if the way of life of the most devoted monks is kept honorable, and nothing unseemly or unworthy attaches to it, Merciful God will propitiously keep the common welfare of Our State.

10. And so that the most reverend bishops should not consider this Our divine command to be of trifling importance, We want them to know that if one of them is found investigating these matters with less than the utmost exactitude, or failing to correct a manifest lapse in the manner prescribed, he will be subject to the judgment of the Lord God, and the consequences of Our imperial wrath shall fall upon him, and he shall risk his priesthood. Nor will other, yet greater censure be wanting.

11. Your Excellency will therefore make this Our divine law known to all of the most reverend metropolitan bishops and to the viri clarissimi provincial governors, adding that, if necessary, they should do everything to assist the most pious bishops of the cities, in order to stop what We have ordered to be abolished. And if they find the bishops exhibiting negligence, they shall disclose it to Us in a personal report, so that all may know what they must observe and the punishment established for neglect. 12. The most reverend metropolitans will take pains to apprise the most pious bishops of the cities in the same province of this Our divine law and bid them all to observe it with tireless application, in fear of the established penalty.

13. That the fulfillment of this Our divine law may not be drawn out, and indeed lest the most pious monks presently living in common with nuns think that the time granted them to separate as required is short, We fix a period αὐτοῖς ἐνδεδόσθαι πρὸς τὸν ὀφείλοντα γενέσθαι χωρισμόν, ἐνιαυσιαῖον τοῦτον ὁρίζομεν, ψηφιζόμενον ἀφ' οὗπερ ἂν ἐμφανὴς ὁ θεῖος ἡμῶν οὗτος νόμος γένηται, ὥστε μετὰ τὴν τοῦ ἔτους παραδρομήν, εἰ φανείη τὰ τῆς κοινῆς διαίτης ἐπὶ τοῦ αὐτοῦ μένοντα σχήματος, ἁρμόσαι παντὶ τρόπῳ τὰς ἐγκειμένας τῷ θείῳ ἡμῶν νόμῳ τούτῳ ποινάς.

D. xv k. Febr. Decio cons.

[44] Ὁ αὐτὸς βασιλεὺς Ἰουλιανῷ ἐπάρχῳ πραιτωρίων. pr. Τῶν ἱερῶν κανόνων μηδὲ τοῖς θεοφιλεστάτοις πρεσβυτέροις μηδὲ τοῖς εὐλαβεστάτοις διακόνοις ἢ ὑποδιακόνοις γαμεῖν μετὰ τὴν τοιαύτην χειροτονίαν ἐφιέντων, ἀλλὰ μόνοις τοῖς εὐλαβεστάτοις ψάλταις τε καὶ ἀναγνώσταις τοῦτο συγχωρούντων ὁρῶμεν τινὰς περιφρονοῦντας μὲν τῶν ἱερῶν κανόνων, παιδοποιουμένους δὲ ἔκ τινων γυναικῶν, αἷς ἁρμοσθῆναι κατὰ τὸν ἱερατικὸν θεσμὸν οὐ δύνανται. 1. Ἐπειδὴ τοίνυν ἡ ποινὴ τοῦ πράγματος ἐν μόνῃ τῇ τῆς ἱερωσύνης ἦν ἐκπτώσει, τοὺς δὲ θείους κανόνας οὐκ ἔλαττον τῶν νόμων ἰσχύειν καὶ οἱ ἡμέτεροι βούλονται νόμοι, θεσπίζομεν κρατεῖν μὲν ἐπ' αὐτοῖς τὰ τοῖς ἱεροῖς δοκοῦντα κανόσιν, ὡς ἂν εἰ καὶ τοῖς πολιτικοῖς ἐνεγέγραπτο νόμοις, καὶ πάντας αὐτοὺς τῆς τε ἱερωσύνης τῆς τε θείας λειτουργίας τῆς τε ἀξίας αὐτῆς ἣν ἔχουσι γυμνοῦσθαι. 2. Καθάπερ γὰρ τοῖς εὐαγέσι κανόσιν ἀπηγόρευται τὰ τοιαῦτα, οὕτω καὶ κατὰ τοὺς ἡμετέρους νόμους τὸ πρᾶγμα κεκωλῦσθαι καὶ πρὸς τῇ εἰρημένῃ τῆς ἐκπτώσεως ποινῇ μηδὲ εἶναι γνησίους τοὺς ἐκ τῆς τοιαύτης ἀτόπου συνδιαφθορᾶς τεχθέντας ἢ τικτομένους, ἀλλὰ τῆς ἐκ τῶν τοιούτων σπερμάτων μετέχειν αἰσχύνης. 3. Τοιούτους γὰρ αὐτοὺς τίθεμεν, ὁποίους οἱ νόμοι τοὺς ἐξ ἰγκέστων ἢ νεφαρίων τεχθέντας γάμων διορίζουσιν, ὥστε μηδὲ φυσικοὺς ἢ νόθους νοεῖσθαι, ἀλλὰ πανταχόθεν ἀπηγορευμένους καὶ διαδοχῆς γονέων ἀναξίους, οὐδὲ δωρεὰν λαμβάνειν παρ' αὐτῶν δυναμένους οὔτε αὐτοὺς οὔτε τὰς τούτων μητέρας οὔτε διὰ παρενθέτων προσώπων, ἀλλὰ πασῶν τῶν εἰς αὐτοὺς γινομένων παρὰ τῶν πατέρων φιλοτιμιῶν ὑπὸ τὴν ἁγιωτάτην ἐκκλησίαν, ἐξ ἧς εἰσι οἱ τοῦτο ἁμαρτάνοντες, ἐρχομένων. 4. Ὅπερ γὰρ οἱ ἱεροὶ κανόνες κωλύουσι, τοῦτο καὶ ἡμεῖς διὰ τῶν ἡμετέρων εἴργομεν νόμων. 5. Εἰ δὲ καὶ ἐσχηματισμένη τις γένοιτο δῆθεν ἐνοχὴ ἐν προσποιήσει δανειακῶν ἢ ἄλλων συμβολαίων ὑπεύθυνον ποιοῦσα δῆθεν τὸν τῆς τοιαύτης φθορᾶς μετασχόντα καὶ ταύτην ἀνίσχυρον εἶναι βουλόμεθα καὶ τὴν τῶν τοιούτων δόσιν οὐκ εἰς τὸ πρόσωπον, εἰς ὅπερ ἐκτέθηται τὰ τῆς συγγραφῆς, ἀλλ' εἰς τὴν ἁγιωτάτην ἐκκλησίαν ἔρχεσθαι.

D. xv k. Nov. Constantinopoli Lampadio et Oreste vv. cc. conss.

[45] Ὁ αὐτος βασιλεὺς Ἰουλιανῷ ἐπάρχῳ πραιτωρίων. pr. Θεσπίζομεν, εἴ τις τελευτῶν εὐσεβῆ ποιοῖτο διατύπωσιν ἢ κατὰ ἐνστάσεως τρόπον ἢ κατὰ ληγάτον ἢ κατὰ fideicommisson ἢ κατὰ mortis causa δωρεὰν ἢ καθ' ἕτερον οἱονδήποτε νόμιμον, εἴτε ἐπισκήψειε τῷ κατὰ καιρὸν ἐπισκόπῳ πρόνοιαν τίθεσθαι τοῦ πληρωθῆναι τὰ παρ' αὐτοῦ βεβουλευμένα, εἴτε καὶ of one year, to be calculated from the time that this Our divine law should be made known. Thus, after the lapse of a year, if the circumstances of their communal life are found to remain in the same form, the penalties prescribed in this Our divine law shall apply.

Given January 18, in the consulship of Decius (529).

[44] The same Augustus to Julian, Praetorian Prefect. pr. Although the sacred canons permit neither the most reverend presbyters nor deacons or subdeacons to marry after their election, but grant only the most pious singers and readers this right, We see certain persons showing contempt for the sacred canons and begetting children by women to whom, according to priestly law, they cannot be joined. 1. Since, then, the punishment for this offence consisted in mere loss of priestly office, and since Our laws desire that the sacred canons possess no less force than the laws, We decree that the provisions of the sacred canons shall apply to them as if they had been written in the civil laws, and all offenders shall be stripped of the priesthood, of the divine ministry, and of the very office that they hold. 2. For as such conduct had been prohibited by the holy canons, so too has it been checked by Our laws; and, in addition to the aforementioned punishment of expulsion from the priesthood, the children that have been or will be born of such a foul act of mutual corruption shall not be legitimate, but rather shall partake of the ignominy of their begetting. 3. We make such children the same as the laws define those begotten of incestuous or nefarious marriages: they shall be considered neither natural nor spurious, but utterly destitute and unworthy to inherit from their parents; nor can they or their mothers receive a gift from the fathers or through third parties, but all munificence made on their behalf by the fathers shall fall to the holy church to which they who commit this sin belong. 4. What the sacred canons forbid, We too prohibit by Our laws. 5. If, though, some manner of liability (enoché) is feigned on the pretense of a debt or other contract, making him namely who participated in such vice subject to payment, We desire that this too be void and that the payment go not to the person indicated in the contract but to the most Holy Church.

Given October 18, at Constantinople, in the consulship of the viri clarissimi Lampadius and Orestes (530).

[45] The same Augustus to Julian, Praetorian Prefect. pr. We decree that if a dying person makes a pious disposition, whether by the institution of the heir, by legacy, by trust, by gift in anticipation of death, or by another legal means, and whether he provides for the fulfillment of his wishes by placing this charge upon the current bishop or is silent in regard thereto, or on the contrary he σιγήσειε τοῦτο, εἴτε καὶ τοὐναντίον ἀπαγορεύσειεν, ἀνάγκην ἔχειν τοὺς κληρονόμους τὸ ἐπιταχθὲν ποιεῖν καὶ πληροῦν ἐκ τρόπου παντός. εἰ δὲ τοῦτο ἑκόντες μὴ ποιήσαιεν, τηνικαῦτα τοὺς κατὰ τόπον θεοφιλεστάτους ἐπισκόπους περιεργάζεσθαι ταῦτα καὶ ἀπαιτεῖν αὐτοὺς πάντα πληροῦν κατὰ τὴν βουλὴν τοῦ τελευτήσαντος. 1. Ἀλλ' εἰ μὲν οἰκοδομὴν ἐκκλησίας ἐπιτάξειεν ὁ διαθέμενος, εἴσω τριετίας πάντως παρασκευάζειν αὐτὴν πληροῦσθαι, εἰ δὲ ξενῶνος ποίησιν, εἴσω ἑνὸς ἐνιαυτοῦ μόνον[xi] τοῦτο ποιεῖν ἀναγκάζεσθαι, ὡς ἱκανοῦ τοῦ χρόνου τούτου καθεστῶτος πληρῶσαι τὰ βεβουλευμένα τοῖς τετελευτηκόσι· δυνατὸν ὂν καὶ οἶκον μισθώσασθαι καὶ τοὺς ἀρρώστους ἐγκατακλῖναι, ἄχρις οὗ τὰ τῆς οἰκοδομίας τοῦ ξενῶνος περαιωθείη. 1a. Εἰ δέ τινα δοῦναι πρὸς ἅπαξ εἰς εὐσεβεῖς αἰτίας προσταχθεῖεν, παραχρῆμα καταναγκάζειν[xii] αὐτοὺς τοῦτο ποιεῖν, τουτέστι μετὰ τὴν τῆς διαθήκης ἐμφάνισιν καὶ τὸ καταδέξασθαι τὸν κλῆρον ἢ τὸ πρεσβεῖον τοὺς τούτοις τετιμημένους. 1b. Εἰ δὲ παρέλθοι ὁ εἰρημένος χρόνος καὶ μήτε ἡ ἐκκλησία ἢ ὁ ξενὼν οἰκοδομηθείη μήτε ξενοδοχοίη ὁ τοῦτο ἐπιτεταγμένος, τηνικαῦτα αὐτοὺς τοὺς θεοφιλεστάτους ἐπισκόπους ἀπαιτεῖν τὰ ὑπὲρ τούτου καταλελειμμένα καὶ εἰς τοῦτο προσηκόντως ἐπιζητούμενα, καὶ ποιεῖσθαι καὶ τὰς οἰκοδομίας τῶν ἁγιωτάτων ἐκκλησιῶν καὶ τὴν τῶν ξενώνων ἢ γεροντοκομείων ἢ ὀρφανοτροφείων κατασκευὴν ἢ πτωχοτροφείων ἢ νοσοκομείων ποίησιν ἤτοι τῶν αἰχμαλώτων ἀγορασίαν ἢ ἑτέραν οἱανδήποτε πρᾶξιν εὐσεβῆ τῷ τελευτήσαντι δόξασαν, προβάλλεσθαι δὲ τοὺς ταῦτα διοικήσοντας ξενοδόχους ἢ ὀρφανοτρόφους ἢ βρεφοτρόφους ἢ γεροντοκόμους ἢ ἁπλῶς τῶν εὐσεβῶν πράξεων διοικητάς τε καὶ ἐπιμελητάς, οὐκέτι δυναμένων μετὰ τὴν τοῦ εἰρημένου χρόνου διαδρομὴν καὶ τὴν εἰρημένην ἀγνωμοσύνην τῶν τοῦτο μὴ ποιησάντων ἐμβάλλειν ἑαυτοὺς εἰς τὴν τῶν εἰρημένων πραγμάτων διοίκησιν ἢ τοὺς θεοφιλεστάτους ἐπισκόπους ἀφιστᾶν τῆς αὐτῶν διοικήσεως. 2. Τῶν λαμπροτάτων ἀρχόντων τῶν ἐπαρχιῶν ἀνάγκην ἐπιτιθέντων τοῖς κληρονόμοις ἐκ τρόπου παντὸς ταῦτα πληροῦν. 2a. Καὶ γὰρ δὴ καὶ τοῖς παλαιοῖς διηγόρευται νόμοις ἀνάγκην ἐπιτιθέναι πληροῦν τὰς τῶν τελευτώντων βουλὰς τοὺς ἔχειν ἐφιεμένους, ἅπερ ἐκεῖνοι κατέλιπον.

3. Τοὺς δὲ θεοφιλεστάτους ἐπισκόπους, εἰ μέν τινας ῥητῶς οἱ τελευτῶντες ἐπιστήσαιεν τοῖς πράγμασιν, οἷον ξενοδόχους ἢ πτωχοτρόφους ἢ νοσοκόμους ἢ βρεφοτρόφους ἢ ὀρφανοτρόφους ἢ γεροντοκόμους ἢ παραμοναρίους ἢ οἰκονόμους ἢ ἁπλῶς τῶν εὐσεβῶν πράξεων διοικητάς, ἐκείνους μὲν ἐᾶν ἔχεσθαι τῆς διοικήσεως, αὐτοὺς δὲ μὴ διοικεῖν μέν, τὴν δὲ διοίκησιν αὐτῶν ἐποπτεύειν καὶ ὀρθῶς μὲν ἔχουσαν ἐπαινεῖν, κατά τι δὲ παραβαινομένην ἐπανορθοῦν, κακίστης δὲ τῆς διοικήσεως γινομένης καὶ ἀπελαύνειν ἐκείνους καὶ ἑτέρους ἐγκαθιστᾶν ἐννοοῦντας τὸ τοῦ μεγάλου θεοῦ δέος, καὶ τὴν φοβερὰν τῆς μεγάλης καὶ ἀτελευτήτου κρίσεως ἡμέραν, πρὸς ἣν αὐτοὺς ἀποβλέποντας προσήκει πάντα πράττειν μετὰ τῆς πρὸς

xi μόνου
xii καταναγκάζεσθαι

forbids him, it will be incumbent on the heirs to carry out his injunction and fulfill it in every way. If they do not do this willingly, then the most reverend local bishops shall investigate this matter and demand that they perform everything according to the wish of the deceased. 1. If the testator orders the construction of a church, they shall see to it that it is completed entirely within three years; if the building of a hospice, they shall be compelled to do this within one year alone, for this is a sufficient period of time for carrying out the wishes of the deceased: they can rent a house and lay the infirm up in it until the construction of the hospice is complete. 1a. If they are commanded to give something one time for pious purposes they shall immediately be compelled to do so, that is, after the will has been made known and those who have been awarded the inheritance or a legacy have received them. 1b. But if the aforementioned time elapses, and neither the church or hospice has been built, nor he who was charged with the housing of strangers does so, then the most reverend bishops themselves shall claim the funds left behind and accordingly required for this purpose and shall effect the construction of the most holy churches and the erection of the hospices, hospitals for the elderly, or orphanages, the building of poorhouses or infirmaries, the ransom of captives, or whatever other pious purpose chosen by the deceased. And they shall nominate administrators for these projects: superintendents of hospices, orphanages, foundling-hospitals, or hospitals for the elderly, or simply stewards and curatores for these pious undertakings. After the lapse of the aforementioned time and because of the aforementioned ingratitude of those who failed to do this, the latter shall no longer be able either to insert themselves into the administration of the aforementioned undertakings or to remove the most reverend bishops from their administration. 2. The viri clarissimi provincial governors shall by every means impose on the heirs the necessity of fulfilling these things. 2a. And, indeed, it has already been established by the ancient laws that they shall impose the necessity of fulfilling the wishes of the departed on those who wish to have what they have left behind.

3. If the deceased have explicitly placed certain persons over their bequests as superintendents of hospices, poorhouses, infirmaries, foundling-hospitals, orphanages, or hospitals for the elderly, or as watchmen (paramonarioi) or stewards (of churches), or in a word as the administrators of pious undertakings, the most reverend bishops shall permit these persons to exercise the administration. The bishops shall not undertake it themselves but shall monitor the administration of the latter, and praise it if it is conducted with integrity, correct it if it should in some way go astray. But if the administration should utterly degenerate, they shall both drive out these persons and install others who shall reflect on the fear of mighty God and on the terrible day of θεὸν συντεταγμένης γνώμης. 3a. Εἰ δὲ μὴ ῥητῶς τινας οἱ τελευτῶντες ἐπιστήσαιεν ταῖς διοικήσεσιν, ἀλλ' ἐν τῇ τῶν κληρονόμων ἐξουσίᾳ τὸ πᾶν ἀπόθοιντο, οἱ δὲ ῥᾳθυμήσαιεν, τηνικαῦτα αὐτοὺς τοὺς θεοφιλεστάτους ἐπισκόπους καὶ διοικεῖν καὶ προβάλλεσθαι πτωχοτρόφους ἢ νοσοκόμους ἢ ξενοδόχους ἢ ὀρφανοτρόφους ἢ βρεφοτρόφους ἢ γεροντοκόμους ἢ οἰκονόμους ἢ παραμοναρίους ἢ διοικητάς, κἀνταῦθα τὸ πρὸς τὸν μέγαν θεὸν κατὰ νοῦν ἔχοντας σέβας, ὥστε ἐκ τρόπου παντὸς καὶ ἐκ πάσης ὁδοῦ καὶ ἐκ πάσης μηχανῆς εἰς ἔργον ἄγεσθαι τὰ εὐσεβῶς διατεταγμένα.

4. Ὑπὲρ δὲ τοῦ χρόνου παντός, ὃν ἂν ὑπέρθοιντο πρᾶξαι τὰ διατυπωθέντα οἱ γεγραμμένοι κληρονόμοι, ἀπαιτεῖσθαι αὐτοὺς καὶ καρποὺς καὶ προσόδους καὶ πᾶσαν νόμιμον ἐπαύξησιν ἀπὸ τοῦ καιροῦ τῆς τοῦ διαθεμένου τελευτῆς θεσπίζομεν, οὐ σκοπουμένης τῆς moras ἀπὸ προκατάρξεως ἢ αἰτιάσεως, ἀλλ' αὐτῷ τῷ νόμῳ δοκούσης γίνεσθαι τῆς καλουμένης moras χώραν λαμβανούσης τῆς τῶν καρπῶν καὶ τῶν τοιούτων προσθήκης. 5. Αὐτοῦ τούτου κρατοῦντος, εἰ καὶ μὴ παρὰ κληρονόμου, ἀλλὰ παρὰ fideicommissariu ἢ ληγαταρίου καταλειφθείη τὸ τοιοῦτο εὐσεβὲς πρεσβεῖον καὶ τοῦτο καταδέξηται ὁ τῷ πρεσβείῳ τετιμημένος· καὶ τηνικαῦτα δὲ ἄδειαν εἶναι τοῖς θεοφιλεστάτοις ἐπισκόποις ἀπαιτεῖν τοὺς τοιούτοις τισὶ τετιμημένους πρᾶξαι τὰ διαταχθέντα.

6. Εἰ δὲ ῥᾳθυμήσαιεν οἱ κατὰ τόπον θεοφιλέστατοι ἐπίσκοποι τοῦτο πρᾶξαι, ἴσως ἐκθεραπευθέντες παρὰ τῶν γεγραμμένων κληρονόμων ἢ legatariων ἢ fideicommissariων, ἄδεια ἔσται καὶ τῷ μητροπολίτῃ τῆς ἐπαρχίας ἢ τῷ ἀρχιεπισκόπῳ τῆς ἐκεῖσε διοικήσεως ταῦτα μανθάνοντι ἀναζητεῖν καὶ καταναγκάζειν τὸ εὐσεβὲς ἔργον ἢ τὴν εὐσεβῆ φιλοτιμίαν ἐκ τρόπου πληροῦσθαι παντὸς καὶ παντὶ τῷ βουλομένῳ τῶν πολιτῶν τοῦτο πράττειν· κοινοῦ γὰρ ὄντος τοῦ τῆς εὐσεβείας λόγου κοινὰς προσήκει καὶ τὰς σπουδὰς τῆς τούτου καθεστάναι πληρώσεως· ἔχοντος παντὸς ἄδειαν ἐκ τοῦδε ἡμῶν τοῦ νόμου κινεῖν τὸν ex lege condicticion καὶ ἀπαιτεῖν τὰ καταλελειμμένα πληροῦσθαι.

6a. Εἰδότος τοῦ ῥᾳθυμοῦντος τούτων θεοφιλεστάτου ἐπισκόπου, ὡς καὶ αὐτὸς πρὸς ταῖς ἐξ οὐρανοῦ ποιναῖς καὶ βασιλικῆς κινήσεως ὑπὲρ τῆς τοιαύτης ἀμελείας πειραθείη. 7. Ὅπως δ' ἂν ἔτι μείζονι φόβῳ κατασχεθέντες οἱ κληρονόμοι τῶν τελευτώντων ἢ οἱ ταῖς τοιαύταις ὅλως ἀγαθαῖς πράξεσι βεβαρημένοι μὴ τὴν τούτων ποίησιν διαναβάλλοιντο, καὶ τοῦτο θεσπίζομεν, ὥστε, εἰ ἐνοχληθέντες παρὰ τῶν θεοφιλεστάτων ἐπισκόπων οἱ τούτοις τετιμημένοι εἶτα διαναβάλλοιντο, ὡς καὶ τῆς τῶν ἀρχόντων εἰσπράξεως δεηθῆναι, τηνικαῦτα μὴ μόνον αὐτοὺς ἁπλοῦν τὸ καταλελειμμένον εἰσπράττεσθαι, ἀλλὰ πάντως διπλάσιον. 7a. Εἰ γὰρ ἐν τοῖς παλαιοῖς ἦν τινα θέματα, ἐφ' ὧν ἐξ ἀρνήσεως διπλάσια τὰ τῆς καταδίκης ἠπείγετο, πῶς οὐ κἀνταῦθα τοὺς μηδὲ ἑκόντας ποιήσαντας, ἀλλὰ καὶ χρόνον ἀναμείναντας καὶ ὕστερον ὀχληθέντας παρὰ τῶν θεοφιλεστάτων

the great and final judgment; and with that set before their eyes, they shall do everything with their mind intent on God. 3a. If the deceased have not explicitly placed certain persons over the administration of their bequests but have placed everything in the power of the heirs, and these should be negligent, then the most reverend bishops themselves shall both undertake the administration and nominate superintendents of poorhouses, infirmaries, hospices, orphanages, foundling-hospitals, or hospitals for the elderly, or stewards or watchmen, or administrators, who shall accordingly bear reverence for great God in their heart, so that in every manner, in every way, and by every means the pious dispositions of the deceased are implemented.

4. For the entire time during which the appointed heirs delay to fulfill the dispositions, We decree that the fruits, revenue, and all lawful increase shall be claimed from them from the time of the death of the testator. Liability for so-called delays (morae) shall not be reckoned from the initiation of proceedings or from the registration of a claim; but as if by decree of the law itself, so-called liability for delay shall apply to the accession of fruits and the like.[107] 5. The same shall apply if such a pious bequest has been left not by way of an heir but by way of a trustee or legatee, and he who has been awarded the bequest has received it. Even then shall the most reverend bishops be entitled to call upon such persons awarded these legacies to carry out the dispositions of the will.

6. If the most reverend local bishops neglect to do this, having perhaps been courted by the appointed heirs, legatees, or trustees, the metropolitan or archbishop of the diocese shall be permitted, upon learning of the matter, to investigate and to ensure by force that the pious work or act of pious munificence is executed in every detail, and every willing citizen is also permitted to do this. For as the scope of piety is universal, so is it fitting that zeal for its fulfillment also be universal. Anyone, therefore, is permitted by this Our law to bring a claim for restitution (condictio) and to demand that such bequests be executed.

6a. The most reverend bishop who disregards these stipulations shall know that he too will feel, besides the punishment of Heaven, also imperial chastisement for such inaction. 7. That the heirs of the deceased or those charged with such goodly undertakings, filled with still greater dread, may not defer their execution, We decree this too: that if, harassed by the most reverend bishops, those awarded such bequests persist in deferring them, so that it becomes necessary that the governors collect them, then they shall be sued not merely for the simple amount of the bequest but indeed for double. 7a. For if there were cases in the ancient laws in which double damages for denial were exacted ἐπισκόπων εἶτα μηδὲ τούτοις εὐθὺς εἴξαντας, δεηθέντας δὲ καὶ ἀρχικῆς ὀχλήσεως, τῇ τοῦ διπλασίονος ἀπαιτήσει προσήκει σωφρονίζεσθαι;

[107] That is, to profits accrued between the death of the testator and the initiation of litigation.

8. Εἰ δὲ οἱ τελευτῶντες τοὺς ἑαυτῶν κληρονόμους βουληθεῖεν, ἡνίκα μέλλοιεν τελευτᾶν, πρᾶξίν τινα πληροῦν εὐσεβῆ, ἀλλ' οὐκ ἐν τῇ αὐτῶν ζωῇ, καὶ τοῦτο φυλάττεσθαι καὶ μὴ ἐν μέσῳ τοὺς κληρονόμους ἀναγκάζεσθαι πράττειν τι, ὧν ὁ διαθέμενος μετὰ τὴν αὐτῶν τελευτὴν ἠβουλήθη γενέσθαι, τελευτῶντας δὲ αὐτοὺς ἀνάγκην ἔχειν ἐκ τρόπου παντὸς ταῦτα πληροῦν. ἀναβολῆς δέ τινος παρὰ τῶν ἐκείνου κληρονόμων γενομένης ἀνάγκη ταῦτα γίνεσθαι, ἅπερ ἔμπροσθεν διετυπώσαμεν.

9. Εἰ δέ τινα τῶν καλουμένων ἀνναλίων πρεσβείων καταλειφθείη ἢ δωρηθείη κλήρῳ τυχὸν ἢ μοναστηρίοις ἢ ἀσκητρίαις ἢ διακονίσσαις ἢ πτωχείοις ἢ ξενῶσιν ἢ νοσοκομείοις ἢ βρεφοτροφείοις ἢ τοῖς τῶν ἁγιωτάτων ἐκκλησιῶν πτωχοῖς ἢ ἁπλῶς συστήμασί τισιν εὐαγέσιν ἢ ὅλως οὐκ ἀπηγορευμένοις τῶν ἐκ πλήθους ἠθροισμένων, βουληθεῖεν δὲ κατά τινα καιρὸν οἱ τηνικαῦτα εὑρισκόμενοι χρυσίον ὑπὲρ τῆς τοιαύτης πράξεως λαβόντες διαλύεσθαι, μὴ ἐξέστω τοῦτο ποιεῖν μηδὲ τὸ γινόμενον κύριον εἶναι, ἀλλὰ καὶ ἔκπτωσιν τῶν χρημάτων ὁ ταῦτα ὠνησάμενος ἢ διαλυσάμενος ὑπομενέτω. 10. Ἐπείτοιγε ἀνάγκη τοῖς μὲν ἔν τινι μέρει τοῦ χρόνου γενομένοις εἶναι χρημάτων ἀφθονίαν, τοῖς δέ γε ἐπιγενομένοις παντελῆ τῶν καταλελειμμένων στέρησιν, οὐ φυλαχθήσεται δὲ οὐδὲ αὐτὸ τὸ τῶν ἀνναλίων ὄνομα οὐδὲ ἡ διηνεκὴς τοῦ τελευτήσαντος μνήμη, δι' ἣν καὶ τὸ ἀννάλιον τοῦτο καταλέλοιπεν, ἀλλ' εὐθὺς ἀποσβεσθήσεται τῇ τῶν καταλελειμμένων συναπολλύμενον ἐκποιήσει. 11. Μένειν τοίνυν διηνεκῶς αὐτοὺς ἐνεχομένους ταῖς τοιαύταις δόσεσι θεσπίζομεν, ὥστε καὶ εἴ τις γένοιτο ἐκποίησις, καὶ ταύτην ἄκυρον εἶναι καὶ τοὺς ὁτεδήποτε προστησομένους τῶν εὐαγῶν οἴκων ἄδειαν ἔχειν κινεῖν καὶ ἀπαιτεῖν αὐτά, οὐδεμιᾶς χρόνου παραγραφῆς ἀντικειμένης αὐτοῖς διὰ τὸ καθ' ἕκαστον ἔτος τὴν τοιαύτην τίκτεσθαι ἀγωγήν.

12. Ἀλλ' ὑποθήκην εἶναι τὰ τοῦ καταλείψαντος πράγματα τοῖς τοιούτοις πρεσβείοις, ὥστε ἄδειαν ἔχειν ἐξ αὐτῶν τῶν πραγμάτων τὸ ἱκανὸν ταῖς εὐαγέσι πράξεσι περιγίνεσθαι οὐ μόνον ἐπὶ τοῖς καταλελειμμένοις, ἀλλὰ καὶ ἐπὶ καρποῖς αὐτῶν καὶ προσόδοις καὶ πάσῃ νομίμῳ ἐπαυξήσει· χρονίας, καθὰ προείρηται, οὐδὲ τοῖς κατέχουσι παραγραφῆς ἁρμόζειν δυναμένης, ὁπόσον ἂν τις ἀριθμήσειε χρόνον. 13. Πλὴν εἰ μὴ μεταξὺ τοῦ τε τῷ ἀνναλίῳ πρεσβείῳ βεβαρημένου τοῦ τε κατὰ τοὺς ἱερατικοὺς κανόνας καὶ τοὺς ἡμετέρους νόμους προεστῶτος τῆς τοιαύτης ἀπαιτήσεως γένοιτο σύμφωνον βουλόμενον πρόσοδον ἀντὶ τοῦ ἀνναλίου πρεσβείου δοθῆναι παρὰ τούτου τοῦ βεβαρημένου εὐθαλῆ καὶ δημοσίοις πολλοῖς οὐχ ὑποκειμένην, ἀλλὰ καὶ προσθήκην ἔχουσαν πάντως μὲν οὐκ ἐλάττονα τοῦ τετάρτου μέρους τῆς καθαρᾶς προσόδου, ἐπείτοιγε ὁπόσον ἂν μεταξὺ αὐτῶν ἐπὶ τὸ πλέον δόξειεν. 14. Εἰ μὲν γάρ τι τοιοῦτο ἔγγραφον γένηται σύμφωνον καὶ δοθείη ἡ τοιαύτη πρόσοδος καὶ ἀναληφθείη ἐγγράφοις upon conviction, how should these persons not be chastised by the demand for double, who neither acted voluntarily, but instead wasted time, nor, when admonished by the most reverend bishops, immediately yielded to them, but required the intervention of the governor?

8. If the deceased wish their heirs to carry out some pious cause when they themselves should near death, but not while they yet live, this too shall be observed; and the heirs shall not be compelled to do anything in the meanwhile that the testators wished to occur after their death. But once they pass away, it shall be necessary to fulfill these wishes in every way. If any delay arises because of the heirs, then the provisions We have ordained above must be applied.

9. If any so-called annuity (annalia) happens to be left or given to the clergy, monasteries, female ascetics, deaconesses, poorhouses, hospices, infirmaries, foundling-hospitals, or to the poor of the most holy churches, or in a word to any holy societies or to any of the popular associations that are not prohibited; and if those who are found in office at that time wish to reach a settlement, receiving money for such an undertaking, they will not be permitted to do so, and if it is done, it will not be valid; but he who has bargained or negotiated for such a payment shall also suffer the loss of the money. 10. For indeed an abundance of wealth would necessarily result to the recipients, who are there for a brief period of time, but utter deprivation of the bequests to those who come after them; neither would the very word "annuity" nor the eternal memory of the deceased, for which reason he left behind the annuity, be honored, but it would instantly be extinguished, destroyed by the alienation of his bequest. 11. Therefore, We decree that they shall remain obligated to such payments in perpetuity, so that even if an alienation occurs, it shall be void and the heads of the holy houses at any time may sue for and claim the bequest, without any limit of time imposed to their disadvantage, since this action is renewed every year.

12. The property of the deceased will moreover be subject to a security arrangement (hypotheca) on such bequests, so that from that property enough shall remain for holy undertakings, not only with respect to the bequests but also with respect to the fruits and revenues thereof and to any legal increase. Nor, as has been said, can any prescription of time aid those in possession, whatever the amount of time one might calculate, 13. unless a consensual wish should arise between the person burdened with the annuity and the person who by the most sacred canons and by Our laws should oversee the collection thereof, that instead of the annual legacy an abundant rental should be negotiated between them, not subject to many public liturgies, to be paid by the former, bringing in additional funds not less than one-fourth of the whole rental or whatever still greater amount. 14. If such a consensual agreement is made in writing, and the rental is indicated and recorded in the written contract συνθήκαις καὶ διαλύσεσι καὶ τοῦτο ἐμφανὲς ἐπὶ πράξεως ὑπομνημάτων κατασταίη, ἀργεῖν τὴν ἀπαίτησιν τοῦ ἀνναλίου ληγάτου κατὰ τοῦ ταύτῃ βεβαρημένου θεσπίζομεν, αὐτὴν δὲ τὴν πρόσοδον ἀντὶ τοῦ πρεσβείου καθεστάναι διηνεκῶς εἰς τοῦτο ἀφωρισμένην καὶ ἐκποιεῖσθαι παρ' οὐδενὸς καθ' οἱονδήποτε ἐκποιήσεως σχῆμα δυναμένην. 15. Οὐδενὸς δὲ τοιούτου παρακολουθοῦντος ὑποκεῖσθαι διηνεκῶς κατὰ τὸ ἔμπροσθεν παρ' ἡμῶν εἰρημένον τῇ δόσει τῶν ἀνναλίων πρεσβείων τοῖς τοιούτοις βεβαρημένους θεσπίζομεν, ὥστε τὸ ὄνομα καὶ τὴν μνήμην τοῦ τελευτήσαντος τοῦ τε ἀνναλίου πρεσβείου ἐπ' αὐτῶν τῶν ἔργων διηνεκῶς διασώζεσθαι.

D. xv k. Nov. Constantinopoli Lampadio et Oreste conss.

[46] Ὁ αὐτὸς βασιλεὺς Ἰουλιανῷ ἐπάρχῳ πραιτωρίων. pr. Τοῖς ἱεροῖς ἡμῶν νόμοις οἰόμεθα χρῆναι καὶ τοῦτον προσθεῖναι τὸν ἐξ ἀρετῆς, ἀλλ' οὐκ ἐκ χρόνων τὰς εὐαγεῖς ἡγεμονίας παρέχοντα, ὥστε ἐπὶ τῶν εὐαγῶν μοναστηρίων ἢ ἀσκητηρίων μὴ πάντως τελευτῶντος τοῦ ἡγουμένου ἢ τῆς ἡγουμένης τὸν ἐφεξῆς ἢ τὴν δευτέραν γενέσθαι (σύνισμεν γὰρ τῇ φύσει οὔτε πάντας ὁμοίως ἀγαθοὺς οὔτε πάντας ἐν ἴσῳ ποιούσῃ κακούς), ἀλλ' ὃν ἂν ὅ τε ἀγαθὸς βίος καὶ σεμνὸς τρόπος καὶ ἡ περὶ τὴν ἄσκησιν συντονία καὶ τὸ κοινὸν τῶν λοιπῶν μοναχῶν πλήρωμα ἢ τὸ πλεῖστον αὐτῶν ἐπιτήδειον πρὸς τοῦτο νομίσειε καὶ τῶν ἁγίων εὐαγγελίων προκειμένων ἕλοιτο, ἐπὶ τὴν ἡγεμονίαν καλεῖσθαι. 1. Ὥστε, εἰ μὲν ὁ πρῶτος μετὰ τὸν τελευτήσαντα χρηστὸς εἴη καὶ μοναχῶν ἄρχειν ἄξιος, ἐκεῖνον τῶν ἄλλων προκρίνεσθαι· εἰ δὲ ὁ μετ' ἐκεῖνον, ὁμοίως ἐπ' αὐτὸν φέρεσθαι τὴν τοῦ ἡγουμένου ψῆφον. 2. Εἰ δὲ οὐδεὶς τούτων ἄξιος φαίνοιτο, τηνικαῦτα τὸν ἐκ πάντων ἐπιτήδειον, οἱουδήποτε ἂν εἴη βαθμοῦ, προχειρίζεσθαι ἡγούμενον, βίου τε ὄντα σεμνοῦ καὶ πολιτείας σεμνῆς καὶ περισώζειν τοὺς πιστευθέντας αὐτῷ δυνάμενον· προσῆκον ὂν πᾶσαν ἀρχὴν καὶ πᾶσαν ἀνθρώπων ἐπιστασίαν οὐκ ἐκ χρόνων οὐδὲ ἐκ κλήρων οὐδὲ ἐκ τυχηρῶν περιστάσεων, ἀλλ' ἐξ ἐπιλογῆς καὶ ἐκ τοῦ καλλίονος γίνεσθαι καὶ τὴν παρὰ πάντων μαρτυρίαν εἶναι τῷ τάγματι τάξιν.

3. Γνώριμα δὲ ταῦτα γίνεσθαι τῷ κατὰ τόπον θεοφιλεστάτῳ ἐπισκόπῳ, ὥστε αὐτὸν μανθάνοντα τὸν ἐπιλεχθέντα καὶ ὀρθῶς ἔχειν τοῦτο δοκιμάζοντα σύμψηφόν τε γίνεσθαι τοῖς ἐπιλεξαμένοις καὶ προάγειν αὐτὸν ἐπὶ τὴν τοῦ ἡγουμένου τάξιν. 4. Δοκιμάζειν δὲ δεῖ τὴν αὐτῶν ἐπιλογὴν τὸν κατὰ καιρὸν πατριάρχην καὶ τοὺς κατὰ τόπον θεοφιλεστάτους ἐπισκόπους, ἔχοντας καὶ αὐτοὺς τὸ κρίμα τοῦ δεσπότου θεοῦ καὶ τὴν μέλλουσαν κρίσιν εὐλαβουμένους, εἰ μὴ κατ' ἐπιλογήν, ἀλλὰ πρός τι πάθος ἀποβλέψαντες ἀνθρώπινον τὴν προβολὴν ποιήσονται ἐχόντων αὐτῶν καὶ ἐν τούτῳ τῷ βίῳ καὶ ἐν τῷ μέλλοντι τὴν ἐκ τοῦ θεοῦ ποινήν, οἷα τῆς αὐτῶν ἀμελείας πολλαῖς ψυχαῖς ἁμαρτημάτων αἰτίας παρεχομένης.

and settlement, and this is made known by registry in the public records, We decree that the claim for the collection of the annuity from him burdened with it shall lapse, and the rental shall take the place of the annuity, dedicated to this purpose for all time and insusceptible of alienation by any person through any manner of alienation whatsoever. 15. But if no such agreement ensues, We decree that they who are burdened therewith will be subject to the payment of the annuity perpetually, according to what has been said by Us above, so that the name and memory of the deceased and of the annuity itself may forever be preserved by these very deeds.

Given October 18, at Constantinople, in the consulship of Lampadius and Orestes (530).

[46] The same Augustus to Julian, Praetorian Prefect. pr. We believe that it is necessary to add to Our sacred laws this law, which bestows the holy positions of abbot or abbess according to virtue, not time served. Thus, if an abbot or abbess should die, the next man or the second woman shall not necessarily assume the leadership of holy monasteries or hermitages – for We are aware that nature makes neither all similarly good nor evil in equal measure – but that person shall be called to lead whom an honest life and worthy character and dedication to asceticism (distinguishes), and whom the general assembly of the other monks or the majority of them deems fit for this office and, with the holy gospels open before them, elects. 1. Thus, if the foremost person after the deceased should be upright and worthy to govern the monks, he shall be preferred to the others; if the person after him, then likewise the nomination as abbot shall fall to him. 2. If neither of them seems worthy, then the one out of all of them who is suitable, whatever his rank, shall be elected abbot, being a person of honorable life and honorable conduct and able to save the persons entrusted to his care. For it is proper that every office and every authority over men should derive not from seniority, lots, or fortuitous circumstances, but from choice and preeminence, and that the testimony of all should guide precedence within their ranks.

3. These proceedings shall be communicated to the most reverend local bishop, who, upon learning of the person selected and deeming that the choice is right, shall give his assent to their choice and promote him to the rank of abbot. 4. Their choice must also be reviewed by the current Patriarch and the most reverend local bishops, who themselves shall face the condemnation of the Lord God and beware the coming judgment, if they make this promotion not according to election but with regard for some human passion, for they face the punishment of God both in this life and in the next, as their negligence gives many souls causes for sin.

5. Τούτων πάντων καὶ ἐπὶ τῶν εὐλαβεστάτων γυναικῶν ἢ παρθένων τῶν ἡγουμένων εὐαγῶν ἀσκητηρίων ἤτοι μοναστηρίων κρατούντων. 6. Τῆς λοιπῆς ἱερατικῆς τάξεως ἁπάσης τῆς τοῦ θεοῦ λειτουργίας κατὰ τοὺς ἑαυτῆς βαθμοὺς προϊούσης καὶ οὐδὲν ἐκ τοῦ παρόντος ἡμῶν καινιζομένης νόμου.

D. xv k. Dec. Constantinopoli Lampadio et Oreste conss.

[47] Ὁ αὐτὸς βασιλεὺς Ἰωάννῃ ἐπάρχῳ πραιτωρίων. pr. Θεσπίζομεν μηδένα εἰς ἐπισκοπὴν προχειρίζεσθαι, πλὴν εἰ μὴ τά τε ἄλλα χρηστὸς καὶ ἀγαθὸς εἴη καὶ μήτε γυναικὶ συνοικοίη μήτε παίδων εἴη πατήρ, ἀλλ' ἀντὶ μὲν γυναικὸς προσκαρτεροίη τῇ ἁγιωτάτῃ ἐκκλησίᾳ, ἀντὶ δὲ παίδων ἅπαντα τὸν Χριστιανικὸν καὶ ὀρθόδοξον ἔχοι λαόν, γινώσκων οὕτως ἐξ ἀρχῆς τὰ περὶ τῆς διαδοχῆς τῶν θεοφιλεστάτων ἐπισκόπων ἡμᾶς διατυπῶσαι καὶ μετὰ ταύτης τῆς ἐννοίας προελθεῖν τὸν νόμον, καὶ τοὺς παρὰ ταῦτά τι πράττοντας ἢ πράξαντας ἁπάσης ἐπισκοπῆς ἀναξίους εἶναι. 1. Οἱ γὰρ μετὰ ταύτην ἡμῶν τὴν διάταξιν ποιῆσαί τινας ἐπισκόπους παρὰ τὴν ταύτης δύναμιν ἢ γενέσθαι θαρρήσαντες οὔτε ἐν ἐπισκόποις ἔσονται οὔτε μενοῦσιν ἐπὶ τῶν ἱερῶν, ἀλλ' ἐξελαθέντες αὐτῶν ἑτέροις δώσουσι χώραν χειροτονίας ἀκριβοῦς τε καὶ τῷ θεῷ διὰ πάντων ἀρεσκούσης.

D. IIII k. Aug. Constantinopoli post cons. Lampadii et Orestis.

[48] Idem A. Iohanni pp. pr. Si quis ad declinandam legem Falcidiam, cum desiderat totam suam substantiam pro redemptione captivorum relinquere, eos ipsos captivos scripserit heredes, ne videatur quasi incertis personis heredibus institutis iudicium suum oppugnandum reliquisse, sancimus huius talem institutionem pietatis intuitu valere et non esse respuendam. 1. Sed et si pauperes quidam scripserit heredes et non inveniatur certum ptochium vel certae ecclesiae pauperes, de quibus testator cogitaverit, sed hic incerto vocabulo pauperes fuerint heredes instituti, simili modo et huiusmodi institutionem valere decernimus. 2. Et si quidem captivos scripserit heredes, civitatis, in qua testator larem fovere ac degere noscitur, episcopus et oeconomus hereditatem suscipiant et omnimodo in redemptione captivorum procedat hereditas sive per annuos reditus sive per venditionem mobilium seu se moventium rerum: nullo penitus ex hoc lucro vel oeconomo vel episcopo vel sacrosanctae ecclesiae relinquendo. si enim propter hoc a speciali herede recessum est, ut non Falcidiae ratio inducatur, quomodo ferendum est hoc, quod in sacro venit, per Falcidiam vel aliam occasionem minui?

5. All these provisions shall also apply to the most pious women and virgins who preside over hermitages or convents. 6. The rest of the priestly order in the service of God shall be promoted according to their ranks and is not modified by Our present law.

Given November 17, at Constantinople, in the consulship of Lampadius and Orestes (530).

[47] The same Augustus to John, Praetorian Prefect. pr. We decree that no one shall be appointed bishop unless he is otherwise honest and good and neither shares his house with a wife nor is the father of children; but he shall be faithful to the Most Holy Church instead of a wife and he shall have the entire Christian orthodox laity instead of children, knowing that We regulated[108] the succession of the most reverend bishops in this way from the beginning, that a law went forth with this intention, and that those who have violated or shall violate these measures are altogether unworthy of the episcopate. 1. Those who after this Our decree dare to create or to become bishops contrary to its spirit shall neither be counted among bishops nor remain in the sacred service, but shall be driven out and make way for a strict appointment in every way pleasing to God.

Given July 29, at Constantinople, in the post-consulate of Lampadius and Orestes (531).

[48] The same Augustus to John, Praetorian Prefect. pr. If anyone wishes to leave his entire estate for the ransoming of captives and, in order to evade the Falcidian law, designates the captives themselves as his heirs, so that his judgment shall not be subject to objections, as if he had instituted uncertain persons as heirs, We decree that such an appointment shall be valid in the interest of piety and shall not be rejected. 1. And if anyone should designate the poor as his heirs, and a specific poorhouse or the poor of a specific church are not found indicated by the testator, but rather the poor were appointed his heirs in indefinite terms, a disposition of this sort shall in like manner be valid. 2. And if he appoints captives as his heirs, the bishop and steward of the city in which the testator is known to have kept his homestead and dwelt, shall receive the inheritance; and the inheritance shall go exclusively toward the ransoming of captives, whether by means of annual revenue or the sale of movable or self-moving property. No profit whatsoever shall remain for either the steward, or bishop, or holy church. For if a specific heir has been omitted so that the Falcidian law is not taken into account, how is it tolerable that what has been sold for a sacred purpose should be diminished by the Falcidian law or for any other reason?

[108] C. 1.3.41.2.

3. Ubi autem indiscrete pauperes scripti sunt heredes, ibi xenonem eius civitatis omnimodo hereditatem nancisci et per xenodochum in aegrotantes fieri patrimonii distributionem, secundum quod in captivis constituimus: vel per redituum annalium erogationem vel per venditionem rerum mobilium vel se moventium, ut ex his res immobiles comparentur et annuus victus aegrotantibus accedat. quis enim pauperior est hominibus, qui et inopia tenti sunt et in xenonem repositi et suis corporibus laborantes necessarium victum sibi non possunt adferre? 4. Licentia omnimodo danda et in priore et in secunda specie et actionem movere et debita exigere, ut in captivos vel in aegrotantes consumantur. si enim heredum eis et ius et nomen dedimus, sine Falcidiae tamen legis emolumento, necesse est eos et debita exigere et creditoribus respondere.

5. Sin autem ampliores in civitate xenones vel ptochia sint, ne incerta videatur pecuniarum datio, tunc ei xenoni vel ptochio, qui pauperior esse dignoscitur, easdem res vel pecunias adsignari: hoc videlicet discutiendo a viro reverentissimo locorum antistite et sub eo constitutis clericis. 6. Sin autem nullus xenon in civitate inveniatur, tunc secundum de captivis sanctionem pro tempore oeconomus sacrosanctae ecclesiae vel episcopus hereditatem accipiat et sine Falcidiae ratione pauperibus, qui in civitate sunt vel penitus mendicantes vel alia sustentatione egentes, eaedem pecuniae distribuantur.

7. Haec tamen omnia locum habere sancimus, quando non certi xenonis vel certi ptochii vel certae ecclesiae nominatio a testatore subsecuta est, sed incertus est eius sensus. sin autem in personam certam vel in certam venerabilem domum respexit, ei tantummodo hereditatem vel legatum competere sancimus, nulla Falcidia nec in hac parte intercedente.

8. In omnibus autem huiusmodi casibus caelestes iracundias sacrosanctarum rerum administratores expectent, si qualecumque lucrum ex huiusmodi gubernationibus sibi adquisierint vel si hoc committi ab alio senserint et non gravissima poena et interminatione quod perperam factum est studeant corrigere.

D. x k. Sept. Constantinopoli post consulatum Lampadii et Orestis vv. cc.

[49] Idem A. Iohanni pp. pr. Cum lege Leoniana viris reverentissimis episcopis et presbyteris et diaconis peculium habere quasi castrense

3. If the poor have been appointed heirs indiscriminately, the hospice of the city of the testator shall by all means acquire the inheritance, and a distribution of the testator's property shall be made by the superintendent of the hospice for the benefit of the sick, according to what We have established in the case of captives: either by the spending of annual revenue or by the sale of movable or self-moving property, so that immovable property may be bought and the annual rental may go to the sick. For who is poorer than men who have been trapped by poverty and placed in a hospice, and, sick in body, cannot provide themselves with basic sustenance? 4. Permission is given both in the former and in the latter case both to bring an action and to collect the amounts owed, so that they may be spent on captives or on the sick. For if We have given them both the right and the name of heirs, though without the benefit of the Falcidian law, they must be able both to collect the amounts owed and to answer to their creditors.

5. If, though, there are several hospices or poorhouses in the city, then the property or money shall be turned over to the hospital or poorhouse that recognized as poorer (than the rest), and this is to be ascertained by the most reverend bishop of the place and the clergy under him. 6. But if no hospice is found in the city, then, according to the decree concerning captives, the current steward or bishop of the holy church shall receive the inheritance, and, without applying the Falcidian law, the money shall be distributed to the poor of the city, who are either wholly destitute or in need of other sustenance.

7. We have decreed that all these provisions shall apply when a specific hospice, specific poorhouse, or specific church has not been designated by the testator, but his meaning is uncertain. If, however, he has shown regard for a specific person or for a specific venerable house, We decree that the inheritance or legacy shall belong to that (person or house) only, and neither in this case shall the Falcidian law interfere.

8. In all these cases, the administrators of holy property shall expect the wrath of Heaven if they win any profit whatsoever for themselves by such management, or if they learn that this is being done by another and fail to hasten to correct such wrongdoing by the heaviest penalty and threats.

Given August 23, at Constantinople, in the post-consulate of the viri clarissimi Lampadius and Orestes (531).

[49][109] The same Augustus to John, Praetorian Prefect. pr. Since by the law of Leo,[110] the most reverend bishops and presbyters and deacons were granted the concessum est, eo addito, ut in ipso testari possint, dubitabatur, si huiusmodi testamenta debent de inofficiosi querella expugnari, cum de omnibus personis, quae huiusmodi peculia meruerunt, eadem fuerat quaestio exorta. 1. Sancimus itaque viris reverentissimis episcopis et presbyteris et diaconis, qui tale peculium (id est quasi castrense) possident, super his tantummodo rebus, quae quasi castrensis peculii sunt, non solum ultima condere secundum leges tamen elogia licere, quod ex Leoniana constitutione descendit, sed etiam eorum ultimas voluntates, super his tantummodo habitas, de inofficiosi querellae minime subiacere.

[109] Combine with C. 1.5.22, 3.28.37, 6.22.12.
[110] C. 1.3.33.

D. k. Sept. Constantinopoli post cons. Lampadii et Orestae.

[50] Idem A. Iohanni pp. pr. Si quis in conscribendo instrumento sese confessus fuerit non usurum fori praescriptione propter sacerdotii praerogativam, sancimus non licere ei adversus sua pacta venire et contrahentes decipere, cum regula est iuris antiqui omnes licentiam habere his quae pro se introducta sunt renuntiare. 1. Quam generalem legem in omnibus casibus obtinere sancimus, qui necdum per iudicialem sententiam vel amicalem conventionem sopiti sunt.

D. k. Sept. Constantinopoli post cons. Lampadii et Orestae vv. cc.

[51] Idem A. Iohanni pp. pr. Generaliter sancimus omnes viros reverentissimos episcopos nec non presbyteros seu diaconos et subdiaconos et praecipue monachos, licet non sint clerici, immunitatem ipso iure omnes habere tutelae sive testamentariae sive legitimae sive dativae: et non solum tutelae esse eos expertes, sed etiam curae, non solum pupillorum et adultorum, sed et furiosi et muti et surdi et aliarum personarum, quibus tutores vel curatores a veteribus legibus dantur. 1. Eos tamen clericos et monachos huiusmodi habere beneficium sancimus, qui ad sacrosanctas ecclesias vel monasteria permanent, non devagantes neque circa divina ministeria desides, cum propter hoc ipsum beneficium eis indulgemus, ut aliis omnibus derelictis dei omnipotentis inhaereant ministeriis. 2. Et hoc non solum in vetere Roma vel in hac regia civitate, sed in omni terra, ubicumque Christianorum nomen colitur, obtinere sancimus.

D. k. Nov. post cons. Lampadii et Orestis vv. cc.

right to have their own special property as a quasi-military peculium, with the additional right to make a will disposing thereof, it was uncertain whether such wills could be overturned by complaint of an undutiful will, since the same question had arisen concerning all persons who had been awarded this kind of special property. 1. We therefore decree that the most reverend bishops, presbyters, and deacons who possess such special property not only may, in due form of law, make a last will, disposing of such things as pertain exclusively to their quasi-military special property, which right derives from the law of Leo; but their last wills, insofar as they concern such property, are altogether exempt from the complaint of an induteous will.

Given September 1, at Constantinople, in the post-consulate of Lampadius and Orestes (531).

[50][111] The same Augustus to John, Praetorian Prefect. pr. If anyone has declared in a written document that he will not avail himself of a prerogative for venue on account of his priestly privilege, We decree that he shall not be permitted to go back on his agreement and deceive the other contracting parties, since it is a rule of ancient law that all are at liberty to forgo privileges that have been introduced on their behalf. 1. We decree that this general law shall apply in all cases that have not yet been resolved by judicial decision or amicable settlement.

Given September 1, at Constantinople, in the post-consulate of the viri clarissimi Lampadius and Orestes (531).

[51] The same Augustus to John, Praetorian Prefect. pr. We decree generally that all most reverend bishops, as well as presbyters or deacons and subdeacons, and especially monks, though they are not clergymen, shall by law be exempt from the duty of tutores, whether testamentary, statutory, or appointed by the court. And they shall not only be free of the duty of tutelage, but also of guardianship, not only of minors and adults but also of the insane, the mute, the deaf, and other persons for whom tutores or curatores are appointed by ancient laws. 1. We decree that only those clergymen and monks who reside in holy churches and monasteries shall possess this privilege, not those who wander or are indolent in their divine services; for We grant them this privilege for this very reason: that, abandoning all other services, they may apply themselves to those of the omnipotent God. 2. And We decree that this shall obtain not only in ancient Rome or in This Imperial City but in the whole world, wherever the Christian name is cherished.

Given November 1, in the post-consulate of the viri clarissimi Lampadius and Orestes (531).

111 pr. = C. 2.3.29 pr., with a fuller version.

[52] Ὁ αὐτὸς βασιλεὺς Ἰωάννῃ ἐπάρχῳ πραιτωρίων. pr. Θεσπίζομεν μηδένα παντελῶς μήτε βουλευτὴν μήτε ταξεώτην ἐπίσκοπον ἢ πρεσβύτερον τοῦ λοιποῦ γίνεσθαι, οὐδὲν ἐφαπτομένου τοῦδε τοῦ νόμου τῶν τοιαύτης ἱερωσύνης πρότερον ἠξιωμένων, τοῦ λοιποῦ δὲ μηδένα παντελῶς ἐκ τῆς εἰρημένης ὄντα τύχης εἰς τὰς ῥηθείσας ἱερατείας ἀναβαίνειν, καὶ μάλιστα εἰ καὶ ἤδη λειτουργήσας ἢ τοῖς ταξεωτικοῖς ὑπηρετήσας ἔτυχεν ἐπιτάγμασι. 1. Τὸν γὰρ ἐντεθραμμένον εἰσπράξεσι σφοδραῖς καὶ τοῖς διὰ τοῦτο ὡς εἰκὸς ἐπισυμβαίνουσιν ἁμαρτήμασιν οὐκ ἂν εἴη δίκαιον ἄρτι μὲν εἶναι ταξεώτην ἢ βουλευτὴν καὶ πράττειν τὰ πάντων πικρότατα, εὐθὺς δὲ ἱερέα χειροτονεῖσθαι περὶ φιλανθρωπίας τε καὶ ἀκτημοσύνης νουθετοῦντα καὶ ὑφηγούμενον δόγματα· πλὴν εἰ μὴ ἐκ νηπίας ἡλικίας καὶ οὔπω τὴν ἔφηβον ἐκβάσης ἔτυχε τοῖς εὐλαβεστάτοις μοναχοῖς ἐγκαταλελεγμένος καὶ διαμείνας ἐπὶ τούτου τοῦ σχήματος· τηνικαῦτα γὰρ ἐφίεμεν αὐτῷ καὶ πρεσβυτέρῳ γενέσθαι καὶ εἰς ἐπισκοπὴν ἐλθεῖν, πρόδηλον ὄν, ὡς, ἡνίκα τοιοῦτόν τι γένηται καὶ ἄξιος τῆς ἱερατείας φανῇ, τηνικαῦτα ἄδειαν ἕξει μένειν ἐπὶ τῆς ἱερωσύνης καὶ τοῦ λειτουργεῖν ἀπηλλάχθαι, τὴν τετάρτην μέντοι μοῖραν τῆς αὐτοῦ περιουσίας ἁπάσης παρέχων τοῖς βουλευταῖς καὶ τῷ δημοσίῳ κατὰ τὸν ἔναγχος ἐπὶ τοῖς τεταρτημορίοις τεθέντα παρ' ἡμῶν νόμον, ἢ μόνῳ τῷ δημοσίῳ, εἴγε ταξεωτικῆς τύχης ἐτύγχανεν ὤν. 2. Εἰ δὲ καὶ ἐν τοῖς εὐλαβεστάτοις ἀρχιμανδρίταις ταχθείη καὶ διαμείνειεν ἐν αὐτοῖς, καὶ οὕτως αὐτῷ δίδομεν τὴν τῆς τύχης ἀτέλειαν, τὴν τετάρτην κἀνταῦθα μοῖραν τῆς αὐτοῦ περιουσίας, καθάπερ εἰπόντες ἔφθημεν, παρεχομένῳ· ἄλλως δὲ οὔτε ἐκείνῳ χειροτονεῖσθαι συγχωροῦμεν οὔτε τῷ χειροτονοῦντι τοιοῦτόν τι πράττειν ἐφίεμεν. 3. Γινωσκούσης τῆς σῆς ὑπεροχῆς, ὡς ταῦτα παραφυλακτέον ἅπασι τοῖς θεοφιλεστάτοις ἐπισκόποις ποινὴν ὑφορωμένοις περὶ αὐτὴν τὴν ἱερωσύνην, εἴ τι τοιοῦτο πράξαιεν, πρὸς τὸ μηδὲ τὸν χειροτονούμενον τῆς ἱερωσύνης ἀπολαύειν, κἂν εἰ πρότερον οἱονδήποτε βαθμὸν ἱερατείας ἐπεῖχεν, ἀλλ' ἐν ἰδιώταις τετάχθαι καὶ τὰς λειτουργίας ἐκτελεῖν, αἷς ὑπέκειτο πρότερον.

4. Ἅπερ ἅπαντα κρατεῖν εἰς τὸν ἐφεξῆς βουλόμεθα χρόνον, ἐπειδὴ τοίνυν πρῶτον ὑφ' ἡμῶν ἐξεύρηται, οὐ προσαπτομένου παντελῶς τοῦδε τοῦ νόμου, καθάπερ εἰπόντες ἔφθημεν, τῶν ἅπαξ τοιαύτης ἱερωσύνης ἀξιωθέντων, ἀλλ' ἐξουσίαν ἐχόντων αὐτῶν δι' ὑποκαταστάτων λειτουργεῖν κατὰ τὴν Θεοδοσίου καὶ Οὐαλεντινιανοῦ τῶν τῆς εὐσεβοῦς λήξεως διάταξιν τὴν πρὸς Θωμᾶν ἀντιγεγραμμένην.

5. Πρὸς τούτοις κἀκεῖνο δίκαιον εἶναι καὶ κρατεῖν καὶ πολιτεύεσθαι θεσπίζομεν, ὅπερ τεθὲν ἐξ ἀρχῆς καὶ πολιτευσάμενον οὐκ ἴσμεν ὅπως παρῶπται. μεμνήμεθα γὰρ Ἀρκαδίου καὶ Ὁνωρίου τῶν τῆς εὐσεβοῦς

[52] The same Augustus to John, Praetorian Prefect. pr. We decree that no curial or provincial staff member (cohortalis) may hereafter become bishop or presbyter. This law does not affect those who have already been found worthy of the priesthood, but no one of the aforementioned status shall hereafter ascend to the aforesaid priestly positions, especially if he has already performed liturgies (as curial) or followed orders as provincial staff member. 1. For it would not be just that one who was brought up amid violent exactions and the sins likely resulting from this position should, at one moment, be staff member or curial and do the bitterest of deeds and, at the next, be appointed priest, preaching love of man and contempt for possessions and teaching the tenets of the faith – unless he happens to have been enrolled among the most pious monks in his childhood, before passing the age of puberty, and continued in this state. Then We permit him to become a presbyter and rise to the episcopate, since it is manifest that when such a thing should occur and he seems worthy of ordination, then he shall be permitted to remain in the priesthood and be released from his liturgies, although he must surrender one fourth of his property to the curials and to the Treasury according to the law recently issued by Us concerning such fourths,[112] or to the Treasury alone, if he should happen to belong to the class of provincial staff members. 2. If he should be enrolled among the superior abbots and continue among them, We thus also grant him exemption from the public liturgies of his class, as long as he gives a fourth of his property, as We have already said. Otherwise We neither give him the right to be ordained nor do We allow the one who would ordain him to do any such thing. 3. Your Eminence shall recognize that all most reverend bishops must observe these provisions, anticipating a penalty in the form of the loss of their priesthood itself, if they should do any such thing, in addition to the fact that the one ordained shall not enjoy his priesthood; and even if he previously held any rank whatsoever in the priesthood, he shall be numbered among the laity and will perform the liturgies to which he was previously subject.

4. We desire that all these provisions apply in the future, since they have now been first devised by Us, nor, as We have already said, shall this law affect those who have already been deemed worthy of such a priesthood. They shall have the right to perform their liturgies by proxy, according to the constitution of Theodosius and Valentinian of Blessed Memory, written in response to Thomas.[113]

5. Additionally, We decree that the following also is just and shall apply and be practiced, which, although instituted and practiced initially, has somehow come to be neglected: We remember encountering a constitution λήξεως ἐντυχόντες διατάξει βουλομένη τοὺς κληρικούς, εἴπερ ἀμελήσαντες τύχοιεν τῆς ἑαυτῶν τάξεως καὶ εἰς οἱανδήποτε ἔνοπλον στρατείαν παραγγείλαιεν ἢ καὶ καθῃρημένοι παρὰ τῶν θεοφιλεστάτων ἐπισκόπων στρατεύεσθαι τολμήσαιεν, ἐκβάλλεσθαι μὲν αὐτοὺς τῆς στρατείας ἧς ἔτυχον, παραδίδοσθαι δὲ ταῖς τῶν πόλεων βουλαῖς, ὑπουργήσοντας τὸ λοιπὸν τῷ δημοσίῳ, ἐπειδὴ καὶ τῇ τοῦ δεσπότου θεοῦ λατρείᾳ κατὰ τὸν τῆς στρατείας τρόπον ἔτυχον ἀπειπόντες. 6. Ἅπερ κρατεῖν ἐκ τοῦδε ἡμῶν θεσπίζομεν τοῦ νόμου, κελεύοντες αὐτοὺς εὐθὺς καὶ παραχρῆμα τῆς πόλεως ἐκείνης, ἐξ ἧς εἰσι, γίνεσθαι βουλευτάς, εἰ μὴ σφόδρα εὐπορίαν ἔχοι βουλευτῶν ἡ πόλις, ἐπείτοιγε τῆς γείτονος ἢ καὶ πορρωτέρω μέχρι μιᾶς ἐπαρχίας ἑτέρας, ἔνθα μάλιστα βουλευτῶν καθέστηκεν ἀπορία. 7. Εἰ δὲ ἀφανεῖς, ὡς εἰκός, γένοιντο, ἄδειαν δίδομεν τοῖς βουλευταῖς εὐθὺς ἐπιβαίνειν τῶν προσηκόντων αὐτοῖς πραγμάτων καὶ ταῦτα κατέχειν καὶ τὸ ἱκανὸν ἑαυτοῖς κατὰ τὸν νόμον ἐντεῦθεν ποιεῖν. 8. Ταῦτα μὲν οὖν ἐπὶ τοῖς εὐλαβεστάτοις κληρικοῖς οἱουδήποτε βαθμοῦ κρατεῖν εἰς τὸ διηνεκὲς θεσπίζομεν καὶ ἐπὶ τοῖς ἤδη πεπλημμεληκόσι κρατεῖν τὸν νόμον βουλόμενοι, διότι καὶ πρότερον ἦν.

[112] C. 10.35.4?
[113] C. 1.3.21.

9. Ἐπειδὴ δὲ καί τινα διάταξιν εὕρομεν περὶ μοναχῶν διαλεγομένην καὶ βουλομένην αὐτοὺς μὴ καταλιμπάνειν τὰ οἰκεῖα μοναστήρια μηδὲ θορυβεῖν τὰς πόλεις, ἣν καὶ πρός τινα νενομοθετῆσθαι καιρόν τινες ὑποπτεύουσι, δεῖν ᾠήθημεν ἀφορμὴν ἐντεῦθεν λαβόντες τελειότερόν τε καὶ εἰς τὸν ἅπαντα χρόνον καὶ τοῦτο ἐπανορθῶσαι· ὥστε μηδενὶ τοῦ λοιποῦ τῶν εὐλαβεστάτων μοναχῶν ἄδειαν εἶναι τοῦ τοιοῦτό τι πράττειν καὶ καταλιμπάνειν μὲν τὸ μοναχικὸν σχῆμα, περιβάλλεσθαι δὲ τὴν οἱανοῦν στρατείαν ἢ ζώνην ἢ ἀξίαν ἢ τὸν ἐν δικαστηρίοις μεταδιώκειν βίον καὶ τῆς τοῦ θεοῦ θεραπείας τὰς ἀνθρωπίνας ἀσχολίας ἀνθαιρεῖσθαι ἢ γινώσκειν. 10. Ὡς καὶ ὁ τοιοῦτό τι πράττων ἐπιδοθήσεται τῇ βουλῇ τῆς πόλεως ἐκείνης, ἐξ ἧς ἐστιν, ἢ ἑτέρας, καθὰ πρότερον εἰπόντες ἔφθημεν, εἰ μὲν χρημάτων εὐποροίη, καὶ χρηματικὰς ὑποστησόμενος λειτουργίας, ἐπείτοιγε τὰς εἰς σῶμα φερούσας· κἀνταῦθα ἀδείας οὔσης ταῖς βουλαῖς, καθάπερ εἰπόντες ἔφθημεν, εἰ ἀφανεῖς γένοιντο, ἐπιλαμβάνεσθαι τῶν πραγμάτων καὶ τὸ ἱκανὸν ἑαυταῖς κατὰ τὸν νόμον ποιεῖν. 11. Ἐν ἅπασι δὲ τοῖς θέμασιν, ἐφ᾽ ὧν λαμβάνειν ἀπὸ τῶν τοιούτων αἰτιῶν τὰ βουλευτήριά τι προστάττομεν, βουλόμεθα τὴν μὲν ἡμίσειαν τούτων μοῖραν τοὺς βουλευτὰς κομίζεσθαι μὴ ἐν χρυσίῳ, ἀλλ᾽ ἐν ἀκινήτῳ κτήσει ἢ οὔσῃ ἢ ὠνουμένῃ κατὰ τὸν ἔμπροσθεν φοιτήσαντα παρ᾽ ἡμῶν νόμον, τὴν δὲ ἡμίσειαν τῇ γενικῇ τραπέζῃ τῆς σῆς ὑπεροχῆς εἰσφέρεσθαι, ὥστε καὶ τὸν σὸν θρόνον προνοεῖν ἀγρύπνως μηδὲν τοιοῦτο διαλαθεῖν, ἀλλ᾽ ἅμα τῷ γίνεσθαί τι τὴν προσήκουσαν ὑπὲρ τούτου ποιεῖσθαι θεραπείαν, πλὴν εἰ μὴ νῦν γοῦν ἑκόντες οἱ τοιοῦτοι ἀπόθοιντο μὲν τὴν στρατείαν ἢ ἁπλῶς ὅπερ ἔχουσι σχῆμα, εἰς δὲ τὸν μοναχικὸν αὖθις ἀκριβῶς τε καὶ ἀληθῶς ἐπανέλθοιεν βίον καὶ τοῖς εὐλαβεστάτοις of Arcadius and Honorius of Blessed Memory that sought that clergymen, if they disregarded their position and applied for armed service of any kind or, deposed by the most reverend bishops, dared to serve in the military, should be expelled from their military position and delivered to the municipal councils of the cities to serve the public welfare, since they renounced the worship of the Lord God for a military appointment. 6. We decree that these provisions shall obtain by virtue of this Our law, and We order these persons to become curials of the city in which they were born straightaway and immediately, unless the city has a great abundance of curials, in which case they shall become curials of the neighboring city or further afield up to one other province, where there exists the greatest want of curials. 7. If they go missing, as is likely, We give permission to the curials to seize their property and hold it and to provide themselves with sufficient funds therefrom according to the law. 8. We decree that these provisions shall apply to the clergy of whatever rank forever, and We desire that the law apply to those who have already offended, since this was also previously so.

9. Since We also have found a constitution concerning monks[114] that forbade them to leave their own monasteries and disturb the cities, yet some suspect that this constitution was issued for a limited period of time, We have thought it necessary to take up this issue and set it aright more perfectly and for all time. Thus, none of the most pious monks shall have leave to do anything of the sort: to abandon the monastic habit and assume any military post, position in the imperial service (cingulum), or office, or win their livelihood in the courts and know or prefer the occupations of man to the worship of God. 10. Therefore, one who does such a thing shall be handed over to the curia of the city in which he was born or of another city, as We have already said above, so that if he is wealthy, he shall perform pecuniary liturgies; otherwise, corporal liturgies. In this case too, the curias shall have permission, as We have already said above, to seize their property and provide themselves with sufficient funds according to the law, if they should go missing. 11. In all cases, however, in which We order the curias to seize anything for such reasons, We want half thereof to be taken by the curias, not in gold, but in immovable property, whether already at hand or bought, according to the law that was recently issued by Us; the other half shall be collected into the common funds of Your Eminence, so that Your office too shall tirelessly ensure that no such conduct goes undetected and, as soon as it happens, shall apply the appropriate remedy; unless such offenders willingly lay down their military service, or at any rate the position they hold, and return both genuinely and honestly to monastic life and hasten to be enrolled among the most pious clergy. If they should do this within a year after the issue of Our present divine law, We remit their punishment, since We κληρικοῖς ἐγγραφῆναι σπεύσαιεν. εἰ γὰρ τοῦτο πράξαιεν εἴσω ἐνιαυτοῦ ἑνός, ἀφ' οὗπερ ὁ παρὼν θεῖος ἡμῶν γέγονε νόμος, ἀφίεμεν αὐτοῖς τὴν ποινήν, ἀρκεῖν αὐτοῖς τὸν ἐκ τῆς ἀσκήσεως ἡγούμενοι σωφρονισμόν. 12. Ταῦτα δὲ κρατεῖν εἰς τὸν ἐφεξῆς βουλόμεθα χρόνον, οὐδὲ ἐκείνους ἔξω τῆς εἰρημένης καταλιμπάνοντες ποινῆς, ὅσοι ἀπὸ τῆς ἡμῶν βασιλείας καίτοι μοναχοὶ καθεστῶτες τοιοῦτό τι πεπράχασι. τὸ γὰρ ἔμπροσθεν ἅμα μὲν διὰ φιλανθρωπίαν, ἅμα δὲ τὸν χρόνον ἐρυθριῶντες ἀφίεμεν, ἐπεὶ μηδὲ σαφῶς νενομοθετημένον ἔμπροσθεν ἦν.

114 C. 1.3.29.

13. Ἔτι τοῦτο θεσπίζομεν, εἴτε πατὴρ εἴτε μήτηρ εἴτε ἕτερός τις ἐξ ἀπαιδίας ἀποκατάστασιν ἢ ὑποκατάστασιν ἐπαγάγοι τισὶν εἴτε ἄρρεσιν εἴτε θηλείαις, οἱ δὲ πρὸς γάμον ἐλθεῖν διὰ τὸν τῆς ἀσκήσεως οὐχ ἕλοιντο τρόπον, περιαιρεῖσθαι τὰς τοιαύτας ἀποκαταστάσεις ἢ ὑποκαταστάσεις καὶ ἔχειν αὐτοὺς ἐξουσίαν εἰς ὃν βούλονται τρόπον, εὐσεβῆ μέντοι, τὰ ἐντεῦθεν ἀφιεροῦν καὶ ἢ δαπανᾶν περιόντας ἢ καταλιμπάνειν τελευτῶντας· ὥσπερ εἰ καὶ ὑπὸ αἵρεσιν παιδοποιίας αὐτοῖς τι καταλειφθείη, δεῖ καὶ τοῦτο αὐτὸ ἔχειν αὐτοὺς παιδοποιεῖν οὐκ ἀναγκαζομένους. 14. Τὴν αὐτὴν δὲ νομοθεσίαν καὶ ἐπὶ γυναιξὶ παρθενευούσαις καὶ ἐπὶ τοῖς γαμεῖν ὅλως κεκωλυμένοις εὐλαβεστάτοις κληρικοῖς ἐπεκτείνομεν καὶ ἀνατίθεμεν καὶ ταύτην τὴν χάριν θεῷ τῶν ἡμετέρων χρόνων ἀξίαν.

15. Ἔτι θεσπίζομεν, εἴτε ἀνὴρ ἐπὶ μονήρη βίον ἐλθεῖν βουληθείη εἴτε γυνὴ τὸν ἄνδρα καταλιποῦσα πρὸς ἄσκησιν ἔλθοι, μὴ τοῦτο αὐτοῖς ζημίας παρέχειν πρόφασιν, ἀλλὰ τὰ μὲν οἰκεῖα πάντως λαμβάνειν, ὥστε τῇ γυναικὶ τὴν προῖκα εἶναι λαβεῖν τὴν αὐτῆς καὶ τὴν πρὸ γάμου δωρεὰν τῷ συνοικήσαντι, τὸ δὲ ἐκ τούτου κέρδος μὴ κατὰ τὴν ἐκ ῥεπουδίου διάζευξιν ἐκδικεῖν ἢ μένειν παρὰ τῷ μὴ ἀποταξαμένῳ, ἀλλὰ κατὰ τὸ ἐκ θανάτου σύμφωνον, οἷα δοκοῦντος τοῦ ἀφισταμένου τῷ τῆς μετὰ τῶν ἄλλων διαίτης[xiii] ἀναχωρεῖν τόγε ἐπὶ τῷ συνοικεσίῳ τεθνάναι, διὰ τὸ τῷ συνοικήσαντι παντελῶς ἄχρηστον εἶναι· καὶ ὅπερ ἂν ἡ τῶν προικῴων συμβολαίων δείξειεν δύναμις ἐκ τῶν ἀπὸ τελευτῆς συμφώνων ὀφειλόμενον, τοῦτο αὐτὸ τὸν λαβόντα τοῦ λοιποῦ παραχωρεῖν τῷ τὴν ἄσκησιν ἑλομένῳ· ὥστε μέντοι μὴ θαρρεῖν τὴν γυναῖκα πρὶν ἐνιαυτὸν διελθεῖν εἰς ἕτερον ἰδεῖν συνοικέσιον διὰ τὴν τῆς γονῆς ἀδηλίαν· ἀλλ' εἴ τι μέλλοι γίνεσθαι τοιοῦτο, τηνικαῦτα στέλλεσθαι διαίσιον κατὰ τοῦτο δὴ τὸ καλούμενον bona gratia παρὰ τοῦ μὴ τὴν ἄσκησιν ἑλομένου προσώπου, οὕτως τε πράττειν ἃ βούλεται, τῶν κερδῶν κατὰ τὸν ἔμπροσθεν εἰρημένον τρόπον προσγινομένων αὐτῷ· δηλαδὴ τοῦ κερδαινομένου ἐκ τῆς τοιαύτης αἰτίας ἐκ τρόπου παντός, εἰ καὶ ἐπὶ τῶν προτέρων γάμων ἢ ἡ γυνὴ ἢ ὁ ἀνὴρ μείνοιεν, τοῖς κοινοῖς παισὶ τοῖς ἐκ τούτου τοῦ γάμου γενομένοις, εἴ τινα εἴη, φυλαττομένου.

D. v k. Dec. Constantinopoli post cons. Lampadii et Orestis.

[xiii] τῆς μετ' ἀλλήλων διαίτης

deem the chastisement of ascetic life sufficient. 12. We desire that these provisions apply hereafter, and We do not leave exempt from the aforementioned punishment those who, since the beginning of Our reign, though monks, have done such a thing. As for the preceding time, We grant pardon, partly for the sake of clemency, partly blushing at the times, since nothing clear had been previously enacted.

13. This too We decree: if either a father or a mother or any other person should, by reason of childlessness, impose restitution or the appointment of a substitute heir on men or women, but they decline to marry on account of the ascetic life, such restitutions or substitutions shall be rescinded, and they shall have the power to consecrate the property in any manner they wish, provided it be pious, and either spend it while living or dispose of it upon death. Thus, even if property is left them on the condition of procreating children, they shall have even this without being forced to procreate children. 14. We extend this law also to women who remain virgins and to the most pious clergymen prohibited from matrimony, and We offer this to God as a token of gratitude worthy of Our times.

15. We moreover decree that if a man should wish to lead a monastic life, or a woman should leave her husband and enter a life of asceticism, this shall not furnish any damaging pretext against them, but they shall receive all their own property. Thus, the woman shall recover her dowry and the husband his prenuptial gift, and no profit may be claimed by reason of separation by divorce or remain with the spouse that has not put away the other; but (it shall be as) according to the agreement in the event of death, since the person withdrawing from life with one another appears dead with respect to marriage, on account of his being utterly useless to his spouse. The one party shall receive whatever the content of the dowry contract should show as owing in the event of death and yield the rest to the one choosing the religious life. The woman shall not dare to consider another marriage until a year has passed, on account of the uncertainty of the offspring; but if anything of the kind should occur, then a bill of divorce according to so-called bona gratia (i.e., uncontested) shall be sent by the person who has not chosen the religious life, and he shall thus do what he wishes. The profits shall accrue to him in the manner previously described, but what is gained thereby shall in every way be kept for the common children of their marriage, if there are any, as if either the woman or the man had remained in their former marriage.

Given November 27, at Constantinople, in the post-consulate of Lampadius and Orestes (531).

[53] Idem A. Hermogeni magistro officiorum. pr. Raptores virginum vel viduarum vel diaconissarum, quae deo fuerint dedicatae, pessima criminum peccantes capitis supplicio plectendos fuisse decernimus, quod non solum ad iniuriam hominum, sed ad ipsius omnipotentis dei irreverentiam committitur.

1. Qui itaque huiusmodi crimen commiserint et qui eis auxilium tempore invasionis praebuerint, ubi inventi fuerint in ipsa rapina et adhuc flagrante crimine comprehensi, a parentibus sanctimonialium virginum vel viduarum vel diaconissarum aut earum consanguineis vel tutoribus seu curatoribus convicti, interficiantur. 2. Sin autem post commissum tam detestabile crimen aut potentatu raptor se defendere aut fuga evadere potuerit, in hac quidem regia urbe tam viri excelsi praefecti praetorio quam vir gloriosissimus praefectus urbis, in provinciis autem tam viri eminentissimi praefecti praetorio per Illyricum quam magistri militum per diversas nostri orbis regiones nec non viri spectabiles praefectus Aegypti et vicarii et proconsules et nihilo minus viri spectabiles duces et viri clarissimi rectores provinciarum nec non alii cuiuslibet ordinis iudices, qui in locis inventi fuerint, simile studium cum magna sollicitudine adhibeant, ut eos possint comprehendere et comprehensos in tali crimine post legitimas et iuri cognitas probationes sine fori praescriptione durissimis poenis adficiant et mortis condemnent supplicio.

3. Bona autem eorum, si hoc commissum fuerit vel in sanctimonialem virginem, quae in asceterio vel monasterio degit, sive eadem virgo diaconissa constituta sit sive non, eidem monasterio vel asceterio, ubi consecrata est, addicentur, ut ex his rebus et ipsa solacium habeat, dum vivit, sufficiens et res omnes sacrosanctum asceterium seu monasterium pleno habeat dominio. 4. Sin autem diaconissa cuiuscumque ecclesiae sit, in nullo autem monasterio vel asceterio constituta est, sed per se degit, raptoris eius substantia ecclesiae, cuius diaconissa est, adsignetur, ut ex his facultatibus ipsa quidem usum fructum, dum superest, ab eadem ecclesia consequatur, ecclesia vero omnem proprietatem et plenam possessionem earundem rerum nostro habeat beneficio: nemine vel iudice vel alia quacumque persona hoc audente contemnere.

5. Poenas autem, quas praediximus, id est mortis et bonorum amissionis, constituimus non tantum adversus raptores, sed etiam contra eos, qui hos comitati in ipsa invasione et rapina fuerint. ceteros autem omnes, qui conscii et ministri huiusmodi criminis reperti et convicti fuerint vel eos susceperint vel quamcumque opem eis intulerint, sive

[53][115] The same Augustus to Hermogenes, Master of Offices. pr. We decree that the ravishers[116] of virgins, widows, or deaconesses, who have been dedicated to God, thereby committing the worst of crimes, shall be punished by death, because their crime is not only an outrage toward mankind but an act of impiety toward Almighty God Himself.

1. Those who commit a crime of this kind and those who assist them at the time of the assault, if they are discovered in the act of ravishing and caught in flagrante by the parents of the holy virgins, or widows, or deaconesses, or by their relatives, tutores, or curatores, may, upon conviction, be executed. 2. If, however, after committing so detestable a crime, the ravisher proves able either to defend himself through influence or to escape by flight, in This Imperial City both the viri excelsi Praetorian Prefects and the vir gloriosissimus Urban Prefect; in the provinces, both the viri eminentissimi Praetorian Prefects of Illyricum and the Masters of the Soldiers throughout the various areas of Our world, as well as the Prefect of Egypt, the Vicars, the Proconsuls, and the viri spectabiles Dukes, the viri clarissimi provincial governors, and also other judges of any rank who may be found at the place, shall show like diligence and great care, so that they may arrest and, upon arrest for such a crime, after proper proof recognized by the law, inflict upon them the harshest punishment and condemn them to death, without granting the privilege of venue (fori praescriptio).

3. If the crime is committed against a nun living in a hermitage or convent, whether this same virgin has been appointed deaconess or not, the property (of the ravishers) will be awarded to the same convent or hermitage to which she has been consecrated. Thus she may derive sufficient solace from these things while she lives, but the holy hermitage or convent shall hold all this property with full title. 4. If she is a deaconess of some church and is not located in a convent or hermitage, but lives by herself, the property of her ravisher shall be awarded to the church of which she is deaconess. Thus, she shall receive from the same church a usufruct on this property while she lives, but the church shall have all ownership and full possession of these things by Our beneficence. Neither judge nor any other person shall dare to disregard this.

5. The punishments, moreover, which We have mentioned above, that is, death and loss of property, We have set not only against ravishers but also against those who accompany them in the assault and act of ravishing. All others, whether men or women of whatever status, rank, or title, who are found to have known of and abetted such a crime and are convicted, or who harbor masculi sive feminae sunt, cuiuscumque condicionis vel gradus vel dignitatis, poenae tantummodo capitali subicimus, ut huic poenae omnes subiaceant, sive volentibus sive nolentibus sanctimonialibus virginibus seu aliis supra dictis mulieribus tale facinus fuerit perpetratum.

[115] = C. 9.13.1; combine with 5.17.11, 7.24.1?, 11.48.24?

[116] The crime raptus may be rape or "ravishing": the seizure and abduction of a woman, for sexual or marital purposes, potentially even with her consent.

D. XV k. Dec. Constantinopoli dn. Iustiniano pp. A. III cons.

[54] Idem A. Iohanni pp. pr. Deo nobis auxilium praebente omnia, quae pro honore sanctae catholicae ecclesiae ad dei placitum fieri properamus, legibus constituere et operibus adimplere desideramus. 1. Et iam quidem multa cum eius auxilio statuimus, quae ecclesiasticae doctrinae statui conveniunt, in praesenti autem hoc pia deliberatione duximus corrigendum, quod hactenus contra dei timorem fiebat. 2. Cognitum etenim nobis est, quod, si quis sponsus vel sponsa post datas aut acceptas arras voluisset se divino deputare servitio et a saeculari conversatione recedere ac sanctimonialem vitam vivere atque in dei timore permanere, compellebatur vir quidem ea quae arrarum nomine dederat amittere, sponsa vero duplum id quod acceperat reddere. quod nostrae mansuetudini satis religioni esse contrarium visum est.

3. Unde per praesentem legem in perpetuum valituram iubemus, ut, si quis sponsus vel sponsa desideraverit saeculi istius vitam contemnens in sanctimonialium conversatione vivere, sponsus quidem omnia, quae arrarum nomine futuri causa coniugii dedisset, sine ulla imminutione recipiat, sponsa autem non duplum, sicut hactenus, sed hoc tantum sponso restituat, quod arrarum acceperat nomine, et nihil amplius reddere compellatur, nisi quod probata fuerit accepisse. 4. Nam et maritis et uxoribus qui saeculo renuntiant iam anteriore lege a nobis provisum est, ut, sive maritus sive uxor religionis causa a coniugio recesserit et solitariam vitam elegerit, unusquisque eorum res suas recipiat, quas vel pro dote vel ante nuptias donatione praestiterat, et hoc tantummodo lucri nomine consequatur ab eo qui solitariam vitam elegerit, quod debuit legitime vel ex pacto per casum mortis exigere.

5. Hoc etiam cognitum nobis correctione nostra dignum esse iudicamus, ut, si quis in parentium potestate constitutus vel constituta vel forsitan huiusmodi iure absolutus vel absoluta elegerit se vel monasterio vel clero sociare et reliquum vitae suae tempus sanctimonialiter degere voluerit, non liceat parentibus vel easdem personas quocumque modo abstrahere vel propter hanc tantummodo causam quasi ingratum a sua hereditate vel successione repellere, sed necesse sit eis omnimodo, cum ultimam voluntatem suam sive per scripturam sive alio legitimo them (the ravishers) or offer them any help whatsoever, We subject only to capital punishment. Thus all shall be subject to this punishment, whether such a crime is committed against holy virgins or any of the other women mentioned above, with or without their consent.

Given November 17, at Constantinople, in the consulship of Our Lord Justinian, Ever Augustus, for the third time (533).

[54] The same Augustus to John, Praetorian Prefect. pr. With God giving Us His aid, We wish to confirm in laws and realize in deeds all that We strive to bring about in honor of the Holy Catholic Church for the pleasure of God. 1. And indeed, with His aid, We have already established many in harmony with the state of ecclesiastical doctrine; but at present We have, upon pious reflection, decided that the following must be corrected, which heretofore has been done contrary to the fear of God. 2. For We have learned that if a fiancé or fiancée (post datas et acceptas arras) wished to devote himself or herself to the service of God, to withdraw from worldly society and live a holy life and abide in the fear of God, then the man was compelled to forfeit what he gave as earnest-money (arrarum nomine), and the woman to return twice the amount that she received. This seemed to Our Mildness quite contrary to religion.

3. Therefore, We order by the present law, which shall remain in force forever, that if a fiancé or fiancée, scorning worldly life, should wish to live in the society of the holy, the bridegroom shall receive back, without any diminution, everything that he gave as earnest-money for his future marriage; the bride shall restore to the bridegroom not double, as heretofore, but only what she received as earnest-money, and she shall not be forced to return more unless she is shown to have received more. 4. For We have already provided for husbands and wives who renounce the world in a previous law,[117] so that whether the husband or the wife withdraws from marriage and chooses solitary life for religious reasons, each of them receives the belongings that they provided either as a dowry or prenuptial gift, and acquires as gain from the one who has chosen solitary life only what he or she could have claimed by law or pursuant to an agreement in the event of death.

5. We also deem another matter known to Us worthy of correction, namely, that if anyone, male or female, still under his father's power or perhaps released from this legal status, should choose to join either a monastery or the clergy and wishes to pass the rest of his life piously, the parents shall not be allowed either to remove the same persons therefrom in any way or, for this cause alone, to banish them as ungrateful from their inheritance or succession; but when the parents compose their last will, whether in writing or by some other means, they must leave them one-fourth (of their intestate share) according modo conficiant, quartam quidem portionem secundum leges nostras eis relinquere; sin autem amplius voluerit largiri, hoc eius voluntati concedimus. 6. Sin vero ultimam voluntatem parentes neque testamento neque alio ultimo elogio declarasse monstrati fuerint, omnem parentium substantiam heredes, quibus ab intestato competit, secundum leges nostras sibi defendant: nullo eis impedimento ex sanctimoniali conversatione generando, sive soli sive cum aliis ad successionem vocantur.

[117] C. 1.3.52.15.

7. Huius perpetuae nostrae legis beneficia eos volumus obtinere, qui in monasterio vel clericatu perseveraverint. nam si qui eorum, de quibus praesentem legem posuimus, sanctimonialem vitam elegerint, ad saecularem autem conversationem remeaverint, iubemus omnes eorum res ad iura eius ecclesiae vel monasterii a quo recesserint pertinere.

8. His ita dispositis repetita lege iubemus, ut nullus Iudaeus vel paganus vel haereticus servos Christianos habeat. quod si inventi in tali reatu fuerint, sancimus servos modis omnibus liberos esse secundum anteriorem nostrarum legum tenorem. 9. In praesenti autem hoc amplius decernimus, ut, si quis de praedictis Iudaeis vel paganis vel haereticis habuerit servos nondum catholicae fidei sanctissimis mysteriis imbutos, et praedicti servi desideraverint ad orthodoxam fidem venire, postquam catholicae ecclesiae sociati fuerint, in libertatem modis omnibus ex praesenti lege eripiantur: et eos tam iudices provinciarum quam sacrosanctae ecclesiae defensores nec non beatissimi episcopi defendant, nihil pro eorum pretio penitus accipientibus dominis. 10. Quod si forte posthac etiam ipsi domini eorum ad orthodoxam fidem conversi fuerint, non liceat eis ad servitutem reducere illos, qui eos ad fidem orthodoxam praecesserunt: sed si quis talia usurpaverit, poenis gravissimis subiacebit.

11. Haec igitur omnia, quae pietatis intuitu nostra sanxit aeternitas, omnes iudices et religiosissimi antistites sive Africanae dioeceseos, in qua maxime huiusmodi vitia frequentari cognovimus, sive aliarum provinciarum naviter et studiosissime observare procurent. nam contemptores non solum pecuniaria multa, sed et capitis supplicio ferientur.

[55] Ὁ αὐτὸς βασιλεὺς Ἰωάννῃ ἐπάρχῳ πραιτωρίων. pr. Ὁ παρὼν νόμος εἰς ἑτέρου νόμου γεγραμμένου παρ᾽ ἡμῶν ἀναφέρεται μνήμην, ὃν δὴ καὶ αὖθις ἐπικυρῶσαι μετά τινος καλλίονος ᾠήθημεν χρῆναι προσθήκης, μείζονα ποινὴν κατὰ τῶν πλημμελούντων ἐκφέροντες, οὐχ ὅτι ταῖς αὐξήσεσι χαίρομεν τῶν ποινῶν (οὐδὲν γὰρ ἡμῖν οὕτως ὡς φιλανθρωπία καταθύμιον), ἀλλ᾽ ἵνα τῷ δέει τῆς τιμωρίας τοὺς ἁμαρτάνειν προῃρημένους to Our laws. If someone should wish to give more, We leave this to his discretion. 6. If the parents are shown not to have indicated their last wish either by will or some other form of testament, then the heirs, as appropriate in event of intestacy, may claim the entire property of the parents according to Our laws; their holy association shall not hinder them, whether they are called to the succession alone or with others.

7. We desire that those who remain in a monastery or in clerical office enjoy the benefits of this Our eternal law. If any of those, concerning whom We have established the present law, should choose a holy life but afterwards return to worldly society, We order that all their property shall be under the legal control of the church or monastery that they have left.

8. Having ordained the matters above, We reissue a law and order that no Jew or pagan or heretic may have Christian slaves. But if they are detected in such a crime, We decree that the slaves shall be free in every way, according to the tenor of Our previous laws.[118] 9. At present, however, We decree this too: that if any of the aforementioned Jews, or pagans, or heretics should have slaves not yet initiated in the most holy mysteries of the Catholic Faith, and the aforementioned slaves wish to enter the orthodox faith, after they have joined the Catholic Church, they shall by the present law be snatched into liberty in every way; and both the governors of the provinces and the defenders of the Holy Church, as well as the most blessed bishops, shall defend them, while their masters shall receive nothing at all for their cost. 10. And if their masters themselves should afterwards convert to the orthodox faith, they will not be permitted to lead back into servitude those who preceded them toward the orthodox faith. If someone should unlawfully do so, he shall be subject to the heaviest penalties.

11. All governors and most pious bishops, whether of the diocese of Africa, where We know vices of this nature are the most common, or of other provinces, shall see to it that they zealously and most diligently observe all these regulations, which Our Eternity has decreed in the interest of piety. For violators shall be stricken not only with a monetary fine but also with capital punishment.[119]

[55] The same Augustus to John, Praetorian Prefect. pr. The present law serves to recall another law written by Us,[120] which We have deemed it necessary to confirm yet again with a better amendment, namely, by introducing a greater penalty against violators, not because We take joy in increased penalties (for We [118] C. 1.5.20.6 and 1.10.2.

[119] The subscription is lost, but Lounghis et al. give 533 or 534.
[120] C. 1.3.45.9.

τοῦ πλημμελεῖν εἴρξωμεν. 1. Ἴσμεν τοίνυν γράψαντες νόμον λέγοντα μηδεμίαν εἶναι παρρησίαν τοῖς τῶν ἁγιωτάτων ἐκκλησιῶν οἰκονόμοις ἢ τοῖς προεστῶσι ξενώνων ἢ νοσοκομείων ἢ πρωχείων ἢ μοναστηρίων εἴτε ἀνδρῶν εἴτε γυναικῶν ἢ τῶν ἄλλων τῶν τοιούτων συστημάτων, ὧν ἡ προλαβοῦσα διάταξις μέμνηται, τὰ διηνεκῶς αὐτοῖς καταλελειμμένα, ἅπερ ἀννάλια καλοῦσιν οἱ νόμοι, κατά τι σύμφωνον ἢ χρυσίου διαπιπράσκειν ῥητοῦ ἢ ἐκποιεῖν ἄλλως καθ' οἱονδήποτε τρόπον καὶ τοῖς ἐφεξῆς ἀναιρεῖν τὴν ἐντεῦθεν παραψυχήν. καὶ τοὺς πρέποντας τῷ νόμῳ προστεθείκαμεν λογισμούς, ὡς οὐκέτι διὰ ταύτην τὴν ἐγχείρησιν οὐδὲ τῆς προσηγορίας τοῦ ἀνναλίου σωζομένης, εἰ μὴ μέλλοι δίδοσθαι κατ' ἔτος, ἀλλὰ πρὸς ἅπαξ καταβληθὲν εἶτα τελείως ἐξαπόλοιτο.

2. Τοῦτον αὖθις μετά τινος προσθήκης ἀνανεούμενοι τὸν νόμον θεσπίζομεν, εἴ τις ἢ τῶν εὐλαβεστάτων οἰκονόμων ἢ ξενοδόχων ἢ νοσοκόμων ἢ πτωχοτρόφων ἢ γεροντοκόμων ἢ βρεφοτρόφων ἢ ὀρφανοτρόφων ἢ ἀρχιμανδριτῶν ἢ τῶν ἄλλων τῶν περιεχομένων τῇ προτέρᾳ ἡμῶν θείᾳ διατάξει προσώπων τὸ διηνεκῶς καταλειφθὲν τοῖς εὐαγέσιν οἴκοις, ὧν προΐστανται, εἴτε ἐν χρυσίῳ εἴτε ἐν ἄλλοις πράγμασι πειραθείη μεθιστᾶν εἰς τὸ μὴ δοκεῖν εἶναι διηνεκές, ἀλλ' ἐπὶ διαλύσεσιν ἢ πράσεσιν ἤ τισιν ἄλλαις μηχαναῖς τοῦ διηνεκὲς αὐτὸ μένειν παῦσαι πειραθείη παρὰ τὴν δύναμιν τοῦ παρ' ἡμῶν ἤδη φοιτήσαντος ἐπὶ τοῖς τοιούτοις θείου νόμου, μηδεμίαν ἔχειν παντελῶς ἄδειαν τοῦτο ποιεῖν, ἀλλά, κἂν εἰ πράξειε, ἄκυρον εἶναι τὸ γενόμενον καὶ ἄδειαν εἶναι τῷ μετ' αὐτὸν τῆς αὐτῆς ἀντιληψομένῳ φροντίδος ἢ καὶ τούτου ῥαθυμήσαντος, ὡς εἰκός, τοὺς ἐφεξῆς ἅπαντας εὐθὺς ἀνακαλεῖσθαι τὸ γενόμενον καὶ οὕτως ἄκυρον ἀποφαίνειν, ὡς ἂν εἰ μηδὲ τὴν ἀρχὴν ἔτυχε προελθόν, ὥστε καὶ τοὺς ἐν μέσῳ καρποὺς καὶ τόκους καὶ πᾶσαν ὠφέλειαν ἐπὶ τὸν εὐαγῆ φέρεσθαι πάντως οἶκον, τῶν ἐν μέσῳ τολμηθέντων κατὰ πάντα τρόπον ἀργούντων.

3. Ἀνδρὶ μὲν γὰρ ἑκάστῳ δρόμος εἷς ἐστι τοῦ βίου παρὰ τοῦ δημιουργοῦ δεδομένος, οὗ τέλος ἐστὶ πάντως ὁ θάνατος· τοῖς δὲ εὐαγέσιν οἴκοις καὶ ταῖς αὐτῶν συστάσεσιν ἀτελευτήτοις ὑπὸ τοῦ θεοῦ φυλαττομένοις οὐκ ἔνεστιν οὐδὲ κατὰ τὰς κτήσεις ἐπάγεσθαί τι πέρας, ἀλλ' ἕως ἂν διαμένωσιν οἱ εὐαγεῖς οἶκοι (μένουσι δὲ ἄχρι παντὸς καὶ μέχρι γε αὐτοῦ τοῦ τῶν αἰώνων τέλους, ἕως οὗ τὸ Χριστιανῶν ὄνομα παρ' ἀνθρώποις ἔστι τε καὶ προσκυνεῖται), δικαίως μένειν καὶ τὰς διηνεκῶς καταλιμπανομένας χορηγίας ἢ προσόδους ἀθανάτους ἀεὶ ταῖς εὐσεβέσι πράξεσι ταῖς μηδεπώποτε παυομέναις ὑπηρετουμένας.

4. Τὸν δὲ τοιοῦτό τι πλημμελήσαντα καὶ ἀποδόσθαι τὸ πρᾶγμα χρυσίου ἢ κατ' ἄλλην τινὰ πρόφασιν θαρρήσαντα βλάβην μὲν μηδεμίαν ἐπάγειν κατὰ τὸ ἔμπροσθεν εἰρημένον τοῖς καθ' ὧν ταῦτα ἔπραξαν[xiv] οἴκοις, ἀλλ' ἐκείνους μὲν καὶ τὸ χρυσίον ἢ τὸ πρᾶγμα κερδαίνειν, ὅπερ εἰλήφασι, καὶ οὐδὲν ἧττον τὸ καταλελειμμένον ἀπαιτεῖν δίχα τῆς οἱασοῦν ἐλαττώσεως, desire nothing so much as clemency), but so that We may stop those who have chosen to do wrong from offending. 1. For We know that We wrote a law stating that the stewards of the most holy churches or the superintendents of hospices, infirmaries, poorhouses, monasteries of men or convents of women, or any of the other such institutions, of which the previous decree makes mention, may not sell, by contract or for a sum of money, or alienate in any other way – thereby depriving their successors of the solace derived therefrom – property permanently left behind to them, which the laws call an annuity (annalia). And We included appropriate reasons in that law, namely, that after such a transaction not even the very name of annuity is preserved, if it is not awarded yearly but paid at once and utterly lost.

[xiv] ἔπραξεν

2. Renewing, therefore, this law with an amendment, We decree that if any of the most reverend stewards or superintendents of hospices, infirmaries, poorhouses, hospitals for the elderly, foundling-hospitals, orphanages, or abbeys, or any of the other persons included in Our previous divine decree, should attempt to change what has been permanently left behind to the religious houses over which they preside, whether for gold or for other things, so that the bequest no longer appears to be permanent; and if he should attempt by means of contracts or sales or some other devices to stop it from being permanent, in violation of the divine law that has been issued by Us concerning these things, he shall have no freedom whatsoever to do this; and if he should do it, the transaction shall be void; and he who assumes his position after him, or, if he too is negligent, as happens, all successors shall have the power to revoke the transaction and thus render it void, as if it never occurred in the first place. Thus, the fruits and interest and all benefit derived from the property in the meanwhile shall be made over in full to the holy house, and the brazen acts of the intervening time shall be utterly void.

3. For to every man there is one course of life given him by his Maker, the end of which is always death: but it is impossible to set an end to the holy houses and their congregations, unending under the protection of God, even with respect to their possessions. As long as the holy houses endure (and they will endure for all time and till the end of the ages, as long as the name of Christians is among men and adored), then righteously shall also the fortunes or revenues, bequeathed to them forever, remain undying, ever serving unceasing pious undertakings.

4. He who commits such an offense and dares to alienate such a bequest, for money or on some other pretext, shall, according to what We have said above, cause no harm to the houses to which he has done this; but they shall keep as profit the money or property that they have received and nonetheless claim what was left behind to them, without any diminution. He who has done this, however, his heirs and successors, and also his property shall be liable to his partner in the contract and, with his own person and property, shall award an αὐτὸν δὲ τὸν τοῦτο πράξαντα κληρονόμους τε αὐτοῦ καὶ διαδόχους καὶ τὰ τούτου πράγματα ἐνέχεσθαι τῷ πρὸς αὐτὸν συναλλάξαντι καὶ περιποιεῖν αὐτῷ τόγε ἐπὶ τῷ οἰκείῳ προσώπῳ καὶ τοῖς πράγμασι τοῖς ἑαυτοῦ πρὸς τὸν συμβαλόντα τὸ ἀζήμιον, ὅπως ἂν πρὸς μὲν τὸν εὐαγέστατον οἶκον, ὅνπερ οὐ δέον κατέβλαψε, μηδεμίαν ἐλπίζοι τῶν δεδομένων ἀνάληψιν ἢ τοῦ γεγονότος σύστασιν, ὅσον δὲ πρὸς αὐτὸν τὸν συμβαλόντα πᾶσαν ἔχοι παρὰ τῶν νόμων ἄδειαν χωρεῖν ἐπ' αὐτόν καὶ κληρονόμους αὐτοῦ καὶ τὰ αὐτοῦ πράγματα καὶ τὸ δεδομένον, εἰ ἰσχύσειεν, εἰσπράττειν, ἵνα, εἰ μὴ τῇ πρὸς θεὸν εὐλαβείᾳ, τῷ δέει γοῦν τῆς ἰδίας αὐτῶν περιουσίας καὶ τῶν οἰκείων κληρονόμων ὀκνηρότεροι γίνοιντο πρὸς τὰς τοιαύτας συνθήκας, ἃς ὡμολογημένως ἐπ' οὐδενὶ χρηστῷ πράττουσιν, ἀλλ' ἢ χρήμασι διαφθαρέντες ἢ παθῶν τινων ἐλάττους γεγονότες.

5. Ἅπερ ἅπαντα διὰ τοῦδε τοῦ θείου νόμου κωλύοντες καὶ τοῦτον τοῖς ἱεροῖς ἡμῶν ἐγγραφῆναι νόμοις θεσπίζοντες ἀνατίθεμεν αὐτὸν τῷ δεσπότῃ τῶν ὅλων θεῷ καὶ σωτῆρι ἡμῶν Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ, καλήν τινα καὶ πρέπουσαν αὐτῷ θυσίαν καὶ ταύτην προσάγοντες.

D. prid. id. Sept. Constantinopoli dn. Iustiniano pp. A. IIII et Paulino vc. conss.

IIII De Episcopali Audientia et de Diversis Capitulis, Quae ad Ius Curamque et Reverentiam Pontificalem Pertinent

[1] Impp. Valentinianus et Valens AA. ad Iulianum comitem Orientis. Negotiatores, si qui ad domum nostram pertinent, ne commodum mercandi videantur excedere, Christianos, quibus verus cultus est, adiuvare pauperes et positos in necessitate provideant.

D. XV k. Mai. Constantinopoli divo Ioviano et Varroniano conss.

[2] Idem AA. ad Claudium pu. Si clericus ante definitivam sententiam frustratoriae dilationis causa ad appellationis auxilium convolaverit, multam quinquaginta librarum argenti, quam contra huiusmodi appellatores sanctio generalis imponit, cogatur expendere. hoc autem non fisco nostro volumus accedere, sed pauperibus fideliter erogari.

D. VIII id. Iul. Valentiniano np. et Victore conss.

[3] Impppp. Gratianus Valentinianus Theodosius et Arcadius AAAA. Neoterio pp. pr. Nemo deinceps tardiores fortassis adfatus nostrae indemnity to his partner in the contract. Thus, he may expect no restitution for what he gave from the most holy house, which he vainly injured, nor the effect (the benefit) of the transaction. As for his partner in the contract, he shall have full freedom by the laws to proceed against him, his heirs, and his property and to collect what was given, if he is able. Thus, if not from reverence toward God, at least from fear for their property and that of their heirs, they shall become less eager for such contracts, which they patently make to no good end, but rather do so corrupted by money or having succumbed to some fit of passion.

5. Putting an end to all these things by this divine law and decreeing that this law be registered in Our sacred laws, We dedicate it to God, Lord of All, and to Our Savior Jesus Christ, offering this too as a fine sacrifice worthy of Him.

Given September 12, at Constantinople, in the consulship of Our Lord Justinian, Ever Augustus, for the fourth time, and the vir clarissimus Paulinus (534).

Fourth Title Episcopal Adjudication and Various Chapters Relating to the Rights, Responsibilities, and Reverence of Bishops

[1][121] Emperors VALENTINIAN and VALENS Augusti to Julian, Count of the East. Lest they seem to profit from commerce excessively, any merchants that belong to Our House shall see to it that they aid the Christians, belonging to the true faith, who are poor and in difficult circumstances.

Given April 17, at Constantinople, in the consulship of the deified Jovian and Varronianus (364).

[2][122] The same Augusti to Claudius, Urban Prefect. If a clergyman resorts to appeal for the purpose of delaying proceedings before a final ruling,[123] he shall be compelled to pay a fine of 50 pounds of silver, which the general decree[124] imposes on appellants of this kind. We desire that this sum not go to the Treasury but be faithfully spent on the poor.

Given July 8, in the consulship of Valentinian, Most Noble Boy, and Victor (369).

[3][125] Emperors GRATIAN, VALENTINIAN, THEODOSIUS, and ARCADIUS Augusti to Neoterius, Praetorian Prefect. pr. No one hereafter shall await the [121] = C.Th. 13.1.5 (addressed to Secundus, Praetorian Prefect); combine with C. 4.63.1. The abridgement of this constitution by the CJ compilers has considerably altered its meaning.

[122] = C. 7.65.4a, where the constitution is correctly ascribed also to Gratian. Claudius was actually the Proconsul of Africa.

[123] That is, if he makes an appellatio frustratoria or moratoria.

[124] C.Th. 11.36.15–16.

[125] pr.-3 = C.Th. 9.38.8, §4 = C.Th. 9.38.6.

perennitatis expectet: exequantur iudices, quod indulgere consuevimus. ubi primum dies paschalis extiterit, nullum teneat carcer inclusum, omnium vincula solvantur. 1. Sed ab his secernimus eos, quibus contaminari potius gaudia laetitiamque communem, si dimittantur, animadvertimus. 2. Quis enim sacrilego diebus sanctis indulgeat? quis adultero vel stupri vel incesti reo tempore castitatis ignoscat? quis non raptorem virginis in summa quiete et gaudio communi persequatur instantius? 3. Nullam accipiat requiem vinculorum, qui quiescere sepultos quadam sceleris immanitate non sinit: patiatur tormenta veneficus, maleficus, adulterator violatorque monetae: homicida et parricida quod fecit semper expectet: reus etiam maiestatis de domino, adversus quem talia molitus est, veniam sperare non debet.

4. His ergo tali quoque sub absolutione damnatis indultum nostrae serenitatis eo praecepti fine concludimus, ut remissionem veniae crimina nisi semel commissa non habeant, ne in eos liberalitatis Augustae referatur humanitas, qui impunitatem veteris admissi non emendationi potius quam consuetudini deputarunt.

D. v k. Mart. Mediolano Arcadio A. et Bautone vc. conss.

[4] Imppp. Theodosius Arcadius et Honorius AAA. Rufino pp. Mimae et quae ludibrio corporis sui quaestum faciunt publice habitu earum virginum, quae deo dicatae sunt, non utantur.

D. III k. Iul. Heracleae Arcadio A. III et Honorio A. II conss.

[5] Impp. Arcadius et Honorius AA. Gennadio praefecto Augustali. Archigerontes et dioecetae ergasiotanorum non nisi Christiani dirigantur. quod officium tuum sollicite observet excubiis.

D. non. Febr. Constantinopoli pp. Alexandriae Eutycheo Arcadio IIII et Honorio III AA. conss.

[6] Idem AA. Rufino pp. pr. Addictos supplicio et pro criminum immanitate damnatos nulli clericorum vel monachorum, eorum etiam, quos synoditas vocant, per vim atque usurpationem vindicare liceat ac tenere, sed reos ad locum poenae sub prosecutione pergentes nullus utterances of Our Eternity, which perchance may be late: the governors shall carry out what We are accustomed to grant. As soon as the first day of Easter dawns, the jail shall hold no man shut inside it; the chains of all shall be loosened. 1. But We separate from these persons those who, We have observed, instead spoil the common joy and happiness, if released. 2. Who would show clemency to a sacrilegious man on holy days? Who at a time for chastity would pardon an adulterer or one guilty of debauchery or incest? Who would not persecute the ravisher of a virgin more insistently at a time of the greatest peace and general joy? 3. He who by the grossness of his crime does not permit the dead to rest shall receive no rest from his chains. The poisoner, the sorcerer, and the counterfeiter and violator of coinage shall suffer torments. The homicide and parricide shall always await what they have done (killing); and one guilty of treason shall not hope for pardon from his master, against whom he plotted.

4. Therefore, for those condemned persons who are also eligible for such absolution, We restrict the indulgence of Our Serenity by this limitation of Our law: only crimes committed once shall receive pardon, lest the kindness of the August Generosity be conferred on those who considered forgiveness of their old offence not inspiration for improvement but an excuse for habit.

Given February 25, at Milan, in the consulship of Arcadius Augustus and the vir clarissimus Bauto (385).

[4][126] Emperors THEODOSIUS, ARCADIUS, and HONORIUS Augusti to Rufinus, Praetorian Prefect. Pantomime actresses and women who earn their livelihood by disgracing their body shall not publicly wear the dress of virgins dedicated to God.

Given June 29, at Heraclea, in the consulship of Arcadius, for the third time, and Honorius, for the second time, Augusti (394).

[5][127] Emperors ARCADIUS and HONORIUS Augusti to Gennadius, Augustal Prefect. Only Christians shall be appointed elders and superintendents of workmen. Your staff shall observe this with diligent vigilance.

Given February 5, at Constantinople; posted in Alexandria in the Eutychianum, in the consulship of Arcadius, for the fourth time, and Honorius, for the third time, Augusti (396).

[6][128] The same Augusti to Rufinus, Praetorian Prefect. pr. No clergymen or monks, or yet those called "synodites,"[129] may by force or unlawful seizure [126] = C.Th. 15.7.12.1; combine with C. 11.41.4. Seeck dates to May 30.

[127] = C.Th. 14.27.1 (with a considerably different text).
[128] = C. 7.62.29 (in part); C.Th. 9.40.16.pr.-1; §3 = C.Th. 11.30.57 (both to Eutychianus, Praetorian Prefect); combine with C. 1.3.11–12, 1.4.7, and C.Th. 16.2.33.
[129] A name for those who followed the Chalcedonian formula.

teneat aut defendat. 1. Sed sciat se cognitor triginta librarum auri multa, primates officii capitali esse sententia feriendos, nisi usurpatio ista aut protinus vindicetur aut, si tanta clericorum aut monachorum audacia est, ut bellum potius quam iudicium futurum esse existimetur, ad clementiam nostram commissa referantur, ut nostro arbitrio mox severior ultio procedat. 2. Ad episcoporum sane culpam ut cetera redundabit, si quid forte in ea parte regionis, in qua ipsi populos Christianae religionis doctrinae insinuatione moderantur, ex his, quae fieri hac lege prohibuimus, a monachis perpetratum esse cognoverint nec vindicaverint. 3. Quibus in causa criminali humanitatis consideratione, si tempora suffragantur, interponendae provocationis copiam non negamus.

D. VI k. Aug. Mnizo Honorio A. IIII et Eutychiano conss.

[7] Idem AA. Eutychiano pp. Si qui ex consensu apud sacrae legis antistitem litigare voluerint, non vetabuntur, sed experientur illius (in civili dumtaxat negotio) arbitri more residentis sponte iudicium. quod his obesse non poterit nec debebit, quos ad praedicti cognitoris examen conventos potius afuisse quam sponte venisse constiterit.

D. VI k. Aug. Mediolani Honorio A. IIII et Eutychiano conss.

[8] Imppp. Arcadius Honorius et Theodosius AAA. Theodoro pp. Episcopale iudicium sit ratum omnibus, qui se audiri a sacerdotibus elegerint, eamque illorum iudicationi adhibendam esse reverentiam, quam vestris referre necesse est potestatibus, a quibus non licet provocare. per iudicum quoque officia, ne sit cassa episcopalis cognitio, definitioni executio tribuatur.

D. id. Dec. Basso et Philippo conss.

[9] Impp. Honorius et Theodosius AA. Caeciliano pp. pr. Iudices dominicis diebus productos reos e custodia carcerali videant interrogent, ne his humanitas clausis per corruptos carcerum custodes negetur: victualem substantiam non habentibus faciant ministrare libellis duobus aut tribus diurnis vel quot existimaverint commentarienses decretis, quorum protect and detain men sentenced to punishment and condemned for the enormity of their crimes; no one shall detain or defend criminals proceeding under escort to the place of punishment. 1. But the governor shall know that he shall be stricken with a fine of 30 pounds of gold, his chiefs of staff with capital punishment, unless either this usurpation is immediately punished or, if the audacity of the clergy or monks is so great that a war rather than a trial seems imminent, their crimes are reported to Our Clemency, so that at Our discretion still harsher retribution may ensue. 2. It will indeed be laid to the fault of the bishops, as in other matters, if perchance, in the part of the region where they govern the peoples of Christian faith by instructing them in its teachings, they know that one of the acts that We forbid by this law has been committed by monks, yet do not punish it. 3. By reason of compassion, We do not deny them the power of making an appeal in a criminal case, if time allows.

Given July 27, at Mnizum, in the consulship of Honorius Augustus, for the fourth time, and Eutychianus (398).

[7][130] The same Augusti to Eutychianus, Praetorian Prefect. If any persons agree to litigate before a bishop of the sacred law, they shall not be forbidden to do so, but they may voluntarily go to law in the court of the bishop, presiding as an arbiter, in civil cases only. It neither can nor should be held against anyone that, when summoned to the scrutiny of the aforesaid examiner, they are known to have stayed away rather than willingly come.

Given July 27, at Milan, in the consulship of Honorius Augustus, for the fourth time, and Eutychianus (398).

[8][131] Emperors Arcadius, Honorius, and Theodosius Augusti to Theodorus, Praetorian Prefect. An episcopal trial shall be valid for all who choose to be tried by bishops, and the same reverence must be paid to its adjudication as to your powers, from which it is not permitted to appeal. Also, lest episcopal hearings be in vain, their rulings must be carried out by the official staffs of the governors.

Given December 13, in the consulship of Bassus and Philippus (408).

[9][132] Emperors Honorius and Theodosius Augusti to Caecilianus, Praetorian Prefect. pr. Governors shall see to it on Sundays that they question accused persons brought forth from the custody of the prison, so that humane treatment shall not be denied to the incarcerated by corrupt guards. The governors shall have victuals provided to those who have none by decreeing two or three small [130] Combine with C. 1.4.6, and constitutions mentioned there.

[131] = C.Th. 1.27.2
[132] = C.Th. 9.3.7; combine with C. 1.55.7–9, 4.20.11, C.Th. 9.2.5–6, 9.31.1, 9.36.2, 9.37.4.

sumptibus proficiant alimoniae pauperum: quos ad lavacrum sub fida custodia duci oportet. 1. Multa iudicibus viginti librarum auri et officiis eorum eiusdem ponderis constituta, ordinibus quoque trium librarum auri multa proposita, si saluberrima statuta contempserint. nec deerit antistitum Christianae religionis cura laudabilis, quae ad observationem constituti iudicis hanc ingerat monitionem.

D. VIII k. Febr. Ravennae Honorio VIII et Theodosio III AA. conss.

[10] Idem AA. Caeciliano pp. pr. Mathematicos, si non parati sint codicibus erroris proprii sub oculis episcoporum incendio concrematis catholicae religionis cultui fidem tradere numquam ad errorem praeteritum redituri, non solum urbe Roma, sed etiam omnibus civitatibus pelli decernimus. 1. Qui si hoc non fecerint et contra clementiae nostrae salubre constitutum in civitatibus fuerint comprehensi vel secreta erroris sui et professionis insinuaverint, deportationis poenam excipiant.

D. k. Febr. Ravenna Honorio VIII et Theodosio III AA. conss.

[11] Idem AA. Theodoro pp. Christianos proximorum locorum volumus sollicitudinem gerere, ut Romanos captivos qui reversi fuerint nemo teneat, nemo iniuriis aut damnis adficiat.

D. III id. Dec. Ravenna Honorio VIII et Theodosio III AA. conss.

[12] Impp. Theodosius et Valentinianus AA. Florentio pp. Si lenones patres vel domini suis filiabus vel ancillis peccandi necessitatem imposuerint, liceat filiabus vel ancillis episcoporum implorato suffragio omni miseriarum necessitate absolvi.

D. XI k. Mai. Felice et Tauro conss.

[13] Imp. Marcianus A. Constantino pp. pr. Decernimus, ut, quicumque catholicarum ecclesiarum, quae sub viro religiosissimo archiepiscopo coins (libellae) a day, or however many the jailors (commentarienses) consider sufficient; the alms for the poor shall go toward their expenses. They shall be brought to a bath under trusty guard. 1. A fine of 20 pounds of gold has been established for governors, and the same amount for their staffs, and a fine of 3 pounds of gold has been fixed for city councils (ordines), if they ignore these most salutary provisions. Nor shall the praiseworthy supervision of Christian bishops be lacking, who shall impose on the current governor a warning to observe this law.

Given January 25, at Ravenna, in the consulship of Honorius, for the eighth time, and Theodosius, for the third time, Augusti (409).

[10][133] The same Augusti to Caecilianus, Praetorian Prefect. pr. We decree that astrologers (mathematici) shall be expelled not only from the city of Rome, but from all cities, unless they are prepared to entrust themselves to the worship of the Catholic faith, never to return to their past error, after the books of their error have been burned before the eyes of the bishops. 1. If they do not do this and, contrary to the salutary decree of Our Clemency, are caught in the cities or should spread the mysteries of their error and profession, they shall receive the punishment of deportation.

Given February 1, at Ravenna, in the consulship of Honorius, for the eighth time, and Theodosius, for the third time, Augusti (409).

[11][134] The same Augusti to Theodorus, Praetorian Prefect. We desire that the Christians in the nearest places (to the Roman frontier) take care that no one detains Roman captives who have returned, that no one inflicts outrages or loss on them.

Given December 11, at Ravenna, in the consulship of Honorius, for the eighth time, and Theodosius, for the third time, Augusti (409).

[12][135] Emperors Theodosius and Valentinian Augusti to Florentius, Praetorian Prefect. If fathers or slave masters acting as pimps impose the necessity of sinning on their daughters or slave girls, the daughters or slave girls may implore the aid of the bishops and be released from all the duress of their miseries.

Given April 21, in the consulship of Felix and Taurus (428).

[13][136] Emperor Marcian Augustus to Constantinus, Praetorian Prefect. pr. We decree that whosoever should wish to sue the most reverend steward of the

133 = C.Th. 9.16.12.
134 = C.Th. 5.7.2, Sirm. 16; combine with C. 8.50.20. Seeck dates to December 3, 408, on the basis of the Sirmondian constitution; Krüger also prefers this.
135 = C. 11.41.6, C.Th. 15.8.2.
136 Combine perhaps with C. 1.3.25.

huius almae urbis sunt, reverentissimum oeconomum sive de ecclesiasticis sive de propriis et ad ipsum solum pertinentibus causis vel quemcumque alterum earundem ecclesiarum clericum aliqua voluerit lite pulsare, apud memoratum beatissimum archiepiscopum causam dicat in negotiis audiendis fidem ac sinceritatem geminam praebiturum et sacerdotis et iudicis. 1. Volentibus tamen actoribus pateat episcopale iudicium: ac nullus, qui huiuscemodi intendit in sacrosanctas ecclesias vel praedictos clericos actionem, ad religiosissimum antistitem cognitorem ducatur invitus.

D. VIII ... April. Varane et Iohanne conss.

[14] Αὐτοκράτωρ Λέων αὐτῷ δήμῳ. pr. Μήτε δοῦλον μήτε ἐλεύθερον σῶμα τολμάτω τις εἰς πορνείαν προάγειν ἢ προϊστάναι, μηδὲ εἰ θυμελικὸς εἴη ἢ ἄλλως σκηνικός. εἰ δὲ δοῦλον εἴη τὸ προσταχθέν,[xv] ἐκδικείσθω εἰς ἐλευθερίαν παρὰ παντὸς προσιόντος δίχα τινὸς δαπάνης τοῖς κατὰ τόπον ἄρχουσιν ἢ τοῖς θεοφιλεστάτοις ἐπισκόποις. 1. Οἷς μελήσει τὸ μηδὲ ἄκουσαν γυναῖκα δούλην ἢ ἐλευθέραν συνεῖναι συγχωρεῖν μίμοις ἢ χοροῖς ἢ ἄλλην θέαν ἐν τοῖς θεάτροις ἐκτελεῖν ἀναγκάζεσθαι.

[15] Impp. Leo et Anthemius AA. Nicostrato pp. Nemo vel in foro magnitudinis tuae vel in provinciali iudicio vel apud quemquam iudicem accedat ad togatorum consortium, nisi sacrosanctis catholicae religionis fuerit imbutus mysteriis. sin autem aliquid quoquo modo vel quadam machinatione factum vel attemptatum fuerit, officium quidem sublimitatis tuae centum librarum auri iacturam pro condemnatione sustineat, idem vero, quicumque ausus fuerit contra providum nostrae serenitatis decretum officium advocationis per subreptionem adripere et prohibitum patrocinium praestiterit, advocationis officio remotus stilum proscriptionis atque perpetui exilii specialiter sustinebit: scituris etiam provinciarum rectoribus, quod is, sub cuius administratione aliquid huiusmodi fuerit attemptatum, partis bonorum dimidiae proscriptionem et poenam exilii per quinquennium sustinebit.

D. pridie k. April. Constantinopoli Anthemio A. II cons.

[16] Idem AA. Erythrio pp. Si legibus prohibitae non sint speratae nuptiae et post arras sponsalicias sponsa coniugium sponsi propter religionis diversitatem recusaverit, si quidem probatum fuerit ante datas

[xv] προσταθέν

Catholic churches under the jurisdiction of the most pious archbishop of This Generous City or any other clergyman of these churches, whether concerning matters pertaining to the Church or pertaining to the plaintiff alone, he shall plead his case before the aforementioned most blessed archbishop, who in hearing such cases shall show double honesty and integrity, both as a priest and as a judge. 1. It is to consenting litigants, however, that the episcopal court is open. And no one who brings such an action against the holy churches or the aforesaid clergymen may be brought unwillingly before the most pious (arch) bishop (antistes) as judge.

Given (...)[137] in the consulship of Varanes and John (456).

[14][138] Emperor LEO Augustus to the People. pr. No one shall dare to lead into prostitution or prostitute either a slave or free person, not even if he is an actor or some other manner of stage-worker. If the prostituted person is a slave, he may be claimed as free without any payment by anyone who approaches the local magistrates or most reverend bishops. 1. It shall be their responsibility to ensure that no slave or free woman is forced against her will to associate with pantomime actors or choruses or to exhibit any other spectacle in theaters.

[15][139] Emperors LEO and ANTHEMIUS Augusti to Nicostratus, Praetorian Prefect. No one shall be admitted to the Order of Advocates (togatorum consortium), either in the court of Your Greatness or in a provincial court or before any judge, unless he has been initiated in the holy mysteries of the Catholic faith. If, however, any such thing is done or attempted by any means or by some contrivance, the staff of Your Sublimity shall suffer the loss of 100 pounds of gold, if found guilty. He, however, who dares to seize the position of Advocate secretly, contrary to the prudent decree of Our Serenity, and provides illicit patronage, shall be removed from his position as Advocate and suffer the sentence of confiscation and permanent exile. The provincial governors, too, must know that anyone under whose administration anything of this sort is attempted shall have half his property confiscated and be sent into exile for five years.

Given March 31, at Constantinople, in the consulship of Anthemius Augustus, for the second time (468).

[16][140] The same Augusti to Erythrius, Praetorian Prefect. If a prospective marriage is not forbidden by the statutes, and the bride-to-be, after receiving the earnest money for engagement, refuses to marry her fiancé on account of [137] D. viii ... April.: the date is thus either March 25 (preferred by Seeck) or April 6.

[138] = C. 11.41.7, which is used to reconstruct the inscription. Date 457–468.
[139] = C. 2.6.8.
[140] = C. 5.1.5.3; combine with C. 1.18.13, 5.6.8, 5.30.3.

easdem arras sponsalicias hoc idem mulierem vel parentes eius cognovisse, sibi debeant imputare. si vero horum ignari sponsalicias arras susceperint vel post arras datas talis causa paenitentiae intercesserit, isdem tantummodo redditis super alterius simpli poena liberi custodiantur. quod simili modo etiam de sponsis super recipiendis nec ne arris praestitis custodiri censemus.

D. k. Iul. Constantinopoli Marciano cons.

[17] [Αὐτοκράτωρ Ἀναστάσιος Α.], ... Θεσπίζομεν σιτώνην ..., Ὅταν ἔν τινι πόλει σιτώνου γένηται χρεία, κατὰ δοκιμασίαν καὶ ἐπιλογὴν καθ' ἑκάστην πόλιν ἐπισκόπου καὶ τῶν ἐν τοῖς κτήτορσι πρωτευόντων γινέσθω ἡ ἐπὶ αὐτῷ προβολή, οὐ κατὰ τὸ δοκοῦν τοῖς προβαλλομένοις οὐδὲ ἐφ' οἷς ἂν βουληθείησαν προσώποις, ἀλλὰ μόνων τῶν ἐπὶ τῆς χώρας ἐκείνης ταξεωτῶν τῶν στρατευομένων καὶ τῶν ἀποθεμένων τὴν τάξιν, διὰ τῶν εἰρημένων προσώπων πρὸς τὴν σιτωνίαν προβαλλομένων, ἐπειδὴ εὐχερέστερον οὗτοι ταῖς δημοσίαις χρείαις ἐντετριμμένοι ἐκ μακρῶν χρόνων τὸ τῆς σιτωνίας διανύουσι βάρος. ὁ δὲ παραβαίνων ἢ παραβαθῆναι συγχωρῶν τὸν νόμον λ' χρυσίου λίτρας ἐπιτίμιον καταβαλλέτω.

[18] [Ὁ αὐτὸς βασιλεύς]. ... Θεσπίζομεν ... Οἱ ὑφεστῶτες καὶ τῇ παραφυλακῇ προσκαρτεροῦντες στρατιῶται ἐν τοῖς σεδέτοις αὐτῶν τὸ προσφερόμενον εἶδος ἐκ τῶν ἐν τῇ πόλει ἢ τῇ ἐνορίᾳ αὐτῆς γεωργουμένων δεχέσθωσαν ὑπὲρ τῶν ἀννόνων αὐτῶν δοκιμασίᾳ τοῦ ἐπισκόπου καὶ τοῦ ἄρχοντος ἢ τοῦ ἐκδίκου ἐξ ἀπολείψεως τοῦ ἄρχοντος, καὶ οὐκ ἀναγκάζεται ὁ συντελεστὴς ἀπαργυρισμὸν διδόναι.

[19] Idem A. Eustathio pp. Iubemus eos tantummodo ad defensorum curam peragendam ordinari, qui sacrosanctis orthodoxae religionis imbuti mysteriis hoc imprimis sub gestorum testificatione, praesente quoque religiosissimo fidei orthodoxae antistite, per depositiones cum sacramenti religione celebrandas patefecerint. ita enim eos praecipimus ordinari, ut reverentissimorum episcoporum nec non clericorum et honoratorum ac possessorum et curialium decreto constituantur.

difference of religion, if then it should be shown that the woman or her parents knew of this fact before the aforesaid earnest money for engagement was given, they shall have no one but themselves to blame (for its loss). But if, in fact, they accepted the earnest money for engagement in ignorance of such matters, or some just reason for rescinding the engagement arose thereafter, once they have returned only as much as they received, they shall be freed from the obligation of paying the same amount beyond this as a penalty. We rule that this shall in like manner apply to grooms as to whether they shall receive back the betrothal money given, or not.

Given July 1, at Constantinople, in the consulship of Marcianus (472).

[17][141] (Emperor ANASTASIUS Augustus) ... We decree that a purveyor of grain (sitonēs) ... Whenever there is need in any city for a purveyor of grain, his appointment shall be made according to the judgment and choice of the bishop of the city and of the foremost landholders, not according to the opinion of those who nominate candidates nor from among the persons that they desire; but only members of the provincial staff (taxeotai) of the region, who are serving or have served, shall be elected purveyors by the aforementioned persons, inasmuch as they who are versed in public affairs from long service will more easily bear the burden of the office of purveyor. Whoever violates this law or permits it to be violated shall pay a fine of 30 pounds of gold.

(491–505).

[18][142] (The same Emperor) ... We decree ... Soldiers present and performing guard duty in their stations shall receive the appropriate amount in kind for their rations (annonae) from the farmers of the city or its territory, according to the estimation of the bishop and the governor or defender (of the city) in default of a governor; and the tax payer shall not be forced to convert his payment into cash.

(491–505)

[19][143] The same Augustus to Eustathius, Praetorian Prefect. We order that only those persons shall be appointed to perform the duties of defenders who have been initiated in the holy mysteries of the orthodox faith and have demonstrated this specifically by declaration in the public records and depositions to be made solemnly under oath in the presence of a most pious bishop of the orthodox faith. We order that defenders be appointed in such a way that they are installed by the resolution of the most reverend bishop and clergymen, men of rank, landholders, and curials.

[141] Partly = C. 10.27.3 pr., from which Krüger has restored the inscription.
[142] = C. 12.37.19.
[143] = C. 1.55.11.

D. XIII k. Mai. Sabiniano et Theodoro conss.

[20] [Αὐτοκράτωρ Ἰουστινιανὸς Α.] Οὐδεὶς στρατεύεται, εἰ μὴ ἐν ὑπομνήμασι μαρτυρηθῇ ἐπὶ τριῶν ἐπὶ τῶν ἁγίων εὐαγγελίων Χριστιανὸς ὀρθόδοξος, συνισταμένης τῆς πράξεως παρὰ τῷ ἄρχοντι, ἔνθα μέλλει στρατεύεσθαι, δύο νομισμάτων ὑπὲρ αὐτῆς διδομένων. εἰ δὲ τοῦτο παραμεληθῇ, δίδωσιν ὁ ἄρχων πεντήκοντα λίτρας καὶ ἡ τάξις αὐτοῦ κʹ καὶ ὁ στρατευσάμενος ιʹ καὶ ἐκβάλλεται καὶ οἱ ψευδομαρτυρήσαντες σωματικῶς τιμωροῦνται καὶ αἱ ποιναὶ τοῖς πριβάτοις εἰσάγονται κινδύνῳ τοῦ κόμητος.

[21] Idem A. Menae pp. pr. Si praesens quidem sit, qui pecuniam numerasse vel alias res dedisse scriptus est, aliquam vero administrationem in provinciis gerat, ut difficile esse videatur denuntiationem eidem non numeratae pecuniae mittere, licentiam damus ei, qui memorata exceptione uti velit, alios iudices adire et per eos manifestare, cui exceptionem huiusmodi obicit, factam a se super non numerata pecunia querellam esse. 1. Quod si non sit alius administrator civilis vel militaris vel per aliquam causam difficile sit ei qui memoratam querellam opponit adire eum et ea quae dicta sunt facere, licentiam damus et per virum reverentissimum episcopum eandem suam exceptionem creditori manifestare et ita tempus statutum interrumpere. 2. Quod etiam in exceptione non numeratae dotis locum habere receptum est.

D. k. Iul. Constantinopoli dn. Iustiniano A. II cons.

[22] Ὁ αὐτὸς βασιλεὺς Μηνᾷ ἐπάρχῳ πραιτωρίων. pr. Οὐδένα ἐμβάλλεσθαι ἐν φυλακῇ δίχα προστάξεως τῶν κατὰ τὴν εὐδαίμονα ταύτην πόλιν ἢ ἐν ἐπαρχίᾳ ἐνδόξων ἢ περιβλέπτων ἢ λαμπροτάτων ἀρχόντων ἢ τῶν ἐν ταῖς πόλεσιν ἐκδίκων βουλόμεθα. 1. Ἐπὶ δὲ τῶν ἐμβληθέντων ἢ ἐμβαλλομένων τοὺς θεοφιλεστάτους τῶν τόπων ἐπισκόπους μίαν ἑκάστης ἑβδομάδος ἡμέραν τὴν τετράδα ἢ τὴν παρασκευὴν τοὺς ἐν ταῖς φυλακαῖς διερευνᾶσθαι καὶ σὺν ἀκριβείᾳ μανθάνειν τὰς τῆς αὐτῶν κατοχῆς αἰτίας καὶ εἴτε οἰκέται τυγχάνοιεν ὄντες εἴτε ἐλεύθεροι, εἴτε ἐπὶ χρήμασιν εἴτε ἐπὶ ἄλλοις ἐγκλήμασιν εἴτε ἐπὶ φόνοις ἐμβεβλημένοι. 2. Παρασκευάζειν τοὺς ἐνδοξοτάτους καὶ περιβλέπτους καὶ λαμπροτάτους ἄρχοντας ταύτης τε τῆς εὐδαίμονος πόλεως καὶ τῶν ἐπαρχιῶν ἐκεῖνα πράττειν ἐπ᾽ αὐτοῖς,

Given April 19, in the consulship of Sabinianus and Theodorus (505).

[20] (Emperor Justinian Augustus.) No one shall serve in the imperial service unless he is confirmed in the official records as an orthodox Christian by the testimony of three witnesses (swearing) upon the holy gospels. The record shall be made before the governor where he shall serve, having paid 2 solidi for it. If this regulation is violated, the governor shall pay 50 pounds of gold, his staff 20 pounds, and the prospective clerk 10 pounds; and he shall be expelled, and those who bore false witness shall receive corporal punishment; the penalties shall be added to the Privy Purse (res privata) at the peril of the Count.[144]

[21][145] The same Augustus to Menas, Praetorian Prefect. pr. If someone who is alleged to have paid money or delivered other things is present but holds some administrative post in the provinces, so that it seems difficult to serve him with an accusation of money not paid (denuntiatio non numeratae pecuniae), We grant him who wishes to make use of this defense permission to go before other judges and, through them, to make known to the person against whom he uses this defense that he has made a complaint of money not paid. 1. But if there is no other civil or military administrator, or it is for some other reason difficult for him who objects with the aforementioned complaint to go before him and do what has been said, We give him permission to make known his defense to his creditor also through the most reverend bishop and thus interrupt the established period of time. 2. It is accepted that this also applies to the defense of a dowry not paid (exceptio non numeratae dotis).

Given June 1, at Constantinople, in the consulship of Our Lord Justinian Augustus, for the second time (528).

[22][146] The same Augustus to Menas, Praetorian Prefect. pr. We desire that no one be thrown in prison in This Blessed City or in the Provinces unless by order of the viri illustres, viri spectabiles, or viri clarissimi magistrates or the Defenders of the cities. 1. Moreover, concerning those who have been or shall be imprisoned, the most reverend bishops of each place shall examine them in prison once a week on the fourth day or on the Day of Preparation[147] and carefully learn the reasons for their imprisonment and whether they are slaves or free men, whether they were imprisoned for debt or for other charges or for murder. 2. The viri illustres, spectabiles, and clarissimi magistrates of This Blessed City and the provinces shall ensure that the prisoners are treated as 144 The subscription is lost, but Lounghis et al. date to 519/520 (under Justin).

145 = C. 4.30.14.5–6 (with some changes); combine with C. 4.2.17, 4.20.18, 4.21.17, 4.30.15(?), 5.15.3, 10.22.4 (whence the date is emended).

146 §2 = C. 9.4.6; combine with C. 1.4.23, 9.5.2, 9.47.26.

147 Preparation for the Sabbath, i.e., Friday.

ἅπερ ἡ πρὸς τοὺς ἐνδοξοτάτους ἐπάρχους περὶ τούτου καταπεμφθεῖσα θεία ἡμῶν διαγορεύει διάταξις, ἀδείας διδομένης τοῖς κατὰ καιρὸν θεοφιλεστάτοις ἐπισκόποις, εἴ τινα ῥᾳθυμίαν ἴδοιεν γινομένην παρὰ τῶν κατὰ καιρὸν ἐνδοξοτάτων καὶ μεγαλοπρεπεστάτων καὶ λαμπροτάτων ἀρχόντων ἢ παρὰ τῶν πειθομένων αὐτοῖς τάξεων, ταύτην μηνύειν, ὡς ἂν ἡ προσήκουσα κατὰ τῶν ῥᾳθυμούντων ἐνεχθείη κίνησις.

D. XV k. Febr. Constantinopoli Decio cons.

[23] Ὁ αὐτὸς βασιλεὺς Μηνᾷ ἐπάρχῳ πραιτωρίων. Ἰδιωτικὰς φυλακὰς πᾶσι τρόποις ἐν πόλεσιν ἢ ἐν κώμαις ἀπαγορεύομεν καθίστασθαι, αὐτῶν δηλαδὴ τῶν κατεχομένων προνοίᾳ τῶν κατὰ τόπον θεοφιλεστάτων ἐπισκόπων τῆς κατοχῆς ἀφιεμένων.

D. XII k. Febr. Constantinopoli Decio cons.

[24] Idem A. Demostheni pp. Nemini licere volumus, sive ab ingenuis genitoribus puer parvulus procreatus sive a libertina progenie sive servili condicione maculatus expositus sit, eum puerum in suum dominium vindicare sive nomine dominii sive adscripticiae sive colonariae condicionis: sed neque his, qui eos nutriendos sustulerunt, licentiam concedi penitus (cum quadam distinctione) eos tollere: sed nullo discrimine habito ii, qui ab huiusmodi hominibus educati vel nutriti vel aucti sunt, liberi et ingenui appareant et sibi adquirant et in posteritatem suam vel extraneos heredes omnia quae habuerint, quo modo voluerint, transmittant. haec observantibus non solum praesidibus provinciarum, sed etiam viris religiosissimis episcopis.

D. XV k. Oct. Chalcedone Decio vc. cons.

[25] Ὁ αὐτὸς βασιλεὺς Δημοσθένει ἐπάρχῳ πραιτορίων. Ὅσα περὶ τῶν καλουμένων κύβων ἤτοι κόττων καὶ τῆς τούτων κωλύσεως ἡμῖν νενομοθέτηται, ταῦτα ἄδειαν δίδομεν καὶ τοῖς θεοφιλεστάτοις ἐπισκόποις καὶ ἀνερευνᾶν καὶ γινόμενα παύειν καὶ τοὺς ἀκοσμοῦντας διὰ τῶν λαμπροτάτων ἀρχόντων τῶν ἐπαρχιῶν καὶ τῶν πατέρων καὶ τῶν ἐκδίκων τῶν πόλεων ἐπὶ σωφροσύνην ἐπανάγειν.

D. X k. Oct. Constantinopoli Decio cons.

[26] Ὁ αὐτὸς βασιλεὺς Ἰουλιανῷ ἐπάρχῳ πραιτωρίων. pr. Περὶ τῶν καθ' ἕκαστον ἔτος ταῖς πόλεσι προσιουσῶν πολιτικῶν προσόδων ἢ πόρων ἐκ δημοσίων ἢ ἐξ ἰδιωτικῶν χρημάτων παρά τινων αὐταῖς ἢ καταλιμπανομένων

Our divine decree dispatched to the Most Illustrious Prefects dictates concerning this matter. Permission is granted to the most reverend bishops currently in office to report to Us any negligence that they should observe on the part of the viri illustres, spectabiles, and clarissimi magistrates or on the part of the official staffs that obey them, so that appropriate punishment may be inflicted upon the negligent.

Given January 18, at Constantinople, in the consulship of Decius (529).

[23][148] The same Augustus to Menas, Praetorian Prefect. We entirely forbid the establishment of private jails in cities or villages; those held therein shall be released from imprisonment by the diligence of the most reverend local bishops.

Given January 18, at Constantinople, in the consulship of Decius (529).

[24][149] The same Augustus to Demosthenes, Praetorian Prefect. If a small boy has been exposed, whether he was born of free-born parents or is of freedman extraction or is tainted by the status of a slave, We desire that no one be permitted to claim him as his property, whether as slave, as a bound tenant (adscripticius), or as a free tenant (colonus); nor may those who undertake to rear such children raise them with any distinction whatsoever. Children raised or reared or brought up by such people shall, without any distinction, be considered free and free-born and may acquire property and leave all that they have to their posterity or to outside heirs as they wish. Not only shall the provincial governors observe these provisions, but the most pious bishops as well.

Given September 17, at Chalcedon, in the consulship of the vir clarissimus Decius (529).

[25][150] The same Augustus to Demosthenes, Praetorian Prefect. Regarding what We have legislated concerning the game called dice or kottoi and its prohibition, We grant the most reverend bishops the right to investigate and stop its occurrence and to bring offenders to reason (by punishment) through the viri clarissimi provincial governors and the fathers and defenders of the cities.

Given September 22, at Constantinople, in the consulship of Decius (529).

[26][151] The same Augustus to Julian, Praetorian Prefect. pr. Concerning the income which accrues yearly to the cities, whether from public revenue or private funds left, donated, or otherwise intended or made over to them by [148] = C. 9.5.2 (in part); combine with C. 1.4.22 (whence the date here is emended), 9.4.6, 9.47.26.

[149] = C. 8.51.3 pr.-1, 3.
[150] = C. 3.43.1.3 (Latin summary).
[151] Combine with C. 3.10.2(?), 12.40.12. Parts of this constitution = C. 10.30.4.

ἢ δωρουμένων ἢ ἄλλως ἐπινοουμένων ἢ περιποιηθησομένων, εἴτε εἰς ἔργα εἴτε εἰς σιτωνίαν εἴτε εἰς δημόσιον ὁλκὸν εἴτε εἰς ἐκκαύσεις βαλανείων εἴτε εἰς λιμένας εἴτε εἰς τειχῶν ἢ πύργων οἰκοδομὰς ἢ γεφυρῶν ἢ ὁδοστρωσιῶν ἐπανόρθωσιν ἢ ἁπλῶς εἰς τὰς τῶν πολιτικῶν χρείας προχωρούντων, εἴτε ἀπὸ δημοσίων εἴτε ἀπὸ ἰδιωτικῶν ὡς εἴρηται προφάσεων, θεσπίζομεν εἰς ταὐτὸν συνιόντας τὸν θεοφιλέστατον ἐπίσκοπον τρεῖς τε τῶν εὐυπολήπτων καὶ ἐν ἅπασι προεχόντων κατὰ τὴν πόλιν ἔτους ἑκάστου ἐποπτεύειν τε τὰ γενόμενα ἔργα καὶ παρασκευάζειν μετρεῖσθαι καὶ λογοθετεῖν τοὺς ταῦτα διοικοῦντας ἢ διοικήσαντας, καὶ ἐπὶ πράξεως ὑπομνημάτων φανερὸν γίνεσθαι τὸ πεπληρῶσθαι τὰ ἔργα, ἢ δεδιοικῆσθαι τά τε σιτωνικὰ χρήματα τά τε λουτρωνικὰ ἢ περὶ ὁδοστρωσίας ἢ περὶ ὁλκοὺς ὑδάτων ἢ ἕτερα τοιαῦτά τινα. 1. Ἅπερ ἅπαντα ἀμείωτα μένειν εἰς τὸν ἅπαντα βουλόμεθα χρόνον καὶ ἐπὶ τῆς πράξεως τῶν ὑπομνημάτων δηλοῦσθαι, ὡς ἀνεύθυνός ἐστιν ὁ ταῦτα διοικήσας ἢ καὶ ὑπεύθυνος μὲν ὤφθη, τὸ δὲ ὀφειλόμενον ἀπέδωκεν· καὶ οὕτως ἔχειν ἀσφάλειαν τὸν ταύτης τετυχηκότα τῆς πράξεως. στελοῦμεν γὰρ ἡμεῖς, ἡνίκα ἂν βουληθείημεν, τὸν ἡμῖν δοκοῦντα, ὃς ἐποπτεύσει τὰ παρ' αὐτῶν γενόμενα λογοθέσια καί, εἴπερ ὀρθῶς ἔχοντα εὕροι, ψῆφον ποιήσεται τὸ ἀσφαλὲς αὐτοῖς καὶ κληρονόμοις αὐτῶν καὶ διαδόχοις τελείως περιποιοῦσαν, ἐφ' ᾧ μηκέτι δευτέρων λόγων ἢ ζητήσεων ἀφορμὰς ὑπολελεῖφθαι. πάντων ἐπὶ τῶν ἁγίων εὐαγγελίων οὕτως σὺν ἀκριβείᾳ πραττομένων, ὡς τῆς ἡμετέρας αὐτοῖς ἐπιστησομένης, ἡνίκα ἂν βουληθείημεν, ἐξετάσεως.

2. Χρὴ μέντοι σπεύδειν τὸν θεοφιλέστατον ἐπίσκοπον καὶ τοὺς σὺν αὐτῷ ποιουμένους τοὺς λογισμούς, ὅπως, ἂν τὰ ἔργα εἰς ἀπέραντα τῆς δαπάνης ἀφορισθῇ, καθ' ἕκαστον ἔτος ἐπιμελῶς γένοιτο ἐκ τῶν πολιτικῶν ἀνανεούμενα πόρων τε καὶ προσόδων.

3. Εἰ μέντοιγε μὴ βουληθείη λογισμοὺς ὑποσχεῖν ὁ ταῦτα διοικήσας μηδὲ ἀνάσχοιτο τοῦ θεοφιλεστάτου τῶν τόπων ἐπισκόπου καὶ τῶν κτητόρων τῶν πρὸς τοῦτο ἀφωρισμένων εἰς λογισμοὺς αὐτὸν καλούντων, τηνικαῦτα ἀναγκάζεσθαι τοῦτο πράττειν διὰ τοῦ λαμπροτάτου τῆς ἐπαρχίας ἄρχοντος καὶ τῆς πειθομένης αὐτῷ τάξεως, ζημίας πάσης χωρὶς συνωθούμενον, ἐφ' ᾧτε πᾶσι τρόποις λογισμοὺς ὑπέχειν τῷ θεοφιλεστάτῳ τῆς πόλεως ἐπισκόπῳ καὶ τοῖς πρωτεύουσι τῶν πόλεων καὶ τὸ φαινόμενον ἐποφείλεσθαι παρ' αὐτοῦ ἀποδοῦναι τῇ πόλει.

4. Πᾶσαν δὲ ἄδειαν ἀναιροῦμεν τοῖς ἡμετέροις ἄρχουσι πέμπειν ἐν ταῖς χώραις discussoras ἢ λογοθέτας ἢ ἐξισωτὰς ἐπὶ ταῖς τῶν δημοσίων λογισμῶν ἐξετάσεσιν· ἀλλ' εἴ τι τοιοῦτο πράξαιεν παρὰ γνώμην ἡμετέραν, τηνικαῦτα, εἰ μὲν θεῖός τισι τύπος κατὰ συναρπαγὴν πορισθείη, ἄδειαν εἶναι τῷ θεοφιλεστάτῳ τῆς πόλεως ἐπισκόπῳ προσδέχεσθαι μὲν τὸν θεῖον τύπον, μηνύειν δὲ εἰς ἡμᾶς, ὅπως ἂν ἡμεῖς γνοίημεν, εἴτε κατὰ θείαν ἡμῶν πρόσταξιν πρὸς αὐτὴν τὴν ἀρχὴν γεγραμμένην εἴτε κατὰ συναρπαγὴν γέγονεν, ὥστε εἰ κατά τινα γενόμενος φανείη συναρπαγήν, τηνικαῦτα τὸ γενόμενον ἄκυρον εἶναι κίνδυνόν τε ὑποστῆναι τὸν τοῦτο πορισάμενον.

anyone; whether for public works, the grain supply, a public aqueduct, the heating of baths, harbors, the construction of walls or towers, the repair of bridges or paving of roads, or, in short, for any necessary expenses of the cities; whether, as has been said, from private or public sources, We decree that the most reverend bishop and three distinguished and in all respects eminent men of the city shall meet yearly and inspect the works underway, and they shall take care to moderate and call to account those who are or were the administrators; and (take care) that it is made clear in the public records that the works have been completed and that the money for grain or baths or roadworks or aqueducts and any other such things has been administered. 1. We desire that all these regulations remain undiminished for all time, and that it shall appear by the making of a public record whether he who managed these works is free of liability or, if he is indeed liable, whether he has repaid the amount owed; and in this way whoever shall have supervised this work shall be protected. For We shall dispatch, whenever We please, one whom We deem fit, who shall examine the accounts kept by them; and if he finds them in order, he shall decree to them, their heirs, and their successors abiding immunity, whereby no further grounds for a second account or inquiries shall remain. All this shall be done scrupulously (by oath) upon the Holy Gospels, when Our inquiry is upon them, at the time We wish.

2. The most reverend bishop and those reviewing the accounts with him must ensure that, if any works require indefinite outlay, they are diligently maintained each year from the public income and revenue.

3. If the administrator refuses to render an account and does not submit to the most reverend local bishop and the landholders chosen for this purpose, calling him to account, then he shall be forced to do so by the vir clarissimus provincial governor and the staff under him, being compelled, without any penalty, to give a complete account to the most reverend bishop of the city and to the preeminent men of the cities and to pay the city the amount found to be owed by him.

4. We remove from Our governors all power to dispatch auditors (discussores, logothetai) or tax-assessors in the cities to examine public accounts; but if they should do such a thing against Our wish, then, if a sacred rescript should be produced by some, the most reverend bishop has permission to receive the sacred rescript but shall inform Us, so that We may decide whether it was written to the aforementioned official by Our order or was obtained surreptitiously; and if it should appear to have been obtained illicitly, then it shall be void and whoever has obtained it shall be in peril.

5. Εἰ δέ τινος τῶν ἡμετέρων ἀρχόντων πεμφθείη ψῆφος ἢ καὶ κομμωνιτώριον ἢ πρόσταγμά τι καὶ λογοθέσιον περὶ τούτων τῶν προειρημένων κεφαλαίων ἐπιτραπείη, παντὶ βουλόμεθα τρόπῳ τὸν θεοφιλέστατον τῆς πόλεως ἐπίσκοπον καὶ τοὺς ἐν τῇ πόλει πρωτεύοντας μὴ προσίεσθαι ταῦτα, ἀλλὰ ἄδειαν εἶναι καὶ τῷ τῆς ἐπαρχίας ἡγουμένῳ καὶ αὐτοῖς γε δὴ τοῖς κτήτορσι καὶ πολίταις διωθεῖσθαι τὰς τοιαύτας προστάξεις καὶ μηδὲ ὀβολὸν ἕνα ταύτης ἕνεκα τῆς αἰτίας παρέχειν. εἰ δὲ τοῦτο ῥᾳθυμήσειεν ὁ θεοφιλέστατος ἐπίσκοπος, ἕξει μὲν δυσμενῆ τὸν δεσπότην θεὸν καὶ βασιλικὴν ἀγανάκτησιν ἀναμενέτω, ὅτι σιγὴν ἐσίγησεν ἀνελευθέραν τε καὶ ἱερατικῆς παρρησίας ἀναξίαν.

6. Ἀλλὰ καὶ εἴ τις ἐμφανίζει κατὰ χώραν ἢ ἀρχόντων οἱωνδήποτε ἢ ὑπάτων προαγωγὰς ἢ γενικοὺς τύπους τῶν ἐνδοξοτάτων ὑπάρχων ἢ καὶ ἑτέρου τινὸς τῶν ἡμετέρων ἀρχόντων, ἢ καὶ διατάξεων ἢ θείων κομμωνιτωρίων ἢ γραμμάτων γενικῶν μέντοι ἐμφανίσεις ποιοῖτο ἢ καὶ ἀνδριάντων βασιλικῶν καθιδρύσεις, μὴ εἶναι τούτῳ παρρησίαν περαιτέρω ἓξ νομισμάτων ἐφ᾽ ἑκάστῃ μηνύσει ἢ ἐφ᾽ ἑκάστῳ τύπῳ ἢ ἑκάστῃ διατάξει ἢ θείῳ κομμωνιτωρίῳ ἢ γράμματι γενικῷ ἢ ἀνδριαντων καθιδρύσει κομίζεσθαι καθ᾽ ἑκάστην ἐπαρχίαν εἰς ἣν ταῦτα παρέλαβεν, ὥστε, ὁπόσας ἂν ἔχοι πόλεις ἡ ἐπαρχία, μηδὲν αὐτῷ διαφέρειν, ἀλλὰ τοὺς ἓξ μόνους κομίζεσθαι χρυσοῦς. 7. Εἰ δέ τι πλέον κομίσοιτο, τοῦτο τετραπλάσιον ἀποδοῦναι, ἄδειαν ἔχοντος καὶ τοῦ τῆς πόλεως ἐπισκόπου τοῦτο κωλύειν, κἀνταῦθα τῶν ἴσων ἐπικειμένων ποινῶν, τοῦτ᾽ ἔστι τῶν ἀνὰ δέκα τοῦ χρυσίου λιτρῶν τῷ τε τῆς ἐπαρχίας ἡγουμένῳ τῇ τε πειθομένῃ τάξει καὶ τῷ θεοφιλεστάτῳ ἐπισκόπῳ, εἴπερ ἐνδοῖεν αὐτοῖς ὑπεραπαιτεῖν βουλομένοις, ἀλλὰ μὴ πᾶσι τρόποις τοῦτο κωλύωσιν.

8. Οὐδενὶ δὲ παντελῶς ἐφίεμεν τῶν ἡμετέρων ἀρχόντων τοιούτους τινὰς τύπους ἐν ταῖς ἐπαρχίαις ἐκπέμπειν περὶ τῆς τῶν ὑδρορρόων ἤτοι ὑπονόμων ἀνακαθάρσεως ἢ περὶ τῆς τῶν οἰκοδομημάτων πρὸς τοῖς τείχεσι καθαιρέσεως ἢ τῶν ἐν ταῖς στοαῖς γενομένων καταλύσεως ἢ τῶν καλουμένων προδουλειῶν καὶ ἐρειπίων τόπων ἤτοι μεσοστύλων ἀνατροπῆς ἢ περὶ εἰκόνων ἢ τοιουτοτρόπων ὅλως ἐπινοιῶν ἢ πολιτικῶν ἁπλῶς ζητήσεων, ἀλλ᾽ ἐξέστω τῷ θεοφιλεστάτῳ ἐπισκόπῳ τῆς πόλεως καὶ τοῖς ἐν τῇ πόλει πρωτεύουσι καὶ τοῖς τῶν ἐπαρχιῶν ἡγουμένοις καὶ κτήτορσι καὶ πολίταις τοιούτου τινὸς ἐμφανισθέντος τύπου μὴ προσίεσθαι τοῦτον, ἀλλὰ κωλύειν καὶ διωθεῖσθαι πάντα ἐκβιβασμὸν καὶ πᾶσαν εἴσπραξιν ἐντεῦθεν ἐπαγομένην, τῆς αὐτῆς ἐπούσης ποινῆς καὶ κατὰ τῶν θεοφιλεστάτων ἐπισκόπων, εἰ μὴ τοῦτο κωλύσαιεν.

9. Δεῖ δὲ τὸν θεοφιλέστατον ἐπίσκοπον τόν τε πατέρα τούς τε λοιποὺς ἐν ὑπολήψει κτήτορας προνοεῖν τοῦ μηδένα τόπον πολιτικὸν ἢ δημόσιον πρὸς τῷ τείχει ἢ ἐν ταῖς δημοσίαις στοαῖς ἢ πλατείαις ἢ ὁπουδήποτε κείμενον συγχωρεῖν ὑπό τινος ἀλόγως κατέχεσθαι μηδὲ ἐκδιδόναι πολιτικόν τινα τόπον χωρὶς ἡμετέρου θείου τύπου τισί. 10. Τοὺς δὲ αὐτοὺς καὶ τὰ περὶ τῶν καλουμένων νομῶν τοῦ ὕδατος δηλαδὴ τῶν ἐκ θείου τύπου

5. If a decree or letter of instructions or an order is sent by one of Our Prefects, and a rendering of accounts is commanded concerning any of the aforementioned points, We desire that the most reverend bishop of the city and the preeminent men of the city in no way comply; but the provincial governor and the landholders and citizens are permitted to reject such commands and not pay a penny (obolos) on that account. If the most reverend bishop should neglect to do this, he shall incur the displeasure of the Lord God and shall await the wrath of the Emperor for keeping a slavish silence unworthy of the frankness (parrhesia) of a priest.

6.[152] And if anyone should announce in a province the promotion of any magistrates or consuls, or the general sanctions of the viri gloriosissimi Prefects or of any other of Our officials, or should publish decrees or divine instructions or general letters, or even the erection of statues of the Emperor, he may not collect more than 6 solidi for each proclamation, each sanction, divine instructions or general letter, or erection of statues, in each province to which he brings news of these things. Thus, it shall make no difference how many cities the province should have, but he shall receive 6 solidi only. 7. If he should take more, he shall pay fourfold, and the bishop of the city shall have the power to prevent his taking more; and the same punishment, that is, 10 pounds of gold, shall apply to the governor of the province and the official staff serving him and to the most reverend bishop, if they should yield to their wish to exact more and fail to prevent this by all means.

8.[153] We permit none of Our officials whatsoever to send any such decrees in the provinces concerning the cleaning of water channels or sewers, or the demolition of buildings next to the city walls, or the destruction of those built in colonnades, or so-called servitudes (prodouleiai) and collapsed structures, or the razing of buildings built between columns, or concerning statues or other such concerns, or, in a word, concerning public questions at all; but the most reverend bishop of the city and its most eminent citizens, the governors of the provinces, the landholders, and citizens shall not comply with such an order when it is made known but shall hinder it, and reject any attempt to execute it and any exaction imposed because of it. The same punishment is fixed even against the most reverend bishops, if they do not prevent this.

9. The most reverend bishop and the father (of the city) and the rest of the landholders of good repute shall take care that they allow no civic or public place near the city walls or in public colonnades, streets, or any other place, to be occupied by anyone without cause; and that they lease no public place to anyone without Our divine sanction. 10. The same men shall also inquire into the τισὶν ὑπηργμένων ἀναζητεῖν καὶ μὴ τὸν μὲν πλέον τὸν δὲ ἔλαττον τοῦ προσήκοντος ἔχειν.

[152] §§6–7 = C. 12.63.2.
[153] §§8–10 = C. 10.30.4.

11. Ἀλλ' οὐδὲ προφάσει ἐγγυητικῶν ζημίαις τοὺς ἡμετέρους ὑποτελεῖς ὑποβάλλεσθαι συγχωροῦμεν ἢ ὑπὲρ στάσεως ἐντολέως· ἀλλ' εἰ μὲν ἀκίνητον ἔχοιεν οὐσίαν ἀξιόχρεων οἱ ὑπομνησθέντες, ὅρκου γραμματεῖον ἐκτίθεσθαι μόνον· εἰ δὲ οὐκ ἔχοιεν, τηνικαῦτα μὲν ἐγγύην ἄχρι τῆς ἤδη κρατούσης ποσότητος παρέχειν, χωρὶς μέντοι ζημίας ἁπάσης. 12. Εἰ δὲ ἀμφισβητοῖεν οἱ πράκτορες περὶ τῆς τῶν ἐγγυητῶν ἀξιοπιστίας ἢ τῆς διωμοσίας, κοινῇ συνιόντας εἰς ταὐτὸ τὸν θεοφιλέστατον ἐπίσκοπον τόν τε πατέρα τόν τε ἔκδικον τῆς πόλεως κρίνειν τὸν ἀξιόπιστον φαινόμενον ἐγγυητὴν πρὸς τὴν τῆς ἐναγωγῆς ποσότητα καὶ ἀνάγκην ἔχειν τὸν πράκτορα δέχεσθαι τοῦτον ἐγγυώμενον, μηδὲν κομιζόμενον ὑπὲρ ἐγγυητικοῦ ἢ ἐξωμοσίας. 13. Πλὴν εἰ μὴ ἐξ ἰδικῆς ἡμῶν ἢ τινος τῶν μεγίστων ἀρχόντων προστάξεως κελευσθείη τὸ πρόσωπον ἀγαγεῖν, ἐγγυητῇ μὴ καταπιστεύσας· τηνικαῦτα γὰρ ἄδεια ἔσται τῷ πράκτορι ἐγγυητὴν μὴ κομίζεσθαι καὶ τοῦτο μέντοι πράττειν χωρὶς ἁπάσης ζημίας. 14. Κἀνταῦθα τῶν αὐτῶν κρατούντων ἐπιτιμίων κατά τε τοῦ θεοφιλεστάτου ἐπισκόπου καὶ τοῦ λαμπροτάτου τῆς ἐπαρχίας ἄρχοντος, εἴ τι τούτων παραβαθῆναι συγχωρήσαιεν ἢ παραβαινομένου τινὸς μὴ θᾶττον ταῦτα μηνύσαιεν.

15. Δηλαδὴ μὴ συγχωρούντων αὐτῶν μηδὲν πλέον τι τοῦ διωρισμένου μέτρου τῇ ἡμετέρᾳ διατάξει προφάσει σπορτούλων κομίζεσθαι μηδὲ διαγραφὴν ἐξ οἱασδήποτε αἰτίας ἐν ταῖς πόλεσιν ἐξ ἀνάγκης γίνεσθαι, πλὴν ἢ μόνον ἐκείνων τῶν αἰτιῶν, ἃς περὶ τὰς ἐμφανίσεις τῶν προαγωγῶν καὶ τῶν διατάξεων καὶ θείων ἢ γενικῶν κομμωνιτωρίων ἢ τύπων ἢ γραμμάτων καὶ τῶν τοιούτων ἁπάντων, περὶ ὧν ἐν τοῖς ἔμπροσθεν ἐνομοθετήσαμεν καὶ ἅπερ ἂν ὑπὲρ ἰδίας ὠφελείας καὶ σωτηρίας οἱ τῆς πόλεως βουληθεῖεν εἰς ἔργα πολιτικὰ τυχὸν ἢ εἰς σιτωνίαν ἢ εἰς ἑτέραν ἀρέσκουσαν ἅπασιν αἰτίαν κατὰ φιλοτιμίαν ποιήσασθαι, ἐξ ὧν τὸ κοινὸν τῆς πόλεως ὠφεληθήσεται· φυλαττομένων κατὰ τῶν παραβαίνειν ταῦτα ἐπιχειρούντων καὶ μὴ εἰς ἡμᾶς ἀγόντων θεοφιλεστάτων ἐπισκόπων τῶν ἤδη παρ' ἡμῶν ἠπειλημένων.

16. Δεῖ δὲ τὸν θεοφιλέστατον ἐπίσκοπον ἑκάστης πόλεως πάντα γινώσκοντα τὰ παρ' ἡμῶν ἐπὶ τούτοις διατεταγμένα καὶ μὴν καὶ ἀπαργυρισμοῦ μητάτων καὶ κωλύσεως ἀφοπλισμῶν καὶ τούτων, ὅσα περιέχεται τῇ θείᾳ ἡμῶν διατάξει τῇ περὶ τούτων ἐν κοινῷ γεγραμμένῃ, πέρας ἐπιτιθέναι προσῆκον.

D. VIII k. Iul. Chalcedone Lampadio et Oreste vv. cc. conss.

[27] Idem A. Iuliano pp. pr. De creationibus curatorum, qui furiosis utriusque sexus dantur, necesse nobis visum est constituere, quemadmodum eas celebrari oportet. 1. Et si quidem pater curatorem furioso so-called water distribution, which has been made available to some by divine sanction, lest one have more, another have less, than what is appropriate.

11.[154] Moreover, We do not permit Our subjects to be subject to damages by reason of sureties or for the appointment of a procurator; instead, if those summoned have sufficient immovable property, they may furnish only an oath in writing; if however, they do not have sufficient (immovable property), then they must give surety up to the amount already in usage, but without any loss. 12. If the court clerks (exsecutores) doubt the reliability of the sureties or the oath, then the most reverend bishop, the Father, and the Defender of the City should meet jointly and choose a suitable surety for the amount of the suit, and the court clerk must accept this surety without taking anything for the giving of the surety or oath. 13. But unless he is ordered by a pragmatic sanction from Us or from one of the exalted Prefects to produce the person, having no faith in the surety, then the court clerk is at liberty not to accept the surety, and this too without any penalty. 14. And here too the same fines hold for the most reverend bishop and for the vir clarissimus provincial governor, if they allow any of these regulations to be violated or fail to denounce the violator immediately.

15.[155] They shall not permit more to be collected in the name of judicial fees (sportulae) than the amount fixed by Our decree, nor shall they permit any compulsory payment to be made in the cities for any reason except for the proclamation of promotions, of decrees and divine or general instructions, or sanctions or letters and all such things, concerning the which We have established the law in the preceding, and whatever the citizens of the city, in a spirit of generosity, wish to do for their own benefit and welfare, perchance for public works or for the grain supply, or for some other reason approved by all, whereby the city is benefited in common. The penalties threatened above shall be applied to those who attempt to violate these provisions and to the most reverend bishops who fail to bring them to Our attention.

16. Having full knowledge of Our decrees concerning these matters and concerning the monetary conversion for the duty of quartering (adaeratio metatorum), the prohibition on disarming, and those things that are contained in Our divine decree written generally about these matters, the most reverend bishop of every city shall carry out all these things to their appointed end.

Given June 24, at Chalcedon, in the consulship of the viri clarissimi Lampadius and Orestes (530).

[27][156] The same Augustus to Julian, Praetorian Prefect. pr. Regarding appointments of curatores who are provided to insane persons of either sex, We have determined it necessary to establish how they should be made. 1. If a father

[154] §§11–14 = C. 3.2.4.3–5.
[155] §15 = C. 12.63.2.3–4 (altered).
[156] = C. 5.70.7.5–6c.

vel furiosae in ultimo elogio heredibus institutis vel exheredatis dederit (ubi et fideiussionem cessare necesse est paterno testimonio pro satisdatione sufficiente), ipse qui datus est ad curationem perveniat, ita tamen, ut in provinciis apud praesides earum, praesente eis tam viro religiosissimo locorum antistite quam tribus primatibus, actis intervenientibus, tactis sacrosanctis scripturis depromat omnia se recte cum utilitate furiosi gerere neque praetermittere, quae utilia furioso esse putaverit, neque admittere, quae non utilia esse existimaverit: et inventario cum omni subtilitate publice conscripto res suscipiat et eas secundum sui opinionem disponat sub hypotheca rerum ad eum pertinentium, ad similitudinem tutorum et adulti curatorum.

2. Sin autem testamentum quidem parens non confecerit, lex autem curatorem utpote adgnatum vocaverit vel eo cessante aut non idoneo forsitan existente ex iudiciali electione curatorem ei dare necesse fuerit, tunc scilicet et in provinciis apud praesidem cuiuscumque provinciae et virum religiosissimum episcopum civitatis nec non tres primates creatio procedat, ita ut, si quidem curator substantiam idoneam possidet et sufficientem ad fidem gubernationis, et sine aliqua satisdatione nominatio eius procedat. sin autem non talis eius census inveniatur, tunc et fideiussio in quantum possibile est ab eo exploretur.

3. Creatione omnimodo sacrosanctis scripturis propositis in omni causa celebranda, ipso autem curatore, cuiuscumque substantiae vel dignitatis est, praefatum sacramentum pro utiliter rebus gerendis praestante et inventarium publice conscribente et hypotheca rerum curatoris modis omnibus adhibenda, quatenus possint undique res furiosi utiliter gubernari.

D. k. Sept. Constantinopoli Lampadio et Oreste vv. cc. conss.

[28] Idem A. Iuliano pp. Tam dementis quam furiosi liberi cuiuscumque sexus possunt legitimas contrahere nuptias, tam dote quam ante nuptias donatione a curatore eorum praestanda: aestimatione tamen in hac quidem regia urbe excellentissimi praefecti urbis, in provinciis autem virorum clarissimorum earum praesidum vel locorum antistitum tam opinione personae quam moderatione dotis et ante nuptias donationis statuenda, praesentibus tam curatoribus dementis quam furiosi nec non his, qui ex genere eorum nobiliores sunt, ita tamen, ut nulla ex hac causa oriatur vel in hac regia urbe vel in provinciis iactura substantiae appoints a curator for an insane person of either sex in his last will, whether they have been appointed heirs or disinherited – in which case the giving of surety is unnecessary, since the father's testimony is security enough – the person appointed shall assume curatorship in the following manner: in the provinces before the governors and in the presence also of the most pious local bishop as well as three leading men, he shall declare on official record while touching the sacred scriptures that he shall conduct all business properly and to the advantage of the insane person and will neither omit anything that he should deem advantageous to the insane person nor permit anything that he should deem detrimental; and once an inventory has been publicly drafted in all detail, he shall receive the property and dispose of it according to his judgment under a security arrangement on his property, on the analogy of tutores and curatores of an adult.

2. If, however, the male ascendant did not make a will and the law summons an agnate relative to be curator, or in default of such one or if one with sufficient property should not be available, and it is necessary that a curator be appointed for him by judicial nomination; then, in the provinces, the appointment shall take place before the governor of the province and the most pious bishop of the city as well as the three leading citizens. Thus, if the curator possesses suitable means sufficient for faithful management (of the property of the insane person), his appointment may take place even without requiring security. But if his property assessment is not found sufficient, then as much security as possible shall be sought from him.

3. The appointment shall in every case be made solemnly before the holy scriptures; the curator himself, whatever his property or rank, shall take the aforementioned oath to conduct the affairs of the insane person advantageously, shall publicly draft an inventory, and shall by all means provide a hypothec of his property, so that the property of the insane person may be managed as advantageously as possible.

Given September 1, at Constantinople, in the consulship of the viri clarissimi Lampadius and Orestes (530).

[28][157] The same Augustus to Julian, Praetorian Prefect. The children of a demented or insane person of either sex may contract a legitimate marriage; both the dowry and the prenuptial gift shall be provided by their curator. An assessment, however, both of the reputation of the person and the amount of the dowry and prenuptial gift shall be made: in This Imperial City, by the vir excellentissimus Prefect of the City; in the provinces, by the viri clarissimi governors and the bishops of the place. The curatores both of the demented and of furiosi vel mente capti, sed gratis omnia procedant, ne tale hominum infortunium etiam expensarum detrimento praegravetur.

[157] = C. 5.4.25.

D. k. Oct. Constantinopoli Lampadio et Oreste vv. cc. conss.

[29] Ὁ αὐτὸς βασιλεὺς Ἰουλιανῷ ἐπάρχῳ πραιτωρίων. pr. Θεσπίζομεν μηδένα τῶν εὐλαβεστάτων κληρικῶν εἴτε παρά τινος συγκληρικοῦ εἴτε παρὰ τῶν καλουμένων λαϊκῶν τινος εὐθὺς καὶ ἐκ πρώτης ἐν αἰτιάσει γίνεσθαι παρὰ τοῖς μακαριωτάτοις πατριάρχαις διοικήσεως ἑκάστης, ἀλλὰ πρῶτον κατὰ τοὺς ἱεροὺς θεσμοὺς παρὰ τῷ τῆς πόλεως ἐπισκόπῳ, καθ' ἣν ὁ κληρικὸς διάγει· εἰ δὲ ὑπόπτως ἔχει πρὸς ἐκεῖνον, παρὰ τῷ τῆς μητροπόλεως ἐπισκόπῳ τοῦτο πράττειν· εἰ δὲ ὡς εἰκὸς οὐδὲ τὰ κατ' ἐκεῖνον αὐτὸν ἀρέσκοι, τηνικαῦτα πρὸς τὴν εὐαγῆ σύνοδον τὴν τῆς χώρας ἄγειν αὐτὸν δικασόμενον, τριῶν ἅμα τῷ μητροπολίτῃ συνιόντων θεοφιλεστάτων ἐπισκόπων τῶν κατὰ τὴν τάξιν τῆς χειροτονίας πρωτευόντων καὶ τὴν δίκην ἐν τάξει τῆς ὅλης συνόδου κατεξεταζόντων. 1. Καὶ εἰ μὲν στερχθείη τὰ κεκριμένα, πραγμάτων ἀπηλλάχθαι.

2. Εἰ δὲ οἰηθείη βεβλάφθαι, τηνικαῦτα ἐπικαλεῖσθαι τὸν μακαριώτατον πατριάρχην τῆς διοικήσεως ἐκείνης, καὶ τοῖς παρ' αὐτοῦ κρινομένοις πάντως ἐμμένειν, ὡσανεὶ ἔτυχεν ἐξ ἀρχῆς αὐτὸς ᾑρημένος δικαστής. 3. Κατὰ γὰρ δὴ τῶν τοιούτων ἐπισκοπικῶν ἀποφάσεων οὐκ εἶναι χώραν ἐκκλήτῳ τοῖς πρὸ ἡμῶν νενομοθέτηται. 4. Τοῦ αὐτοῦ τούτου φυλαττομένου καὶ εἴπερ ἐπίσκοπος ὁ μεμφθεὶς εἴη εἴτε παρά τινος τῶν καλουμένων λαϊκῶν εἴτε παρά τινος τῶν θεοφιλεστάτων κληρικῶν εἴτε καὶ παρ' ἑτέρου τινος θεοφιλοῦς ἐπισκόπου. 5. Τὸ γὰρ εὐθὺς τὰς αἰτιάσεις ἀποτίθεσθαι παρὰ τοῖς ἁγιωτάτοις πατριάρχαις καὶ τοὺς αἰτιωμένους εἰς ἑτέραν ἀπάγεσθαι χώραν παντελῶς ἀπαγορεύομεν, πλὴν εἰ μὴ τὴν αἰτίασίν τις ἐπὶ τούτῳ θείη, ἐφ' ᾧτε παραπεμφθῆναι τὴν ὑπόθεσιν τῷ τῆς χώρας θεοφιλεστάτῳ ἐπισκόπῳ· τηνικαῦτα γὰρ ἄδεια μὲν ἔσται τὴν αἰτίασιν ἀποτίθεσθαι καὶ παρὰ τοῖς θεοφιλστάτοις πατριάρχαις, γράμματα δὲ γίνεσθαι πρός τινα τῶν κατὰ τόπον θεοφιλεστάτων ἐπισκόπων, ὥστε αὐτὸν ἀκροάσασθαι τῆς ὑποθέσεως κατὰ τὸν ἔμπροσθεν ὑφ' ἡμῶν ὑπηγορευμένον τρόπον.

6. Οὐ μὴν τούτῳ ἄδειαν παρέχειν τοῖς εὐλαβεστάτοις κληρικοῖς κατιέναι καὶ ἀμετρίᾳ τῶν καλουμένων σπορτούλων τοὺς ὑπομιμνησκομένους ἐπιτρίβειν, ὁποῖον δή τι μέχρι νῦν ἁμαρτάνεσθαι μεμαθήκαμεν. 7. Ἐφ' ἑκάστῳ γὰρ προσώπῳ τῶν καλουμένων οὐ περαιτέρω τῆς ἕκτης τοῦ νομίσματος μοίρας κατὰ πρόφασιν σπορτούλων δίδοσθαι συγχωροῦμεν τοῖς παρὰ τῶν θεοφιλεστάτων πατριαρχῶν καὶ μητροπολιτῶν στελλομένοις, ἢ εἴπερ ἐπίσκοπος εἴη ὁ μεμφθείς, ἄχρι νομισμάτων ἓξ ἐφ ὅσῃ δήποτε the insane are to be present, as well as the more distinguished members of their family, so that no loss for any reason may befall the property of the insane or demented; but everything shall be done gratuitously, so that the misfortune of such persons shall not be further aggravated by loss due expenses.

Given October 1, at Constantinople, in the consulship of the viri clarissimi Lampadius and Orestes (530).

[29] The same Augustus to Julian, Praetorian Prefect. pr. We decree that none of the most blessed clergymen may be accused by any fellow clergyman or by so-called laymen straightaway in the first instance before the most blessed patriarchs of each diocese; on the contrary, according to the sacred canons, a clergyman shall be accused first before the bishop of the city in which the clergyman resides. If the accuser mistrusts the bishop, he shall make his accusation before the metropolitan bishop; if, as may happen, he is not satisfied even with him, then he may bring the accused to be tried before the holy synod of the province. The three most eminent of the most reverend bishops, according to the order of their ordination, shall join the metropolitan and together try the case before the assembly of the whole synod. 1. And if the decision is found satisfactory, the litigation shall be at an end.

2. If, though, one thinks that he has been wronged, then he may appeal to the most blessed patriarch of each diocese and must altogether abide by the decision reached by him, as if the patriarch had been chosen as judge from the beginning. 3. It has been laid down by those before Us that there is no room for an appeal from such episcopal rulings. 4. This very rule shall be observed even if the accused is a bishop, whether accused by a so-called layman, or by one of the most reverend clergymen, or even by another reverend bishop. 5. For We utterly forbid accusations to be lodged immediately before the most holy Patriarchs and the accused to be brought away to another province, unless someone should make an accusation for the purpose of transferring the case to the most reverend bishop of the province: then it shall be permitted to lodge an accusation even before the most holy patriarchs, and a letter shall be sent to one of the most reverend bishops of the place, so that he may hear the case in the manner described by Us above.

6. He shall not, however, thereby permit the most pious clergy to descend upon and ruin the aforementioned persons with the excessiveness of so-called judicial fees (sportulae), which wrong, as We have learned, has been practiced heretofore. 7. We allow no more than one-sixth of a solidus for each person summoned to be given as judicial fees to those sent by the most reverend Patriarchs and metropolitans; or, if the accused is a bishop, We allow up to 6 solidi only and nothing more to be paid, whatever the amount and whatever the ποσότητι καὶ οἱᾳδήποτε αἰτίᾳ παρέχεσθαι μόνον καὶ πλέον τούτου μηδέν. 8. Ταὐτοῦ τούτου κρατοῦντος καὶ ἐπὶ τῶν μητροπολιτῶν, ὅταν παρ' αὐτοῖς ἀποτεθείη τις αἰτίασις κατά τινος τῶν ὑπ' αὐτοὺς ἐπισκόπων ἢ τῶν τῆς ἐπαρχίας ἐκείνης κληρικῶν. εἰ γὰρ ἐπὶ τῶν πολιτικῶν δικῶν συστεῖλαι τὸ τῶν σπορτούλων καὶ δαπανημάτων μέτρον ἐσπεύσαμεν καὶ τοῦτο νομοθεσίᾳ παραδοῦναι συνείδομεν πολλῷ μᾶλλον ἐπὶ τῶν ἐκκλησιαστικῶν μέμψεων τὴν συμμετρίαν φυλάττεσθαι νομοθετοῦμεν. 9. Εἰ μέντοι παραπεμφθείσης τῆς ὑποθέσεως παρὰ τοῦ θεοφιλεστάτου πατριάρχου ἤ τινι τῶν θεοφιλεστάτων μητροπολιτῶν ἢ ἄλλῳ τῶν θεοφιλεστάτων ἐπισκόπων ἐνεχθείη ψῆφος καὶ μὴ στερχθείη παρὰ θατέρου μέρους ἔκκλητός τε γένηται, τηνικαῦτα ἐπὶ τὸν ἀρχιερατικὸν θρόνον φέρεσθαι τὴν ἔφεσιν κἀκεῖσε κατὰ τὸ μέχρι νῦν κρατοῦν ἐξετάζεσθαι. 10. Εἰ δέ τις τολμήσειε παρὰ ταῦτά τι πρᾶξαι, ἀναδώσει μὲν πᾶν ὅσον εἴληφε τῷ ὑπερπραχθέντι διπλάσιον, γενήσεται δὲ καὶ ὑπὸ ἐκκλησιαστικὸν ἐπιτίμιον παρὰ τοῦ κατὰ καιρὸν ἁγιωτάτου πατριάρχου ἢ τοῦ θεοφιλεστάτου μητροπολίτου, τῶν ἐκκλησιαστικῶν ἐκβαλλόμενος καταλόγων.

11. Τὰς δὲ αἰτιάσεις, εἰ μὲν εἰς ἐκκλησιαστικὴν ὁρῴη τὸ πρᾶγμα κατάστασιν, ἐξ ἀνάγκης παρὰ μόνοις γίνεσθαι τοῖς θεοφιλεστάτοις ἐπισκόποις ἢ μητροπολίταις ἢ παρὰ ταῖς εὐαγέσι συνόδοις ἢ τοῖς θεοφιλεστάτοις πατριάρχαις κελεύομεν· εἰ δὲ πολιτικὰ τὰ τῶν ἀμφισβητήσεων εἴη, ἑκόντας αὐτοὺς τὰς τοιαύτας ζητήσεις παρὰ τοῖς εἰρημένοις θεοφιλεστάτοις ἐπισκόποις προτιθέναι συγχωροῦμεν, ἄκοντα δὲ οὐκ ἀναγκάζομεν, ὄντων αὐτοῖς τῶν πολιτικῶν δικαστηρίων, εἴπερ ἐκεῖνα μᾶλλον ἂν θέλοιτο, παρ' οἷς ἔξεστι καὶ ὑπὲρ ἐγκλημάτων δικάζεσθαι. 12. Ἐπειδὴ δέ τινες τῶν θεοφιλεστάτων πατιαρχῶν ἐν ταῖς ἐπαρχίαις, ἐν αἷς εἰσι, καὶ μητροπολιτικὸν ἔχουσι σχῆμα, τινὲς δὲ καθ' ὅλην τὴν διοίκησιν τὰς χειροτονίας ποιοῦνται τῶν ὑπ' αὐτοὺς θεοφιλεστάτων ἐπισκόπων εἴτε μητροπολιτῶν εἴτε τῶν ἄλλων, ἐπ' αὐτοῖς ἐκεῖνα θεσπίζομεν, ἅπερ ἐπὶ τῶν θεοφιλεστάτων μητροπολιτῶν ἤδη διετάξαμεν. αὐτὸς γὰρ ἂν καὶ μητροπολίτης δικαίως καλοῖτο ὁ τὴν ἐξουσίαν τῶν ὑπὸ τὴν μητρόπολιν ἐπισκόπων ἐκ τῶν θείων ἔχων κανόνων.

D. xv k. Nov. Constantinopoli Lampadio et Oreste conss.

[30] Ὁ αὐτὸς βασιλεὺς Ἰωάννῃ ἐπάρχῳ πραιτωρίων. pr. Θεσπίζομεν ταῖς κηδεμονίαις τῶν νέων, εἴτε τῆς πρώτης εἴτε τῆς δευτέρας εἶεν ἡλικίας, ἢ καὶ ἕτεροί τινες οἷς ὁ νόμος δίδωσι κηδεμόνας, εἴπερ ἄχρι πεντακοσίων χρυσῶν καὶ μόνον τὰ τῆς περιουσίας εἴη τῶν νέων, μὴ τὴν τῶν ἀρχόντων τῶν ἐπαρχιῶν περιμένειν χειροτονίαν μηδὲ δαπάναις μεγάλαις περιβάλλεσθαι, τῶν ἀρχόντων ἴσως οὐδὲ ἐνδημούντων ταῖς πόλεσιν ἐκείναις, ἐν αἷς προϊέναι τὴν κηδεμονίαν συμβαίνει, ἀλλὰ παρὰ τῷ τῆς πόλεως ἐκείνης ἐκδίκῳ ἢ στρατηγῷ, κατὰ τὴν Ἀλεξανδρέων παρὰ τῷ ταύτης iuridico, ἅμα τῷ charge. 8. The same rule shall apply for the metropolitans, whenever an accusation is made before them against any of the bishops under their jurisdiction or against any of the clergy of that province. For if We have striven to reduce the amount of judicial fees and expenses in civil cases and have ensured that this was made law,[158] so much the more do We establish that the due amount shall be observed in ecclesiastical suits. 9. But if a case has been remitted by the most reverend Patriarch, and the ruling is given either by one of the most reverend metropolitans or to another one of the most reverend bishops, but one of the parties is dissatisfied and an appeal is made, then the appeal shall be brought before the archiepiscopal see and shall be tried there according to the rules heretofore in force. 10. If anyone should dare to do anything contrary to these provisions, he must restore to the person from whom too much has been exacted twice the sum taken, and he shall be subject to ecclesiastical punishment, being stricken from the register of clergymen by the most holy Patriarch then in office or by the most reverend metropolitan.

11. Moreover, We order that accusations, if the case concerns the state of the Church, must necessarily be made only before the most reverend bishops or metropolitans or before the holy synods or most reverend Patriarchs. If, though, the litigants' dispute is a civil case, We permit them, if willing, to present such questions before the aforementioned most reverend bishops; but We compel no one against his will, since there are civil courts, if he should prefer them, before which complaints may also be adjudicated. 12. Since some of the most reverend Patriarchs also hold the office of metropolitan in their provinces, and others make the appointments of the most reverend bishops, metropolitans, or others under them throughout an entire diocese, We decree for them what We have already sanctioned for the most reverend metropolitans. For he is rightly called a metropolitan who, according to the sacred canons, has authority over the bishops of his metropolis.

Given October 18, at Constantinople, in the consulship of Lampadius and Orestes (530).

[30] The same Augustus to John, Praetorian Prefect. pr. With regard to the curatorships of minors, whether of the first age or second, or even others to whom the law appoints curatores, We decree that if the amount of the property of the minors amounts to 500 solidi or less, they need not await appointment by the provincial governors or be involved in great expense, if perhaps the governors do not reside in the cities in which the curatorship should happen to be created. The appointments of curatores shall be made before the defender or magistrate (strategos) of the city, in Alexandria before the Justice (iuridicus), θεοφιλεστάτῳ ταύτης ἐπισκόπῳ ἢ καὶ δημοσίοις προσώποις, εἴγε εὐποροίη τούτων ἡ πόλις, γίνεσθαι τὰς χειροτονίας τῶν κηδεμόνων, ἐγγυητοῦ τε πρὸς τὸ μέτρον τῆς οὐσίας διδομένου κατὰ τὴν τῶν εἰρημένων προσώπων κρίσιν καὶ τῶν ἄλλων ἁπάντων προϊόντων, ὁπόσα ἐπὶ τῶν κηδεμόνων ἐγγυητοῦ τε πρὸς τὸ μέτρον εἴθισται, μόνης τῆς τῶν προσώπων ἐναλλαγῆς, παρ' οἷς ταῦτα πράττεται, διὰ τὸ τῶν νέων χρήσιμον ἀπὸ τῆς παρούσης νομοθεσίας εἰσαγομένης.

[158] C. 3.2.4.

1. Πάντων δηλονότι ἐπὶ μόνῃ δύο νομισμάτων δόσει πραττομένων, διόπερ μάλιστα ἡ τοιαύτη τέθειται διάταξις· ποινῆς ἐπικειμένης, εἴ τις πλέον λαβεῖν θαρρήσειεν ἢ ἀναβάλλοιτο καταστῆσαι τὴν κηδεμονίαν ἐλπίδι μείζονος κέρδους, καὶ οὐ μόνον τριπλάσιον ἀναδιδόντος πᾶν ὅπερ ἂν λάβοι, ἀλλὰ καὶ αὐτοῦ τοῦ φροντίσματος ἀποκινουμένου. 2. Ἡνίκα δὲ ἂν παρὰ ἐκδίκῳ γίνοιντο αἱ τῶν κηδεμόνων προβολαί, παρόντος καὶ τοῦ θεοφιλεστάτου τῆς πόλεως ἐπισκόπου, ἐν αὐτοῖς τοῖς τῆς ἁγιωτάτης ἐκκλησίας ἀρχείοις ἀποτίθεσθαι τὰ πραττόμενα θεσπίζομεν, ὥστε εἶναι διηνεκῆ τοῦ πράγματος μνήμην καὶ μὴ παραπόλλυσθαι τοῖς τυχοῦσι τῆς κηδεμονίας τὴν ἐντεῦθεν ἀσφάλειαν. 3. Τῶν ἐπὶ τῆς μεγάλης ταύτης πόλεως κηδεμονιῶν παρὰ μόνῳ τῷ λαμπροτάτῳ πραίτωρι πραττομένων, καθάπερ ἤδη νενομοθέτηται.

D. IIII k. Aug. Constantinopoli post cons. Lampadii et Orestis.

[31] Idem A. Iohanni pp. pr. Sancimus, si quando afuerit is, qui res alienas vel creditori obnoxias detinet, et desiderat dominus rei vel creditor suam intentionem proponere et non ei licentia sit absente suo adversario qui rem detinet vel infantia vel furore laborante et neminem tutorem vel curatorem habente vel in summa potestate constituto, licentia ei detur adire praesidem vel libellum ei porrigere et hoc in querimoniam deducere intra constituta tempora et interruptionem temporis facere. 1. Sin autem nullo poterit modo praesidem adire, saltem ad episcopum locorum eat et suam manifestare voluntatem scriptis deproperet.

D. Constantinopoli k. Oct. post consulatum Lampadii et Orestis vv. cc.

[32] [Ὁ αὐτὸς βασιλεύς.] pr. Ἐὰν ἐπὶ τρεῖς ἐνιαυτοὺς ὁ μὲν ἐμφυτευτὴς προσφέρῃ τῷ δεσπότῃ τὸν τῆς ἐμφυτεύσεως κανόνα, ὁ δὲ δεσπότης ἀναβάλληται δέξασθαι αὐτὸν ἢ ἐν τῇ βασιλίδι πόλει διάγων ἢ ἐν ἐπαρχίαις, ἐξεῖναι τῷ ἐμφυτευτῇ προσάγειν αὐτῷ τὸ ἐμφύτευμα καὶ μελλούσης περαιοῦσθαι τῆς τριετίας, εἰ μὴ ἀνάσχοιτο λαβεῖν, σφραγίζειν αὐτὸ καὶ ἐπιμαρτύρεσθαι περὶ τούτου ἢ τὸν ἐνδοξότατον ἔπαρχον τῆς πόλεως ἢ together with the most reverend bishop of the city and public officials, if the city should have any. Surety shall be given according to the amount of the property at the discretion of the aforementioned persons, and all other things that are customary concerning curatores and surety shall be done, excepting the change of persons before whom this is done as introduced by the present law for the benefit of minors.

1. All these things shall be done upon payment of 2 solidi, for which reason above all this decree has been issued. A penalty has been established, if anyone should dare to take more or put off appointing a curator in the hope of greater profit; and he will not only restore threefold whatever he took, but he shall be removed from his post. 2. Whenever nominations of curatores should be made before the defender of the city, in the presence also of the most reverend bishop of the city, We decree that record thereof shall be deposited in the archives of the most holy church, so that there may be a permanent memory of the act and the protection derived therefrom for those who receive curatores may not be lost. 3. Curatores shall be appointed in This Great City before the vir clarissimus Praetor alone, as has already been provided by law.

Given July 29, at Constantinople, in the post-consulate of Lampadius and Orestes (531).

[31][159] The same Augustus to John, Praetorian Prefect. pr. We ordain that if he who detains property owned by another or under obligation to a creditor should be absent, and the owner or creditor wishes to bring suit but is not permitted because his opponent, who detains the property, is absent or is impeded by inability to speak (infantia) or insanity and has no tutor or curator, or is in a position of great power, permission shall be given to the owner or creditor to go before the governor or to present him with a petition and make this a matter of complaint within the allotted period, and thus interrupt the time.[160] 1. But if he cannot in any way go before the governor, he shall go at least before the bishop of the place and hasten to make known his desire in writing.

Given October 1, at Constantinople, in the post-consulate of the viri clarissimi Lampadius and Orestes (531).

[32][161] (The same Emperor). pr. If for three years the emphyteutic leaseholder should offer the owner the payment (canon) for the emphyteutic lease (emphyteusis), and the owner, residing in the Imperial City or in the provinces, delays in accepting it, the emphyteuticary is permitted to offer him the payment, and, [159] = C. 7.40.2 pr.-1 (dated correctly to October 18; so also Lounghis et al.).

[160] That is, the owner or creditor has a limited time to bring suit; once he has presented the governor or bishop his petition explaining why he cannot initiate litigation, this deadline is removed or extended.
[161] = C. 4.66.4.

τοὺς ἐνδοξοτάτους ἐπάρχους τῶν ἱερῶν πραιτωρίων ἢ τὸν πρόσφορον ἄρχοντα, ᾧτινι ὑπόκειται ὁ τοῦ χωρίου δεσπότης· ἐν δὲ ταῖς ἐπαρχίαις ἢ παρὰ τῷ ἄρχοντι ἢ ἐν ἀπουσίᾳ τοῦ ἄρχοντος παρὰ τῷ ἐκδίκῳ τῶν τόπων ἢ παρὰ τῷ ἐπισκόπῳ τῆς πόλεως, καθ' ἣν ὁ δεσπότης τοῦ κτήματος διάγει, πράττειν περὶ τούτου, ὥστε καὶ τὴν ἐξ ἑνὸς τῶν εἰρημένων προσώπων προστεθῆναι τῷ πράγματι μαρτυρίαν. 1. Καὶ εἰ μηδὲ οὕτως ἕλοιτο λαβεῖν προσαγόμενον τὸ ἐμφύτευμα ὁ δεσπότης, κερδαινέτω μὲν αὐτὸ ὁ ἐμφυτευτής, μηδεμίαν ἀγωγὴν ἔχοντος εἰς ἀπαίτησιν αὐτοῦ τοῦ δεσπότου.

2. Μήτε δὲ ἡ ἐμφύτευσις λυέσθω παρατρεχούσης τῆς τριετίας μήτε τῶν ἐφεξῆς ἐνιαυτῶν ἀπαιτείτω τὸν εἰωθότα κανόνα ὁ δεσπότης, ἕως ἂν αὐτὸς ἄνωθεν ὀχλήσας τῷ ἐμφυτευτῇ καὶ διαμαρτυρίαν αὐτῷ στείλας ἄρξηται αἰτεῖν τὸν ἐμφυτευτικὸν κανόνα· τότε γὰρ οὐ μὴν τοῦ προλαβόντος χρόνου παντὸς ἀπαιτείτω τὸν κανόνα ὁ δεσπότης, ὡς αὐτὸς αἴτιος τοῦ μὴ λαβεῖν αὐτὸν γεγονώς, τοῦ δὲ τρέχοντος χρόνου μετὰ τὴν διαμαρτυρίαν αὐτοῦ ἀπαιτείτω τὸ ἐμφύτευμα. 3. Ἐὰν δὲ ἐπὶ τριετίαν μετὰ τὴν διαμαρτυρίαν τοῦ δεσπότου μὴ καταβάλῃ ὁ ἐμφυτευτὴς εὐγνωμόνως τὸν κανόνα, ἀκολούθως ἐξωθείτω αὐτὸν ὁ δεσπότης τῆς ἐμφυτεύσεως κατὰ τὴν δευτέραν τούτου τοῦ τίτλου διάταξιν.

[33] Ὁ αὐτὸς βασιλεὺς τοῖς πανταχοῦ γῆς θεοφιλεστάτοις ἐπισκόποις. pr. Θείαν ἐποιησάμεθα διάταξιν οὐδενὶ συγχωροῦντες οὐδὲ ἄκουσαν γυναῖκα δούλην ἢ ἐλευθέραν εἰς σκηνὴν ἢ ὀρχήστραν καθέλκειν οὐδὲ ἀπαλλαγῆναι βουλομένην κωλύειν ἢ τοὺς ἐγγυητὰς τοὺς αὐτῆς ὡς ὑπὲρ αὐτοῦ τούτου χρυσίον ῥητὸν ὁμολογήσαντας ἀπαιτεῖν. 1. Ἀλλ' εἴ τι τοιοῦτο γένοιτο, κωλύεσθαι ταῦτα παρά τε τῶν λαμπροτάτων τῶν ἐπαρχιῶν ἀρχόντων καὶ παρὰ τῶν ἐν ταῖς πόλεσι θεοφιλεστάτων ἐπισκόπων διεταξάμεθα δόντες ἄδειαν τοῖς θεοφιλεστάτοις ἐπισκόποις ἅμα τῷ λαμπροτάτῳ τῆς ἐπαρχίας ἄρχοντι καὶ ἄκοντας ἄγειν πρὸς ἑαυτοὺς τοὺς βιασαμένους ἢ τοὺς ἀπαλλάττεσθαι τῆς ἐργασίας κωλύοντας καὶ δημοσίαν μὲν αὐτῶν ποιεῖν τὴν οὐσίαν, ἐκείνους δὲ τῆς πόλεως ἐξελαύνειν. 2. Εἰ δὲ ὁ τὴν ἐπαρχίαν ἰθύνων αὐτὸς ὁ βιαζόμενος εἴη ἢ τὴν ἐκ τῆς εἰρημένης ἐργασίας ἀπαλλαγὴν κωλύων, δίδομεν[xvi] ἄδειαν καὶ μόνοις τοῖς θεοφιλεστάτοις ἐπισκόποις προσιέναι τὴν ταῦτα πάσχουσαν ἢ τὸν αὐτῆς ἐγγυητήν, τοὺς δὲ ἐναντιοῦσθαι τῷ τὴν ἀρχὴν ἔχοντι καὶ μὴ συγχωρεῖν

[xvi] ἔδομεν

when the three-year period is about to end, if he should be unwilling to take it, he may seal it and make an attestation concerning it either before the most glorious (endoxotatos) City Prefect or the most glorious Praetorian Prefects, or the appropriate magistrate (archon) to whom the owner of the farm is subject;[162] in the provinces, he may take action concerning this either before the governor, or, in the absence of the governor before the defender of the place (ekdikos, defensor) or before the bishop of the city in which the owner of the property dwells, so that the matter is attested by one of the aforesaid persons. 1. And if the owner thus should choose not to accept the emphyteutic payment offered, the emphyteutic leaseholder may keep it for himself and the owner shall have no right of action to demand the payment from him.

2. The emphyteutic lease should not be dissolved when the three-year period has elapsed, nor should the owner seek the customary payment for the following years, until he himself, pressing the emphyteutic leaseholder and sending him a written declaration, should begin to seek the emphyteutic payment. Then the owner should not seek the rent payment for all the previous time, since he is responsible for not receiving it, but he should seek the emphyteutic payment for the time elapsed since his declaration. 3. If for three years after the owner's declaration the emphyteutic leaseholder should not reasonably pay the payment, the owner should accordingly expel him from the emphyteutic lease in accordance with the second constitution of this title. (531–534).

[33] The same Augustus to the Most Reverend Bishops all over the Earth. pr. We have enacted a divine decree, allowing no one to drag any woman, slave or free, onto the stage or into a chorus against her will, or to prevent one desiring to leave from doing so, or to bring claim against her sureties, who for this very reason pledged a fixed amount of money. 1. But if any such thing should happen, We have decreed that it shall be stopped by the viri clarissimi governors of the provinces and by the most reverend bishops in the city; and We give the most reverend bishops together with the vir clarissimus provincial governor permission to summon, even against their will, to confiscate the property of, and to expel from the city those who have used force against such women or prevented them from leaving that profession. 2. If the provincial governor himself is the one who has used force or prevents such women from leaving the aforementioned profession, We have given permission to the woman who has suffered such things, or to her surety, to proceed to the most reverend bishops alone. The bishops shall oppose the provincial governor and not permit him ἀδικεῖν ἤ, εἰ μὴ γένοιντο πρὸς τοῦτο ἱκανοί, μηνύειν εἰς τὴν βασιλείαν, ὥστε ἐξ ἡμῶν τὴν προσήκουσαν ἐξενεχθῆναι ποινήν, τῶν ἐγγυῶν καθάπαξ λυομένων καὶ τῶν ἐγγυητῶν ἀζημίων φυλαττομένων· ἄδειαν δίδοντες ταῖς ἀπαλλαττομέναις τοιαύταις γυναιξὶν ἐλευθέραις καὶ εὐγενέσιν οὔσαις πρὸς γάμον χωρεῖν νόμιμον, κἂν εἰ τυγχάνοιεν ταῖς σεμνοτάταις ἀξίαις οἱ ταύτας λαμβάνοντες κεκοσμημένοι, μηκέτι δεομέναις βασιλικῆς ἀντιγραφῆς, ἀλλὰ κατ' ἐξουσίαν τὸν γάμον πραττούσαις, γαμικῶν μέντοι συμβολαίων ἐκ τρόπου παντὸς μεταξὺ αὐτῶν γινομένων· τὰ αὐτὰ καὶ περὶ τῶν θυγατέρων τῶν σκηνικῶν διαταξάμενοι. 3. Τὴν μὲν οὖν εἰρημένην διάταξιν καὶ ἐν τῷ πέμπτῳ βιβλίῳ τῶν πασῶν διατάξεων τούτου δὴ τοῦ τῆς ἡμετέρας εὐσεβείας ἐπωνύμου βιβλίου πρὸς τὰς πολιτικὰς ἀρχὰς ἀντιγεγραμμένην τεθείκαμεν. 4. Ἐπειδὴ δὲ ἐχρῆν διὰ τῆς παρούσης νομοθεσίας καὶ ὑμῖν τοῖς πανταχοῦ γῆς θεοφιλεστάτοις ἐπισκόποις ταῦτα ποιῆσαι φανερά, διὰ τοῦτο συνελόντες τὰ κατ' ἐκείνην ἀφηγήσει πλατυτέρᾳ νομοθετηθέντα τήνδε τὴν θείαν διάταξιν ποιούμεθα καὶ πρὸς ὑμᾶς, ὅπως τὴν ἱερατικὴν διασώζοντες σεμνότητα καὶ σωφροσύνης ἀντεχόμενοι ταῦτα φυλάττοιτε, τότε ἐκ τοῦ μεγάλου θεοῦ δέος καὶ βασιλικὴν ἀγανάκτησιν, εἴ τι τούτων παραβαίητε, λογιζόμενοι.

[162] A version of this constitution in the constitutionum ecclesiasticarum collectio indicates that a phrase like "or before the Patriarch, if he is powerful" has fallen out.

D. k. Nov. Constantinopoli dn. Iustiniano pp. A. IIII et Paulino vc. conss.

[34] Ὁ αὐτὸς βασιλεὺς Ἐπιφανίῳ τῷ ἁγιωτάτῳ ἀρχιεπισκόπῳ τῆς εὐδαίμονος ταύτης πόλεως καὶ οἰκουμενικῷ πατριάρχῃ. pr. Σφόδρα πιστεύομεν, ὡς ἡ τῶν ἱερέων καθαρότης τε καὶ εὐκοσμία καὶ ἡ πρὸς τὸν δεσπότην θεὸν καὶ σωτῆρα ἡμῶν Ἰησοῦν Χριστὸν συντονία καὶ αἱ παρ' αὐτῶν ἀναπεμπόμεναι διηνεκεῖς εὐχαὶ πολλὴν εὐμένειαν τῇ καθ' ἡμᾶς πολιτείᾳ καὶ αὔξησιν παρέχονται· δι' ὧν ἔστιν ἡμῖν καὶ βαρβάρων κρατεῖν καὶ γίνεσθαι κυρίοις ἐκείνων, ἃ πρόσθεν οὐκ εἴχομεν. καὶ ὅσῳπερ ἂν τὰ τῆς αὐτῶν αὔξηται σεμνότητός τε καὶ κοσμιότητος, τοσούτῳ καὶ τὴν ἡμετέραν πολιτείαν ἐπιδιδόναι πιστεύομεν. εἰ γὰρ οἱ μὲν παρέχοιντο βίον σεμνόν τε καὶ πανταχόθεν ἀνεπίληπτον, τὸν δὲ λοιπὸν ἅπαντα λαὸν νουθετοῖεν, ὥστε πρὸς τὴν αὐτῶν σεμνότητα βλέποντα τῶν πολλῶν ἁμαρτημάτων ἀπέχεσθαι, πρόδηλον, ὡς ἐντεῦθεν αἵ τε ψυχαὶ πᾶσι βελτίους ἔσονται καὶ ῥᾳδίως ἡμῖν ἐνδοθήσεται παρὰ τοῦ μεγάλου θεοῦ καὶ σωτῆρος ἡμῶν Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ φιλανθρωπία προσήκουσα.

1. Ταῦτα τοίνυν ἡμῖν ἀνασκοπουμένοις προσήγγελται παραδόξως τινὰς τῶν εὐλαβεστάτων διακόνων, ἔτι γε μὴν καὶ πρεσβυτέρων (τὸ γὰρ ἔτι πορρωτέρω τούτου καὶ εἰπεῖν ἐρυθριῶμεν, φαμὲν δὴ τὸ τῶν θεοφιλῶν ἐπισκόπων), ὡς τούτων τινὲς οὐκ αἰσχύνονται οἱ μὲν αὐτόθεν κύβων ἅπτεσθαι καὶ τὴν οὕτως ἀσχήμονα καὶ αὐτοῖς τοῖς ἰδιώταις παρ' ἡμῶν κατὰ τὸ πλεῖστον ἀπηγορευμένην θέαν μετιέναι, οἱ δὲ τὴν τοιαύτην παιγνίαν οὐκ αὐτουργοῦσιν, ἀλλ' ἢ κοινωνοῦσι τοῖς πράττουσιν ἢ

to wrong her, or, if they are not powerful enough for this, they shall report the matter to the imperial court, so that suitable punishment may be inflicted by Us, while the sureties may at once be released and those who gave surety be kept free from loss. We further give women free and free-born women who leave this profession permission to contract a lawful marriage, and even if those who take them in marriage are decorated with the highest offices, such women no longer require an imperial rescript but may marry at their own discretion, although a marriage contract must by all means be made between them. 3. This the aforementioned decree, addressed to all public magistrates, We have also placed in the fifth book of all decrees in the book named after Our Piety.[163] 4. But since it was necessary, through the present law, to make its provisions known to you, the most reverend bishops all over the Earth, We have therefore summarized the measures established in that decree at greater length and have written this divine decree to you. Thus, while maintaining your priestly dignity and cleaving to moderation, you shall observe these provisions, moreover bearing in mind your fear of God and Our imperial displeasure if you should violate any of them.

Given November 1, at Constantinople, in the consulship of Our Lord Justinian, Ever Augustus, for the fourth time, and of the vir clarissimus Paulinus (534).

[34] The same Augustus to Epiphanius, Most Holy Archbishop of This Blessed City and Ecumenical Patriarch. pr. We vehemently believe that the purity of the priests, their good discipline, and their devotion to the Lord God and to Our Savior Jesus Christ, as well as their prayers, offered up continually, bring much benevolence and increase to the State under Our rule: through them, We are able both to conquer the barbarians and to become the rulers over territory which We did not previously hold. And We believe that to the extent to which their dignity and honor is increased, to that extent Our State also increases. For if they show their own life to be honorable and utterly beyond reproach and guide all the rest of the laity, who observing austerity of the priests abstain from many sins, it is self-evident that the souls of all shall thereby be bettered and corresponding benevolence will more readily be bestowed upon us by Mighty God and Our Savior Jesus Christ.

1. As We were reflecting on these things, it was reported to Us to Our surprise that some of the most pious deacons, and indeed even some of the presbyters – for We blush to name any beyond this rank, namely, reverend bishops – that some of them are not ashamed to play dice of their own accord and partake in this so unseemly spectacle, which We have strictly forbidden to laymen;[164] while others do not play this game themselves but either mingle with those [163] That is, the Code; the reference is to C. 5.4.29.

[164] C. 3.43.1–2.

κάθηνται θεαταὶ πράξεως ἀτόπου, καὶ θεῶνται μὲν σὺν ἐπιθυμίᾳ πάσῃ τὰ πάντων ἀτοπώτατα, λόγων δὲ ἀκούουσι βλασφήμων, οὓς ἐν τοῖς τοιούτοις ἀνάγκη γίνεσθαι, μολύνουσί τε τὰς ἑαυτῶν χεῖρας τάς τε ὁράσεις τάς τε ἀκοὰς οὕτω κατεγνωσμένοις καὶ ἀπηγορευμένοις παιγνίοις· οἱ δὲ καὶ ἀπαρακαλύπτως ἢ ταῖς τῶν ἵππων ἁμίλλαις ἢ παραβάλλουσιν ἢ καὶ προκαλοῦνταί τινας ὑπὲρ τῆς τῶν ἵππων ἥττης ἢ νίκης, ἢ δι᾿ ἑαυτῶν ἢ διά τινων ἑτέρων οὐκ εὐσχημόνως τὰ τοιαῦτα παίζοντες, ἢ τῶν ἐν σκηνῇ καὶ θυμέλαις θεαταὶ γίνονται παιγνίων, ἢ ταῖς ἐν θεάτροις τῶν μαχομένων πρὸς τὰ θηρία μάχαις παραγίνονται καὶ οὐκ ἐννοοῦσιν, ὡς καὶ τοῖς ἄρτι μυουμένοις καὶ τῶν προσκυνητῶν ἀξιουμένοις μυστηρίων αὐτοὶ προκηρύττουσιν ἀποτάττεσθαι τῇ τοῦ ἀντικειμένου δαίμονος λατρείᾳ τε καὶ πάσῃ πομπῇ, ἧς οὐκ ἐλάχιστον μέρος τὰ τοιαῦτα καθέστηκε.

2. Πολλάκις μὲν αὐτοῖς τὰ τοιαῦτα φυλάττεσθαι προηγορεύσαμεν· ὁρῶντες δὲ συχνὴν τὴν περὶ τούτων γινομένην ἡμῖν προσαγγελίαν εἰς ἀνάγκην ἤλθομεν ἐπὶ τὸν παρόντα νόμον διὰ τὴν ὑπὲρ εὐσεβείας ἀφικέσθαι σπουδὴν καὶ ἅμα μὲν ὑπὲρ τῆς ἱερωσύνης αὐτῆς, ἅμα δὲ ὑπέρ τε τοῦ κοινῇ τῇ πολιτείᾳ συμφέροντος.

3. Καὶ θεσπίζομεν μηδένα μήτε διάκονον μήτε πρεσβύτερον καὶ πολλῷ μᾶλλον ἐπίσκοπον (ὅπερ καὶ ἄπιστον ἴσως ἂν δόξειεν, ὧν ἐν ταῖς χειροτονίαις εὐχαί τε εἰς τὸν δεσπότην ἀναπέμπονται Χριστὸν τὸν θεὸν ἡμῶν καὶ ἐπίκλησις τοῦ ἁγίου καὶ προσκυνητοῦ γίνεται πνεύματος καὶ ταῖς αὐτῶν κεφαλαῖς ἢ ταῖς χερσὶν ἐπιτίθεται ἢ ἐπιδίδοται τὰ ἁγιώτατα τῶν παρ᾿ ἡμῖν μυστηρίων, ὅπως ἂν αὐτοῖς τὰ αἰσθητήρια πάντα καθαρά τε γένοιτο καὶ καθιερωθείη θεῷ) μηδένα τοίνυν τούτων τολμᾶν τοῦ λοιποῦ μετὰ τόνδε τὸν θεῖον ἡμῶν νόμον ἢ κυβεύειν τὴν οἱανοῦν τῶν κύβων παιδιὰν ἢ τοῖς τοῦτο πράττουσι κοινωνεῖν ἢ παρακαθῆσθαι καὶ τέρπεσθαι καὶ συνδιατίθεσθαι τοῖς γινομένοις ἢ παραβάλλειν ταῖς δημώδεσι ταύταις θέαις, ἃς ἔμπροσθεν εἰπόντες ἔφθημεν, καί τι τῶν ἐπ᾿ αὐταῖς ἀπηγορευμένων ποιεῖν, ἀλλὰ πάσης πρὸς ταῦτα μετουσίας τὸ λοιπὸν ἀπέχεσθαι.

4. Τὸ γὰρ ἤδη προειληφός, εἰ καὶ ἀναζητεῖν ἐχρῆν ἢ καὶ μὴ[xvii] μετιέναι προσηκόντως, ὅμως διὰ φιλανθρωπίαν συγχωροῦμεν, τὴν ἐκ τοῦ παρόντος νόμου παρατήρησιν ἅπασιν εἰς τὸν λοιπὸν ἐπιτιθέντες χρόνον. προσῆκον γάρ ἐστιν αὐτοῖς νηστείαις τε καὶ ἁγνείαις καὶ ταῖς ἀσκήσεσι τῶν θείων λογίων καὶ ταῖς ὑπὲρ πάντων σχολάζειν εὐχαῖς, ἀλλὰ μὴ ταῦτα καταλιμπάνοντας τῶν παντάπασι βεβήλων τε καὶ ἀπηγορευμένων ἅπτεσθαι. 5. Ταὐτὸ δὲ τοῦτο θεσπίζομεν καὶ ἐπὶ τῶν λοιπῶν κληρικῶν, ὑποδιακόνων τε καὶ ἀναγνωστῶν φαμεν, οἵπερ καὶ αὐτοὶ τῆς τε ἱερᾶς τραπέζης και παντὸς τοῦ περὶ τὰς ἁγιωτάτας ἐκκλησίας κόσμου καθεστᾶσιν ὑπουργοί τε καὶ ὑπηρέται καὶ τὰ θεῖα μεταχειριζόμενοι λόγια τὰς ἱερὰς ἡμῖν ἐκ τῶν εὐαγῶν ἡμῶν βιβλίων οἱ μὲν ἀναγινώσκουσι γραφάς, οἱ δὲ ὑμνοῦσιν ᾠδάς.

[xvii] [μή]

who do or sit as spectators of this disgraceful practice and watch with rapt attention the most detestable of all things, hearing blasphemous words, which inevitably are uttered in such circumstances, and sullying their hands, eyes, and ears at such damnable and prohibited games. And still others openly either bet on horse races or even challenge others to bet on the defeat or victory of horses, indecently making such bets in person or through others; or they sit as spectators of shows on the stage or in the orchestra, or attend battles between fighters and beasts in the theaters, and think not thereon that they preach to the recently converted and those found worthy of the worshipful mysteries to abstain from serving the Opponent Demon, and from all such pomp, of which such spectacles make up no small part.

2. We have often bid them to observe these things. But in light of the frequent report of such matters to Us, We have been forced to enact the present law out of Our zeal for piety and for the sake of the priesthood itself, as well as the for the benefit to the commonwealth.

3. And We decree that neither deacon nor presbyter, let alone bishop – which might indeed seem beyond belief, since in their election both prayers are offered up to the Lord Christ Our God, and the worshipful Holy Spirit is invoked, and the holiest mysteries among us are laid or placed on their heads or in their hands, so that all their senses should be made pure and consecrated to God – none of them, then, shall dare after this Our divine law either to play any kind of dice game, mingle or sit with those playing, or enjoy or condone such games, or to bet on the public spectacles that We mentioned above and do anything forbidden at them, but they shall hereafter abstain from all contact with these things.

4. As for the past, although We should investigate and punish accordingly, We nevertheless grant pardon by reason of Our benevolence, but We require full observance of the present law henceforth for all time. For it behooves them to devote themselves to fasts, vigils, study of the divine scriptures, and prayers on behalf of all, and not, forsaking these, to engage in utterly profane and forbidden things. 5. We decree the same thing with respect to the rest of the clergy, namely subdeacons and readers, who themselves are servants and ministers of the sacred table[165] and of all adornments of the most holy churches; who, practicing the divine sayings – some read to us the divine scriptures of the holy books, others sing songs.

[165] That is, the sacred table (τῆς ἱερᾶς τραπέζης) of communion, in reference to the Last Supper; the expression might also be understood as a reference to the altar.

6. Εἰ δέ τις τοῦ λοιποῦ τοιοῦτό τι πράττων φανείη καὶ προσαγγελθείη τοῦτο ἢ κατὰ ταύτην τὴν εὐδαίμονα πόλιν τῇ σῇ ἁγιωσύνῃ ἢ κατὰ τὰς ἐπαρχίας τοῖς ὑπ' αὐτὴν τεταγμένοις θεοφιλεστάτοις μητροπολίταις καὶ τοῖς λοιποῖς ἐπισκόποις, ὧν τὴν χειροτονίαν ὁ τῆς σῆς μακαριότητος ποιεῖται θρόνος, καὶ τοιαύτη τις ἐπέλθοι μέμψις ἢ διακόνῳ ἢ πρεσβυτέρῳ καὶ πολλῷ μᾶλλόν τινι τῶν θεοφιλεστάτων ἐπισκόπων, τὴν σὴν ἐνταυθοῖ μακαριότητα κἂν ταῖς ἐπαρχίαις τοὺς ὑπὸ σὲ θεοφιλεστάτους μητροπολίτας καὶ τοὺς ὑπ' αὐτοὺς ἐπισκόπους ταῦτα σὺν ἀκριβείᾳ πάσῃ κατὰ τὴν τῆς ἱερωσύνης τάξιν ζητεῖν καὶ ἀνερευνᾶν, μηδὲ πάρεργον ποιεῖσθαι τὴν ἐξέτασιν, ἀλλὰ καὶ μαρτύρων ἀξιοπίστων ἀκούειν καὶ διὰ πάσης ὁδοῦ χωρεῖν, ὥστε τὸ ἀληθὲς λαβεῖν. ὥσπερ γὰρ αὐτοὺς τῶν τοιούτων εἴργομεν, οὕτω καὶ συκοφαντεῖσθαι παρά τινων κωλύομεν.

7. Καὶ εἰ πανταχόθεν τῆς ἐξετάσεως τῶν θείων προκειμένων λογίων γινομένης ἀληθῶς ἔχειν ἡ μέμψις φανείη καὶ ἀποδειχθείη διάκονος ἢ πρεσβύτερος ἢ κυβεύων ἢ κοινωνῶν τοῖς κυβεύουσιν ἢ ταῖς τοιαύταις παρακαθήμενος ματαιότησιν ἢ ταῖς εἰρημέναις παραβάλλων θέαις, ἢ καὶ ἴσως τις τῶν θεοφιλεστάτων ἐπισκόπων (ὅπερ οὐδὲ ἔσεσθαι πιστεύομεν ὅλως) τοιαύτης τινὸς ἀνάσχηται θέας ἢ τοῖς κυβεύουσι προσκαθεσθῆναι καὶ συνδιατίθεσθαι τοῦ λοιποῦ θαρρήσειε, τὸν τοιοῦτον εὐθὺς ὑπὸ τῆς σῆς μακαριότητος ἢ ὑπὸ τοῦ μητροπολίτου ἢ τοῦ γε θεοφιλεστάτου ἐπισκόπου, ὑφ' ὃν τέτακται, εἴπερ τις τῶν εἰρημένων εἴη κληρικῶν, τῆς ἱερᾶς ἀφορίζεσθαι λειτουργίας, ἐπιτίθεσθαί τε αὐτῷ κανονικὸν ἐπιτίμιον καὶ ὁρίζεσθαι χρόνον, οὗπερ ἐντὸς προσῆκόν ἐστιν αὐτὸν νηστείαις τε καὶ ἱκεσίαις χρώμενον τὸν μέγαν ἐξιλάσκεσθαι θεὸν ὑπὲρ τοῦ τοιούτου πλημμελήματος. 8. Καὶ εἰ μὲν ἐπὶ τὸν ὁρισθέντα χρόνον ὁ τὸ τοιοῦτον ἐπιτίμιον δεχόμενος μείνειε δάκρυσί τε καὶ μετανοίᾳ καὶ νηστείᾳ καὶ τῇ πρὸς τὸν δεσπότην θεὸν εὐχῇ ἄφεσιν τοῦ πλημμελήματος ἐξαιτῶν, τηνικαῦτα τὸν ὑφ' ᾧ τέτακται ταῦτα ἀκριβῶς μανθάνοντα καὶ περιεργαζόμενον κοινὴν μὲν ὑπὲρ αὐτοῦ ποιεῖν εὐχὴν γίνεσθαι, σὺν πάσῃ δὲ ἀκριβείᾳ παρεγγυᾶν αὐτῷ τοῦ λοιποῦ τῆς τοιαύτης ἱερωσύνης ὕβρεως ἀπέχεσθαι· καὶ εἰ νομίσειεν αὐτὸν αὐτάρκως πρὸς μετάνοιαν ἐλθεῖν, τηνικαῦτα τῆς ἱερατικῆς αὐτῷ μεταδιδότω φιλανθρωπίας.

9. Εἰ δὲ καὶ μετὰ τὸν ἀφορισμὸν εὑρεθείη μήτε γνησίως τῇ μετανοίᾳ χρώμενος περιφρονῶν τε τοῦ πράγματος καὶ καθαρῶς ὑπὸ τοῦ ἀντικειμένου κατειλημμένος τὴν ψυχήν, οὗτος μὲν αὐτὸν ὁ ἱερεὺς ὑφ' ᾧ τελεῖ τῶν ἱερατικῶν ἐξωθείτω καταλόγων παντάπασιν αὐτὸν καθαιρῶν. 10. Ὁ δὲ οὐκέτι παντελῶς ἄδειαν ἕξει πρὸς ἱερατικὴν ἐλθεῖν τάξιν. ἀλλ' εἰ μὲν ἔχοι περιουσίαν, τὸ τῆς πόλεως ἐκείνης βουλευτήριον, καθ' ἣν ἱερᾶτο πρότερον, ἢ εἴπερ οὐκ ἔχοι βουλευτήριον ἡ πόλις, ἕτερον βουλευτήριον τῆς ἐπαρχίας, ὅπερ μάλιστα χρήζει βουλευτοῦ, παραλήψεται τοῦτον τὸ λοιπὸν ἅμα τῇ περιουσίᾳ δουλεύοντα. εἰ δὲ οὐσίαν οὐκ ἔχοι, ταξεώτης τὸ λοιπὸν ἔσται τῆς ἐπιχωρίου τάξεως ἀντὶ τοῦ πρόσθεν ἱερέως καί, ἐπειδὴ τὴν τοῦ θεοῦ

6. If someone hereafter should be caught doing such a thing, and it is reported either in This Blessed City to Your Holiness, or in the provinces to the most reverend metropolitans and other bishops under Your supervision, who are appointed by the See of Your Blessedness, and such an accusation is made against a deacon, presbyter, or indeed even against one of the most reverend bishops, then Your Blessedness here, the most reverend metropolitans under You and the bishops under them in the provinces, shall most carefully investigate and examine these matters according to priestly regulations; and they shall not make a cursory investigation but shall hear credible witnesses and try every means of reaching the truth. For just as We forbid them to do such things, so too do We prohibit them to be slandered by anyone.

7. And if upon exhaustive inquiry, with the divine scriptures before them, the accusation appears to be true, and a deacon or presbyter is convicted of playing dice, of mingling with the players, of attending such frivolities, or of betting on the aforementioned spectacles; or if perchance one of the most reverend bishops – which We trust will not happen – should take part in such a spectacle or dare to sit among those playing dice or to condone them; then such a one, if he is one of the aforementioned clergymen, shall immediately be removed from his sacred office by Your Blessedness, by the metropolitan, or by the most reverend bishop under whom he serves; and the canonical punishment shall be imposed on him and the time fixed during which he must, with fasting and supplications, placate great God for such a sin. 8. And if the person on whom this penalty is imposed indeed perseveres through the appointed time with tears and repentance and fasting and prayer to the Lord God, begging for the remission of his sin, then his superior shall carefully ascertain this and cause a common prayer to be offered on his behalf, and he shall urgently enjoin him to abstain from such outrage on the priesthood ever after. And if his superior deems him sufficiently penitent, then he may give him a share in priestly mercy (i.e., reinstate him).

9. But if after excommunication he is found not genuinely penitent but contemptuous, his soul entirely possessed by the Opponent, then the bishop under whom he serves shall strike his name from the register of the clergy and utterly depose him. 10. He shall no longer be permitted to enter the priestly order. If he has property, the curia of the city in which he formerly served as priest, or if it does not have a curia, another curia in the province that is most in need of curials, shall take him as its servant ever after along with his property. If he does not possess wealth, he shall thereafter be a member of the provincial staff, instead of a priest as before; and since he has left the order of God, he shall τάξιν ἐκλέλοιπεν, ἔσται ταξεώτης ἐπιχώριος, ταύτην ἑαυτῷ τὴν αἰσχύνην ἀντὶ τῆς ἔμπροσθεν τιμῆς ἐπιθείς.

11. Ταῦτα τοίνυν ἅπαντα θεσπίζομεν ἐπὶ μὲν τῆς εὐδαίμονος ταύτης πόλεως τὴν σὴν φυλάττειν ἁγιωσύνην καὶ τοὺς καθ' ἑκάστην ἁγιωτάτην ἐκκλησίαν ἐκδίκους τε καὶ οἰκονόμους, οἷς ἐπιμελὲς ἔσται τὰ τοιαῦτα καὶ ἀναζητεῖν καὶ προσαγγέλλειν καὶ τοὺς ἁλισκομένους ἀφαιρεῖσθαι τῆς διδομένης αὐτοῖς παρὰ τῶν ἁγιωτάτων ἐκκλησιῶν σιτήσεώς τε καὶ χορηγίας· ἐν δὲ ταῖς ἐπαρχίαις οἵ τε ὑπὸ τῇ σῇ μακαριότητι τεταγμένοι θεοφιλέστατοι μητροπολῖται καὶ πρός γε οἱ ὑπ' αὐτοὺς θεοσεβεῖς ἐπίσκοποι καὶ οἱ τούτων ἐκκλησιέκδικοι καὶ οἰκονόμοι καὶ αὐτοὶ τὸν ἴσον τρόπον, καθ' ὅνπερ ἔμπροσθεν εἴπομεν, τῷ πράγματι χρώμενοι καὶ τὸ ἱερατικὸν σέβας πανταχόθεν ἀνεπίληπτόν τε καὶ ἀμώμητον φυλάττοντες.

12. Παραφυλάξουσι δὲ ταῦτα καὶ οἱ ἐνδοξότατοι τῶν ἱερῶν ἡμῶν πραιτωρίων ὕπαρχοι, φαμὲν δὲ τοὺς τῆς Ἑῴας ἐπὶ τοῖς ὑποτεταγμένοις ἔθνεσι τῇ αὐτῶν δικαιοδοσίᾳ οἵ τε τῆς Ἰλλυρίδος οἵ τε τῆς Ἄφρων προεστῶτες διοικήσεως καὶ αἱ πειθόμεναι τάξεις αὐτοῖς καὶ οἱ λαμπρότατοι τῶν ἐπαρχιῶν ἄρχοντες καὶ οἱ τῶν πόλεων ἔκδικοι, αὐτοὶ μὲν οἱ τὰς μεγάλας ἀρχὰς ἄρχοντες ἀγανάκτησιν ἡμετέραν ὑφορώμενοι, αἱ δὲ πειθόμεναι τάξεις αὐτοῖς δέκα χρυσίου λιτρῶν ἀγωνιῶσαι ποινήν, ἄρχοντες δὲ ἐπιχώριοι μείζους τε καὶ ἐλάττους καὶ αἱ πειθόμεναι τάξεις αὐτοῖς καὶ πρός γε οἱ τῶν πόλεων ἔκδικοι ἀνὰ πέντε χρυσίου λιτρῶν ποινὴν εὐλαβούμενοι, εἰ ταῦτα μαθόντες μὴ προσαγγείλαιεν καὶ αὐτοὶ τοῖς ἱερεῦσι, τουτέστιν ἢ τοῖς θεοφιλεστάτοις ἐπισκόποις ἢ τοῖς ὁσιωτάτοις μητροπολίταις ἢ τοῖς ἑκάστης διοικήσεως ἁγιωτάτοις πατριάρχαις, καθ' ἣν ἂν ἕκαστος τελοίη χώραν, ὥστε ἐκείνους ταῦτα μαθόντας κατὰ τὸ ἔμπροσθεν διωρισμένον ἅπασιν ἐπεξελθεῖν, καί, ἐπειδὰν παρ' αὐτῶν ὁ ἐπὶ τοῖς τοιούτοις ἁλοὺς καθαιρεθείη, μὴ[xviii] τῇ βουλῇ τῆς πόλεως ἢ τῇ τάξει τοῦτον παραδοθῆναι παρασκευάσαιεν. 13. Καὶ ὁ ἐνδοξότατος ὕπαρχος τῆς εὐδαίμονος ταύτης πόλεως ταῦτα παραφυλάξει, εἴπερ ἐπὶ ταύτης ἁμαρτάνοιτο τῆς βασιλίδος ἡμῶν πόλεως, ἅμα τῇ πειθομένῃ αὐτῷ τάξει, αὐτὸς μὲν ἀγανάκτησιν ἡμετέραν ὑφορώμενος, ἡ δὲ αὐτοῦ τάξις δέκα χρυσίου λιτρῶν εὐλαβουμένη ποινήν.

14. Ἀλλ' ἡμεῖς μὲν ταῦτα νομοθετικῶς πεπράχαμεν. ἐκεῖνο δὲ τῶν ἀνωμολογημένων ἐστίν, ὡς ἡμῖν μὲν ἀφωσίωται πρὸς τὸν θεὸν ὑπὲρ τῆς εἰς αὐτὸν τῶν ἱερέων σεμνότητος. 15. Εἰ δὲ αὐτοί τι παραβαίνοιεν τῶν τεταγμένων καὶ παραπροσποιοῖντο καὶ μὴ ἐπεξίοιεν, ἀλλά τινα δῆθεν φιλανθρωπίαν οὐκ ἐπαινετὴν ἕλοιντο, πρὸς <ταῖς ἐξ ἡμῶν νόμων> τὰς ἐξ οὐρανοῦ ποινὰς ἕξουσι καὶ τὴν ἐκεῖθεν κρίσιν, ἥτις αὐτοῖς ἐν αὐτῷ τῷ τοῦ θεοῦ παραστήσεται βήματι τὴν οὐκ εὐπρεπῆ παραπροσποίησιν ἐλέγχουσά τε καὶ μετιοῦσα. 16. Εἰ δὲ καί τις τῶν πολιτικῶν ἀρχόντων μειζόνων τε καὶ ἐλαττόνων ἢ ταξεωτῶν ἢ ἐκδίκων ἢ μαθὼν ταῦτα μὴ μηνύσειεν ἢ ἐπεξελθεῖν ἐξὸν ῥᾳθυμήσειεν ἢ καὶ τὸ πρᾶγμα μισθοῦ καταπροδοίη, ἴστω, belong to the order of the provincial staff, having subjected himself to this disgrace in the place of his former honor.

xviii ἤ

11. We moreover decree that Your Holiness shall observe all these measures in This Blessed City and likewise the defenders and stewards in each most holy church, whose duty it shall be to investigate and denounce such misconduct and to deprive those caught from the sustenance and support given them by the most holy churches. In the provinces, the most reverend metropolitans under the jurisdiction of Your Blessedness, as well as the reverend bishops under them and their defenders of the church and stewards, shall go about the matter in the same way as We have said above and shall keep the sacerdotal dignity irreproachable and blameless in every respect.

12. Also Our viri gloriosissimi Praetorian Prefects shall see that these provisions are observed, namely those of the East in the provinces under their jurisdiction, as will those of the diocese of Illyricum and the diocese of Africa as well as the staffs that answer to them, the viri clarissimi provincial governors, and the Defenders of the cities. Those who hold high offices shall dread Our displeasure; the staffs that answer to them shall suffer a fine of 10 pounds of gold; the greater and lesser provincial governors, the staffs that answer to them, and the defenders of the cities shall fear a fine of 5 pounds of gold, if upon learning of such misconduct they do not report it to the priests, that is, either to the most reverend bishops or to the most holy metropolitans or to the most holy patriarchs of the diocese, according to the district in which each serves, so that they, upon learning these things, may proceed as has been established above; and when one convicted of such misconduct has been deposed, they shall see to it that he is handed over either to the curia of the city or to the provincial staff. 13. The Most Illustrious Prefect of This Blessed City, along with the staff that answers to him, shall also observe these provisions, he dreading Our displeasure; his staff, fearing a fine of 10 pounds of gold.

14. Thus have We made these provisions law. For it is fitting that We should consecrate to God the solemnity due him from his priests. 15. But if they should transgress one of these provisions and dissemble and not prosecute such transgressions but choose instead a kind of censurable clemency, in addition to the penalties from Our laws they shall face punishment from Heaven and judgment there, which shall be rendered them at the tribunal of God and shall prove and punish their unseemly connivance. 16. If any of the greater or lesser civilian magistrates or a member of their staffs or a defender, upon learning of such misconduct, either fails to report it or, if able to prosecute it, neglects to do so or even betrays his duty for a bribe, he shall know that, ὡς πρὸς ταῖς ἠπειλημέναις παρ' ἡμῶν ποιναῖς ἕξει καὶ τὴν παρὰ τοῦ μεγάλου θεοῦ τιμωρίαν ἑπομένην καὶ ἔνοχος ἔσται ταῖς ἀραῖς ἁπάσαις ταῖς τοῖς ἱεροῖς περιεχομέναις βιβλίοις.

17. Ὥσπερ δὲ ταῦτα ἡμῖν δι' οὐδὲν ἕτερον ἢ διὰ τὴν τοῦ δεσπότου νενομοθέτηται θεραπείαν, οὕτω κἀκεῖνο προστίθεμεν, ὥστε τὰς ἐξετάσεις σὺν ἀκριβείᾳ γίνεσθαι καὶ μηδένα συκοφάντην ἐπανίστασθαί τισι καὶ ψευδοκατηγορεῖν ἢ ψευδομαρτυρεῖν ἐν τοῖς τοιούτοις. 18. Καθάπερ γὰρ τοῖς ἱερεῦσιν, εἴ τι τοιοῦτο πράξαιεν, τηλικαύτας ἐπεθήκαμεν ποινάς, οὕτω καὶ τοῖς συκοφαντεῖν αὐτοὺς πειρωμένοις τὰς ἐξ οὐρανοῦ καὶ τῶν ἡμετέρων νόμων ποινὰς ἐπικεῖσθαι βουλόμεθα, εἰ προσαγγείλαντες εἶτα ἐπεξελθεῖν μὴ βουληθεῖεν ἢ συστῆναι ταῖς τοιαύταις κατηγορίαις οὐκ ἰσχύσαιεν· πανταχόθεν τῆς ἰσότητος καὶ δικαιοσύνης, ἣν διὰ πάσης τιμῶμεν πράξεως καὶ μάλιστα ἐν τῇ θέσει τῶν νόμων, ἀντεχόμενοι.

D. prid. non. Nov. Constantinopoli Iustiniano pp. A. IIII et Paulino vc. conss.

V De Haereticis et Manichaeis et Samaritis

[1] Imp. Constantinus A. ad Dracilianum. Privilegia, quae contemplatione religionis indulta sunt, catholicae tantum legis observatoribus prodesse oportet. haereticos non solum his privilegiis alienos esse volumus, sed et diversis muneribus constringi et subici.

PP. k. Sept. Gerasti Constantino A. VII et Constantio conss.

[2] Imppp. Gratianus Valentinianus et Theodosius AAA. ad Hesperium pp. pr. Omnes vetitae legibus et divinis et imperialibus constitutionibus haereses perpetuo conquiescant et nemo ulterius conetur quae repperit profana praecepta vel docere vel discere: ne antistites eorundem audeant fidem insinuare, quam non habent, et ministros creare, quod non sunt: ne per coniventiam iudicantium omniumque, quibus per constitutiones paternas super hoc cura mandata est, eiusmodi audacia neglegatur et crescat. 1. Haereticorum autem vocabulo continentur et latis adversus eos sanctionibus debent succumbere, qui vel levi argumento iudicio catholicae religionis et tramite detecti fuerint deviare.

D. III non. Aug. Mediolano. acc. XIII k. Sept. Ausonio et Olybrio conss.

in addition to the punishment threatened by Us, he shall face the imminent vengeance of Mighty God and shall be subject to all the execrations contained in the sacred scriptures.

17. As We have enacted these provisions for no other reason than for the worship of the Lord, so We also add this: that the inquiries shall be made with care and no calumniator shall assail anyone, making false accusations or bearing false witness in such matters. 18. For as We have established such great punishment for priests, if they do such a thing, so too do We desire that punishment from Heaven and from Our laws be visited upon those who attempt to calumniate them, if after denouncing them they refuse to prosecute them or prove unable to substantiate their accusations. For We cleave to equity and justice, which We honor in every deed and most of all in the enactment of laws.

Given November 4, at Constantinople, in the consulship of Justinian, Ever Augustus, for the fourth time, and the vir clarissimus Paulinus (534).

Fifth Title Heretics, Manichaeans, and Samaritans

[1][166] Emperor Constantine Augustus to Dracilianus. The privileges that have been granted in consideration of religion should benefit only adherents of the Catholic faith. We desire that heretics not only be excluded from these privileges but also be bound and subject to various liturgies.

Given September 1, at Gerastus, in the consulship of Constantine Augustus, for the seventh time, and Constantius (326).

[2][167] Emperors Gratian, Valentinian, and Theodosius Augusti to Hesperius, Praetorian Prefect. pr. All heresies forbidden by law and by divine and imperial constitutions shall cease forever, and no one shall attempt either to teach or to learn the impious precepts he has found. Their priests shall not dare to preach the faith – which indeed they do not possess – or appoint ministers – which are nothing of the sort. This kind of audacity must not be neglected or permitted to increase through the connivance of provincial governors and all those to whom responsibility in this regard has been entrusted by the constitutions of Our father.[168] 1. Under the term heretics, who shall be subject to the decrees passed against them, are included those who are found to deviate from the doctrine and path of the Catholic Religion on even slight grounds.

Given August 3, at Milan; received August 20, in the consulship of Ausonius and Olybrius (379).

[166] = C.Th. 16.5.1.
[167] Assembled from C.Th. 16.5.5, 16.5.24, and 16.5.28.
[168] See C.Th. 16.5.12.

[3] Impp. Arcadius et Honorius AA. Clearcho pu. pr. Cuncti haeretici procul dubio noverint omnia sibi loca adimenda esse, sive sub ecclesiarum nomine teneantur sive diaconica appellantur vel etiam decanica, sive in privatis domibus vel locis huiusmodi coetibus copiam praebere videantur: his aedibus vel locis privatis ecclesiae catholicae vindicandis. 1. Ad hoc interdicatur his omnibus ad litaniam faciendam noctu vel die profanis coire conventibus: statuta videlicet condemnatione centum librarum auri contra officium sublimitatis tuae vel praesidale quinquaginta, si quid huiusmodi fieri vel in publico vel in privatis aedibus concedatur.

D. v non. Mart. Constantinopoli Arcadio IIII et Honorio III AA. conss.

[4] Idem AA. et Theodosius A. Senatori pp. pr. Manichaeos seu Manichaeas vel Donatistas meritissima severitate persequimur. huic itaque hominum generi nihil ex moribus, nihil ex legibus sit commune cum ceteris. 1. Ac primum quidem volumus esse publicum crimen, quia, quod in religione divina comittitur, in omnium fertur iniuriam. quos bonorum etiam publicatione persequimur: quae tamen cedere iubemus proximis quibusque personis, ita ut ascendentium vel descendentium vel venientium ex latere cognatorum usque ad secundum gradum velut in successionibus ordo servetur. quibus ita demum ad capiendas facultates esse ius patimur, si non et ipsi pari conscientia polluuntur. 2. Ipsos quoque volumus amoveri ab omni liberalitate et successione quolibet titulo veniente. 3. Praeterea non donandi, non emendi, non vendendi, non postremo contrahendi cuiquam convicto relinquimus facultatem.

4. In mortem quoque inquisitio tendatur. nam si in criminibus maiestatis licet memoriam accusare defuncti, non immerito et hic debet subire iudicium. 5. Ergo et suprema illius scriptura irrita sit, sive testamento sive codicillo sive epistula sive quolibet genere reliquerit voluntatem qui Manichaeus fuisse convincitur: hoc quoque casu eadem illa circa gradus superius comprehensos condicione servata. 6. Sed nec filios heredes existere aut adire permittimus, nisi a paterna pravitate discesserint: delicti enim veniam paenitentibus damus. 7. In eos etiam auctoritatis aculei dirigantur, qui eos domibus suis damnanda

[3][169] Emperors ARCADIUS and HONORIUS Augusti to Clearchus, Urban Prefect. pr. All heretics shall know that all places shall be taken from them, whether they are held under the name of churches, or are called vestries (diaconica) or dwellings for monks (decanica), or are found to provide space for such gatherings in private houses or locations. These buildings or private locations shall be confiscated for the Catholic Church. 1. In addition, all these profane people shall be forbidden to gather to celebrate the litany, day or night. As punishment a fine of 100 pounds of gold shall be inflicted on the official staff of Your Sublimity or 50 pounds on the staff of a governor, if anything of this nature is permitted, whether in a public or in private building.

Given March 3, at Constantinople, in the consulship of Arcadius, for the fourth time, and Honorius, for the third time, Augusti (396).

[4][170] The same Augusti and THEODOSIUS Augustus to Senator, Praetorian Prefect. pr. We persecute the Manichaeans and Donatists, whether men or women, with perfectly warranted severity. This manner of people shall have nothing whatsoever, whether by custom or by law, in common with the rest of mankind. 1. And first of all, We want it (adherence to the Manichaeans or Donatists) to be a public crime, because wrongs committed with respect to divine religion are to the detriment of all. We persecute them indeed by the confiscation of their property, but We order that it go to their nearest relatives. Thus, the order of heirs in the ascending, descending, and collateral line of cognates up to the second degree shall be observed as in testamentary succession; and We grant the heirs the right to seize their property only if they themselves are not polluted by equal guilt. 2. We also desire that they be prohibited from every gift and inheritance, from whatever source it may come. 3. Furthermore, We leave no one who has been convicted the power to give, buy, sell, or even make a contract.

4. The inquisition shall be extended against death (i.e., against the dead). For if it is permissible to impeach the memory of the deceased with accusations of treason, one shall not undeservedly undergo judgment in this case too. 5. Therefore, the last writing of one who is proven to have been a Manichaean shall be void, whether he leaves behind his wish by will, codicil, letter, or any other means. Also in this case shall the same condition as to the degrees (of heirs) listed above be observed. 6. But We do not permit their children to become heirs or to come into the inheritance, unless they have abandoned the depravity of their fathers; for We extend pardon to the penitent. 7. The stings of authority shall be directed also against those who defend Manichaeans in provisione defendent. 8. Servos insuper extra noxam esse volumus, si dominum sacrilegum evitantes ad ecclesiam catholicam servitio fideliore transierint.

[169] = C.Th. 16.5.30; Seeck dates to 402.
[170] = C.Th. 16.5.40; §7 has been taken from C.Th. 16.5.35. Mommsen suggested 402 as the date.

D. VIII k. Mart. Romae Honorio VII et Theodosio II AA. conss.

[5] Imp. Theodosius A. et Valentinianus C. Florentio pp. pr. Ariani et Macedoniani, Pneumatomachi et Apollinariani et Novatiani sive Sabbatiani, Eunomiani, Tetraditae sive Tessarescaedecatitae, Valentiniani, Papianistae, Montanistae seu Priscillianistae vel Phryges vel Pepuzitae, Marcianistae, Borboriani, Messaliani, Eutychitae sive Enthusiastae, Donatistae, Audiani, Hydroparastatae, Tascodrogitae, Batrachitae, Hermeieciani, Photiniani, Pauliani, Marcelliani, Ophitae, Encratitae, Apotactitae, Saccophori et, qui ad imam usque scelerum nequitiam pervenerant, Manichaei nusquam in Romano solo conveniendi orandique habeant facultatem.

1. Manichaeis etiam de civitatibus expellendis et ultimo supplicio tradendis, quoniam nihil his relinquendum loci est, in quo ipsis etiam elementis fiat iniuria, cunctisque legibus, quae contra eos ceterosque qui nostrae fidei refragantur olim latae sunt diversisque prolatae temporibus, semper viridi observantia valituris sive de donationibus in haereticorum conventicula, quae ipsi audacter ecclesias nuncupare conantur, factis sive ex ultima voluntate rebus qualitercumque relictis sive de privatis aedificiis, in quae domino permittente vel conivente convenerint, venerandae nobis catholicae vindicandis ecclesiae sive de procuratore, qui hoc nesciente domino fecerit, decem librarum auri multam vel exilium, si sit ingenuus, subituro, metallum vero post verbera, si servilis condicionis sit.

2. Ita ut nec in publico convenire loco nec aedificare sibi quasi ecclesias nec ad circumscriptionem legum quicquam meditari valeant, omni civili et militari, curiarum etiam et defensorum et iudicum sub viginti librarum auri interminatione prohibendi auxilio. 3. Illis etiam in sua omnibus manentibus firmitate, quae de militia poenisque variis de diversis sunt haereticis promulgata, ut nec speciale quidem beneficium adversus leges valeat impetratum.

D. III k. Iun. Constantinopoli Felice et Tauro conss.

their homes with condemnable assistance. 8. We moreover wish their slaves to be without blame, if fleeing their sacrilegious master they pass over to the Catholic Church in more faithful service.

Given February 22, at Rome, in the consulship of Honorius, for the seventh time, and Theodosius, for the second time, Augusti (407).

[5][171] Emperor Theodosius Augustus and Valentinian Caesar to Florentius, Praetorian Prefect. pr. The Arians and Macedonians, Pneumatomachians and Apollinarians and Novatians or Sabbatians, Eunomians, Tetradites or Tessarescaedecatites, Valentinians, Papianists, Montanists or Priscillianists or Phrygians or Pepuzites, Marcianists, Borborians, Messallians, Eutychites or Enthusiasts, Donatists, Audians, Hydroparastates, Tascodrogites, Batrachites, Hermeiecians, Photinians, Paulians, Marcellians, Ophites, Encratites, Apotactites, Saccorphors, and those who have descended to the basest criminal iniquity, the Manichaeans, shall have no right to gather and pray anywhere on Roman soil.

1. The Manichaeans shall be expelled from the cities and delivered up to capital punishment,[172] for there must be no place left them in which they might do insult to the very elements. All laws which were enacted formerly and issued at various times against them and all others who oppose our Faith shall remain in force with ever-new observation, whether concerning gifts made to the meeting places of heretics – which they brazenly try to call churches – or property left by last will or in any way whatsoever; or concerning private buildings, where they meet by the permission or connivance of the owner, which shall be confiscated for the venerable Catholic Church; or concerning a procurator who does this without the knowledge of the owner, which procurator shall suffer a fine of 10 pounds of gold or exile if he is free-born or, after flogging, condemnation to the mines if he is of servile status.

2. So that they neither meet in public nor build themselves pseudo-churches nor devise any means of circumventing the laws, they must be checked by all civil and military means, with the aid of the curias, defenders, and governors, under threat of a fine of 20 pounds of gold. 3. The laws, too, which have been promulgated concerning the imperial service, various punishments, and sundry heretics, shall remain in full force so that not even a special indulgence obtained against the laws shall be valid.

Given May 30, at Constantinople, in the consulship of Felix and Taurus (428).

[171] = C.Th. 16.5.65; combine with C. 1.6.3.

[172] "delivered up to capital punishment" is omitted by C.Th. and Nomocanon 6.3, 12.2; it may have been added because of laws 11–12 below (Krüger).

[6] Idem AA. Leontio pu. pr. Damnato portentuosae superstitionis auctore Nestorio nota congrui nominis eius inuratur gregalibus, ne Christianorum appellatione abutantur: sed quemadmodum Ariani lege divae memoriae Constantini ob similitudinem impietatis Porphyriani a Porphyrio nuncupantur, sic ubique participes nefariae sectae Nestorii Simoniani vocentur, ut, cuius scelus sunt in deserendo deo imitati, eius vocabulum iure videantur esse sortiti.

1. Nec vero impios libros nefandi et sacrilegi Nestorii adversus venerabilem orthodoxorum sectam decretaque sanctissimi coetus antistitum Ephesi habiti scriptos habere aut legere aut describere quisquam audeat: quos diligenti studio requiri ac publice comburi decernimus. 2. Ita ut nemo in religionis disputatione aliquam supra dicti nominis faciat mentionem aut quibusdam eorum habendi concilii gratia in aedibus aut villa aut suburbano suo aut alio quolibet loco conventiculum clam aut aperte praebeat: quos omni conventus celebrandi licentia privari statuimus: scientibus universis violatorem huius legis publicatione bonorum esse coercendum.

D. III non. Aug. Constantinopoli Theodosio XV et Valentiniano IIII AA. conss.

[7] Idem AA. Florentio pp. Curiales omnium civitatum, onerosis quin etiam militiae seu diversis officiis facultatum et personalium munerum obligatos suis ordinibus, cuiuscumque sectae sint, inhaerere censemus, ne videamur hominibus execrandis contumelioso ambitu immunitatis beneficium praestitisse, quos volumus huius constitutionis auctoritate damnari.

D. prid. k. Febr. Constantinopoli Theodosio A. XVI et Fausto conss.

[8] Impp. Valentinianus et Marcianus AA. Palladio pp. pr. Quicumque in hac sacra urbe vel in Alexandrina civitate vel in omni Aegyptiaca dioecesi diversisque aliis provinciis Eutychetis profanam perversitatem sequuntur et ita non credunt, ut trecenti decem et octo sancti patres tradiderunt catholicam fidem in Nicaena civitate fundantes, [6][173] The same Augusti to Leontius, Urban Prefect. pr. Since Nestorius, the founder of a monstrous superstition, has been condemned, the infamy of an appropriate name shall be branded on his followers, lest they abuse the name of Christians. For just as the Arians are, by a law of Constantine of divine memory,[174] called Porphyrians from Porphyrius on account of the similarity of their impiety, so shall the adherents of the nefarious sect of Nestorius be called Simonians.[175] Thus, they shall everywhere rightly seem to have obtained their name from him whose crime they have imitated by deserting God.

1. Nor shall anyone dare to possess or read or copy the impious books that the wicked and sacrilegious Nestorius has written against the venerable following of the orthodox and against the decrees of the most holy synod of bishops held at Ephesus (in 431). These books, We decree, shall diligently be sought out and publicly burned. 2. So that no one makes any mention of the aforesaid name in a religious discussion or secretly or openly furnishes any of them a meeting place for the purpose of holding a council in a house, villa, suburban property, or any other place, We have ruled to deprive them entirely of the freedom to hold a meeting. All shall know that he who violates this law will be punished by the confiscation of his property.

Given August 3, at Constantinople, in the consulship of Theodosius, for the fifteenth time, and Valentinian, for the fourth time, Augusti (435).

[7][176] The same Augusti to Florentius, Praetorian Prefect. We deem that curials of all cities, who are bound to burdensome patrimonial and personal liturgies, and even those connected with the imperial service, shall remain in their curias no matter which sect they follow, lest through their insolent pandering (contumeliosus ambitus) We seem to have extended the privilege of immunity to execrable men, whom, by the authority of this constitution, We wish to be condemned.

Given January 31, at Constantinople, in the consulship of Theodosius Augustus, for the sixteenth time, and Faustus (438).

[8][177] Emperors VALENTINIAN and MARCIAN Augusti to Palladius, Praetorian Prefect. pr. Whoever in This Sacred City or in the city of Alexandria, or in the entire Egyptian diocese and in the various other provinces, follow the profane perversity of Eutyches and thus do not believe the Catholic Faith as transmitted

[173] = C.Th. 16.5.66.
[174] Cf. Socr. HE 1.9.
[175] The manuscripts read Nestoriani, "Nestorians," while the C.Th. and Greek versions preserve Simoniani.
[176] = Nov. Theod. 3.6; combine with C. 1.7.5, 1.9.18.
[177] Combine with C. 1.7.6. Valentinian was in fact already dead when this constitution was issued.

centum quoque et quinquaginta alii venerabiles episcopi, qui in alma urbe Constantinopolitana postea convenerunt, et sicut Athanasius et Theophilus et Cyrillus sanctae recordationis episcopi Alexandrinae civitatis credebant, quos etiam Ephesina synodus (cui beatae memoriae Cyrillus praefuit, in qua Nestorii error expulsus est) in universis secuta est, quos et nuper venerabilis Chalcedonensis synodus est secuta, prioribus conciliis sacerdotum ex omni prorsus parte consentiens nihilque adimens sacrosancto symbolo neque adiciens, sed Eutychetis dogmata funesta condemnans: sciant se esse haereticos Apollinaristas: Apollinaris enim facinorosissimam sectam Eutyches et Dioscorus mente sacrilega sunt secuti.

1. Ideoque hi omnes, qui Apollinaris vel Eutychetis perversitatem sequuntur, illis poenis, quae divorum retro principum constitutionibus contra Apollinaristas vel serenitatis nostrae postmodum sanctione contra Eutychianistas vel hac ipsa augustissima lege contra eosdem decretae sunt, noverint se esse plectendos. 2. Idcirco Apollinaristae, hoc est Eutychianistae (quibus etsi est in appellatione diversitas, tamen in haeresis pravitate coniunctio, et dispar quidem nomen, sed idem sacrilegium) sive in hac alma urbe diversisque provinciis sive in Alexandrina civitate sive intra Aegyptiacam dioecesim sunt neque ita credunt, ut praedicti venerabiles patres credebant, neque viro reverentissimo Alexandrinae urbis antistiti Proterio fidem orthodoxam tenenti communicant, episcopos vel presbyteros aliosque clericos creare et habere prohibemus: scientibus tam his Eutychianistis vel Apollinaristis, qui ausi fuerint cuiquam episcopi vel presbyteri vel clerici nomen imponere, quam his, qui passi fuerint impositum sibi nomen sacerdotale retinere, poenam exilii cum facultatum suarum amissione se subituros.

3. Universi praeterea Apollinaristae vel Eutychianistae non ecclesias non monasteria sibi construant, parasynaxes et conventicula tam diurna quam nocturna non contrahant neque ad domum neque ad possessionem cuiusquam neque ad monasterium vel quemcumque alterum locum operaturi sectae funestissimae congregentur. 4. Quod si fecerint et hoc factum fuisse domino volente constiterit, post rem in examine iudicis adprobatam domus vel possessio, in qua convenerint, fisco sine dilatione societur, monasterium vero eius civitatis orthodoxae ecclesiae, in cuius territorio est, iubemus addici. 5. Si vero ignorante domino, sciente vero qui pensiones domus exigit vel conductore vel procuratore vel actore praedii parasynaxes et conventicula interdicta by the 318 holy fathers, who established it in the city of Nicaea (in 325), as the 150 other venerable bishops, who afterward met in the Generous City of Constantinople (in 381), and as Athanasius and Theophilus and Cyril of holy memory, bishops of Alexandria, believed; whom also the Synod of Ephesus (in 431) followed in all things, over which Cyril of blessed memory presided, and at which the error of Nestorius was expelled; whom likewise the venerable Synod of Chalcedon (in 451) recently followed, assenting to the former councils in every respect, neither detracting from nor adding to their sacrosanct creed, but condemning the destructive dogma of Eutyches: they shall know that they are Apollinarian heretics; for Eutyches and Dioscorus sacrilegiously pursued the most criminal sect of Apollinaris.

1. Therefore, all those who follow the perversity of Apollinaris or Eutyches shall know that they shall be stricken with the penalties that have been decreed by the constitutions of divine emperors of the past against the Apollinarians, or by the recent decree of Our Serenity against the Eutychians, or by this most august law against the same heretics. 2. Therefore, if the Apollinarians, that is, the Eutychians – though different in name, they are yet joined in the wickedness of heresy; the name is dissimilar, but the sacrilege the same – whether in This Generous City and in various provinces or in the city of Alexandria or in the diocese of Egypt, if they do not believe as the aforesaid venerable fathers believed and are not communicants of the most reverend bishop of the city of Alexandria Proterius, who is of orthodox faith, We forbid them to ordain and have bishops, presbyters, and other clergymen. And both the Eutychians and Apollinarians, who have dared impose the name of bishop or presbyter or clergyman on anyone, as well as those who have permitted themselves to retain the priestly title so imposed, shall know that they shall suffer the punishment of exile and the confiscation of their property.

3. No Apollinarians or Eutychians shall hereafter build churches or monasteries for themselves, convoke sectarian assemblies and meetings by day or by night, or gather at the house or property of any person or at a monastery or any other place to perform the most deadly rites of their sect. 4. If they should do this, and it appears that it was done with the consent of the owner, then, once this has been proven by the examination of a judge, the house or property in which they met shall be made over to the Treasury without delay. We order a monastery, however, to be annexed by the orthodox church of the city in the territory in which it lies. 5. If, however, they hold their sectarian assemblies and forbidden meetings without the knowledge of the owner but with that of him who collects rents, or of the lessee, procurator, or manager of the estate, collegerint, conductor vel procurator sive actor vel quicumque eos in domum vel in possessionem vel in monasterium receperint ac passi fuerint illicitas parasynaxes conventusque celebrari, si vilis et abiectae condicionis sunt, fustibus publice et in poenam suam et in aliorum coerceantur exemplum, si honestae vero personae sunt, decem libras auri multae nomine fisco nostro cogantur inferre.

6. Nullum praeterea Apollinaristam vel Eutychianistam ad aliquam iubemus adspirare militiam. si qui vero in quacumque militia inventi fuerint militare, soluti cingulo honestorum hominum et palatii communione priventur nec in aliqua nec in qua nati sunt civitate vel vico aut regione versentur. 7. Si qui vero in hac alma urbe nati sunt, tam sacratissimo comitatu quam omni per provincias metropolitana civitate pellantur.

8. Nulli insuper Eutychianistae vel Apollinaristae publice vel privatim advocandi coetus et circulos contrahendi et de errore haeretico disputandi ac perversitatem facinorosi dogmatis adserendi tribuatur facultas. 9. Nulli etiam contra venerabilem Chalcedonensem synodum liceat aliquid vel dictare vel scribere vel edere atque emittere aut aliorum scripta super eadem re proferre. 10. Nemo huiusmodi habere libros et sacrilega scriptorum audeat monimenta servare. quod si qui in his criminibus fuerint deprehensi, perpetua deportatione damnentur. 11. Eos vero qui discendi studio audierint de infausta haeresi disputantes, decem librarum auri, quae fisco nostro inferendae sunt, iubemus subire dispendium. ultimo etiam supplicio coerceantur, qui illicita docere temptaverint. 12. Omnes vero huiuscemodi chartae ac libri, qui funestum Eutychetis, hoc est Apollinaris, fuerint dogma complexi, incendio concrementur, ut facinorosae perversitatis vestigia ipsa flammis ambusta depereant. aequum namque est, ut immanissima sacrilegia par poenae magnitudo percellat. 13. Scientibus moderatoribus provinciarum eorumque apparitionibus, defensoribus etiam civitatum, quod, si ea, quae legis huius religiosissima sanctione custodienda decrevimus, aut neglexerint aut aliqua permiserint temeritate violari, denarum librarum auri multam fisco cogantur inferre: insuper etiam existimationis suae periculum sustinebunt.

D. k. Aug. Constantinopoli Valentiniano A. VIII et Anthemio conss.

[9] [Αὐτοκράτωρ Λέων Α. ...] Ἀνθρώπινον καὶ ὅσιον εἶναι λογισάμενοι τοὺς αἱρετικοὺς ἐπιτρέπομεν θάπτεσθαι ταῖς νενομισμέναις ταφαῖς.

then, the lessee, procurator, or manager, or whoever received them onto the property or into the monastery and permitted their assemblies and meetings to transpire, shall, if of mean and base status, be flogged publicly both for their own punishment and as an example to others; if they are respectable persons (honestae personae), they shall be forced to pay a fine of 10 pounds of gold to Our Treasury.

6. We furthermore command that no Apollinarian or Eutychian shall aspire to any post in the imperial service. If any are found serving in any post of the service, they shall be deprived of their rank (cingulum) and stripped of their association with respectable men and with the Palace, nor shall they dwell in any city, even in that in which they were born, or in any village or district. 7. If any were born in This Generous City, they shall be banished both from the Most Sacred Court (comitatus) and from every metropolitan city in the provinces.

8. Moreover, no Eutychian or Apollinarian shall be given the power of calling meetings or gathering crowds, publicly or privately, and discussing their heretical error and professing the wickedness of their criminal doctrine. 9. Nor is anyone allowed to state, write, publish, or promulgate anything against the venerable Synod of Chalcedon or to produce the writings of others on the same subject. 10. No one shall dare to possess books of this kind and preserve the sacrilegious works of their authors. If any are caught in these crimes, they shall be condemned to perpetual exile. 11. Those, moreover, who in their zeal for learning listen to those discussing their unholy heresy, We order to suffer the loss of 10 pounds of gold, which shall be paid to Our Treasury. Those who attempt to teach prohibited doctrines shall be punished with the ultimate punishment. 12. All papers and books, moreover, that contain the accursed teachings of Eutyches, that is, Apollinaris, shall be burned by fire, so that the very traces of this criminal wickedness may perish, consumed in the flames. For it is fitting that punishment of equal magnitude strike the most monstrous sacrileges. 13. The governors of the provinces and their staff members, as well as the defenders of the cities, shall know that if they neglect what We, by the most pious sanction of this law, have decreed shall be observed; or, if by some act of brazenness they permit it to be violated, they shall be forced to pay a fine of 10 pounds of gold to the Treasury. They moreover shall jeopardize their good name.

Given August 1, at Constantinople, in the consulship of Valentinian Augustus, for the seventh time, and Anthemius (455).

[9][178] (Emperor Leo Augustus ...) Deeming it humane and pious, We permit heretics to be buried in ordinary graves.

[178] Restored from Bas. 1.1.28; it is uncertain whether the passage reproduces the wording of the original.

D. Constantinopoli id. Aug. Constantino et Rufo conss.

[10] Idem A. Erythrio pp. pr. Si qui orthodoxae religionis emptione vera vel ficticia aut quocumque alio iure vel titulo praedia et possessiones resque immobiles, in quibus orthodoxae fidei ecclesiae vel oratoria constituta sunt, in haereticae sectae et contraria orthodoxae fidei sentientem quamcumque personam transferre voluerint, nullam huiusmodi vel inter vivos habitam vel secreto iudicio compositam valere volumus voluntatem, etiamsi ab orthodoxae fidei venditore vel quocumque modo alienatore commenticio sub qualibet occasione fuerit adsignata: sed irrita omnia huiusmodi documenta et tamquam penitus nec scripta esse censemus. 1. Haec enim praedia et possessiones, quae in haereticas personas quocumque modo translatae fuerint vel collatae, fisci nostri viribus decernimus vindicari. 2. Sive enim apud dominos possessoresve orthodoxos ea praedia maneant seu ad fisci nostri iura pervenerint, necesse est in his ecclesias et oratoria constituta diligentius et sollicitius instaurari. nostrae enim serenitatis undique ad hunc exitum providentia ducit, ut omnipotentis dei templa, in quibus nostrae fidei instituta perdurant, cultu adsiduo per omnia saecula rediviva serventur. 3. Nec enim dubitari potest, quod si in haereticos veniant possessiones, in quibus verae fidei ecclesiae vel oratoria constituta sunt et integritas colitur, omnimodo ab his deseri atque destitui, omni cultu vacare, omnibus sacris et solitis viduari mysteriis, omni splendore privari, nullis populorum conventionibus, nullis clericorum observationibus celebrari et ex hoc sine dubio easdem ecclesias perire ruere complanari. nec enim de earum instauratione haeretici poterunt aliquando cogitare, quas penitus esse nolebant. quae omnia resecantes ad praesentem legem pervenimus.

[11] Θεσπίζομεν τοὺς τὴν ὀλεθρίαν τῶν Μανιχαίων αἱρουμένους πλάνην μηδεμίαν ἔχειν παρρησίαν ἢ ἄδειαν καθ' οἱονδήποτε τῆς καθ' ἡμᾶς πολιτείας διάγειν τόπον· εἰ δέ ποτε φανεῖεν ἤτοι εὑρεθεῖεν, ὑπάγεσθαι κεφαλικῇ τιμωρίᾳ.

D. v id. Aug. Boethio vc. cons.

Given August 13, at Constantinople, in the consulship of Constantine and Rufus (457).

[10] The same Augustus to Eurythrius, Praetorian Prefect. pr. If anyone of orthodox faith, by a genuine or fictitious sale or by any other legal means or pretense, wishes to transfer estates, properties, and immovable property, where churches or chapels of the orthodox faith are located, to any person belonging to a heretical sect, who holds opinions contrary to the orthodox faith, We desire that no such wish be valid, whether expressed among the living or arranged by secret determination, even if it has been signed by a seller of orthodox faith or through the interposition of a fictitious seller for any reason. We rule that all such documents shall be void and as if they had never been written at all. 1. We decree that estates and properties that have been transferred and conveyed shall be confiscated by Our Treasury. 2. For whether these estates remain in the hands of orthodox owners or possessors or become property of Our Treasury, it is imperative that the churches and chapels located on them be diligently and carefully restored. For the foresight of Our Serenity leads Us by many ways to this one end: that the temples of Almighty God, in which the tenets of our religion abide, shall by continual attention be kept in youthful vigor through all the ages. 3. Nor can it be doubted that, if these properties, where churches and chapels of the true faith are located and righteousness is cultivated, should fall into the hands of heretics, they shall utterly be abandoned and forsaken by them, devoid of all veneration, bereft of all sacred and customary rites, robbed of all splendor, the site neither of the gatherings of the peoples nor of the solemnities of the clergy; and for this reason, doubtless, these same churches would cease, collapse, and be leveled. For heretics will never think of restoring churches that they have vehemently wished did not exist. Putting an end to all these things, We have resorted to the present law.

(466–472?)[179]

[11][180] (...). We decree that those who have embraced the pernicious error of the Manichaeans shall have no freedom or permission to reside anywhere in Our Empire. If any appear (to do so) or are discovered, they shall by subjected to capital punishment.

Given August 9, in the consulship of the vir clarissimus Boethius (487 or 510).

[179] Seeck dates to April 4, 472.

[180] = Bas. 1.1.29; it is uncertain whether the passage reproduces the wording of the original.

[12] Αὐτοκράτορες Ἰουστῖνος καὶ Ἰουστινιανὸς ΑΑ. ... pr. Τοὺς αἱρετικοὺς ἡμεῖς μὲν διὰ τοῦτο καὶ συνιέναι καὶ προσηγορίαν ἔχειν ἰδίαν συνεχωρήσαμεν, ἵνα τὴν καρτερίαν ἡμῶν αἰσχυνθέντες σωφρονήσωσιν ἑκόντες καὶ πρὸς τὰ καλλίω μεταβάλωσιν. 1. Τοὺς δὲ εἰσῆλθέ τις οὐκ ἀνεκτὴ τόλμα, καὶ τῆς τῶν νόμων ἀμελήσαντας παραγγελίας στρατείαις, ὧν οὐκ ἐᾷ[xix] μετεῖναι τοῖς τοιούτοις αὐτὰ τὰ τῶν βασιλικῶν συμβόλων δηλοῖ γράμματα, παρενέβαλον αὑτούς. 2. Αἱρετικοὺς δὲ καλοῦμεν τοὺς ἄλλους, ὡς τούς γε καταράτους Μανιχαίους καὶ τοὺς τούτοις παραπλησίους, οὐδὲ ὀνομάζεσθαι γοῦν ταύτῃ δέον οὐδὲ φαίνεσθαί που παντελῶς οὐδὲ χραίνειν ὧν ἂν ἐφάψωνται. 3. Ἀλλὰ τοὺς μὲν Μανιχαίους, ὥσπερ εἰρήκαμεν, οὕτω καὶ ἀπελαύνεσθαι δεῖ καὶ μηδὲ τὴν προσηγορίαν αὐτῶν ὑπομένειν μηδένα μηδὲ περιορᾶν, εἴπερ ἐν τῷ αὐτῷ διάγοι τοῖς ἄλλοις ὁ τὴν ἀθεῖαν ταύτην νοσήσας ἄνθρωπος, ἀλλὰ καὶ ταῖς εἰς ἔσχατον τιμωρίαις ὑπάγεσθαι τὸν ὁπουδὴ γῆς φαινόμενον Μανιχαῖον. 4. Ἐπὶ δὲ τοῖς ἄλλοις αἱρετικοῖς, ὁποίας ἂν ὦσί ποτε πλάνης ἢ προσηγορίας (αἱρετικὸν γὰρ πάντα καλοῦμεν, ὅστις μὴ τῆς καθολικῆς ἐκκλησίας καὶ τῆς ὀρθοδόξου καὶ ἁγίας ἡμῶν ὑπάρχει πίστεως), ἀλλὰ μὴν καὶ τοῖς τὴν πολυθεΐαν πειρωμένοις εἰσάγειν Ἕλλησι καὶ ἔτι τοῖς Ἰουδαίοις καὶ τοῖς Σαμαρείταις οὐκ ἀνακτήσασθαι μόνον τὰ τῶν ἤδη κειμένων νόμων συνείδομεν καὶ ποιῆσαι τῷ νῦν τούτῳ νόμῳ βεβαιότερα, ἀλλὰ διορίσασθαι καὶ πλείω, δι᾽ ὧν ἀσφάλεια μὲν περιέσται μείζων καὶ κόσμος καὶ τιμὴ τοῖς τῆς εὐαγοῦς ἡμῶν μετέχουσι πίστεως. 5. Αἰσθέσθαι δὲ ὑπάρξει πᾶσιν, ἔφαμεν, ὅτι τοῖς μὴ τὸν θεὸν ὀρθῶς προσκυνοῦσι καὶ τὰ τῶν ἀνθρωπίνων ἀγαθῶν ἐπέχεται.

6. Οὐδένα τοίνυν τῶν ἤδη ῥηθέντων οὔτε μετέχειν ἀξιώματος καθάπαξ οὐδενὸς οὔτε ζώνην περιβάλλεσθαι οὔτε πολιτικὴν οὔτε στρατιωτικὴν οὔτε εἰς τάξιν τελεῖν οὐδεμίαν, πλὴν τῆς τῶν καλουμένων κοορταλίνων (ταύτῃ γὰρ ἐκ γένους ὑποκειμένους αὐτοὺς ἐνέχεσθαι βουλόμεθα, ὥστε μένοντας αὐτοὺς ἐπ᾽ αὐτῆς καὶ πάντα πληροῦντας ἐξ ἀνάγκης καὶ πᾶν βάρος ὑπομένοντας, ὅπερ ἔστι τῆς αὐτῆς στρατείας, εἴργεσθαι τοῦτο μὲν προκοπῆς, τοῦτο δὲ τοῦ κατὰ τῶν ὀρθοδόξων Χριστιανῶν ἐκβιβασμοῦ δημοσίων καὶ ἰδιωτικῶν ἕνεκεν χρεῶν) προστάττομεν. τῆς ἐξ αὐτῶν γονῆς ὑποκειμένης δηλονότι τῇ τοιαύτῃ τύχῃ, καὶ αὐτῶν μέντοι, εἰ μεταξὺ διαλαθεῖν ἠδυνήθησαν, εἰς ταύτην ἀγομένων. ἐκ τῆς κακῆς αὐτῶν δόξης ἔχειν τινὰ παραίτησιν.

7. Τοὺς δὲ αὐτοὺς αἱρετικοὺς οὔτε ἐκδίκου οὔτε πόλεως πατρὸς μετιέναι φροντίδα συγχωροῦμεν, ὥστε μὴ προφάσει τῆς ἐντεῦθεν ἀδείας ἐπηρεάζειν τοῖς τε ἄλλοις Χριστιανοῖς καὶ διαφερόντως τοῖς θεοφιλεστάτοις ἐπισκόποις, καὶ τοῦ δικάζειν ἑαυτοῖς ἢ ψηφίζεσθαί τινα περιποιεῖν ἐξουσίαν, καθὰ καὶ τοῖς πρὸ ἡμῶν νενομοθέτηται. 8. Οὐ μὴν οὐδὲ τοῖς σοφωτάτοις συντετάχθαι τῶν δικῶν ῥήτορσιν αὐτοὺς ἐῶμεν, οἷς οἰκειότερόν ἐστιν ἢ κατὰ τοὺς πολλοὺς τὸ τῶν θείων δογμάτων ὀρθῶς αἰσθάνεσθαι, ὅσῳπερ

[xix] ὧν οὐκέτι

[12][181] (Emperors JUSTIN and JUSTINIAN Augusti ...) pr. ... We permitted the heretics to assemble and have their own name for this reason: that, ashamed by Our forbearance, they may come to their senses and turn to the better of their own accord. 1. But an unbearable audacity has possessed them, and, disregarding the sanction of the law, they have insinuated themselves into clerical posts which, as the very words of the imperial decrees manifestly declare, they may no longer hold. 2. We call heretics others, such as the execrable Manichaeans and their ilk, who ought not to be named here nor indeed anywhere and defile whatever they touch. 3. The Manichaeans, then, as We have said, shall accordingly be driven out, nor shall anyone suffer even their name (to remain) or do nothing if someone infected with this godlessness should live in the same place as the others; but any Manichaean found anywhere in the world shall be subjected to extreme punishments. 4. As for the other heretics, whatever their error or name (for We call everyone who does not adhere to the Catholic Church and our Orthodox and Holy Faith a heretic), and also as regards the pagans (Hellenes), who attempt to introduce the worship of many gods, and the Jews and Samaritans: We strive not only to revive the statutes of existing laws and to strengthen them by this law, but also to enact more, whereby the security, honor, and prestige of the adherents of the Holy Faith may be increased. 5. All can observe, We have said, how those who do not rightly worship God shall also be deprived of their earthly goods.

6. We therefore command that none of the aforesaid persons may obtain any office, acquire any rank (cingulum), civil or military, or belong to any order except that of the so-called provincial staff members (cohortalini). For We desire that they be bound to this order from birth: thus, they shall remain in it, compulsorily fulfill all duties required of it, undergo every burden that is incumbent on their position; and they shall be barred on the one hand from promotion and on the other from executing sentences against orthodox Christians on account of public and private debts. Their offspring shall be bound to the same status and, if in the meanwhile they successfully escape notice, shall be restored to it. (And We desire that) they have (no) excuse by reason of their bad repute.[182]

7. According to the enactments promulgated by those (emperors) before Us, We permit heretics to hold neither the office of defender nor of father of the city, lest by virtue of the immunity derived therefrom they abuse other Christians and particularly bishops, and obtain the power to judge and to condemn. 8. Nor do We allow them to be enrolled among the most prudent advocates, who above all others ought to have a proper understanding of the [181] = Bas. 1.1.30; the inscription is restored from C. 1.5.18.4. Lounghis et al. date to between April 4 and August 1, 527.

[182] The transmitted text is heavily supplemented.

καὶ τὸν βίον ἐν λόγοις ἔχουσιν. 9. Ἀλλὰ καὶ τοὺς ὄντας μὲν αἱρετικοὺς καὶ ἔτι πρὸ τούτων Ἕλληνας ἢ Ἰουδαίους ἢ Σαμαρείτας καὶ τοὺς τούτοις ὁμοίους, μετασχόντας δέ τινος ἤδη τούτων ὧνπερ ἐμνήσθημεν καὶ τυχόντας ἀξιώματος ἢ τοῦ καταλόγου τῶν τὰς δίκας ἀγορευόντων ἢ στρατείαν περιβεβλημένους ἢ ζώνην ὁποιανοῦν ἐκβληθῆναι τῆς πρὸς ταῦτα μετουσίας παραχρῆμα παρακελευόμεθα. 10. Καθαρεύειν γὰρ τὰ ῥηθέντα πάντα τῆς τῶν τοιούτων νῦν τε καὶ διὰ παντὸς βουλόμεθα κοινωνίας, οὐκ ἐπὶ μόνης ταύτης τῆς ἐνδόξου πόλεως, ἀλλ' ἐπὶ πάσης ὅλως ἐπαρχίας καὶ τόπου παντός. 11. Ὅπερ ἐστὶν οὐ καθάπαξ καινόν· τὰ γοῦν ταῖς πλείσταις τῶν στρατειῶν θεῖα διδόμενα τῆς ζώνης σύμβολα προσκείμενον ἔχει τὸ δεῖν ὀρθόδοξον εἶναι τὸν ταύτης μεταλαμβάνοντα. 12. Πλὴν ἀλλ' ἡμέτερον ἂν εἶναι καὶ τοῦτο δοκοίη τῶν ἀνακτησαμένων αὐτὸ καὶ μὴ περιιδόντων, καθάπερ ἔμπροσθεν, ἀμελούμενόν τε παρ' ἐνίων καὶ μέχρι μόνων γραμμάτων κείμενον· τὰ πράγματα γὰρ οὐχ οὕτως νομίζοιτο ἂν ἴδια τῶν τὴν ἀρχὴν εὑρόντων, ὡς τῶν τοῖς εὑρεθεῖσι χρωμένων ἄριστα.

13. Εἰ δὲ παρὰ τὸ προστεταγμένον ὑφ' ἡμῶν ἁμαρτηθείη τι, τὸν μὲν τῶν κεκωλυμένων ἐφαψάμενον οὐκ ἀνόνητον μόνον τῆς ἐγχειρήσεως ἀποδείκνυμεν καὶ παντελῶς μετέχειν αὐτὸν κωλύομεν, ἀλλὰ καὶ λ' χρυσίου λιτρῶν ποινῇ ζημιοῦμεν. 14. Οἷς δὲ διαφέρει τὸ τοὺς τοιούτους ἐγγράφειν τῷ δημοσίῳ καὶ ἀπογράφεσθαι, τούτοις, εἰ μαθόντες τὸ πεπλανημένον αὐτοῦ τῆς δόξης ὅμως προσήκαντο καὶ οὐκ ἀντεῖπον οὐδὲ ἀπήλασαν, ποινὴν ἐπιτίθεμεν χρυσίου λιτρῶν η'. 15. Οὐ μὴν οὐδὲ τὰς ἀρχὰς ἀθώους ἀφίεμεν, εἴπερ, οὓς ἐκ τῶν κεκωλυμένων ὑφ' ἡμῶν ὄντας γινώσκουσι, τούτους ἀνάσχοιντο ταῖς οἰκείαις ἐναριθμεῖσθαι τάξεσιν (ὑπεξῃρημένης δηλονότι τῆς τῶν κοορταλίνων στρατείας), ἀλλὰ ποινὴν καὶ παρ' αὐτῶν ν' χρυσίου λιτρῶν εἰσπράττομεν. 16. Ἐφ' ὁπόσοις δὲ ἂν τῶν εἰρημένων κεφαλαίων ἁρμόσαι συμβαίη τὴν ποινήν, ὁ μεγαλοπρεπέστατος κόμης τοῦ ἱερωτάτου ταμείου τὴν ἀπαίτησιν αὐτῆς ποιήσεται καὶ τοῖς θείοις εἰσοίσει πριβάτοις.

17. Ἔννοιαν μέντοι λαμβάνοντες, ὅτι Γότθους πολλάκις τοῖς καθωσιωμένοις ἐγγράφομεν φοιδεράτοις, οἷς οὔτε ἡ φύσις οὔτε ὁ φθάσας βίος τοὺς τοιούτους ἐνέθηκε λόγους, συγχωρῆσαί τι τῆς ἀκριβείας αὐτοῖς συνείδομεν καὶ γινομένων ἀνέχεσθαι φοιδεράτων καὶ τιμωμένων, ὃν ἂν ἡμῖν παρασταίη τρόπον.

18. Εἰδότες δέ, ὡς διάφοροι πολλάκις τοῖς οὐκ ὀρθοδόξοις γονεῦσιν αἱ γνῶμαι γίνονται, τοῦ μὲν πατρὸς ἢ τῆς γε μητρὸς τῇ τῶν ὀρθοδόξων πίστει προσενεγκεῖν τοὺς κοινοὺς παῖδας βουλομένου, θατέρου δὲ ἀντιτείνοντος, ἰσχυροτέραν εἶναι καὶ τοῖς ὅλοις ἐπικρατεστέραν τὴν γνώμην προστάττομεν τοῦ πρὸς τὴν ὀρθόδοξον πίστιν τοὺς παῖδας ἄγοντος· μεθέξει τε γὰρ ἐν μέρει τὸ γινόμενον τῆς τῶν τεκόντων γνώμης καὶ προσέσται τὸ τὰ βελτίω νενικηκέναι.

19. Βοηθοῦντες δὲ κἀκείνοις τοῖς παισίν, οὓς οἱ μὴ μετέχοντες τῆς εὐαγοῦς ἡμῶν πίστεως μισοῦσι πατέρες, ἁμάρτημα μὲν οὐδὲν ἔχοντες ἐγκαλέσαι τῶν ἐν τοῖς νόμοις κεκωλυμένων, διότι δὲ τῆς τῶν γονέων

divine decrees, insofar as their livelihood is in words. 9. And We further command that those who are now heretics, and before them the pagans, Jews, or Samaritans, and those like them, if they should already hold any of the offices that We have mentioned or are on the roster of pleaders, or have obtained any clerical position or any rank in the imperial service, they shall be immediately expelled from their membership in these cadres. 10. For We desire that the said positions be unsullied by the society of such men now and forever, not only in This Glorious City, but in every province everywhere. 11. And this is by no means new: the divine certificates provided for most offices of the imperial service have as a prerequisite that the recipient must be orthodox. 12. Yet, indeed, this too may seem to be Our doing, since We revive this measure and do not overlook it as before, when it was disregarded by some and held merely as so many words; for things are not so much thought to belong to those who devise them as they are to those who use best what has already been devised.

13. If what We have commanded is in any way violated, We not only declare the attempt of one who usurps such forbidden (positions) void and utterly forbid him to hold them, but We also punish him by a fine of 30 pounds of gold. 14. As for those whose duty it is to enroll such persons in the public register: if they knew of the error of belief of such a person and admitted him and do not oppose and drive him away, We impose on them a fine of 8 pounds of gold. 15. Nor indeed do We let the administrators go unpunished, if they allow those, whom they know to be among those prohibited by Us, to be registered on their own official staffs – with the exception, of course, of the position of provincial staff member – but We demand of them too a fine of 50 pounds of gold. 16. When a fine should be due for any of the foregoing sections, the vir magnificentissimus Count of the Most Sacred Treasury shall collect it and add it to the divine Privy Purse.

17. In consideration of the fact that We often enroll Goths among our most devoted confederates (foederati), whom neither nature nor their past life has endowed with such reason (i.e., orthodoxy), We have resolved for their sake to relax Our severity somewhat and to permit them to become confederates and receive honors in whatever way We please.

18. Knowing, moreover, that the opinions of non-orthodox parents are often at variance, the father or the mother wishing to introduce their common children to the orthodox faith, while the other opposes it, We order that the opinion of the parent who leads the children to the orthodox faith shall be stronger and altogether superior: for the outcome shall thereby correspond in part to the wish of the parents and, additionally, the better cause shall prevail.

19. In order to help children hated by fathers who do not share Our Holy Faith, although they cannot accuse their fathers of a crime forbidden by the laws, because, recognizing the error of their parents, they adhere to Our Holy αἰσθανόμενοι πλάνης, τῆς εὐαγοῦς ἡμῶν μετέχοντες πίστεως, διὰ τοῦδε τοῦ θείου πραγματικοῦ νόμου θεσπίζομεν καὶ τροφῆς τὸν πατέρα τοῖς τοιούτοις μεταδιδόναι πρὸς τὸ τῆς οὐσίας τῆς ἑαυτοῦ μέτρον καὶ τῶν ἀναγκαίων εἰς τὴν ἄλλην δίαιταν, ἀλλὰ μὴ καθάπερ τιμωρίαν ἀπαιτοῦντα, διότι τὴν ψυχὴν ἐπηνωρθώθησαν, λιμώττοντας περιορᾶν καὶ τῶν εἰς τὸν βίον ἀποροῦντας, καί που δι᾽ ἔνδειαν ἐπανελθεῖν ἐπὶ τὴν ἔμπροσθε πλάνην, ὃ μηδὲ λέγειν καλόν, ἀναγκαζομένους. 20. Ἀλλὰ προῖκα ταῖς διὰ τοῦτο λελυπηκυίαις θυγατράσι καὶ τὰς πρὸ τῶν γάμων δωρεὰς τοῖς ἄρρεσιν, οἷς οὐδὲν ἕτερον ἐγκαλεῖν δύνανται τῶν ἐν τοῖς νόμοις ἀπηγορευμένων, ἐκ παντὸς ἐπιδιδότωσαν τρόπου, καθάπερ ὁ τῆς οὐσίας αὐτῶν λόγος ἐφίησι, καὶ συνοικίζειν τὰς μὲν ἀνδράσι, τοὺς δὲ γυναιξὶ κατὰ τὸν νόμον, ὀρθοδόξοις μέντοι προσώποις καὶ τοῦ πράγματος ἀξίοις. δεινὸν γὰρ καὶ παντελῶς ἀνόσιον τοὺς ἐν τοῖς ἄλλοις ἅπασιν ὑπὸ τῶν παίδων θεραπευομένους ἐκ τοιαύτης χαλεπαίνειν αὐτοῖς προφάσεως, ἣν ἀμείνους ἦσαν ζηλοῦντες, οὐκ ἀμυνόμενοι.

21. Προνοήσουσι δὲ τῶν προστεταγμένων τούτων ὑφ᾽ ἡμῶν ἐπὶ μὲν τῆς μεγίστης ταύτης πόλεως οἱ τὰς ἐνδόξους ἔχοντες ἀρχάς, καθάπερ ἑκάστῳ διαφέρει, κατὰ δὲ τὰς ἐπαρχίας οἱ τούτων ἡγούμενοι εἴτε μείζους εἴτε ἐλάττους, καθάπερ ἑκάστῳ πρόσφορον. 22. Ἐπιμελὲς δὲ καὶ τῷ μακαριωτάτῳ ἀρχιεπισκόπῳ καὶ πατριάρχῃ τῆς μεγίστης ταύτης πόλεως καὶ τοῖς ὁσιωτάτοις ἐπισκόποις ἔσται τῶν ἄλλων πόλεων τοῖς τε τοὺς πατριαρχικοὺς καὶ τοῖς τοὺς μητροπολιτικοὺς ἔχουσι θρόνους καὶ τοῖς ἐλάττοσι τὸ συμπαρατηρεῖν καὶ συνεπισκοπεῖν, εἰ βεβαίως ταῦτα διασώζεται, καὶ μηνύειν ἐφ᾽ ἡμᾶς, ὅπως καὶ μετὰ πλείονος, εἰ δέοι, σφοδρότητος τοῖς ῥᾳθυμοῦσι τῶν περὶ τῆς ὀρθοδόξου πίστεως διορισθέντων ἐπεξερχώμεθα.

[13] pr. Οἱ ὀρθόδοξοι παῖδες τῶν αἱρετικῶν μὴ ἁμαρτήσαντες κατ᾽ αὐτῶν ἀμείωτον λαμβάνουσι τὸ ἐξ ἀδιαθέτου αὐτοῖς ἁρμόζον· καὶ ἡ παρὰ ταῦτα γενομένη τελευταία βούλησις ἀκυροῦται, φυλαττομένων τῶν ἐλευθεριῶν, εἰ μὴ κατά τινα νόμον κωλύονται. 1. Εἰ δέ τι πλημμελήσουσιν εἰς τοὺς γονεῖς, κατηγοροῦνται καὶ τιμωροῦνται. 2. Ἔχουσι δὲ καὶ ἡμαρτηκότες τὸ τέταρτον τῆς οὐσίας αὐτῶν κατὰ διαθήκας. 3. Τὰ αὐτὰ καὶ περὶ Ἰουδαίων καὶ Σαμαρειτῶν.

[14] Οἱ αἱρετικοὶ συνακτήρια ποιεῖν οὐ δύνανται ἢ παρασυνάξεις ἢ συνόδους ἢ χειροτονίας ἢ βαπτίσματα ἢ ἐξάρχους ἔχειν ἢ πατριὰς ἢ ἐκδικίας ἐγχειρίζεσθαι ἢ φροντίζειν ἢ διοικεῖν χωρία δι᾽ ἑαυτῶν ἢ διὰ παρενθέτων προσώπων ἤ τι τῶν ἀπηγορευμένων ποιεῖν. ὁ δὲ παραβαίνων ἐσχάτως κινδυνεύει.

Faith, We decree by this divine pragmatic sanction that the father shall furnish such children both food according to his means and what is necessary for sustenance in other respects; and he shall not, as if exacting punishment because their souls have been saved, let them starve and want the necessities of life, thereby perhaps – which is horrible to say – forcing them to return to their former error because of poverty. 20. They (such fathers) shall provide their daughters, who are aggrieved for this reason, with a dowry, and their sons, whom they can accuse of nothing else forbidden by the laws, with prenuptial gifts, as far as their means permit; and they shall wed their daughters to husbands and their sons to wives according to the law, as long as the latter are orthodox persons and worthy of marriage. For it would be abominable and impious if parents, who are loved in other respects by their children, should become enraged at them for a cause they would be better persons in imitating, not punishing.

21. Those who hold offices of Illustrious rank (viri illustres) shall enforce these Our provisions in This Great City, as it befits each of them; in the provinces, the governors, greater and lesser, as appropriate to each of them. 22. It shall also be incumbent on the most blessed Archbishop and Patriarch of This Great City, the most holy bishops of other cities, those who hold patriarchal and metropolitan sees, and lesser (bishops) to monitor closely and observe whether these provisions are strictly kept and to inform Us, so that with even greater severity, if necessary, We may pursue those who neglect these provisions concerning the orthodox faith.

(527).

[13] (...). pr. Orthodox children of heretics, who have committed no offence against the latter, shall receive in full the portion due them by intestacy, and a last will to the contrary shall be invalid, though manumissions shall be observed unless prohibited by some law. 1. If, however, they have wronged their parents, they will be accused and punished. 2. But even if they have committed an offence, they shall receive one-fourth of their property contrary to the will. 3. The same also applies to Jews and Samaritans.[183]

[14] (...). Heretics cannot hold assemblies, sectarian gatherings, or synods; celebrate ordinations or baptisms; have precentors; appoint fathers or defenders (of a church); manage or administer lands by themselves or by means of fictitious persons; or do anything that has been forbidden. Whoever violates this does so at his extreme peril.[184]

[183] Lounghis et al. date this constitution to between April 4 and August 1, 527.
[184] Lounghis et al. date to between April 4 and August 1, 527.

[15] ... Τῶν ἀτυχησάντων τὴν τῶν Μανιχαίων ἀσεβῆ πλάνην οὐ μόνον ἐφ᾽ ὅσον περίεισι ποινῆς ἀξίων ὄντων, ἀλλὰ καὶ τοῦ μετὰ τὴν αὐτῶν τελευτὴν μὴ οἷς ἐκεῖνοι βούλονται μηδὲ οἷς ἐξ ἀδιαθέτου δίδωσιν ὁ νόμος τὴν οὐσίαν αὐτῶν δίδοσθαι, τῷ παρόντι θείῳ πραγματικῷ νόμῳ χρώμεθα πρὸς τὴν σὴν μεγαλοπρέπειαν, δι᾽ οὗ προστάττομεν διερευνᾶσθαι τὰς οὐσίας τῶν ταύτῃ κατασχεθέντων τῇ νόσῳ· καὶ εἰ μὲν παῖδες αὐτῶν εἶεν ἢ τινες τῶν κατιόντων ἐλεύθεροι τῆς τοιουτοτρόπου μανίας ὑπάρχοντες, ἐᾶσαι τούτους τῆς ἐκ τοῦ νόμου δεδομένης αὐτοῖς οὐσίας μετέχειν· εἰ δὲ ἕτεροί τινες συγγενεῖς τῶν τελευτησάντων ἢ κατὰ τελευταίαν ἐκείνων (ὅπερ ἀπηγόρευται) βούλησιν εἰς τὸν κλῆρον αὐτῶν καλοῖντο ἢ δωρεὰν παρὰ τοιούτου προσώπου περιόντος ἔτυχον κομισάμενοι ἢ καὶ ληγάτῳ δῆθεν παρ᾽ αὐτοῦ τιμηθέντες, πάντως αὐτῶν ἀφελέσθαι τὴν οὐσίαν ἢ τὰ δεδωρημένα ἢ τὰ ληγατευθέντα πράγματα καὶ τῷ δημοσίῳ προσκυρῶσαι λόγῳ.

[16] ... pr. Εἴ τις ἐκ τῆς ἀσεβοῦς τῶν Μανιχαίων θρησκείας εἰς τὴν ὀρθὴν καὶ ἀληθινὴν πίστιν μετέλθοι καὶ μετὰ τὴν τοσαύτην ἡμῶν φιλανθρωπίαν καὶ τὰς πολλὰς προαγορεύσεις καὶ τοὺς ἐνδεδομένους ἐπὶ τῇ μεταμελείᾳ καιροὺς εὑρεθείη τοῦ λοιποῦ τὰ τῆς προτέρας πλάνης διαπραττόμενος ἢ συνδιάγων καὶ τὴν τυχοῦσαν ὁμιλίαν πρός τινα τῶν τῆς αὐτῶν ὀλεθρίας πλάνης ποιούμενος καὶ μὴ παραχρῆμα τοῦτον ἢ συσχὼν παραδῷ τοῖς μεγαλοπρεπεστάτοις ἢ περιβλέπτοις ἢ λαμπροτάτοις ἄρχουσιν ἢ μηνύσῃ, ταῖς ἐσχάταις ἔσται τιμωρίαις ὑπεύθυνος, οὐκ ἀναχωρῶν εἴς τινα σκῆψιν οὐδὲ περινοίαις τισὶν ἀναβάλλεσθαι τὰς ἐπικειμένας αὐτῷ ποινὰς δυνάμενος.

1. Πάσῃ δὲ σπουδῇ χρησάσθωσαν οἱ ἐν ἀξίαις ἢ στρατείαις ἢ συστήμασί τισι καταλεγόμενοι διερευνήσασθαι, μή τις ἐν αὐτοῖς τῆς ἀπηγορευμένης ταύτης μανίας ἐστί, καὶ τὸν εὑρισκόμενον φανεροῦν, εἰδότες ὡς, εἴποτε τοιοῦτός τις ἐν αὐτοῖς εὑρεθείη καὶ πονοῖς ὑποβαλλόμενος κατάθοιτο, ὡς ἐγινώσκετο τοιοῦτος ὢν ἐκείνοις, οὐδὲ αὐτοὶ τὴν ἁρμοδίαν τιμωρίαν ἐκφεύξονται, εἰ καὶ μὴ τῆς αὐτῆς ἐκείνῳ πλάνης ἐτύγχανον ὄντες. τὰ αὐτὰ γὰρ ἁμαρτάνειν δοκοῦσιν οἱ γινώσκοντες μὲν τὸν ἁμαρτάνοντα, μὴ ποιοῦντες δὲ τοῦτον κατάδηλον. 2. Γινωσκέτωσαν τοίνυν ἅπαντες, ὡς οὐδεμιᾶς τεύξονται φιλανθρωπίας οἱ μετὰ τὴν μετάνοιαν καθ᾽ οἱονδήποτε τρόπον γινομένην πάλιν ἐν ταῖς τῶν Μανιχαίων μυσαραῖς βλασφημίαις ἁλισκόμενοι, καὶ σπουδαζέτωσαν καθαρᾷ καὶ ἀμεταβλήτῳ γνώμῃ τήν τε τοῦ θεοῦ φιλανθρωπίαν ἐκ τῆς τῶν κρειττόνων ἐπιλογῆς καὶ τὴν ἡμετέραν εὐμένειαν ἐφελκύσασθαι.

3. Κἀκεῖνο δὲ θεσπίζομεν, εἴ τις ἔχων βιβλία τῇ πανταχόθεν ἀσεβεῖ τῶν Μανιχαίων πλάνῃ προσήκοντα μὴ ταῦτα δῆλα ποιήσειεν, ἐφ᾽ ᾧ καταφλεχθῆναι καὶ παντελῶς ἐξ ἀνθρώπων ἀφανῆ γενέσθαι, ἢ καὶ καθ᾽ οἱανοῦν πρόφασιν εὑρεθείη παρ᾽ αὐτῷ τὰ τοιαῦτα βιβλία, ὁμοίως καὶ αὐτὸν ποινὴν ὑποστῆναι τὴν προσήκουσαν. 4. Ἐκείνους δὲ μάλιστα τῶν ἐσχάτων τιμωριῶν ἀξίους εἶναι κρίνομεν, ὅσοι προσποιησάμενοι

[15][185] (...). Those who have fallen into the impious error of the Manichaeans not only deserve punishment while they live, but We address the present divine pragmatic sanction to Your Magnificence so that also their property may not be given to those whom they wish, or to those to whom the law gives it by intestacy. By this law, We order that the property of those infected by this disease shall be thoroughly investigated, and if there are children of the deceased free from this sort of madness, (You) shall permit them to receive the portion of the property given to them by the law. But if other relatives or heirs instituted by will (which is forbidden) are called to the inheritance, or received a gift from such a person while alive, or indeed have been honored by a legacy, such property, gifts, or legacies shall be taken from them and confiscated by the Treasury.

[16][186] (...). pr. If anyone converts from the Manichaean cult to the right and true faith, and, after such great clemency of Ours, many admonitions, and the time spent in penance, is later discovered practicing his former error or associating and making casual conversation with an adherent of their pernicious error and does not immediately seize him and bring him before the viri magnificissimi, spectabiles, or clarissimi administrators or denounce him, he shall be subject to the ultimate punishment and may not resort to any pretext or delay the punishment imposed upon him by any conceits.

1. All persons in office, enrolled in imperial service, or registered in guilds (corpora) shall spare no effort to ascertain whether one of their number is an adherent of this prohibited madness and to denounce such a one if found, knowing that if such a person subject to punishment is discovered among them and it is agreed that he was known to them as such, they will not escape appropriate punishment, though not adherents of the same error as him. For those who know of an offender yet fail to denounce him seem themselves to commit the same offense. 2. All shall know that those who are again caught in the vile blasphemy of the Manichaeans after penance of any sort shall receive no clemency, and shall strive with a pure and resolute mind to win the clemency of God, as well as Our favor, by choosing the better course.

3. This too We decree: if anyone has books in any way relating to the impious error of the Manichaeans and fails to disclose them to be burned and completely removed from the sight of men, or if such books are found in his possession on any pretext whatsoever, he shall likewise suffer the appropriate punishment. 4. But We deem those most worthy of the ultimate punishment who pretend to forsake impious error and convert to the saving doctrine of orthodox Christians yet are afterward seen enjoying the company of profligate men, cherishing what is theirs, and in every way helping them to hide their acts τὸ ἀπολιμπάνειν τὴν ἀσεβῆ ταύτην πλάνην καὶ εἰς τὸ σωτηριῶδες τῶν ὀρθοδόξων Χριστιανῶν μετιέναι δόγμα μετὰ ταῦτα χαίροντες φαίνονται τῇ τῶν ὀλεθρίων ἀνθρώπων συνδιαγωγῇ καὶ τὰ ἐκείνων θάλποντες καὶ πάντα τρόπον αὐτοῖς τὰ ἀσεβήματα συγκρύπτοντες. 5. Οἱ γὰρ πάλαι μὲν ἐν τοῖς ἀσεβέσι κατατριβέντες συλλόγοις, μετὰ δὲ ταῦτα τοῦ σεπτοῦ τῶν Χριστιανῶν ἀξιωθέντες δόγματος οὕτως ἂν ἐν ἀσφαλεῖ μένοιεν, εἰ μηδενὶ τῶν ἀσεβῶν ἀνθρώπων ἐκείνων φανεῖεν κεκοινωνηκότες τῆς γοῦν τυχούσης ὁμιλίας, ἤ, εἴ τισιν[xx] αὐτῶν ὡμίλησαν, τοῦτον εὐθὺς ἐκφαίνοντες καὶ παραδιδόντες νομίμῳ δικαστῇ (διὰ τούτου γὰρ μόνου δείξουσιν ἅπασιν, ὡς οὐ κατά τινα δυσσεβῆ προσποίησιν, ἀλλ' ὀρθῇ διανοίᾳ τῷ ἁγίῳ καὶ προσκυνητῷ δόγματι προσκεχωρήκασιν)· ὡς, εἴγε τούτων ἀμελήσαντες ἐντυγχάνοντες μὲν τοιούτοις ἀσεβέσιν ἀνθρώποις ἁλοῖεν, σπουδάζοντες δὲ λανθάνειν αὐτοὺς καὶ μὴ παραδίδοσθαι τοῖς νόμοις, ἀναξίους ἑαυτοὺς πάσης συγγνώμης ἐντεῦθεν ἀποφαίνοντες τὰς προσηκούσας καὶ τοῖς πρωτοτύπως ἠσεβηκόσι δικαίως ἐπενεχθείσας ποινὰς ὑφέξουσιν.

185 = Bas. 1.1.31. Lounghis et al. suggest 529 as the date.
186 = Bas. 1.1.32. Lounghis et al. suggest 529 as the date.

[17] ... pr. Τῆς ἁγίας ... Αἱ τῶν Σαμαρειτῶν συναγωγαὶ καθαιροῦνται καί, ἐὰν ἄλλας ἐπιχειρήσωσι ποιῆσαι, τιμωροῦνται. 1. Οὐ δύνανται δὲ διαδόχους ἔχειν ἐκ διαθήκης ἢ ἐξ ἀδιαθέτου, πλὴν ὀρθοδόξων, οὐδὲ δωροῦνται ἢ ἄλλως ἐκποιοῦσι τοῖς μὴ οὖσιν ὀρθοδόξοις· ἀλλὰ ὁ φίσκος αὐτὰ ἐκδικεῖ προνοίᾳ τῶν ἐπισκόπων καὶ τῶν ἀρχόντων.

[18] Ὁ αὐτὸς βασιλεύς. pr. ... Πάντων ποιούντων[xxi] πρόνοιαν τῶν συμφερόντων τοῖς ἡμετέροις ὑπηκόοις ἐκείνου μάλιστα πάντων ὡς πρώτου καὶ τῶν ἄλλων ἀναγκαιοτάτου πεφροντίκαμεν τοῦ τὰς αὐτῶν σώζειν ψυχὰς διὰ τοῦ τὴν ὀρθόδοξον πίστιν ἅπαντας καθαρᾷ διανοίᾳ πρεσβεύειν, καὶ τοῦτο μὲν τὴν ἁγίαν καὶ ὁμοιούσιον τριάδα προσκυνεῖν τε καὶ δοξάζειν, τοῦτο δὲ τὴν ἁγίαν ἔνδοξον καὶ ἀειπάρθενον θεοτόκον Μαρίαν ὁμολογεῖν τε καὶ σέβειν. 1. Καὶ δὴ πλείστους εὑρόντες ἐν διαφόροις πλανωμένους αἱρέσεσι διὰ σπουδῆς ἐποιησάμεθα παραινέσεσί τε ταῖς τὸν θεὸν θεραπευούσαις ἐπὶ τὴν ἀμείνω μεταστῆσαι γνώμην αὐτοὺς καὶ θείοις ἐδίκτοις, ἔτι δὲ καὶ νόμοις ἐπανορθῶσαι τὴν οὐκ ὀρθῶς ἐμπεσοῦσαν ταῖς αὐτῶν διανοίαις προαίρεσιν, παρασκευάσαι τε τὴν ἀληθῆ καὶ μόνην σωτηριώδη τῶν Χριστιανῶν πίστιν ἐπιγνῶναί τε καὶ πρεσβεύειν. 2. Καὶ ταῦτα γέγονεν ἐπί τε ταῖς ἄλλαις αἱρέσεσι καὶ διαφερόντως ἐπὶ τοῖς ἀνοσίοις Μανιχαίοις, ὧν εἰσι μέρος οἱ Βορβορῖται, περὶ ὧν παρ' ἡμῶν ῥητὰ διατέτακται. 3. Ἃ δὲ περὶ τῶν Σαμαρειτῶν ἐτύχομεν ἤδη νομοθετήσαντες, κρατεῖν καὶ ἐπὶ τοῖς Μοντανισταῖς καὶ Τασκοδρούγοις καὶ Ὀφίταις θεσπίζομεν, τουτέστιν ὥστε μήτε συναγωγήν τινα τολμᾶν αὐτοὺς ἔχειν ἢ λόγων ἢ πράξεων ἀσεβῶν τε καὶ καταγελάστων οἱ συνιόντες μεθέξουσι, μήτε τὴν αὐτῶν οὐσίαν δύνασθαί τινι παραπέμπειν ἢ κατὰ κληρονομίας ἢ

[xx] τινι

[xxi] ποιούμενοι

of impiety. 5. For those who formerly frequented impious assemblies, but afterward were deemed worthy of the venerable Christian doctrine, shall be secure only if they are found to have no casual dealings with any impious persons; or, if they associate with one of them, immediately denounce him and turn him over to a legitimate judge; for only by this means will they show to all that they have embraced the holy and worshipful doctrine, not out of some irreverent pretense but with the right purpose. Therefore, if they should neglect these provisions and be caught associating with such impious persons, striving to remain hidden and avoid being delivered over to the laws, they thereby prove themselves unworthy of forgiveness and shall suffer the same penalties justly imposed on those who originally committed such impiety.

[17] (Emperor JUSTINIAN Augustus ...).[187] pr. ... of the holy (orthodox faith?) ...[188] The synagogues of the Samaritans shall be torn down; and if they attempt to build others, they shall be punished. 1. They cannot have heirs by will or intestacy unless they are orthodox, nor may they make gifts or otherwise alienate property to non-orthodox persons. The Treasury shall claim their property under the supervision of the bishops and governors.

[18] (The same Emperor.)[189] pr. Reflecting on all things beneficial to Our subjects, We consider saving their souls the foremost and most urgent above all the rest, whereby all sincerely observe the orthodox faith, on the one hand worshipping and glorifying the Holy Consubstantial Trinity and, on the other, confessing and adoring Mary, the Holy, Glorious, Ever-Virgin Mother of God. 1. And since We found that many had gone astray in various heresies, We earnestly sought to bring them to the better opinion with God-serving exhortations, to correct the false belief that has seized their minds with divine edicts and laws, and to induce them to accept and observe the true and only saving belief of Christians. 2. This was also undertaken against other heresies but particularly against the impious Manichaeans, of whom the Borborites are part, concerning whom We have enacted specific laws.[190] 3. We decree that whatsoever We have already enacted concerning the Samaritans shall also apply to the Montanists, Tascodrogi, and Ophites: namely, they shall not dare to have any synagogue or come together to share their impious and ridiculous words and deeds or be able to convey their property to anyone, whether a cognate relative [187] That this constitution is Justinian's is attested by Nov. 129 pr. and 144 pr. Lounghis et al. suggest 529 as its date.

[188] The beginning of this Greek constitution is fragmentary, and the supplement uncertain.
[189] The inscription has been restored from 1.5.17 and 19.
[190] See C. 1.5.15–16.

κατὰ φιδικομμίσσου δίκαιον ἐν διαθήκαις ἢ ἐξ ἀδιαθέτου, κἂν εἰ συγγενής, κἂν εἴ τις ἐξωτικὸς ἐκεῖνος εἴη· πλὴν εἰ μὴ τὴν ὀρθόδοξον ἀσπάζοιτο πίστιν ὁ πρὸς τὴν αὐτῶν καλούμενος διαδοχὴν ἢ παρ᾽ αὐτῶν γραφόμενος κληρονόμος ἤ τινι φιδικομμίσσῳ τιμηθείς.

4. Ἐπὶ δὲ ταῖς ἄλλαις ἁπάσαις αἱρέσεσιν (αἱρέσεις δὲ καλοῦμεν τὰς παρὰ τὴν καθολικὴν καὶ ἀποστολικὴν ἐκκλησίαν καὶ τὴν ὀρθόδοξον πίστιν φρονούσας τε καὶ θρησκευούσας) τὸν ἤδη τεθέντα νόμον παρά τε ἡμῶν καὶ τοῦ τῆς θείας λήξεως πατρὸς ἡμῶν κρατεῖν βουλόμεθα, ἐν ᾧ οὐ μόνον περὶ αὐτῶν, ἀλλὰ καὶ Σαμαρειτῶν καὶ Ἑλλήνων τὰ προσήκοντα διατέτακται· ὥστε τοὺς τὰ τοιαῦτα νοσοῦντας μήτε στρατεύεσθαι μήτε τινὸς ἀξιώματος ἀπολαύειν, ἀλλὰ μηδὲ ἐν σχήματι διδασκάλου παιδείας δῆθέν τινος τὰς τῶν ἁπλουστέρων ψυχὰς εἰς τὴν ἑαυτῶν ἀνθέλκειν πλάνην καὶ κατὰ τοῦτο ποιεῖν αὐτοὺς ἀργοτέρους περὶ τὴν ἀληθῆ καὶ καθαρὰν τῶν ὀρθοδόξων πίστιν, μόνοις δὲ ἐκείνοις διδάσκειν καὶ σιτήσεως δημοσίας τυγχάνειν ἐφίεμεν τοῖς τῆς ὀρθοδόξου πίστεως οὖσιν.

5. Εἰ δέ τις ὑπὲρ τοῦ στρατείαν ἢ συνηγορίαν ἢ ἀξίωμα ἢ δημόσιον φρόντισμα ἔχειν προσποιησάμενος τὴν ἀληθινὴν καὶ ὀρθόδοξον πίστιν ἀσπάζοιτο καὶ ὑποκρίσει ταύτῃ προσελθὼν φανείη γαμετὴν ἢ παῖδας ἔχων τῆς κατεγνωσμένης ἀντιποιουμένους αἱρέσεως καὶ μὴ προσαγάγοι τούτους εἰς ἐπίγνωσιν τῶν ἀληθῶν, κελεύομεν αὐτὸν πάντως μὲν ἐκβάλλεσθαι τῆς συνηγορίας ἢ στρατείας ἢ ἀξιώματος ἢ δημοσίου φροντίσματος· εἰ δὲ λανθάνων διαμείνοι, μὴ δύνασθαί τι τῶν αὐτῷ προσηκόντων κατὰ[xxii] δωρεὰν ἢ ἕτερον οἱονοῦν συνάλλαγμα ἐκποιεῖν εἰς αἱρετικὸν πρόσωπον ἢ τελευταίαν βούλησιν· τὰ δὲ καταλιμπανόμενα προσώποις αἱρετικοῖς καὶ τὴν αἱρετικῷ καταφερομένην ἐξ αὐτοῦ κληρονομίαν ἐκδικεῖσθαι παρὰ τοῦ δημοσίου, τῶν ὄντων ταῖς ἀληθείαις ὀρθοδόξων Χριστιανῶν δυναμένων ἢ παρὰ ζῶντος αὐτοῦ τι λαβεῖν ἢ τελευτῶντος κληρονομεῖν. 6. Καθόλου γὰρ τοὺς ἐν ἀξίαις ἢ στρατείαις ἢ συνηγορίαις γινομένους ἢ καὶ πληροῦντας καὶ πάντας τοὺς ὅλως μετασχόντας οἱασδήποτε δημοσίας φιλοτιμίας ἢ συγκροτήσεως κελεύομεν παρὰ μόνων ὀρθοδόξων Χριστιανῶν κληρονομεῖσθαι ἢ παίδων ἢ συγγενῶν ἢ ἐξωτικῶν παρ᾽ αὐτῶν καλουμένων. 7. Καὶ γὰρ κωλύομεν παντελῶς τούτων μετέχειν, φαμὲν δὴ τῶν παρὰ κληρονομίας ἢ δωρεᾶς ἢ ἑτέρας αἰτίας καταφερομένων εἰς αἱρετικὸν πρόσωπον. εἰ δὲ φανείη τις τοιοῦτόν τι πράττων, τὰ κατὰ τοῦτον διδόμενα ἢ καταλιμπανόμενα τὸν τρόπον ἐκδικεῖσθαι τῷ δημοσίῳ.

8. Εἰ δέ τις ἀνὴρ αἱρετικὸς ὀρθοδόξῳ γυναικὶ συνοικοίη ἢ τοὐναντίον αἱρετικὴ γυνὴ ὀρθόδοξον ἄνδρα ἔχοι, τὰ τούτων τέκνα πᾶσι τρόποις ὀρθόδοξα γίνεσθαι προστάττομεν· καὶ εἰ συμβαίη τινὰς μὲν τῶν αὐτῶν παίδων ὀρθοδόξους γενέσθαι, τινὰς δὲ καθ᾽ οἱανοῦν πρόφασιν ἐπὶ τῆς αὐτῆς ἢ καὶ ἑτέρας αἱρέσεως μεῖναι, μόνους τοὺς ὀρθοδόξους κληρονόμους εἶναι τοῦ πατρός τε καὶ τῆς μητρός, τῶν μεινάντων ἑτεροδόξων οὐδεμίαν πάροδον or an outside heir, by inheritance, by testamentary trust, or by intestacy, unless the person called to the succession, instituted as heir, or honored by a trust should embrace the orthodox faith.

[xxii] ἢ κατὰ

4. With respect to all other heresies – by heresies, We mean those that think and worship contrary to the Catholic and Apostolic Church and orthodox faith – We desire that the law already enacted by Us and by Our father of divine memory should apply,[191] which established appropriate measures not only against them but also against the Samaritans and pagans (Hellenes): thus, those who are afflicted with this disease may neither serve in the imperial service nor enjoy any office, nor indeed as teachers of some subject draw the minds of the simple to their own error and thereby render them less zealous toward the true and pure faith of the orthodox. We permit only those who are of the orthodox faith to teach and receive a public salary.

5. If anyone, in order to obtain a position in the imperial service or a position as advocate, administrator, or public official, pretends to embrace the true and orthodox faith; and, having been promoted through this deceit, is found to have a wife and children who adhere to a condemned heresy, and not to lead them to recognize the truth; We order him to be utterly cast out of his position as advocate, clerk, administrator, or public official; and if he secretly remains, he shall not be able to convey any of his belongings by gift or by any other contract whatsoever into the possession of a heretic – nor by last will: property bequeathed to heretics and the inheritance left by him to a heretic shall be claimed by the Treasury. <7. For We utterly forbid heretics to receive these things, namely what has been left to a heretical person by inheritance, as a gift, or for any other reason. If someone is discovered doing such a thing, what has been given or bequeathed in this manner shall be claimed by the Treasury;>[192] truly orthodox Christians shall be able to receive something from such a person in his lifetime or inherit from him after his death. 6. For We generally order that persons who were or who still serve as administrators, clerks, or advocates, and all who have held any kind of public office or favor shall have only orthodox Christians as heirs, whether they are their children, relatives, or outsiders appointed as heirs.

8. If a heretical man should cohabit with an orthodox wife, or, vice versa, a heretical woman should have an orthodox husband, We order that their children shall by all means be brought up orthodox, and if it should happen that some of the children should be brought up orthodox, but others, on whatever grounds, should remain adherents of the same or of some other heresy, πρὸς τὴν μητρῴαν καὶ πατρῴαν κληρονομίαν ἐχόντων. 9. Εἰ δὲ καὶ πάντες οἱ τῶν οὕτω συνοικούντων ἀλλήλοις παῖδες ἐπὶ τῆς αὐτῆς μείνοιεν πλάνης, τότε τούτους μὲν καὶ ἐκβάλλεσθαι τῆς ἀμφοτέρων γονέων κληρονομίας· εἰ δέ τις φανείη συγγενὴς καθ' οἱονδήποτε βαθμὸν τῶν οὕτω συνοικούντων τῆς ὀρθοδόξου πίστεως, τοῦτον εἰς τὸν ἀμφοτέρων κλῆρον καλεῖσθαι· μηδενὸς δὲ ὀρθοδόξου Χριστιανοῦ συγγενοῦς φαινομένου τὸ ἱερώτατον ἡμῶν ταμεῖον τὰς ἐκείνων λαβεῖν οὐσίας· τοῦ κατὰ καιρὸν μεγαλοπρεπεστάτου κόμητος τῶν θείων ἡμῶν πριβάτων καὶ τῆς ὑπηρετουμένης αὐτῷ σχολῆς διὰ πάσης ἐπιμελείας τὰ παρ' ἡμῶν διατυπωθέντα διερευνωμένων καὶ τὰς ἐκ τοῦ παραβαθῆναί τι τῶν προειρημένων ἁρμόττειν μελλούσας τούτων οὐσίας ἐκδικούντων.

[191] C. 1.5.12.

[192] Section 7 is transposed here.

10. Εἰ δέ τις τῶν παρ' ἡμῶν κεκωλυμένων, τουτέστιν Ἑλλήνων ἢ Μανιχαίων ἢ Σαμαρειτῶν ἢ τῶν τούτοις παραπλησίον αἱρετικῶν, ὅλως ἢ στρατείᾳ τυχὸν ἢ ἀξίᾳ ἢ συνηγορίᾳ ἢ οἱῳδήποτε δημοσίῳ φροντίσματι παραγγείλειεν ἢ παιδεύειν θαρρήσειεν ἢ δημοσίαν κομίζεσθαι σίτησιν ἤ τι πράττειν ὅλως τῶν ἀπηγορευμένων, μὴ γένοιτο δὲ κατάδηλος παρὰ πάσης τάξεως ἐνταῦθα τε καὶ κατὰ χώραν στρατιωτικῆς τε καὶ πολιτικῆς, ᾗ ταῦτα διαφέρει, αὐτὸς μὲν ὁ πλημμελήσας, ἐπειδὰν φωραθῇ, ταῖς ἔμπροσθεν ἡμῖν εἰρημέναις ὑποπεσεῖται ποιναῖς· οἱ δὲ ταῦτα μὴ προσαγγείλαντες, εἴτε ἐν τάξεσιν εἶεν εἴτε ἐν ἄλλαις ὑπηρετοῖντο ἀρχαῖς, εἰς ἃς ταῦτα ἀναφέρεται, εἴκοσι χρυσίου λιτρῶν καταθήσουσι ποινὴν ἐφ' ἑκάστῳ προσώπῳ, καὶ πάσῃ δὲ ὁμοίως ἀρχῇ στρατιωτικῇ τε καὶ πολιτικῇ ἐνταῦθά τε καὶ κατὰ χώραν τριάκοντα λιτρῶν χρυσίου ἕπεσθαι πρόστιμον.

11. Εἰ δὲ καὶ ὑπεξέλθοι καὶ εἰσπράξειε τὴν ποινὴν καὶ δείξειεν ἑαυτὴν οὐκ ἀμελοῦσαν τῶν νομοθετηθέντων, ποινῆς δὲ ἐφ' οἱουδήποτε προσώπου ἢ θέματος ἁρμοττούσης, θεσπίζομεν ταύτην τὸν μεγαλοπρεπέστατον κόμητα τοῦ ἱερωτάτου ταμείου εἰσπράττειν τε καὶ ὑποδέχεσθαι καὶ τοῖς θείοις εἰσκομίζειν πριβάτοις γινώσκοντα ὡς, εἰ μὴ καὶ αὐτὸς διὰ τῆς ὑπηρετουμένης αὐτῷ τῶν καθοσιωμένων παλατίνων σχολῆς καὶ αὐτὴ δὲ ἡ σχολὴ κατὰ πάντα τρόπον τὰ τοιαῦτα ἀνιχνεύσειε καὶ τοὺς ὑπευθύνους εἰσπράξειεν, αὐτὸς μὲν πεντήκοντα χρυσίου λιτρῶν ποινὴν καταθήσει, ἡ δὲ πειθομένη αὐτῷ σχολὴ τὸ ἐπενηνεγμένον πρόστιμον πρὸς τῷ κατὰ τῆς σχολῆς καὶ τὴν εἰς σῶμα ποινὴν ἁρμόττειν, εἰ μὴ τῶν παρ' ἡμῶν νενομοθετημένων ἀντιλάβοιτο, πρὸς τὸν ἑαυτῆς ἀποβλέπουσα κίνδυνον.

12. Τὴν δὲ αὐτὴν ἐπιμέλειαν ἔχειν καὶ τοὺς ἑκάστης πόλεως θεοφιλεστάτους ἐπισκόπους διερευνωμένους ἀεὶ τὰ καθ' ἑκάστην πόλιν ὑπεναντίον τῆς θείας ἡμῶν ταύτης νομοθεσίας παρ' οὑτινοσοῦν ἐγχειρούμενα καὶ ταῦτα φανερὰ τῷ λαμπροτάτῳ τῆς ἐπαρχίας ἄρχοντι καθιστᾶν, ὡς ἂν ἐκεῖνος ἔργῳ παραδοίη τὰ παρ' ἡμῶν εὐσεβῶς προστεταγμένα· ὡς εἴγε θεάσοιντο οἱ θεοφιλέστατοι ἐπίσκοποι τὸν τῆς ἐπαρχίας ἡγούμενον ῥαθύμως τῷ πράγματι χρώμενον, προσήκει τοῦτο φανερὸν ἡμῖν αὐτοῖς ποιεῖν, ἵνα τοὺς ῥαθυμήσαντας τοῖς αὐτοῖς ἐπιτιμίοις ὑποβάλλωμεν, οἷς ὑπαχθῆναι τοὺς

then only the orthodox children shall be heirs of the father and mother, while those who remain heterodox shall have no title to the maternal and paternal inheritance. 9. But if all the children of those thus cohabiting with one another should remain adherents of the same error, then they shall be excluded from the inheritance of both parents; and if there is a cognate relative of those thus cohabiting, of whatever degree, who is of orthodox faith, he shall be called to the inheritance of both. If no such relative who is an orthodox Christian should be found, then Our Most Sacred Treasury shall seize their property. The vir magnificentissimus Count of Our Privy Purse and the official staff that serves him will monitor with all due diligence what We have enacted and will confiscate property that should belong to the Treasury on account of a violation of the foregoing provisions.

10. If one of the persons prohibited by Us, that is, pagans, Manichaeans, Samaritans, or heretics similar to them, should perchance seek a position in the imperial service, a position as an administrator or as an advocate, or any public charge, or should dare to teach or receive a public salary, or do anything that has been forbidden, and is not denounced by the entire official staff concerned, civil or military, here or in the provinces: the offender, once he has been caught, shall be liable to the penalties stated by Us above; those who failed to report this violation, whether they are on official staffs or serve in other offices to which this refers, shall pay 20 pounds of gold for each person; and a penalty of 30 pounds of gold shall similarly be imposed upon every magistrate, military and civil, here and in the provinces.

11. But if (the official staff) has pursued the heretic and collected the penalty and shown itself diligent in what has been enacted, the penalty pertaining to whatever person or case, We decree that the vir magnificentissimus Count of the Most Sacred Privy Purse shall collect and receive this penalty and add it to the Divine Privy Purse, knowing that if he, with his staff of dedicated Palatine officials, and the staff itself should fail to investigate such matters and fine those liable, he shall pay a fine of 50 pounds of gold; and the staff that obeys him, shall pay the fine incurred in addition to the penalty applicable to the entire body, unless, considering its own risk, it heeds Our enactments.

12. The most reverend bishops of each city shall have the same responsibility to investigate all attempts made against this Our divine law in every city and to report them to the vir clarissimus provincial governor, so that he may execute in deed Our pious commands. If the most reverend bishops observe that the provincial governor is lax in performing this duty, they must report this to Us, so that We may subject the negligent to the same penalties to which We ἁμαρτάνοντάς τι τῶν προειρημένων ἐθεσπίσαμεν. 13. Εἰδότων καὶ τῶν κατὰ τόπον θεοφιλεστάτων ἐπισκόπων, ὡς εἴ τινος τούτων ἀμελήσειαν, ἥξουσι μὲν πρὸς τὸν δεσπότην θεὸν καὶ τὴν αἰώνιον αὐτοῦ κρίσιν, διελεγχομένης δὲ τῆς αὐτῶν ῥᾳθυμίας καὶ περὶ αὐτῆς κινδυνεύσουσι τῆς ἱερωσύνης.

[19] Idem A. Demostheni pp. pr. Cognovimus multos esse orthodoxos liberos, quibus nec pater nec mater orthodoxae sunt religionis. et ideo sancimus, non tantum in casu, ubi alter orthodoxae religionis est, sed etiam in his casibus, in quibus uterque parens alienae sectae sit, id est pater et mater, ii tantummodo liberi ad eorum successionem sive ex testamento sive ab intestato vocentur et donationes seu alias liberalitates ab his accipere possint, qui orthodoxorum venerabili nomine sunt decorati: ceteris liberis eorum, qui non dei omnipotentis amorem, sed paternam vel maternam impiam adfectionem secuti sunt, ab omni beneficio repellendis. 1. Liberis autem orthodoxis non existentibus ad agnationem vel cognationem eorum, orthodoxas tamen, easdem res vel successiones pervenire. 2. Quod si nec agnatio nec cognatio recta inveniatur, tunc easdem res fisci nostri viribus vindicari.

3. Sed ne videamur morientibus quidem genitoribus liberis providere, viventibus autem nullam inferre providentiam, quod etiam ex facto nobis cognitum est, necessitatem imponimus talibus genitoribus orthodoxos liberos secundum sui patrimonii quantitatem alere et omnia eis praestare, quae ad quotidianam vitae conversationem sufficiant: sed et dotes pro filiabus vel neptibus dare et ante nuptias donationes pro filiis vel nepotibus perscribere, in omni casu secundum vires patrimonii huiusmodi liberalitatibus aestimandis, ne propter divini amoris electionem paterna vel materna fuerint liberi provisione defraudati.

4. Omnibus videlicet, quae nostrae constitutiones de poenis paganorum et Manichaeorum et Borboritarum et Samaritarum et Montanistarum et Tascodrogorum et Ophitarum ceterorumque haereticorum causa constituerunt, ex hac nostra lege confirmandis et in perpetuum valituris.

[20] Ὁ αὐτὸς βασιλεὺς ... κόμητι τῶν πριβάτων. pr. Ἔγνωμεν τοὺς ἀνοσίους αἱρετικοὺς καὶ μετὰ τοὺς ἡμετέρους νόμους καὶ τὴν γενομένην ἐπ' αὐτοῖς κίνησιν ἔτι τολμᾶν καὶ ἀθροίζεσθαι καὶ προβάλλεσθαί τινας τῆς ἑαυτῶν μανίας ἡγουμένους τε τούτους καὶ ἐξάρχους καλεῖν καὶ βαπτίσματα ποιεῖν καὶ βούλεσθαι χρῆσθαι προνομίοις τισίν, ἡνίκα τῶν ἁγίων περιβόλων καθέστηκεν αὐτῶν τὰ ἐργαστήρια, οἷς μόνους τοὺς τὴν ὀρθὴν τιμῶντας πίστιν χρήσασθαι προσήκει. 1. Διὰ τοῦτο τοίνυν θεσπίζομεν τὴν σὴν ὑπεροχὴν καὶ νῦν αὐτοῖς ἀπειπεῖν, μάλιστα μὲν μηδὲ ἐν ἄλλῳ τινὶ τόπῳ, decreed that violators of the aforementioned provisions were subject. 13. The most reverend local bishops shall also know that if they disregard any of these provisions, they shall face the Lord God and his eternal condemnation and, if they are convicted of negligence, shall hazard their priesthood itself.[193]

[19] The same Augustus to Demosthenes, Praetorian Prefect. We have learned that there are many orthodox children who have neither father nor mother of the orthodox faith; and We therefore decree that, not only in the case in which one is of orthodox faith, but also in cases in which both parents, that is, mother and father, belong to an alien sect (aliena secta), only the children who are distinguished by the reverend name of orthodox may be called to the succession, whether by will or intestacy, and can receive gifts or other acts of generosity from them. The rest of their children, who have followed not the love of Almighty God but the impious inclination of mother or father, shall be excluded from every benefit. 1. If there are no orthodox children, the property or estates of the parents shall fall to agnate or cognate relatives. 2. But if neither a direct agnate nor cognate relative is found, then the property shall be claimed by Our Treasury.

3. But lest We appear to provide only for the children of dying parents and take no measures while they yet live, We impose (having learned of such deeds being done) on such parents the obligation of nourishing orthodox children according to the extent of their property and of providing them with everything that suffices for the daily exigencies of life, and also of giving dowries for their daughters or granddaughters and of assigning pre-nuptial gifts for their sons and grandsons. In each case, the amount of such acts of generosity shall be fixed in accordance with their means, lest their children be cheated of paternal or maternal support for choosing the love of God.

4. All provisions, moreover, that Our constitutions have established concerning the punishments of pagans, Manichaeans, Borborites, Samaritans, Montanists, Tascodrogi, Ophites, and other heretics are by this Our law confirmed and shall remain in force forever.

(529).[194]

[20][195] (The same Emperor ... to the Count of the Privy Purse.[196]) pr. We have learned that the unholy heretics still dare, even after Our laws[197] and actions against them, to congregate, promote adherents of their madness, call these persons leaders and precentors, perform baptisms, and want to enjoy certain privileges when their workshops stand within holy precincts, which only those who respect the orthodox faith may enjoy. 1. Therefore, We decree that Your

[193] Lounghis et al. give 529 as the date of this constitution

[194] Lounghis et al. date to between September 17 and October 30, 529.

[195] = Bas. 1.1.33.

[196] The recipient may be Florus; see C. 7.37.3.

[197] C. 1.5.14, 1.5.18.

διαφερόντως δὲ ἐπὶ τῆς εὐδαίμονος ταύτης πόλεως, μηδέ τινας συνάξεις μηδὲ βαπτίσματα ποιεῖν μηδὲ τολμᾶν τοῦ τῆς προσκυνητῆς κοινωνίας ὀνόματος ἢ πράγματος ἅπτεσθαι, ἅπερ μόνων καθέστηκεν ἴδια τῶν τὴν ὀρθὴν πρεσβευόντων δόξαν καὶ τὸ προσκυνητὸν τῶν Χριστιανῶν ὄνομα προσηκόντως θεραπευόντων.

2. Ἀλλ' οὐδὲ τοὺς ἔχοντας ἐργαστήρια ἔσω τῶν ἁγίων περιβόλων χρῆσθαί τισι προνομίοις προφάσει τῶν ἐργαστηρίων συγχωροῦμεν, γινώσκοντας, ὡς, εἰ καὶ μετὰ τοῦτο τὸ θεῖον ἡμῶν κήρυγμα φανεῖεν οἱουδήποτε τῶν ἀπηγορευμένων ἁπτόμενοι, ἢ ἐν τῇ βασιλίδι ταύτῃ πόλει ἢ ἐν ἑτέραις χώραις ἢ παρασυνάξεις ἢ βαπτίσματα τολμῶντες ποιεῖν ἢ τὴν ἄρρητον αὐτοῖς διδόναι κοινωνίαν ἤ τι τῶν κεκωλυμένων ποιοῦντες, ὑπαχθήσονται ποιναῖς προσηκούσαις καὶ ἃς ὑπομένειν ἀνάγκη τοὺς ἐναντιουμένους τοῖς νόμοις καὶ τὴν αὐτῶν μὴ φυλάττοντας δύναμιν· εἰδότων τῶν τοὺς ἑαυτῶν οἴκους εἰς τὸ παρασυνάξεις ποιεῖν παρεχόντων αὐτοῖς, ὡς ταύτην ὑφέξουσι τὴν ποινήν, ἣν αἱ προλαβοῦσαι θεῖαι λέγουσι διατάξεις.

3. Καὶ ταῦτα μὲν κοινῇ περὶ πάντων τῶν αἱρετικῶν. Ἰδικῶς δὲ ἐπὶ τοῖς ἀνοσίοις Μοντανισταῖς θεσπίζομεν, ὥστε μηδένα συγχωρεῖσθαι τῶν καλουμένων αὐτῶν πατριαρχῶν καὶ κοινωνῶν ἢ ἐπισκόπων ἢ πρεσβυτέρων ἢ διακόνων ἢ ἄλλων κληρικῶν, εἴπερ ὅλως αὐτοὺς τοῖς ὀνόμασι τούτοις καλεῖν προσήκει, κατὰ ταύτην διατρίβειν τὴν εὐδαίμονα πόλιν, ἀλλὰ πάντας ἐξελαύνεσθαι, ὅπως ἂν μὴ τῶν ἀτόπων αὐτῶν μύθων τινὲς τῶν ἁπλουστέρων κατακούσαντες καὶ ἀκολουθοῦντες ταῖς ἀσεβέσιν αὐτῶν διδασκαλίαις τὰς ἑαυτῶν διαφθείροιεν ψυχάς. 4. Ἀλλ' οὐδὲ εἴσω τῶν εὐαγῶν ὅρων πραγματεύεσθαι ὅλως συγχωροῦμεν, ὥστε μὴ τὰ εὐαγῆ τῆς ὀρθοδόξου πίστεως μυστήρια γίνεσθαι αὐτοῖς ἔκπυστα βεβήλοις τε οὖσι καὶ καθαρᾶς πάσης εὐαγοῦς ἀκοῆς ἀναξίοις.

5. Κωλύεσθαι δὲ θεσπίζομεν αὐτῶν καὶ τὰ ἀσελγῆ συσσίτια καὶ τὰ ἀσεβῆ καὶ κατεγνωσμένα συμπόσια, ἐν οἷς συνιόντες τὰς τῶν ἁπλουστέρων θηρεύειν πειρῶνται ψυχάς. δεῖ γὰρ καθάπαξ κεκωλῦσθαι τούτους τοὺς ἐξ αὐτῶν εἰς τὴν ὀρθὴν μεταστάντας πίστιν αὖθις ἀσεβῶς διαιτᾶσθαι τοῖς τὰ αὐτὰ νοσοῦσιν καὶ ἴσως ἐκ τῆς συνδιαγωγῆς καὶ διαίτης πάλιν ἐπὶ τὴν προτέραν ἐπανιέναι κακοδαιμονίαν. 6. Κωλύομεν δὲ αὐτοὺς καὶ ἀνδράποδα ἐμπορεύεσθαι, μήποτε ταῦτα τοῖς συνθρησκευταῖς ἀποδόμενοι παρασκευάσαιεν αὐτὰ τῆς ἑαυτῶν κακοδοξίας γενέσθαι. 7. Ὁμοίως δὲ κωλύομεν τοῖς ἐκ τῆς τῶν αὐτῶν Μοντανιστῶν οὖσι θρησκείας δίδοσθαί τινα παραψυχὴν κατὰ πρόφασιν τῶν καλουμένων ἀξιωματικῶν, οἷς ἐκ τῶν μεγίστων δικαστηρίων καὶ τῆς ἁγιωτάτης μεγάλης ἐκκλησίας εἴωθέ τι χορηγεῖσθαι προφάσει τῆς συνεχούσης αὐτοὺς πενίας, ἣν οὐκ ἂν εἴη προσῆκον τοῖς ἐκ τῆς εἰρημένης χορηγεῖσθαι θρησκείας, ὑγιὲς μὲν ἢ μέτριον οὐδ' ὁτιοῦν ἐχούσης, παρὰ πάντων δὲ δικαίως μισουμένης τε καὶ κατεγνωσμένης· ὥστε καὶ εἴ τις αὐτοῖς ἄλογον νέμει προστασίαν, καὶ τοῦτον σωφρονίζεσθαι δέκα χρυσίου λιτρῶν ποινῇ θεσπίζομεν.

Magnificence shall even now forbid them, in any other place but especially in This Blessed City, to hold any gatherings or perform baptisms or dare to usurp the name or practice of venerable communion, which belong solely to those who observe the correct faith and duly cherish the worshipful name of Christian.

2. Neither do We permit those who have their workshops within holy precincts to enjoy any privileges on account of their workshops; they shall know that if after this Our divine proclamation they are found, whether in This Imperial City or in other places, usurping anything that has been forbidden them, or daring to hold gatherings or perform baptisms or to give communion, the very name of which they are forbidden to speak, or doing anything that is prohibited, they shall be subject to the appropriate penalties, which those who defy the laws and disregard their force must suffer. Those who provide their own houses to them for the purpose of holding gatherings shall know that they will suffer the penalty prescribed by previous divine decrees.

3. Thus far generally concerning all heretics; concerning the unholy Montanists in particular, We decree that none of their so-called patriarchs, companions (koinonoi), bishops, presbyters, deacons, or other clergymen – if indeed they at all deserve to be called by these names – may reside in This Blessed City, but are all to be driven out, lest some of the simple folk hear their absurd stories and, following their impious teachings, lose their own souls. 4. We furthermore do not permit them to conduct any business within the holy precincts, lest the holy mysteries of the orthodox faith be divulged to them, uninitiated and unworthy of hearing anything pure and holy.

5. We decree that their licentious common meals and impious and damnable banquets, in which they gather to attempt to entrap the souls of the simple folk, shall be prohibited. For those among them who have converted to the correct faith, it should be forbidden once and for all to associate impiously with those affected by this sickness and, perhaps through this familiarity and association, again return to their former delusion. 6. We also forbid them to trade in slaves, lest by giving them over to their fellow sectarians they should make them join their own delusion. 7. We likewise forbid any relief to be given to followers of the Montanist sect by reason of so-called subventions (honoraria), to whom something is customarily supplied by the highest courts and the Most Holy Great Church on account of the poverty that constrains them; but it would not be appropriate to provide such relief to those who belong to the aforementioned sect, which believes nothing sane or moderate and is justly hated and condemned by all. Wherefore, if anyone gives them such unwarranted patronage, We decree that he too shall be chastised by a penalty of 10 pounds of gold.

8. Ταῦτα τοίνυν ἅπαντα παραφυλάττεσθαι βουλόμεθα παρά τε τῆς σῆς ὑπεροχῆς καὶ τῶν τὰς ἀρχὰς τῶν ἐθνῶν ἐχόντων, τὴν αὐτὴν ποινὴν ὑφορωμένης καὶ τῆς πειθομένης σοι τάξεως καὶ τῶν ἐπιχωρίων τάξεων, εἰ μὴ ταῦτα φυλάξαιεν· ἐπικειμένης οὐδὲν ἧττον ἀγανακτήσεως καὶ τοῖς ἀεὶ τὴν ἀρχὴν ἕξουσιν, ἧς νῦν ἡ σὴ προέστηκεν ὑπεροχή, εἴ τι τῶν θεσπισθέντων ἢ αὐτοὶ παραβαῖεν ἢ παραβαθῆναι συγχωρήσαιεν, καὶ τῶν ἀρχόντων τῶν ἐθνῶν, εἰ τούτου ῥᾳθυμήσαιεν, ὁμοίως δέκα χρυσίου λιτρῶν σωφρονιζομένων ποινῇ.

D. Constantinopoli x k. Dec. Lampadio et Oreste vv. cc. conss.

[21] Idem A. Iohanni pp. pr. Quoniam multi iudices in dirimendis litigiis nos interpellaverunt, indigentes nostro oraculo, ut eis reseretur, quid de testibus haereticis statuendum sit, utrumne accipiantur eorum testimonia an respuantur, sancimus contra orthodoxos quidem litigantes nemini haeretico vel etiam his qui Iudaicam superstitionem colunt esse in testimonia communionem, sive utraque pars orthodoxa sit sive altera. 1. Inter se autem haereticis vel Iudaeis, ubi litigandum existimaverint, concedimus foedus permixtum et dignos litigatoribus etiam testes introduci, exceptis scilicet his, quos vel Manichaeus furor (cuius partem et Borboritas esse manifestissimum est) vel pagana superstitio detinet, Samaritis nihilo minus et qui illis non absimiles sunt, id est Montanistis et Tascodrogis et Ophitis, quibus pro reatus similitudine omnis legitimus actus interdictus est. 2. Sed et his quidem, id est Manichaeis et Borboritis et paganis nec non Samaritis et Montanistis et Tascodrogis et Ophitis, omne testimonium sicut et alias legitimas conversationes sancimus esse interdictum: aliis vero haereticis tantummodo iudicialia testimonia contra orthodoxos, secundum quod constitutum est, volumus esse inhibita. 3. Ceterum testamentaria testimonia eorum et quae in ultimis elogiis vel in contractibus consistunt, propter utilitatem necessarii usus sine ulla distinctione permittimus, ne probationum facultas angustetur.

D. v k. Aug. Constantinopoli post consulatum Lampadii et Orestis vv. cc.

[22] Idem A. Iohanni pp. Divinam nostram sanctionem, per quam iussimus neminem errore constrictum haereticorum hereditatem vel legatum sive fideicommissum accipere, etiam in ultimis militum voluntatibus locum habere praecipimus, sive communi iure sive militari testentur.

D. k. Sept. post consulatum Lampadii et Orestis vv. cc.

8. We desire that all these provisions be observed by Your Magnificence and by the holders of provincial governorships; both the official staff that obeys you and those in the provinces may expect the same penalty if they do not observe them. No less will Our wrath fall on those who hereafter hold the office that Your Magnificence now administers, if they themselves violate or permit to be violated anything decreed; and the provincial governors will likewise be chastised by a fine of 10 pounds of gold, if they neglect this.

Given November 22, at Constantinople, in the consulship of the viri clarissimi Lampadius and Orestes (530).

[21] The same Augustus to John, Praetorian Prefect. pr. Since many judges, in resolving cases, have consulted Us, requiring that Our oracle be opened unto them as to how they should proceed concerning heretical witnesses, whether they and their testimony should be admitted or rejected, We decree that no heretic or even those who follow the Jewish superstition may have any part in the testimony against orthodox litigants, whether both parties are orthodox or just one. 1. If heretics or Jews decide to litigate among themselves, We permit them a compromise and even to introduce witnesses worthy of the litigants, excepting however those whom the Manichaean madness has possessed – and it is self-evident that the Borborites are part of them – or the pagan superstition, and also the Samaritans and those not unlike them, that is, the Montanists, Tascodrogi, and Ophites, to whom every legal act is forbidden on account of the similarity (of their religion) to a crime. 2. And indeed for these, that is, the Manichaeans, Borborites, and pagans, as well as the Samaritans, Montanists, Tascodrogi, and Ophites, We decree that the giving of testimony, as with other legal acts, is forbidden. For other heretics, We desire that merely the giving of judicial testimony against the orthodox be prohibited, according to what has been established; 3. but, to facilitate necessary practices, We allow without distinction their testimony concerning wills and the dispositions in last testaments or in contracts, so that the giving of proof is not impeded.

Given June 28, at Constantinople, in the post-consulate of the viri clarissimi Lampadius and Orestes (531).[198]

[22][199] The same Augustus to John, Praetorian Prefect. Our divine decree, whereby We ordered that no one fettered by the error of heretics may receive an inheritance or legacy or trust, We order to apply even to the last wills of soldiers, whether they make them by ordinary or by military law.

Given September 1, in the post-consulate of the viri clarissimi Lampadius and Orestes (531).

[198] Lounghis et al. date to July 29, 531.
[199] Combine with C. 1.3.49, 3.28.37, 6.22.12.

VI Ne Sanctum Baptisma Iteretur

[1] Imppp. Valens Gratianus et Valentinianus AAA. ad Florianum vicarium Asiae. Antistitem, qui sanctitatem baptismatis illicita usurpatione geminaverit, sacerdotio indignum esse censemus. eorum enim condemnamus errorem, qui apostolorum praecepta calcantes Christiani nominis sacramenta sortitos alio rursus baptismate non purificant, sed incestant, lavacri nomine polluentes.

D. XVI k. Nov. Constantinopoli Gratiano A. IIII et Merobaude conss.

[2] Impp. Honorius et Theodosius AA. Anthemio pp. Si quis rebaptizare quempiam de mysteriis catholicae sectae fuerit detectus, una cum eo qui piaculare crimen commisit (si tamen criminis per aetatem capax sit, cui persuasum sit) ultimo supplicio percellatur.

D. XII k. April. Constantinopoli Lucio cons.

[3] Impp. Theodosius et Valentinianus AA. Florentio pp. pr. Nulli haereticorum danda est licentia vel ingenuos vel servos proprios, qui orthodoxorum sunt initiati mysteriis, ad suum rursus baptisma deducendi, nec vero illos, quos emerint vel qualitercumque habuerint necdum suae superstitioni coniunctos, prohibendi catholicae sequi religionem ecclesiae. 1. Quod qui fecerit vel, cum sit ingenuus, in se fieri passus sit vel factum non detulerit, exilio ac decem librarum auri multa damnabitur: testamenti et donationis faciendae utrique deneganda licentia. 2. Quae omnia ita custodiri decernimus, ut nulli iudicum liceat delatum ad se crimen minori aut nulli coercitioni mandare, nisi ipse id pati velit, quod aliis dissimulando concesserit.

D. III k. Iun. Constantinopoli Felice et Tauro conss.

VII De Apostatis

[1] Imp. Constantius A. ad Thalassium pp. Si quis lege venerabili constitutus ex Christiano Iudaeus effectus sacrilegis coetibus adgregetur, cum

Sixth Title Holy Baptism Shall Not Be Repeated

[1][200] Emperors VALENS, GRATIAN, and VALENTINIAN Augusti to Florianus, Vicar of Asia. We deem the priest who unlawfully repeats the holy rite of baptism to be unworthy of the priesthood. For We condemn the error of those who, trampling on the precepts of the apostles, do not purify those who have received the Christian sacraments by another baptism but rather defile and pollute them in the name of the baptismal font.

Given October 17, at Constantinople, in the consulship of Gratian Augustus, for the fourth time, and Merobaudes (377).

[2][201] Emperors HONORIUS and THEODOSIUS Augusti to Anthemius, Praetorian Prefect. If anyone is caught rebaptizing anyone initiated in the mysteries of the Catholic faith, he along with him who permitted this sacrilegious crime – provided the one persuaded is capable of the crime according to his age – shall be stricken with the ultimate punishment.

Given March 21, at Constantinople, in the consulship of Lucius (413).

[3][202] Emperors THEODOSIUS and VALENTINIAN Augusti to Florentius, Praetorian Prefect. pr. No heretic shall be permitted to seduce to their second baptism either free-born persons or their own slaves who have been initiated into the mysteries of the orthodox; or to prevent those whom they have bought or possess in whatever manner, who have not yet joined their superstition, from following the religion of the Catholic Church. 1. If anyone does so or, though free-born, permits this to be done to him or does not denounce the deed, he shall be condemned to exile and a fine of 10 pounds of gold. The power of making a will and a gift shall be denied to both. 2. We decree that all these provisions shall be upheld in such a way that no judge may subject a crime denounced to him to lesser or no punishment, unless he himself wishes to suffer the penalty from which he releases others by his dissembling.

Given May 30, at Constantinople, in the consulship of Felix and Taurus (428).

Seventh Title Apostates

[1][203] Emperor CONSTANTIUS Augustus to Thalassius, Praetorian Prefect. If anyone made a Christian by the venerable law (of the Church) becomes a Jew and [200] = C.Th. 16.6.1, but the addressee comes from C.Th. 16.6.2 (the text of which is lost).

[201] = C.Th. 16.6.6, with a slightly different text.
[202] = C.Th. 16.5.65.4–5; combine with C. 1.5.5.
[203] = C.Th. 16.8.7, ascribing the constitution also to "the Caesar Julian." The text is uncertain; lege venerabili destituta ("having abandoned the venerable law," proposed by Gothofredus) is possibly to be preferred. The law was probably issued in 353 (Seeck).

accusatio fuerit comprobata, facultates eiusdem dominio fisci iubemus vindicari.

D. v non. Iul. Mediolano Constantio A. VIIII et Iuliano C. II conss.

[2] Imppp. Gratianus Valentinianus et Theodosius AAA. ad Hypatium pp. Si quis defunctum violatae atque desertae Christianae religionis accusat eumque in sacrilegia templorum vel in ritus Iudaicos transisse contendit eaque gratia testari minime potuisse confirmat, intra quinquennium iuge, quod inofficiosis actionibus constitutum est, proprias exserat actiones futurique iudicii huiuscemodi sortiatur exordium.

D. XV k. Iun. Patavi Merobaude II et Saturnino conss.

[3] Imppp. Valentinianus Theodosius et Arcadius AAA. Flaviano pp. pr. Ii, qui sanctam fidem prodiderint et sanctum baptisma haeretica superstitione profanaverint, a consortio omnium segregati sint, a testimoniis alieni, testamenti, ut ante iam sanximus, non habeant factionem, nulli in hereditate succedant, a nemine scribantur heredes. 1. Quos etiam praecepissemus procul abici ac longius amandari, nisi poenae visum fuisset esse maioris versari inter homines et hominum carere suffragiis. 2. Sed nec umquam in statum pristinum revertentur, non flagitium morum oblitterabitur paenitentia neque umbra aliqua exquisitae defensionis aut muniminis obducetur, quoniam quidem eos, qui fidem quam deo dicaverant polluerunt et prodentes divinum mysterium in profana migraverunt, tueri ea quae sunt commenticia et concinnata non possunt. 3. Lapsis etenim et errantibus subvenitur, perditis vero, hoc est sanctum baptisma profanantibus, nullo remedio paenitentiae, quae solet aliis criminibus adesse, succurritur.

D. v id. Mai. Concordiae Tatiano et Symmacho conss.

[4] Impp. Theodosius et Valentinianus AA. Basso pp. pr. Apostatarum sacrilegum nomen singulorum vox continuae accusationis incesset et nullis finita temporibus huiuscemodi criminis arceatur indago. 1. Quibus quamvis praeterita interdicta sufficiant, tamen etiam illud joins their sacrilegious assemblies, when the accusation (against him) has been proven, We order that his property be claimed as property of the Treasury.

Given July 3, at Milan, in the consulship of Constantius Augustus, for the ninth time, and the Caesar Julian, for the second time (357).

[2][204] Emperors GRATIAN, VALENTINIAN, and THEODOSIUS Augusti to Hypatius, Praetorian Prefect. If anyone accuses a deceased person of having broken with and deserted the Christian religion and claims that he had gone over to the sacrileges of temples or to Jewish rites, and for that reason avers that he could not have made a (legal) will, he must lay out the grounds of his claims and obtain a date for the beginning of such a trial within five continuous years, which is the period fixed for actions against undutiful wills (actiones inofficiosae).

Given May 18, at Padua, in the consulship of Merobaudes, for the second time, and Saturninus (383).

[3][205] Emperors VALENTINIAN, THEODOSIUS, and ARCADIUS Augusti to Flavianus, Praetorian Prefect. pr. Those who have betrayed the Holy Faith and profaned the holy rite of baptism with heretical superstition shall be sundered from the fellowship of all men, shall be banned from giving testimony, and, as We have decreed before, shall not be able to make a will, shall succeed to no one's estate, shall be named heir by no one. 1. We would have ordered long ago that they be cast forth and removed far away, had it not seemed to Us to be a greater punishment to live among men and lack their approval. 2. But they will never return to their former condition, the blot on their morals will never be erased by penitence or obscured in the shadow cast by some farfetched apology or defense, because lies and pretexts cannot protect those who have defiled the faith that they dedicated to God and, betraying the divine mystery, turned to the profane. 3. Help is extended to the fallen and to the erring, but those who are lost, that is, who have profaned holy baptism, cannot be aided by any remedy of penitence, which is generally available for other crimes.

Given May 11, at Concordia, in the consulship of Tatianus and Symmachus (391).

[4][206] Emperors THEODOSIUS and VALENTINIAN Augusti to Bassus, Praetorian Prefect. pr. The voice of every single person, a voice of continuous accusation, shall assail the sacrilegious name of apostates, and the investigation of this kind of crime shall be barred by no lapse of time. 1. Although past bans should suffice for them, still We repeat that they shall have no power to make a will or [204] = C.Th. 16.7.3.1 (May 21); cf. C.Th. 2.19.5.

[205] = C.Th. 16.7.4. Seeck prefers June 11.
[206] = C.Th. 16.7.7; combine with C.Th. 16.8.28.

iteramus, ne, postquam a fide deviaverint, testandi aut donandi quippiam habeant facultatem. sed nec venditionis specie facere legi fraudem sinantur, totumque ab intestato Christianitatem sectantibus propinquis potissimum deferatur. 2. In tantum autem contra huiuscemodi sacrilegia perpetuari volumus actionem, ut universis ab intestato venientibus etiam post mortem peccantis absolutam vocem insimulationis congruae non negemus: nec illud patiemur obstare, si nihil in contestatione profano dicatur vivente perductum. 3. Sed ne huius interpretatio criminis latius incerto vagetur errore, eos praesentibus insectamur oraculis, qui nomine Christianitatis induti sacrificia vel fecerint vel facienda mandaverint: quorum etiam post mortem comprobata perfidia hac ratione plectenda est, ut donationibus testamentisque rescissis ii, quibus hoc defert legitima successio, huiusmodi personarum hereditate potiantur.

D. VII id. April. Ravennae Theodosio A. XII et Valentiniano C. II conss.

[5] Impp. Theodosius et Valentinianus AA. Florentio pp. Eum, quicumque servum seu ingenuum, invitum vel suasione plectenda, ex cultu Christianae religionis in nefandam sectam ritumve traduxerit, cum dispendio fortunarum capite puniendum censemus.

D. prid. k. Febr. Constantinopoli Theodosio A. XVI et Fausto conss.

[6] Impp. Valentinianus et Marcianus AA. Palladio pp. Eos, qui catholicarum ecclesiarum clerici vel orthodoxae fidei monachi relicto vero orthodoxae religionis cultu Apollinaris vel Eutychetis haeresin et dogmata abominanda sectati sunt, omnibus poenis, quae prioribus legibus adversus haereticos constitutae sunt, iubemus teneri et extra ipsum quoque Romani imperii solum repelli, sicut de Manichaeis praecedentium legum statuta sanxerunt.

D. k. Aug. Constantinopoli Valentiniano A. VIII et Anthemio conss.

VIII Nemini Licere Signum Salvatoris Christi vel in Silice vel in Marmore aut Sculpere aut Pingere

[1] Impp. Theodosius et Valentinianus AA. Eudoxio pp. Cum sit nobis cura diligens per omnia superni numinis religionem tueri, signum gift after they have turned from the path of faith. Nor shall they be permitted to cheat the law by a pretended sale, but their whole property shall pass by intestacy to their relatives who follow the Christian faith before all others. 2. We moreover wish the legal action against such sacrileges to be extended so far that We do not deny any intestate heirs an unlimited voice for the appropriate accusation, even after the death of the sinner; nor will We permit it to stand in their way if no action was brought against the unholy one in his lifetime. 3. But lest the interpretation of this crime stray in uncertain confusion too far, We persecute in Our instant oracular pronouncements those who endowed with the name of Christians have made sacrifices or had others make them. Their perfidy, even if proven after death, shall be punished in this manner: their gifts and wills shall be rescinded, and those on whom the law of (intestate) succession confers it shall possess the estate of such persons.

Given April 7, at Ravenna, in the consulship of Theodosius Augustus, for the twelfth time, and the Caesar Valentinian, for the second time (426).

[5][207] Emperors THEODOSIUS and VALENTINIAN Augusti to Florentius, Praetorian Prefect. We deem that whosoever has brought a slave or free-born person, by force or by punishable persuasion, from worship of the Christian religion to a nefarious sect or cult, shall be punished by the loss of his property and death.

Given January 31, at Constantinople, in the consulship of Theodosius Augustus, for the sixteenth time, and Faustus (438).

[6][208] Emperors VALENTINIAN and MARCIAN Augusti to Palladius, Praetorian Prefect. We order that clergymen of Catholic churches or monks of the orthodox faith, who have abandoned the true worship of the orthodox religion to follow the heresy and execrable teachings of Apollinaris or Eutyches, shall be liable to all punishments that have been introduced by past laws against heretics and shall be driven beyond the very soil of the Roman Empire, just as the provisions of foregoing laws have decreed concerning the Manichaeans.

Given August 1, at Constantinople, in the consulship of Valentinian Augustus, for the eighth time, and Anthemius (455).

Eighth Title No One May Carve or Paint a Statue of the Savior Christ in Stone or Marble

[1] Emperors THEODOSIUS and VALENTINIAN Augusti to Eudoxius, Praetorian Prefect. Since We take great care to protect the religion of the godhead above

[207] = Nov. Theod. 3.1.4; combine with C. 1.5.7, 1.9.19.
[208] Combine with C. 1.5.8.

salvatoris Christi nemini licere vel in solo vel in silice vel in marmoribus humi positis insculpere vel pingere, sed quodcumque reperitur tolli: gravissima poena multando eo, si quis contrarium statutis nostris temptaverit, specialiter imperamus.

D. XII k. Iun. Hierio et Ardaburio conss.

VIIII De Iudaeis et Caelicolis

[1] Imp. Antoninus A. Claudio Tryphonino. Quod Cornelia Salvia universitati Iudaeorum, qui in Antiochensium civitate constituti sunt, legavit, peti non potest.

D. prid. k. Iul. Antonino A. IIII et Balbino conss.

[2] … Ὁ κράτιστος τοῦ ἔθνους ἡγούμενος ταῖς σωματικαῖς ὑπηρεσίαις τῇ τῆς θρησκείας ἡμέρᾳ, καθ' ἣν ἀργεῖν εἰώθατε, μὴ ἐνοχλεῖσθαι ὑμᾶς προνοήσει.

[3] Imp. Constantinus A. ad Euagrium pp. Iudaeis et maioribus eorum et patriarchis volumus intimari, quod, si quis post hanc legem aliquem, qui eorum feralem fugerit sectam et ad dei cultum respexerit, saxis aut alio furoris genere, quod nunc fieri cognovimus, ausus fuerit attemptare, mox flammis dedendus est et cum omnibus suis participibus concremandus.

D. XV k. Nov. Murgillo Constantino A. IIII et Licinio IIII conss.

[4] Impp. Valentinianus et Valens AA. Remigio magistro officiorum. In synagoga Iudaicae legis velut hospitii merito irruentes iubeas emigrare: quos privatorum domus, non religionum loca habitationum merito convenit attingere.

D. prid. non. Mai. Treviris Valentiniano et Valente AA. conss.

in all things, (We order) that no one may carve or paint a statue of the Savior Christ in earth, in stone, or in marble placed on the ground; but whatsoever is found shall be destroyed. We specifically command that if anyone attempts anything contrary to Our laws, he shall be punished by the severest penalty.

Given May 21,[209] in the consulship of Hierius and Ardaburius (427).

Ninth Title Jews and Worshippers of the Heavens (Caelicolae)

[1] Emperor ANTONINUS Augustus to Claudius Tryphoninus. No suit can be brought to recover what Cornelia Salvia bequeathed to all Jews situated in the city of Antioch.

Given June 30, in the consulship of Antoninus Augustus, for the fourth time, and Balbinus (213).

[2] (...). The vir egregrius provincial governor[210] shall see to it that you are not disturbed by corporal liturgies on the day of worship, on which you are accustomed to rest.

[3][211] Emperor CONSTANTINE Augustus to Euagrius, Praetorian Prefect. We desire that the Jews and their elders and patriarchs be informed that, if anyone after this law should dare to assail anyone with stones or some other manner of fury (which We have learned is now being done) who has fled their deadly sect and turned to the worship of God, the assailant shall be consigned to the flames and burned with all his accomplices.

Given October 18, at Murgillum, in the consulship of Constantine Augustus, for the fourth time, and Licinius, for the fourth time (315).

[4][212] Emperors VALENTINIAN and VALENS Augusti to Remigius, Master of Offices. You shall order those who invade Jewish synagogues, as if by right of quartering, to leave; they ought not lay hand upon places of worship for their dwellings, but rather the houses of private citizens.

Given May 6, at Trier, in the consulship of Valentinian and Valens Augusti (368, 370, or 373).

[209] Seeck dates December 21 (D. xii k. Ian.).

[210] The title is given in the Greek as κράτιστος, which was equivalent to the equestrian rank vir egregius under the High Empire, but obsolete by the time of Justinian.

[211] = C.Th. 16.8.1. The likeliest date is October 18, 329 (Barnes); Seeck gives August 13, 339.

[212] = C.Th. 7.8.2. Seeck dates to 368.

[5] Imppp. Gratianus Valentinianus et Theodosius AAA. Hypatio pp. Iussio, qua sibi Iudaeae legis homines blandiuntur, per quam eis curialium munerum dabatur immunitas, rescindatur.

D. XIIII k. Mai. Mediolani Merobaude II et Saturnino conss.

[6] Imppp. Valentinianus Theodosius et Arcadius AAA. Cynegio pp. Ne quis Christianam mulierem in matrimonium Iudaeus accipiat neque Iudaeae Christianus coniugium sortiatur. nam si quis aliquid huiusmodi admiserit, adulterii vicem commissi huius crimen obtinebit, libertate in accusandum publicis quoque vocibus relaxata.

D. prid. id. Mart. Thessalonica Theodosio A. II et Cynegio conss.

[7] Idem AAA. Infantio comiti Orientis. Nemo Iudaeorum morem suum in coniunctionibus retinebit nec iuxta legem suam nuptias sortiatur nec in diversa sub uno tempore coniugia conveniat.

D. III k. Ian. Constantinopoli Theodosio A. III et Abundantio conss.

[8] Imppp. Gratianus Valentinianus et Theodosius AAA. Eutychiano pp. pr. Iudaei Romano communi iure viventes in his causis, quae tam ad superstitionem eorum quam ad forum et leges ac iura pertinent, adeant sollemni more iudicia omnesque Romanis legibus conferant et excipiant actiones. 1. Si qui vero ex his communi pactione ad similitudinem arbitrorum apud Iudaeos in civili dumtaxat negotio putaverint litigandum, sortiri eorum iudicium iure publico non vetentur. 2. Eorum etiam sententias iudices exequantur, tamquam ex sententia cognitoris arbitri fuerint attributi.

D. VI non. Febr. Constantinopoli Honorio A. IIII et Eutychiano conss.

[9] Impp. Arcadius et Honorius AA. ad Iudaeos. Nemo exterus religionis Iudaeorum Iudaeis pretia statuet, cum venalia proponentur. iustum est enim sua cuique committere. itaque rectores provinciarum vobis

[5][213] Emperors GRATIAN, VALENTINIAN, and THEODOSIUS Augusti to Hypatius, Praetorian Prefect. The order with which men of Jewish status flatter themselves, whereby immunity from curial liturgies was given to them, shall be rescinded.

Given April 18, at Milan, in the consulship of Merobaudes, for the second time, and Saturninus (383).

[6][214] Emperors GRATIAN, THEODOSIUS, and ARCADIUS Augusti to Cynegius, Praetorian Prefect. No Jew shall receive a Christian woman in matrimony, nor shall a Christian man enter wedlock with a Jewess. If anyone does anything of the kind, this criminal act shall be treated as adultery, and freedom of accusation is opened to the voices of the public.

Given March 14, at Thessalonica, in the consulship of Theodosius Augustus, for the second time, and Cynegius (388).

[7] The same Augusti to Infantius, Count of the East. No Jew shall observe his custom in contracting marriage, nor any Jewess be given in marriage according to their law, nor may one enter into different marriages at the same time.

Given December 30, at Constantinople, in the consulship of Theodosius Augustus, for the third time, and Abundantius (393).

[8][215] Emperors GRATIAN, VALENTINIAN, and THEODOSIUS Augusti to Eutychianus, Praetorian Prefect. pr. Jews living under the general law of Rome shall, in cases pertaining both to their superstition and to questions of venue, laws, and rights, appear in court in the customary manner and shall commence and defend all actions according to the laws of the Romans. 1. If any of them decides to litigate before Jews, after the fashion of arbiters in civil cases only, they are not forbidden to obtain a decision from them by public law. 2. Provincial governors shall also carry out their rulings, as if the arbiters had been appointed by decision of a (Roman) judge (i.e., a governor).

Given February 3, at Constantinople, in the consulship of Honorius Augustus, for the fourth time, and Eutychianus (398).

[9][216] Emperors ARCADIUS and HONORIUS Augusti to the Jews. No one who does not belong to the Jewish religion shall set prices for Jews when their goods are put out for sale. For it is just to commend each to his own. Therefore, the provincial governors shall permit no one to be your auditor or regulator. If someone other than you and your elders should dare to arrogate this office to himself, they shall hasten to punish him as if he were usurping the possessions of others.

[213] = C.Th. 12.1.99; combine with C.Th. 12.1.190.
[214] = C.Th. 3.7.2 + 9.7.5.
[215] = C.Th. 2.1.10, with a somewhat different text.
[216] = C.Th. 16.8.10.

nullum discussorem aut moderatorem esse concedent. quod si quis sumere sibi curam praeter vos proceresque vestros audeat, eum velut aliena appetentem supplicio coercere festinent.

D. III k. Mart. Constantinopoli Arcadio IIII et Honorio III AA. conss.

[10] Idem AA. Eutychiano pp. Quicumque ex Iudaeis obnoxii curiae comprobantur, curiae mancipentur.

D. III k. Ian. Theodoro cons.

[11] Impp. Honorius et Theodosius AA. Anthemio pp. Iudaeos quodam festivitatis suae sollemni Aman ad poenae quondam recordationem incendere et sanctae crucis adsimulatam speciem in contemptu Christianae fidei sacrilega mente exurere provinciarium rectores prohibeant, ne locis suis fidei nostrae signum immisceant, sed ritus suos citra contemptum Christianae legis retineant, amissuri sine dubio permissa hactenus, nisi ab illicitis temperaverint.

D. IIII k. Iun. Constantinopoli Basso et Philippo conss.

[12] Idem AA. Iovio pp. pr. Caelicolarum nomen inauditum quodammodo novum crimen superstitionis vindicavit. ii, nisi ad dei cultum venerationemque Christianam conversi fuerint, his legibus, quibus praecipimus haereticos adstringi, se quoque noverint attinendos. 1. Aedificia autem eorum, quae nesciocuius dogmatis novi conventus habent, ecclesiis vindicentur. certum est enim, quidquid a fide Christianorum discrepat, legi Christianae esse contrarium.

D. k. April. Ravenna Honorio VIII et Theodosio III AA. conss.

[13] Idem AA. Iohanni pp. Die sabbato ac reliquis sub tempore, quo Iudaei cultus sui reverentiam servant, neminem aut facere aliquid aut ulla ex parte conveniri debere praecipimus (ita tamen, ut nec illis detur licentia eodem die Christianos orthodoxos convenire, ne Christiani forte ex interpellatione Iudaeorum ab officialibus praefatis diebus aliquam sustineant molestiam), cum fiscalibus commodis et litigiis privatorum constat reliquos dies posse sufficere.

D. VII k. Aug. Ravennae Honorio VIIII et Theodosio V AA. conss.

Given February 28, at Constantinople, in the consulship of Arcadius, for the fourth time, and Honorius, for the third time, Augusti (396).

[10][217] The same Augusti to Eutychianus, Praetorian Prefect. Whosoever of the Jews is proven to belong to a curia shall be delivered up to it.

Given December 30, in the consulship of Theodorus (399).

[11][218] Emperors Honorius and Theodosius Augusti to Anthemius, Praetorian Prefect. Provincial governors shall prohibit the Jews, in a certain ceremony of their festival of Haman,[219] from igniting and sacrilegiously burning in contempt of the Christian faith a shape resembling the holy cross in commemoration of a past punishment, so they may not introduce the symbol of our faith to their places. They may keep their rituals without insult to Christianity, but shall unquestionably lose what has been permitted heretofore, unless they refrain from unlawful acts.

Given May 29, at Constantinople, in the consulship of Bassus and Philippus (408).

[12][220] The same Augusti to Jovius, Praetorian Prefect. pr. A new crime of superstition has taken the previously unknown name of the Worshippers of the Heavens.[221] They shall know that, unless they convert to the worship of God and the Christian religion, they shall be liable to the laws to which We ordered heretics to be bound. 1. Their buildings, which host gatherings of some strange doctrine, shall be confiscated for the churches. For it is certain that whatever differs from Christian faith is contrary to Christian law.

Given April 1, at Ravenna, in the consulship of Honorius, for the eighth time, and Theodosius, for the third time, Augusti (409).

[13][222] The same Augusti to John, Praetorian Prefect. We order that no one shall do anything or be summoned by any party on the Sabbath or on other days when the Jews observe their religion – but on the condition that neither the Jews shall have the freedom to summon orthodox Christians on the same day, lest Christians suffer annoyance at the hands of the provincial staff on the aforementioned days because of a complaint made by Jews – since it is clear that the remaining days suffice for fiscal needs and private lawsuits.

Given July 26, at Ravenna, in the consulship of Honorius, for the ninth time, and Theodosius, for the fifth time, Augusti (412).

217 = C.Th. 12.1.165. Seeck dates to December 28, 399.
218 = C.Th. 16.8.18.
219 The Jewish festival of Purim, at which an effigy of Haman was burned (see the Book of Esther).
220 pr. and §1 fin. = C.Th. 16.8.19; §1 in. = C.Th. 16.5.43; combine with C. 1.12.2, C.Th. 2.8.25.
221 Blume: "a Jewish sect who worshipped the sun and moon."
222 = C.Th. 2.8.26 and 8.8.8 (dating to 409); combine with C.Th. 16.8.20.

[14] Idem AA. Philippo pp. pr. Nullus tamquam Iudaeus, cum sit innocens, obteratur nec expositum eum ad contumeliam religio qualiscumque perficiat: non passim eorum synagogae vel habitacula concrementur vel perperam sine ulla ratione laedantur, cum alioquin, etiam si sit aliquis sceleribus implicitus, idcirco tamen iudiciorum vigor iurisque publici tutela videtur in medio constituta, ne quisquam sibi ipse permittere valeat ultionem. 1. Sed ut hoc Iudaeorum personis volumus esse provisum, ita illud quoque monendum esse censemus, ne Iudaei forsitan insolescant elatique sui securitate quicquam praeceps in Christianae reverentiam cultionis admittant.

D. VIII id. Aug. Constantinopoli Honorio VIIII et Theodosio V AA. conss.

[15] Idem AA. Aureliano pp. Si qua inter Christianos et Iudaeos sit contentio, non a senioribus Iudaeorum, sed ab ordinariis iudicibus dirimatur.

D. XIII k. Nov. Constantinopoli Honorio X et Theodosio VI AA. conss.

[16] Idem AA. Asclepiodoto pp. Iudaei et bonorum proscriptione et perpetuo exilio damnabuntur, si nostrae fidei hominem circumcidisse eos vel circumcidendum mandasse constiterit.

D. V id. April. Constantinopoli Asclepiodoto et Mariniano conss.

[17] Impp. Theodosius et Valentinianus AA. Iohanni comiti sacrarum largitionum. Iudaeorum primates, qui in utriusque Palaestinae synedriis nominantur vel in aliis provinciis degunt, periculo suo anniversarium canonem de synagogis omnibus palatinis compellentibus exigant ad eam formam, quam patriarchae quondam coronarii auri nomine postulabant: et hoc, quod de occidentalibus partibus patriarchis conferri consueverat, nostris largitionibus inferatur.

D. III k. Iun. Constantinopoli Florentio et Dionysio conss.

[14][223] The same Augusti to Philippus, Praetorian Prefect. pr. No person, although a Jew, shall be destroyed if he is innocent; and his religion, whatever its nature, shall not expose him to injustice. Their synagogues or dwellings shall not be burned indiscriminately or damaged wrongly for no reason, since by other means, even if a Jew is involved in crimes, the force of the courts and protection of public law is established in our midst so that no one may permit himself to seek revenge. 1. But, just as We desire to protect the persons of the Jews, so We deem this warning also appropriate: the Jews shall not become insolent and, emboldened by their own safety, commit any rash act against the worship of the Christian religion.

Given August 6, at Constantinople, in the consulship of Honorius, for the ninth time, and Theodosius, for the fifth time, Augusti (412).

[15][224] The same Augusti to Aurelianus, Praetorian Prefect. If there is any dispute between Christians and Jews, it shall not be settled by the elders of the Jews but by the ordinary judges.

Given October 20, at Constantinople, in the consulship of Honorius, for the tenth time, and Theodosius, for the sixth time, Augusti (415).

[16][225] The same Augusti to Asclepiodotus, Praetorian Prefect. Jews will be condemned both to the confiscation of their property and to permanent exile, if it is shown that they have circumcised a man of our faith or had others circumcise him.

Given April 9, at Constantinople, in the consulship of Asclepiodotus and Marinianus (423).

[17][226] Emperors Theodosius and Valentinian Augusti to John, Count of the Imperial Finances. The leading men of the Jews who are elected in the councils of both provinces of Palestine, or who live in other provinces, must at their own risk, at the insistence of Palatine officials, collect the annual tax from all synagogues in the same way that the patriarchs once collected it in the name of crown gold (aurum coronarium); that is, whatever was once collected in the western provinces and paid to the patriarchs shall now be paid to Our Finances.

Given May 30, at Constantinople, in the consulship of Florentius and Dionysius (429).

[223] = C.Th. 16.8.21 (where Philippus is Praetorian Prefect in Illyria); perhaps to be dated to 418 or 420. Seeck prefers 420.
[224] = C.Th. 16.8.22.
[225] = C.Th. 16.8.26.
[226] = C.Th. 16.8.29.

[18] Idem AA. Florentio pp. pr. Hac victura in omne aevum lege sancimus neminem Iudaeum, quibus omnes administrationes et dignitates interdictae sunt, nec defensoris civitatis fungi saltem officio nec patris honorem adripere concedimus, ne adquisiti sibi officii auctoritate muniti adversus Christianos et ipsos plerumque sacrae religionis antistites velut insultantes fidei nostrae iudicandi vel pronuntiandi quamlibet habeant potestatem. 1. Illud etiam pari consideratione rationis arguentes praecipimus, ne qua Iudaica synagoga in novam fabricam surgat, fulciendi veteres permissa licentia, quae ruinam minantur. 2. Quisquis igitur vel infulas ceperit, quaesitis dignitatibus non potiatur, vel si ad officia vetita subrepserit, his penitus repelletur, vel si synagogam extruxerit, compendio catholicae ecclesiae noverit se laborasse: et qui ad honores et dignitates inrepserit, habeatur, ut antea, condicionis extremae, etsi honorariam illicite promeruerit dignitatem: et qui synagogae fabricam coeperit non studio reparandi, cum damno auri quinquaginta librarum fraudetur ausibus suis. 3. Cernat praeterea bona sua proscripta, mox poenae sanguinis destinandus, qui fidem alterius expugnavit perversa doctrina.

D. prid. k. Febr. Constantinopoli Theodosio A. XVII et Festo conss.

X Ne Christianum Mancipium Haereticus vel Paganus vel Iudaeus Habeat vel Possideat vel Circumcidat

[1] Imp. Constantius A. ad Euagrium. Iudaeus servum Christianum nec comparare debebit nec largitatis vel alio quocumque titulo consequatur. Quod si aliquis Iudaeorum mancipium vel Christianum habuerit vel sectae alterius seu nationis crediderit ex quacumque causa possidendum et id circumciderit, non solum mancipii damno multetur, verum etiam capitali sententia puniatur, ipso servo pro praemio libertate donando.

D. id. Aug. Constantinopoli Constantio II et Constante conss.

[2] [Αὐτοκράτωρ Ἰουστινιανὸς Α.] Ἕλλην καὶ Ἰουδαῖος καὶ Σαμαρείτης καὶ πᾶς μὴ ὢν ὀρθόδοξος οὐ δύναται Χριστιανὸν ἀνδράποδον ἔχειν, ἐπεὶ καὶ αὐτὸ ἐλευθεροῦται καὶ ὁ κτησάμενος δίδωσι τοῖς πριβάτοις λ' λίτρας.

D. IIII k. Iul. Constantinopoli.

[18][227] The same Augusti to Florentius, Praetorian Prefect. By this law, which shall endure for all time, We decree that no Jew, to whom all offices and ranks are forbidden, shall hold the office of defender of the city, nor do We permit them to seize the office of father (of the city), lest fortified by the authority of the office that they have acquired, they should have any power of judging or pronouncing against Christians and even the bishops of the sacred religion themselves, as if insulting our faith. 1. Censuring this, too, with equal consideration of reason, We command that no Jewish synagogue may rise up in a new construction, but permission is granted for propping up those in danger of collapse. 2. Therefore whoever either receives the insignia (of office), shall not obtain the positions sought; or if he sneaks into offices forbidden him, he shall be utterly expelled from them; or if he constructs a synagogue, he shall know that he has labored to the benefit of the Catholic Church. And he who infiltrates honors and rank shall, as before, be considered of the lowest status, even if he illicitly was granted an honorary rank; and he who undertakes the construction of a synagogue not in the interest of repairing it shall be cheated of the effect of his daring with the loss of 50 pounds of gold. 3. He who overwhelms the faith of another by his perverse teaching shall see his property confiscated and himself then destined for a penalty exacted in blood.

Given January 31, at Constantinople, in the consulship of Theodosius Augustus, for the seventeenth time, and Festus (439).

Tenth Title No Heretic or Pagan or Jew May Have, Possess, or Circumcise a Christian Slave

[1][228] Emperor CONSTANTIUS Augustus to Euagrius. A Jew may not purchase a Christian slave or acquire one by gift or any other title. But if a Jew should either have a Christian or think of possessing a slave of any other sect or people for any reason, and circumcises him, he shall not only be penalized by loss of the slave but he shall also be punished by a capital sentence; the slave himself shall be given his freedom as a reward.

Given August 13, at Constantinople, in the consulship of Constantius, for the second time, and Constans (339).

[2] (Emperor JUSTINIAN Augustus.)[229] A pagan, Jew, Samaritan, and everyone who is not orthodox cannot have a Christian slave, for both the slave shall be freed and the owner shall pay 30 pounds of gold to the Privy Purse.

Given June 28, at Constantinople.

[227] = Nov. Theod. 3.2–5; combine with C. 1.5.7, 1.7.5. Seeck dates to January 31, 438.
[228] = a combination of C.Th. 16.9.1–2 and 4; combine with C.Th. 16.8.6.
[229] The inscription has been restored from C. 1.3.54.8. Lounghis et al. date to from 528 to 533.

XI De Paganis Sacrificiis et Templis

[1] Imp. Constantius A. ad Taurum pp. pr. Placuit omnibus locis atque urbibus universis claudi protinus templa et accessu vetito omnibus licentiam delinquendi perditis abnegari. 1. Volumus etiam cunctos sacrificiis abstinere. 2. Quod si quis aliquid forte huiusmodi perpetraverit, gladio ultore sternatur. facultates etiam perempti fisco decernimus vindicari et similiter puniri rectores provinciarum, si facinora vindicare neglexerint.

D. k. Dec. Constantio A. VII et Constante III conss.

[2] Imppp. Gratianus Valentinianus et Theodosius AAA. Cynegio pp. Ne quis mortalium ita faciendi sacrificii sumat audaciam, ut inspectione iecoris extorumque praesagio vanae spem promissionis accipiat vel, quod est deterius, futura sub execrabili consultatione cognoscat. acerbioris etenim imminebit supplicii cruciatus eis, qui contra vetitum praesentium vel futurarum rerum explorare temptaverint veritatem.

D. VIII k. Iun. Constantinopoli Arcadio A. et Bautone conss.

[3] Impp. Arcadius et Honorius AA. Macrobio et Procliano vicario. Sicut sacrificia prohibemus, ita volumus publicorum operum ornamenta servari. ac ne sibi aliqua auctoritate blandiantur, qui ea conantur evertere, si quod rescriptum, si qua lex forte praetenditur: abreptae huiusmodi chartae ex eorum manibus ad nostram scientiam referantur.

D. IIII k. Febr. Ravennae Theodoro cons.

[4] Idem AA. Apollodoro proconsuli Africae. Ut profanos ritus iam salubri lege submovimus, ita festos conventus civium et communem omnium laetitiam non patimur submoveri. unde absque ullo sacrificio atque ulla superstitione damnabili exhiberi populo voluptates secundum veterem consuetudinem, iniri etiam festa convivia, si quando exigunt publica vota, decernimus.

D. XIII k. Sept. Patavi Theodoro cons.

Eleventh Title Pagan Sacrifices and Temples

[1][230] Emperor Constantius Augustus to Taurus, Praetorian Prefect. pr. We have resolved to close temples in all places and in every city immediately and, with access forbidden to all, to deny the incorrigible the possibility of doing wrong. 1. We also desire all to abstain from sacrifices. 2. If anyone does anything of the kind, he shall be laid low by the avenging sword, and We decree that the property of the person executed shall be claimed by the Treasury, and provincial governors shall be punished similarly, if they fail to avenge such crimes.

Given December 1, in the consulship of Constantius Augustus, for the seventh time, and Constans, for the third time (354).

[2][231] Emperors Gratian, Valentinian, and Theodosius Augusti to Cynegius, Praetorian Prefect. No mortal shall have the audacity to make a sacrifice, so that through inspection of the liver and the prediction of the entrails he may take hope in an empty promise or, what is worse, try to learn the future through execrable inquiry. The torments of harsher punishment will be visited on those who attempt to divine the truth of the present or future in violation of this ban.

Given May 25, at Constantinople, in the consulship of Arcadius Augustus and Bauto (385).

[3][232] Emperors Arcadius and Honorius Augusti to Macrobius and Proclianus, Vicar. Just as We prohibit sacrifices, so too We desire that the ornaments of public buildings be preserved; and lest those who attempt to destroy them flatter themselves with some authority: if any rescript, if any law is perchance produced (by them), such documents shall be torn from their hands and brought to Our knowledge.

Given January 29, at Ravenna, in the consulship of Theodorus (399).

[4][233] The same Augusti to Apollodorus, Proconsul of Africa. Although We have already abolished profane rites by a salutary law, yet We do not allow the festivals of the citizens and the communal joy of all to be suppressed. Wherefore, We decree that games shall be held for the people according to ancient custom, but without any sacrifice and any damnable superstition; and celebratory banquets shall also be had, if the wishes of the people request them.

Given August 20, at Padua, in the consulship of Theodorus (399).

[230] = C.Th. 16.10.4. Seeck's dating of December 1, 356 is probably correct.

[231] = C.Th. 16.10.9.

[232] = C.Th. 16.10.15, where Macrobius is described as was "Praetorian Prefect of the Spains" and Proclianus as "Vicar of the Five Provinces"; see also C. 1.11.4. Seeck dates to August 29, 399.

[233] = C.Th. 16.10.17; combine with C.Th. 16.10.18, 16.11.1.

[5] Impp. Honorius et Theodosius AA. populo Carthaginiensi. Omnia loca, quae sacris error veterum deputavit, nostrae rei iubemus sociari. Quod autem ex eo iure ubicumque ad singulas quasque personas vel praecedentium principum largitas vel nostra maiestas voluit pervenire, id in eorum patrimoniis aeterna firmitate perduret. ea vero, quae multiplicibus constitutis ad venerabilem ecclesiam voluimus pertinere, Christiana sibi merito religio vindicabit.

D. III k. Sept. Ravennae Honorio X et Theodosio VI AA. conss.

[6] Idem AA. Asclepiodoto pp. pr. Christianis, qui vel vere sunt vel esse dicuntur, specialiter demandamus, ut Iudaeis ac paganis in quiete degentibus nihilque temptantibus turbulentum legibusque contrarium non audeant manus inferre religionis auctoritate abusi. nam si contra securos fuerint violenti vel eorum bona diripuerint, non ea sola quae abstulerint, sed convicti in duplum quae rapuerint restituere compellantur. 1. Rectores etiam provinciarum et officia et principales cognoscant se, si non ipsi talia vindicent, sed fieri a popularibus hoc permiserint, ut eos qui fecerint puniendos.

D. VI id. Iun. Constantinopoli Asclepiodoto et Mariniano conss.

[7] Impp. Valentinianus et Marcianus AA. Palladio pp. pr. Nemo venerantis adorantisque animo delubra, quae olim iam clausa sunt, reseret: absit a saeculo nostro infandis execrandisque simulacris honorem pristinum reddi, redimiri sertis templorum impios postes, profanis aris accendi ignes, adoleri in isdem thura, victimas caedi, pateris vina libari et religionis loco existimari sacrilegium. 1. Quisquis autem contra hanc serenitatis nostrae sanctionem et contra interdicta sacratissimarum veterum constitutionum sacrificia exercere temptaverit, apud publicum iudicem reus tanti facinoris legitime accusetur et convictus proscriptionem omnium bonorum suorum et ultimum supplicium subeat. 2. Conscii etiam ac ministri sacrificiorum eandem poenam, quae in illum fuerit inrogata, sustineant, ut hac legis nostrae severitate perterriti metu poenae desinant sacrificia interdicta celebrare. 3. Quod si vir clarissimus rector provinciae post accusationem legitimam et post crimen

[5][234] Emperors HONORIUS and THEODOSIUS Augusti to the people of Carthage. We order that all places that the error of the ancients assigned to sacred purposes be joined to Our Privy Purse. However, the property that either the generosity of past emperors or Our Majesty has desired to pass to any individuals shall remain in their property with unending validity. The property that We, in manifold constitutions, wished to belong to the venerable Church, the Christian religion shall justly claim as its own.

Given August 30, at Ravenna, in the consulship of Honorius, for the tenth time, and Theodosius, for the sixth time, Augusti (415).

[6][235] The same Augusti to Asclepiodotus, Praetorian Prefect. pr. We specially command Christians, who either truly are or are said to be, that they must not dare to abuse the authority of their religion and lay hands on Jews or pagans who live quietly and attempt nothing disorderly or against the law. For if they (Christians) use violence against the unsuspecting or plunder their property, they shall be forced to restore not only what they carry off, but, if convicted, double the amount that they have stolen. 1. The governors of the provinces, too, and their staff and chiefs of staff (principales) shall know that, if they do not punish such deeds but allow this to be done by the people, they shall be punished like those who committed the crime.

Given June 8, at Constantinople, in the consulship of Asclepiodotus and Marinianus (423).

[7] Emperors VALENTINIAN and MARCIAN Augusti to Palladius, Praetorian Prefect. pr. No one shall unlock the temples, which were shut long ago, with the intention of doing reverence and worshipping. Far be it from Our age that the abominable, execrable statues are restored to their former honor; that the impious doorjambs of the temples be clad in wreaths; that fires be lit on the profane altars and incense burnt on them; sacrificial victims slaughtered, libations of wine poured from bowls, and sacrilege be thought to be religion. 1. Whoever, contrary to this decree of Our Serenity and contrary to the bans of the most sanctified ancient constitutions, attempts to offer sacrifices shall lawfully be accused of this grave crime before a public judge and, if convicted, shall suffer the confiscation of all his belongings and undergo the ultimate punishment. 2. Those with knowledge of the sacrifices and those who assist at them shall suffer the same punishment imposed on the former. Thus, terrified by the severity of this Our law, they shall cease to offer forbidden sacrifices for fear of the penalty. 3. But if the vir clarissimus provincial governor fails to punish this in cognitione convictum tantum scelus dissimulaverit vindicare, quinquaginta libras auri ipse iudex, quinquaginta etiam officium eius confestim fisco nostro inferre cogatur.

[234] = C.Th. 16.10.20.
[235] = C.Th. 16.10.24.

D. prid. id. Nov. Marciano A. cons.

[8] Impp. Leo et Anthemius AA. Dioscoro pp. pr. Nemo ea, quae saepius paganae superstitionis hominibus interdicta sunt, audeat pertemptare, sciens, quod crimen publicum committit qui haec ausus fuerit perpetrare. 1. In tantum autem huiusmodi facinora volumus esse resecanda, ut, etiamsi in alieno praedio vel domo aliquid tale perpetretur, scientibus videlicet dominis, praedium quidem vel domus sacratissimi viribus aerarii addicetur, domini vero pro hoc solo, quod scientes consenserint sua loca talibus contaminari sceleribus, si quidem dignitate vel militia quadam decorantur, amissione militiae vel dignitatis nec non rerum suarum proscriptione plectentur, privatae vero condicionis vel plebeii constituti post cruciatus corporis operibus metallorum perpetuo deputabuntur exilio.

[9] ... pr. Προστάττομεν τοὺς ἡμετέρους ἄρχοντας τούς τε κατὰ τὴν βασιλίδα πόλιν ταύτην καὶ κατὰ τὰς ἐπαρχίας διὰ πάσης χωρεῖν προθυμίας οἴκοθέν τε καὶ παρὰ τῶν θεοφιλεστάτων ἐπισκόπων τὰ τοιαῦτα διδασκομένους πάντα τὰ τῆς Ἑλληνικῆς θρησκείας ἀσεβήματα νομίμως ἀναζητεῖν, ὡς ἂν μήτε γένοιτο καὶ γενόμενα τιμωροῖτο· εἰ δὲ ὑπερβαίνει τὰς ἐπιχωρίους ἀρχὰς ἡ τούτων ἐπανόρθωσις, εἰς ἡμᾶς ταῦτα φέρεσθαι, ὥστε μὴ ἐπ᾽ αὐτοὺς τὴν τῶν ἁμαρτημάτων αἰτίαν καὶ κίνησιν ἐλθεῖν. 1. Μηδενὶ δὲ ἐξέστω μήτε ἐν διαθήκῃ μήτε κατὰ δωρεὰν καταλιμπάνειν ἢ διδόναι τι προσώποις ἢ τόποις ἐπὶ συστάσει τῆς τοῦ Ἑλληνισμοῦ δυσσεβείας, εἰ καὶ μὴ τοῦτο ἰδικῶς τοῖς τῆς βουλήσεως ἢ διαθήκης ἢ δωρεᾶς περιέχοιτο ῥήμασιν, ἄλλως δὲ σὺν ἀληθείᾳ καταληφθῆναι παρὰ τῶν δικαζόντων δύναται. 2. Τὰ δὲ οὕτω καταλιμπανόμενα ἢ δωρούμενα ἀφαιρείσθω μὲν ἐκείνων τῶν προσώπων ἢ τόπων, οἷς δέδοται ἢ καταλέλειπται, προσκυρούσθω δὲ ταῖς πόλεσιν, ἐν αἷς τὰ τοιαῦτα πρόσωπα οἰκεῖ ἢ καὶ ὑφ᾽ ἃς οἱ τοιοῦτοι διάκεινται τόποι, ὥστε καθ᾽ ὁμοιότητα τῶν πολιτικῶν δαπανᾶσθαι προσόδων. 3. Πάντων τῶν ἐπιτιμίων, ὅσα παρὰ τῶν προβεβασιλευκότων κατὰ τῆς Ἑλληνικῆς ἠπείληται πλάνης ἢ ὑπὲρ τῆς ὀρθοδόξου πίστεως εἰσενήνεκται, κυρίων καὶ βεβαίων διηνεκῶς ὄντων τε καὶ διὰ τῆς παρούσης εὐσεβοῦς νομοθεσίας φυλαττομένων.

grave crime after lawful accusation and proof of the crime at trial, the judge himself shall be forced to pay 50 pounds of gold, his staff another 50 pounds, immediately to Our Treasury.

Given November 12, in the consulship of Marcian, Augustus (451).

[8] Emperors Leo and Anthemius Augusti to Dioscorus, Praetorian Prefect. pr. No one shall dare to attempt what has repeatedly been forbidden to followers of pagan superstition, knowing that he who dares to do these things commits a public crime. 1. We wish crimes of this nature to be curbed to such an extent that, even if such a crime is perpetrated on the estate or in the house of another with the knowledge of the owners, the estate or house will be confiscated by the most sacred Treasury. As for the owners, however, because they knowingly consented to defile their property by such crimes, for this reason alone, if they are adorned with rank or some post in the imperial service, they will be stricken with the loss of their post or rank as well as the confiscation of their property; persons of private or humble status, after physical torments, will be sent into permanent exile in the imperial mines.

(472?)

[9][236] (Emperor Anastasius Augustus ... to the Praetorian Prefect ...). pr. We order Our magistrates in This Imperial City and in the provinces to proceed zealously and investigate by law all impious acts of the pagan cult, (when) informed of such things either through autopsy or by the most reverent bishops, so that such acts may not be committed or, if committed, punished. If correcting these acts exceeds the power of the provincial governors, the matter shall be reported to Us, so no blame and anger on account of these wrongs may come upon them. 1. No one shall be able to bequeath, by will or gift, or give anything to persons or places for the maintenance of pagan impiety, even if this is not expressly contained in the words of the will or testament or gift but can be verified by the judges through other means. 2. Such bequests or gifts shall be taken away from those persons or places to which they were bequeathed or given, and shall by adjudicated to the cities where such persons live or in which such places are located, so that they may be expended like public revenue. 3. All punishments that were threatened against pagan error by past emperors or introduced on behalf of the orthodox faith shall perpetually stand valid and firm and are retained by this present pious enactment.

[236] = Bas. 1.1.19. The inscription has been partly restored from a fragment of the first Code, C[1] 1.11.10: Corcoran ("After Krüger" 2009). Lounghis et al. date to between 491 and 518.

[10] ... pr. Ἐπειδή τινες εὕρηνται τῇ τῶν ἀνοσίων καὶ μυσαρῶν Ἑλλήνων κατεχόμενοι πλάνῃ κἀκεῖνα πράττοντες, ἅπερ εἰς δικαίαν ὀργὴν κινεῖ τὸν φιλάνθρωπον θεόν, οὐδὲ τὰ περὶ τούτων ἀδιόρθωτα καταλιπεῖν ὑπέστημεν, ἀλλὰ γνόντες, ὡς τὴν τοῦ ἀληθινοῦ καὶ μόνου θεοῦ καταλιμπάνοντες προσκύνησιν εἰδώλοις ἀλογίστῳ πλάνῃ θυσίας προσέφερον καὶ πάσης ἀνοσιότητος μεστὰς ἑορτὰς ἐπετέλουν, τοὺς μὲν ἤδη ταῦτα ἡμαρτηκότας μετὰ τὸ ἀξιωθῆναι τοῦ ἁγίου βαπτίσματος πρὸς τὰ ἐλεγχθέντα αὐτῶν ἁμαρτήματα ἐκδικήσει τῇ προσηκούσῃ, καὶ ταῦτα φιλανθρωπότερον, ὑπεβάλομεν. τοῦ δὲ λοιποῦ διὰ τοῦ παρόντος νόμου προαγορεύομεν ἅπασιν, ὡς οἱ μὲν γενόμενοι Χριστιανοὶ καὶ τοῦ ἁγίου καὶ σωτηριώδους ἀξιούμενοι καθ' οἱονδήποτε χρόνον βαπτίσματος εἰ φανεῖεν ἔτι τῇ τῶν Ἑλλήνων ἐμμένοντες πλάνῃ, τιμωρίαις ἐσχάταις ὑποβληθήσονται.

1. Ὅσοι δὲ μήπω τοῦ προσκυνητοῦ βαπτίσματος ἠξιώθησαν, τούτους προσήκει καταδήλους ἑαυτοὺς ποιεῖν, ἢ κατὰ τὴν βασιλεύουσαν ταύτην πόλιν ἢ ἐν ἐπαρχίαις διάγοντας, καὶ προσιέναι ταῖς ἁγιωτάταις ἐκκλησίαις ἅμα γαμεταῖς καὶ παισὶ καὶ παντὶ τῷ κατ' αὐτοὺς οἴκῳ καὶ διδάσκεσθαι τὴν ἀληθινὴν τῶν Χριστιανῶν πίστιν, οὕτω δὲ ἐκδιδαχθέντας καὶ καθαρῶς ἀποβαλόντας τὴν προτέραν πλάνην ἀξιοῦσθαι τοῦ σωτηριώδους βαπτίσματος, ἢ τούτων ὀλιγωροῦντας εἰδέναι, ὡς οὔτε μεθέξουσί τινος τῶν τῆς ἡμετέρας πολιτείας οὔτε οὐσίας κινητῆς ἢ ἀκινήτου κύριοι εἶναι συγχωρηθήσονται, ἀλλὰ παντὸς ἀφαιρεθέντες πράγματος ἐν ἐνδείᾳ καταλειφθήσονται πρὸς τῷ καὶ ταῖς ἁρμοδίαις ὑποβληθῆναι ποιναῖς.

2. Πᾶν δὲ μάθημα παρὰ τῶν νοσούντων τὴν τῶν ἀνοσίων Ἑλλήνων μανίαν διδάσκεσθαι κωλύομεν, ὥστε μὴ κατὰ τοῦτο προσποιεῖσθαι αὐτοὺς παιδεύειν τοὺς εἰς αὐτοὺς ἀθλίως φοιτῶντας, ταῖς δὲ ἀληθείαις τὰς τῶν δῆθεν παιδευομένων διαφθείρειν ψυχάς· ἀλλὰ μηδὲ ἐκ τοῦ δημοσίου σιτήσεως ἀπολαύειν αὐτούς, οὐκ ἔχοντας παρρησίαν οὐδὲ ἐκ θείων γραμμάτων ἢ πραγματικῶν τύπων τοιούτου τινὸς ἄδειαν αὐτοῖς ἐκδικεῖν. 3. Εἴτε γὰρ ἐνταῦθά τις εἴτε κατὰ χώραν φανείη τοιοῦτος ὢν καὶ μὴ προσδραμὼν ταῖς ἁγιωτάταις ἡμῶν ἐκκλησίαις μετὰ τῶν οἰκείων, ὡς εἴρηται, παίδων καὶ γαμετῶν, ταῖς προδηλουμέναις ὑποπεσεῖται ποιναῖς καὶ τὰς μὲν αὐτῶν οὐσίας ἐκδικήσει τὸ δημόσιον, αὐτοὶ δὲ ἐξορίᾳ παραδοθήσονται. 4. Εἰ δέ τις ἐμφωλεύων τῇ ἡμετέρᾳ πολιτείᾳ θυσίας ἢ καὶ εἰδωλολατρίας ἁμαρτάνων ἁλῷ, οὗτος ταῖς ἐσχάταις ὑπαχθήσεται τιμωρίαις, ἃς οἱ Μανιχαῖοι, ταὐτὸν δὲ εἰπεῖν ἐστι, καὶ Βορβορῖται δικαίως ὑφίστανται· καὶ γὰρ καὶ τούτους ὁμοίους ἐκείνοις εἶναι κρίνομεν.

5. Κἀκεῖνο δὲ νομοθετοῦμεν, ὥστε τὰ τούτων τέκνα μικρᾶς ἡλικίας ὄντα παραχρῆμα καὶ δίχα τινὸς ἀναβολῆς τυγχάνειν τοῦ σωτηριώδους βαπτίσματος, ὡς τῶν ἤδη τὴν ἡλικίαν προβεβηκότων δεομένων τοῦ

[10][237] (Emperor Justinian Augustus ...). pr. Since some have been found who, possessed by the error of the unholy and vile pagans, practice what moves merciful God to just wrath, We did not intend to leave their wrongs unrighted; but, knowing that they abandoned the worship of the true and only God and, in their insane error, offered sacrifices to idols and celebrated feasts replete with every iniquity, We subjected those who had committed these sins after being deemed worthy of holy baptism – rather mercifully – to appropriate punishment according to the crimes proved against them; but henceforth, by the present law, We declare before all that those who have become Christians and deemed worthy of holy and saving baptism, for whatever length of time, if they are found still to adhere to the error of the pagans, shall be subjected to the ultimate punishments.

1. Those who have not yet been deemed worthy of worshipful baptism must make themselves known, whether they live in This Imperial City or in the provinces, and go with their wives and children and their whole household to the most holy churches to be taught the true Christian faith, so that thus instructed and having cast off their former error, they may be found worthy of saving baptism; or if they despise these things, they shall know that they shall have no part in Our Empire, nor shall they be permitted to be owners of movable or immovable property, but they shall be deprived of everything and left in poverty, in addition to being subject to the appropriate penalties.

2. We moreover prohibit the teaching of any subject by those who suffer from the insanity of the unholy pagans, lest thereby they pretend to teach those who wretchedly attend their classes, while in truth they destroy the souls of their pupils. Nor shall they enjoy a public salary, since they shall have no freedom either through imperial rescripts or pragmatic sanctions to claim such a right. 3. For if such a person should be found here or in the provinces, and he does not hasten to Our most holy churches with his wives (sic) and children, as has been said, he shall undergo the penalties indicated above; the Treasury shall claim their property and they themselves shall be sent into exile. 4. If anyone hiding in Our Empire should be caught performing sinful sacrifices or idolatry, he shall be subjected to the ultimate punishments to which the Manichaeans – which is as much as to say the Borborites – are deservedly subject; for We judge the latter to be like the former.

5. This too We enact: that their children of tender age shall immediately and without any delay receive saving baptism, while those already past that age must attend the most holy churches according to the divine canons and be προσεδρεύειν ταῖς ἁγιωτάταις ἐκκλησίαις κατὰ τοὺς θείους κανόνας καὶ τὰς θείας ἐκδιδάσκεσθαι γραφάς, οὕτω τε γνησίας ἀντιλαμβάνεσθαι μετανοίας καὶ τὴν παλαιὰν ἀποσεισαμένους πλάνην τοῦ προσκυνητοῦ τυγχάνειν βαπτίσματος· τοῦτον γὰρ τὸν τρόπον βεβαίως ἂν δέξαιντο καὶ διαφυλάξαιεν τὴν ἀληθινὴν τῶν ὀρθοδόξων πίστιν καὶ οὐ πάλιν ἐπὶ τὴν παλαιὰν μεταβάλοιεν πλάνην.

[237] = Bas. 1.1.20. The attribution to Justinian is certain, since this constitution does not appear in the first Code (Corcoran). Lounghis et al. date it to 529.

6. Ὅσοι δὲ ἂν προφάσει τοῦ στρατείαν ἢ ἀξίωμα ἢ οὐσίαν ἔχειν αὐτοὶ μὲν ἐσχηματισμένως προσῆλθον ἢ προσέλθοιεν τῷ σωτηριώδει βαπτίσματι, τὰς δὲ αὐτῶν γαμετὰς ἢ τοὺς παῖδας ἢ τοὺς ἄλλους τοὺς κατὰ τὸν αὐτῶν ὄντας οἶκον ἐπὶ τῆς Ἑλληνικῆς καταλείψαιεν πλάνης, τούτους προστάττομεν δημεύεσθαί τε καὶ καθάπαξ μὴ μετέχειν τῆς ἡμετέρας πολιτείας, ἀλλὰ καὶ τιμωρίαις ὑποβάλλεσθαι ταῖς αὐτῶν ἀξίαις, ὡς αὐτόθεν ὄντας φανεροὺς μὴ καθαρᾷ πίστει τοῦ ἁγίου τυχεῖν βαπτίσματος.

7. Ταῦτα τοίνυν ἐπὶ τοῖς ἀλιτηρίοις Ἕλλησί τε καὶ Μανιχαίοις, ὧν Μανιχαίων μέρος εἶναι καὶ Βορβορίτας δεδήλωται, νομοθετοῦμεν.

XII De His Qui ad Ecclesias Confugiunt vel Ibi Exclamant

[1] Impp. Arcadius et Honorius AA. Archelao praefecto Augustali. Iudaei, qui reatu aliquo vel debitis fatigati simulant se Christianae legi velle coniungi, ut ad ecclesias confugientes evitare possint crimina vel pondera debitorum, arceantur nec ante suscipiantur, quam debita universa reddiderint vel fuerint innocentia demonstrata purgati.

D. XV k. Iul. Constantinopoli Caesario et Attico conss.

[2] Impp. Honorius et Theodosius AA. Iovio pp. Fideli ac devota praeceptione sancimus nemini licere ad sacrosanctas ecclesias confugientes abducere: sub hac videlicet definitione, ut, si quisquam contra hanc legem venire temptaverit, sciat se ad maiestatis crimen esse retinendum.

D. k. April. Ravennae Honorio VIII et Theodosio III AA. conss.

[3] Αὐτοκράτορες Θεοδόσιος καὶ Οὐαλεντινιανὸς AA. Ἀντιόχῳ μεγαλοπρεπεστάτῳ ἐπάρχῳ καὶ ὑπάτῳ. pr. Ἀνεῴχθωσαν τοῖς δεδιόσιν οἱ ναοὶ τοῦ μεγάλου θεοῦ· οὐ γὰρ μόνα τὰ θεῖα θυσιαστήρια καὶ τὸ εὐκτήριον τοῦ ναοῦ τὸ τετραγώνων τοίχων περιβολῇ τειχιζόμενον εἰς ἀσφάλειαν instructed in the divine scriptures; and, thus partaking of genuine penitence and shaking off their former error, they shall receive worshipful baptism. In this way, they shall firmly embrace and protect the true orthodox faith and not lapse into their former error.

6. Those, however, who for the sake of keeping their position in the imperial service, their rank, or property, have deceitfully received or shall receive saving baptism, while they leave their wives, children, and others in their household in the error of paganism: We command that these persons be proscribed and have absolutely no part in Our Empire; but they shall also be subjected to punishment worthy of them, for it is thereby manifest that they did not receive holy baptism with pure faith.

7. We enact these provisions against the accursed pagans and Manichaeans, of which Manichaeans the Borborites are obviously part.

(529–531)

Twelfth Title Those Who Flee to Churches and There Raise an Outcry[238]

[1][239] Emperors Arcadius and Honorius Augusti to Archelaus, Augustal Prefect. Jews who, wearied by some charge or by debts, pretend that they wish to join the Christian religion so that they might escape their crimes or the burdens of their debts by taking refuge in churches, shall be shut out and not admitted until they have repaid all their debts or have been acquitted by proving their innocence.

Given June 17, at Constantinople, in the consulship of Caesarius and Atticus (397).

[2][240] Emperors Honorius and Theodosius Augusti to Jovius, Praetorian Prefect. With a faithful and devout command, We decree that no one may drag away those who flee to sacrosanct churches, with this corollary: if anyone attempts anything contrary to this law, he shall know that he shall be held on charges of high treason.

Given April 1, at Ravenna, in the consulship of Honorius, for the eighth time, and Theodosius, for the third time, Augusti (409).

[3][241] Emperors Theodosius and Valentinian Augusti to Antiochus, vir magnificentissimus Praetorian Prefect and Consul. pr. The temples of Mighty [238] This and the following title did not appear in the first Code (Corcoran).

[239] = C.Th. 9.45.2.

[240] = C.Th. 16.8.19; combine with C. 1.9.12 and C.Th. 2.8.25.

[241] = C.Th. 9.45.4, the Latin version, which still appeared in the first Code (Corcoran).

συντελεῖν τῶν προσφευγόντων θεσπίζομεν, ἀλλ᾽ εἴ τι καὶ περαιτέρω τούτου τυγχάνει ἄχρι τῶν τελευταίων θυρῶν τῆς ἐκκλησίας, ἐλέου βωμὸν τοῖς προσφυγοῦσιν εἶναι προστάττομεν, ὥστε μεταξὺ τοῦ ναοῦ, ὃν τῷ προειρημένῳ τρόπῳ περιπεφράχθαι διεγράψαμεν, καὶ τῶν πρώτων μετὰ τοὺς δημοσίους τόπους τῆς ἐκκλησίας θυρῶν τὰ παρεγκείμενα, εἴτε ἐν οἰκίαις ἢ κήποις ἢ αὐλαῖς ἢ λουτροῖς ἢ ἐν στοαῖς τυγχάνει, τοὺς εἰσδύντας πρόσφυγας καθ᾽ ὁμοιότητα τοῦ ναοῦ φυλάττειν· καὶ μηδένα τούτοις ἱεροσύλους ἐπιβάλλειν χεῖρας, ἵνα μὴ ὁ τοῦτο τολμῶν ἐν συμφοραῖς ἑαυτὸν ἰδὼν καὶ αὐτὸς ἐξαιτῶν βοήθειαν καταφύγῃ.

1. Τοῦτο δὲ τῶν διαστημάτων πλάτος διὰ τοῦτο συνεχωρήσαμεν, ἵνα μή τινι τῶν προσφευγόντων ἐν τῷ τοῦ θεοῦ ναῷ ἢ ἐν τοῖς ἁγίοις θυσιαστηρίοις μένειν ἢ ἐσθίειν ἢ καθεύδειν ἢ παννυχίζειν ἐξῇ, τῶν μὲν κληρικῶν τῆς θρησκείας χάριν τοῦτο κωλυόντων, τῶν προσφύγων δὲ τῆς εὐσεβείας ἕνεκα φυλαττόντων. 1a. Ὅπλα δὲ ἢ ἐν σιδήρῳ ἢ ἐν ἑτέρῳ εἴδει ἀμυντηρίου τοὺς προσφεύγοντας οὐδαμῶς ἔχειν ἢ ἐπιφέρεσθαι ἐντὸς τῆς ἐκκλησίας προστάττομεν, οὐ μόνον ἐκ τῶν θείων ναῶν καὶ θυσιαστηρίων, ὡς τὰ λοιπά, ταῦτα κωλύοντες, ἀλλὰ καὶ τῶν οἰκημάτων καὶ διαιτῶν καὶ κήπων καὶ λουτρῶν καὶ αὐλῶν καὶ στοῶν. 2. Τοὺς τοίνυν δίχα ὅπλων τῷ ἁγίῳ οἴκῳ τοῦ θεοῦ καὶ εἰς τὸ ἅγιον θυσιαστήριον ἐν οἱῳδήποτε ἔθνει ἢ κατὰ ταύτην τὴν πόλιν προσφεύγοντας ὑπνοῦν ἐν τῷ ναῷ ἤτοι τῷ θυσιαστηρίῳ καὶ τροφῆς μεταλαμβάνειν παρὰ τῶν κληρικῶν προσήκει κωλύεσθαι ἐκτός τινος ὕβρεως, δεικνύντων τὰ διαστήματα ἐν τοῖς ἐκκλησιαστικοῖς περιβόλοις διὰ τὴν τῶν προσφύγων ἀσφάλειαν καὶ ἡσυχίαν ἀφορισθέντα καὶ διδασκόντων τιμωρίαν κεφαλικὴν κατὰ τῶν προπετῶς ἐπιόντων αὐτοῖς ὡρίσθαι. οἷς ὁ πρόσφυξ εἰ μὴ πείθει, τότε προτιμάσθω τῆς φιλανθρωπίας ἡ θρησκεία καὶ ἐκ τῶν θείων εἰς τοὺς προλεχθέντας τόπους χωριζέσθω ἡ θρασύτης.

3. Τοὺς δὲ μετὰ ὅπλων τὰς ἁγίας ἐκκλησίας καταλαμβάνοντας προηγουμένως μὲν μὴ ποιεῖν τοῦτο ὑπομιμνήσκομεν· ἐὰν δὲ ἐν οἱῳδήποτε τόπῳ τῆς ἐκκλησίας ἢ ἐντὸς τοῦ ναοῦ ἢ περὶ τὸν ναὸν ἢ καὶ ἐκτὸς τούτου τυγχάνωσιν, παραχρῆμα τὰ ὅπλα αὐθεντίᾳ τοῦ ἐπισκόπου παρὰ μόνων τῶν κληρικῶν αὐστηρότερον ἀναγκαζομένους ἀποτίθεσθαι προστάττομεν, διδομένης αὐτοῖς ἐλπίδος καὶ ὅρκου, ὡς τῇ θρησκείᾳ μᾶλλον ἢ τῇ τῶν ὅπλων ἐπικουρίᾳ ὀχυρωθήσονται. 4. Ἐὰν δὲ τῇ ἐκκλησιαστικῇ φωνῇ ὑπομνησθέντες μετὰ τοσαύτας καὶ τηλικαύτας παραγγελίας τὰ ὅπλα μὴ ἀποθῶνται, ἐξευμενισθείσης τῆς θρησκείας παρά τε τῆς ἡμετέρας γαληνότητος καὶ τῶν ἐπισκόπων τῷ θεῷ τῆς ἀπολογίας δοθείσης, ἐνόπλων εἰσπεμφθέντων ἀποσπασθήσονται καὶ πάσαις ταῖς συμφοραῖς ὑποβληθήσονται. 5. Οὐ μὴν δίχα γνώμης ἢ κελεύσεως τοῦ ἐπισκόπου καὶ ἡμῶν τῶν τε δικαστῶν τῶν κατὰ τὴν δεῖνα πόλιν καὶ ὁπουδήποτε τυγχανόντων τὸν ὡπλισμένον ἐκ τῶν ἐκκλησιῶν χρὴ παραδίδοσθαι, ἵνα μή, πολλοῖς κατὰ τῶν ἀθλίων τοιαύτης ἀδιαφόρως ἐξουσίας δοθείσης σύγχυσίς τις ἐκ τούτου γίνεσθαι μέλλῃ καὶ ταραχή.

God shall be opened to those who fear: for We decree that not only the divine altars and oratory of the temple, enclosed by a square circuit of four walls, shall serve to protect those who flee to them; but We also command that if something should lie just past this point, up to the outermost doors of the church, it too shall be an altar of mercy to those who flee to it. Thus, the space lying between the temple, which is enclosed in the manner that We have described above, and the first doors of the church beyond the public grounds, whether these consist of houses, gardens, courtyards, baths, or porticos, shall protect refugees that enter them just as the temple itself; and no one shall lay sacrilegious hands on them, lest he who dares to do so, when he sees himself in danger, also take refuge there seeking help.

1. It is for this reason that We grant this extent of space: that no refugee may be able to remain in the temple of God or at the holy altars, or eat, sleep, or pass the night there. The clergy shall prevent this for the sake of worship, and the refugees shall observe (this rule) for the sake of piety. 1a. We command that the refugees may have no arms whatsoever, whether a sword or some other kind of weapon, inside the church; nor may weapons be brought into the church, and We prohibit them not only in the divine temples and at the altars but also in the houses, rooms, gardens, baths, courtyards, and porticos. 2. Hence, those who flee unarmed to the holy house of God and to the holy altar in any province or in this city shall, without any insult to them, be stopped by the clergymen from sleeping or taking food in the temple or at the altar; rather, the clergymen shall show them the areas in the church precincts reserved for the protection and safety of fugitives and shall inform them that capital punishment has been decreed against those who rashly invade such places. If the fugitive does not obey them, then religion shall take precedence over compassion, and brazenness must be removed from the divine to the aforementioned places.

3. We warn in advance those who occupy the sacred churches while armed not to do this: if armed men happen to be anywhere in the church, whether within the temple, about it, or outside it, We order that they sternly be compelled by the clergymen alone, on the authority of the bishop, to lay down their arms immediately; they shall receive assurance and an oath that they are better fortified by religion than with the help of arms. 4. But if after they have been admonished by the voice of the church and after so many urgent warnings, they do not lay down their arms: then, since religious scruple has been satisfied and justification has been given to God by Our Serenity and the bishops, armed men shall be sent in and the refugees shall be dragged away and delivered unto every misfortune. 5. But an armed refugee must not be removed from churches without the ruling or order of the bishop and Ourselves, as well as the judges of whatever city or place, lest if such power over the wretched be indiscriminately conferred on many people, confusion and chaos should arise because of it.

D. x k. April. Constantinopoli Basso et Antiocho conss.

[4] Idem AA. Hierio pp. pr. Si servus cuiusquam ecclesiam altariave armatus nullis hoc suspicantibus inopinatus inruerit, exinde protinus abstrahatur vel certe continuo domino vel ei, unde eum tam furiosa formido proripuit, indicetur eique mox abstrahendi copia non negetur. 1. Sed si armorum fiducia resistendi animos insania impellente conceperit, abripiendi extrahendique eum domino, quibus potest id efficere viribus, concedatur. Quod si illum etiam confici in concertatione pugnaque contigerit, nulla erit eius noxa nec conflandae criminationis relinquetur occasio, si is, qui ex statu servili in hostilis et homicidae condicionem transiliit, occisus sit.

D. v. k. April. Constantinopoli Valerio et Aetio conss.

[5] Imp. Marcianus A. ad populum. Denuntiamus vobis omnibus, ut in sacrosanctis ecclesiis et in aliis quidem venerabilibus locis, in quibus cum pace et quiete vota competit celebrari, abstineatis omni seditione. nemo conclamationibus utatur, nemo moveat tumultum aut impetum committat vel conventicula collecta multitudine in qualibet parte civitatis vel vici vel cuiuscumque loci colligere aut celebrare conetur. nam si quis aliquid contra leges a quibusdam sibi existimet perpetrari, liceat ei adire iudicem et legitimum postulare praesidium. sciant sane omnes, quod, si quis contra huius edicti normam aut agere aliquid aut seditionem movere temptaverit, ultimo supplicio subiacebit.

D. III id. Iul. Constantinopoli Marciano A. cons.

[6] Imp. Leo A. Erythrio pp. pr. Praesenti lege decernimus per omnia loca valitura (excepta hac urbe regia, in qua nos divinitate propitia degentes, quotiens usus exegerit, invocati singulis causis atque personis praesentanea constituta praestamus) nullos penitus cuiuscumque condicionis de sacrosanctis ecclesiis orthodoxae fidei expelli aut tradi vel protrahi confugas nec pro his venerabiles episcopos aut religiosos oeconomos exigi, quae debeantur ab eis: qui hoc moliri aut facere aut nuda saltim cogitatione atque tractatu ausi fuerint temptare, capitali et ultima supplicii animadversione plectendi sunt. ex his ergo Given March 23, at Constantinople, in the consulship of Bassus and Antiochus (431).

[4][242] The same Augusti to Hierius, Praetorian Prefect. pr. If a slave of any person should without warning, without anyone suspecting, rush into a church or to an altar while armed, he shall immediately be dragged away; or at least notice shall be given at once to his owner or to the person from whom such frenzied fear drove him, and the power to drag him away shall not be denied them. 1. But if through trust in arms, driven by madness, he takes courage to resist, his owner is permitted to drag him away and remove him with whatever force is necessary to accomplish this. And if it should happen that the slave is killed in the conflict and fight, the owner shall incur no liability; and there will be no grounds for bringing a criminal accusation, if a person who exchanges servile status for that of a public enemy and murderer is killed.

Given March 28, at Constantinople, in the consulship of Valerius and Aetius (432).

[5] Emperor MARCIAN Augustus to the people. We declare to all of you that you shall refrain from all sedition in sacrosanct churches and in other venerable places where prayers should be offered in peace and quiet. No one shall make an outcry, no one shall cause a riot or make an attack or attempt to gather or hold meetings by assembling a crowd in any part of a city, village, or any other place. For if anyone believes that something against the laws is being done to him by certain persons, he may approach the judge and demand lawful protection. Indeed, all shall know that if anyone attempts to do anything contrary to the provisions of this edict or to stir up sedition, he shall be subject to the ultimate punishment.

Given July 13, at Constantinople, in the consulship of Marcian, Augustus (451).

[6][243] Emperor LEO Augustus to Erythrius, Praetorian Prefect. pr. We decree by the present law, which shall be in force in all places – except in This Imperial City, in which We, dwelling by the grace of the deity, shall furnish immediate rulings when summoned for individual cases and persons, as the occasion requires – that no refugees of whatever status may be expelled, surrendered, or dragged out of the sacrosanct churches of the orthodox faith; nor shall debts owed by them be collected from the reverend bishops or pious stewards. Those who dare to plot or do or even merely contemplate it in mere thought and deliberation shall be stricken by capital and ultimate punishment. Therefore, from these places and their confines, which the provisions locis eorumque finibus, quos anteriorum legum praescripta sanxerunt, nullos expelli aut eici aliquando patimur nec in ipsis ecclesiis reverendis ita quemquam detineri atque constringi, ut ei aliquid aut victualium rerum aut vestis negetur aut requies. 1. Sed si quidem ipsi refugae apparent publice et se in sacris locis offerunt quaerentibus conveniendos, ipsi, servata locis reverentia, iudicum quibus subiacent sententiis moneantur, responsum daturi, quale sibi quisque perspexerit convenire. 2. Quod si in finibus ecclesiasticis latitant, religiosus oeconomus seu defensor ecclesiae vel certe, quem his negotiis commodiorem auctoritas episcopalis elegerit, reconditam latentemque personam decenter sine ullo incommodo monitus, intra fines ecclesiae si invenitur, praesentet.

[242] = C.Th. 9.45.5.
[243] Combine with C. 1.3.27 and 9.30.2.

3. Cum autem monitus fuerit in publico privatove contractu actione civili, in eius sit arbitrio sive per se seu, si magis elegerit, instructo sollemniter procuratore directo in eius iudicis, cuius pulsatur sententiis, examine respondere. 4. Sed si hoc facere detractat aut differt, iudiciorum legumque solitus ordo servetur. itaque si res immobiles possidet, post edictorum sollemnia sententia iudicantis usque ad modum debiti bonorum eius sive praediorum traditio seu venditio celebretur. 5. Quod si res mobiles habet easque extra terminos occultat ecclesiae, sententia iudicantis et executoris sollicitudine perquisitae, quocumque occultantur, erutae pro aequitatis tramite modoque debiti publicis rationibus privatisque proficiant. 6. Sane si intra fines habentur ecclesiae vel apud quemlibet ex clericis absconditae sive depositae fuisse firmantur, studio et providentia viri reverentissimi oeconomi sive defensoris ecclesiae diligentia inquisitae quolibet modo ad sacrosanctam ecclesiam pervenientes proferantur, ut pari aequitatis ordine ex isdem bonis fisco vel rei publicae sive creditoribus et quibuscumque iustis petitoribus ad modum debiti consulatur. 7. Sicubi depositae vel commendatae dicuntur, inquirendi tantam volumus esse cautelam, ut, si sola suspicatione apud aliquem adserantur absconditae, de sua etiam conscientia satisfacere auctoritate venerabilis antistitis iubeatur.

8. Adicientes, quod ea, quae de principalibus personis decrevimus, etiam in fideiussorum sive mandatorum seu rerum ad eos pertinentium vel familiarium et sociorum vel participum et omnino in isdem causis obnoxiorum personis praecipimus observari, scilicet si ipsos of former laws determined, We allow no one ever to be expelled or ejected, or to be detained or confined in the venerable churches themselves, so that either food or clothing or rest is denied him. 1. If the fugitives themselves appear in public and present themselves in sacred places to answer the summons of those who seek them, then, with due reverence for the places, they may be advised of the rulings of the judges who have jurisdiction over them and give such answer as each considers advantageous. 2. But if they remain hidden on church grounds, the pious steward or defender of the church, or whatever person the authority of the bishop has chosen as more suitable for this business, shall, when respectfully summoned, without suffering any inconvenience, present the person concealed and hidden, if he is found within the boundaries of the church.

3. Once the refugee has been cited in a civil action concerning a public or private contract, it shall be left to his discretion whether he responds personally before the tribunal of the judge, by whose order he is cited, or through a formally appointed procurator. 4. But if he declines or delays to do this, the customary procedure of the courts and laws shall be observed. Therefore, if he possesses immovable property, after the formalities of the edicts, the delivery or sale of his property or lands shall be executed in the amount of the debt by order of the judge. 5. But if he has movable property and hides it beyond the boundaries of the church, it shall be sought out, wherever it is hidden, by order of the judge and by the diligence of the court clerk (exsecutor); and when discovered, according to the course of equity and the amount of the debt, it shall go toward his public and private accounts. 6. If, however, this property is kept within the bounds of the church, or it is alleged to have been hidden or laid aside with a member of the clergy, it shall be sought by the zeal and foresight of the most reverent steward or by the diligence of the defender of the church; and, however it came to the sacrosanct church, it shall be brought forth, so that by fair observation of equity, from the same property the claims of the Treasury or State, or of creditors and just claimants of whatever kind, may be satisfied to the extent of the debt. 7. Whenever such property is said to have been laid aside or entrusted to someone, We desire that there be such caution in the search for it that, if it is asserted that it has been hidden with some clergyman, he shall be ordered by the authority of the reverend bishop to declare the extent of his knowledge to the satisfaction (of the latter).

8. Additionally, We order that what We have decreed concerning the principals shall also apply to their sureties, mandators, and their belongings, or servants and partners or associates, and, in a word, all persons liable in the same cases. Thus, namely, if the fugitives wish to have these persons with them within the boundaries of the church, public and private debts shall be paid quoque secum confugae intra ecclesiarum terminos habere voluerint, ut ex eorum quoque bonis publica debita privataque solvantur et per eos rerum ubicumque depositae sunt procedat inquisitio. et haec quidem de ingenuis liberisque personis. 9. Sane si servus aut colonus vel adscripticius, familiaris sive libertus et huiusmodi aliqua persona domestica vel condicioni subdita conquassatis rebus certis atque subtractis aut se ipsum furatus ad sacrosancta se contulerit loca, statim a religiosis oeconomis sive defensoribus, ubi primum hoc scire potuerint, <nuntientur, ut> per eos videlicet ad quos pertinent, ipsis praesentibus pro ecclesiastica disciplina et qualitate commissi aut ultione competenti aut intercessione humanissima procedente, remissione veniae et sacramenti interveniente securi ad locum statumque proprium revertantur, rebus, quas secum habuerint, reformandis. diutius enim eos intra ecclesiam non convenit commorari, ne patronis seu dominis per ipsorum absentiam obsequia iusta denegentur et ipsi per incommodum ecclesiae egentium et pauperum alantur expensis.

10. Inter haec autem, quae sedulo ad religiosi oeconomi sive defensoris ecclesiae sollicitudinem curamque respiciunt, erit etiam illud observandum, ut singulorum intra ecclesias confugientium personas causasque incessanter conquirant, denique iudices vel eos, ad quos causae et personae pertinent, instantius instruant, ut aequitatis convenientiam diligentius exequantur.

D. prid. k. Mart. Constantinopoli Leone A. III cons.

[7] Ὁ ἔχων ἀγωγὴν ἢ πρᾶγμα πρός τινα μὴ θορυβείτω τὰς ἐκκλησίας δι᾽ ἑαυτοῦ ἢ δι᾽ ἑτέρου, ἀλλὰ προσίτω τοῖς ἄρχουσιν. εἰ δὲ τοῦ βασιλέως ἐπὶ ἁμαρτήμασι χρῄζει, διὰ τοῦ ἀρχιεπισκόπου αὐτὸν διδασκέτω. ὁ δὲ παρὰ ταῦτα ποιῶν σωφρονίζεται.

[8] pr. Ὁσάκις ἐξ ἔθους κατὰ τὰς μεγάλας ἑορτὰς ἐν τῇ ἁγιωτάτῃ μεγάλῃ ἐκκλησίᾳ ἢ καὶ ἐν ἄλλαις ἐκκλησίαις προΐεμεν, ἐπιτρέπομεν τῷ ἐνδοξοτάτῳ ἡμῶν κοιαίστωρι τὰς αἰτήσεις τῶν δεομένων δέχεσθαί τε καὶ εἰς ἡμᾶς φέρειν. 1. Ὁ δὲ ταραχαῖς ἢ ἐκβοήσεσι χρώμενος κατὰ τὸν τῶν ἑορτῶν καιρὸν ἐν τῇ μεγάλῃ ἐκκλησίᾳ ἢ καὶ ἐν ἄλλαις ἐκκλησίαις ἐκπεσεῖται μὲν εὐθέως from their property too, and the investigation into the refugees' property, wherever it has been deposited, shall also affect them. These measures pertain to freeborn and free persons.

9. If, however, a slave, free or unfree tenant (colonus vel adscripticius), servant or freedman, and any household member of this sort or bound to this status goes to sacrosanct places after breaking and pilfering certain things or having stolen himself, then they shall immediately (be reported)[244] by the pious stewards or defenders, as soon as they are aware of the situation, (so that) the fugitives may safely return to their proper place and condition, namely through those to whom they belong, after, in the presence of the stewards or defenders, according to ecclesiastical discipline and the nature of the crime, either appropriate punishment has been meted out by those to whom they belong, or most compassionate intercession has been made, and forgiveness has been granted by pardon and on oath. The property that they had with them will be restored. For they should not linger within the church too long, or else legitimate duties shall be denied their patrons or masters by their absence, and they themselves must be fed from expenses for the poor and needy, to the detriment of the church.

10. Besides these matters that unremittingly pertain to the responsibility and duty of the pious steward or defender of the church, this too must be observed: that they tirelessly investigate the persons and cases of each person who takes refuge in churches and then urgently inform the governors or the persons to whom these cases and persons pertain, so that they may diligently carry out what justice requires.

Given February 28, at Constantinople, in the consulship of Leo Augustus, for the third time (466).[245]

[7][246] (...). Whoever has an action or suit against someone shall not disturb the churches in person or through another, but he shall approach the governors. If he needs the Emperor on account of the crimes, he shall inform him through the archbishop. Whoever acts contrary to these provisions will be punished.

[8][247] (...). pr. Whenever We go forth to the great feasts in the Most Holy Great Church or even in other churches, We entrust the petitions of those who seek to be admitted and brought before Us to Our vir illustrissimus Quaestor. 1. He who causes disorder or raises an outcry during the time of the feasts in the Great Church or even in other churches shall immediately lose his case, even if [244] There appears to be a lacuna in the text here after potuerint: e.g., <nuntientur ut> or <indicentur> (cf. C. 1.12.4).

[245] Seeck dates to March 6, 466.

[246] = Bas. 5.1.15 (worded differently).

[247] = Bas. 5.1.16.

τοῦ πράγματος, κἂν εὔλογον ἔχειν τι δόξειεν, ἐκβληθήσεται δὲ παρὰ τοῦ ἐπάρχου καὶ τιμωρίαις ὑποβληθήσεται. 2. Δυνατὸν δὲ πρόσωπον δεδιὼς διὰ τοῦ ἀρχιεπισκόπου ἡμῖν προσίτω ἢ τῶν ἐκκλησιεκδίκων.

XIII De His Qui in Ecclesiis Manumittuntur

[1] Imp. Constantinus A. ad Protogenem episcopum. Iam dudum placuit, ut in ecclesia catholica libertatem domini suis famulis praestare possint, si sub adspectu plebis adsistentibus Christianorum antistitibus id faciant, ut propter facti memoriam vice actorum interponatur qualiscumque scriptura, in qua ipsi vice testium signent. unde a vobis quoque ipsis non immerito dandae et relinquendae sunt libertates, quo quis vestrum pacto voluerit, dummodo vestrae voluntatis evidens appareat testimonium.

D. VI id. Iun. Sabino et Rufino conss.

[2] Idem A. Osio. Qui religiosa mente in ecclesiae gremio servulis suis meritam concesserint libertatem, eandem eodem iure donasse videantur, quo civitas Romana sollemnitatibus decursis dari consuevit. sed hoc dumtaxat his, qui sub adspectu antistitum dederint, placuit relaxari. clericis autem amplius concedimus, ut, cum suis famulis tribuunt libertatem, non solum in conspectu ecclesiae ac religiosi populi plenum fructum libertatis concessisse dicantur, verum etiam cum postremo iudicio dederint libertates seu quibuscumque verbis dari praeceperint, ita ut ex die publicatae voluntatis sine aliquo iuris teste vel interprete competat directa libertas.

D. XIIII k. Mai. Crispo II et Constantino II conss.

XIIII De Legibus Et Constitutionibus Principum et Edictis

[1] Imp. Constantinus A. Septimio Basso pu. Inter aequitatem iusque interpositam interpretationem nobis solis et oportet et licet inspicere.

D. III non. Dec. Sabino et Rufino conss.

it appears to have some substance; and he will be expelled by the Prefect (éparchos) and subjected to punishment. 2. One who fears a powerful person may approach Us through the archbishop or the defenders of the church.

Thirteenth Title Those Who Are Manumitted in Churches

[1] Emperor CONSTANTINE Augustus to Protogenes, Bishop. We decreed long ago that masters could give their servants freedom in a Catholic church, if they did so in the sight of the people and in the presence of Christian bishops, so that, in place of a public record so as to attest the deed, some sort of writing should be provided on which they put their seals in the place of witnesses. Hence freedom may be given or bequeathed by you, too, in whatever manner any of you desire, as long as there appears clear evidence of your assent.

Given June 8, in the consulship of Sabinus and Rufinus (316).[248]

[2][249] The same Augustus to Hosius. Those who piously give their slaves their deserved freedom in the bosom of the church shall appear to have given it by the same law whereby Roman citizenship is customarily awarded after the formal requirements have been observed. But We have resolved to relax this rule only for those who grant freedom in the presence of bishops. We grant more to clergymen, namely, that, when they give their servants their freedom, they shall be said to have granted the full fruits of liberty not only before the church and congregation, but also when they give freedom in a last will or order composed in whatever words, so that absolute liberty will be conferred from the day that their last wish is made public, without any legal witness or interpreter.

Given April 18, in the consulship of Crispus, for the second time, and of Constantine, for the second time (321).

Fourteenth Title Laws, Constitutions of the Emperors, and Edicts[250]

[1][251] Emperor CONSTANTINE Augustus to Bassus, Urban Prefect. We alone should be and are permitted to consider a legal formulation (interpretatio) that decides between the law and equity.

Given December 3, in the consulship of Sabinus and Rufinus (316).

[248] Seeck gives June 8, 323; Barnes argues for December 8, 316.
[249] = C.Th. 4.7.1.
[250] See D. 1.3–4.
[251] = C.Th. 1.2.3. Bassus' nomen Septimius appears in the Theodosian Code, but not in the first Code, and it has been omitted here (Corcoran, 429). Bassus was actually Urban Prefect in 317–319; Seeck dates to December 3, 317.

[2] Impp. Theodosius et Valentinianus AA. ad senatum. Quae ex relationibus vel suggestionibus iudicantium per consultationem in commune florentissimorum sacri nostri palatii procerum auditorium introducto negotio statuimus vel quibuslibet corporibus aut legatis aut provinciae vel civitati vel curiae donavimus, nec generalia iura sint, sed leges fiant his dumtaxat negotiis atque personis, pro quibus fuerint promulgata, nec ab aliquo retractentur: notam infamiae subituro eo, qui vel astute ea interpretari voluerit vel impetrato impugnare rescripto, nec habituro fructum per subreptionem eliciti: et iudices, si dissimulaverint vel ulterius litigantem audierint vel aliquid allegandum admiserint vel sub quodam ambiguitatis colore ad nos rettulerint, triginta librarum auri condemnatione plectendi sunt.

D. VIII id. Nov. Ravennae Theodosio XII et Valentiniano II AA. conss.

[3] Idem AA. ad senatum. pr. Leges ut generales ab omnibus aequabiliter in posterum observentur, quae vel missa ad venerabilem coetum oratione conduntur vel inserto edicti vocabulo nuncupantur, sive eas nobis spontaneus motus ingesserit sive precatio vel relatio vel lis mota legis occasionem postulaverit. nam satis est edicti eas nuncupatione censeri vel per omnes populos iudicum programmate divulgari vel expressius contineri, quod principes censuerunt ea, quae in certis negotiis statuta sunt similium quoque causarum fata componere. 1. Sed et si generalis lex vocata est vel ad omnes iussa est pertinere, vim obtineat edicti; interlocutionibus, quas in uno negotio iudicantes protulimus vel postea proferemus, non in commune praeiudicantibus, nec his, quae specialiter quibusdam concessa sunt civitatibus vel provinciis vel corporibus, ad generalitatis observantiam pertinentibus.

D. VIII id. Nov. Ravennae Theodosio XII et Valentiniano II AA. conss.

[4] Idem AA. ad Volusianum pp. Digna vox maiestate regnantis legibus alligatum se principem profiteri: adeo de auctoritate iuris nostra pendet auctoritas. et re vera maius imperio est submittere legibus

[2][252] Emperors THEODOSIUS and VALENTINIAN Augusti to the Senate. What We have decided with regard to a case brought before the common court of the most eminent noblemen of Our Sacred Palace, pursuant to reports and inquiries sent to consult (Our opinion); or what We have granted to any manner of corporation, or to ambassadors, or to a province, city, or curia, are not general law but are laws only for those cases and persons for whom they have been promulgated, and they shall not be reconsidered by anyone. Whoever seeks to interpret them cunningly or to overturn them by obtaining a rescript will suffer the mark of infamy (infamia), and the rescript that he has elicited through deception shall bear no fruit. And judges, if they feign ignorance or listen further to such a litigant or refer the case to Us on the pretext of doubt, shall be stricken by a fine of 30 pounds of gold.

Given November 6, at Ravenna, in the consulship of Theodosius, for the twelfth time, and Valentinian, for the second time, Augusti (426).

[3][253] The same Augusti to the Senate. pr. Laws that are contained in a legislative proposal (oratio) sent to your venerable assembly or that are called "edicts" with that term inserted, (no matter) whether a spontaneous impulse has suggested them to Us or a petition or report or pending lawsuit gives occasion for them, shall in the future be obeyed as general laws (leges generales) equally by all. For it is sufficient that the laws be distinguished by the designation "edict" or published for all peoples in the edict of the provincial governors, or that it be stated in them explicitly that what the Emperors have decided in specific lawsuits should decide the fate of similar cases. 1. And also if a law is called "general" or is ordered to apply to all people, it shall have the force of an edict. Interlocutory decisions, which We have issued or shall afterwards issue while trying a single case, shall not have the force of precedential rulings, and special grants to specific cities, provinces, or legal persons (corpora) shall not be considered general.

Given November 6, at Ravenna, in the consulship of Theodosius, for the twelfth time, and Valentinian, for the second time, Augusti (426).

[4][254] The same Augusti to Volusianus, Praetorian Prefect. It is a statement worthy of the majesty of a ruler to proclaim himself bound by the laws: so much does Our authority depend on the authority of the law. And in truth, to subject the sovereign power to the laws is something greater than imperial rule. And [252] Combine with C. 1.14.3, 1.19.7, 1.22.5, C.Th. 1.4.3; and cf. C. 6.55.11; Seeck dates to November 7, 426.

[253] See note on C. 1.14.2; Seeck dates to November 7, 426.
[254] = C. 11.71.5, possibly.

principatum. et oraculo praesentis edicti quod nobis licere non patimur indicamus.

D. III id. Iun. Ravennae Florentio et Dionysio conss.

[5] Idem AA. Florentio pp. pr. Non dubium est in legem committere eum, qui verba legis amplexus contra legis nititur voluntatem: nec poenas insertas legibus evitabit, qui se contra iuris sententiam scaeva praerogativa verborum fraudulenter excusat. nullum enim pactum, nullam conventionem, nullum contractum inter eos videri volumus subsecutum, qui contrahunt lege contrahere prohibente.

1. Quod ad omnes etiam legum interpretationes tam veteres quam novellas trahi generaliter imperamus, ut legis latori, quod fieri non vult, tantum prohibuisse sufficiat, cetera quasi expressa ex legis liceat voluntate colligere: hoc est ut ea quae lege fieri prohibentur, si fuerint facta, non solum inutilia, sed pro infectis etiam habeantur, licet legis lator fieri prohibuerit tantum nec specialiter dixerit inutile esse debere quod factum est. sed et si quid fuerit subsecutum ex eo vel ob id, quod interdicente lege factum est, illud quoque cassum atque inutile esse praecipimus.

2. Secundum praedictam itaque regulam, quam ubique servari factum lege prohibente censuimus, certum est nec stipulationem eiusmodi tenere nec mandatum ullius esse momenti nec sacramentum admitti.

D. VII id. April. Constantinopoli Theodosio A. XVII et Festo conss.

[6] Idem AA. Florentio pp. Quod favore quorundam constitutum est, quibusdam casibus ad laesionem eorum nolumus inventum videri.

D. k. Aug. Theodosio A. XVII et Festo conss.

[7] Idem AA. Cyro pp. et consuli designato. Leges et constitutiones futuris certum est dare formam negotiis, non ad facta praeterita revocari, nisi nominatim etiam de praeterito tempore adhuc pendentibus negotiis cautum sit.

D. non. April. Constantinopoli Valentiniano A. V et Anatolio conss.

by the oracular pronouncement of the present edict, We show what We do not allow Ourselves.

Given June 11, at Ravenna, in the consulship of Florentius and Dionysius (429).

[5][255] The same Augusti to Florentius, Praetorian Prefect. pr. There is no doubt that he who seizes upon the words of a law but strives against its spirit does it wrong; and he who deceitfully refutes the intention of a law by perversely giving preference to its wording will not escape the penalties contained in the laws. For We desire that no pact, no agreement, no contract shall appear to have been made between those who make a contract that the law prohibits them from making.

1. We order generally that this principle should also be applied to the interpretation of laws, both old and new: it shall suffice the legislator to have prohibited what he does not want to be done, while one may gather everything else (implied therein) from the intention of the law as if actually expressed; that is, if what is prohibited by a law is done, it is not only void but shall be considered as if it had never been done at all, even if the legislator only prohibits it from being done and does not specifically state that what has been done ought to be void. And if something comes about from or because of something done contrary to the law, We order that that too shall be null and void.

2. According to the aforementioned rule, therefore, which We have determined must be observed wherever the law forbids something to be done, it is clear that no stipulation of this kind is binding, no mandate has any force, and no oath is admissible.

Given April 7, at Constantinople, in the consulship of Theodosius Augustus, for the seventeenth time, and Festus (439).

[6][256] The same Augusti to Florentius, Praetorian Prefect. We do not wish what has been established for the benefit of certain persons to appear to have been devised to harm them in certain circumstances.

Given August 1, in the consulship of Theodosius Augustus, for the seventeenth time, and Festus (439).

[7] The same Augusti to Cyrus, Praetorian Prefect and Consul Designate. It is clear that laws and constitutions create a rule for future cases and cannot be applied retroactively to past acts, unless provision has expressly been made concerning the past for cases that are still pending.

Given April 5, at Constantinople, in the consulship of Valentinian Augustus and Anatolius (440).

[255] = Nov. Theod. 9; combine with C. 4.65.30.
[256] = Nov. Theod. 14.1.6 (September 7; Praetorian Prefect of the East and ex-Consul), C. 5.9.5.6.

[8] Idem AA. ad senatum. pr. Humanum esse probamus, si quid de cetero in publica vel in privata causa emerserit necessarium, quod formam generalem et antiquis legibus non insertam exposcat, id ab omnibus antea tam proceribus nostri palatii quam gloriosissimo coetu vestro, patres conscripti, tractari et, si universis tam iudicibus quam vobis placuerit, tunc allegata dictari et sic ea denuo collectis omnibus recenseri et, cum omnes consenserint, tunc demum in sacro nostri numinis consistorio recitari, ut universorum consensus nostrae serenitatis auctoritate firmetur. 1. Scitote igitur, patres conscripti, non aliter in posterum legem a nostra clementia promulgandam, nisi supra dicta forma fuerit observata. bene enim cognoscimus, quod cum vestro consilio fuerit ordinatum, id ad beatitudinem nostri imperii et ad nostram gloriam redundare.

D. XVI k. Nov. Aetio III et Symmacho conss.

[9] Impp. Valentinianus et Marcianus AA. ad Palladium pp. Leges sacratissimae, quae constringunt omnium vitas, intellegi ab omnibus debent, ut universi praescripto earum manifestius cognito vel inhibita declinent vel permissa sectentur. si quid vero in isdem legibus latum fortassis obscurius fuerit, oportet id imperatoria interpretatione patefieri duritiamque legum nostrae humanitati incongruam emendari.

D. prid. non. April. Constantinopoli Aetio et Studio vv. cc. conss.

[10] Αὐτοκράτορες Λέων καὶ Ἀνθέμιος AA. Πάντες κατὰ τοὺς νόμους πολιτευέσθωσαν, κἂν εἰ τῷ θείῳ διαφέροιεν οἴκῳ.

D. VI id. Febr. Anthemio A. II cons.

[11] Impp. Leo et Zeno AA. Cum de novo iure, quod inveterato usu non adhuc stabilitum est, dubitatio emergat, necessaria est tam suggestio iudicantis quam sententiae principalis auctoritas.

D. X k. Mai. Leone iuniore A. cons.

[8] The same Augusti to the Senate. pr. We approve it as sensible that, if hereafter something pressing emerges in a public or private case that demands a general provision not contained in former laws, it should first be considered both by all the nobles of Our Palace and by your most glorious assembly, conscript fathers; and, if both all the judges and you approve, then the materials gathered will be read and thus reviewed anew in full assembly; and when all agree, then at last they will be read aloud in the sacred consistory of Our Godhead, so that the consensus of all may be confirmed by the authority of Our Serenity. 1. Let you therefore know, conscript fathers, that no law at all shall be promulgated by Our Clemency unless the aforementioned rule is followed. For We know well that what has been ordained with your council redounds to the blessedness of Our Empire and to Our glory.

Given September 16,[257] in the consulship of Aetius, for the third time, and Symmachus (446).

[9][258] Emperors VALENTINIAN and MARCIAN Augusti to Palladius, Praetorian Prefect. The most sacred laws that bind the lives of all must be understood by all, so that by more clearly recognizing their precepts everyone may either avoid what is prohibited or follow what is permitted. If, though, something prescribed in these laws is perhaps obscure, it should be clarified by the interpretation of the Emperor, and any harshness of the laws inconsistent with Our Compassion should be corrected.

Given April 4, at Constantinople, in the consulship of the viri clarissimi Aetius and Studius (454).

[10][259] Emperors LEO and ANTHEMIUS Augusti ... to the Praetorian Prefect. Let all live in accordance with the laws, even if they belong to the Divine House.

Given February 8, in the consulship of Anthemius Augustus, for the second time (468).

[11] Emperors LEO and ZENO Augusti. If doubt should arise concerning a new law that has not yet been established by long usage, both a referral by the judge (to the Emperor) and the authority of an imperial decision is necessary.

Given April 22, in the consulship of LEO the Younger, Augustus (474).

257 Seeck dates to October 17.

258 = Nov. Marc. 4; combine with C. 5.5.7.

259 = Bas. 2.6.15. The inscription, restored from the subscription, now has been confirmed by a fragment of the first Code, C[1] 1.12.10 (Corcoran, 429).

[12] Imp. Iustinianus A. Demostheni pp. pr. Si imperialis maiestas causam cognitionaliter examinaverit et partibus cominus constitutis sententiam dixerit, omnes omnino iudices, qui sub nostro imperio sunt, sciant hoc esse legem non solum illi causae, pro qua producta est, sed omnibus similibus. 1. Quid enim maius, quid sanctius imperiali est maiestate? Vel quis tantae superbiae fastidio tumidus est, ut regalem sensum contemnat, cum et veteris iuris conditores constitutiones, quae ex imperiali decreto processerunt, legis vicem obtinere aperte dilucideque definiunt? 2. Cum igitur et hoc in veteribus legibus invenimus dubitatum, si imperialis sensus legem interpretatus est, an oporteat huiusmodi regiam interpretationem obtinere, eorum quidem vanam scrupulositatem tam risimus quam corrigendam esse censuimus.

3. Definimus autem omnem imperatoris legum interpretationem sive in precibus sive in iudiciis sive alio quocumque modo factam ratam et indubitatam haberi. si enim in praesenti leges condere soli imperatori concessum est, et leges interpretari solum dignum imperio esse oportet. 4. Cur autem ex suggestionibus procerum, si dubitatio in litibus oriatur et sese non esse idoneos vel sufficientes ad decisionem litis illi existiment, ad nos decurritur et quare ambiguitates iudicum, quas ex legibus oriri evenit, aures accipiunt nostrae, si non a nobis interpretatio mera procedit? Vel quis legum aenigmata solvere et omnibus aperire idoneus esse videbitur nisi is, cui soli legis latorem esse concessum est? 5. Explosis itaque huiusmodi ridiculosis ambiguitatibus tam conditor quam interpres legum solus imperator iuste existimabitur: nihil hac lege derogante veteris iuris conditoribus, quia et eis hoc maiestas imperialis permisit.

Recitata septimo milliario urbis Constantinopolitanae in novo consistorio palatii Iustiniani. D. III k. Nov. Decio vc. cons.

XV De Mandatis Principum

[1] Imppp. Gratianus Valentinianus et Theodosius AAA. ad Eusignium pp. Si quis adserat cum mandatis nostris se venisse secretis, omnes sciant nemini quicquam, nisi quod scriptis probaverit, esse credendum nec ullius dignitate terreri, sive ille tribuni sive notarii sive comitis praeferat dignitatem, sed sacras nostras litteras esse quaerendas.

D. XVI k. Iul. Veronae. accepta prid. k. Aug. Merobaude II et Saturnino conss.

[12] Emperor JUSTINIAN Augustus to Demosthenes, Praetorian Prefect. pr. If the Imperial Majesty has examined a case judicially and has given a decision with the parties at hand, then all judges who are under Our rule shall know that this is a law not only for the case for which it was given, but for all similar cases. 1. For what is greater, what is holier than imperial majesty? Or who is swollen with such arrogance of pride that he scorns royal opinion, when the founders of ancient law openly and clearly declare that constitutions proceeding from imperial decree have the force of law? 2. When We also found this doubted in the ancient laws, namely whether, if imperial opinion has interpreted a law, such an imperial interpretation should be valid, We both laughed at their empty subtlety and deemed it proper to correct it.

3. We therefore establish that every interpretation of the laws by the Emperor, whether with respect to petitions or trials, or made in any other manner, shall be considered valid and unquestionable. For, if at present it is permitted to the Emperor alone to make laws, it is also worthy of the imperial power alone to interpret laws. 4. For why do the nobles resort to Us through their official letters (suggestiones) if doubt arises in lawsuits and not consider themselves suitable or able to decide the case, and why do Our ears receive the uncertainties of the judges, which are bound to arise in the laws, if true interpretation does not proceed from Us? Or who will seem fit to resolve the riddles of the laws and make them plain to all, if not he who alone is permitted to legislate? 5. Having rejected these absurd doubts, the Emperor alone will rightly be considered the founder and interpreter of the laws; this law in no way detracts from the founders of old law, because imperial majesty granted them this authority too.

Read aloud at the seventh milestone of the City of Constantinople, in the New Consistory of the Palace of Justinian. Given October 30, in the consulship of the vir clarissimus Decius (529).

Fifteenth Title Mandates of the Emperors[260]

[1][261] Emperors GRATIAN, VALENTINIAN, and THEODOSIUS Augusti to Eusignius, Praetorian Prefect. If anyone claims that he has come with secret mandates of Ours, all shall know that they should trust no one in anything except what he proves in writing, nor should they be intimidated by anyone's rank, whether he boasts the rank of Tribune, Notary, or Count; but Our sacred letters must be demanded.

Given June 16, at Verona; received July 31, in the consulship of Merobaudes, for the second time, and of Saturninus (383).

[260] See D. 1.4. Imperial mandates (mandata) are instructions sent by the emperor to magistrates.
[261] = C.Th. 1.3.1 (where Eusignius is Proconsul of Africa, correctly).

[2] Αὐτοκράτορες Ἰουστῖνος καὶ Ἰουστινιανὸς AA. pr. Θεσπίζομεν μηδένα τῶν ἐνδοξοτάτων ἡμῶν ἀρχόντων μεγίστων ἢ μέσων ταῖς οἰκείαις ἐγγράφειν ψήφοις, ὡς θείῳ ῥήματι προσετάξαμεν ἀγώγιμον γενέσθαι τινὰ ἢ διάξιμον ἢ ἄλλο τι ψηφισθῆναι τῶν ὅσα πράττεται παρ' αὐτοῖς, πλὴν ὅσον ἐν ταῖς τῶν δικαστῶν ἢ συνδικαστῶν δόσεσιν ὀρθῶς φέρεσθαι τὰς ψήφους τὰς μνημονευούσας ἄγραφον ἡμετέραν γεγενῆσθαι θείαν κέλευσιν τὸν δικαστὴν διδοῦσαν ἢ συνδικαστήν· 1. Ὡσαύτως καὶ τὸν ἐνδοξότατον κοιαίστωρα τοῦ θείου ἡμῶν παλατίου καὶ τοὺς περιβλέπτους ῥεφερενδαρίους τῆς ἡμετέρας εὐσεβείας ὀρθῶς τὴν ἄγραφον ἡμῶν θείαν κέλευσιν τὴν γενομένην ἐπὶ τοῖς προσιοῦσιν καὶ δικαστὴν ἤτοι συνδικαστὴν αἰτοῦσιν ἢ ἄλλο τι τῶν εἰς τὰς δίκας τεινόντων διὰ καταθέσεως παρασκευάζειν γίνεσθαι φανεράν· ἐπὶ τούτῳ γὰρ δὴ καὶ μόνῳ τὴν τῆς ἀγράφου κελεύσεως μνήμην γίνεσθαι συγχωροῦμεν.

XVI De Senatus Consultis

[1] Imppp. Valentinianus Theodosius et Arcadius AAA. ad senatum. Quamvis consultum senatus perpetuam per se obtineat firmitatem, tamen etiam nostris legibus idem prosequimur adicientes, ut, si quisquam speciali supplicatione eliciendum aliquod rescriptum temptaverit, ut transire ei formam liceat statutorum, tertia patrimonii parte multatus et damnatus ambitus crimine maneat infamis.

D. VII k. Aug. Heracleae Ricomere et Clearcho conss.

[2] ...

XVII De Veteri Iure Enucleando et Auctoritate Iuris Prudentium Qui in Digestis Referuntur

[1] Imp. Iustinianus A. Triboniano viro eminentissimo quaestori sacri palatii. pr. Deo auctore nostrum gubernantes imperium, quod nobis a caelesti maiestate traditum est, et bella feliciter peragimus et pacem decoramus et statum rei publicae sustentamus: et ita nostros animos

[2][262] (Emperors JUSTIN and JUSTINIAN Augusti.) pr. We decree that none of Our viri gloriosissimi administrators of the highest or middle rank shall write in their own decisions that We have ordered by divine speech that someone should be summoned to court or transferred (to another court), or that anything else among the matters in question before them was decided (by Us), except that, in connection with the appointment of judges or advisors (syndikastai), those decisions are rightly made which record that Our unwritten divine order appointed the judge or advisor. 1. Similarly, also the Most Illustrious Quaestor of Our Divine Palace and the viri spectabiles referendaries of Our Piety should make known by their deposition (katathesis) Our unwritten divine order concerning those approaching Us and requesting a judge or advisor or something else pertaining to their cases. In this case, and in this alone, do We permit record to be made of an unwritten order.

(527)

Sixteenth Title Decrees of the Senate[263]

[1] Emperors VALENTINIAN, THEODOSIUS, and ARCADIUS Augusti to the Senate. Although a decree of the Senate has permanent validity in itself, still We pursue the same purpose with Our laws by adding that if anyone attempts to solicit any rescript by special request so that he might transgress the statutes, he shall be fined one-third of his property, condemned for the crime of corrupt solicitation (ambitus), and remain infamous (infamis).

Given July 26, at Heraclea, in the consulship of Richomer and Clearchus (384).[264]

[2] (Emperor JUSTINIAN Augustus ...).[265]

Seventeenth Title The Clarification of Ancient Law and the Authority of the Jurists Who Are Cited in the Digest

[1][266] Emperor JUSTINIAN AUGUSTUS to Tribonian, vir eminentissimus, Quaestor of the Sacred Palace. pr. By the grace of God governing Our empire, which was entrusted to Us by heavenly majesty, We both felicitously conclude 262 = Bas. 2.6.19 = C¹ 1.13.2. The inscription is restored from Nov. 124.4. The fragment of the first Code makes no mention of Justin, but this must be an error (Corcoran). Lounghis et al. date this constitution to between April 4 and August 1, 527.

263 See D. 1.3.

264 Seeck gives July 25, 384.

265 A Greek constitution has been lost. It must have dated after 529, since it was not present in the first Code (Corcoran).

266 = D. praef. 1. This constitution of 530, known by its opening words as Deo auctore, authorizes the compilation of Justinian's Digest.

ad dei omnipotentis erigimus adiutorium, ut neque armis confidamus neque nostris militibus neque bellorum ducibus vel nostro ingenio, sed omnem spem ad solam referamus summae providentiam trinitatis: unde et mundi totius elementa processerunt et eorum dispositio in orbem terrarum producta est. 1. Cum itaque nihil tam studiosum in omnibus rebus invenitur quam legum auctoritas, quae et divinas et humanas res bene disponit et omnem iniquitatem expellit, repperimus autem omnem legum tramitem, qui ab urbe condita et Romuleis descendit temporibus, ita esse confusum, ut in infinitum extendatur et nullius humanae naturae capacitate concludatur: primum nobis fuit studium a sacratissimis retro principibus initium sumere et eorum constitutiones emendare et viae dilucidae tradere, quatenus in unum codicem congregatae et omni supervacua similitudine et iniquissima discordia absolutae universis hominibus promptum suae sinceritatis praebeant praesidium.

2. Hocque opere consummato et in uno volumine nostro nomine praefulgente coadunato, cum ex paucis et tenuioribus relevati ad summam et plenissimam iuris emendationem pervenire properaremus et omnem Romanam sanctionem et colligere et emendare et tot auctorum dispersa volumina uno codice indita ostendere, quod nemo alius neque sperare neque optare ausus est, res quidem nobis difficillima, immo magis impossibilis videbatur. sed manibus ad caelum erectis et aeterno auxilio invocato eam quoque curam nostris reposuimus animis, deo freti, qui et res penitus desperatas donare et consummare suae virtutis magnitudine potest. 3. Et ad tuae sinceritatis optimum respeximus ministerium tibique primo et hoc opus commisimus, ingenii tui documentis ex nostri codicis ordinatione acceptis, et iussimus quos probaveris tam ex facundissimis antecessoribus quam ex viris disertissimis togatis fori amplissimae sedis ad sociandum laborem eligere. his itaque collectis et in nostrum palatium introductis nobisque tuo testimonio placitis totam rem faciendam permisimus, ita tamen, ut tui vigilantissimi animi gubernatione res omnis celebretur.

4. Iubemus igitur vobis antiquorum prudentium, quibus auctoritatem conscribendarum interpretandarumque legum sacratissimi principes praebuerunt, libros ad ius Romanum pertinentes et legere et elimare, ut ex his omnis materia colligatur, nulla secundum quod possibile est neque similitudine neque discordia derelicta, sed ex his hoc wars, adorn peace, and uphold the condition of the State; and We so lift up Our thoughts to the aid of Almighty God that We trust neither in arms, nor in Our soldiers, nor in leaders of war or in Our own intellect, but We place all Our hope in the providence of the Supreme Trinity alone, whence both the elements of the whole universe derived and their arrangement was brought forth into the world. 1. And although nothing so desirable is found in anything as in the authority of the laws, which well orders affairs both human and divine and banishes all injustice, We discovered that the whole course of the laws, which descends from the foundation of the City and the time of Romulus, had become so confused that it stretched on interminably and could not be compassed by the faculties of any human nature. Our first desire was to begin with the most sacred emperors of the past and amend and set their constitutions on the clear path, so that, collected in a single book (codex) and purged of all superfluous repetition and most unjust contradiction, they might afford all mankind the protection of their purity.

2. Once this work had been completed and united in one volume with Our name shining before it, We hastened to rise from trifles few in number to achieve the most ambitious, most extensive emendation of the law: both to collect and amend all Roman legislation (sanctio)[267] and to present in one volume the scattered works of so many authors, a project for which no other has dared either to hope or to wish and which appeared to Us most difficult, indeed even impossible. But lifting up Our hands to Heaven and imploring the aid of the Eternal, We preserved even this ambition in Our mind, trusting in God, who in the greatness of His power can both grant and bring to fruition utterly desperate undertakings. 3. And We considered the excellent service of Your Sincerity and entrusted you foremost also with this work, having received proof of your genius in the compilation of Our Code; and We commanded you to select from among the most articulate of your professors (antecessores) as well as the most eloquent of the pleaders of the Most Exalted Court (of the Praetorian Prefect) those whom you approved to share in your labor. Once these men had been assembled and brought into Our Palace, and We were satisfied on the strength of your testimony, We entrusted the entire undertaking to them; on the condition, though, that it should be carried out entirely under the direction of your most attentive mind.

4. We therefore order you to read and refine the books on Roman law by the ancient jurists to whom the most sacred emperors granted the authority to draft and interpret laws, so that the whole substance may be gleaned from them and all repetition and contradiction omitted; only what alone will stand for all shall be collected. As for other authors who have written books on the colligi, quod unum pro omnibus sufficiat. quia autem et alii libros ad ius pertinentes scripserunt, quorum scripturae a nullis auctoribus receptae nec usitatae sunt, neque nos eorum volumina nostram inquietare dignamur sanctionem.

[267] It appears that Tribonian is using sanctio like νομοθεσία, to mean "lawmaking" in general.

5. Cumque haec materia summa numinis liberalitate collecta fuerit, oportet eam pulcherrimo opere extruere et quasi proprium et sanctissimum templum iustitiae consecrare et in libros quinquaginta et certos titulos totum ius digerere tam secundum nostri constitutionum codicis quam edicti perpetui imitationem, prout hoc vobis commodius esse patuerit, ut nihil extra memoratam consummationem possit esse derelictum, sed his quinquaginta libris totum ius antiquum, per millesimum et quadringentesimum paene annum confusum et a nobis purgatum, quasi quodam muro vallatum nihil extra se habeat: omnibus auctoribus iuris aequa dignitate pollentibus et nemini quadam praerogativa servanda, quia non omnes in omnia, sed certi per certa vel meliores vel deteriores inveniuntur.

6. Sed neque ex multitudine auctorum quod melius et aequius est iudicatote, cum possit unius forsitan et deterioris sententia et multos et maiores in aliqua parte superare. et ideo ea, quae antea in notis Aemilii Papiniani ex Ulpiano et Paulo nec non Marciano adscripta sunt, quae antea nullam vim obtinebant partim propter honorem splendidissimi Papiniani, non statim respuere, sed, si quid ex his ad repletionem summi ingenii Papiniani laborum vel interpretationem necessarium esse perspexeritis, et hoc ponere legis vicem obtinens non moremini: ut omnes qui relati fuerint in hunc codicem prudentissimi viri habeant auctoritatem tam, quasi et eorum studia ex principalibus constitutionibus profecta et a nostro divino fuerint ore profusa. omnia enim merito nostra facimus, quia ex nobis omnis eis impertietur auctoritas. nam qui non subtiliter factum emendat, laudabilior est eo qui primus invenit.

7. Sed et hoc studiosum vobis esse volumus, ut, si quid in veteribus non bene positum libris inveniatis vel aliquod superfluum vel minus perfectum, supervacua similitudine semota et quod imperfectum est repleatis et omne opus moderatum et quam pulcherrimum ostendatis. hoc etiam nihilo minus observando, ut, si aliquid in veteribus legibus vel constitutionibus, quas antiqui in suis libris posuerunt, non recte scriptum inveniatis, et hoc reformetis et ordini moderato tradatis: ut hoc videatur esse verum et optimum et quasi ab initio scriptum, quod a vobis electum et ibi positum fuerit, et nemo ex comparatione veteris voluminis quasi vitiosam scripturam arguere audeat. cum enim law but whose writings have not been received or used by any authors, We will not suffer their works to disturb Our legislation.

5. And once this material has, by the supreme generosity of the Godhead, been collected, you shall set it forth in a work of the greatest beauty and thus dedicate it, as it were, as a proper and most holy temple to justice; and you shall arrange the entire law in fifty books and specific titles, in imitation both of Our Code of Constitutions[268] and of the Perpetual Edict, as far as this should be convenient to you to do, so that nothing should be left out of the aforementioned compilation; but all the ancient law, in a state of confusion for some 1,400 years and now distilled by Us, should in these fifty books, as if fortified by a wall, have nothing outside itself. All authors of the law shall enjoy equal rank, and no special authority shall be attributed to any one of them, because not every author in every respect, but rather certain authors in certain respects are either better or worse.

6. But let you not judge what is better and more just in the multitude of authors, since the opinion of a single lesser writer might in some respect be superior to many greater authors. Hence, you should not forthwith reject the comments of Ulpian, Paul, and Marcian in their notes on Aemilius Papinian, which previously had no validity partly on account of the honor due the most eminent Papinian; but if you discern something in them required to supplement or interpret the works of the highest genius of Papinian, you shall not hesitate to include it as having the force of law. Thus, all the most learned jurists included in this codex shall have such authority as if their efforts had derived from imperial constitutions and had been uttered by Our divine mouth. Indeed, We rightly make all their works Our own, since all authority imparted them derives from Us; for he who improves something made without refinement deserves higher praise than he who first created it.

7. But We desire that you give heed to this too: if you find something poorly argued in the old books, or something superfluous or somewhat incomplete, you shall remove superfluous repetition, supplement what is incomplete, and present the entire work as balanced and as attractive as possible. You must nonetheless observe the following: if you find anything incorrectly written in the ancient laws or constitutions that the ancients cite in their books, you shall amend it and put it in judicious order, so that what you have excerpted and placed there will seem to be genuine and the best version, and as if it had originally been written so; and no one may dare impugn the text as faulty through comparison with an old book. For since by the ancient law called the Royal law (lex regia) all law and all power of the Roman people were transferred to the power of the Emperor, and since We do not divide all the legislation into lege antiqua, quae regia nuncupabatur, omne ius omnisque potestas populi Romani in imperatoriam translata sunt potestatem, nos vero sanctionem omnem non dividimus in alias et alias conditorum partes, sed totam nostram esse volumus, quid possit antiquitas nostris legibus abrogare? et in tantum volumus eadem omnia, cum reposita sunt, obtinere, ut si aliter fuerant apud veteres conscripta, in contrarium autem in compositione inveniantur, nullum crimen scripturae imputetur, sed nostrae electioni hoc adscribatur.

[268] This is the first Code, promulgated in 529.

8. Nulla itaque in omnibus praedicti codicis membris antinomia (sic enim a vetustate Graeco vocabulo nuncupatur) aliquem sibi vindicet locum, sed sit una concordia, una consequentia, adversario nemine constituto. 9. Sed et similitudinem (secundum quod dictum est) ab huiusmodi consummatione volumus exulare: et ea, quae sacratissimis constitutionibus quas in codicem nostrum redegimus cauta sunt, iterum poni ex veteri iure non concedimus, cum divalium constitutionum sanctio sufficit ad eorum auctoritatem: nisi forte vel propter divisionem vel propter repletionem vel propter pleniorem indaginem hoc contigerit: et hoc tamen perraro, ne ex continuatione huiusmodi lapsus oriatur aliquid in tali prato spinosum.

10. Sed et si quae leges in veteribus libris positae iam in desuetudinem abierunt, nullo modo vobis easdem ponere permittimus, cum haec tantummodo obtinere volumus, quae vel iudiciorum frequentissimus ordo exercuit vel longa consuetudo huius almae urbis comprobavit, secundum Salvii Iuliani scripturam, quae indicat debere omnes civitates consuetudinem Romae sequi, quae caput est orbis terrarum, non ipsam alias civitates. Romam autem intellegendum est non solum veterem, sed etiam regiam nostram, quae deo propitio cum melioribus condita est auguriis.

11. Ideoque iubemus duobus istis codicibus omnia gubernari, uno constitutionum, altero iuris enucleati et in futuro codice componendi: vel si quid aliud a nobis fuerit promulgatum institutionum vicem obtinens, ut rudis animus studiosi simplicibus enutritus facilius ad altioris prudentiae redigatur scientiam.

12. Nostram autem consummationem, quae a vobis deo adnuente componetur, digestorum vel pandectarum nomen habere sancimus, nullis iuris peritis in posterum audentibus commentarios illi adplicare et verbositate sua supra dicti codicis compendium confundere: quemadmodum et in antiquioribus temporibus factum est, cum per contrarias interpretantium sententias totum ius paene conturbatum est: sed sufficiat per indices tantummodo et titulorum subtilitatem quae

this and that part according to its authors, but want the whole to be Ours, how could antiquity repeal any of Our laws? In fact, We desire that all this material, once it has been compiled, be valid to the extent that if it was written differently by the ancients but is found to state the opposite in Our compilation, no fault should be found with the text, but rather the discrepancy should be attributed to Our decision.

8. Thus no contradictory law – for so it is named by antiquity with this Greek word (antinomía) – shall stand in any part of the aforementioned codex, but there shall be one harmony, one logic, with no one to oppose it. 9. And We also want repetition, as has been said, to be banished from this compilation; and We do not permit the provisions established in the most sacred constitutions that We have brought together in Our Code to be included again in the old law, for the sanction of the divine constitutions suffices for their authority, unless this should occur perchance to provide distinctions, supplements, or fuller context, and even then very sparingly, lest any thorns grow in this (legal) garden because of repetition of this oversight.

10. And if any laws included in the old books have already fallen into disuse, We by no means permit you to include them, since We wish only such rules to be in force as either the overwhelming number of courts has followed or longstanding practice of This Generous City has approved, in accordance with the writing of Salvius Julian that states that all cities ought to follow the practice of Rome, the head of the world, and not Rome follow other cities. Not only old Rome, though, should be understood, but also Our Royal City, which by the grace of God was founded under better auspices.

11. We therefore order that all things shall be governed by these two books (codices), the one of imperial constitutions (the Code), the other of the clarified law to be compiled in a future book (the Digest); or if any other work having the force of Institutes is promulgated by Us, so that the untutored mind of the student, nourished on simple principles, may more readily be brought to learn higher jurisprudence.

12. We decree that Our compilation, which, with the help of God, shall be assembled by you, shall bear the name of Digest or Pandects (digesta vel pandectae). No jurists shall hereafter dare to insert any commentary in it or to confuse the concision of the above-mentioned book (the Digest) by their own verbosity, as was done in earlier times, when the entire law was virtually thrown into chaos by the contradictory opinions of its interpreters; but it shall suffice to give some instructions only through indices and plain headings, called paratitla nuncupantur quaedam admonitoria eius facere, nullo ex interpretatione eorum vitio oriundo. 13. Ne autem per scripturam aliqua fiat in posterum dubitatio, iubemus non per siglorum captiones et compendiosa aenigmata, quae multas per se et per suum vitium antinomias induxerunt, eiusdem codicis textum conscribi: etiam si numerus librorum significatur aut aliud quicquam: nec haec etenim per specialia sigla numerorum manifestari, sed per litterarum consequentiam explanari concedimus.

14. Haec omnia igitur deo placido facere tua prudentia una cum aliis facundissimis viris studeat et tam subtili quam celerrimo fini tradere, ut codex consummatus et in quinquaginta libros digestus nobis offeratur in maximam et aeternam rei memoriam deique omnipotentis providentiae argumentum nostrique imperii vestrique ministerii gloriam.

Data octavo decimo kalendas Ianuarias Constantinopoli Lampadio et Oreste viris clarissimis consulibus.

[2] Imp. Caesar Flavius Iustinianus A. ad senatum et omnes populos. pr. Tanta circa nos divinae humanitatis est providentia, ut semper aeternis liberalitatibus nos sustentare dignetur. post bella enim Parthica aeterna pace sopita postque Vandalicam gentem ereptam et Carthaginem, immo magis omnem Libyam Romano imperio iterum sociatam et leges antiquas iam senio praegravatas per nostram vigilantiam praebuit in novam pulchritudinem et moderatum pervenire compendium: quod nemo ante nostrum imperium umquam speravit neque humano ingenio possibile esse penitus existimavit. erat enim mirabile Romanam sanctionem ab urbe condita usque ad nostri imperii tempora, quae paene in mille et quadringentos annos concurrunt, intestinis proeliis vacillantem hocque et in imperiales constitutiones extendentem in unam reducere consonantiam, ut nihil neque contrarium neque idem neque simile in ea inveniatur et ne geminae leges pro rebus singulis positae usquam appareant. namque hoc caelestis quidem providentiae peculiare fuit, humanae vero imbecillitati nullo modo possibile. nos itaque more solito ad immortalitatis respeximus praesidium et summo numine invocato deum auctorem et totius operis praesulem fieri optavimus et omne studium Triboniano viro excelso magistro officiorum et ex quaestore sacri nostri palatii et ex consule credidimus eique omne ministerium huiuscemodi ordinationis imposuimus, ut ipse una cum aliis illustribus et prudentissimis viris nostrum desiderium adimpleret.

paratitla, whereby no defect can arise from their interpretation. 13. Moreover, so there shall be no doubts as to the text, We order that the text of this codex shall not be written with deceptive symbols and puzzling abbreviations, which in themselves and through their defects have created numerous cases of contradictory law, even if the number of books is indicated or some other such thing: We do not allow even these to be indicated by special numerical symbols (of abbreviation), but they must be made intelligible by the ordinary sequence of letters.

14. Your Prudence, therefore, together with other most eloquent men, shall strive, God willing, to accomplish all these things and bring them to a concise and most rapid conclusion, so that the work, compiled and arranged in fifty books, may be presented to Us as the greatest, eternal monument of the undertaking, as proof of the providence of Almighty God, and to the glory of Our rule and your service.

Given on December 15, in Constantinople, in the consulship of the viri clarissimi Lampadius and Orestes (530).

[2][269] Emperor Caesar Flavius JUSTINIAN Augustus to the Senate and to all peoples. pr. So great is the providence of divine compassion toward Us that it ever deigns to sustain Us with acts of eternal generosity: for after the Parthian wars had been stilled in eternal peace, and after the Vandal race had been destroyed and Carthage – indeed all Libya – rejoined to the Roman Empire, it granted that the ancient laws, already bowed down with age, should by Our care win new beauty and moderate brevity, a feat which no one before Our reign ever expected or thought attainable by human ingenuity. It was indeed astounding to bring into uniform harmony Roman legislation from the founding of the city to the time of Our reign, a period of almost 1,400 years, shaken by internal battles[270] that extended also to the imperial constitutions, so that no contradiction, repetition, or restatement should be found in it, and no two laws ever appear included concerning a single question. This indeed was the work of heavenly providence, by no means possible for human frailty. We, therefore, in Our accustomed manner, looked to the aid of Immortality, and calling on the Supreme Deity, prayed that God be the author and patron of the whole work, and We entrusted the entire effort to Tribonian, vir excelsus, Master of Offices, Ex-Quaestor of the Sacred Palace and Ex-Consul, and We laid upon him the entire task of this compilation,[271] so that he, together with other illustrious and most learned men, might fulfill Our desire. Our Majesty too, supported by the [269] = D. praef. 3, called the Constitutio Tanta from first word; compare the Greek version, C. Δέδωκεν = D. praef. 4. It promulgates the Digest as law.

[270] Justinian means unresolved legal controversies.
[271] The word ordinatio suggests both the compilation of the Digest and Justinian's decree (cf. "ordinance") to compile the Digest, which Tribonian thereby fulfilled.

nostra quoque maiestas semper investigando et perscrutando ea quae ab his componebantur, quidquid dubium et incertum inveniebatur, hoc numine caelesti erecta emendabat et in competentem formam redigebat. omnia igitur confecta sunt domino et deo nostro Ihesu Christo possibilitatem tam nobis quam nostris in hoc satellitibus praestante.

1. Et principales quidem constitutiones duodecim libris digestas iam ante in codicem nostro nomine praefulgentem contulimus. postea vero maximum opus adgredientes ipsa vetustatis studiosissima opera iam paene confusa et dissoluta eidem viro excelso permisimus tam colligere quam certo moderamini tradere. sed cum omnia percontabamur, a praefato viro excelso suggestum est duo paene milia librorum esse conscripta et plus quam tricies centena milia versuum a veteribus effusa, quae necesse esset omnia et legere et perscrutari et ex his si quid optimum fuisset eligere. Quod caelesti fulgore et summae trinitatis favore confectum est secundum nostra mandata, quae ab initio ad memoratum virum excelsum fecimus, et in quinquaginta libros omne quod utilissimum erat collectum est et omnes ambiguitates decisae nullo seditioso relicto. nomenque libris imposuimus digestorum seu pandectarum, quia omnes disputationes et decisiones in se habent legitimas et quod undique fuit collectum, hoc in sinus suos receperunt, in centum quinquaginta paene milia versuum totum opus consummantes. et in septem partes eos digessimus, non perperam neque sine ratione, sed in numerorum naturam et artem respicientes et consentaneam eis divisionem partium conficientes.

2. Igitur prima quidem pars totius contextus, quae Graeco vocabulo πρῶτα nuncupatur, in quattuor libros seposita est. 3. Secundus autem articulus septem libros habet, qui de iudiciis appellantur. 4. In tertia vero congregatione omnia quae de rebus nominantur contulimus, octo libris eis deputatis.

5. Quartus autem locus, qui et totius compositionis quasi quidam invenitur umbilicus, octo libros suscepit. in quibus omnia quae ad hypothecam pertinent reposita sunt, ut non a pigneraticia actione in libris de rebus posita multum distarent: alio libro eodem inserto volumine, quae aedilicium edictum et redhibitoriam actionem et duplae stipulationem, quae de evictionibus proposita est, continet, quia haec omnia titulis emptionum et venditionum consentanea sunt et praedictae actiones quasi pedisequae illarum ab initio processerunt, in vetustioris quidem edicti ordinatione in loca devia et multo distantia devagantes, per nostram autem providentiam his congregatae, cum oportuerat ea

Heavenly Godhead, by always following and examining what was compiled by these men, amended and put in the appropriate form whatever was found to be doubtful and uncertain. Everything has been done, therefore, Our Lord and God Jesus Christ giving both Us and Our attendants in this enterprise the ability to complete it.

1. And indeed We have already placed the constitutions of the Emperors, arranged in twelve books, in the Code illuminated by Our name. As We afterward undertook the greatest work, We permitted the same man, vir excelsus, to collect and reduce in size the most learned works of antiquity, already nearly confused and destroyed. But as We investigated all the particulars, it was intimated to Us by the aforementioned vir excelsus that nearly two thousand books had been written and more than three million lines poured forth by the ancients, all of which it was necessary to read and examine and to excerpt from them whatever was best. This was accomplished by the heavenly radiance and grace of the Supreme Trinity according to Our instructions, which We gave the aforesaid man, vir excelsus, at the outset; and everything that was most useful was collected in fifty books, and all ambiguities were resolved and no discordant passage left behind. We gave these books the name Digest or Pandects, because they contain all legal questions and decisions, and they take into their fold what was compiled from every source, bringing the entire work to almost one hundred and fifty thousand lines. And We have arranged the books into seven parts, not wrongly nor without reason, but with respect for the nature and art of numbers,[272] and to make the division into parts correspond to them.

2. The first part of the whole compilation, which in Greek is called prota ("first things"), has been placed in four books (books 1–4). 3. The second section has seven books, which are called "On Trials" (de iudiciis, books 5–11). 4. In the third group, We have placed everything that is called "On Things" (de rebus), with eight books assigned to it (books 12–19).

5. The fourth place, which appears, as it were, as the center (umbilicus) of the whole compilation, contains eight books (books 20–27). In these are placed (first) everything that relates to real security arrangements (hypothecae), so that it might not stand too far apart from the action on a pledge (actio pigneraticia), which has been put in the books "On Things." Another book, which contains the Edict of the Aediles, the action for cancellation of a sale (actio redhibitoria), and the stipulation to return double the price received (stipulatio duplae) that is given in the event of eviction, has been inserted in the same section, because all of these subjects are related to the titles on purchases and sales, and the aforementioned actions have proceeded from the beginning virtually as their attendants. In the arrangement of the old quae de eodem paene loquuntur in confinio ponere. alius itaque liber post duo primos nobis excogitatus est de usuris et traiecticiis pecuniis et de instrumentis et testibus et probationibus nec non praesumptionibus. et memorati tres singulares libri iuxta compositionem de rebus positi sunt. post hos si qua de sponsalibus vel nuptiis vel dotibus legibus dicta sunt reposuimus, tribus librorum voluminibus ea concludentes. de tutelis autem et curationibus geminos libros conscripsimus. et memoratam ordinationem octo librorum mediam totius operis reposuimus, omnia undique tam utilissima quam pulcherrima iura continentem.

[272] Presumably because of the significance of the number 7 in Christian scripture.

6. Quintus autem exoritur nobis digestorum articulus, in quo de testamentis et codicillis tam privatorum quam militum omne, quidquid antiquis dictum est, inveniat quis depositum: qui de testamentis appellatur. de legatis autem et fideicommissis quinque librorum numerus adgregatus est. 6a. Cumque nihil tam peculiare fuerat, quam ut legatis quidem legis Falcidiae narratio, fideicommissis autem senatus consulti Trebelliani, singulis libris utrique eorum applicatis tota pars quinta in novem libros coadunata est. solum autem senatus consultum Trebellianum ponendum esse existimavimus: captiosas etenim et ipsis veteribus odiosas Pegasiani senatus consulti ambages et utriusque senatus consulti ad se tam supervacuas quam scrupulosas diversitates respuentes totum ius super his positum Trebelliano senatus consulto adiudicavimus. 6b. Sed in his nihil de caducis a nobis memoratum est, ne causa, quae in rebus non prospere gestis et tristibus temporibus Romanis increbuit calamitatibus, bello coalescens civili, nostris remaneant temporibus, quae favor caelestis et pacis vigore firmavit et super omnes gentes in bellicis victoriis posuit, ne luctuosum monumentum laeta saecula inumbrare concedatur.

7. Sexta deinde pars digestorum exoritur, in quibus omnes bonorum possessiones positae sunt, quae ad ingenuos, quae ad libertinos respiciunt: ut et ius omne, quod de gradibus et adfinitatibus descendit, legitimaeque hereditates et omnis ab intestato successio et Tertullianum et Orfitianum senatus consultum, ex quibus matres et filii invicem sibi heredes existunt, in geminos libros contulimus, bonorum possessionis multitudinem in compendiosum et manifestissimum ordinem concludentes. 7a. Post haec ea, quae de operis novi nuntiationibus damnique infecti et pro aedificiis dirutis et eorum insidiis et quae de aqua pluvia arcenda veteribus auctoribus placita sunt, nec non de publicanis et donationibus tam inter vivos quam mortis causa conficiendis (Praetor's) Edict, indeed, they had wandered to places remote and very distant, but by Our providence they have been put into the same group, as it was only right that discussions of almost identical subjects should be placed next to one another. Another book has been devised by Us after the first two, concerning interest, maritime loans (pecuniae maritimae), documents, witnesses, proofs, and presumptions. And the three aforementioned books are placed next to the section "On Things." We placed after these anything that discussed laws of betrothal, marriage, and dowries, confining these subjects to the space of three books. We have compiled two books on tutelage and guardianship. And We placed the aforementioned series of eight books at the middle of the whole work, containing within it both the most advantageous and finest laws gathered from all quarters.

6. Next comes the fifth section of Our compilation (books 28–36), in which one may find everything said by the ancients concerning wills and codicils, both of private citizens and of soldiers; which section is called "On Wills." Five books in number "On Legacies and Trusts" are included in these. 6a. Since there was nothing so closely related as an account of the Lex Falcidia on legacies, or the SC Trebellianum on trusts, the fifth part concludes with single books dedicated to both these subjects, which bring the sum to nine books. We have decided to cite only the SC Trebellianum. We reject the insidious obscurities of the SC Pegasianum, loathed by the ancients themselves, and the differences, as unnecessary as they are involved, between both decrees of the Senate, and We have assigned all the law concerning them to the SC Trebellianum. 6b. But in all this, We have made no mention of escheats (caduca), lest a subject of law that proliferated during the disasters and dark times of Rome and drew strength from civil war remain in Our age, which heavenly favor has both fortified with flourishing peace and set above all nations in victory in war, so that no melancholy memorial is permitted to overshadow a joyful age.

7. Next begins the sixth part of the Digest (books 37–44), in which (first) are placed all forms of the possession of an estate (bonorum possessio) that concern free-born persons and freedmen. And all the law that derives from degrees of relationship and kinship by marriage, as well as statutory inheritance and every kind of intestate succession, and the SC Tertullianum and SC Orfitianum, whereby mothers and sons become heirs to one another, (all this) We have put in two books, thus confining the numerous forms of the possession of property to an abridged and eminently clear exposition. 7a. After this, We have brought into a single book the resolutions of the ancient authors concerning protestations of new structures (operis novi nuntiationes) and threatened damage (damnum infectum), concerning collapsed buildings and their dangers, and cauta legibus invenimus, in librum singularem deduximus. 7b. De manumissionibus autem et de liberali causa alius liber respondit: 7c. Quemadmodum et de adquisitione tam dominii quam possessionis et titulis qui eam inducunt multae et variae lectiones uni sunt insertae volumini: 7d. Alio libro deputato his, qui iudicati vel in iure confessi sunt, et de bonorum detentionibus et venditionibus et ut ne quid in fraudem creditorum fiat. 7e. Postque haec omnia interdicta glomerata sunt: et deinceps exceptiones et de temporum prolixitatibus et de obligationibus et actionibus liber iterum singularis extenditur: ut praefata sexta pars totius digestorum voluminis octo libris definiatur.

8. Septimus autem et novissimus articulus digestorum sex libris formatus est. quo de stipulationibus seu verborum obligationibus et fideiussoribus et mandatoribus, nec non novationibus et solutionibus et acceptilationibus et de praetoriis stipulationibus omne quod ius invenitur gemino volumine inscriptum est, quod in libris antiquis nec numerari possibile fuit. 8a. Et post hoc duo terribiles libri positi sunt pro delictis privatis et extraordinariis nec non publicis criminibus, qui omnem continent severitatem poenarumque atrocitatem. quibus permixta sunt et ea quae de audacibus hominibus cauta sunt, qui se celare conantur et contumaces existunt: et de poenis, quae condemnatis infliguntur vel conceduntur, nec non de eorum substantiis. 8b. Liber autem singularis pro appellationibus nobis excogitatus est contra sententias tam civiles quam criminales causas finientes. 8c. Cetera autem omnia, quae ad municipales vel de decurionibus et muneribus vel publicis operibus vel nundinis et pollicitationibus ac diversis cognitionibus et censibus vel significatione verborum veteribus inventa sunt quaeque regulariter definita, in se recepit quinquagesimus, totius consummationis perfectus.

9. Quae omnia confecta sunt per virum excelsum nec non prudentissimum magistrum ex quaestore et ex consule TRIBONIANUM, qui similiter eloquentiae et legitimae scientiae artibus decoratus et in ipsis rerum experimentis emicuit nihilque maius nec carius nostris umquam iussionibus duxit: nec non per alios viros magnificos et studiosissimos perfecta sunt, id est CONSTANTINUM virum illustrem comitem sacrarum largitionum et magistrum scrinii libellorum sacrarumque cognitionum, qui semper nobis ex bona opinione et gloria sese commendavit: nec non THEOPHILUM virum illustrem magistrum iurisque peritum in hac splendidissima civitate laudabiliter optimam legum gubernationem extendentem: et DOROTHEUM virum illustrem et facundissimum quaestorium, quem in Berytiensium splendidissima concerning the course of rainwater, as well as the provisions of the laws that We found concerning publicans and gifts both among the living and in anticipation of death. 7b. Manumissions and disputes concerning free status (liberalis causa) are the subjects of another book. 7c. In the same manner, also the many various passages on the acquisition of ownership and possession and the grounds that bring these about have been placed in a single book. 7d. Another book has been dedicated to those against whom judgment has been rendered or who have confessed at law, as well as on the subject of the detention and sale of the property (of insolvents) and to prevent fraud against creditors. 7e. After this, all interdicts are lumped together; then come defenses, and again a single book encompasses lapses of time, obligations and actions. Thus the aforementioned sixth part of the whole Digest is limited to eight books.

8. The seventh and last section of the Digest consists of six books (books 45–50). All the law that is found concerning stipulations or verbal obligations, sureties and mandators, as well as novations, payments of debt, formal releases, and Praetorian stipulations, has been set down in two books, which in the ancient books it was impossible even to count. 8a. And two terrifying books are placed after this, concerning private and extraordinary delicts and public crimes, which contain all the severity and harshness of the punishments. Mixed in with these are the provisions concerning reckless men who attempt to hide themselves and are found in contempt, and concerning the punishment inflicted on condemned persons or remitted, and concerning their property. 8b. We have devised a single book on appeals against rulings made both in civil and in criminal cases. 8c. Everything else that has been devised and regulated by the ancients on municipal authorities or about decurions and liturgies or public works or markets and promises made to municipalities (pollicitationes) and various trials, property assessments, and the meaning of words has been included in the fiftieth book, which thus completes the entire compilation.

9. All this has been completed by the outstanding (excelsus) and most learned Master (of Offices), Ex-Quaestor, and Ex-Consul, Tribonian, who is adorned alike by the arts of eloquence and of legal science, who has attained eminence in the trials of affairs, and who has never considered anything more important or dearer to himself than Our commands; and this task has been executed also by other magnificent and most scholarly men, that is to say: Constantine, vir illustris, Count of the Imperial Finances and Master of the Bureau of Petitions and of the Sacred Courts, whose good repute and distinction has always commended him to Us; and Theophilus, vir illustris, civitate leges discipulis tradentem propter eius optimam opinionem et gloriam ad nos deduximus participemque huius operis fecimus: sed et ANATOLIUM virum illustrem magistrum, qui et ipse apud Berytienses iuris interpres constitutus ad hoc opus adlectus est, vir ab antiqua stirpe legitima procedens, cum et pater eius Leontius et avus Eudoxius post Patricium inclutae recordationis quaestorium et antecessorem et Leontium virum gloriosissimum praefectorium et consularem atque patricium filium eius optimam sui memoriam in legibus reliquerunt: nec non CRATINUM virum illustrem et comitem sacrarum largitionum et optimum antecessorem huius almae urbis constitutum: qui omnes ad praedictum opus electi sunt una cum STEPHANO, MENA, PROSDOCIO, EUTOLMIO, TIMOTHEO, LEONIDE, LEONTIO, PLATONE, IACOBO, CONSTANTINO, IOHANNE, viris prudentissimis, qui patroni quidem sunt causarum apud maximam sedem praefecturae, quae orientalibus praetoriis praesidet, omne[xxiii] autem suae virtutis testimonium undique accipientes et a nobis ad tanti operis consummationem electi sunt. et cum omnes in unum convenerunt gubernatione TRIBONIANI viri excelsi, ut tantum opus nobis auctoribus possint conficere, deo propitio in quinquaginta libros opus consummatum est.

10. Tanta autem nobis antiquitati habita est reverentia, ut nomina prudentium taciturnitati tradere nullo patiamur modo: sed unusquisque eorum, qui auctor legis fuit, nostris digestis inscriptus est: hoc tantummodo a nobis effecto, ut, si quid in legibus eorum vel supervacuum vel imperfectum aut minus idoneum visum est, vel adiectionem vel deminutionem necessariam accipiat et rectissimis tradatur regulis. et ex multis similibus vel contrariis quod rectius habere apparebat, hoc pro aliis omnibus positum est unaque omnibus auctoritate indulta, ut quidquid ibi scriptum est, hoc nostrum appareat et ex nostra voluntate compositum: nemine audente comparare ea quae antiquitas habebat his quae nostra auctoritas introduxit, quia multa et maxima sunt, quae propter utilitatem rerum transformata sunt. adeo ut et si principalis constitutio fuerat in veteribus libris relata, neque ei pepercimus, sed et hanc corrigendam esse putavimus et in melius restaurandam. nominibus etenim veteribus relictis, quidquid legum veritati decorum et necessarium fuerat,[xxiv] hoc nostris emendationibus servavimus. et propter hanc causam et si quid inter eos dubitabatur, hoc iam in tutissimam pervenit quietem, nullo titubante relicto.

[xxiii] omnes
[xxiv] fuerit

teacher and jurist, who commendably propagates the excellent governance of the laws in This Most Splendid City; and DOROTHEUS, vir illustris and most eloquent quaestorian (senator), whom, when he was engaged in teaching the laws to his students in the most splendid city of Berytus, We brought to Us and made to share in this work on account of his outstanding reputation and fame; and also ANATOLIUS, vir illustris, teacher, who also being an interpreter of the law in Berytus was summoned for this task, a man of ancient stock, for both his father Leontius and his grandfather Eudoxius, after Patricius of illustrious memory, of quaestorian rank and a professor and Leontius his son, vir gloriosissimus, of prefectural and consular rank and a patrician, left behind an excellent monument to themselves in the laws; and CRATINUS, vir illustris, Count of the Imperial Finances and outstanding professor of This Generous City. All these were chosen for the above-mentioned work together with STEPHANUS, MENAS, PROSDOCIUS, EUTOLMIUS, TIMOTHEUS, LEONIDES, LEONTIUS, PLATO, JACOBUS, CONSTANTINE, JOHN, most learned men, who are advocates at the supreme tribunal of the prefecture that presides over the governors of the East; but all have gathered testimony of their excellence from all quarters and were chosen by Us to carry out this work so great. And when all had come together under the direction of TRIBONIAN, vir excelsus, to execute this great work at Our initiative, the work was, by the grace of God, completed in fifty books.

10. So great is Our reverence for antiquity, moreover, that We by no means suffer the names of the jurists to be consigned to oblivion, but each one of those who authored a law has been recorded in Our Digest. We ensured only that if something in their laws seemed either superfluous, imperfect, or unsuitable, it should be supplemented or abridged as necessary and brought into harmony with the most correct rules. And of many redundant or contradictory passages, whatever appeared most correct was included in preference to all the others; and the same authority has been granted all passages, so that whatever is written there should be considered Ours and composed at Our desire. No one shall dare to compare what former times had with what Our authority has introduced, because many things of the greatest importance have been altered by reason of practical utility. Indeed, even if an imperial constitution had been cited in the old books, We did not spare it but deemed this too in need of correction and updating for the better. Leaving intact the old names, We exempted from Our emendations whatsoever was appropriate and indispensable for the authenticity of the laws. And for this reason, whatever was uncertain among the ancients has now attained the most assured calm, and no source of indecision has been left.

11. Sed cum prospeximus, quod ad portandam tantae sapientiae molem non sunt idonei homines rudes et qui in primis legum vestibulis stantes intrare ad arcana eorum properant, et aliam mediocrem eruditionem praeparandam esse censuimus, ut sub ea colorati et quasi primitiis omnium imbuti possint ad penetralia eorum intrare et formam legum pulcherrimam non coniventibus oculis accipere. et ideo TRIBONIANO viro excelso, qui ad totius operis gubernationem electus est, nec non THEOPHILO et DOROTHEO viris illustribus et facundissimis antecessoribus accersitis mandavimus, quatenus libris, quos veteres composuerunt, qui prima legum argumenta continebant et institutiones vocabantur, separatim collectis, quidquid ex his utile et aptissimum et undique sit elimatum et rebus, quae in praesenti aevo in usu vertuntur, consentaneum invenitur, hoc et capere studeant et quattuor libris reponere et totius eruditionis prima fundamenta atque elementa ponere, quibus iuvenes suffulti possint graviora et perfectiora legum scita sustentare. admonuimus autem eos, ut memores etiam nostrarum fiant constitutionum, quas pro emendatione iuris promulgavimus, et in confectione institutionum etiam eadem emendatione ponere non morentur: ut sit manifestum et quid antea vacillabat et quid postea in stabilitatem redactum est. quod opus ab his perfectum ut nobis oblatum et relectum est, et prono suscepimus animo et nostris sensibus non indignum esse iudicavimus et praedictos libros constitutionum vicem habere iussimus: quod in oratione nostra, quam eisdem libris praeposuimus, apertius declaratur.

12. Omni igitur Romani iuris dispositione composita et in tribus voluminibus, id est institutionum et digestorum seu pandectarum nec non constitutionum, perfecta et in tribus annis consummata, quae ut primum separari coepit, neque in totum decennium compleri sperabatur: omnipotenti deo et hanc operam ad hominum sustentationem piis obtulimus animis uberesque gratias maximae deitati reddidimus, quae nobis praestitit et bella feliciter agere et honesta pace perpotiri et non tantum nostro, sed etiam omni aevo tam instanti quam posteriori leges optimas ponere.

Omnibus itaque hominibus eandem sanctionem manifestam facere necessarium esse perspeximus, ut sit eis cognitum, quanta confusione et infinitate absoluti in quantam moderationem et legitimam veritatem pervenerunt: legesque in posterum habeant tam directas quam compendiosas omnibusque in promptu positas et ad possidendi libros earum facilitatem idoneas: ut non mole divitiarum expensa possint homines supervacuae legum multitudinis adipisci volumina, sed

11. But when We observed that the uneducated and those standing at the vestibule of the laws, hastening to enter its inner chambers (arcana), are unable to sustain the mass of such great wisdom, We deemed that a different, intermediate source of instruction should be prepared, so that instilled and imbued by it, as it were, with the first fruits of all the law, they might be able to enter its innermost recesses and behold the exquisite beauty of the law with eyes wide open. Therefore, We summoned TRIBONIAN, vir excelsus, who was chosen to direct the entire work, and THEOPHILUS and DOROTHEUS, viri illustres and most eloquent professors, and charged them to gather singly the books composed by the ancients that contained the first principles of the laws and were called Institutes, and to take whatever in them was useful, most apt, and thoroughly polished, and what corresponded to the principles that are in use in the present age; to put that in four books, and to lay the first foundations and elements of all instruction, so that the young, supported thereby, might endure the weightier and more refined rules of the law. We instructed them to bear in mind also Our constitutions, which We have promulgated to amend the law, and in compiling the Institutes not to hesitate to cite passages using the same method of emendation, so that it will be obvious what previously wavered and what afterward has been made stable. This, the work completed by these men, as it was delivered to Us and reviewed, We received readily and judged it to be not unworthy of Our intentions, and We ordered that the aforementioned books have the force of constitutions. This is expressed more plainly in Our address, which We placed at the head of those books.

12. Thus the entire assemblage of Roman law has been compiled, completed in three volumes, that is, the Institutes, Digest or Pandects, and Constitutions (the first Code), and finished in three years, a work which, when the materials first began to be divided, was not expected to be finished in ten years. We have piously offered this work to Almighty God for the preservation of mankind, and We have given ample thanks to the Supreme Deity, who has enabled us to wage wars successfully, to win an honorable peace, and to lay down the best laws not only for Our own but for every age, both present and future.

We thus perceived that it was necessary to make the same legislation known to all men, so that they might know from what state of confusion and inexhaustible material they have been released and at what state of judiciousness and legal accuracy they have arrived. They shall hereafter have both direct and concise laws ready at hand for everyone and easily acquired in books. Thus men need not acquire volumes containing a multitude of superfluous laws at an enormous expense of riches, but the purchase of the laws shall be a simple vilissima pecunia facilis eorum comparatio pateat tam ditioribus quam tenuioribus, minimo pretio magna prudentia reparanda.

13. Si quid autem in tanta legum compositione, quae ab immenso librorum numero collecta est, simile forsitan raro inveniatur, nemo hoc vituperandum existimet, sed primum quidem imbecillitati humanae, quae naturaliter inest, hoc inscribat, quia omnium habere memoriam et penitus in nullo peccare divinitatis magis quam mortalitatis est: quod et a maioribus dictum est. deinde sciat, quod similitudo in quibusdam et his brevissimis adsumpta non inutilis est, et nec citra nostrum propositum hoc subsecutum: aut enim ita lex necessaria erat, ut diversis titulis propter rerum cognationem applicari eam oporteat, aut, cum fuerat aliis diversis permixta, impossibile erat eam per partes detrahi, ne totum confundatur. et in his partibus, in quibus perfectissimae visiones expositae veterum fuerant, quod particulatim in eas fuerat sparsum, hoc dividere ac separare penitus erat incivile, ne tam sensus quam aures legentium ex hoc perturbentur. 14. Similique modo si quid principalibus constitutionibus cautum est, hoc in digestorum volumine poni nullo concessimus modo, quasi constitutionum recitatione sufficiente: nisi et hoc raro ex isdem causis, quibus similitudo adsumpta est.

15. Contrarium autem aliquid in hoc codice positum nullum sibi locum vindicabit nec invenitur, si quis subtili animo diversitatis rationes excutiet: sed est aliquid novum inventum vel occulte positum, quod dissonantiae querellam dissolvit et aliam naturam inducit discordiae fines effugientem. 16. Sed et si quid forsitan praetermissum est, quod in tantis milibus quasi in profundo positum latitabat, et, cum idoneum fuerat poni, obscuritate involutum necessario derelictum est: quis hoc apprehendere[xxv] recto animo possit? primo quidem propter ingenii mortalis exiguitatem: deinde propter ipsius rei vitium, quod multis inutilibus permixtum nullam sui ad eruendum praebuit copiam: deinde quod multo utilius est pauca idonea effugere, quam multis inutilibus homines praegravari.

17. Mirabile autem aliquid ex his libris emersit, quod multitudo antiqua praesente brevitate paucior invenitur. homines etenim, qui antea lites agebant, licet multae leges fuerant positae, tamen ex paucis lites perferebant vel propter inopiam librorum, quos comparare eis impossibile affair for the smallest amount of money, for both rich and poor, and great legal expertise shall had at a trifling price.

[xxv] reprehendere

13. If, though, some repetition is perhaps occasionally found in so great a compilation of laws, which has been collected from an immense number of books, no one should think this deserving of criticism, but should rather ascribe it to human frailty, which is part of our nature, because only a divine rather than a mortal nature could remember everything and err in nothing, as indeed our ancestors also said. Next, one should know that the repetition included in some of these very brief excerpts is not without advantage, but has occurred according to Our design: either a law was so important that it had to be inserted in different titles, because the subjects were related; or, although it had already been introduced in other, different titles, it was impossible to remove it from some passages without confounding everything. And in those passages in which the most perfect views of the ancients were expressed, it would have been altogether uncivil to cut out and remove what had been scattered progressively throughout, disturbing thereby both the understanding and the ears of the readers. 14. In like manner, where any provision was made by imperial constitutions, We have by no means allowed it to be included in the Digest, since a reading of the constitutions (i.e., the Code) suffices, with exception made – and that seldom – for the same reasons for which repetition is admitted.

15. Anything contradictory included in this book will claim no place in it or even be found, if one carefully examines the reasons for the discrepancy: something new has been devised or tacitly inserted that refutes the complaint of contradiction and introduces a new aspect that goes beyond the limits of the discrepancy. 16. But even if something has been overlooked, which lurks in the depths among so many thousands (of books) and, although it was suitable to include, was inevitably left covered in darkness – who in his right mind could fault this? First of all, on account of the weakness of the mortal mind; second, on account of the difficulty of the thing itself: inserted among many unusable passages, it presented no means of extracting it. Moreover, it is much better that a few suitable passages escape than that men be encumbered with many unusable ones.

17. Something remarkable has emerged from these books: the multitude of ancient books seems smaller than the present brevity (of the Digest). Although many laws had been laid down, men who litigated in the past conducted their suits on the basis of few, whether because of the scarcity of books, which it was erat, vel propter ipsam inscientiam, et voluntate iudicum magis quam legitima auctoritate lites dirimebantur. in praesenti autem consummatione nostrorum digestorum e tantis leges collectae sunt voluminibus, quorum et nomina antiquiores homines non dicimus nesciebant, sed nec umquam audiebant. quae omnia collecta sunt substantia amplissima congregata, ut egena quidem antiqua multitudo inveniatur, opulentissima autem brevitas nostra efficiatur. antiquae autem sapientiae librorum copiam maxime Tribonianus vir excellentissimus praebuit, in quibus multi fuerant et ipsis eruditissimis hominibus incogniti, quibus omnibus perlectis, quidquid ex his pulcherrimum erat, hoc semotum in optimam nostram compositionem pervenit. sed huius operis conditores non solum ea volumina perlegerunt, ex quibus leges positae sunt, sed etiam alia multa, quae, nihil vel utile vel novum in eis invenientes, quod exceptum nostris digestis applicarent, optimo animo respuerunt.

18. Sed quia divinae quidem res perfectissimae sunt, humani vero iuris condicio semper in infinitum decurrit et nihil est in ea, quod stare perpetuo possit (multas etenim formas edere natura novas deproperat), non desperamus quaedam postea emergi negotia, quae adhuc legum laqueis non sunt innodata. si quid igitur tale contigerit, Augustum imploretur remedium, quia ideo imperialem fortunam rebus humanis deus praeposuit, ut possit omnia quae noviter contingunt et emendare et componere et modis et regulis competentibus tradere. et hoc non primum a nobis dictum est, sed ab antiqua descendit prosapia: cum et ipse Iulianus legum et edicti perpetui subtilissimus conditor in suis libris hoc rettulit, ut, si quid imperfectum inveniatur, ab imperiali sanctione hoc repleatur. et non ipse solus, sed et divus Hadrianus in compositione edicti et senatus consulto, quod eam secutum est, hoc apertissime definivit, ut, si quid in edicto positum non inveniatur, hoc ad eius regulas eiusque coniecturas et imitationes possit nova instruere auctoritas.

19. Haec igitur omnia scientes, patres conscripti et omnes orbis terrarum homines, gratias quidem amplissimas agite summae divinitati, quae vestris temporibus tam saluberrimum opus servavit: quo enim antiquitas digna divino non est visa iudicio, hoc vestris temporibus indultum est. hasce itaque leges et adorate et observate omnibus antiquioribus quiescentibus: nemoque vestrum audeat vel comparare eas prioribus vel, si quid dissonans in utroque est, requirere, quia omne quod hic positum est hoc unicum et solum observari censemus. nec in iudicio nec in alio certamine, ubi leges necessariae sunt, ex aliis libris, nisi ab isdem institutionibus nostrisque digestis et constitutionibus a impossible for them to buy, or because of their own ignorance; and trials were resolved rather at the discretion of the judges than by the authority of the law. In the present compilation of Our Digest, however, the laws have been collected from so many volumes that the ancients – We will not say they did not know their names, but had never even heard of them. By collecting all these volumes, such extensive material has been assembled that the former abundance appears poor indeed, but Our compendium has been made most rich. Especially Tribonian, vir excellentissimus, provided access to books of ancient wisdom, in which were many authors unknown to the most erudite men themselves. After reading all these, the finest passages in them were excerpted and entered Our excellent compilation. But the authors of this work read not only the volumes in which the laws were recorded but also many others in which they found nothing useful or new that they might excerpt and insert in Our Digest, and most reasonably rejected.

18. Because things divine are most perfect but the condition of human law is to run on indefinitely, and there is nothing in it that can last forever – for nature hastens to produce many new forms – We have no doubt that cases shall emerge that are not enmeshed in the bonds of the present laws. If, then, some such thing should occur, let the august aid (of the Emperor) be sought, because God set the fortune of the Emperor over human affairs so that he might both remedy, resolve, and regulate by appropriate measures and rules all new controversies that arise. We are not the first to state this, but it descends from ancient stock: Julian himself, that most acute author of laws and of the Perpetual Edict, also relates in his books that, if anything should be found defective, it should be supplemented by imperial decree. Indeed not only he, but also the divine Hadrian, in the compilation of the Edict and in the decree of the senate that followed, most manifestly laid down that if anything was not found included in the edict, new authority (of later emperors) could establish it according to its rules and inferences and analogies based thereon.

19. Knowing all these things, therefore, conscript fathers and all people all over the world, give fullest thanks to the Supreme Deity, who reserved so beneficial a work for your times: whereas antiquity was not deemed worthy of it by divine judgment, it has been bestowed on your times. Therefore, both revere and keep these laws, and let all older laws lapse. Let no one among you dare either to compare them to earlier laws or to investigate whether there is any discrepancy between them, because We deem that all that has been included here should be observed alone and exclusively. And let no one, in a trial or in another dispute where laws are required, attempt either to recite or produce anything from any books other than the aforementioned Institutes and Our Digest and the Constitutions compiled or promulgated by Us, unless the nobis compositis vel promulgatis aliquid vel recitare vel ostendere conetur, nisi temerator velit falsitatis crimini subiectus una cum iudice, qui ei audientiam accommodabit, poenis gravissimis laborare.

20. Ne autem incognitum vobis fiat, ex quibus veterum libris haec consummatio ordinata est, iussimus et hoc in primordiis digestorum nostrorum inscribi, ut manifestissimum sit, ex quibus legis latoribus quibusque libris eorum et quot milibus hoc iustitiae Romanae templum aedificatum est. 20a. Legis latores autem vel commentatores eos elegimus, qui digni tanto opere fuerant et quos et anteriores piissimi principes admittere non sunt indignati, omnibus uno dignitatis apice impertito nec sibi quodam aliquam praerogativam vindicante. cum enim constitutionum vicem et has leges obtinere censuimus quasi ex nobis promulgatas, quid amplius aut minus in quibusdam esse intellegatur, cum una dignitas, una potestas omnibus est indulta?

21. Hoc autem, quod et ab initio nobis visum est, cum hoc opus fieri deo adnuente mandabamus, tempestivum nobis videtur et in praesenti sancire, ut nemo neque eorum, qui in praesenti iuris peritiam habent, nec qui postea fuerint audeat commentarios isdem legibus adnectere: nisi tantum si velit eas in Graecam vocem transformare sub eodem ordine eaque consequentia, sub qua voces Romanae positae sunt (hoc quod Graeci κατὰ πόδα dicunt), et si qui forsitan per titulorum subtilitatem adnotare maluerint et ea quae παράτιτλα nuncupantur componere. alias autem legum interpretationes, immo magis perversiones eos iactare non concedimus, ne verbositas eorum aliquid legibus nostris adferat ex confusione dedecus. quod et in antiquis edicti perpetui commentatoribus factum est, qui opus moderate confectum huc atque illuc in diversas sententias producentes in infinitum detraxerunt, ut paene omnem Romanam sanctionem esse confusam. quos si passi non sumus, quemadmodum posteritatis admittatur vana discordia? si quid autem tale facere ausi fuerint, ipsi quidem falsitatis rei constituantur, volumina autem eorum omnimodo corrumpentur. si quid vero, ut supra dictum est, ambiguum fuerit visum, hoc ad imperiale culmen per iudices referatur et ex auctoritate Augusta manifestetur, cui soli concessum est leges et condere et interpretari.

22. Eandem autem poenam falsitatis constituimus et adversus eos, qui in posterum leges nostras per siglorum obscuritates ausi fuerint conscribere. omnia enim, id est et nomina prudentium et titulos et librorum numeros, per consequentias litterarum volumus, non per sigla manifestari, ita ut, qui talem librum sibi paraverit, in quo sigla posita sunt in qualemcumque locum libri vel voluminis, sciat inutilis violator, charged with the crime of forgery (falsitas) together with the judge who lets him be heard, wishes to suffer the harshest punishment.

20. That it not be unknown to you from which books this compilation has been prepared, We have ordered that this too be listed at the beginning of Our Digest, so that it may be absolutely clear from which authors of the laws and from which of their books, and from how many thousands, this temple to Roman justice has been built. 20a. We chose those authors of the law or commentators who were worthy of so great a work, and those whom also the most pious earlier emperors did not disdain to admit. One and the same degree of rank has been conferred on all of them, and none of them claims any precedence for himself. For since We have ruled that these laws should have the force of constitutions, as if promulgated by Us, how might anything more or less be thought to reside in some of them, when the same rank, the same force has been conferred on all?

21. This too, upon which We were resolved even from the beginning, when with blessing of God We commissioned the execution of this work, seems to Us timely to decree now: no one, neither those who at present have knowledge of the law nor those who come afterward, shall dare to attach any commentary to the aforesaid laws, unless he wishes to translate them into the Greek tongue in the same order and sequence in which the Roman words stand – which the Greeks call kata poda ("following on the heels") – or if some prefer to make annotations to clarify the titles and compose what are called paratitla (introductory notes). We forbid them to add other interpretations, or rather perversions, of the laws, lest their prolixity introduce disgraceful confusion to Our laws. Such happened with the ancient commentators on the Perpetual Edict, who pulled a work of moderate size this way and that with different opinions and extended it to an interminable length, so that almost all Roman legislation was thrown into confusion. If We refuse to suffer them, how then should the vain controversies of posterity be allowed? But if they dare to do such a thing, they shall be charged with forgery and their works will be utterly destroyed. If, however, as stated above, something should appear ambiguous, this shall be reported to the Imperial Majesty by the judges and clarified by the august authority (of the Emperor), to whom alone it is permitted to establish and interpret laws.

22. We fix the same penalty of forgery for those who hereafter should dare to write Our laws in obscure symbols. For We desire that everything, that is, the names of the jurists, the titles, and the book numbers, be indicated by series of letters, not symbols. Thus, he who buys such a book in which symbols appear in any passage of the book or volume shall know that he is the owner of an unusable book, for We do not grant permission to read in court anything from such a book that is infected with symbols in any part. As for the scribe who se esse codicis dominum: neque enim licentiam aperimus ex tali codice in iudicium aliquid recitare, qui in quacumque sua parte siglorum habet malitiam. ipse autem librarius, qui eas inscribere ausus fuerit, non solum criminali poena secundum quod dictum est plectetur, sed etiam libri aestimationem in duplum domino reddat, si et ipse dominus ignorans talem librum vel comparaverit vel confici curaverit. quod et antea a nobis dispositum est in constitutione, quam ad legum professores dimisimus.

23. Leges autem nostras, quae in his codicibus, id est institutionum seu elementorum et digestorum vel pandectarum posuimus, suum obtinere robur ex tertio nostro felicissimo sancimus consulatu, praesentis duodecimae indictionis tertio kalendas Ianuarias, in omne aevum valituras et una cum nostris constitutionibus pollentes et suum vigorem in iudiciis ostendentes in omnibus causis, sive quae postea emerserint sive in iudiciis adhuc pendent nec eas iudicialis vel amicalis forma compescuit. quae enim iam vel iudiciali sententia finita sunt vel amicali pacto sopita, haec resuscitari nullo volumus modo.

Bene autem properavimus in tertium nostrum consulatum et has leges edere, quia maximi dei et domini nostri Ihesu Christi auxilium felicissimum eum nostrae rei publicae donavit, cum in hunc et bella Parthica abolita sunt et quieti perpetuae tradita, et tertia pars mundi nobis adcrevit (post Europam enim et Asiam et tota Libya nostro imperio adiuncta est) et tanto operi legum caput impositum est, omnia caelestia dona nostro tertio consulatui indulta.

24. Itaque omnes iudices nostri pro sua iurisdictione easdem leges suscipiant et tam in suis iudiciis quam in hac regia urbe habeant et proponant, et praecipue vir excelsus huius almae urbis praefectus. curae autem erit tribus excelsis praefectis praetoriis tam orientalibus quam Illyricis nec non Libycis per suas auctoritates omnibus, qui suae iurisdictioni suppositi sunt, eas manifestare.

Data septimo decimo kalendas Ianuarias Constantinopoli dn. Iustiniano pp. A. III consule.

XVIII De Iuris et Facti Ignorantia

[1] Imp. Antoninus A. Maximo militi. Quamvis, cum causam tuam ageres, ignorantia iuris propter simplicitatem armatae militiae dares to write such symbols, he shall not only be stricken with the penalty already stated but he must restore twice the value of the book to the owner, if the owner unwittingly either bought or had such a book made. This has already been established by Us in the constitution that We sent to the professors of the laws.

23. We decree that Our laws, which We have set down in these books, namely the Institutes or Elements and the Digest or Pandects, shall be in force from Our third most fortunate consulship, on the thirtieth day of December in the present twelfth indiction,[273] shall remain valid for all time, and shall stand together with Our constitutions (the Code) and show their might in the courts in all cases, whether any later arise or are still pending and neither a judicial nor amicable[274] ruling has quelled them. We by no means desire that cases that have either already been terminated by judicial ruling or laid to rest by an amicable settlement be revived.

Rightly have We hastened to promulgate these laws for Our third consulship, for the aid of Almighty God and of Our Lord Jesus Christ has made it most fortunate for Our State: during it, both the Parthian wars have been terminated and consigned to eternal peace, one-third of the word has come under Our sway – for after Europe and Asia, all Libya has been annexed to Our Empire – and so great a work of laws has been crowned with success: all the gifts of Heaven have been granted to Our third consulship.

24. Therefore, all Our judges shall receive these laws in their respective jurisdictions and keep and apply them both in their courts and in This Imperial City, especially the Prefect, vir excelsus, of This Generous City. It shall be the duty of the three Praetorian Prefects, viri excelsi, both of the East, of Illyricum, and of Libya, by their authority, to make them known to all who are subject to their jurisdiction.

Given December 16, at Constantinople, in the consulship of Lord Justinian, Ever Augustus, for the third time (533).

Eighteenth Title Ignorance of Law and of Fact[275]

[1][276] Emperor Antoninus Augustus to Maximus, a soldier. Although, when you pled your case, you neglected to produce pertinent excuses on account of [273] December 30, 533; the indiction was a tax cycle of 15 years used, as here, in official dates.

[274] That is, a settlement by arbitration or mediation.
[275] See D. 22.6.
[276] = C'. 1.16.1. The fragment of the first Code gives Maximus the additional name Julius (Corcoran).

adlegationes competentes omiseris, tamen si nondum satisfecisti, permitto tibi, si coeperis ex sententia conveniri, defensionibus tuis uti.

D. VII k. Mai. duobus Aspris conss.

[2] Idem A. Sextio Iuvenali. Cum ignorantia iuris excusari facile non possis, si maior annis hereditati matris tuae renuntiasti, sera prece subveniri tibi desideras.

PP. XV k. Nov. Arriano et Papo conss.

[3] Imp. Philippus A. Marcellae. Si emancipata a patre intra annum bonorum possessionem petere cessasti, praetendere iuris ignorantiam nullis rationibus potes.

PP. XVI k. Iul. Peregrino et Aemiliano conss.

[4] Impp. Diocletianus et Maximianus AA. Iulianae. Si post divisionem factam testamenti vitium in lucem emerserit, ex his, quae per ignorantiam confecta sunt, praeiudicium tibi non comparabitur. ostende igitur apud correctorem virum clarissimum amicum nostrum testamentum vel fide veri deficere vel iuris ratione stare non posse, ut infirmata scriptura, quae testamenti vice prolata est, solidam successionem obtineas.

D. VIII id. Iul. Diocletiano IIII et Maximiano III AA. conss.

[5] Idem AA. et Constantius et Maximianus nobilissimi CC. Martiali. Cum falsa demonstratione mutari substantia veritatis minime possit, respondendo id quod paternum erat ex maternis esse bonis nihil egisti.

D. prid. k. Ian. Diocletiano V et Maximiano IIII AA. conss.

[6] Idem AA. et CC. Tauro et Pollioni. Si non transactionis causa, sed indebitam errore facti olei materiam vos Archantico stipulanti dare spopondisse rector animadverterit provinciae, reddito quod debetis residui liberationem condicentes audiet.

D. V k. Mai. CC. conss.

the artlessness of armed service, nevertheless, as long as you have not yet satisfied (the judgment), I permit you to make use of your defenses if you should be sued upon the judgment.

Given April 25, in the consulship of the two Aspri (212).

[2][277] The same Augustus to Sextius Juvenalis. Since you cannot readily be excused by reason of ignorance of law, if when of age you renounced the inheritance of your mother, your petition for aid comes too late.

Posted October 18, in the consulship of Arrianus and Papus (243).

[3][278] Emperor PHILIP Augustus to Marcella. If you had been emancipated by your father yet failed to seek possession of the property (of the deceased) within a year, you can in no way allege ignorance of law.

Posted June 16, in the consulship of Peregrinus and Aemilianus (244).

[4] Emperors DIOCLETIAN and MAXIMIAN Augusti to Juliana. If a defect in the will comes to light after the property has been divided, you will not incur prejudice by what has been done in ignorance (of this fact). Therefore, demonstrate before the vir clarissimus governor (corrector), Our friend, that the testament either departs from the truth or cannot stand on legal grounds; once the document produced in place of a will has been invalidated, you may obtain the entire inheritance.

Given July 8, in the consulship of Diocletian, for the fourth time, and Maximian, for the third time, Augusti (290).

[5][279] The same Augusti and the Most Noble Caesars CONSTANTIUS and MAXIMIAN to Martialis. Since the substance of truth cannot be changed by a false allegation, you have achieved nothing by replying that the property, which was (in fact) property of your father, was from your mother.

Given December 31, in the consulship of Diocletian, for the fifth time, and Maximian, for the fourth time, Augusti (293).

[6] The same Augusti and Caesars to Taurus and Pollio. If the provincial governor determines that you promised Archanticus by stipulation an amount of oil not due him, (and you did this) not by reason of an agreement but through error of fact, then once you have restored what you owe, he will hear your claim for release from the remainder.

Given April 27, in the consulship of the Caesars (294).

[277] = C¹. 1.16.2. The issuer was actually Gordian, as is clear from the date. The fragment of the first Code confirms the name Sextius Juvenalis; the misattribution to Caracalla (idem Augustus) is already present (Corcoran).

[278] Perhaps to be combined with 3.44.8.

[279] Combine with C. 2.3.20 (which bears the subscription "Posted January 1"). This constitution in the first Code (C¹. 1.16.5) presents the usual, short inscription Idem AA. et CC Martiali (Corcoran).

[7] Idem AA. et CC. Zoe. Error facti necdum negotio finito nemini nocet: nam causa decisa velamento tali non instauratur.

D. VI non. Iul. CC. conss.

[8] Idem AA. et CC. Dionysiae. Cum testamentum nullo iure constiterit, ex eius, quae ab intestato successit, professione sola velut ex testamento liberos per errorem profitentis orcini vel proprii liberti, si non ipsius accessit iudicium, cum errantis voluntas nulla sit, effici non potuerint.

D. V k. Sept. CC. conss.

[9] Idem AA. et CC. Gaio et Anthemio. Non idcirco minus, quod a vobis velut a liberis debitam accepisse pecuniam Samus dicitur, cum nullus sit errantis consensus, movere status quaestionem prohibentur eius heredes.

D. VI id. Dec. CC. conss.

[10] Idem AA. et CC. Amphiae. Cum quis ius ignorans indebitam pecuniam persolverit, cessat repetitio. per ignorantiam enim facti tantum repetitionem indebiti soluti competere tibi notum est.

D. V k. Ian. CC. conss.

[11] Imp. Constantinus A. Valeriano vicario. Quamvis in lucro nec feminis ius ignorantibus subveniri soleat, tamen contra aetatem adhuc imperfectam locum hoc non habere retro principum statuta declarant.

D. IIII k. Mai. Gallicano et Symmacho conss.

[12] Impp. Valentinianus et Theodosius AA. Flaviano pp. Illyrici et Italiae. Constitutiones principum nec ignorare quemquam nec dissimulare permittimus.

D. VI k. Iun. Vincentiae Tatiano et Symmacho conss.

[13] Impp. Leo et Anthemius AA. Erythrio pp. Ne passim liceat mulieribus omnes suos contractus retractare in his, quae praetermiserint vel ignoraverint, statuimus, si per ignorantiam iuris damnum aliquod circa [7] The same Augusti and Caesars to Zoe. If a trial has not been concluded, error of fact harms no one; for only a case already decided may not be reopened on such a pretense.

Given July 2, in the consulship of the Caesars (294).

[8] The same Augusti and Caesars to Dionysia. Since the (testator's) will was invalid by law, then by the mere declaration of the woman who succeeded by intestacy, declaring (the slaves) free as if by the will, they cannot have been made freedmen of the deceased or her own,[280] unless by her own informed decision, since the intentions of one in error are void.

Given August 28, in the consulship of the Caesars (294).

[9] The same Augusti and Caesars to Gaius and Anthemius. Although Samus is said to have received money owing from you as if you were free, his heirs are nonetheless permitted to raise the question of your status, because the consent of one in error is void.

Given December 8, in the consulship of the Caesars (294).

[10] The same Augusti and Caesars to Amphia. Whenever someone ignorant of the law pays money not owing, restitution cannot be claimed. For you are aware that only on account of ignorance of fact may restitution be claimed of money paid but not owing.

Given December 28, in the consulship of the Caesars (294).

[11][281] Emperor CONSTANTINE Augustus to Valerius, Vicar. Although relief is not usually given to women ignorant of the law, yet the resolutions of past emperors manifestly show that this does not apply to those still under age.

Given April 29, in the consulship of Gallicanus and Symmachus (330).

[12][282] Emperors VALENTINIAN and THEODOSIUS Augusti to Flavianus, Praetorian Prefect of Illyricum and Italy. We permit no one to be ignorant or to feign ignorance of the constitutions of the Emperors.

Given May 27, at Vincentia, in the consulship of Tatianus and Symmachus (391).

[13][283] Emperors LEO and ANTHEMIUS Augusti to Erythrius, Praetorian Prefect. Lest women be permitted to renege on all their contracts indiscriminately in [280] That is, freedmen of the deceased, by virtue of the will, or her own, by virtue of her declaration.

[281] = C.Th. 3.5.3.
[282] = C.Th. 1.1.2; combine with C. 4.38.14.
[283] Combine with C. 1.4.16, 5.1.5, 5.6.8, 5.30.3.

ius vel substantiam suam patiantur, in his tantum casibus, in quibus praeteritarum legum auctoritas eis suffragatur, subveniri.

D. k. Iul. Marciano cons.

XVIIII De Precibus Imperatori Offerendis et de Quibus Rebus Supplicare Liceat vel Non

[1] Impp. Diocletianus et Maximianus AA. Firminae. Licet servilis condicio deferendae precis facile capax non sit, tamen admissi sceleris atrocitas et laudabilis fidei exemplum super vindicanda caede domini tui hortamento fuit, ut praefecto praetorio iuxta adnotationis nostrae decretum demandaremus (quem adire cura), ut auditis his, quae in libello contulisti, et reos investigare et severissimam vindictam iuxta legum censuram exigere curet.

D. VIII id. Oct. Diocletiano IIII et Maximiano III AA. conss.

[2] Imp. Constantinus A. Severo pu. Quotiens rescripto nostro moratoria praescriptio remittitur, aditus supplicandi pandatur. Quod autem totius negotii cognitionem tollit et vires principalis negotii exhaurit, sine gravi partis alterius dispendio convelli non potest. nec praescriptionis igitur peremptoriae relaxatio petatur.

D. X k. Iun. Nicaeae Paulino et Iuliano conss.

[3] Idem A. ad populum. Nec damnosa fisco nec iuri contraria postulari oportet.

PP. VIII k. Oct. Romae Constantino A. VIII et Constantio C. IIII conss.

[4] Imppp. Gratianus Valentinianus et Theodosius AAA. Floro pp. Universa rescripta, quae in debitorum causis super praestandis dilationibus promulgantur, non aliter valeant, nisi fideiussio idonea super solutione debiti praebeatur.

matters they have overlooked or of which they were unaware, We have decided that, if by reason of ignorance of law they should suffer some loss with respect to their rights or property, they shall be relieved only in those cases in which the authority of past laws supports them.

Given July 1, in the consulship of Marcianus (472).

Nineteenth Title Petitions Submitted to the Emperor, and Concerning Which Things It Is or Is Not Permitted to Supplicate

[1][284] Emperors Diocletian and Maximian Augusti to Firmina. Although (one of) servile status is not readily capable of submitting a petition (to Us), still the atrocity of the crime committed and your example of praiseworthy loyalty in avenging the murder of your master has induced Us to entrust (your case) to the Praetorian Prefect according to the decree contained in Our annotation (adnotatio). Make sure that you go before him, so that upon hearing what you have described in your petition, he may take care to track down the accused and exact the severest punishment prescribed by the rigor of the laws.

Given October 8, in the consulship of Diocletian, for the fourth time, and Maximian, for the third time, Augusti (290).

[2][285] Emperor Constantine Augustus to Severus, Urban Prefect. Whenever a dilatory defense (praescriptio moratoria) is dismissed by Our rescript, the door to supplication stands open. What cancels the inquiry into the entire case and exhausts the strength of the principal dispute, however, cannot be overturned without heavy loss to the other party. The dismissal of a peremptory defense (praescriptio peremptoria) may not, therefore, be requested.

Given May 23, at Nicaea, in the consulship of Paulinus and Julian (325).

[3] The same Augustus to the people. Neither anything detrimental to the Treasury nor anything contrary to the law may be requested.

Posted September 24, at Rome, in the consulship of Constantine Augustus, for the eighth time, and the Caesar Constantius, for the fourth time (329).

[4][286] Emperors Gratian, Valentinian, and Theodosius Augusti to Florus, Praetorian Prefect. All rescripts issued to grant delays in the cases of debtors shall not be valid unless adequate surety for the payment of the debt is provided.

[284] Combine with C. 7.13.1 (posted December 7).
[285] = C.Th. 1.2.5.
[286] = C.Th. 1.2.8.

D. VIII k. Mart. Constantinopoli Antonio et Syagrio conss.

[5] Impp. Valentinianus et Valens AA. ad Volusianum pp. Si quis adversus praefectorum praetorio sententias duxerit supplicandum victusque fuerit denuo, nullam habebit licentiam iterum super eadem causa supplicandi.

D. XV k. Oct. Romae Valentiniano et Valente AA. conss.

[6] Impp. Honorius et Theodosius AA. Isidoro pu. Universis simul hanc observantiam remittimus, ut, a quocumque liberae condicionis constituto vel servo supplicante impetratum fuerit rescriptum, minime requiratur, per quem preces oblatae sunt.

D. II non. Sept. Constantinopoli Varane cons.

[7] Impp. Theodosius et Valentinianus AA. ad senatum. Rescripta contra ius elicita ab omnibus iudicibus praecipimus refutari, nisi forte aliquid est, quod non laedat alium et prosit petenti vel crimen supplicanti indulgeat.

D. VIII id. Nov. Ravennae Theodosio XII et Valentiniano II AA. conss.

[8] Idem AA. Florentio pp. Instrumentorum exempla non prosit precibus adiunxisse, sed necesse sit eorum in supplicatione vim exprimi, ut responsuro principi vera precatio rem aperiat cognoscendam, solis, cum necessitas exegerit, verbis precibus inserendis, quorum de sensu inter partes ita dubitari contigerit, ut etiam merito nostrum expectetur iudicium.

D. VI k. April. Constantinopoli Florentio et Dionysio conss.

XX Quando Libellus Principi Datus Litis Contestationem Facit

[1] Impp. Arcadius et Honorius AA. Remigio praefecto Augustali. Dubium non est contestationem intellegi etiam, si nostrae fuerint Given February 22, at Constantinople, in the consulship of Antonius and Syagrius (382).

[5] Emperors VALENTINIAN and VALENS Augusti to Volusianus, Praetorian Prefect.[287] If anyone should deem it advisable to address a supplication (to Us) against the rulings of the Praetorian Prefects and again loses his case, he shall have no right to supplicate again concerning the same case.

Given September 17, (received ...) at Rome, in the consulship of Valentinian and Valens Augusti (365).

[6][288] Emperors HONORIUS and THEODOSIUS Augusti to Isidorus, Urban Prefect. We remove the following requirement for all persons at once: whenever a rescript has been obtained by any supplicant of free status or a slave, no inquiry shall be made as to the person by whom the petition was presented (to Us).

Given September 4, in Constantinople, in the consulship of Varanes (410).

[7][289] Emperors THEODOSIUS and VALENTINIAN Augusti to the Senate. We order that any rescripts that have been obtained contrary to the law must be rejected by all judges, unless perchance it is something that does not injure another and benefits the petitioner or grants a supplicant pardon for a crime.

Given November 6, at Ravenna, in the consulship of Theodosius, for the twelfth time, and Valentinian, for the second time, Augusti (426).

[8] The same Augusti to Florentius, Praetorian Prefect. It shall do no good to append copies of documents to a petition (of supplication), but it shall rather be necessary to express their substance in the supplication, so that the truthful supplication may make plain the matter to be reviewed before the Emperor responds. Only those words, the meaning of which happens to be disputed by the parties, shall be inserted, when necessity requires it, in the supplication, whereby Our ruling is deservedly awaited.

Given March 27, at Constantinople, in the consulship of Florentius and Dionysius (429).

Twentieth Title When a Petition Given to the Emperor Constitutes Joinder of Issue (Litis Contestatio)

[1][290] Emperors ARCADIUS and HONORIUS Augusti to Remigius, Augustal Prefect. There is no doubt that a joinder of issue is implied if a petition is [287] Actually, Urban Prefect. The constitution is restored to indicate it was "received" at Rome.

[288] Combine with C. 8.57.2, 8.58.1.
[289] Combine with C. 1.14.2–3, 1.22.5, and C.Th. 1.4.3 (adding "of the City of Rome" to the inscription); and cf. C. 6.55.11 (= C.Th. 5.1.8); potentially dated to November 7 (Seeck).
[290] = C.Th. 1.2.10 (but dated March 20, which Seeck prefers).

tranquillitati preces oblatae, easque adversus heredem quoque eius in quem porrectae sunt vel ab herede eius qui meruerit exerceri.

D. xii k. April. Constantinopoli Arcadio iiii et Honorio iii AA. conss.

[2] Imp. Iustinianus A. Menae pp. Temporales actiones, quae per oblationem precum et ad eas rescriptiones perpetuantur, definire necessarium esse duximus, ne quis putet ad alias etiam, quae certis taxantur temporibus, hoc pertinere. sciant igitur omnes eas tantummodo per oblationes precum et ad eas rescripta perpetuari, quae a praetore constitutae annali tempore coartatae sunt.

D. k. April. Constantinopoli Decio vc. cons.

XXI Ut Lite Pendente vel Post Provocationem aut Definitivam Sententiam Nulli Liceat Imperatori Supplicare

[1] Imp. Alexander A. Caperio. Licet, postquam supplicasti, priusquam rescriptum impetrares, praeses provinciae vir clarissimus pronuntiaverit, cum tamen a sententia non provocaveris, rescriptum, quod postea secutum esse suggeris, ad retrahenda quae decreto terminata sunt non patrocinatur.

D. k. Mart. Lupo et Maximo conss.

[2] Imp. Constantinus A. Petronio Probiano suo salutem. Supplicare causa pendente non licet, nisi vel actorum vel pronuntiationis editio denegetur. Qui autem terminatam rescripto vel consultatione quaestionem exquisito suffragio refricare conabitur, in omnem litis aestimationem adversario suo protinus condemnetur: omni venia deneganda, si quis contra haec supplicare temptaverit.

D. id. Aug. Arelato. pp. id. Oct. Theveste Sabino et Rufino conss.

submitted to Our Tranquility, and that it[291] is to be executed also against the heir of the person against whom it was delivered or by the heir of the person who obtained it.

Given March 21, at Constantinople, in the consulship of Arcadius, for the fourth time, and Honorius, for the third time, Augusti (396).

[2] Emperor JUSTINIAN Augustus to Menas, Praetorian Prefect. We have deemed it necessary to limit time-restricted actions (actiones temporales), which are extended by the submission of petitions and the rescripts issued thereon, lest anyone think that this applies to other actions that are restricted to certain periods. All, therefore, shall know that only the actions that are confined by the Praetor to a period of one year are extended by the submission of petitions and by the rescripts issued thereon.

Given April 1, at Constantinople, in the consulship of the vir clarissimus Decius (529).

Twenty-First Title While a Case Is Pending or after Appeal or a Final Ruling, No One Is Permitted to Supplicate the Emperor

[1] Emperor ALEXANDER Augustus to Caperius. Although the vir clarissimus provincial governor pronounced (a ruling) after you had supplicated but before you obtained a rescript, since you did not appeal his ruling, the rescript, which you write came later, does not support you in annulling what has been settled by decree (of the judge).

Given March 1, in the consulship of Lupus and Maximus (232).

[2][292] Emperor CONSTANTINE to his friend Petronius Probus, greetings. It is not permitted to supplicate while a case is pending, unless a copy of the proceedings or the ruling has been denied. Whoever should attempt, through influence, to reopen a question settled by rescript or consultation[293] shall be immediately condemned to pay the amount at dispute to his opponent. All pardon will be denied anyone who attempts to supplicate contrary to these provisions.

Given August 13, at Arles; posted October 15, at Theveste, in the consulship of Sabinus and Rufinus (316).

[291] The Latin text continues to speak of the petition (preces … easque etc.), but, properly speaking, the rescript of the emperor is meant here.

[292] = C.Th. 11.30.6; combine with C. 7.62.13.

[293] That is, by a rescript sent by the emperor in response to a consultatio (a request for a ruling on a legal matter) submitted by an official.

[3] Idem A. ad universos provinciales. Qui licitam provocationem omiserit, perpetuo silere debebit nec a nobis impudens petere per supplicationem auxilium. Quod si fecerit, desiderio suo carebit et ignominiae poena notabitur.

D. k. Aug. pp. k. Sept. Constantinopoli Basso et Ablabio conss.

XXII Si Contra Ius Utilitatemve Publicam vel Per Mendacium Fuerit Aliquid Postulatum vel Impetratum

[1] Impp. Diocletianus et Maximianus AA. et CC. Gregorio. Non idcirco minus is, cui a nostro rescripto cognitio delata est, iudicare potest, quod ex gestis quaedam in precibus omissa proponis.

D. v non. Mai. Diocletiano v et Maximiano IIII AA. conss.

[2] Idem AA. et Constantius et Maximianus CC. Statiae. Praescriptione mendaciorum opposita, sive in iuris narratione mendacium reperiatur sive in facti sive in tacendi fraude, pro tenore veritatis, non deprecantis adfirmatione, datum iudicem cognoscere debere et secundum hoc de causa convenit ferre sententiam.

D. k. Dec. Sirmi CC. conss.

[3] Imp. Constantinus A. ad Bassum. Puniri iubemus decem librarum auri multa iudices, qui vetuerunt precum argui falsitatem.

D. k. Oct. Constantino A. III et Licinio C. III conss.

[4] Idem. A. ad Barbarum Pompeianum consularem Campaniae. Etsi non cognitio, sed exsecutio mandatur, de veritate precúm inquiri oportet, ut, si fraus intervenit, de omni negotio cognoscatur.

D. III id. Nov. Aquis Dalmatio et Zenophilo conss.

[3][294] The same Augustus to all provincials. He who neglects to make a lawful appeal must keep silent forever and not impudently seek aid from Us through supplication; but if he does, he will not obtain his wish and will be branded by the penalty of infamy.

Given August 1; posted September 1, at Constantinople, in the consulship of Bassus and Ablabius (331).

Twenty-Second Title If Anything Has Been Requested or Obtained Through Deception Contrary to the Law or Public Good

[1] Emperors DIOCLETIAN and MAXIMIAN Augusti and the Caesars to Gregorius. He to whom a trial has been delegated by Our rescript is no less competent to judge because you allege that some things from the (procedural) records were omitted in your petition.

Given May 3, in the consulship of Diocletian, for the fifth time, and Maximian, for the fourth time, Augusti (293).

[2] The same Augusti and the Caesars CONSTANTIUS and MAXIMIAN to Statia. When a defense of false statements (praescriptio mendaciorum) has been made, whether the falsehood is discovered in the exposition of the law or in a fraudulent act or in silence, the delegated judge must try the case according to the substance of truth, not the assertion of the petitioner, and accordingly deliver a ruling.

Given December 1, at Sirmium, in the consulship of the Caesars (294).[295]

[3] Emperor CONSTANTINE Augustus to Bassus. We order that judges who have forbidden the falsity of a petition to be proven shall be punished by a fine of 10 pounds of gold.

Given October 1, in the consulship of Constantine Augustus, for the third time, and the Caesar[296] Licinius, for the third time (313).

[4][297] The same Augustus to Barbarus Pompeianus, Consular of Campania. Even if execution, not a trial, has been ordered, it is necessary to inquire into the veracity of a petition, so that, if fraud has occurred, the entire case may be tried.

Given November 11, at Aquae, in the consulship of Dalmatius and Zenophilus (333).

[294] = C.Th. 11.30.17; combine with C. 1.40.3, 3.13.4(?), 3.19.2, 7.62.19, 8.36.2, and C.Th. 2.26.3, 3.30.4, 11.34.1.

[295] Mommsen proposes December 1, 293.

[296] Actually, an Augustus since 308. The constitution probably dates to 319 (Mommsen, Seeck).

[297] = C.Th. 1.2.6.

[5] Impp. Theodosius et Valentinianus AA. ad senatum. Etsi legibus consentaneum sacrum oraculum mendax precator attulerit, careat penitus impetratis et, si nimia mentientis invenitur improbitas, etiam severitati subiaceat iudicantis.

D. VIII id. Nov. Ravennae Theodosio XII et Valentiniano II AA. conss.

[6] Imp. Anastasius A. Matroniano pp. Omnes cuiuscumque maioris vel minoris administrationis universae nostrae rei publicae iudices monemus, ut nullum rescriptum, nullam pragmaticam sanctionem, nullam sacram adnotationem, quae generali iuri vel utilitati publicae adversa esse videatur, in disceptatione cuiuslibet litigii patiantur proferri, sed generales sacras constitutiones modis omnibus non dubitent observandas.

D. k. Iul. Constantinopoli.

XXIII De Diversis Rescriptis et Pragmaticis Sanctionibus

[1] Imp. Alexander A. Supero. Si libellum de communi causa tu fraterque tuus dedistis, quamvis rescriptum ad unius personam directum sit, utrique tamen prospectum est.

D. id. Iul. Alexandro A. cons.

[2] Idem A. Epagatho. Falso adseveratur auctoritatem rescriptorum devoluto spatio anni obtinere firmitatem suam non oportere, cum ea, quae ad ius rescribuntur, perennia esse debent, si modo tempus, intra quod adlegari vel audiri debeat, non sit comprehensum.

D. VII k. Nov. Antiochiano et Orfito conss.

[3] Impp. Diocletiuanus et Maximianus AA. Crispino praesidi provinciae Phoenice. Sancimus, ut authentica ipsa atque originalia rescripta et nostra manu subscripta, non exempla eorum, insinuentur.

D. prid. k. April. Hannibaliano et Asclepiodoto conss.

[5][298] Emperors THEODOSIUS and VALENTINIAN Augusti to the Senate. Even if a deceitful petitioner produces a sacred oracle (an imperial rescript) consistent with the law, he shall forfeit what he has obtained and, if the wickedness of the liar is found to be excessive, he shall also be subjected to the severity of the judge.

Given November 6, at Ravenna, in the consulship of Theodosius, for the twelfth time, and Valentinian, for the second time, Augusti (426).

[6] Emperor ANASTASIUS Augustus to Matronianus, Praetorian Prefect. We advise all judges, whether in a greater or lesser office, throughout Our entire State, to allow no rescript, no pragmatic sanction, no sacred annotation that appears to be at variance with general law or the public interest to be produced in the hearing of any dispute whatsoever; but they shall have no doubt that sacred general constitutions must by all means be obeyed.

Given July 1, at Constantinople (491?).

Twenty-Third Title Various Rescripts and Pragmatic Sanctions[299]

[1] Emperor ALEXANDER Augustus to Superus. If you and your brother presented a petition concerning a matter of common interest to you, although the rescript was addressed to one person, it was provided for both of you.

Given July 15, in the consulship of Alexander Augustus (222).

[2] The same Augustus[300] to Epagathus. It is wrongly claimed that the authority of rescripts should not retain its force after the lapse of a year, since rescripts concerning the law ought to be eternal, as long as the time within which they should be produced or heard is not stipulated therein.

Given October 26, in the consulship of Antiochianus and Orfitus (270).

[3] Emperors DIOCLETIAN and MAXIMIAN Augusti to Crispinus, Governor of the Province Phoenice. We decree that the authentic and original rescripts themselves, signed by Our hand, not copies of them, shall be filed for record.

Given March 31, in the consulship of Hannibalianus and Asclepiodotus (292).

[298] Combine with C. 1.14.2–3, 1.19.7, and C.Th. 1.4.3; cf. C. 6.55.11 (= C.Th. 5.1.8); potentially dated November 7 (Seeck).

[299] A pragmatica sanctio is: "An imperial decree or order or constitution addressed to a community, guild, municipality or other body of men concerning their public affairs" (Blume); the term is late imperial. Often at issue is whether such a decree can also have, on occasion, the force of a general law.

[300] Actually, Claudius Gothicus.

[4] Imp. Constantinus A. ad Lusitanos. Si qua beneficia personalia sine die et consule fuerint deprehensa, auctoritate careant.

D. VII k. Aug. Savariae Probiano et Iuliano conss.

[5] Imppp. Valentinianus Theodosius et Arcadius AAA. ad Nicetium praefectum annonae. Sacrilegii instar est divinis super quibuscumque administrationibus vel dignitatibus promulgandis obviare beneficiis.

D. k. Febr. Mediolani Arcadio A. et Bautone conss.

[6] Imp. Leo A. Hilariano magistro officiorum et patricio. pr. Sacri affatus, quoscumque nostrae mansuetudinis in quacumque parte paginarum scripserit auctoritas, non alio vultu penitus aut colore, nisi purpurea tantummodo scriptione illustrentur, scilicet ut cocti muricis et triti conchylii ardore signentur: eaque tantummodo fas sit proferri et dici rescripta in quibuscumque iudiciis, quae in chartis sive membranis subnotatio nostrae subscriptionis impresserit. 1. Hanc autem sacri encausti confectionem nulli sit licitum aut concessum habere aut quaerere aut a quoquam sperare: eo videlicet, qui hoc adgressus fuerit tyrannico spiritu, post proscriptionem bonorum omnium capitali non immerito poena plectendo.

D. VI k. April. Iordane et Severo conss.

[7] Imp. Zeno A. Sebastiano pp. pr. Universa rescripta, sive in personam precantium sive ad quemlibet iudicem manaverint, quae vel adnotatio vel quaevis[xxvi] pragmatica sanctio nominetur, sub ea condicione proferri praecipimus, si preces veritate nituntur, nec aliquem fructum precator oraculi percipiat impetrati, licet in iudicio adserat veritatem, nisi quaestio fidei precum imperiali beneficio monstretur inserta. 1. Nam et vir magnificus quaestor et viri spectabiles magistri scriniorum, qui sine praefata adiectione qualecumque divinum responsum dictaverint, et iudices, qui susceperint, reprehensionem subibunt et, qui illicite dictata scribere ausi fuerint cuiuscumque scrinii memoriales seu pragmaticarii vel adiutores primicerii, amissione cinguli ferientur. 2. Pragmaticas praeterea sanctiones non ad singulorum preces super privatis negotiis proferri, sed si quando corpus aut schola vel officium vel curia vel

[xxvi] quae vel adnotatio vel pragmatica

[4][301] Emperor CONSTANTINE Augustus to the Lusitanians. If any personal privileges (beneficia)[302] are found without date and consular year, they shall be void.

Given July 26, at Savaria, in the consulship of Probianus and Julian (322).

[5] Emperors VALENTINIAN, THEODOSIUS, and ARCADIUS Augusti to Nicetius, Prefect of the Grain Supply. It is tantamount to sacrilege to oppose divine privileges that shall be issued concerning any offices or ranks whatsoever.

Given February 1, at Milan, in the consulship of Arcadius Augustus and Bauto (385).

[6][303] Emperor LEO Augustus to Hilarianus, Master of Offices and Patrician. pr. Sacred utterances, whatsoever the authority of Our Mildness writes on any part of a leaf of paper, shall be illuminated by no other appearance or color but by purple script; they shall namely be distinguished by the vibrancy of the boiled murex and crushed conch; and it shall be lawful to present and regard as rescripts, in any courts whatsoever, those that bear the subscription of Our signature on paper or parchment. 1. No one is allowed or permitted to have, seek, or hope from anyone the making of this sacred ink; he who, with the arrogance of a usurper,[304] attempts to do so shall, after the sale of all his property, not undeservedly be stricken by capital punishment.

Given March 27, in the consulship of Jordanes and Severus (470).

[7] Emperor ZENO Augustus to Sebastianus, Praetorian Prefect. pr. We order that all rescripts, whether they are issued to petitioners or to some judge, whether named either an annotation (adnotatio) or a pragmatic sanction, shall be produced on this condition, that the petition is grounded in truth; nor shall a petitioner reap any benefit from the oracle obtained, though he alleges the truth in court, unless an inquiry into the veracity of the petition is shown inserted in the imperial indulgence (i.e., the rescript). 1. For both the vir magnificus Quaestor and the viri spectabiles Masters of the Bureaus who dictate a divine rescript without the aforesaid addition, as well as the judges who admit it, will undergo censure; and the those who dare to write illicitly dictated rescripts, whether clerks of the Bureau of Memory or drafters of pragmatic sanctions (pragmaticarii) or assistants to the chief (adiutores primicerii), shall be punished by loss of rank (cingulum). 2. Moreover, We decree that pragmatic sanctions shall not be issued in response to the petitions of individuals

[301] = C.Th. 1.1.1.
[302] Latin beneficia indicates privileges conferred by rescript.
[303] Perhaps to be combined with C. 12.19.10, 12.59.9.
[304] Literally, "of a tyrant" (tyrannus), a word regularly applied to usurpers after Constantine.

civitas vel provincia vel quaedam universitas hominum ob causam publicam fuderit preces, manare decernimus, ut hic etiam veritatis quaestio reservetur.

D. x k. Ian. Constantinopoli post consulatum Armati.

XXIIII De Statuis et Imaginibus

[1] Impp. Arcadius et Honorius AA. Theodoro pp. Si quis iudicum accepisse aeneas vel argenteas vel marmoreas statuas extra imperiale beneficium in administratione positus detegetur, emolumenta, quae acceperit in ea positus dignitate, quam polluit, cum extortis titulis vel praesumptis in quadruplum fisco nostro inferat simulque noverit existimationis suae poenam se subiturum. nec eos sane a periculo pudoris haberi volumus immunes, qui adulandi studio aut metu inconstanti ignavia transire quae sunt interdicta temptaverint.

D. XII k. Ian. Mediolani Honorio A. IIII et Eutychiano conss.

[2] Imp. Theodosius A. et Valentinianus C. Aetio pp. Si quando nostrae statuae vel imagines eriguntur seu diebus, ut adsolet, festis sive communibus, adsit iudex sine adorationis ambitioso fastigio, ut ornamentum diei vel loco et nostrae recordationi sui probet accessisse praesentiam.

D. III non. Mai. Theodosio A. XI et Valentiniano C. conss.

[3] Impp. Theodosius et Valentinianus AA. Florentio pp. In nostrae serenitatis imaginibus ac statuis erigendis privatae collationis iniuriam propulsari praecipimus, ne quid in eo suum collator agnoscat.

D. III non. April. Theodosio A. XVII et Festo conss.

[4] Idem AA. ad Nomum comitem et magistrum officiorum. Et virtutum praemia tribui merentibus convenit et aliorum honores aliis damnorum occasionem fieri non oportet. idcirco quotiens vel iudicibus nostris vel cuilibet alii statua fuerit a quocumque collegio seu officio vel in concerning private suits, but if a guild, corps (schola), office, curia, city, province, or some group of persons should pour forth a petition concerning a public matter, yet even in these cases inquiry into the accuracy (of the petition) shall remain available.

Given December 23, at Constantinople, in the post-consulate of Armatus (477).

Twenty-Fourth Title Statues and Likenesses

[1][305] Emperors ARCADIUS and HONORIUS Augusti to Theodorus, Praetorian Prefect. If any governor serving in office is found to have accepted bronze, silver, or marble statues (in his honor) without an imperial grant, he shall render unto the Treasury quadruple the profits that he received while in the office that he has polluted, he shall be stripped of the titles of rank that he has seized or arrogated to himself, and he shall know that he must also suffer the loss of his good name. Nor do We wish those to be free from the danger of disgrace who in their zeal for flattery, or in fear and wavering cowardice,[306] attempt to transgress what has been forbidden.

Given December 21, at Milan, in the consulship of Honorius Augustus, for the fourth time, and of Eutychianus (398).

[2][307] Emperor THEODOSIUS Augustus and VALENTINIAN Caesar to Aetius, Praetorian Prefect. If at any time, whether on holidays, as is customary, or on ordinary days, statues or images of Us are erected, the governor shall attend without an arrogant desire for adoration; thus he shall prove that his presence has served to grace the day or place and Our memorial.

Given May 5, in the consulship of Theodosius Augustus, for the eleventh time, and the Caesar Valentinian (425).

[3] Emperors THEODOSIUS and VALENTINIAN Augusti to Florentius, Praetorian Prefect. On the occasion of the erection of images and statues of Our Serenity, We order that the insult of private contributions be banished, lest a contributor consider any part of it his own.

Given April 3, in the consulship of Theodosius Augustus and Festus (439).

[4] The same Augusti to Nomus, Count and Master of Offices. It is both fitting that rewards for excellence be granted to the deserving and necessary that honors for some persons not be the cause of loss to others. Therefore, whenever a statue for a governor or any other person is requested by some corporation or

305 Combine with C. 8.11.13.
306 Apparently the official might be too passive to reject the honor of a statue.
307 = C.Th. 15.4.1.

hac sacratissima civitate vel in provinciis postulata, nequaquam ex discriptione sumptus colligi patimur, sed eius, cuius ad honorem petitur, expensis propriis statuam collocari praecipimus.

D. v k. April. Theodosio A. xviii cons.

XXV De His Qui ad Statuas Confugiunt

[1] Imppp. Valentinianus Theodosius et Arcadius AAA. Cynegio pp. Qui ad statuas vel vitandi metus vel creandae invidiae causa confugerint, si certas habuerint causas, quibus confugere ad imperatoria simulacra debuerint, iure ac legibus vindicentur. si vero probati fuerint artibus suis invidiam inimicis creare voluisse, ultrix in eos sententia proferatur.

D. prid. non. Iul. Constantinopoli Honorio np. et Euodio conss.

XXVI De Officio Praefectorum Praetorio Orientis et Illyrici

[1] Imp. Alexander A. Theodoto. Libellus praefecto praetorio datus pro contestatione haberi non potest.

D. prid. k. Oct. Agricola et Clemente conss.

[2] Idem A. Restituto. Formam a praefecto praetorio datam, et si[xxvii] generalis sit, minime legibus vel constitutionibus contrariam, si nihil postea ex auctoritate mea innovatum est, servari aequum est.

D. id. Aug. Severo et Quintiano conss.

[3] Imppp. Valentinianus Theodosius et Arcadius AAA. Tatiano pp. Si quos iudices vel propter adversam et longinquam corporis valetudinem vel propter neglegentiam aut furtum vel simile aliquod vitium sublimitas tua inutiles esse reppererit, his ab administratione remotis et vice eorum aliis subrogatis furibusque poenis legitimis subactis ad nostrae mansuetudinis scientiam non crimina, sed vindicta referatur.

D. vi non. Mai. Mediolani Timasio et Promoto conss.

xxvii [et] si

official staff, whether in This Most Sacred City or in the provinces, We in no way permit the expenses to be covered by tax assessment (discriptio), but We order that the statue be erected at the expense of the person in whose honor it has been requested.

Given March 28, in the consulship of Theodosius Augustus, for the eighteenth time (444).

Twenty-Fifth Title Those Who Take Refuge at Statues

[1][308] Emperors VALENTINIAN, THEODOSIUS, and ARCADIUS Augusti to Cynegius, Praetorian Prefect. Those who take refuge at statues to escape fear or create ill-will, if they have definite reasons why they ought to have taken refuge at the likenesses of the Emperors, shall be vindicated by the law and statutes. If, however, they are shown to have sought to create ill-will against their enemies by their wiles, an avenging ruling shall be rendered against them.

Given July 6, at Constantinople, in the consulship of Honorius, Most Noble Boy, and Euodius (386).

Twenty-Sixth Title The Office of the Praetorian Prefects of the East and of Illyricum

[1] Emperor ALEXANDER Augustus to Theodotus. A petition delivered to the Praetorian Prefect cannot be considered joinder of issue (litis contestatio).

Given September 30, in the consulship of Agricola and Clemens (230).

[2] The same Augustus to Restitutus. It is reasonable that a ruling (forma) given by the Praetorian Prefect, if it is general, not at variance with the laws or constitutions, should be observed if no innovation has been made subsequently by My authority.

Given August 13, in the consulship of Severus and Quintianus (235).

[3][309] Emperors VALENTINIAN, THEODOSIUS, and ARCADIUS Augusti to Tatianus, Praetorian Prefect. If Your Sublimity should find some governors unfit, whether on account of poor health and long sickness or on account of theft or some similar vice, once you have removed them from office and substituted others in their place, and subjected the thieves to proper punishment, not their crimes but their punishment shall be brought to the attention of Our Mildness.

Given May 2, at Milan, in the consulship of Timasius and Promotus (389).

308 = C.Th. 9.44.1.
309 = C.Th. 1.5.9 (but dated March 2, which Seeck prefers).

[4] Idem AAA. Addeo comiti et magistro utriusque militiae. De ordinario iudice semper illustris est cognitio praefecturae, licet militari viro ab eo facta fuerit iniuria.

D. prid. id. Ian. Constantinopoli Theodosio A. III et Abundantio conss.

[5] Imppp. Arcadius Honorius et Theodosius AAA. Anthemio pp. Si qui posthac velut indebitis oneribus gravati ad preces crediderint convolandum sive de naviculariis rationibus sive transvectionibus, rescripta, quae de omnibus his atque huiusmodi ordinationibus emitti contigerit, ad sedem sublimitatis tuae rescribantur.

D. VII id. Dec. Constantinopoli Stilichone II et Anthemio conss.

[6] ... [xxviii]

XXVII De Officio Praefecti Praetorio Africae et de Omni Eiusdem Dioeceseos Statu

[1] In nomine domini nostri Ihesu Christi imperator Caesar Flavius Iustinianus Alamannicus Gotthicus Francicus Germanicus Anticus Alanicus Vvandalicus Africanus pius felix inclitus victor ac triumphator semper Augustus Archelao praefecto praetorio Africae. pr. Quas gratias aut quas laudes domino deo nostro Ihesu Christo exhibere debeamus, nec mens nostra potest concipere nec lingua proferre. 1. Multas quidem et antea a deo meruimus largitates et innumerabilia circa nos eius beneficia confitemur, pro quibus nihil dignum nos egisse cognoscimus: prae omnibus tamen hoc, quod nunc deus omnipotens per nos pro sua laude et pro suo nomine demonstrare dignatus est, excedit omnia mirabilia opera, quae in saeculo contigerunt, ut Africa per nos tam brevi tempore reciperet libertatem, ante centum et quinque annos a Vvandalis captivata, qui animarum fuerant simul hostes et corporum. 2. Nam animas quidem diversa tormenta atque supplicia non ferentes rebaptizando ad suam perfidiam transferebant: corpora vero liberis natalibus clara iugo barbarico durissime subiugabant. 3. Ipsas quoque dei sacrosanctas ecclesias suis perfidiis maculabant: aliquas vero ex eis stabula fecerunt. 4. Vidimus venerabiles viros, qui abscissis radicitus linguis poenas suas

[xxviii] Stolte (2009) argues that the text restored in 10.16.1 should instead be restored here.

[4][310] The same Augusti to Addeus, Count and Master of Both Military Forces. The trial of an ordinary judge (a provincial governor) is always under the jurisdiction of the Illustrious (Praetorian) Prefecture, even though a wrong has been committed by him against a military man.

Given January 12, at Constantinople, in the consulship of Theodosius Augustus, for the third time, and of Abundantius (393).

[5][311] Emperors ARCADIUS, HONORIUS, and THEODOSIUS Augusti to Anthemius, Praetorian Prefect. If any persons, aggrieved by undue burdens, hereafter feel compelled to resort to a petition, whether in connection with transportation by sea or by land, the rescripts that shall be issued concerning all these and similar arrangements shall be addressed to the tribunal of Your Sublimity.

Given December 7, at Constantinople, in the consulship of Stilicho, for the second time, and of Anthemius (405).

[6] ...[312]

Twenty-Seventh Title The Office of the Praetorian Prefect of Africa and the Organization of the Same Diocese[313]

[1] In the name of our Lord Jesus Christ, Emperor Caesar Flavius JUSTINIAN Alamannicus, Gothicus, Francicus, Germanicus, Anticus, Alanicus, Vandalicus, Africanus, pious, fortunate, famous, victorious, and triumphant, Ever Augustus, to Archelaus, Praetorian Prefect of Africa. pr. What thanks or what praises We should offer Our Lord Jesus Christ, neither Our mind can conceive nor Our tongue express. 1. We had indeed already received many bounties from God, and We confess his innumerable benefactions on Our behalf, for which We recognize that We have done nothing worthy. But this above all, which Almighty God has deigned to reveal through Us for His praise and for His name, exceeds all wonderful works that have occurred in this age: that, through Us, Africa should in such short time recover its freedom, captured 105 years ago by the Vandals, who were enemies of both souls and bodies. 2. For they converted souls unable to bear various tortures and punishments to their treachery by re-baptizing them; and they put bodies distinguished by free birth most cruelly under a barbarian yoke. 3. They besmirched even the holy churches of God with their treachery (perfidia); some of them they made into stables. 4. We have seen reverend men miraculously tell of their punishments, though their tongues had [310] = C.Th. 1.5.10; combine with C.Th. 1.7.2; more likely dated June 12 (Seeck).

[311] = C.Th. 1.5.14.
[312] A Greek constitution has been lost. Bas. 56.8 indicates that it concerned grain supplies to prefects.
[313] See D. 1.11. Justinian had reconquered the Roman province of Africa in 533–534.

mirabiliter loquebantur: alii vero post diversa tormenta per diversas dispersi provincias vitam in exilio peregerunt.

5. Quo ergo sermone aut quibus operibus dignas deo gratias agere valeamus, quod per me, ultimum servum suum, ecclesiae suae iniurias vindicare dignatus est et tantarum provinciarum populos a iugo servitutis eripere? 6. Quod beneficium dei antecessores nostri non meruerunt, quibus non solum Africam liberare non licuit, sed et ipsam Romam viderunt ab eisdem Vvandalis captam et omnia imperialia ornamenta in Africam exinde translata. 7. Nunc vero deus per suam misericordiam non solum Africam et omnes eius provincias nobis tradidit, sed et ipsa imperialia ornamenta, quae capta Roma fuerant ablata, nobis restituit. 8. Ergo post tanta beneficia, quae nobis divinitas contulit, hoc de domini dei nostri misericordia postulamus, ut provincias, quas nobis restituere dignatus est, firmas et illaesas custodiat et faciat nos eas secundum suam voluntatem ac placitum gubernare, et universa Africa sentiat omnipotentis dei misericordiam et cognoscant eius habitatores, quam a durissima captivitate et iugo barbarico liberati in quanta libertate sub felicissimo nostro imperio degere meruerunt. 9. Hoc etiam deprecantes exoramus precibus sanctae et gloriosae semper virginis et dei genetricis Mariae, ut, quidquid minus est rei publicae nostrae, per nos, ultimos servos suos, restituat in suo nomine deus et dignos nos faciat servitium eius adimplere.

10. Deo itaque auxiliante pro felicitate rei publicae nostrae per hanc divinam legem sancimus, ut omnis Africa, quam deus nobis praestitit, per ipsius misericordiam optimum suscipiat ordinem et propriam habeat praefecturam, ut sicut Oriens atque Illyricum, ita et Africa praetoriana maxima potestate specialiter a nostra clementia decoretur. 11. Cuius sedem iubemus esse Carthaginem et in praefatione publicarum chartarum praefecturis aliis eius nomen adiungi, quam nunc tuam excellentiam gubernare decernimus.

12. Et ab ea auxiliante deo septem provinciae cum suis iudicibus disponantur, quarum Zeugi quae proconsularis antea vocabatur, Carthago et Byzacium ac Tripolis rectores habeant consulares: reliquae vero, id est Numidia et Mauritaniae et Sardinia, a praesidibus cum dei auxilio gubernentur. 13. Et in officio quidem tuae magnitudinis nec non pro tempore viri magnifici praefecti Africae trecentos nonaginta sex viros per diversa scrinia et officia militare decernimus. in officiis vero consularium ac praesidum quinquaginta homines per singula officia esse sancimus. 14. Quae vero emolumenta sive magnificentia tua sive been cut out at the root; and others, after sundry tortures, passed their lives in exile scattered throughout sundry provinces.

5. With what words, or with what works, might We rise to give worthy thanks to God, because through Me, the least of his servants, He has deigned to avenge the wrongs done to his Church and to tear the peoples of so many provinces[314] from under the yoke of slavery? 6. Our predecessors did not merit this gift of God; they not only were not permitted to liberate Africa, but they also saw Rome herself captured by the same Vandals and all the insignia of the Emperors (imperialia ornamenta) brought thence to Africa. 7. But now God in his mercy has not only placed Africa and all its provinces in Our hands but has also restored to Us the insignia of the Emperors themselves, which had been taken when Rome was captured. 8. Therefore, after the great favors which the Deity has showered on Us, We ask this of the mercy of Our Lord God: that He keep the provinces which He has deigned to restore to Us strong and unharmed and cause Us to govern them at His will and pleasure; and that all Africa feel the mercy of Almighty God, and its inhabitants recognize from what most cruel captivity and barbarian yoke they have been freed and in what great liberty, under Our most felicitous reign, they have been found worthy to live. 9. Asking also this, We beseech (God) through the prayers of the Holy and Glorious Ever-Virgin Mary, Mother of God, that He may, in His name, restore whatever is lacking in Our State and make Us, the least of His servants, worthy to do His service.

10. With the help of God, accordingly, We decree by this divine law for the happiness of Our empire that all Africa, which God has granted Us, shall receive, through His mercy, the best organization and shall have its own prefecture, so that, just as Oriens and Illyricum, so too shall Africa through Our Clemency be adorned specially by the supreme Praetorian Magistracy. 11. We order Carthage to be its seat and its name to be added to the other prefectures in the preface of public documents; which prefecture We now decree Your Excellency shall govern.

12. And, with the help of God, seven provinces with their governors shall be created in this prefecture; of which, Zeugi, which was formerly called "Proconsular," Carthage, Byzacium, and Tripolis shall have consular governors; the rest, that is, Numidia, the Mauretanias, and Sardinia, shall, with the help of God, be governed by ordinary governors (praesides). 13. And We decree that 396 men shall serve in the various bureaus and offices in the staff of Your Greatness and of (every) acting Prefect of Africa, vir magnificus. As to the staffs of the consular and ordinary governors, however, We decree that there shall be fifty men in the staff of each. 14. A schedule appended below shows the perquisites that Your Magnificence or the consulars and ordinary consulares et praesides et quid unusquisque ex officio eorum de publico consequi debet, notitia subter adnexa declarat.

[314] tantarum, properly "such great (provinces)," for "so many" (tot).

15. Optamus ergo, ut omnes iudices nostri secundum voluntatem et timorem dei et nostram electionem atque ordinationem sic suas administrationes gubernare studeant, ut nullus eorum aut cupiditati sit deditus aut violentias aliquas vel ipse inferat vel iudicibus aut officiis eorum aut quibuscumque aliis collatoribus inferre permittat. licet enim per omnes provincias nostras deo iuvante festinemus, ut illaesos habeant collatores, maxime tamen tributariis dioeceseos Africanae consulimus, qui post tantorum temporum captivitatem meruerunt deo iuvante per nos lumen libertatis adspicere. 16. Ergo iubemus omnes violentias et omnem avaritiam cessare et iustitiam atque veritatem circa omnes nostros tributarios reservari. sic enim et deus placatur et ipsi possunt celerius, sicut collatores alii nostrae rei publicae, relevari atque florere. 17. Sportulas etiam ab officio tam viri magnifici praefecti Africani quam reliquorum iudicum sic exigi iubemus, quomodo in nostris legibus est dispositum et ab omni re publica nostra custoditur, ut nullus audeat quocumque tempore vel quocumque modo earum excedere quantitatem. 18. Hoc etiam praesenti sanctione credimus ordinandum, ut non multa dispendia pro completione chartarum vel codicillorum vel in nostro laterculo vel in scriniis praefecti praetoriorum per Africam iudices sustinere videantur, quia, si ipsi dispendiis laesi non fuerint, nullam habeant necessitatem eiusdem nostrae Africae tributarios praegravandi. 19. Iubemus ergo, ut iudices dioeceseos Africanae tam civiles quam militares in nostro laterculo pro codicillorum atque chartularum promotionis suae consuetudinibus nihil ultra quam sex solidos praebeant, at vero in scrinio praefectorum non ultra duodecim solidos cogantur inferre. 20. Quem modum si quis excesserit, ipse quidem iudex triginta librarum auri dispendio subiacebit, officium vero eius non solum simile dispendium, sed et capitale periculum sustinebit. nam si aliquis ex quacumque parte ausus fuerit iussiones nostras excedere et non festinaverit cum dei timore eas servare, non solum dignitatis aut substantiae periculum sustinebit, sed etiam ultimo supplicio subiacebit.

21. Et est notitia deo auxiliante:

Pro annonis et capitu pro tempore praefecti praetorio per totam Africam auri libras centum.

governors, and what each member of their staffs should receive from the public funds.

15. We desire, therefore, that all our governors thus strive to administer their offices according to the will and fear of God and as befits Our selection and appointment, so that none of them should be given to greed and either himself inflict acts of violence on the taxpayers or permit governors or their official staff or any others to do so. For although We hasten through all Our provinces so that, with the help of God, they may keep their taxpayers unharmed, yet We take the greatest care for the taxpayers in the diocese of Africa, who after so long a captivity have, by the aid of God, been permitted, through Us to behold the light of liberty. 16. Therefore, We order all violence and all greed to cease, and justice and truth to be safeguarded for all Our taxpayers; for thus both God is pleased and the taxpayers themselves, just as others in Our State, can more quickly be relieved and flourish. 17. We order judicial fees to be collected by the staff both of the vir magnificus Prefect of Africa and of the other governors as established in Our laws and observed in all Our State, so that no one should dare, at any time or by any means, to exceed that amount. 18. We believe that this too should be fixed by the present decree: that the governors not appear to bear many expenses for the making of records (chartulae) or codicils of appointment, whether in Our Register (in nostro laterculo) or in the bureaus of the Praetorian Prefect of Africa; because, if they themselves are not aggrieved by these expenses, they shall have no need to burden the taxpayers of Our Africa. 19. We therefore order that the governors of the African diocese, both civil and military, shall give no more than 6 solidi for the customary codicils and records of their appointment in Our Register, and in the bureau of the Prefects they shall be compelled to pay no more than 12 solidi. 20. If anyone exceeds this amount, the governor himself shall be liable to a loss of 30 pounds of gold; his official staff shall suffer not only a similar loss but also capital punishment. For if anyone in any place should dare to transgress Our commands and not strive, in fear of God, to keep them, not only shall he undergo risk to his good name and property, but he will also be subjected to capital punishment.

21. With the help of God, the schedule is as follows:

For the rations (annona) and fodder (capitus)[315] of the acting Praetorian Prefect of all Africa: 100 pounds of gold.

For the rations of the counselors (consiliarii): 20 pounds of gold.

For the rations of the public secretaries (cancellarii): 7 pounds of gold.

[315] Late antique government salaries were originally paid in kind; annona was an allowance of grain and capitus (or capitum) an allowance of fodder (for horses). By Justinian's day, these salaries were commuted to cash, but the terms annona and capitus were retained as accounting units.

Pro annonis consiliariorum auri libras viginti.

Pro annonis cancellariorum auri libras septem.

22. Item officiis eius ita:

In scrinio primo hominibus decem pro annonis XVIIIIS, pro capitu XIIS, fiunt solidi CXLVIIS. ita: numerario pro annonis VI annona solidorum V et pro capitu IIII capitus solidorum IIII, fiunt solidi XLVI. secundo pro annonis III annona solidorum V et pro capitu II capitus solidorum IIII, fiunt solidi XXIII. tertio pro annonis II annona solidorum V et pro capitu IS capitus solidorum IIII, fiunt solidi XVI. quarto quinto et sexto ad annonas IS annona solidorum V et ad capitum I capitus solidorum IIII, fiunt solidi XXXIIIIS. reliquis quattuor ad annonas I annona solidorum V et ad capitum S capitus solidorum IIII, fiunt solidi XXVIII.

23. In scrinio secundo ut supra scriptum est. in scrinio tertio ut supra scriptum est. in scrinio quarto ut supra scriptum est.

24. In scrinio primiscrinii, quod est subadiuvae, hominibus decem annonae XIIII capita XIS, fiunt solidi CXVI. ita: primiscrinio pro annonis III annona solidorum V et pro capitu II capitus solidorum IIII, fiunt solidi XXIII. secundo pro annonis II, annona solidorum ut supra scriptum est, et pro capitu IS, capitus solidorum ut supra scriptum est, fiunt solidi XVI. tertio et quarto pro annonis IS, annona solidorum ut supra scriptum est, et pro capitu I, capitus solidorum ut supra scriptum est, fiunt solidi XXIII. reliquis hominibus sex ad annonam I annona solidorum V et pro capitu I capitus solidorum IIII, fiunt solidi LIIII.

25. In scrinio commentariensis hominibus duodecim annonae XVII capita XIIIIS, fiunt solidi CXLIII. ita: primo commentariensi annonae III annona solidorum V, pro capitu II capitus solidorum IIII, fiunt solidi XXIII. sequentes homines tres ad annonas II annona solidorum V, pro capitu IS capitus solidorum IIII, fiunt solidi XLVIII. reliqui homines octo ad annonam I annona solidorum V et ad capitum I capitus solidorum IIII, fiunt solidi LXXII.

26. In scrinio ab actis hominibus decem annonae XIIII capita XII, fiunt solidi CXVIII. ita: primo annonae III pro annona I solidi V, capita II capitus solidorum IIII, fiunt solidi XXIII. secundo et tertio ad annonas II pro annona I solidi V et ad capitum IS capitus solidorum IIII, fiunt solidi XXXXII. reliquis septem ad annonam I annona solidorum V et ad capitum I capitus solidorum IIII, fiunt solidi LXIII.

27. In scrinio libellorum hominibus sex annonae VIIS capita VIS, fiunt solidi LXIIIS. ita: primo annonae II pro annona solidi V, pro capitu IS capitus solidorum IIII, fiunt solidi XVI. secundo annona IS pro annona

22. Likewise for the members of his official staff, as follows:

In the first bureau: ten men, 19½ in rations, 12½ in fodder, totaling 147½ solidi. As follows: to the chief accountant (numerarius), 6 rations of 5 solidi and 4 fodder of 4 solidi, totaling 46 solidi. To the second official, 3 rations of 5 solidi and 2 fodder of 4 solidi, totaling 23 solidi. To the third official, 2 rations of 5 solidi and 1½ fodder of 4 solidi, totaling 16 solidi. To the fourth, fifth, and sixth officials, 1½ rations of 5 solidi and 1 fodder of 4 solidi, totaling 34½ solidi. To the four remaining officials, 1 ration of 5 solidi and ½ fodder of 4 solidi, totaling 28 solidi.

23. In the second bureau, as written above. In the third bureau, as written above. In the fourth bureau, as written above.

24. In the bureau of the chief aide (primiscrinius), that is, the assistant (subadiuva): ten men, 14 rations, 11½ fodder, totaling 116 solidi. As follows: to the primiscrinius, 3 rations of 5 solidi and 2 fodder of 4 solidi, totaling 23 solidi. To the second in rank, 2 rations of the value in solidi as written above and 1½ fodder of the value in solidi as written above, totaling 16 solidi. To the third and fourth, 1½ rations of the value in solidi as written above and 1 fodder of the value in solidi as written above, totaling 23 solidi. To the six remaining men, 1 ration of 5 solidi and 1 fodder of 4 solidi, totaling 54 solidi.

25. In the bureau of the chief jailor (commentariensis): twelve men, 17 rations and 14½ fodder, totaling 143 solidi. As follows: to the first jailor, 3 rations of 5 solidi, 2 fodder of 4 solidi, totaling 23 solidi. The following three men: 2 rations of 5 solidi, 1½ fodder of 4 solidi, totaling 48 solidi. The remaining eight men: 1 ration of 5 solidi and 1 fodder of 4 solidi, totaling 72 solidi.

26. In the bureau of the chief record-keeper (ab actis): ten men,.14 rations, 12 fodder, totaling 118 solidi. As follows: to the first, 3 rations of 5 solidi per ration, 2 fodder of 4 solidi, totaling 23 solidi. To the second and third: 2 rations of 5 solidi per ration and 1½ fodder of 4 solidi, totaling 32 solidi. To the remaining seven: 1 ration of 5 solidi and 1 fodder of 4 solidi, totaling 63 solidi.

27. In the bureau of petitions (scrinium libellorum): six men, 7½ rations, 6½ fodder, totaling 63½ solidi. As follows: to the first, 2 rations at 5 solidi per ration, 1½ fodder of 4 solidi, totaling 16 solidi. To the second, 1½ rations of 5 solidi v, pro capitu i capitus solidorum iiii, fiunt solidi xis. reliquis hominibus quattuor ad annonas i annona solidorum v et ad capitum i capitus solidorum iiii, fiunt solidi xxxvi.

28. In schola exceptorum hominibus sexaginta annonae lxxiiii capita lxii solidi dcxviii. ita: primo et secundo ad annonas iii pro annona solidi v et ad capita ii capitus solidorum iiii, fiunt solidi xlvi. aliis hominibus quinque ad annonas ii annona solidorum v et ad capitum i capitus solidorum iiii, fiunt solidi lxx. reliquis hominibus decem ad annonas is annona solidorum v et ad capitum i capitus solidorum iiii, fiunt solidi cxv. reliquis hominibus quadraginta tribus ad annonas i annona solidorum v et ad capitum i capitus solidorum iiii, fiunt solidi ccclxxxvii.

29. In schola singulariorum hominibus quinquaginta annonae liis capita l solidi cccclxiis. ita: primo annonae ii annona solidorum v, capitus i capitus solidorum iiii, fiunt solidi xiiii. secundo tertio et quarto ad annonas is annona solidorum v et ad capitum i capitus solidorum iiii, fiunt solidi xxxiiiis. reliquis hominibus quadraginta sex ad annonam i annona solidorum v et ad capitum i capitus solidorum iiii, fiunt solidi ccccxiiii.

30. In schola mittendariorum hominibus quinquaginta annonae liis capita l solidi cccclxiis. ita: primo annonae ii annona solidorum v, capitus i capitus solidorum iiii, fiunt solidi xiiii. secundo tertio et quarto ad annonam is annona solidorum v et ad capitum i capitus solidorum iiii, fiunt solidi xxxiiiis. reliquis hominibus quadraginta sex ad annonam i annona solidorum v et ad capitum i capitus solidorum iiii, fiunt solidi ccccxiiii.

31. In schola cursorum hominibus triginta annonae xxxiis capita xxx solidi cclxxxiis. ita: primo annonae ii annona solidorum v, capitus i capitus solidorum iiii, fiunt solidi xiiii. secundo et tertio et quarto ad annonam is annona solidorum v et ad capitum i capitus solidorum iiii, fiunt solidi xxxiiiis. reliquis hominibus viginti sex ad annonam i annona solidorum v et ad capitum i capitus solidorum iiii, fiunt solidi ccxxxiiii.

32. In schola nomenculatorum hominibus duodecim annonae xiii capita xiis solidi cxv. ita: primo annonae ii annona solidorum v, capitus is capitus solidorum iiii, fiunt solidi xvi. reliquis hominibus undecim ad annonam i annona solidorum v et ad capitum i capitus solidorum iiii, fiunt solidi xcviiii.

solidi, 1 fodder of 4 solidi, totaling 11½ solidi. To the remaining 4 men: 1 ration of 5 solidi and 1 fodder of 4 solidi, totaling 36 solidi.

28. In the corps (schola) of shorthand writers (exceptores): sixty men, 74 rations, 62 fodder, 618 solidi. As follows: to the first and second clerk, 3 rations at 5 solidi per ration and 2 fodder of 4 solidi, totaling 46 solidi. To the next five men, 2 rations of 5 solidi and 1 fodder of 4 solidi, totaling 70 solidi. To the remaining ten men, 1½ rations of 5 solidi and 1 fodder of 4 solidi, totaling 115 solidi. To the remaining forty-three men, 1 ration of 5 solidi and 1 fodder of 4 solidi, totaling 387 solidi.

29. In the corps of the horsemen (singularii): fifty men, 52½ rations, 50 fodder, 462½ solidi. As follows: to the first, 2 rations of 5 solidi, 1 fodder of 4 solidi, totaling 14 solidi. To the second, third, and fourth, 1½ rations of 5 solidi and 1 fodder of 4 solidi, totaling 34½ solidi. To the remaining forty-six men, 1 ration of 5 solidi and 1 fodder of 4 solidi, totaling 414 solidi.

30. In the corps of the messengers (mittendarii): fifty men, 52½ rations, 50 fodder, 462½ solidi. As follows: to the first, 2 rations of 5 solidi, 1 fodder of 4 solidi, totaling 14 solidi. To the second, third, and fourth, 1½ rations of 5 solidi and 1 fodder of 4 solidi, totaling 34½ solidi. To the remaining forty-six men, 1 ration of 5 solidi and 1 fodder of 4 solidi, totaling 414 solidi.

31. In the corps of the couriers (cursores): thirty men, 32½ rations, 30 fodder, 282 ½ solidi. As follows: to the first, 2 rations of 5 solidi, 1 fodder of 4 solidi, totaling 14 solidi. To the second, third, and fourth, 1½ rations of 5 solidi and 1 fodder of 4 solidi, totaling 34½ solidi. To the remaining twenty-six men, 1 ration of 5 solidi and 1 fodder of 4 solidi, totaling 234 solidi.

32. In the corps of the nomenclators: twelve men, 13 rations, 12½ fodder, 115 solidi. As follows: to the first, 2 rations of 5 solidi, 1½ fodder of 4 solidi, totaling 16 solidi. To the remaining eleven men, 1 ration of 5 solidi and 1 fodder of 4 solidi, totaling 99 solidi.

33. In schola stratorum hominibus sex annonae VII capita VI solidi LVIIII. ita: primo annonae II annona solidorum V, capitus I capitus solidorum IIII, fiunt solidi XIIII. reliquis hominibus quinque ad annonas I pro annona solidos V et ad capitum I pro capitu solidos IIII, fiunt solidi XLV.

34. In schola praeconum hominibus decem annonae XI capita XS solidi XCVII. ita: primo annonae II pro annona solidos V, capitus IS pro capitu solidos IIII, fiunt solidi XVI. reliquis hominibus novem ad annonam I pro annona solidos V et ad capitum I pro capitu solidos IIII, fiunt solidi LXXXI.

35. In schola draconariorum hominibus decem annonae XI capita XS solidi XCVII. ita: primo annonae II pro annona solidos V, capitus IS pro capitu solidos IIII, fiunt solidi XVI. reliquis hominibus novem ad annonam I pro annona solidos V et ad capitum I pro capitu solidos IIII, fiunt solidi LXXXI.

36. In scrinio operum hominibus viginti annonae XXVIII capita XXI solidi CCXXIIII. ita: primo annonae III pro annona solidi V, capita II pro capitu solidi IIII, fiunt solidi XXIII. reliquis hominibus tribus ad annonas II pro annona solidi V et ad capitum I pro capitu solidi IIII, fiunt solidi XLII. reliquis aliis hominibus sex ad annonam IS pro annona solidi V et ad capitum I pro capitu solidi IIII, fiunt solidi LXVIIII. reliquis aliis hominibus decem ad annonam I pro annona solidi V et ad capitum I pro capitu solidi IIII, fiunt solidi XC.

37. In scrinio arcae hominibus viginti annonae XXVIII capita XXI solidi CCXXIIII. ita: primo annonae III pro annona solidi V, capita II pro capitu solidi IIII, fiunt solidi XXIII. reliquis hominibus tribus ad annonas II pro annona solidi V et ad capitum I pro capitu solidi IIII, fiunt solidi XLII. reliquis aliis hominibus sex ad annonam IS pro annona solidi V et ad capitum I pro capitu solidi IIII, fiunt solidi LXVIIII. reliquis aliis hominibus decem ad annonam I pro annona solidi V et ad capitum I pro capitu solidi IIII, fiunt solidi XC.

38. In schola chartulariorum hominibus quinquaginta annonae LVIII capita LIIS solidi D. ita: primo annonae III pro annona solidi V, capita II pro capitu solidi IIII, fiunt solidi XXIII. reliquis hominibus tribus ad annonas II pro annona solidi V et ad capitum IS pro capitu solidi IIII, fiunt solidi XLVIII. reliquis aliis hominibus sex ad annonam IS pro annona solidi V et ad capitum I pro capitu solidi IIII, fiunt solidi LXVIIII. reliquis aliis hominibus quadraginta ad annonam I pro annona solidi V et ad capitum I pro capitu solidi IIII, fiunt solidi CCCLX.

33. In the corps of the jailors (stratores): six men, 7 rations, 6 fodder, 59 solidi. As follows: to the first, 2 rations of 5 solidi, 1 fodder of 4 solidi, totaling 14 solidi. To the remaining five men, 5 solidi for 1 ration and 4 solidi for 1 fodder, totaling 45 solidi.

34. In the corps of the heralds (praecones): ten men, 11 rations, 10½ fodder, 97 solidi. As follows: to the first, 2 rations at 5 solidi per ration, 1½ fodder at 4 solidi per fodder, totaling 16 solidi. To the remaining nine men, 5 solidi for 1 ration, 4 solidi for 1 fodder, totaling 81 solidi.

35. In the corps of the standard-bearers (draconarii): ten men, 11 rations, 10½ fodder, 97 solidi. As follows: to the first, 2 rations at 5 solidi per ration, 1½ fodder at 4 solidi per fodder, totaling 16 solidi. To the remaining nine men, 1 ration of 5 solidi and 1 fodder of 4 solidi, totaling 81 solidi.

36. In the bureau of public works: twenty men, 28 rations, 21 fodder, 224 solidi. As follows: to the first, 3 rations at 5 solidi per ration, 2 fodder at 4 solidi per fodder, totaling 23 solidi. To the next three men, 2 rations at 5 solidi per ration and 1 fodder of 4 solidi, totaling 42 solidi. To the next six, 1½ rations of 5 solidi and 1 fodder of 4 solidi, totaling 69 solidi. To the next ten, 1 ration of 5 solidi and 1 fodder of 4 solidi, totaling 90 solidi.

37. In the bureau of the treasury (arca): twenty men, 28 rations, 21 fodder, 224 solidi. As follows: to the first, 3 rations at 5 solidi per ration, 2 fodder at 4 solidi per fodder, totaling 23 solidi. To the next three men, 2 rations at 5 solidi per ration and 1 fodder at 4 solidi per fodder, totaling 42 solidi. To the next 6 men, 1½ rations at 5 solidi per ration and 1 fodder at 4 solidi per fodder, totaling 69 solidi. To the remaining ten men, 1 ration at 5 solidi per ration and 1 fodder at 4 solidi per fodder, totaling 90 solidi.

38. In the corps of the record-keepers (chartularii): fifty men, 58 rations, 52½ fodder, 500 solidi. As follows: to the first, 3 rations of 5 solidi per ration, 2 fodder of 4 solidi per ration, totaling 23 solidi. For the next three men, 2 rations at 5 solidi per ration and 1½ fodder at 4 solidi per ration, totaling 48 solidi. To the next six men, 1½ rations at 5 solidi per ration and 1 fodder at 4 solidi per ration, totaling 69 solidi. To the remaining forty men, 1 ration at 5 solidi per ration and 1 fodder at 4 solidi per ration, totaling 360 solidi.

39. Fiunt homines CCCXCVI, annonae CCCCXCVIII solidorum ĪĪCCCCXC, capita CCCCXXS solidorum MDCLXXXII, fiunt solidi ĪĪĪĪCLXXII.

40. Item pro annonis et capitu consularis solidi CCCCXLVIII. officiorum eius solidi CLX.

41. Pro tempore medicis hominibus quinque annonae XLVIIII capita XVIIIS solidi CCCXVIIII. ita: primo pro annonis XV capitibus VI solidi IC. secundo pro annonis X capitibus V solidi LXX. reliquis hominibus tribus ad annonas VIII et ad capita IIS solidi CL.

42. Grammaticis hominibus duobus ad annonas X et ad capita V, ad solidos LXX. sophistis oratoribus hominibus duobus ad annonas X, ad capita V, ad solidos LXX.

43. Haec igitur, quae pro disponendis civilibus iudicibus Africae eorumque officiis, id est tam scriniariis amplissimae eius praefecturae quam cohortalibus, per hanc divinam constitutionem statuimus, tua magnitudo cognoscens ex kalendis Septembribus futurae tertiae decimae indictionis effectui mancipari observarique procuret atque edictis publicis omnibus innotescant: his scilicet, qui ordinati fuerint a tua sublimitate secundum praesentem divinam constitutionem, firmitatem sui status in perpetuo habituris. nam deo iuvante de militaribus iudicibus et de officiis eorum et de alio nostro exercitu per aliam sanctionem statuimus.

Emissa lex <k. Apr.> Constantinopoli d.n. Iustiniano pp. A. IIII et Paulino vc. conss.

[2] Imp. Iustinianus A. Belisario magistro militum per Orientem. pr. In nomine domini nostri Ihesu Christi ad omnia consilia omnesque actus semper progredimur. per ipsum enim imperii iura suscepimus, per ipsum pacem cum Persis in aeternum confirmavimus, per ipsum acerbissimos hostes et fortissimos tyrannos deiecimus, per ipsum multas difficultates superavimus, per ipsum et Africam defendere et sub nostrum imperium redigere nobis concessum est, per ipsum quoque, ut nostro moderamine recte gubernetur et firme custodiatur, confidimus. 1. Unde iam per eius gratiam civilium administrationum iudices et officia singulis Africanis provinciis constituimus, attribuentes, quid emolumentorum unusquisque percipere debeat. ad eius igitur providentiam etiam nunc animum nostrum referentes et armatas militias et duces limitum[xxix] ordinare disponimus.

[xxix] S. Corcoran, "The Würzburg Fragment" (2016).

39. In total there are 396 men, 498 rations of 2,490 solidi, 420½ fodder of 1,682 solidi, totaling 4,172 solidi.

40. Likewise for the rations and fodder of the consular, 448 solidi. For his official staff, 160 solidi.[316]

41. For the acting physicians: five men, 49 rations, 18½ fodder, totaling 319 solidi. As follows: to the first, 90 solidi for 15 rations, 6 fodder. To the second, 70 solidi for 10 rations, 5 fodder. To the remaining three, 150 solidi for 8 rations and 2½ fodder.

42. For the grammarians: two men, 10 rations and 5 fodder, 70 solidi. For the orators (sophistae oratores): two men, 10 rations, 5 fodder, 70 solidi.

43. Your Greatness, therefore, shall take note of what We have ordained by this divine constitution regarding the placement of the civil governors of Africa and their staffs, that is, both the officials of the bureaus of the Most Exalted Prefecture and the officials of the provincial governors, and you shall see to it that these things are put it into effect from September 1 of the coming thirteenth indiction,[317] and that they become known to all by public edicts. Of course, the men who shall be appointed by Your Sublimity according to the present divine constitution shall continue to keep firm possession of their present status. We have, with the aid of God, made provision for the military governors and their staffs and for Our other army in another decree.

Law issued April 1, from Constantinople, in the consulship of Our Lord Justinian, Ever Augustus, for the fourth time, and the vir clarissimus Paulinus (534).[318]

[2] The same Augustus to Belisarius, Master of Soldiers in the Orient.[319] pr. In the name of Our Lord Jesus Christ We always enter into every counsel and all deeds. Through Him We have received the rights of empire; through Him We have established peace with the Persians for ever; through Him We have cast down the bitterest enemies and mightiest tyrants; through Him We have overcome many difficulties; through Him it has been permitted to Us both to defend Africa and to bring it under Our power; and through Him We trust that it shall be rightly governed and securely guarded under Our rule. 1. Hence, We have already, through His grace, established governors and their staffs in the civil administration of each African province, assigning to them the perquisites that each one should receive. And now again taking forethought for it, We have resolved to establish both its armed forces and Dukes of the Frontiers.

[316] At this point, it appears that the official staff of the province Zeugitana and the other six provinces have been lost; cf. §12.

[317] On the indiction, see note above on C. 1.17.2.23.

[318] The subscription has been restored in full on the basis of the Würzburg fragments (Corcoran, "Würzburg Fragment," 2016); see also Dillon (2015). Lounghis et al. had dated to April 13, 534.

[319] The inscription in the Würzburg fragments corresponds: [Id. A. Belisario] mag. mil. perorient(m). (Corcoran).

1a. Sancimus itaque, ut dux limitis Tripolitanae provinciae in Leptimagnensi civitate sedes interim habeat, dux vero Byzacenae provinciae in Capsa et Thelepte civitatibus interim sedeat, dux autem Numidiae provinciae in Constantinensi civitate sedes interim habeat, dux autem Mauritaniae provinciae in Caesariensi civitate interim sedeat. 2. Iubemus etiam, ut in traiectu, qui est contra Hispaniam, quod Septem dicitur, quantos providerit tua magnitudo, de militibus una cum tribuno suo, homine prudente et devotionem servante rei publicae nostrae per omnia, constituas, qui possit et ipsum traiectum semper servare et omnia, quaecumque in partibus Hispaniae vel Galliae seu Francorum aguntur, viro spectabili duci nuntiare, ut ipse tuae magnitudini referat. in quo traiectu etiam dromones, quantos provideris, ordinari facias.

3. In Sardinia autem iubemus ducem ordinari et eum iuxta montes, ubi Barbaricini videntur, sedere habentem milites pro custodia locorum, quantos et ubi tua magnitudo providerit. 4. Et omnes diligenter pro commissis suae custodiae provinciis invigilent et ab omni hostium incursione subiectos nostros tueantur illaesos et festinent, die noctuque dei invocando auxilium et diligenter laborando, usque ad illos fines provincias Africanas extendere, ubi ante invasionem Vvandalorum et Maurorum res publica Romana fines habuerat et ubi custodes antiqui servabant, sicut ex clusuris et burgis ostenditur. 4a. Maxime autem civitates, quae prope clusuras et fines antea tenebantur, cum essent sub Romano imperio constitutae, auxiliante divina misericordia, cum hostes per partes expelluntur, festinantes comprehendere atque manere et in illis locis duces et milites per partes accedant, ubi antea fines et clusurae provinciarum erant, quando integrae Africanae servabantur sub Romano imperio provinciae:

4b. Quod deo adnuente, cuius auxilio nobis restitutae sunt, speramus cito nostris provenire temporibus, et ut in securitate et pace provinciae cum antiquis finibus integrae serventur et vigiliis ac laboribus devotissimorum militum et cura spectabilium pro tempore ducum custodiantur illaesae, quoniam ita convenit, ut semper custodes fines provinciae servent, ne detur hostibus licentia incurrendi aut devastandi loca, quae nostri subiecti possident. 5. Quantos autem milites sive pedestres sive equites per unumquemque limitem qui debent[xxx] ad custodiendas provincias et civitates, tua magnitudo, prout consideraverit, ordinet et nobis referat, ut, si perviderimus sufficientem esse ordinationem, confirmemus eam, sin autem perspexerimus et aliquid amplius fieri,

[xxx] qui praesunt habere debent (Mommsen)

1a. We therefore decree that the Duke of the Frontier of the province of Tripolitana shall have his seat presently in the city of Leptis Magna; the Duke of the province of Byzacena, presently in Capsa and Thelepte; the Duke of the province of Numidia shall have his seat presently in the city of Constantina; the Duke of the province of Mauritania shall reside presently in the city of Caesarea. 2. We also order that Your Greatness shall place as many soldiers as you see fit at the strait opposite Spain, which is called Septem,[320] together with their Tribune, a man of prudence and in all things devoted to Our State, who can both always guard the strait itself and report to the vir spectabilis Duke everything that occurs in Spain and Gaul or rather among the Franks, so that the latter may then report it to Your Greatness. You shall also have cutters (dromones) stationed at this strait, as many as you see fit.

3. In Sardinia, though, We order a Duke to be appointed and to have his seat beside the mountains where the Barbaricini can be seen, with as many soldiers to guard the area and stationed as Your Greatness shall see fit. 4. And all shall diligently watch over the provinces entrusted to their care and keep Our subjects unharmed from every enemy attack and shall strive, invoking the help of God day and night and toiling diligently, to extend the African provinces to where the Roman State maintained its frontier and where the ancients kept watch before the invasions of the Vandals and Moors, as is shown by the forts and castles. 4a. And above all, when, with the help of divine mercy, the enemy is driven out of these regions, they shall strive to seize and hold the cities that were held near the castles and frontier when they were under Roman rule; and the Dukes and soldiers in these regions shall advance to where the borders and forts of the African provinces once were, when they were kept intact under Roman rule.

4b. With the assent of God, by whose help the provinces were restored to Us, We hope that this will swiftly come to pass in Our time, and that the provinces may be preserved intact in safety and peace within their ancient borders and may be kept unharmed by the vigilance and labors of the most devoted soldiers and by the attention of the acting viri spectabiles Dukes; for it is fitting that the guards always protect the boundaries of the province so that the enemy are given no opportunity to invade or devastate the places that Our subjects possess. 5. Your Greatness shall, at your discretion, station for each frontier region as many soldiers, whether infantry or cavalry, as those who command them should have to guard the provinces and cities; and you shall report this to Us, so that We may confirm this deployment, if We perceive that it is sufficient, or, if We perceive that something more could be done, increase it. 6. The appended schedule shows what the Duke, as well as his official staff, should receive for himself and his men as payment. 7. As has been said above, ut eam augmentemus. 6. Quid autem dux stipendiorum nomine pro se suisque hominibus et quid eius officium consequatur, hoc subdita declaratur notitia. 7. Sicut ergo praedictum est, interim nunc duces ac milites secundum nostram dispositionem in locis seu civitatibus quibus iussimus sedeant, donec deo auxiliante nobis ac rei publicae nostrae per labores nostros in illis locis constitui possint, in quibus uniuscuiusque provinciae antiquus limes constitutus erat, quando florente Romana re publica memoratae provinciae integrae tenebantur.

[320] Modern Ceuta.

8. Pro limitaneis vero ordinandis (quia necessarium nobis esse videtur, ut extra comitatenses milites per castra milites limitanei constituantur, qui possint et castra et civitates limitis defendere et terras colere, ut alii provinciales videntes eos per partes ad illa loca se conferant) exemplum fecimus unius numeri limitaneorum, ut secundum exemplum, quod nos misimus, per castra et loca, quae providerit tua magnitudo, eos ad similitudinem nostri exempli ordinet, sic tamen ut, si inveneris de provinciis idonea corpora, aut de illis, quos antea milites habebant, limitaneorum constituas numero in unoquoque limite, ut, si forsitan commotio aliqua fuerit, possint ipsi limitanei sine comitatensibus militibus una cum ducibus suis adiuvare loca, ubi dispositi fuerint, non longe limitem exeuntes nec ipsi limitanei nec duces eorum, ut nullum etiam dispendium a ducibus vel ducianis praedicti limitanei sustineant, nec aliquas sibi consuetudines de eorum stipendiis per fraudes ad suum lucrum convertant. haec autem non solum in limitaneos volumus observari, sed etiam in comitatenses milites.

9. Et unumquemque ducem et tribunos eorundem militum iubemus, ut semper milites ad exercitationem armorum teneant et non concedant eos divagari, ut, si quando necessitas contigerit, possint inimicis resistere: et nullum audeant duces aut tribuni commeatalem de ipsis dimittere, ne, dum sibi lucrum studeant conficere, incustoditas nostras relinquant provincias. 9a. Nam si usurpaverint memorati duces vel officia eorum seu tribuni commeatalem de militibus relinquere aut aliquod lucrum de eorum emolumentis subripere, hoc non solum in quadruplum iubemus publico dependere, sed etiam dignitate eos privari. 9b. Magis enim debent duces et tribuni supra deputata sibi emolumenta secundum labores suos de nostra largitate remunerationem sperare et non de commeatis militum aut de eorum stipendiis lucrum sibi adquirere, quoniam ideo ordinati sunt milites, ut per ipsos provinciae therefore, the Dukes and soldiers shall in the meanwhile reside in the places or cities in which, according to Our disposition, We have ordered them to do so, until, with God aiding Us and Our State, they can, by Our labors, be stationed in those places where the ancient frontier of each province was located, when the aforementioned provinces were held intact under the flourishing Roman State.

8. For the deployment of frontier troops (limitanei) – because it seems necessary to Us that in addition to field troops (comitatenses) frontier soldiers be stationed in camps, who could defend the camps and cities on the frontier and work the land, so that other provincials, upon seeing them in areas, shall also move to those places – We have drawn up an example of one unit of frontier soldiers, so that by following the example We have sent, Your Greatness may station them in camps and places as you shall see fit in a similar way to Our example; but in such a way that if you should find suitable men in the provinces or from among those they previously had as soldiers, you shall station them as frontier troops in each frontier region; thus, if some disturbance should arise, the frontier troops themselves, without the field troops, together with their Dukes, may help the places where they are stationed, and neither the frontier troops nor their Dukes need go far beyond the frontier, so that the aforementioned frontier troops shall suffer no loss at the hands of the Dukes or their officers, nor shall the latter fraudulently divert payments from the troops' wages to their own profit. We want these provisions to apply not only to the frontier troops but to the field troops as well.

9. And We order each Duke and their military Tribunes always to keep the soldiers training at arms and not to permit them to straggle, so that if an emergency should occur, they can resist the enemy; and the Dukes or Tribunes shall not dare of their own accord to send away any soldier on furlough (commeatalem dimittere), lest, while they pursue their own profit, they leave Our provinces unguarded. 9a. For if the aforementioned Dukes or their official staffs or the Tribunes should practice leaving soldiers on furlough and pilfer for themselves some profit from their perquisites, We order them not only to pay fourfold to the public treasury but also to be stripped of their rank. 9b. For the Dukes and Tribunes should hope from Our Generosity for remuneration in addition to their perquisites, according to their labor, and should not take profit for themselves from the furloughs of soldiers or from their wages, because the soldiers have been stationed precisely so that the provinces may be defended by them; especially since We have provided sufficient perquisites vindicentur: praecipue cum sufficienter et ipsis ducibus et officiis eorum emolumenta praestitimus et semper providimus unumquemque secundum labores suos ad meliores gradus et maiores dignitates perducere.

10. Postquam vero deo placuerit et per tuam magnitudinem limes omnis in antiquum statum pervenerit et bene ordinatus fuerit, tunc, ubicumque necessitas emerserit, viri spectabiles duces invicem sibi, quando usus exegerit, auxilium praebeant, ut provinciae seu limites eorum vigiliis et laboribus deo iuvante illaesi custodiantur. 11. Sicut autem iubemus audaces et feroces contra inimicos iudices ac milites nostros esse, sic volumus eos mites et benevolos circa collatores nostros existere et nullum damnum nullamque laesionem in eos efficere. si autem quisquam de militibus ausus fuerit quamcumque laesionem tributariis nostris inferre, periculo viri spectabilis ducis seu tribuni et principis digna vindicta afficiatur et indemnes tributarii nostri custodiantur. 12. Si vero pro quibusdam causis interpellatio apud nostros iudices facta fuerit, iubemus non amplius sportularum nomine, quam nostris legibus definitum est, executores accipere, poenam eisdem legibus insertam ex transgressione formidantes.

13. Cum autem deo adiuvante Africanae nostrae provinciae per tuam magnitudinem secundum nostram dispositionem ordinatae et limites in antiquum statum reducti et omnis Africa sic detenta fuerit, sicut erat, cum ergo haec omnia deo iuvante, praesente tua magnitudine, disposita et perfecta fuerint et per labores tuos antiquos fines omnis Africa receperit, et docuerit nos de omni ordinatione totius Africanae dioeceseos, id est quanti et qui milites in quibus locis vel civitatibus constituti sunt et quanti limitanei in quibus locis vel limitibus constituti sunt, tunc iubemus tuam magnitudinem ad nostram clementiam remeare.

14. Interea vero si aliquas civitates seu castella per limitem constituta perviderit tua magnitudo nimiae esse magnitudinis et propter hoc non posse bene custodiri, ad talem modum eas construi disponat, ut possint per paucos bene servari. 15. Cum autem magnitudo tua omnibus dispositis ad nos remeare iussa fuerit, tunc duces uniuscuiusque limitis, quotiens pro componendis civitatibus aut castris et pro stipendiis suis ac pro annonis aliquid opus habuerint, celerius ad virum magnificum praefectum per Africam significent, ut ipse quae necessaria fuerint festinet facere, ne aliqua protractio provinciis noceat. 16. Ea vero, quae ipse fecerit vel quae adhuc necessarie procuranda sunt, postea et memoratus vir magnificus praefectus Africae et viri spectabiles duces et de both to the Dukes themselves and to their staffs and have always taken care to promote every one of them to a better rank and higher status according to his labor.

10. Once it has pleased God, however, and the entire frontier has returned to its ancient state and is well ordered, then, whenever the necessity arises, the viri spectabiles Dukes shall, as need requires, provide aid to one another in turn, so that the provinces or frontiers may, with the help of God, be guarded unharmed by their vigilance and labors. 11. Just as We order Our governors and soldiers to be bold and fierce against the enemy, so We desire that they be mild and benevolent toward Our taxpayers and cause them no loss or injury. But if one of the soldiers should dare to inflict any injury on Our taxpayers, he shall, at the peril of the vir spectabilis Duke or Tribune, be stricken by a punishment worthy of the Emperor, and Our taxpayers shall be kept free from loss. 12. If, though, in certain cases, someone should formally go before Our governors, We order that the court clerks receive no more in fees than has been fixed by Our laws, and they shall fear the penalty included in those laws in the case of transgression.

13. When, moreover, with the help of God, Our African provinces shall have been organized by Your Greatness according to Our disposition, and the frontiers restored to their ancient state, and all Africa held just as it once was – when, therefore, with the help of God, all these things have been set in order and completed in the presence of Your Greatness, and by your labors all Africa has recovered its ancient borders, and you have informed Us of the entire organization of the whole African diocese, that is, how many and which soldiers have been stationed in which places or cities, and how many frontier troops have been stationed in which places or frontier regions zones, then We order Your Greatness to return to Our Clemency.

14. In the meanwhile, if Your Greatness should perceive that some cities or castles located along the frontier are too large and on that account cannot be guarded well, you will see to it that they are constructed in such a manner as to be easily kept by few men. 15. When, however, Your Greatness is ordered to return to Us, with everything set in order, then the Dukes of each frontier, whenever they have some need for setting the cities or camps in order or for wages and rations, shall promptly advise the vir magnificus Prefect of Africa, so that he himself may hasten to do what is required, lest any delay harm the provinces. 16. Whatever he does or whatever still requires attention, both the aforementioned vir magnificus Prefect of Africa and the viri spectabiles Dukes shall regularly inform Us, and of everything else done there, so that We may aliis omnibus quae ibi aguntur frequenter ad nos referant, ut bene facta confirmemus et, quae opportunius debent fieri, ex nostra dispositione peragantur.

17. Hoc etiam decernimus, ut duces, qui ordinandi sunt per Africanos limites, nihil amplius in sacratissimo palatio cuilibet personae aut dignitati vel in praetorio per Africam praefecturae vel magisteriae potestati praebeant, nisi quantum subter adnexa declarat notitia. 17a. Nam si quis amplius, quam in subdita notitia taxatum est, usurpaverit seu acceperit, triginta libras auri multae dependat nomine, cum et periculo indignationis nostrae serenitatis subiacebit: nulla alia qualibet persona aut dignitate aut officio accipiente aliquid ab eis praeter illos, quorum nomina in subiecta notitia continentur. 18. Ad haec iubemus, ut deo iuvante unusquisque dux seu eorum officia, secundum quod notitia subter adnexa detinet,[xxxi] emolumenta sua ex tributis Africanae provinciae ex kalendis Septembribus instantis felicissimae tertiae decimae indictionis percipiant.

19. Et est notitia: deo volente debent delegari ducibus et eorum officiis in Africa constitutis pro annonis et capitu per singulos annos praebendis ita:

20. Viro clarissimo duci tripolitanae provinciae et hominibus eius annonae CXC, singulis annonis solidi V, capita CLVIII, singulis capitibus solidi IIII, simul fiunt pro annonis et capitu solidi MDLXXXII.

21. Adsessori ducis et officio eius hominibus quadraginta annonae XCVIS, singulis annonis solidi V, capita XLVIII, singulis capitibus solidi IIII, simul fiunt pro annonis et capitu solidi DCLXXIIIIS dividuntur sic:

22. Adsessori uno annonae VIII capita IIII.

primicerio uno annonae V capita II.

numerario uno annonae IIII capita II.

ducenariis quattuor ad annonas IIIS, fiunt annonae XIIII, et ad capitum IS, fiunt capita VI.

centenariis sex ad annonas IIS, fiunt annonae XV, et ad capitum I, fiunt capita VI.

biarchis octo ad annonas II, fiunt annonae XVI, et ad capitum I, fiunt capita VIII.

[xxxi] destinet

confirm what has been done well, and that what should be done more suitably may be completed pursuant to Our directions.

17. This too We decree: that the Dukes who shall be appointed to the African frontier shall not give anything more to any person or ranking official in the Most Sacred Palace or to the Praetorian Prefecture in Africa or to the office of Master except the amount indicated in the schedule appended below. 17a. For if anyone takes or receives more than has been defined in the appended schedule, he shall forfeit 30 pounds of gold as a fine, while he shall also face the danger of the wrath of Our Serenity. No other person or official or official staff shall receive anything whatsoever from them except those whose names are listed in the appended schedule. 18. In addition, We order that, with the help of God, each Duke or their staffs shall, according to the amount defined in the schedule attached below, receive their perquisites from the tribute of the province of Africa from September 1 of the coming most prosperous thirteenth indiction.

19. And this is the schedule: God willing, there should be assigned to the Dukes and their staffs stationed in Africa as rations and fodder to be provided each year:

20. To the vir clarissimus Duke of the province of Tripolitana and to his men: 190 rations, 5 solidi to each ration (annona), 158 fodder (capitus),[321] 4 solidi to each fodder, which together for rations and fodder make 1,582 solidi.

21. To the judicial advisor (adsessor) of the Duke and his staff: forty men, 96½ rations, 5 solidi to each ration, 48 fodder, 4 solidi to each fodder, which together for rations and fodder make 674½ solidi, divided as follows:

22. To one judicial advisor: 8 rations, 4 fodder.

To one chief clerk (primicerius): 5 rations, 2 fodder.

To one chief accountant (numerarius): 4 rations, 2 fodder.

To four ducenarii: 3½ rations, totaling 14 rations; and 1½ fodder, totaling 6 fodder.

To six centenarii: 2½ rations, totaling 15 rations; and 1 fodder, totaling 6 fodder.

To eight biarchae: 2 rations, totaling 16 rations; and 1 fodder, totaling 8 fodder.

[321] On annona and capitus, see note on C. 1.27.1 above.

circitoribus novem ad annonas II, fiunt annonae XVIII, et ad capitum I, fiunt capita VIIII.

semissalibus undecim ad annonam IS, fiunt annonae XVIS, et ad capitum I, fiunt capita XI.

23. Item viro clarissimo duci byzacenae provinciae et hominibus eius annonae CXC, singulis annonis solidi V, capita CLVIII, singulis capitibus solidi IIII, simul fiunt pro annonis et capitu solidi MDLXXXII.

24. Adsessori ducis et officio eius hominibus quadraginta annonae XCVIS, singulis annonis solidi V, capita XLVIII, singulis capitibus solidi IIII, simul fiunt pro annonis et capitu solidi DCLXXIIIIS. dividuntur sic:

25. Adsessori uno annonae VIII capita IIII.

primicerio uno annonae V capita II.

numerario uno annonae IIII capita II.

ducenariis quattuor ad annonas IIIS, fiunt annonae XIIII, et ad capitum IS, fiunt capita VI.

centenariis sex ad annonas IIS, fiunt annonae XV, et ad capitum I, fiunt capita VI.

biarchis octo ad annonas II, fiunt annonae XVI, et ad capitum I, fiunt capita VIII.

circitoribus novem ad annonas II, fiunt annonae XVIII, et ad capitum I, fiunt capita VIIII.

semissalibus undecim ad annonam IS, fiunt annonae XVIS, et ad capitum I, fiunt capita XI.

26. Item viro clarissimo duci Numidiae provinciae et hominibus eius annonae CXC, singulis annonis solidi V, capita CLVIII, singulis capitibus solidi IIII, simul fiunt pro annonis et capitu solidi MDLXXXII.

27. Adsessori ducis et officio eius hominibus quadraginta annonae XCVIS, singulis annonis solidi V, capita XLVIII, singulis capitibus solidi IIII, simul fiunt pro annonis et capitu solidi DCLXXIIIIS. dividuntur sic:

28. Adsessori uno annonae VIII capita IIII.

primicerio uno annonae V capita II.

numerario uno annonae IIII capita II.

ducenariis quattuor ad annonas IIIS, fiunt annonae XIIII, et ad capitum IS, fiunt capita VI.

centenariis sex ad annonas IIS, fiunt annonae XV, et ad capitum I, fiunt capita VI.

biarchis octo ad annonas II, fiunt annonae XVI, et ad capitum I, fiunt capita VIII.

circitoribus novem ad annonas II, fiunt annonae XVIII, et ad capitum I, fiunt capita VIIII.

To nine circitores: 2 rations, totaling 18 rations; and 1 fodder, totaling 9 fodder.

To eleven semissales: 1½ rations, totaling 16½ rations; and 1 fodder, totaling 11 fodder.

23. Likewise to the vir clarissimus Duke of the province of Byzacena and his men: 190 rations, 5 solidi to each ration, 158 fodder, 4 solidi to each fodder, which together for rations and fodder make 1,582 solidi.

24. To the judicial advisor of the Duke and his staff: forty men, 96½ rations, 5 solidi to each ration, 48 fodder, 4 solidi to each fodder, which together for rations and fodder make 674½ solidi, divided as follows:

25. To one judicial advisor: 8 rations, 4 fodder.

To one chief clerk: 5 rations, 2 fodder.

To one chief accountant: 4 rations, 2 fodder.

To four ducenarii: 3½ rations, totaling 14 rations; and 1½ fodder, totaling 6 fodder.

To six centenarii: 2½ rations, totaling 15 rations; and 1 fodder, totaling 6 fodder.

To eight biarchae: 2 rations, totaling 16 rations; and 1 fodder, totaling 8 fodder.

To nine circitores: 2 rations, totaling 18 rations; and 1 fodder, totaling 9 fodder.

To eleven semissales: 1½ rations, totaling 16 ½ rations; and 1 fodder, totaling 11 fodder.

26. Likewise to the vir clarissimus Duke of the province of Numidia and his men: 190 rations, 5 solidi to each ration, 158 fodder, 4 solidi to each fodder, which together for rations and fodder make 1,582 solidi.

27. To the judicial advisor of the Duke and his staff: forty men, 96½ rations, 5 solidi to each ration, 48 fodder, 4 solidi to each fodder, which together for rations and fodder make 674½ solidi, divided as follows:

28. To one judicial advisor: 8 rations, 4 fodder.

To one chief clerk: 5 rations, 2 fodder.

To one chief accountant: 4 rations, 2 fodder.

To four ducenarii: 3½ rations, totaling 14 rations; and 1½ fodder, totaling 6 fodder.

To six centenarii: 2½ rations, totaling 15 rations; and 1 fodder, totaling 6 fodder.

To eight biarchae: 2 rations, totaling 16 rations; and 1 fodder, totaling 8 fodder.

semissalibus undecim ad annonas IS, fiunt annonae XVIS, et ad capitum I, fiunt capita XI.

29. Item viro clarissimo duci Mauritaniae provinciae et hominibus eius annonae CXC, singulis annonis solidi V, capita CLVIII, singulis capitibus solidi IIII, simul fiunt pro annonis et capitu solidi MDLXXXII.

30. Adsessori ducis et officio eius hominibus quadraginta annonae XCVIS, singulis annonis solidi V, capita XLVIII, singulis capitibus solidi IIII, simul fiunt pro annonis et capitu solidi DCLXXIIIIS. dividuntur sic:

31. Adsessori uno annonae VIII capita IIII.

primicerio uno annonae V capita II.

numerario uno annonae IIII capita II.

ducenariis quattuor ad annonas IIIS, fiunt annonae XIIII, et ad capitum IS, fiunt capita VI.

centenariis sex ad annonas IIS, fiunt annonae XV, et ad capitum I, fiunt capita VI.

biarchis octo ad annonas II, fiunt annonae XVI, et ad capitum I, fiunt capita VIII.

circitoribus novem ad annonas II, fiunt annonae XVIII, et ad capitum I, fiunt capita VIIII.

semissalibus undecim ad annonas IS, fiunt annonae XVIS, et ad capitum I, fiunt capita XI.

32. Item viro clarissimo duci Sardiniae insulae et hominibus eius annonae CXC, singulis annonis solidi V, capita CLVIII, singulis capitibus solidi IIII, simul fiunt pro annonis et capitu solidi MDLXXXII.

33. Adsessori ducis et officio eius hominibus quadraginta annonae XCVIS, singulis annonis solidi V, capita XLVIII, singulis capitibus solidi IIII, simul fiunt pro annonis et capitu solidi DCLXXIIIIS. dividuntur sic:

34. Adsessori uno annonae VIII capita IIII.

primicerio uno annonae V capita II.

numerario uno annonae IIII capita II.

ducenariis quattuor ad annonas IIIS, fiunt annonae XIIII, et ad capitum IS, fiunt capita VI.

centenariis sex ad annonas IIS, fiunt annonae XV, et ad capitum I, fiunt capita VI.

biarchis octo ad annonas II, fiunt annonae XVI, et ad capitum I, fiunt capita VIII.

circitoribus novem ad annonas II, fiunt annonae XVIII, et ad capitum I, fiunt capita VIIII.

semissalibus undecim ad annonas IS, fiunt annonae XVIS, et ad capitum I, fiunt capita XI.

To nine circitores: 2 rations, totaling 18 rations; and 1 fodder, totaling 9 fodder.

To eleven semissales: 1½ rations, totaling 16½ rations; and 1 fodder, totaling 11 fodder.

29. Likewise to the vir clarissimus Duke of the province of Mauritania and his men: 190 rations, 5 solidi to each ration, 158 fodder, 4 solidi to each fodder, which together for rations and fodder make 1,582 solidi.

30. To the judicial advisor of the Duke and his staff: forty men, 96½ rations, 5 solidi to each ration, 48 fodder, 4 solidi to each fodder, which together for rations and fodder make 674½ solidi, divided as follows:

31. To one judicial advisor: 8 rations, 4 fodder.

To one chief clerk: 5 rations, 2 fodder.

To one chief accountant: 4 rations, 2 fodder.

To four ducenarii: 3½ rations, totaling 14 rations; and 1½ fodder, totaling 6 fodder.

To six centenarii: 2½ rations, totaling 15 rations; and 1 fodder, totaling 6 fodder.

To eight biarchae: 2 rations, totaling 16 rations; and 1 fodder, totaling 8 fodder.

To nine circitores: 2 rations, totaling 18 rations; and 1 fodder, totaling 9 fodder.

To eleven semissales: 1½ rations, totaling 16½ rations; and 1 fodder, totaling 11 fodder.

32. Likewise to the vir clarissimus Duke of the Island of Sardinia and his men: 190 rations, 5 solidi to each ration, 158 fodder, 4 solidi to each fodder, which together for rations and fodder make 1,582 solidi.

33. To the judicial advisor of the Duke and his staff: forty men, 96½ rations, 5 solidi to each ration, 48 fodder, 4 solidi to each fodder, which together for rations and fodder make 674½ solidi, divided as follows:

34. To one judicial advisor: 8 rations, 4 fodder.

To one chief clerk: 5 rations, 2 fodder.

To one chief accountant: 4 rations, 2 fodder.

To four ducenarii: 3½ rations, totaling 14 rations; and 1½ fodder, totaling 6 fodder.

To six centenarii: 2½ rations, totaling 15 rations; and 1 fodder, totaling 6 fodder.

To eight biarchae: 2 rations, totaling 16 rations; and 1 fodder, totaling 8 fodder.

To nine circitores: 2 rations, totaling 18 rations; and 1 fodder, totaling 9 fodder.

To eleven semissales: 1½ rations, totaling 16½ rations; and 1 fodder, totaling 11 fodder.

35. Item notitia consuetudinum, quas in sacro laterculo et in praetorio amplissimae praefecturae per Africam, iam in officio magistri militum pro tempore dux praebere oportet uniuscuiusque limitis sic: in sacro laterculo solidi VI: in officio magisteriae militum potestatis pro insinuandis administrationis suae divinis nostrae serenitatis affatibus solidi XII: in officio amplissimae praefecturae per Africam pro insinuandis eiusdem chartis solidi XII.

36. Gloria itaque tua, quae per hanc pragmaticam sanctionem nostra statuit aeternitas, effectui mancipari observarique praecipiat.

Emissa lex idibus Aprilibus Constantinopoli dn. Iustiniano pp. A. IIII et Paulino vc. conss.

XXVIII De Officio Praefecti Urbis

[1] Impp. Valentinianus et Valens AA. ad Volusianum pu. Studentibus nobis statum urbis et annonariam rationem aliquando firmare in animo subiit eiusdem annonae curam non omnibus deferre potestatibus. ac ne praefectura urbis abrogatum sibi aliquid putaret, si totum ad officium annonarium redundasset eidem praefecturae sollicitudinis ac diligentiae necessitatem mandamus, sed non ita, ut lateat officium annonariae praefecturae, sed ut ambae potestates, in quantum sibi negotii est, tueantur civilem annonam sitque societas muneris ita, ut inferior gradus meritum superioris agnoscat atque ita superior potestas se exserat, ut sciat ex ipso nomine, quid praefecto debeatur annonae.

D. II non. April. Mediolani Valentiniano et Valente AA. II conss.

[2] Idem AA. ad Ampelium pu. Quod promulgatis sanctionibus tua sinceritas perscriptum[xxxii] esse non nescit, etiam ex praecepto nostro competenter observet nec quasdam personas de provincia existimet avocandas nisi tantummodo suos officiales et homines populares huius almae urbis seditioni obnoxios.

[xxxii] praescriptum?

35. Likewise the schedule of the payments, which the acting Duke of each frontier must pay in the Sacred Register, in the Most Exalted Praetorian Prefecture of Africa, and in the office of the Master of Soldiers, is as follows: in the Sacred Register, 6 solidi; in the office of the Master of Soldiers for registering the divine utterances of Our Serenity as to his post, 12 solidi; in the office of the Most Exalted Praetorian Prefecture of Africa for registering the documents of the same Duke, 12 solidi.

36. Thus Your Glory will order that what Our Eternity has ordained by this pragmatic sanction shall be put into effect and observed.

Law issued April 13, from Constantinople, in the consulship of Our Lord Justinian, Ever Augustus, for the fourth time, and the vir clarissimus Paulinus (534).

Twenty-Eighth Title The Office of the Urban Prefect[322]

[1][323] Emperors VALENTINIAN and VALENS Augusti to Volusianus, Urban Prefect. As We are eager to strengthen the condition of the City and the organization of the grain supply, it has occurred to Us not to confer the superintendence of the grain supply on all officials. And lest the Urban Prefect should think that something has been taken from him if this duty should fall entirely to the office of the Prefect of the Food Supply (praefectus annonae), We entrust this essential responsibility and duty to the Urban Prefect, but not so that the office of the Prefecture of the Food Supply should be obscured, but so that both offices, insofar as their duties require, should oversee the civic grain supply and share the labor; whereby the lesser rank shall recognize the merit of the greater and the greater rank show itself aware what deference is due the Prefect of the Food Supply by virtue of his very title.

Given April 4, at Milan, in the consulship of Valentinian and Valens, for the second time, Augusti (368).

[2] The same Augusti to Ampelius, Urban Prefect. As Your Sincerity is not unaware of what has been written out[324] in published decrees, you shall also accordingly observe this pursuant to Our command, and (namely) hold that no persons should be summoned from the province except your own officials and members of the populace of This Generous City liable for sedition.

(371–372).[325]

[322] See D. 1.12.
[323] = C.Th. 1.6.5; combine with C.Th. 16.26.1. Seeck gives April 4, 365.
[324] "ordered" if one adopts the reading praescriptum.
[325] Seeck dates to December 6, 371; Schmidt-Hofner gives 371/372.

[3] Imppp. Valens Gratianus et Valentinianus AAA. ad Rufinum pp. Praefectura urbis cunctis quae intra urbem sunt antecellat potestatibus, tantum ex omnium parte delibans, quantum sine iniuria ac detrimento alieni honoris usurpet.

D. III id. Iul. Valente A. v et Valentiniano iun. conss.

[4] Imppp. Valentinianus Theodosius et Arcadius AAA. Severino comiti sacrarum largitionum. Omnia corporatorum genera, quae in Constantinopolitana civitate versantur, universos quoque cives atque populares praefecturae urbanae regi moderamine recognoscas.

D. XVII k. Mai. Mediolani Tatiano et Symmacho conss.

[5] Imp. Theodosius AA. Constantio pu. Primicerius adiutorum tuae sedis officii per biennium, quod in eodem gradu ex consuetudine priscae ordinationis emeruit,[xxxiii] curam insuper personarum usurpatione omni atque ambitione cessante suscipiat: hoc etiam adiecto, ut, si quis ex memorato ordine vel condicionis humanae fine praeventus vel alia quacumque ratione militiae gradum propriae amisisse monstrabitur, solitae ambitionis iniuria vacante locum is, qui iuxta matriculae veritatem sequitur, obtineat.

D. XIII k. Ian. Constantinopoli Victore cons.

XXVIIII De Officio Magistri Militum

[1] Imppp. Gratianus Valentinianus et Theodosius AAA. ad Eusignium pp. Viri illustres comites et magistri peditum et equitum in provinciales nullam penitus habeant potestatem, nec amplissima praefectura in militares viros.

[xxxiii] emeruerit

[3][326] Emperors VALENS, GRATIAN, and VALENTINIAN Augusti to Rufinus, Praetorian Prefect. The Urban Prefecture takes precedence over all officials in the City, taking what little from the others that he may without insulting or diminishing the dignity of another official.

Given July 13, in the consulship of Valens Augustus, for the fifth time, and of Valentinian Junior (376).

[4][327] Emperors VALENTINIAN, THEODOSIUS, and ARCADIUS Augusti to Severinus, Count of the Imperial Finances. You must recognize that all kinds of guilds that reside in the city of Constantinople, as well as all its citizens and members of the populace, are governed under the direction of the Urban Prefecture.

Given April 15, at Milan, in the consulship of Tatianus and Symmachus (391).

[5][328] Emperor THEODOSIUS Augustus to Constantius, Urban Prefect. The chief (primicerius) of the assistants (adiutores) of your staff shall have oversight of your personnel for the two years that he serves in the aforementioned position, according to the customary original order; all usurpation and solicitation by other persons shall cease. This too is to be added: if any member of the aforementioned staff should be cut off by the fate of the human condition (i.e., by his death) or is shown to have lost his position in the service by any other reason whatsoever, he who follows him shall obtain his post according to the true indication of the register, without the injuriousness of the usual solicitation.

Given December 20, at Constantinople, in the consulship of Victor (424).

Twenty-Ninth Title The Office of the Master of Soldiers

[1] Emperors GRATIAN, VALENTINIAN, and THEODOSIUS[329] Augusti to Eusignius, Praetorian Prefect. The viri illustres Counts and Masters of the Infantry and Cavalry shall have no jurisdiction whatsoever over provincials, nor the Most Exalted (Praetorian) Prefecture over soldiers.

(386–387?).[330]

[326] = C.Th. 1.6.7; combine with C. 12.58.1.
[327] = C.Th. 1.10.4.
[328] = C.Th. 1.6.12.
[329] Actually, Valentinian, Theodosius, and Arcadius.
[330] Seeck dates to June 16, 383.

[2] Impp. Honorius et Theodosius AA. ad Hypatium magistrum militum per Orientem. Apparitores statutos officii tui ad aliud iudicium trahi minime oportebit. sciat igitur illustris magnificentia tua sub te, sive civiliter sive criminaliter appetantur, eos litigare debere.

D. id. Dec. Constantinopoli Constantio et Constante conss.

[3] Imp. Zeno A. Sebastiano pp. Eos, qui ultra statutos in officio magisteriae per Orientem potestatis militant, civilium quoque iudicum sententiis super quolibet negotio subiacere: ipsis quin etiam statutis in tributariis collationibus civilium quoque iudicum dispositionibus procul dubio parituris.

[4] Imp. Anastasius A. Iohanni magistrum militum per Illyricum. Milites de locis, in quibus consistunt, ad alia loca sine speciali nostrae serenitatis auctoritate nullatenus transferri praecipimus, nec eorum expensae in locis, in quibus consistunt, minuantur. sed si forte quaedam urguens et necessaria causa emerserit, utilitati ac securitati publicae tam amplissimam praetorianam praefecturam quam tuam sedem sine ulla procrastinatione prospicere protinus oportet et suggestiones ad nostras aures destinare, indicantes tam loca, de quibus milites transferendi sunt, quam ea, ad quae pervenire eos oportet, nominaque fortissimorum numerorum, in quibus idem milites referuntur, nec non quantitatem annonarum et ante omnia causam, ob quam idem milites transferendi sunt, ut post talem suggestionem a nostra auctoritate competentia procedant.

[5] Imp. Iustinianus A. Zetae[xxxiv] viro illustri magistro militum per Armeniam et Pontum Polemoniacum et gentes. Cum propitia divinitate Romanum nobis sit delatum imperium, sollicita cura cauta diligentia pertractantes perspeximus oportere etiam partibus Armeniae et Ponto Polemoniaco et gentibus proprium magistrum militum per hanc legem constituere, tuamque magnitudinem, quae nobis ex ante gestis optime commendata est, idoneam ad talem fore dignitatem confidentes elegimus certasque provincias, id est magnam Armeniam, quae interior dicebatur, et gentes (Anzetenam videlicet, Ingilenam, Asthianenam, [xxxiv] Zittae, see Nov. 22 epilogue.

[2][331] Emperors HONORIUS and THEODOSIUS Augusti to Hypatius, Master of Soldiers in the Orient. The regular (statuti) clerks of your staff should not be brought before another tribunal. Your Illustrious Magnificence shall know, therefore, that they must litigate before you, whether they are sued in a civil or criminal case.

Given December 13, at Constantinople, in the consulship of Constantius and Constans (414).

[3] Emperor ZENO Augustus to Sebastianus, Praetorian Prefect. Those who serve in the official staff of the Master (of Soldiers) in the Orient, in addition to the regular clerks, are also subject to the rulings of civil judges in any case; there is no doubt that even the regular clerks will heed the directions also of civil judges in matters of taxes.

(476–485).[332]

[4] Emperor ANASTASIUS Augustus to John, Master of Soldiers in Illyricum. We order that soldiers may not be transferred from the places where they are stationed to other places without the special authorization of Our Serenity, nor shall their pay be reduced in the places where they are stationed. But if perchance some urgent and compelling reason arises, the Most Exalted Praetorian Prefecture as well as your office shall immediately provide for the public interest and safety and address your reports to Our ears, indicating both the places from which the soldiers should be transferred and those to which they must go, the names of the most courageous units in which the aforementioned soldiers are enrolled, as well as the amount of rations and above all the reason on account of which the aforementioned soldiers should be transferred, so that after receiving such information appropriate action may be taken on Our authority.[333]

[5] Emperor JUSTINIAN Augustus to Zetas,[334] vir illustris, Master of Soldiers in Armenia, in Pontus Polemoniacus, and among the Nations. Since Roman rule has been conferred on Us by divine favor, We have, after considering the matter with careful scrutiny and cautious diligence, observed that We must by this law appoint a Master of Soldiers also for the regions of Armenia and Pontus Polemoniacus and the Nations; and in the confidence that Your Greatness,

[331] = C.Th. 1.7.4.
[332] Lounghis et al. date to between 476 and 480 or 484.
[333] Lounghis et al. date to between 491 and 518.
[334] Sittas, who in 528 married Comito the Empress Theodora's sister, was the first to hold the new office of Master of Soldiers in Armenia, one of several adjustments to the eastern frontier early in Justinian's reign; they led to the Persian War of 530–532. His name is variously spelled in our sources.

Sophenam, Sophanenam, in qua est Martyropolis, Balabitenam) et primam et secundam Armeniam et Pontum Polemoniacum tuae curae cum suis ducibus commisimus, comite Armeniae penitus sublato, certosque subdidimus numeros, non modo quos in praesenti novos constituimus, sed etiam de praesentalibus et Orientalibus et aliis agminibus segregatos, non tamen quantitatem eorum agminum minuentes: sed quia plures eis addidimus sine rei publicae gravamine et sine augmento sumptuum, aliquantos subtraximus, ita tamen, ut et post hanc subtractionem ampliores remanserint, quam usque ad nostra felicia fuerant tempora.

[6] ...

XXX De Officio Quaestoris

[1] Imp. Theodosius A. Sallustio quaestori. Totius minoris laterculi curam scias ad tuae sublimitatis sollicitudinem pertinere, ita ut tuo arbitratu ex scrinio memoriae totius minoris laterculi dignitates, hoc est praepositurae omnes, tribunatus et praefecturae castrorum iuxta consuetudinem priscam clementiae meae auctoritate deinceps mittantur.

D. VI k. Mai. Constantinopoli Victore cons.

[2] Idem A. Helioni comiti et magistro officiorum. Omnes minoris laterculi dignitates, quae sub cura quidem ac sollicitudine viri illustris quaestoris esse antea videbantur, postea vero vel universae vel mediae ad magistrorum militum potestatem dispositionemque transierant, placuit nunc clementiae meae vetusti temporis more renovato ad prisca deinceps iura revocare.

D. III k. Mai. supra scripto cons.

which has been excellently recommended to Us by your past deeds, would be suitable for such a position, We have chosen you and have entrusted to your care certain provinces, that is, Greater Armenia, which was formerly called Inner Armenia, and the Nations – namely, Anzetana, Ingilena, Asthianena, Sophena, Sophanena, in which Martyropolis is located, and Balabitena – First and Second Armenia, and Pontus Polemoniacus, together with their Dukes. The (office of) Count of Armenia has been abolished, and We have placed under your command certain units, not only new units that We have just formed but also some taken from the soldiers at court (praesentales), from those serving in the Orient, and from other troops, without, however, diminishing their number; for while We added many soldiers to them without burdening the State or increasing expenses, We removed some, but in such a way that after this reduction the soldiers should remain more numerous than they had been before Our happy times.

(528).

[6] <A Greek constitution has been lost.>

Thirtieth Title The Office of the Quaestor

[1][335] Emperor THEODOSIUS Augustus to Sallustius, Quaestor. You shall know that responsibility for the whole Lesser Register (laterculum minus)[336] resides in the care of Your Sublimity, whereby the offices in the whole Lesser Register, that is, all positions of oversight, tribunates, and prefectures of the camps, shall be issued from the Bureau of Memory (scrinium memoriae) at your discretion, according to ancient custom and by the authority of My Clemency.

Given April 26, at Constantinople, in the consulship of Victor (424).

[2][337] The same Augustus to Helio, Count and Master of Offices. My Clemency has resolved to revive the custom of ancient times and to restore all offices in the Lesser Register, which formerly were the responsibility and charge of the vir illustris Quaestor and later either entirely or in part passed under the control of the Masters of Soldiers, to their former authority.

Given April 29, in the consulship written above (424).

[335] = C.Th. 1.8.2.

[336] The latercula were registries of officials in the late Empire; the laterculum minus registered military commands.

[337] = C.Th. 1.8.3.

[3] Imp. Anastasius A. Eusebio magistro officiorum. Officia et condiciones, quae pertinent ad viros devotos in sacro scrinio memoriae militantes, nemini liceat sub quacumque occasione sine ulla divinae subscriptionis liberalitate peragere: eo, quicumque in hoc fuerit postea facinore convictus, publicatione bonorum suorum multando, officio quoque rectoris provinciae, in qua non allegato super gerenda sollicitudine sacro rescripto aliquis ausus fuerit eandem curam sibimet usurpare, trium librarum auri dispendio feriendo.

D. k. Mart. Constantinopoli Anastasio A. et Rufo conss.

XXXI De Officio Magistri Officiorum

[1] Imp. Constantius A. ad agentes in rebus. pr. Privilegiis dudum scholae vestrae indultis integris reservatis, ad ducenam etiam et centenam et biarchiam nemo suffragio, nisi labore unusquisque perveniat, principatum vero adipiscatur matricula decurrente, ita ut ad curas agendas et cursum illi exeant, quos ordo militiae vocat et laborum. 1. Adiutor praeterea, in quo totius scholae status et magistri securitas constituta est, idoneus probitate morum ac bonis artibus praeditus nostris per magistrum obtutibus offeratur, ut nostro ordinetur arbitrio.

D. et pp. Romae in foro Traiani k. Nov. Eusebio et Hypatio conss.

[2] Impppp. Valentinianus Theodosius et Arcadius AAA. ad Principium magistrum officiorum. Nemo agentum in rebus ordinem militiae atque stipendia praevertat, etiamsi nostri numinis per obreptionem detulerit indultum: ac si quis formam istiusmodi docebitur obtulisse, in locum, ex quo indecenter emerserat, revertatur, ut is gradu ceteros antecedat, quem stipendia longiora vel labor prolixior fecerit anteire.

PP. Hadrumeti VII id. Mart. post cons. Arcadii A. et Bautonis.

[3] Emperor Anastasius Augustus to Eusebius, Master of Offices. No one shall be permitted under any condition to administer the offices and positions that belong to the devoted men serving in the Sacred Bureau of Memory without the generosity of Our divine signature. Whosoever shall hereafter be convicted of this crime shall be punished by the confiscation of his property; the official staff of the governor of the province, in which anyone dares to usurp the aforementioned position without producing a sacred rescript for holding such an office, shall be struck with a loss of 3 pounds of gold.

Given March 1, at Constantinople, in the consulship of Anastasius Augustus and Rufus (492).

Thirty-First Title The Office of the Master of Offices

[1][338] Emperor Constantius *Augustus to the imperial couriers (agentes in rebus).* pr. Whereas the privileges conferred long ago on your corps (schola) shall be kept intact, no one shall reach the position of ducenarius, centenarius, and biarcha by patronage, but each and every one shall (achieve this) by labor; and no one shall obtain the position of chief (princeps) but by rising through the ranks. Thus, those men whom the order of service and labor calls thereto shall go forth to carry out missions and to the imperial post (cursus). 1. The aide (adiutor), furthermore, on whom the standing of the entire corps and the safety of the Master depend, must be presented before Our eyes by the Master as suitable by the uprightness of his character and recommended by praiseworthy accomplishments, so that he may be appointed at Our discretion.

Given and posted at Rome, in the Forum of Trajan, November 1, in the consulship of Eusebius and Hypatius (359).

[2][339] Emperors Valentinian, Theodosius, and Arcadius Augusti to Principius, Master of Offices. No imperial courier shall break the order of service or time served, even if he produces an indulgence (rescript) surreptitiously obtained from Our Godhead. And if anyone is shown to have produced such a document, he shall return to the position from which he undeservedly rose. Thus he whom longer service or ampler labor has placed ahead shall outrank the rest.

Posted at Hadrumetum, March 9, in the post-consulate of Arcadius Augustus and Bauto (386).

338 = C.Th. 1.9.1; combine with C. 12.22.3 and C.Th. 6.29.4–5; Seeck dates to October 31, 359. Justinian has suppressed the name of Julian the Apostate, who was Caesar at the time.

339 = C.Th. 1.9.2. On the date, see PLRE i p. 726 Principius 2: "possibly it was issued in the summer of 385, and a copy sent to Africa did not arrive until spring 386."

[3] Impp. Theodosius et Valentinianus AA. Phlegetio comiti et magistro officiorum. Scholarium nostrorum devotio, probata nostris parentibus, circa nostrae maxime serenitatis affectionem enituit. inde quidquid ad fovenda servandaque eorum privilegia postulatur, statim credidimus admittendum. ideoque suggestionem tui culminis approbantes viris spectabilibus comitibus scholarum verberandi regradandive senatores ac ducenarios licentiam denegamus. ea namque, quae tali commotione digna sunt, ad tuae sublimitatis volumus referri notitiam.

D. xv k. Mai. Constantinopoli Cyro vc. cons.

[4] Idem AA. Nomo magistro officiorum. Curae perpetuae tui culminis credimus iniungendum, ut super omni limite sub tua iurisdictione constituto, quemadmodum se militum numerus habeat castrorumque ac clusurarum cura procedat, quotannis significare nobis propria suggestione procuret.

D. prid. id. Sept. Constantinopoli Maximo II et Paterio conss.

[5] Impp. Iustinus et Iustinianus AA. Tatiano magistro officiorum. pr. Iubemus eum ad militiam devotissimorum scholarium de cetero pervenire, qui nostrum meruit iudicium, nec licere pro tempore tui culminis administrationem habenti sine huiusmodi probatoria aliquem inter eosdem viros devotos scholares suis referre praeceptionibus: sed sciat is, qui sine sacro rescripto ad eandem pervenire militiam ausus fuerit, non solum ea se privari, verum etiam poenae viginti librarum auri subici. 1. Illud etiam observari de cetero volumus, ut, si quis locus statutorum scholarium in quacumque schola vacaverit, ille subrogetur, quem nostra pietas per sacrum rescriptum vacantem subire locum praeceperit. 2. Ad haec quadrimenstruos breves eorundem scholarium cura tuae sublimitatis et pro tempore viri excellentissimi magistri officiorum conscribi volumus et eos sacro scrinio laterculi praestari ibi deponendos, ut semper notitia eorundem scholarium certa sit neque publico damnum aliquod infligatur.

D. x k. Mai. Constantinopoli Mavortio vc. cons.

[3][340] Emperors THEODOSIUS and VALENTINIAN Augusti to Phlegetius, Count and Master of Offices. The devotion of Our Imperial Guards (scholares), already proven to Our parents, has shown forth most in their loyalty to Our Serenity. Hence, We have concluded that whatever is requested for the cultivation and preservation of their privileges should be granted immediately. Approving, therefore, the proposal of Your Eminence, We deny to the viri spectabiles Counts of the imperial guard (scholae) the right to punish corporally or reduce in rank senatores (those of Senatorial status) and ducenarii (i.e., senior sub-officers). For We want matters deserving such punishment to be referred to the notice of Your Sublimity.

Given April 17, at Constantinople, in the consulship of the vir clarissimus Cyrus (441).

[4][341] The same Augusti to Nomus, Master of Offices. We believe it shall be incumbent on the unstinting duty of Your Eminence that you shall take care to describe in a personal report to Us annually the status of the number of soldiers and how the camps and fortresses fare on every frontier under your jurisdiction.

Given September 12, at Constantinople, in the consulship of Maximus, for the second time, and Paterius (443).

[5] Emperors JUSTIN and JUSTINIAN Augusti to Tatianus, Master of Offices. pr. We order that hereafter (only) he who has deserved Our approval shall enter the service of the most devout Imperial Guards (scholares); and it shall not be permitted to anyone holding the office of Your Eminence to enroll, on his own orders, anyone in the aforementioned devout men of the Imperial Guard without an imperial certificate (probatoria); but he who dares enter the aforementioned service without a sacred rescript shall know that he shall not only be deprived of his position but shall also be liable to a penalty of 20 pounds of gold. 1. We also wish this to be observed hereafter: if any position among the regular (statuti) Imperial Guards is vacant, he whom Our Piety commands, by sacred rescript, to assume the vacant position shall succeed to it. 2. In addition, We desire that quarterly lists of the aforesaid Imperial Guards be compiled at the direction of Your Sublimity and of every acting vir excellentissimus Master of Offices, and that they be presented to the Sacred Bureau of the Register for archiving, so that the record of the aforesaid Imperial Guards shall always be accurate and no loss shall be inflicted on the State.

Given April 22, in Constantinople, at the consulship of the vir clarissimus Mavortius (527).

[340] = Nov. Theod. 21; the end is repeated in 12.29.1.
[341] = Nov. Theod. 24.1.5 (slightly different wording); combine with C. 1.46.4, 11.60.3.

XXXII De Officio Comitis Sacrarum Largitionum

[1] Impp. Arcadius et Honorius AA. Limenio comiti sacrarum largitionum. pr. Palatinis haec cura debet esse praecipua, ut, periculo proprio notariis destinatis, super neglegentia iudicum, si ita res exegerit, conquerantur, ne eorum sit impunita desidia. 1. Iudices quoque de eorum nominibus referre convenit, quos commodis propriis magis quam utilitatibus publicis studere praeviderint. 2. Breves etiam quadrimenstruos ad officium palatinum noverint dirigendos aurumque exactum ad sacras largitiones sine ulla dilatione esse mittendum.

D. III k. Mart. Mediolani Vincentio et Fravito conss.

XXXIII De Officio Comitis Rerum Privatarum

[1] Impp. Valentinianus et Valens AA. ad Honoratum consularem Byzacii. Si quid negotiorum fuerit actitatum, in quibus aliquid commodi fiscalis appareat, ad officium rei privatae tua gravitas acta transmittat, ut instructione percepta, quid sibimet iuris auxilio debeatur, agnoscat.

D. VI k. Ian. Valentiniano et Valente AA. II conss.

[2] Impp. Arcadius et Honorius AA. Minervio comiti rerum privatarum. Ad palatinorum curam et rationalium officia omnium rerum nostrarum et totius perpetuarii, hoc est emphyteuticarii, iuris exactio revertatur.

D. X k. Ian. Mediolani Caesario et Attico conss.

[3] Impp. Honorius et Theodosius AA. Ursacio comiti rerum privatarum. Si quis iudicum vir illustris vel praefectus urbi cognitionem comitivae privatarum examini debitam sibimet vindicandam censuerit vel tuitionem contra eiusdem sedis statuta praestiterit, ad quinquaginta librarum

Thirty-Second Title The Office of the Count of the Imperial Finances

[1][342] Emperors ARCADIUS and HONORIUS Augusti to Limenius, Count of the Imperial Finances. pr. This should be the particular duty of the Palatine officials: that having dispatched notaries at their own peril, they should lodge complaints, if the facts warrant it, about the negligence of the governors, so that their sloth may not go unpunished. 1. It behooves governors, too, to report the names of those (Palatine officials) whom they observe pursuing their own profit rather than the public good. 2. They shall know that quarterly reports must be addressed to the Palatine Office and that the gold collected must be sent without delay to the Imperial Finances.

Given February 27, at Milan, in the consulship of Vincentius and Fravitus (401).[343]

Thirty-Third Title The Office of the Count of the Privy Purse

[1] Emperors VALENTINIAN and VALENS Augusti to Honoratus, Consular of Byzacium. If any controversy should be tried in which some advantage to the Treasury emerges, Your Eminence shall convey the records of proceedings to the official staff of the Privy Purse, so that upon receipt of these documents it may apprehend what is owed it by virtue of the law.

Given December 27, at the second consulship of Valentinian and Valens, Augusti (368).

[2][344] Emperors ARCADIUS and HONORIUS Augusti to Minervius, Count of the Privy Purse. The collection of rents from all Our Privy Purse and from lands under perpetual, that is, emphyteutic, lease, shall revert to the responsibility of the Palatine officials and offices of comptrollers (rationales).

Given December 23, at Milan, in the consulship of Caesarius and Atticus (397).

[3] Emperors HONORIUS and THEODOSIUS Augusti to Ursacius, Count of the Privy Purse. If any vir illustris judge or the Urban Prefect should decide to claim a case under the jurisdiction of the Count of the Privy Purse or should

[342] = C.Th. 1.10.7.
[343] The date follows the C.Th.; see Krüger, ad loc.
[344] = C.Th. 1.11.1.

auri illationem poenae nomine eius officium teneatur, quam decet in articulo exigi mansuetudinis nostrae aerario sociandam.

D. VI id. Aug. Ravennae Constantio et Constante conss.

[4] Μὴ διαγέτω τινὰ τῶν ἐπαρχεωτῶν προφάσει δημοσίων πραγμάτων ὁ κόμης τῆς ἰδικῆς περιουσίας δίχα θείας ἐπιτροπῆς μηδὲ τῷ μηνύοντι τὴν κρίσιν καταπιστευέτω τοῦ πράγματος.

[5] Μήτε ὁ κόμης τῆς ἰδικῆς περιουσίας μήτε τις ἕτερος τῶν ἐν Κωνσταντινουπόλει ἢ ἐν ταῖς ἐπαρχίαις ἀρχόντων τὸν περὶ θησαυροῦ καταμηνύοντα προσδεχέσθω. εἰ δὲ περί τινος ἑτέρου προσαγγέλλει, ὑπὸ ἐγγύην εὐθὺς οὐχ ἧττον πέντε λιτρῶν γινέσθω· καὶ μηδέ τις σφραγὶς ἢ ἀναγραφὴ καὶ καινισμὸς ὁ τυχὼν ἐπὶ τοῖς προσαγγελθεῖσι προσερχέσθω πράγμασι πρὸ διακρίσεως ἐγγράφου. καὶ εἰ μὲν ὁ κατηγορούμενος πάρεστι, κρινέσθω παρὰ τῷ κόμητι τῆς ἰδικῆς περιουσίας τὸ πρᾶγμα, εἰ δὲ ἐν ἐπαρχίᾳ διάγει, παρὰ τῷ ἄρχοντι ἢ τῷ ἀφοριζομένῳ δικαστῇ, τῶν φισκοσυνηγόρων ἤ, ἐν ἀπορίᾳ τούτων, ἑτέρων ὑπὲρ τοῦ κατηγόρου προῖκα λεγόντων. γινέσθω δὲ τῶν συνηγόρων ἐξίσωσις καὶ ἀναιρείσθω τὸ καὶ τὰ ὑπὲρ τοῦ κατηγόρου δαπανήματα τὸν ἐναγόμενον ποιεῖν· τούτου φυλαττομένου καὶ ἐπὶ τοῦ δίκας τινὰς τῷ φίσκῳ κινοῦντος. καὶ μηδεὶς αὐτῶν πρὸ τελείας ἐκκαλείσθω τοῦ πράγματος κρίσεως.

XXXIIII De Officio Comitis Sacri Patrimonii

[1] Αὐτοκράτωρ Ἀναστάσιος Α. Τῆς ἰδικῆς ἐφευρεθείσης οὐσίας τῷ δημοσίῳ ἢ ἐφευρεθησομένης προβεβλήσθω ἢ καλείσθω κόμης τῆς ἰδικῆς κτήσεως, κατὰ μίμησιν τοῦ κόμητος τῆς ἰδικῆς περιουσίας αὐτὴν διοικῶν· πᾶσι τοῖς ὑπ᾽ αὐτὸν οὖσι γεωργοῖς ἢ παροίκοις ἢ ἐμφυτευταῖς τῶν αὐτῶν ὄντων προνομίων, ὧν οἱ ὑπὸ τὸν πραιπόσιτον καὶ τὸν κόμητα τῶν οἰκείων ἀπολαύουσι, καὶ παρὰ μόνῳ κόμητι τοῦ τῆς ἰδικῆς κτήσεως κινείτωσαν καὶ ἐναγέσθωσαν. οἱ δὲ τοῦ τῆς ἰδικῆς κτήσεως ταξεῶται τοῦ κόμητος τῆς ἁπανταχοῦ ἰδικῆς περιουσίας ἐχέτωσαν προνόμια.

furnish protection against the rulings of the latter official, his official staff shall be liable to pay 50 pounds of gold as a fine, which should be claimed instantly and paid into the treasury of Our Clemency.

Given August 8, at Ravenna, in the consulship of Constantius and Constans (414).

[4][345] The Count of the Privy Purse shall not apprehend any provincial under the pretext of public business without divine permission, nor may he delegate the hearing of the case to an informer.

[5][346] Neither the Count of the Privy Purse nor any other magistrates in Constantinople or in the provinces shall receive an informer concerning a treasure trove. If the latter gives information concerning some other matter, he shall immediately give security of no less than 5 pounds (of gold); and no seal, registration, or any innovation shall be made concerning the reported property before written adjudication. And if the accuser is present, the case shall be tried before the Count of the Privy Purse; but if he resides in a province, before the governor or the appointed judge. The advocates of the Treasury or, in their absence, others shall speak on behalf of the accuser free of charge. There shall be equalization of advocates, and the practice whereby the defendant pays the expenses of the accuser shall be abolished. This shall be observed also when someone initiates any litigation against the Treasury. And no one shall appeal before the final decision of the case.

Thirty-Fourth Title The Office of the Count of the Imperial Patrimony[347]

[1][348] (Emperor Anastasius Augustus.) If any private property has fallen or should fall to the Treasury, the Count of the Imperial Patrimony shall be appointed over it or summoned, managing it on the analogy of the Count of the Privy Purse. All farmers, tenants (coloni), and long-term lessees (holders by emphyteusis) shall enjoy the same privileges that they enjoy under the branch chief (praepositus) and the Count of the Privy Purse, and they may not sue or be sued except before the Count of the Imperial Patrimony. The official staff of the Count of the Imperial Patrimony shall moreover enjoy the same privileges as that of the Count of the Privy Purse.

[345] = Bas. 6.1.108. Lounghis et al. date to between 491 and 518.

[346] = Bas. 6.1.109; perhaps to be combined with C. 1.34.3. Lounghis et al. suggest a date between 491 and 518.

[347] This office was created by Anastasius. The three constitutions in this title have been restored from the Bas.

[348] = Bas. 6.1.102. Lounghis et al. date to between 491 and 498.

[2] Ὁ αὐτὸς βασιλεύς. Φροντιζέτωσαν οἱ τῶν ἐπαρχιῶν ἄρχοντες καὶ αἱ τούτων τάξεις οἰκείῳ κινδύνῳ μηδεμίαν τὰ τῆς ἰδικῆς κτήσεως κτήματα βλάβην ὑφίστασθαι ἢ τὴν ἐξ αὐτῶν μειοῦσθαι πρόσοδον ἢ ἐμπαίζεσθαι. ἐξέστω δὲ τῷ κόμητι τῆς ἰδικῆς κτήσεως καὶ προστιμᾶν αὐτοῖς καὶ <ἀναγκάζειν> μετὰ τὴν ἀρχὴν τὴν γενομένην ἀνασῶσαι βλάβην, ἀλλὰ μηδεμίαν δεχέσθωσαν ἀπόρων ἢ ὁμοκήνσων ἐπιβολήν.

[3] Μηδὲ παρὰ τοῦ κόμητος τῶν θησαυρῶν ἡμῶν τις ἢ σφραγὶς ἢ ἀναγραφὴ προσερχέσθω πρὸ τῆς τοῦ πράγματος διακρίσεως ἐπὶ τοῖς προσαγγελθεῖσι πράγμασι· καὶ ἐνταῦθα τὰ ὑπὲρ ἑαυτοῦ μόνου ποιοῦντος δαπανήματα, καὶ μὴ δυναμένου πρὸ τελείας ἐκκαλέσασθαι ψήφου.

XXXV De Officio Proconsulis et Legati

[1] Imp. Constantinus A. Aeliano proconsuli Africae. Legati non solum civiles, sed etiam criminales causas audiant, ita ut, si sententiam in reos ferendam perviderint, ad proconsules eos transmittere non morentur.

D. k. Oct. Constantino A. VI et Constantino C. conss.

[2] Impp. Arcadius et Honorius AA. Simplicio proconsuli Asiae. Officium Hellesponti consularis aeternae recordationis patrem serenitatis nostrae adiit et expositis suis incommodis, quibus a vicarianis apparitoribus urguebatur, oravit sub tuae sublimitatis agere potestate. cuius allegationes humanae proclivius pium principem commoverunt: quod et nos obtinere censemus.

D. VIII k. April. Constantinopoli Arcadio IIII et Honorio III AA. conss.

XXXVI De Officio Comitis Orientis

[1] Imp. Leo A. Pusaeo pp. Titulos, qui Alytarchiae et Syriarchiae muneribus in prima Syria deputati sunt, per officia tam viri spectabilis comitis Orientis quam viri clarissimi rectoris provinciae flagitari praecipimus.

[2][349] (The same Emperor.) The provincial governors and their official staffs shall, at their own peril, see to it that the property of the Imperial Patrimony suffers no loss, diminution of its revenue, or fraud. The Count of the Imperial Patrimony shall have the power to fine them and after (their) term of office force them to make good the loss, and they shall not accept any addition of unproductive or collectively assessed land.[350]

[3][351] No seal or registration shall be made by the Count of Our Treasuries on reported property before the adjudication of the case; in this instance, too, the defendant shall bear only his own expenses and may not appeal until a final ruling has been delivered.

Thirty-Fifth Title The Office of Proconsul and Legate[352]

[1][353] Emperor C*ONSTANTINE* Augustus to Aelianus, Proconsul of Africa. Legates shall hear not only civil but also criminal cases, so that if they perceive that a ruling should be delivered against the defendants, they shall not hesitate to remand them to the Proconsuls.

Given October 1, in the consulship of Constantine Augustus, for the sixth time, and the Caesar Constantine (320).

[2][354] Emperors A*RCADIUS and* H*ONORIUS* Augusti to Simplicius, Proconsul of Asia. The official staff of the Consular of the Hellespont went before the father of Our Serenity (Theodosius), of blessed memory, and, laying bare the grievances with which they were harassed by the officials of the Vicar, begged to work under the jurisdiction of Your Sublimity. Their sensible testimony quite easily won over the pious Emperor, and so We, too, have decided that this arrangement shall obtain.

Given March 25, at Constantinople, in the consulship of Arcadius, for the fourth time, and Honorius, for the third time, Augusti (396).

Thirty-Sixth Title The Office of the Count of the East

[1][355] Emperor L*EO* Augustus to Pusaeus, Praetorian Prefect. pr. We command that the taxes that have been designated for the Games of the Alytarchia and [349] = Bas. 6.1.103. Lounghis et al. date to between 491 and 518.

[350] The Greek text seems defective, and the translation here given is conjectural.
[351] = Bas. 6.1.104; perhaps to be combined with C. 1.33.5.
[352] See D. 1.16.
[353] = C.Th. 1.12.3; the likeliest date is November 8, 314 (Projet Volterra), but Seeck and Barnes date to 313.
[354] = C.Th. 1.12.5.
[355] Perhaps to be combined with 10.44.3.

1. Alytarchiae quidem ludi cura viri spectabilis comitis Orientis et eius officii, Syriarchiae vero sollicitudine viri clarissimi moderantis provinciam eiusque apparitionis exerceantur, nullique penitus curialium, nec si voluerint, idem munus vel honorem subeundi licentia permittatur.

D. v id. Nov. Constantinopoli Basilisco et Herminerico conss.

XXXVII De Officio Praefecti Augustalis

[1] Imppp. Valentinianus Theodosius et Arcadius AAA. Florentio praefecto Augustali. Omnia tributa per Aegyptiacam dioecesin cura et providentia claritatis tuae a moderatoribus provinciarum exigi iubemus. si qui tamen ex possessoribus sive militaribus sive non militaribus ad inferenda quae debent audaces extiterint, eos per militare etiam auxilium, si opus exegerit, ad solutionem compelli censemus.

D. xiii k. Mart. Constantinopoli Honorio np. et Euodio conss.

[2] Imppp. Theodosius Arcadius et Honorius AAA. Rufino pp. Praefectus Augustalis ordinariorum sub se iudicum examinandi flagitia et super his referendi, non amovendi vel puniendi habeat potestatem.

D. prid. non. Dec. Constantinopoli Olybrio et Probino conss.

XXXVIII De Officio Vicarii

[1] Imppp. Valens Gratianus et Valentinianus AAA. Antonio pp. In civilibus causis vicarios comitibus militum convenit anteferri, in militaribus negotiis comites vicariis anteponi, quotiensque societas in iudicando contigerit, priore loco vicarius ponderetur, comes adiunctus accedat: si

Syriarchia in Syria I shall be collected by the official staffs of both the vir spectabilis Count of the East and the vir clarissimus provincial governor. 1. The Games of the Alytarchia shall be held under the supervision of the vir spectabilis Count of the East and his official staff; the Syriarchia, though, shall be held under the oversight of the vir clarissimus provincial governor and his clerical staff; and no curials, not even if they wish, shall be granted permission to perform this duty or honor.

Given November 9, at Constantinople, in the consulship of Basiliscus and Herminericus (465).

Thirty-Seventh Title The Office of the Augustal Prefect[356]

[1][357] Emperors VALENTINIAN, THEODOSIUS, and ARCADIUS Augusti to Florentius, Augustal Prefect. We order that all taxes in the Diocese of Egypt shall be collected by the provincial governors under the responsibility and supervision of Your Renown. If, however, any landholders, whether soldiers or civilians, prove contumacious in paying what they owe, We deem that they should be forced to pay even by means of military assistance, if the task requires it.

Given February 17, at Constantinople, in the consulship of Honorius, Most Noble Boy, and Euodius (386).

[2][358] Emperors THEODOSIUS, ARCADIUS, and HONORIUS Augusti to Rufinus, Praetorian Prefect. The Augustal Prefect shall have the power to investigate and report the crimes of the ordinary governors under him, not to remove or punish them.

Given December 4, at Constantinople, in the consulship of Olybrius and Probinus (395).

Thirty-Eighth Title The Office of Vicar (Vicarius)

[1][359] Emperors VALENS, GRATIAN, and VALENTINIAN Augusti to Antonius, Praetorian Prefect. It is proper that Vicars have precedence over Counts of the Soldiers in civil cases, but that Counts be preferred over Vicars in military

[356] See D. 1.17.
[357] = C.Th. 1.14.1.
[358] = C.Th. 1.14.2; Seeck dates to December 4, 394.
[359] = C.Th. 1.15.7.

quidem cum praefecturae meritum ceteris dignitatibus antestet, vicaria dignitas ipso nomine eius se trahere indicet portionem et sacrae cognitionis habeat potestatem et iudicationis nostrae soleat repraesentare reverentiam.

D. VIII id. Ian. Gratiano A. IIII et Merobaude conss.

[2] Idem AAA. ad Hesperium pp. Relationes vicariorum, si quando usus attulerit, ad nostram mansuetudinem referantur. relationes enim iudicum libenter audimus, ne administratorum decrescere videatur auctoritas, si eorum consulta veluti profanorum preces a nostris adytis repellamus.

D. XII k. Febr. Gratiano A. IIII et Merobaude conss.

XXXVIIII De Officio Praetorum

[1] Imp. Constantius A. ad senatum. Praetori defertur haec iurisdictio sancientibus nobis, ut liberale negotium ipse disceptator examinet. sane interponi ab eo decreta conveniet, ut, sive in integrum restitutio deferenda est, probatis dumtaxat causis ab eodem etiam interponatur decretum, seu tutoris dandi seu ordinandi curatoris, impleatur ab eo interpositio decretorum: quippe cum apud eum quoque adipisci debeat patronorum iudicio sedula servitus libertatem. nec sane debita filiorum votis patrum vota cessabunt, ut patente copia liberos suos exuant potestate, magis propriis obsequiis mancipatos, cum sese intellegant his obsequii plus debere, a quibus sese meminerunt vinculis sacris exutos.

D. III k. Ian. Eusebio et Hypatio conss.

trials; and whenever it should happen that they jointly adjudicate, the Vicar should be held in the first place and the Count should join him as associate; for since the prefecture deservedly surpasses all other offices, the office of Vicar shows by its very name (vicarius) that it partakes thereof and has the power of the Sacred Tribunal and often represents the venerability of Our jurisdiction.[360]

Given January 6, in the consulship of Gratian Augustus, for the fourth time, and Merobaudes (377).

[2][361] The same Augusti to Hesperius, Praetorian Prefect. Whenever the need presents itself, the reports of Vicars shall be referred to Our Clemency. For We hear the reports of Our judges gladly, so that the authority of Our administrators should not seem to decrease should We reject their inquiries from Our sanctum like prayers from the profane.

Given January 21, in the consulship of Gratian Augustus, for the fourth time, and Merobaudes (377).

Thirty-Ninth Title The Office of the Praetors[362]

[1][363] Emperor CONSTANTIUS Augustus to the Senate. This jurisdiction is conferred on the Praetor by Our decree: he shall examine as trial judge cases concerning questions of free status. It naturally will be appropriate that he issue judicial decisions (decreta). Thus, if restitution to a former condition should be granted, his decree may be issued once adequate grounds have been proven; or if tutores should be provided or curatores appointed, he may exercise his power to issue decrees; and when diligent slaves should, in the opinion of their patrons, receive their liberty. Nor indeed shall the wishes of fathers fail to reciprocate the wishes of their children, so that when provided the opportunity they (the fathers) shall release their children from their (paternal) power, binding their children (thereby) to greater devotion to themselves; for they (the children) shall realize that they owe their fathers even greater devotion, when they recall that they have been released by them from their sacred bonds.

Given December 30, in the consulship of Eusebius and Hypatius (359).

[360] That is, Vicars judged vice sacra, notionally with the same authority as the imperial court itself.
[361] = C.Th. 1.15.8; Seeck dates the constitution to January 21, 378.
[362] See D. 1.14.
[363] = C.Th. 6.4.16; Seeck dates to December 27, 359.

[2] Impp. Valentinianus et Marcianus AA. Tatiano pu. Tres tantummodo praetores electae opinionis in hac urbe per singulos annos iudicio senatus praecipimus ordinari, qui competentes causas et debitos actus integre disceptare atque tractare debebunt, ut hi tamen tres ex his, qui proprium larem in hac alma urbe habeant, non ex provinciis eligantur. nec si qui forte propter aliquas causas ad hanc urbem de provinciis venerit, ad praeturae munus vocetur, sed hi tantummodo, ut dictum est, qui hic domicilium fovent, ita ut nec ipsi sumptus quosdam inferre cogantur inviti, sed habeant spontaneae liberalitatis arbitrium.

D. XV k. Ian. Constantinopoli Valentiniano A. VII et Avieno conss.

XXXX De Officio Rectoris Provinciae

[1] Imp. Alexander A. Iulianae. Potest de falso causam cognoscens praeses provinciae incidentem proprietatis quaestionem dirimere.

D. VI k. April. Maximo II et Urbano conss.

[2] Imp. Constantinus A. ad Maximum. Praesides provinciarum oportet, si quis potentiorum extiterit insolentior et ipsi vindicare non possunt aut examinare aut pronuntiare nequeunt, de eius nomine ad nos aut certe ad praetorianae praefecturae scientiam referre: quo provideatur, qualiter publicae disciplinae et laesis tenuioribus consulatur.

D. IIII k. Ian. Treviris Ianuarino et Iusto conss.

[3] Idem A. ad provinciales. Iustissimos et vigilantissimos iudices publicis adclamationibus collaudandi damus omnibus potestatem, ut honoris eis auctiores proferamus processus, et e contrario iniustos et maleficos querellarum vocibus accusandi, ut censurae nostrae vigor eos absumat. nam si verae voces sunt nec ad libidinem per clientelas effusae, diligenter investigabimus: praefectis praetorio et comitibus, qui per provincias constituti sunt, provincialium nostrorum voces ad nostram scientiam referentibus.

[2][364] Emperors VALENTINIAN and MARCIAN Augusti to Tatianus, Urban Prefect. We order that only three Praetors of outstanding reputation shall, upon the recommendation of the Senate, be appointed each year in This City, who shall be obliged to decide and handle the cases and transactions in their jurisdiction honestly. These three, however, shall be chosen from among the men who have their home in This Generous City, not from the provinces. And if someone should come to This City from the provinces for some reason, he shall not be summoned to perform the duty of Praetor, but only those, as stated, who keep their domicile here; but not even they shall be forced against their will to pay any expenses, but voluntary liberality shall be at their discretion.

Given December 18, at Constantinople, in the consulship of Valentinian Augustus, for the eighth time, and Avienus (450).

Fortieth Title The Office of Provincial Governor[365]

[1] Emperor ALEXANDER Augustus to Juliana. A provincial governor trying a case of forgery (falsum) may decide an incidental question of ownership.

Given March 27, in the consulship of Maximus, for the second time, and Urbanus (234).

[2][366] Emperor CONSTANTINE Augustus to Maximus. If some powerful person should prove intractable, and the provincial governors themselves cannot punish, investigate, or deliver a ruling against him, they must report his name to Us or surely to the knowledge of the Praetorian prefecture, so that it may be determined in what way public discipline and the less powerful who have been injured may be protected.

Given December 29, at Trier, in the consulship of Januarinus and Justus (328).

[3][367] The same Augustus to the Provincials. We grant all people the power to praise the most just and vigilant judges (i.e., governors) by public acclamations, so that We may bring them ampler advancements in honor; and on the contrary, the unjust and wicked are to be accused with cries of complaint, so that the force of Our chastisement may annihilate them; for We will carefully investigate whether those words are true and have not been wantonly uttered by clients, as the Praetorian Prefects and the Counts stationed throughout the provinces shall bring Our provincials' words to Our knowledge.

[364] Combine with C. 12.2.1.

[365] See D. 1.18.

[366] = C.Th. 1.16.4; combine with C. 12.46.2, C.Th. 7.20.5.

[367] = C. 1.16.6; combine with C. 1.21.3, 3.13.4?, 3.19.2, 7.62.19, 8.36.2, C.Th. 2.26.3, C.Th. 3.30.4, C.Th. 11.30.17, C.Th. 11.34.1.

PP. k. Nov. Constantinopoli Basso et Ablabio conss.

[4] Idem A. ad Periclem praesidem. In officiales praefectorum cursum publicum laniantes vel prava contra utilitatem publicam molientes vindicandi tibi dedimus potestatem, ita ut praefectos de eorum culpa facias certiores.

D. x k. Nov. Nicopoli Constantio et Albino conss.

[5] Impp. Valentinianus et Valens AA. ad Apronianum pu. Potioris gradus iudicibus ab inferioribus competens reverentia tribuatur. sed ubi publica tractatur utilitas, etsi minor iudex veritatem investigaverit, nulla maiori irrogatur iniuria. sane qui insignia dignitatis ad hoc exercet, ut indignis iniuriis existimet adficiendos eos, qui officia cum potestate moderantur, non declinabit nostrae indignationis aculeos.

D. v. k. Iun. Ancyro divo Ioviano et Varroniano conss.

[6] Imppp. Gratianus Valentinianus et Theodosius AAA. Cynegio pp. Civitas Rhodiorum iniuriam suam non tam decenter quam sero conquesta est. unde inviolabili observatione sancimus, ut, quoniam tempore hiemis navigatio saepe periculosa est semper incerta, in illis quinque urbibus, quae potiores esse ceteris adseruntur, vicissim hiemandum sibi iudices recognoscant. Quod si cuiquam tale existat ingenium, ut praecepta nostra contemnat, quinquaginta ab eo argenti librae, centum ab eius officio, si aliter factum fuerit, fisci viribus inferantur.

D. v id. Dec. Constantinopoli Arcadio et Bautone conss.

[7] Imppp. Valentinianus Theodosius et Arcadius AAA. Cynegio pp. Qui ordinariam gesserit dignitatem, quidquid ex venturae delegationis titulis profligaverit, cum dispendio pudoris atque fortunae de propriis facultatibus intra provinciam positus inferre debebit.

D. VII k. Iun. Constantinopoli Honorio np. et Euodio conss.

Posted November 1, at Constantinople, in the consulship of Bassus and Ablabius (331).

[4] The same Augustus to Pericles, Governor. We have given you the power to punish officials of the (Praetorian) Prefects who ruin the public post or plot wicked deeds against the public interest, but you must inform the Prefects of their wrongdoing.

Given[368] October 23, at Nicopolis, in the consulship of Constantius and Albinus (335).

[5] Emperors VALENTINIAN and VALENS Augusti to Apronianus, Urban Prefect. Proper deference must be paid by governors of lower rank to those of higher rank. But when the public interest is at stake, even if a lesser governor has investigated the truth, no wrong is done to the greater official. He, however, who uses his insignia of office for the purpose of inflicting unwarranted insults on those who hold office with power (conferred on them), shall not evade the stings of Our displeasure.

Given May 28, at Ancyrus, in the consulship of the Divine Jovian and Varronianus (364).[369]

[6] Emperors GRATIAN, VALENTINIAN, and THEODOSIUS Augusti to Cynegius, Praetorian Prefect. The city of Rhodes has complained not so much appropriately as tardily of the wrong done it. Hence We decree with inviolable force that because navigation is often dangerous in winter and always uncertain, the governors shall, by turns, pass the winter in the five cities that are held preeminent over the others. If any of them should be so disposed as to scorn Our orders, 50 pounds of silver shall be paid by him, 100 pounds by his official staff, into the Treasury, if anything to the contrary is done.

Given December 9, at Constantinople, in the consulship of Arcadius and Bauto (385).

[7] Emperors VALENTINIAN, THEODOSIUS, and ARCADIUS Augusti to Cynegius, Praetorian Prefect. Whoever holds the rank of an ordinary governor shall, while still in his province, repay whatever loss he has inflicted on the revenue of the next levy (delegatio), in addition to the loss of his good name and standing (fortuna).

Given May 26, at Constantinople, in the consulship of Honorius, Most Noble Boy, and Euodius (386).

[368] This should read "Accepted" (Acc.) or "Posted" (PP.), since Constantine was in Constantinople the next day according to C.Th. 16.8.5 and C.Th. 16.9.1

[369] Seeck dates to December 28, 363, but the transmitted date is preferable.

[8] Idem AAA. Cynegio pp. Ne quis iudicum in provincia sua praefectianum vel palatinum vel militem vel ex his etiam omnibus, qui antea in huiusmodi officiis fuerunt commorati, intercessorem (id est exsecutorem) cuiusquam litigatoris petitione in quolibet seu privato seu publico negotio putet esse tribuendum. nam peccantem circa consulta caelestia cum suo officio non solum detrimentum famae, sed etiam patrimoniorum damna comitentur.

D. non. Aug. Constantinopoli Honorio np. et Euodio conss.

[9] Idem AAA. Polemio pp. Illyrici. Nullus provinciae moderator augustissimam urbem sine iussione adire audeat. nam si quem patuerit contra decreti nostri praecepta venisse, is congrua condemnatione plectetur.

D. x k. Ian. Mediolani post consulatum Timasii et Promoti.

[10] Impp. Arcadius et Honorius AA. Limenio comiti sacrarum largitionum. Nullum palatinis tibi obsecundantibus cum provincialibus volumus esse commercium: sed iudices scire debebunt hoc sibi praecipue esse commissum, ut ipsi a provincialibus exigant et consueta deposcant, palatinum vero possessor non horreat, qui non sibi, sed iudicibus atque officiis praeceptus est imminere.

D. VI k. April.

[11] Impp. Honorius et Theodosius AA. Theodoro pp. Moderatores provinciarum curam gerere iubemus, ne quid potentium procuratores perperam inliciteque committant.

D. VI k. Dec. Ravennae Basso et Philippo conss.

[12] Idem AA. Monaxio pp. Omnes per provincias apparitores pro inveterata auctoritate iuxta motum iudicis nudatos verberibus, si ita res tulerit, subiacere praecipimus, ut et facilis exsecutio rerum publicarum sit et officiorum insolentia comprimatur et iudicum severitati competens reddatur auctoritas.

[8] The same Augusti to Cynegius, Praetorian Prefect. No governor shall assign any official of the Praetorian Prefects, Palatine official, soldier, or any of those who have formerly served in such bureaus, as an enforcement officer (intercessor, exsecutor) in his province at the request of any litigant in any private or public affair. For not only damage to his good name but also loss of property shall accompany him, together with his official staff, who violates (Our) heavenly provisions.

Given August 5, at Constantinople, in the consulship of Honorius, Most Noble Boy, and Euodius (386).

[9] The same Augusti to Polemius, Praetorian Prefect of Illyricum. No provincial governor may come to the Most August City unless ordered. For if it appears that anyone shall have come in violation of the provisions of Our decree, he shall be stricken with appropriate condemnation.

Given December 23, at Milan, in the post-consulate of Timasius and Promotus (390).[370]

[10] Emperors ARCADIUS and HONORIUS Augusti to Limenius, Count of the Imperial Finances. We wish there to be no dealing between the Palatine officials, who serve you, and the provincials. The governors ought to know hereafter that it has been specially entrusted to them to claim and collect the customary tribute from the provincials; but the landholder shall not fear the Palatine official, who has been instructed to attend not to his own interest but to the governors and their staff.

Given March 27 (401?).[371]

[11][372] Emperors HONORIUS and THEODOSIUS Augusti to Theodorus, Praetorian Prefect. We order provincial governors to take care that the procurators of powerful persons do no wrong or illegal act.

Given November 25, at Ravenna, in the consulship of Bassus and Philippus (408).

[12] The same Augusti to Monaxius, Praetorian Prefect. We order that all official staff members in the provinces shall, when the occasion requires it, be stripped and subjected to flogging at the discretion of the governor, in order that public business may be expedited, the insolence of gubernatorial staffs may be checked, and due authority may be restored to the strictness of the governors.

370 Seeck dates to June 22, 390.
371 Seeck dates to March 27, 401.
372 = C.Th. 1.16.14.

D. VI k. Ian. Honorio VIIII et Theodosio V AA. conss.

[13] Μὴ γινέσθωσαν κεχαρισμένα περὶ τοὺς ἄρχοντας ψηφίσματα, ἀλλὰ κωλυέσθωσαν παρ᾽ αὐτῶν, καὶ πρὸς μιᾶς καὶ μόνης ἡμέρας ἐν τῷ μέλλειν ἐπιβαίνειν τῆς ἐπαρχίας τὸ μηνῦον αὐτὸν πεμπέσθω διάταγμα. ἐπὶ κλοπῇ δὲ ἁλοὺς ἢ ἐγκλήματί τινι οὐ μόνον περὶ αὐτὴν τὴν σωτηρίαν, ἀλλὰ γὰρ καὶ τὴν οὐσίαν κινδυνεύσει.

[14] Imp. Leo A. Constantino pp. Si quis cohortalibus adhuc obsequiis obligatus regimen provinciae vel cingulum cuiuslibet militiae dignitatisve quoquo modo meruit, contra licitum usurpatis impetratisve careat, etiamsi ultronea nostra liberalitate ius gerendae provinciae vel militiae seu dignitatis cuiuspiam sibi iactaverit fuisse delatum.

D. VII id. Aug. Constantinopoli Leone A. IIII et Probiano conss.

[15] Idem A. Constantino pp. pr. Nulli iudicum, qui provincias regunt, in civitatibus, in quibus sacra palatia vel praetoria sunt, liceat relictis his privatorum sibi domus ad habitandum veluti praetoria vindicare, sed sacratissima modis omnibus inhabitare palatia seu praetoria, ut hac necessitate compellantur eorum reparationi providere. 1. Ubi autem et palatium est et praetorium, palatium quidem habitationi praesidis, praetorium autem suscipiendis conservandisque speciebus publicis horreorum vice vel aliae necessariae rei deputetur. 2. Quod si quis aliquando dissimulare temptaverit, protinus eum atque officium quinquaginta librarum auri multam ad reparandum sacrum quod neglexerit palatium solvere sancimus.

[16] Μὴ περιοράτω ἢ αὐτὸς ζημιούτω ἢ ἄλλως βλαπτέτω τὸν συντελεστὴν ὁ ἄρχων, κίνησιν βασιλικὴν ἀγωνιῶν καὶ τὴν γενομένην ἐπιγνῶναι ζημίαν.

Given December 27, in the consulship of Honorius, for the ninth time, and Theodosius, for the fifth time, Augusti (412).[373]

[13][374] No decrees of thanks shall be made for governors but shall be suppressed by them, and the edict announcing the governor shall be issued only one day before his imminent arrival in the province. If he is caught in any theft or other crime, he shall risk not only his safety but also his property.

[14][375] Emperor L*EO* Augustus to Constantinus, Praetorian Prefect. Should anyone as yet obliged to perform the duties of the provincial administration (cohortalia obsequia) obtain the governorship (regimen) of a province, or the belt (cingulum) of any branch of the imperial service, or an official position of rank (dignitas) in any way, he shall be deprived of what has been unlawfully usurped and obtained, even if he boasts that his entitlement to the governorship, the imperial service, or some position of rank has been voluntarily conferred through Our generosity Given August 7, at Constantinople, in the consulship of Leo Augustus, for the fourth time, and Probianus (471).

[15] The same Augustus to Constantinus, Praetorian Prefect. pr. None of the governors who administer provinces may, in cities in which there are sacred palaces or governors' official residences (praetoria), abandon these and claim the houses of private citizens for their dwellings as official residences. They must rather inhabit the most sacred palaces or official residences, so that they necessarily shall thereby be compelled to see to their repair. 1. Where there is both a palace and an official residence, the palace shall be reserved for the dwelling of the governor, the official residence for storing and keeping public supplies (species) or any other necessary things, in place of a warehouse. 2. If anyone should at some time attempt to feign ignorance of this, We decree that he and his official staff shall pay a fine of 50 pounds of gold for repairing the sacred palace that he has neglected.

(471?).

[16][376] (...). The governor shall neither neglect nor himself harm or otherwise injure the taxpayer but shall fear the displeasure of the Emperor and the necessity of making good the harm done.

[373] Seeck dates to May 27, 420.
[374] = Bas. 6.1.85.
[375] = C. 12.57.14 (but dated December 27).
[376] = Bas. 6.1.88.

[17] Τοὺς ληστεύοντας ἢ παραπλήσια πταίοντας συλλαμβανέτωσαν καὶ ἁρμοδίως οἱ ἄρχοντες τιμωρείτωσαν· τοὺς ἐν στρατείᾳ δὲ ὄντας οἱ πρωτεύοντες αὐτῶν παραδιδότωσαν, δέκα τοῦ παραβαίνοντος καταβάλλοντος λίτρας.

XXXXI Ut Nulli Patriae Suae Administratio sine Speciali Permissu Principis Permittatur

[1] Μηδεὶς Αὐγουστάλιος ἢ ἀνθύπατος ἢ βικάριος ἢ κόμης Ἀνατολῆς εἰς τὴν οἰκείαν ἐπαρχίαν γινέσθω, ἰδικῆς ἐπὶ τούτῳ χηρεύων κελεύσεως.

XXXXII De Quadrimenstruis Tam Civilibus Quam Militaribus Brevibus

[1] Οἱ ἄρχοντες καὶ αἱ τούτων τάξεις ἀνυπερθέτως μετὰ τῆς ἀληθείας καὶ ἀκριβείας ἐκπεμπέτωσαν τὰ τετραμηνιαῖα βρέβια, πεντήκοντα λίτρας χρυσίου καὶ τῆς ζώνης καὶ τῆς ἀξίας ἀφαίρεσιν ὑφορώμενοι, εἴ τις γένοιτο μέμψις κατὰ τοῦτο τὸ μέρος. τὸ δὲ αὐτὸ ἔστω καὶ κατὰ τοῦ τρακτευτοῦ πρόστιμον μὴ ἀναφέροντος ἐγγράφως ἐπὶ τὸν ἔπαρχον τὴν γενομένην ῥᾳθυμίαν.

[2] Μόνος ὁ τριβοῦνος ἢ ὁ τὴν τάξιν αὐτοῦ πληρῶν βικάριος μετὰ τοῦ δομεστίκου καὶ τοῦ ἀκτουαρίου καὶ τῶν ὀπτιώνων καὶ τοῦ νουμεραρίου ἤτοι τοῦ βοηθοῦ τὰ τετραμηνιαῖα βρέβια ὑπογράφων καὶ ὅρκον ἔγγραφον ὑποτελῶν, ὡς ἀληθῆ ἐμήνυσαν, ἐκπεμπέτω.

XXXXIII De Officio Praefecti Vigilum

[1] Imppp. Valentinianus Theodosius et Arcadius AAA. Nebridio pu. Praefecti vigilum huius urbis nihil de capitalibus causis sua auctoritate statuere debent, sed si quid huiusmodi evenerit, culmini tuae potestatis referre, ut de memoratis causis celsiore sententia iudicetur.

[17][377] (...). The governors shall arrest brigands and similar delinquents and punish them accordingly. Those in the military shall be surrendered by their superiors. Whoever violates this shall pay 10 pounds of gold.

Forty-First Title No One Is Permitted to Govern His Homeland Without Special Permission from the Emperor

[1][378] (...). No one shall be made Augustal Prefect, Proconsul, Vicar, or Count of the East over his native province without special orders to that effect.

Forty-Second Title Quarterly Reports Both Civil and Military

[1][379] (...). The governors and their staffs shall, without delay, truthfully and accurately dispatch quarterly reports, facing a penalty of 50 pounds of gold and loss of their rank (cingulum) and status, if any grounds for reproach should occur in this respect. The same penalty shall be inflicted on the chief collector (tractator) who fails to report in writing to the Prefect any negligence that has occurred.

[2] (...). Only the Tribune or one acting in his stead (vicarius) shall, together with his secretary (domesticus), the bookkeeper (actuarius), paymasters (optiones), accountant (numerarius), or assistant (adiuva/adiutor), sign the quarterly reports, give the oath in writing that they have given truthful information, and send them.

Forty-Third Title The Office of Prefect of the Watch[380]

[1] Emperors VALENTINIAN, THEODOSIUS, and ARCADIUS Augusti to Nebridius, Urban Prefect. The Prefects of the Watch of This City should not give a decision in any capital cases on their own authority, but, if any such case arises, must report it to Your Eminence, so that a decision in the aforementioned cases may be given by higher authority.

(c. 385–389).

[377] = Bas. 6.1.89.
[378] = Bas. 6.1.90.
[379] This and the following constitution have been ascribed to Anastasius; Lounghis et al. date both to 512.
[380] See D. 1.15.

XXXXIIII De Officio Praefecti Annonae

[1] Ἡ διάταξις φανερὸν προστεθεῖσα μέτρον τῇ χορηγίᾳ τῶν ἐν Κωνσταντινουπόλει πολιτικῶν ἀννόνων διορίζει καὶ πῶς τὰς μεταθέσεις δεῖ τῶν σιτηρεσίων προβαίνειν, πρόστιμον τοῖς μὴ πειθομένοις ποιοῦσα.

[2] Ἀναιρεῖ τὴν ἐκ παλαιοῦ γενομένην ἐπὶ τοῖς πολιτικοῖς ἄρτοις μείωσιν ἡ διάταξις καὶ κυροῖ τοὺς μὴ ὑπόντας μέν, πρὸ τούτου πραθέντας δὲ κατὰ τὴν ἀπάτην τῶν ἀννονεπάρχων καὶ τῶν λογογράφων τῶν ῥεγεώνων.

D. VIII id. Mart. Constantinopoli post consulatum Lampadii et Orestae vv. cc. anno secundo.

XXXXV De Officio Civilium Iudicum

[1] Imppp. Arcadius Honorius et Theodosius AAA. Curtio pp. Honorati, qui lites habere noscuntur, his horis, quibus causarum merita vel fata penduntur, residendi cum iudice non habeant facultatem.

D. III non. Febr. Romae Basso et Philippo conss.

[2] Impp. Honorius et Theodosius AA. Anthemio pp. Si quis pro publicis functionibus, quae flagitantur, aliquo se defendere temptet munimine, adeat iudicem et promat, quae duxerit adserenda: quem si iudex, quod non arbitramur, minus audire maluerit, ipse quidem administrator triginta librarum auri, apparitio vero eius quinquaginta feriatur dispendio.

D. XIIII k. Aug. Constantinopoli Honorio VIII et Theodosio III AA. conss.

Forty-Fourth Title The Office of Prefect of the Food Supply

[1][381] (...). The published constitution defines the amount for the distribution of the grain supply in Constantinople and how transferences of grain allowances should proceed, establishing a penalty for the disobedient.

[2][382] (...). The constitution abolishes the reduction of the public bread rations and ratifies those rations that were not extant, yet were formerly sold to defraud the Prefects of the Grain Supply and the accountants (logógraphi) of the regions.

Given March 8, at Constantinople, in the second post-consulate of the viri clarissimi Lampadius and Orestes (532).

Forty-Fifth Title The Office of Civil Judges[383]

[1][384] Emperors ARCADIUS, HONORIUS, and THEODOSIUS Augusti to Curtius, Praetorian Prefect. Persons of rank (honorati) who are known to have pending lawsuits shall not have the right to sit with the governor during the hours in which the merits and outcome of their own cases are weighed.

Given February 3, at Rome, in the consulship of Bassus and Philippus (408).

[2][385] Emperors HONORIUS and THEODOSIUS Augusti to Monaxius, Praetorian Prefect. If anyone seeks by any form of defense to excuse himself from public duties demanded of him, he shall go before the governor and offer what grounds he considers appropriate. If the governor, which We think unlikely, should decline to hear him, a loss of 30 pounds of gold shall be inflicted on the administrator himself (i.e., the governor), a loss of 50 pounds of gold on his official staff.

Given July 19, at Constantinople, in the consulship of Honorius, for the eighth time, and Theodosius, for the third time, Augusti (409).

[381] = Bas. 6.1.99. This and the following text from the Bas. summarize the original constitutions. Lounghis et al. suggest that this constitution was also issued by Justinian on March 7, 532.

[382] = Bas. 6.1.100.

[383] Generally, these judges will have been provincial governors; so also in succeeding titles.

[384] = C.Th. 1.20.1.

[385] Combine with C. 10.74.1, 11.2.5.

XXXXVI De Officio Iudicum Militarium

[1] Imppp. Valentinianus Theodosius et Arcadius AAA. comitibus et magistratis utriusque militiae. Numquam omnino in negotiis privatorum vel tuitio militaris vel exsecutio tribuatur.

D. prid. id. Febr. Constantinopoli Theodosio A. III et Abundantio conss.

[2] Impp. Honorius et Theodosius AA. Monaxio pp. Praecipimus, ne quando curiales vel privatae condicionis homines ad militare exhibeantur iudicium vel contra se agentum actiones excipiant vel litigare in eo cogantur. interminationem autem quinquaginta librarum auri adversus comitianum officium proponi decernimus, si quid contra haec aliquando temptaverit.

D. VI k. Sept. Eudoxiopoli Theodosio A. VII et Palladio conss.

[3] Impp. Theodosius et Valentinianus AA. Anatolio magistro militum. Nemo de his, qui in virorum spectabilium ducum officiis militaverint, scholae agentum in rebus quacumque subreptione post completam militiam societur, ne agendi vices viri clarissimi principis accipiat facultatem. si quis autem adversus haec nostrae perennitatis decreta venire conetur, militia spoliatus proscriptionis poena pro parte bonorum tertia constringatur.

D. V k. Febr. Constantinopoli Maximo II et Paterio conss.

[4] Idem AA. Nomo magistro officiorum. pr. Duces limitum et praecipue, quibus gentes quae maxime cavendae sunt appropinquant, in ipsis limitibus commorari et milites ad proprium redigere numerum imminentibus magisteriis potestatibus diuturnisque eorum exercitationibus inhaerere praecipimus. 1. Castrorum quin etiam refectionis clusuriarumque curam habeant. 2. Quibus cum principe castrorumque praepositis pro laborum vicissitudine limitaneorum militum duodecimam annonarum partem, distribuendam videlicet inter eos magisteriae potestatis arbitrio, deputamus.

Forty-Sixth Title The Office of Military Judges[386]

[1][387] Emperors VALENTINIAN, THEODOSIUS, and ARCADIUS Augusti to the Counts and Masters of Both Military Forces. Custody or enforcement in the suits of private citizens may never be delegated to soldiers.

Given February 12, at Constantinople, in the consulship of Theodosius Augustus, for the third time, and Abundantius (393).

[2] Emperors HONORIUS and THEODOSIUS Augusti to Monaxius, Praetorian Prefect. We order that curials or persons in private station may not be produced before a military court or be forced to answer the accusations of their adversaries or litigate there. We decree that the threat of a fine of 50 pounds of gold shall be set against the staff of the Count, if it should at any time attempt anything to the contrary.

Given August 27, at Eudoxiopolis, in the consulship of Theodosius Augustus, for the seventh time, and Palladius (416).

[3] Emperors THEODOSIUS and VALENTINIAN Augusti to Anatolius, Master of the Soldiers. No one from among those who have served in the staffs of the viri spectabiles Dukes shall, upon completing his service, be enrolled in the corps of the imperial couriers (agentes in rebus) by any surreptitious act, lest he obtain the power to act as vir clarissimus chief of staff (princeps). If, though, someone should try to contravene these decrees of Our Eternity, he shall be stripped of his office and punished by confiscation of one-third of his property.

Given January 28, at Constantinople, in the consulship of Maximus, for the second time, and Paterius (443).

[4][388] The same Augusti to Nomus, Master of Offices. pr. We order that the Dukes of the Frontiers, and particularly those neighboring the peoples that must be watched the most, shall remain on the frontiers themselves, recruit their troops to full strength under the eyes of the Masters of the Soldiers, and keep intent on the soldiers' daily drills. 1. They shall also have the responsibility of repairing the camps and fortresses. 2. In light of the variety of their labors, We assign to them, together with their chief of staff (princeps) and the commanders of the camps, one-twelfth of the frontier troops' pay allowance (annonae), to be distributed among them at the discretion of the Master of the Soldiers.

386 As with their civilian counterparts, the judges here are generally provincial or diocesan military officials (e.g., Counts, Dukes).

387 = C.Th. 1.21.1 (ascribed, correctly, to Theodosius, Arcadius, and Honorius).

388 = Nov. Theod. 24; combine with C. 1.31.4, 11.60.3.

D. prid. id. Sept. Constantinopoli Maximo II et Paterio conss.

[5] Ἀρκείσθω τοῖς ἐξ ἔθους σιτηρεσίοις ὁ δοὺξ καὶ τοῖς ἐκ τῆς δωδεκάτης τῶν ἐκ τῶν πολεμίων ληφθέντων μοίρας ἐν χρυσῷ διδομένης παρὰ τῶν ἐνδόξων ἐπάρχων καὶ μηδὲν ἕτερον ἢ κατὰ ἀπαίτησιν ἢ κατὰ ἑκουσίαν τοῦ διδόντος προαίρεσιν κομιζέσθω.

XXXXVII Ne Comitibus Rei Militaris vel Tribunis Lavacra Praestentur

[1] Imppp. Arcadius Honorius et Theodosius AAA. Anthemio pp. Omnem inquietudinem a curiis et civitatibus praecipimus prohiberi nec ulla privata ab his succendi balnea ad tribunorum vel ducum aliorumve militarium comitum usus nec adaerationem aliquam pro hac causa profligari. illustribus enim tantum viris comitibus ac magistris militum (si tamen id voluerint) hoc ministerium indulgemus: dupli poena violatoribus huius sanctionis imminente.

D. V k. Dec. Constantinopoli Arcadio A. VI et Probo conss.

XXXXVIII De Officio Diversorum Iudicum

[1] Imp. Constantinus A. ad Domitium Celsum vicarium. Nemo iudex officialem ad eam domum, in qua mater familias agit, cum aliquo praecepto existimet esse mittendum, ut eandem in publicum protrahat, cum certum sit debita eius, quae intra domum considerato sexu semet contineat, domus eius vel cuiuscumque rei habita distractione, publicis necessitatibus posse servari. quod si quis in publicum matrem familias posthac crediderit protrahendam, inter maximos reos citra ullam indulgentiam capitali poena plectetur.

D. III id. Ian. Treviris Sabino et Rufino conss.

Given September 12, at Constantinople, in the consulship of Maximus, for the second time, and Paterius (443).

[5][389] The Duke shall be content with the usual allowances and those derived from the twelfth part of the spoils taken from the enemy, to be paid in gold by the viri illustres Prefects, and shall receive nothing else, whether upon his request or with the willing assent of the giver.

Forty-Seventh Title No Baths Shall Be Provided for the Military Counts or Tribunes

[1][390] Emperors Arcadius, Honorius, and Theodosius Augusti to Anthemius, Praetorian Prefect. We order all disturbance to be kept from the curias and cities, nor should any private baths be heated by the aforesaid for the use of Tribunes or Dukes or any other military retainers, nor should any payment in cash be demanded for this reason. For We grant this privilege only to the viri illustres Counts and Masters of the Soldiers, if they so desire. A penalty of twice the sum concerned looms over violators of this decree.

Given November 27, at Constantinople, in the consulship of Arcadius Augustus, for the sixth time, and Probus (406).

Forty-Eighth Title The Office of Various Judges[391]

[1][392] Emperor Constantine Augustus to Domitius Celsus, Vicar. Let no governor deem it necessary to send a staff member to the home of a matron (materfamilias) on some order, so that he drags her into public, since it is certain that the debts of a woman who, out of consideration of her sex, keeps herself inside the house can be preserved for the needs of the State, should her house or any other thing be subject to (confiscation and) distraint. If anyone hereafter should think that a matron should be dragged into public, he shall suffer capital punishment as one of the gravest offenders, without hope of pardon.

Given January 11, at Trier, in the consulship of Sabinus and Rufinus (316).

[389] = Bas. 6.1.97.
[390] = C.Th. 7.11.1, with the end adapted from C.Th. 7.11.2.
[391] The judges intended are above all provincial governors.
[392] = C.Th. 1.22.1.

[2] Imppp. Valentinianus Theodosius et Arcadius AAA. ad Principium pu. Singuli quique iudices sciant celsioribus viris et his, quorum nonnumquam iudicio provehuntur, honorificentiam esse debitam praestandam, nec in subscriptionibus suis fratres audeant nominare, apparitione multanda, cuius haec cura est.

D. id. Febr. Ricomere et Clearcho conss.

[3] Idem AAA. Constantio[xxxv] pp. Galliarum. Sciant principes et cornicularii et primates officiorum, iudices etiam, ternas libras auri a suis facultatibus eruendas, si honoratis viris, quibus etiam consistorium nostrum ingrediendi facultas praebetur, secretarii iudicum non patuerit ingressus aut reverentia non fuerit in salutatione delata aut sedendi cum iudice societas denegata.

D. VI id. Nov. Treviris Timasio et Promoto conss.

XXXXVIIII Ut Omnes Tam Civiles Quam Militares Iudices post Administrationem Depositam per Quinquaginta Dies in Civitatibus vel Certis Locis Permaneant

[1] Imp. Zeno A. Sebastiano pp. pr. Nemo ex viris clarissimis praesidibus provinciarum vel consularibus aut correctoribus neve qui administrationis maioris infulas meruerint, id est viri spectabiles proconsules vel praefectus Augustalis aut comes Orientis aut cuiuslibet tractus vicarius aut quicumque dux vel comes cuiuslibet limitis vel divinarum comes domorum, postquam sibi successum fuerit, audeat excedere de locis, quae rexisse noscitur, antequam quinquaginta dierum constitutus numerus finiatur. 1. Sed per id tempus praesides quidem et consulares nec non correctores in metropoli, spectabiles vero iudices tam civiles quam militares in civitatibus administratae dioeceseos illustrioribus publice, nec domi vel intra sancrosanctos terminos vel regiones aut potentes domos latitantes, sed in celeberrimis locis ante omnium quos nuper gubernaverant ora versentur, ut pateat omnibus facultas libera super furtis aut criminibus querimoniam commovendi, ita ut ab omni

[xxxv] Constantiano

[2] Emperors VALENTINIAN, THEODOSIUS, and ARCADIUS Augusti to Principius, Urban Prefect. Each and every judge shall know that they must show due respect to men of higher rank and those at whose discretion they sometimes are promoted; nor shall they dare to address such men as "brothers" in their signatures, but their staff, whose duty this is, shall be punished.[393]

Given February 13, in the consulship of Richomer and Clearchus (384).[394]

[3][395] The same Augusti to Constantianus, Praetorian Prefect of the Gauls. The Chiefs of Staff (principes), their Department Heads (cornicularii), and the heads of the bureaus, and also the governors, shall know that 3 pounds of gold will be taken from their property if ingress to the goveror's council chamber (secretarium) does not stand open to men of rank (honorati), to whom the right of entering even Our Council (consistorium) is given, or if reverence should not be paid them in the morning reception or the courtesy (societas) of sitting in court with the governor should be denied.

Given November 8; (received ...) at Trier, in the consulship of Timasius and Promotus (389).

Forty-Ninth Title All Civil and Military Judges[396] Shall Remain for Fifty Days in Cities or Certain Places after Laying Down Their Office

[1] Emperor ZENO Augustus to Sebastianus, Praetorian Prefect. pr. No one from among the provincial governors, or consulars, or viri clarissimi correctors; nor those who have received the insignia (infulae) of a higher office, that is, the viri spectabiles Proconsuls or the Augustal Prefect or Count of the East, or the Vicar of any territory; or any Duke or Count of any Frontier, or a Count of the Divine House, shall, after he has received a successor, dare to depart the place that he is known to have governed until the fixed number of fifty days shall have passed. 1. During that time, the governors, consulars, and correctors in their metropolises; and the viri spectabiles civil and military governors in the more illustrious cities of the diocese they governed, shall abide in the most populous places before the eyes of all whom they recently governed, and not hide at home or within holy precincts or areas or in the [393] The signatures of officials consisted generally of a farewell written by hand, e.g., vale, mi frater, whereas the body of the document would have been drafted by a clerk. Cf. the signatures "in another hand" preserved in the letters at C. 1.1.8.24 and 39.

[394] Seeck dates to February 13, 385.

[395] = C. 12.19.2, C.Th. 6.26.5. The constitution was apparently received, not given, in Trier.

[396] The judges intended are above all provincial governors and military commanders.

defensus iniuria provisione post eum administrantis ac periculo officii nec minus curialium et defensoris civitatis, iuratoriae tantum cautioni commissus, postquam fuerit in querimoniam devocatus, pulsare volentibus (ut dictum est) pro legum ratione respondeat: 2. Nec ullam ante praefinitum tempus de provincia discedendi excusationem ei tribuat vel divina revocatoria vel codicilli alterius administrationis oblati vel praeceptum amplissimae tuae sedis, ut alterius provinciae moderatoris vices obtineat, aut praeceptum praefatae vel alterius civilis seu militaris cuiuscumque potestatis, ut quamcumque sollicitudinem publicam gerat aut exhibeatur vel deducatur, aut postremum cuiuslibet artis astutia. Cuiuscumque occasionis excogitata calliditas excludatur, ut modis omnibus, quae pro universarum provinciarum salute sancimus, sortiantur effectum.

3. Quod si quis temeritate punienda saluberrimam legem circumscribendam vel violandam crediderit, licet et maiestatis reus non immerito iudicetur, attamen quinquaginta librarum auri multam publicis calculis inferre cogetur: simili poena plectendo, qui post eum administratione suscepta minime eum curaverit honeste retinendum aut super eius fuga protinus referendum.

4. Administrationem autem deponere non volumus decessorem, antequam successor ad provinciae fines pervenerit, licet litteris ad eum seu programmate vel edicto ad officium et provinciales usus fuerit.

5. Ipse autem, qui praesentem fugiens non observaverit legem, ubicumque repertus fuerit, licet in hac florentissima civitate, ad provinciam sine ullo penitus obstaculo praeceptione tui culminis, cura etiam viri clarissimi rectoris provinciae, in qua repertus fuerit, deducetur, per sex mensuum curricula ibidem moraturus, quatenus interea minime crimina possint vel furta celari. 6. Officium etiam, quod eum (debito tamen honore servato) non prohibuerit contra legis tenorem discedere, triginta librarum auri dispendio ferietur. 7. Quod si intra quinquaginta dierum numerum fuerit forte pulsatus et praefato elapso tempore necdum finita lis fuerit, civiliter quidem super furtorum sceleribus pulsatus dato procuratore instructo post quinquaginta dies protinus habeat licentiam discedendi: accusatione vero super criminibus facta per inscriptionum laqueos inretitus usque ad terminum causae ibidem necessario perdurabit.

8. Sciant autem universi iudices, apud quos vel administrationis iure vel ex praecepto amplissimae tuae sedis huiusmodi controversiae civiliter vel criminaliter ventilantur, intra viginti dierum spatium debere se praefata litigia, postquam orta fuerint, terminare. nam si supersederint, homes of powerful personages. Thus all shall enjoy the free power to lodge a complaint concerning thefts and crimes; but he (the former administrator) shall be afforded protection from all insult by his successor, at the peril of his official staff as well as of the curials and the defender of the city (defensor civitatis). He shall be obliged to give a guaranty on oath (for his appearance), once he has been summoned to answer a complaint, and he shall respond according to the law to those who – as has been said – wish to accuse him. 2. Nor may any divine letter of recall or codicils conferred on him for another office or an order from your Most Exalted Prefecture grant him any excuse for leaving the province before the appointed time, so that he might take the place of the governor of another province; nor an order of the aforesaid prefecture or another civil or military official, that he undertake some public charge or be summoned or brought elsewhere; nor, lastly, any clever scheme. All cunning devised to provide any reason whatsoever shall be eliminated, so that what We decree on behalf of the safety of all provincials shall in every way be carried into full effect.

3. But if anyone, out of punishable rashness, thinks he shall evade or break this most beneficial law, though he might not undeservedly be judged guilty of high treason, yet he shall be forced to pay a fine of 50 pounds of gold to the public accounts. A similar punishment will be inflicted on his successor in office, if he makes no sincere effort to detain him or immediately report his flight.

4. We do not wish the departing administrator to lay down his office before his successor reaches the borders of the province, even if the latter has sent him a letter, or a proclamation or edict to his official staff and the provincials.

5. He, however, who disobeys the present law by fleeing, shall, wherever he may be found, even in This Most Prosperous City, be returned to his province, with no obstruction, at the order of Your Eminence, and under the responsibility of the vir clarissimus governor of the province in which he is found. He shall remain there for a period of six months, during which time his crimes or thefts cannot be kept hidden. 6. His official staff, which – though paying him due respect – did not prevent him from departing in violation of the law, shall be struck by a loss of 30 pounds of gold. 7. If within a total of fifty days he should be prosecuted and litigation is not yet finished when the aforesaid time has expired, then, if he has been accused of civil crimes of theft, a procurator may be appointed, and he shall forthwith have the freedom to depart after fifty days; but if a criminal accusation is made against him, once enmeshed in the snares of the charges, he must remain till the conclusion of the case.

8. All judges, before whom such civil or criminal cases are tried, whether by right of office or at the order of your Most Exalted Prefecture, shall know that they must finish the aforesaid litigation within twenty days after they shall have ipsos quidem decem librarum auri condemnationem subire censemus, accusationem vero seu civilem intentionem semel in iudicium deductam praefato modo legitime terminari.

D. v id. Oct. Constantinopoli Zenone A. II cons.

L De Officio Eius Qui Vicem Alicuius Iudicis Obtinet

[1] Imp. Gordianus A. Domitio pp. In causa quae spectat ad utilitatem rei publicae eum qui vice praesidis provinciae administrat potuisse cognoscere in dubium non venit. sane si in aliquo captum est ius rei publicae, iuxta scita divorum principum defensores rei publicae (si modo adesse fiduciam negotio putant) restitutionis auxilium possunt flagitare.

D. III non. Nov. Sabino II et Venusto conss.

[2] Mandata impp. Theodosii et Valentiniani AA. missa ad Antiochum pp. per referendarium, quae sic habent: Suggerente magnificentia vestra docta imperialis aeternitas debere eos, qui praeceptione principali seu vestrae sedis amplissimae tueri locum rectorum provinciarum noscuntur, auctoritatem habere tutores seu curatores petentibus dare, decretum etiam interponere ad alienandas minorum similiumque eis personarum seu curialium facultates, emancipationes quoque legibus celebrare et omnia quae ad iurisdictionem rectoris provinciae pertinent actitare, praecipere dignata est pro dispositione vestrae celsitudinis praefatas huiusmodi sollicitudines peragendi habere licentiam.

D. prid. id. Oct. Constantinopoli Hierio et Ardabure conss.

LI De Adsessoribus et Domesticis et Cancellariis Iudicum

[1] Impp. Diocletianus et Maximianus AA. Paulino. Studiorum labor meretur, ut hi, qui in publicis administrationibus constituti sociari sibi begun. For if they omit to do this, We have determined that they shall be condemned to the amount of 10 pounds of gold; the criminal accusation or civil claim, however, once brought before the court, must lawfully be concluded in the aforesaid fashion.

Given October 11, at Constantinople, in the consulship of Zeno Augustus, for the second time (479).

Fiftieth Title The Office of One Officiating in Place of a Judge[397]

[1] Emperor Gordian Augustus to Domitius, Praetorian Prefect. There is no doubt whether he who administers a province in place of a governor could try a case bearing on the welfare of a municipality. Indeed, if the right of a municipality is disadvantaged in some matter, the Defenders of the municipality – provided they think the case has merit – can, pursuant to the decrees of the divine emperors, demand the remedy of restitution.

Given November 3, in the consulship of Sabinus, for the second time, and Venusius (240).

[2] *The Mandates (mandata) of the Emperors Theodosius and Valentinian Augusti, sent to Antiochius, Praetorian Prefect, by messenger, which are as follows:* Instructed by the suggestion of Your Magnificence that those who govern a province by imperial command or by that of Your Most Exalted Office should have the authority to appoint tutores and curatores for those petitioning for them, to issue a decree for the sale of the property of minors and similar persons or curials, to preside over emancipations according to the laws, and to perform all duties that pertain to the jurisdiction of the provincial governor: Our Imperial Eternity has deigned to order, in accordance with the determination of Your Highness, that they shall have the power to perform the aforementioned tasks.

Given October 14, at Constantinople, in the consulship of Hierius and Ardabur (427).

Fifty-First Title Judicial Advisors (Adsessores), Private Secretaries (Domestici), and Public Secretaries (Cancellarii) of Judges[398]

[1] Emperors Diocletian and Maximian Augusti to Paulinus. The labor of scholarship warrants that those in public office, who desire to join to [397] See D. 1.21. Intended is a delegate judge appointed by a provincial governor (here called a judge).

[398] See D. 1.22. The judges intended are above all provincial governors.

consiliorum participes cupiunt, spe praemiorum atque honorificentia sua provocent eos, quorum prudentiam sibi putant esse necessariam, non metu terribili et necessitate incongrua libertati.

*D. prid. id. Iul. Tiberia*de Maximo II et Aquilino conss.

[2] Imp. Constantinus A. ad Bassum pp. Praesides non per adsessores, sed per se subscribant libellis. Quod si quis adsessori subscriptionem inconsultis nobis permiserit, mox adsessor qui subscripsit exilio puniatur: praesidis vero nomen ad nos referri iubemus, ut in eum severius vindicetur.

D. XV k. Sept. Constantino A. VI et Constantino C. conss.

[3] Impp. Arcadius et Honorius AA. Messalae pp. pr. Consiliarios iudicum et cancellarios et eos, qui domesticorum funguntur officio, post depositam administrationem quinquaginta dies in provincia residere praecipimus. 1. Pro confesso autem tenebitur, qui accusatus huiusmodi personam subtraxerit: eaque in quadruplum restitui iubemus, quae desiderantur ablata, ut duplum spoliatus accipiat, duplum noster fiscus adquirat.

D. VI k. Ian. Mediolani Theodoro cons.

[4] Idem AAA. et Theodosius A. ad Caecilianum vicarium. Domesticus iudicis a publicis actibus arceatur. Quod si necessitatibus publicis sese convictus fuerit miscuisse, statim eum ad maioris potestatis examen deduci oportet, ut competens in eo vindicta promatur.

D. VI id. April. Honorio A. VI et Aristaeneto conss.

[5] Impp. Honorius et Theodosius AA. Seleuco pp. Nemo in provinciis, qui semel domestici vel cancellarii ministerium gesserit, ad eandem observationem aliqua ambitione iterum remeare concedatur.

D. III id. Dec. Ravennae AA. X et VI conss.

themselves men to participate in their deliberations, must induce those whose expertise they consider indispensable with the hope of rewards and their own commendation, not by horrible fear and compulsion, which ill suits free men.

Given July 14, at Tiberias, in the consulship of Maximus, for the second time, and Aquilinus (286).

[2] Emperor CONSTANTINE Augustus to Bassus, Praetorian Prefect.[399] Governors shall sign petitions (libelli) personally, not through their judicial advisors (assessores). But if someone, without Our consent, should permit an advisor to sign them, the advisor who signed shall be punished by exile, while We order that the name of the governor be reported to Us, so that severer punishment may be visited upon him.

Given August 18, in the consulship of Constantine Augustus, for the sixth time, and the Caesar Constantine (320).[400]

[3] Emperors ARCADIUS and HONORIUS Augusti to Messala, Praetorian Prefect. pr. We order that the counselors and public secretaries of the governors, as well as those who serve as private secretaries, shall remain within the province for fifty days after they have laid down their office. 1. The subject of an accusation who removes such a person will be regarded as having confessed his guilt; and We order that which has been taken and is missing to be restored fourfold, so that the person despoiled receives twofold and Our Treasury acquires twofold.

Given December 27, at Milan, in the consulship of Theodorus (399).

[4] The same Augusti and THEODOSIUS Augustus to Caecilianus, Vicar. The private secretary of a governor shall be kept away from public records (publica acta). But if he is proven to have interfered in public business, he must immediately be brought before the tribunal of a higher official, so that due punishment may be rendered him.

Given April 8, in the consulship of Honorius Augustus, for the sixth time, and Aristaenetus (404).

[5] Emperors HONORIUS and THEODOSIUS Augusti to Seleucus, Praetorian Prefect. No one in the provinces who has once performed the duty of private or public secretary shall, by means of corrupt solicitation (ambitio), be permitted to return to the same position.

Given December 11, at Ravenna, in the tenth and sixth consulship of the Augusti (415).

[399] Krüger's 9th edition prefers the reading pu (Urban Prefect), incorrectly.
[400] Seeck gives August 18, 329.

[6] Idem AA. Vitaliano duci Libyae. Nemo de domesticis ducum vel comitum militarium, officiis eorum connumeratus, post completum sui temporis actum ad eandem rursus sollicitudinem audeat adspirare: decem auri librarum condemnatione proposita, si quis hanc violare voluerit sanctionem: eadem poena officio quoque coercendo,[xxxvi] si per ambitionem vel avaritiam ex his aliquid temerari concesserit.

D. VIIII k. Nov. Constantinopoli Honorio A. XI et Constantio II conss.

[7] Idem AA. Eustathio pp. Velut castrense peculium filii familias adsessores etiam post patris obitum vindicent, qui consiliis propriis administratores iuvare consueverunt, si quid licitis honestisque lucris coadunare potuerunt.

D. X k. April. Constantinopoli Honorio XIII et Theodosio X AA. conss.

[8] Idem AA. Asclepiodoto pp. Nullus iudicum ad provinciam sibi commissam quemquam secum ducere audeat, cui domestici vel cancellarii nomen imponat, nec profectum ad se undecumque suscipiat, ne famae nota cum bonorum publicatione plectatur. periculo enim primatum officii cancellarios, sub fide gestorum ex eodem officio electos iudicibus adplicari iubemus, ita ut post depositam administrationem nec militiam deserant et provincialibus praesentiam sui exhibeant, quo volentibus sit accusandi eos facultas, si enim idonea causa exegerit, ad detegenda iudicis flagitia et quaestioni eos subdi oportet.

D. prid. k. Iun. Constantinopoli Asclepiodoto et Mariniano conss.

[9] Impp. Theodosius et Valentinianus AA. ad Taurum pp. Si post depositam administrationem iudicum praesentiam vel exhibitionem domesticorum querimonia provincialium aut curialium vel aliqua

[xxxvi] coercendo proposita (C.Th.)

[6][401] The same Augusti to Vitalianus, Duke of Libya. No one from among the private secretaries of the Dukes or Military Counts, who is enrolled on their staff, shall dare to aspire to the same position again after he has completed his term of duty. A penalty of 10 pounds of gold has been established if anyone wishes to violate this decree; the same penalty has also been established to reprimand the official staff, if it, through corrupt solicitation or greed, should allow any of these provisions to be violated.

Given October 24, in Constantinople, in the consulship of Honorius, for the eleventh time, and Constantius, for the second time, Augusti (417).

[7][402] The same Augusti to Eustathius, Praetorian Prefect. Just as sons under paternal power may claim their special military property (peculium castrense) after the death of their father, so too may judicial advisors, who customarily aid governors with their counsel, if they have been able to accumulate anything from lawful and honorable profits.

Given March 23, at Constantinople, in the consulship of Honorius, for the thirteenth time, and Theodosius, for the tenth time, Augusti (422).

[8][403] The same Augusti to Asclepiodotus, Praetorian Prefect. No governor shall dare to bring anyone, on whom he imposes the name of private or public secretary, with him to the province entrusted him, nor may he engage anyone who has come to him from whatever place, lest he be stricken with the mark of infamy and the confiscation of his property. For We order that, at the peril of the chiefs of the official staff (primates), public secretaries shall be chosen from the same staff to attend to the governors and attested on official record, so that after they have laid down their office they shall not abandon the service but shall make themselves available to the provincials, so that anyone who wishes shall have the power to accuse them; for if reasonable grounds require it, they must even be subjected to torture in order to disclose the crimes of the governor.

Given May 31, at Constantinople, in the consulship of Asclepiodotus and Marinianus (423).

[9][404] Emperors Theodosius and Valentinian Augusti to Taurus, Praetorian Prefect. If the remonstration of the provincials or curials or some other public necessity requires the presence or summons of private secretaries after their

[401] = C.Th. 8.1.16.
[402] = C.Th. 1.34.2; combine with C. 2.7.4.
[403] = C.Th. 1.34.3.
[404] Combine with C.Th. 8.1.17.

publica necessitas postulaverit, per eosdem administratores, quorum domestici fuerint, iudicio legibusque tradantur.

D. v non. Iul. Constantinopoli Theodosio A. xiiii et Maximo conss.

[10] Idem AA. Florentio pp. In consiliariis observari censemus, ut in eum, qui in sua provincia ultra quattuor menses moderatoribus adsederit adversus leges antiquas et divorum retro principum scita, proscriptio bonorum et accusatio publici criminis immineat, nisi per caeleste oraculum vel amplissimae tuae sedis praeceptionem sese defendat.

D. xiii k. Febr. Theodosio xvii et Festo conss.

[11] Idem AA. Zoilo pp. Orientis. Non parum adsessoribus magistratuum maiorum quam ipsis iudicibus nostrae benivolentiae liberalitas tribuenda est. ideoque consiliarios virorum illustrium praefectorum tam praetorio quam huius inclitae urbis eminentissimorumque magistrorum militum nec non etiam viri illustris magistri officiorum, sive praedicto officio iam functi sunt seu fungentur in posterum, post depositum etiam officium ab omni indictionis onere seu civilium seu militarium iudicum prorsus immunes esse praecipimus, ut nec ab amplissima quidem sede tui culminis eis ulla molestia super suscipiendo quolibet gravamine penitus iniungatur: quinquaginta librarum auri officio tui culminis damnatione multando, si quid adversus statuta clementiae nostrae innovari concesserit.

D. v k. Mart. Theodosio A. xviii et Albino conss.

[12] Impp. Valentinianus et Marcianus AA. Palladio pp. Liceat omnibus iudicibus illustri praeditis potestate consiliarios sibi eosdem secundo ac tertio et saepius iniungere, quia qui semel recte cognitus est, ob hoc solum non debet, quod iam probatus est, improbari.

D ... Valentiniano A ...

[13] Αὐτοκράτωρ Ζήνων Α. Μηδέποτε χωρὶς τῶν ἀρχόντων οἱ συμπόνοι αὐτῶν δικαζέτωσαν τὰ ἐκείνων τιθέντες ὀνόματα.

governors have laid down their office, they shall be delivered by the same administrators, whose secretaries they were, to the court and the laws.

Given July 3, at Constantinople, in the consulship of Theodosius Augustus, for the fourteenth time, and Maximus (433).

[10] The same Augusti to Florentius, Praetorian Prefect. Concerning counselors (consiliarii), We deem it should be observed that he, who contrary to the ancient laws and decrees of past divine emperors[405] sits with governors longer than four months, shall face the confiscation of his property and accusation of a public crime, unless he defends himself by a heavenly oracle (an imperial rescript) or a command from Your Most Exalted Prefecture.

Given January 20, in the consulship of Theodosius, for the seventeenth time, and Festus (439).

[11][406] The same Augusti to Zoilus, Praetorian Prefect of the East. Our benevolence should be extended no less to the judicial advisors of the higher magistrates than to the governors themselves. We therefore order that the counselors of both the viri illustres Praetorian Prefects and Prefects of This Renowned City, of the viri eminentissimi Masters of the Soldiers, and of the vir illustris Master of Offices, whether they have already held this office or shall hold it hereafter, shall, after laying down their office, be exempt from the burden of every superindiction, whether imposed by civil or by military officials; not even by the Most Exalted Prefecture of Your Highness may the trouble of undertaking any liturgy be imposed on them. The official staff of Your Highness will be punished by a fine of 50 pounds of gold, if they permit any innovation contrary to the statutes of Our Clemency.

Given February 26, in the consulship of Theodosius Augustus, for the eighteenth time, and Albinus (444).

[12] Emperors VALENTINIAN and MARCIAN Augusti to Palladius, Praetorian Prefect. All judges of illustrious rank (i.e., viri illustres) shall be permitted to appoint the same men as their counselors a second and third time and oftener; because he who has been approved once should not be found wanting for the sole reason that he has been found unimpeachable.

Given ... in the consulship of Valentinian Augustus (450 or 455).

[13][407] (Emperor ZENO Augustus). Judicial advisors may not adjudicate a matter without the governors while only adding the name of the latter.

[405] That is, C.Th. 1.34.1.
[406] = C. 12.9.1.1 and 3 (with some changes).
[407] = Bas. 6.1.71, 7.1.1.

D. VI k. Iul. post consulatum Longini.

[14] Imp. Iustinianus A. Demostheni pp. pr. Nemo ex his, qui advocati causarum constituti sunt vel fuerint et in hac regia urbe in quocumque iudicio deputati et in aliis omnibus provinciis nostro subiectis imperio, audeat in uno eodemque tempore tam advocatione uti quam consiliarii cuiuscumque magistratus, quibus res publica gerenda committitur, curam adripere, cum sat abundeque sufficit vel per advocationem causis perfectissime patrocinari vel adsessoris officio fungi, ne, cum in utrumque festinet, neutrum bene peragat: sed sive advocatus esse maluerit, hoc cum debita sollertia implere possit, vel si adsessionem elegerit, in ea videlicet permaneat, ita tamen, ut post consiliarii sollicitudinem depositam liceat ei ad munus advocationis reverti.

1. Nec sit concessum cuidam duobus magistratibus adsidere et utriusque iudicii curam peragere (neque enim facile credendum est duabus etiam necessariis rebus unum sufficere: nam cum uni iudicio adfuerit, altero abstrahi necesse est sicque nulli eorum idoneum in totum inveniri), sed altera adsessione penitus semota unius magistratus esse contentum iudicio.

2. Nec callidis machinationibus huiusmodi legem putet quis esse circumscribendam et, si non consilarii signum quod solitum est chartis imponat, sed alias quasdam litteras excogitatas adsimulaverit, existimari ei licere fungi quidem memorato officio, sub huiusmodi tamen umbra latere, cum in legem committunt hi, qui vigorem eius scrupulosis et excogitatis artibus eludere festinant. 3. Neque sibi blandiri quemquam oportet, quod et praesentis legis aculeos possit evadere, quemadmodum et anteriores leges super hac re positas deludebat. si quis etenim in tali commisso fuerit inventus, sciat se de matriculis advocatorum penitus esse delendum et decem librarum auri multam nostris privatis largitionibus illaturum, per virum illustrem comitem rerum privatarum exigendam, et aliam maiorem regalis culminis subiturum offensam, cum nec ipse iudex, qui hoc fieri passus est et sciens prudensque hoc commiserit, sine imperiali commotione remanebit: 4. Eadem poena subiciendo etiam eo vel eis, qui in his causis, quarum patrocinium adepti sunt quibusque advocationem suam praestiterint, adsessionis cuiuscumque magistratus colore audeat vel audeant iudicare, ne adfectionis suae advocationis memor incorrupti iudicis non possit nomen perferre.

D. V k. Oct. Chalcedone Decio vc. cons.

[15] ...

Given June 26, in the post-consulate of Longinus (487).

[14] Emperor JUSTINIAN Augustus to Demosthenes, Praetorian Prefect. pr. No one from among those who have been or shall be appointed advocates of cases, both in This Imperial City in any court, and in all the other provinces subject to Our rule, shall dare at one and the same time both to serve as advocate and to seize the post of counselor to any magistrate to whom a public office has been entrusted; for it more than suffices either to handle cases excellently as advocate or to serve as a judicial advisor, lest, while he hastens to do both, he does neither well. But if, however, he prefers to serve as advocate, he can fill this position with the necessary skill; or, if he has chosen to be a judicial advisor, he may remain so, so that once he has laid down his position as counselor, he may return to his position as advocate.

1. Nor shall one person be allowed to serve as judicial advisor to two magistrates and attend both courts – for it defies belief that one man alone can fill two essential tasks; for since he will be present in one court, he necessarily must be drawn away from the other and thus is found completely sufficient for neither – but with the second position as advisor canceled, he must be content with the court of one magistrate.

2. Nor should anyone think that he might evade this law by cunning schemes and that, if he does not place on his papers the customary mark of a counselor but affects some fanciful letters, he will be considered permitted to serve in the aforementioned position, while he hides in the shadow (of his deception). For they break this law who try to elude its force by their cunning and far-fetched tricks. 3. And no one may flatter himself that he can also evade the stings of the present law just as he cheated past laws issued on this subject. For if someone is caught in such a crime, he shall know that he shall be struck utterly from the registers of advocates and must pay a fine of 10 pounds of gold to Our Privy Purse, to be collected by the Count of the Privy Purse; and he further will face the greater displeasure of Our Imperial Highness, while the judge himself who permitted this and knowingly and deliberately committed this crime will not remain free from Our imperial indignation. 4. The person or persons who dares or dare to adjudicate, as the judicial advisors of any magistrate, cases in which they have undertaken the representation (of one of the parties) or provide their service as advocates, shall be subject to the same punishment, lest influenced by the interest of his advocates he be unable to bear the name of an incorruptible judge.

Given September 27, in Chalcedon, in the consulship of vir clarissimus Decius (529).

[15] ...[408]

LII De Annonis et Capitu Administrantium vel Adsessorum Aliorumve Publicas Sollicitudines Gerentium vel Eorum, Qui Aliquas Consecuti Sunt Dignitates

[1] Impp. Theodosius et Valentinianus AA. Florentio pp. Omnibus tam viris spectabilibus quam viris clarissimis iudicibus, qui per provincias sive militarem sive civilem administrationem gerunt, nec non comiti commerciorum, magistro aeris sive privatae rei, rationali per Ponticam atque Asianam dioecesin et adsessoribus iudicum singulorum in praebendis solaciis annonarum hic fixus ac stabilis servabitur modus, ut ea pro annonis et capitu dignitati suae debitis pretia consequantur, quae particularibus delegationibus soleant contineri.

D. III k. Iun. Constantinopoli Theodosio XVII et Festo conss.

LIII De Contractibus Iudicum vel Eorum Qui Sunt Circa Eos et Inhibendis Donationibus in Eos Faciendis et Ne Administrationis Tempore Proprias Aedes Aedificent sine Sanctione Pragmatica

[1] Imp. Iustinianus A. Menae pp. pr. Quicumque administrationem in hac florentissima urbe gerunt, emere quidem mobiles vel immobiles res vel domus extruere non aliter possint, nisi specialem nostri numinis hoc eis permittentem divinam rescriptionem meruerint. 1. Donationes vero omnimodo recusent, scientes non esse validas eas in quibuscumque rebus et quacumque aestimatione, nisi post administrationem depositam vel specialiter in scriptis donator eandem donationem ratam habuerit vel tempus quinquennale praeterierit, in quo nulla querella super isdem donationibus vel ab ipso donatore vel ab successoribus eius facta sit. 2. Provincias vero moderantibus non solum donationes, sed etiam emptiones quarumcumque mobilium vel immobilium rerum praeter eas, quae ad alimonias vel vestem pertinent, et aedificationes, licet sacri apices aliquid eorum permiserint, penitus interdicimus. nec ratum sit, quod his donatione vel venditione datum est, licet quinquennale tempus post depositam administrationem excesserit vel consensus donatoris vel venditoris post eandem administrationem

Fifty-Second Title The Rations and Fodder (Annonae et Capitus)[409] of Governors, Judicial Advisors, and Others Who Hold Public Office, and of Those Who Have Obtained Other Ranks

[1] Emperors Theodosius and Valentinian Augusti to Florentius, Praetorian Prefect. For all governors, both viri spectabiles and viri clarissimi, who hold office in the provinces, whether military or civil; and also for the Count of External Trade, the Master of Bronze (magister aeris) or of the Privy Purse, the Comptroller (rationalis) of the diocese of Pontica and Asiana; and for the advisors of the individual governors, the following fixed and inalterable method shall be followed in furnishing them with their remuneration in rations: they shall receive the price of rations and fodder owing to their rank as these are customarily contained in special requisition schedules (delegationes).

Given May 30, at Constantinople, in the consulship of Theodosius, for the seventeenth time, and Festus (439).

Fifty-Third Title Contracts of Judges[410] or Those Who Serve Them; Prohibited Gifts to Them; and That They May Not Build Houses for Themselves During Their Time in Office Without a Pragmatic Sanction

[1] Emperor Justinian Augustus to Menas, Praetorian Prefect. pr. Those who hold public office in This Most Flourishing City cannot by any means buy movable or immovable property or build houses, unless they obtain a special divine rescript permitting them to do so. 1. They shall altogether refuse gifts, knowing that they are void regardless of the things given and their value, until they have laid down their office, or the giver specifically confirms the gift in writing, or a period of five years has passed, during which no complaint concerning the aforesaid gifts is made by the donor or his heirs. 2. But We utterly prohibit not only gifts to provincial governors but also purchases of any movable or immovable property, excepting what goes toward food and clothing, and buildings, even if a sacred writing (an imperial rescript) permits one of these things. Nor shall a gift or sale made to them be valid, even if a period of five years has passed after they have laid down their office, or the consent of the giver or seller has been added subsequent to their term [408] Nov. 60.2 shows that a Greek constitution of the same import as 1.51.13 has been lost.

[409] On these terms, see note on C. 1.27.1.

[410] Here, Justinian has in mind a wide range of officials, encompassing both urban magistrates and provincial governors.

adiectus sit. 3. Haec autem etiam ad domesticos et consiliarios eorum trahi necessarium duximus, illud etiam adicientes, ut nec per interpositam personam aliquid eorum sine periculo possit perpetrari. 4. Quae etiam ad praeterita negotia referri sancimus, nisi transactionibus vel iudicationibus sopita sint.

D. v id. Dec. Constantinopoli dn. Iustiniano A. II cons.

LIIII De Modo Multarum, Quae ab Iudicibus Infliguntur

[1] Impp. Severus et Antoninus AA. Firmo. Multa damnum famae non irrogat.

D. v id. April. Antonino A. et Geta utrisque II conss.

[2] Imp. Alexander A. Decimo. Procuratores meos, id est rationales, indicendae multae ius non habere saepe rescriptum est.

D. XIII k. Sept. Modesto et Probo conss.

[3] Imp. Gordianus A. Celeri. Curator rei publicae, qui Graeco vocabulo logista nuncupatur, multandi ius non habet.

D. id. Sept. Gordiano A. et Aviola conss.

[4] Imppp. Gratianus Valentinianus et Theodosius AAA. Eutropio pp. Illustres viros praefectos praetorio usque ad quinquaginta librarum auri multas, cum peccatum gravissimum erit, sinimus pervenire.

D. VIII id. Ian. Gratiano V et Theodosio AA. conss.

[5] Imppp. Valentinianus Theodosius et Arcadius AAA. ad Praetextatum pp. Multarum severa compendia aerario nostro protinus esse quaerenda nullus ignoret, nisi ipse iudex id, quod ad poenam admissi facinoris exculpitur, vel publicis operibus vel cursui publico vel aliis necessariis causis specialiter deputaverit.

D. V id. Sept. Aquileiae Ricomere et Clearcho conss.

of office. 3. We have, moreover, deemed it necessary to apply these provisions to their private secretaries and counselors, adding, furthermore, that none of these things can be acquired through a third party without peril. 4. Also, We decree that these provisions shall apply retroactively to past transactions, unless they have been resolved by settlements or adjudication.

Given December 9,[411] at Constantinople, in the consulship of Our Lord Justinian Augustus, for the second time (528).

Fifty-Fourth Title The Amount of Fines That Are Imposed by Judges

[1] Emperors SEVERUS and ANTONINUS Augusti to Firmus. A fine does not cause loss of reputation (infamia).

Given April 9, in the consulship of Antoninus Augustus and Geta, both Consuls for the second time (205).

[2] Emperor ALEXANDER Augustus to Decimus. It has often been stated in rescripts that my procurators, that is, my comptrollers (rationales), have no right to impose fines.

Given August 20, in the consulship of Modestus and Probus (228).

[3] Emperor GORDIAN Augustus to Celer. The curator of a city, who is denoted by the Greek term logista, does not have the right to impose fines.

Given September 13, in the consulship of Gordian Augustus and Aviola (239).

[4] Emperors GRATIAN, VALENTINIAN, and THEODOSIUS Augusti to Eutropius, Praetorian Prefect. We allow the viri illustres Praetorian Prefects to impose fines of up to 50 pounds of gold, when the offense is of the most serious nature.

Given January 6, in the consulship of Gratian, for the fifth time, and Theodosius, Augusti (380).

[5] Emperors VALENTINIAN, THEODOSIUS, and ARCADIUS Augusti to Praetextatus, Praetorian Prefect. No one is unaware that the harsh proceeds of fines must immediately be collected for Our treasury, unless the judge himself specifically dedicates the money seized as punishment for a crime either to public works or to the public post or to other necessary functions.

[411] More probably December 11; so also Lounghis et al.

[6] Impp. Arcadius et Honorius AA. Messalae pp. pr. Eos, qui ordinario provincias iure moderantur, erga eorum personas, quos culpa reddit obnoxios, ultra duarum unciarum auri multam condemnare non patimur. 1. Proconsularem vero potestatem, si multandi necessitas imminebit, senarum unciarum auri summa cohibebit: in qua forma etiam comes Orientis atque praefectus Augustalis erit. 2. Ceteri vero spectabiles iudices et qui vice vestra administrationis gubernacula susceperunt, ultra tres auri uncias sibi intellegant licentiam denegandam. 3. Id quoque observandum a moderatore esse censemus, ut in unius correptione personae, si ad id continuatio peccati impulerit, trinae tantum in annum condemnationis sub praestituta summa severitas exseratur. 4. Quod si quis praedictum modum excesserit, huius auctor admissi condemnato ad dupli restitutionem, fisco vero nostro ad inferendam eam quantitatem, quam multae nomine inflixerit, retinebitur.

5. Nec tamen ad huiusmodi legis moderationem pertinere se credant, qui in peculatibus aut manubiis, id est depraedationibus concussionibus furtis atque aliis flagitiis, quae coerceri severius convenit, fuerint deprehensi, scilicet ut scripta per iudices memoratos, in cuiuslibet fuerit dirigenda dispendium, sententia proferatur. 6. Nec putent factu facile esse, ut aut praecipiti persuasione condemnent quem culpa non ingravat, aut erubescenda varietate iudicii pro arbitrio proprio immutandum esse quod lex iusserit, nisi paupertas condemnati hoc persuaserit.

D. XII k. Sept. Theodoro cons.

LV De Defensoribus Civitatum

[1] Impp. Valentinianus et Valens AA. Senecae defensori. Si quis de tenuioribus ac minusculariis rebus interpellandum te esse crediderit, in minoribus causis, id est usque ad quinquaginta solidorum summam, acta iudicialia conficias, scilicet ut, si quando quis vel debitum iustum vel servum, qui per fugam fuerit elapsus, vel quod ultra delegationem Given September 9, at Aquileia, in the consulship of Richomer and Clearchus (384).

[6][412] Emperors ARCADIUS and HONORIUS Augusti to Messala, Praetorian Prefect. pr. We do not permit those who govern provinces as ordinary governors to impose a fine greater than 2 ounces of gold on those whose wrongdoing has made them liable. 1. The office of Proconsul, if the necessity to impose a fine arises, shall be restricted to a sum of 6 ounces of gold. The Count of the East and the Augustal Prefect shall adhere to the same amount. 2. The remaining judges of spectabilis rank and those who undertake the administration in your stead (as Vicars), shall recognize that the power to impose a fine greater than 3 ounces of gold will be denied them. 3. We also believe that this should be observed by the governor: for the punishment of a single person, if persistent wrongdoing requires it, the stern punishment of a fine in the prescribed amount may be exacted only three times in a year. 4. But if anyone exceeds the aforesaid limit, the person responsible for this crime shall be liable to restore twofold to the person fined and to pay Our Treasury the amount he imposed as a fine.

5. And those who are caught engaged in embezzlement and plunder – that is, in depredations, extortion, thefts, and other crimes, which must be punished more severely – shall not think that the moderation of this law applies to them. A written ruling will be rendered by the aforementioned judges, no matter to whose disadvantage it may be. 6. Nor need they (the judges) think it a simple matter to condemn a person free of blame on the basis of rash speculation, or to change at their own discretion with shameless caprice what the law commands, unless the poverty of the person convicted calls for this.

Given August 21, in the consulship of Theodorus (399).

Fifty-Fifth Title Defenders of the Cities

[1][413] Emperors VALENTINIAN and VALENS Augusti to Seneca, Defender. If anyone believes that he should approach you concerning modest and trifling matters, you shall make the records of the judicial proceedings thereof for minor cases, that is, up to the amount of 50 solidi. Thus, if anyone demands either a just debt or a slave that has escaped by flight, or repayment of an amount greater than that authorized by the schedule of requisitions (delegatio), or any

[412] Combine with C. 4.44.17, 9.41.17, 10.32.51.
[413] = C.Th. 1.29.2; combine with C.Th. 8.15.4. Schmidt-Hofner gives June 27, 368.

dederit postulaverit vel quodlibet huiusmodi, tua disceptatione restituas. ceteras vero, quae dignae forensi magnitudine videbuntur, ordinario insinuato rectori.

D. v k. Iul. Tyrici Valentiniano et Valente AA. conss.

[2] Idem AA. ad Probum pp. Defensores civitatum non ex decurionum seu cohortalium corpore, sed ex aliis idoneis personis huic officio deputentur.

D. III non. Nov. isdem conss.

[3] Idem AA. et Gratianus A. ad senatum. Utili ratione prospectum est, ut innocens et quieta rusticitas peculiaris patrocinii, id est defensoris locorum, beneficio fruatur, ut apud eum in pecuniariis causis litigandi habeat facultatem.

D. IIII id. Aug. Hierapoli Valentiniano et Valente AA. utrisque IIII conss.

[4] Imppp. Gratianus Valentinianus et Theodosius AAA. Theodoro defensori civitatis. In defensoribus universarum provinciarum erit administrationis haec forma et tempus quinquennii spatii metiendum: scilicet ut imprimis parentis vicem plebi exhibeas, descriptionibus rusticos urbanosque non patiaris adfligi, officialium insolentiae, iudicum procacitati salva reverentia pudoris occurras, ingrediendi, cum voles, ad iudicem liberam habeas facultatem, superexigendi damna vel spolia plus petentium ab his, quos liberorum loco tueri debes, excludas, nec patiaris quicquam ultra delegationem solitam ab his exigi, quos certum est nisi tali remedio non posse reparari.

D. XI non. Ian. Constantinopoli Arcadio et Bautone conss.

[5] Imppp. Valentinianus Theodosius et Arcadius AAA. Potamio praefecto Augustali. Defensores nihil sibi insolenter, nihil indebitum vindicantes nominis sui tantum fungantur officio: nullas infligant multas, severiores non exerceant quaestiones, plebem vel decuriones ab omni such thing, you may restore it by your decision. Other cases, however, which appear to warrant a high court, you shall refer to the ordinary governor.

Given June 27, at Tyricus, in the consulship of Valentinian and Valens, Augusti (365).

[2][414] The same Augusti to Probus, Praetorian Prefect. Defenders of the cities shall be appointed to this office, not from among decurions or officials of the governor (cohortalini), but from among other suitable persons.

Given November 3, in the consulate of the aforesaid (368, 370, or 373?).

[3][415] The same Augusti and GRATIAN Augustus to the Senate. It has been determined for the public good that the guileless and peaceful country folk should enjoy the benefit of special protection, that is, of the defender of the area, so that they shall have the ability to litigate before him in civil suits (causae pecuniariae).

Given August 10, at Hierapolis, in the consulship of Valentinian and Valens, both Consul for the fourth time, Augusti (373).

[4] Emperors GRATIAN, VALENTINIAN, and THEODOSIUS Augusti to Theodorus, Defender of the City. The following are the guidelines for the defenders in all provinces, and a period of five years shall be their term in office: first of all, you shall act as parent to the common people; you shall not permit the country and urban folk to be crushed by tax levies; you shall oppose the insolence of the gubernatorial staff and, while maintaining due respect, the impudence of the governors; you shall have the freedom to approach the governor when you wish; you shall prevent losses caused by superindictions or rather spoliation at the hands of officials making excessive demands on those whom you should protect as your own children; and you will not permit anything beyond the regular tax requisition (delegatio) to be collected from them. For it is certain that they cannot be revived but by such a remedy.

Given January ...,[416] at Constantinople, in the consulship of Arcadius and Bauto (385).

[5][417] Emperors VALENTINIAN, THEODOSIUS, and ARCADIUS Augusti to Potamius, Augustal Prefect. The defenders shall not insolently arrogate anything to themselves, or anything unwarranted, but shall perform the duty for which they are named. They shall inflict no fines, shall not conduct harsh [414] = C.Th. 1.29.3; Seeck dates to November 6, 368.

[415] = C.Th. 1.29.5; Seeck dates the constitution to their third joint consulate in 370.
[416] The day of the month is corrupt.
[417] = C.Th. 1.29.7; Seeck dates to May 5, 392.

improborum insolentia et temeritate tueantur, ut id tantum, quod esse dicuntur, esse non desinant.

D. III non. Mart. Constantinopoli Arcadio A. II et Rufino conss.

[6] Idem AAA. Tatiano pp. Per omnes regiones, in quibus fera et periculi sui nescia latronum fervet insania, probatissimi quique et districtissimi defensores adsint disciplinae et quotidianis actibus praesint, qui non sinant crimina impunita coalescere: removeantur patrocinia, quae fervorem reis et auxilium scelerosis impertiendo maturari scelera fecerunt.

D. V id. April. Constantinopoli Arcadio A. II et Rufino conss.

[7] Impp. Arcadius et Honorius AA. Caeciliano pp. Defensores civitatum oblatos sibi reos in ipso latrocinio vel congressu violentiae aut perpetrato homicidio stupro vel raptu vel adulterio deprehensos et actis publicis sibi traditos expresso crimine cum his, a quibus fuerint accusati, mox sub idonea prosecutione ad iudicium dirigant.

D. prid. k. Ian. Mediolani Stilichone II et Anthemio conss.

[8] Impp. Honorius et Theodosius AA. Caeciliano pp. pr. Defensores ita praecipimus ordinari, ut sacris orthodoxae religionis imbuti mysteriis reverentissimorum episcoporum nec non clericorum et honoratorum ac possessorum et curialium decreto constituantur: de quorum ordinatione referendum est ad illustrissimam praetorianam potestatem, ut litteris eiusdem magnificae sedis eorum solidetur auctoritas. 1. Quod si quid a qualibet persona contra publicam disciplinam in laesionem possessorum fieri cognoverint defensores, referendi habeant potestatem ad illustres et magnificos viros praefectos praetorio et illustres viros investigations (by torture), and shall protect the common people and decurions from every act of impudence and brazenness by the wicked, so that they shall not cease to be only that which they are said to be (defenders).

Given March 5, at Constantinople, in the consulship of Arcadius Augustus, for the second time, and Rufinus (392).

[6][418] The same Augusti to Tatianus, Praetorian Prefect. In every district where the wild madness of brigands, ignorant of their own peril, rages, the most upright and sternest defenders shall keep discipline and oversee daily business. They shall not permit unpunished crimes to proliferate. Patronage shall be abolished, which by giving inspiration to the guilty and aid to the criminal, has produced a bounty of crime.

Given April 9, at Constantinople, in the consulship of Arcadius Augustus, for the second time, and Rufinus (392).

[7][419] Emperors ARCADIUS and HONORIUS Augusti to Caecilianus, Praetorian Prefect. When persons apprehended in the act of brigandage or violent assault, or having committed homicide, debauchery, rape, or adultery, are brought before the defenders of the cities, the defenders shall send those delivered to them on to the court (of the provincial governor?) under proper escort, along with the persons by whom they are accused, the accusation being spelled out in the records of proceedings.

Given December 31, at Milan, in the consulship of Stilicho, for the second time, and Anthemius (405).

[8][420] Emperors HONORIUS and THEODOSIUS Augusti to Caecilianus, Praetorian Prefect. pr. We order that defenders of the cities shall be appointed as follows: they shall be installed by the decree of the most reverend bishops, the clergy, men of rank (honorati) and landholders, and the curials, from among those initiated in the sacred mysteries of the orthodox religion. Their appointment must be reported to the office of the Praetorian Prefect, so that their authority may be confirmed by a letter from the aforesaid Magnificent Prefecture. 1. If the defenders should learn of anything done by any person contrary to public order to the detriment of the landholders, they shall have the power to report the crime to the viri illustres et magnifici Praetorian Prefects, the viri

[418] = C.Th. 1.29.8, with a slightly different text.

[419] = C.Th. 9.2.5 (but dated to January 18, 409, with Honorius and Theodosius as authors); combine with C. 1.4.9, 1.55.8–9, 4.20.11, C.Th. 9.2.6, 9.31.1, 9.36.2, 9.37.4. Seeck dates to January 21, 409.

[420] Combine with C. 1.4.9, 1.55.7, 1.55.9, 4.20.11, C.Th. 9.2.5–6, 9.3.7, 9.31.1, 9.36.2, 9.37.4.

magistros equitum et peditum, magistros etiam officiorum et comites tam sacrarum largitionum quam rerum privatarum.

D. XII k. Febr. Ravennae Honorio VIII et Theodosio III AA. conss.

[9] Idem AA. Caeciliano pp. pr. Iubemus cura ac sollertia defensorum minime possessores maioribus mensuris et ponderibus a susceptoribus praegravari, sed eos deprehensos ad iudicium dirigi cum ipso commissae fraudis indicio. 1. Illud etiam fieri permittimus, ut, si provincialibus nostris contestari iniurias seu laesiones suas cupientibus actorum confectio a defensoribus denegetur, licentia eis tribuatur querellae propriae libellum conscriptum eo tenore, quo fuerat contestandum, in frequentioribus civitatum locis proponendi conveniendique scribas, tabularios et cetera officia publica commonenda, per quae libellum colligi oportebit atque invitis supra memoratis personis sub actorum confectione ingerendi, quorum quaestione fides possit inquiri: qua probata in eos, quos gestorum petitam confectionem negasse constiterit, vigor iudiciarius exseratur.

D. XII k. Febr. Ravennae Honorio VIII et Theodosio III AA. conss.

[10] Impp. Theodosius et Valentinianus AA. Cyro pp. Nulli defensorum licere decernimus, si de publica sollicitudine voluerit se liberare, nisi divinos adfatus intimaverit tuae sublimitatis iudicio, triginta librarum auri poenam tam moderatoribus provinciarum quam ceteris iudicibus vel temeratoribus sacri nostri oraculi subituris, si neglecta fuerit auctoritas principalis.

D. XV k. Sept. Constantinopoli Cyro vc. cons.

[11] Imp. Anastasius A. Eustathio pp. Iubemus eos tantummodo ad defensorum curam peragendam ordinari, qui sacrosanctis orthodoxae religionis imbuti mysteriis hoc imprimis sub gestorum testificatione, praesente quoque religiosissimo fidei orthodoxae antistite, per depositiones cum sacramenti religione celebrandas patefecerint. ita enim illustres Masters of Cavalry and Infantry, as well as the Masters of Offices and the Counts of the Imperial Finances and the Privy Purse.

Given January 21, at Ravenna, in the consulship of Honorius, for the eighth time, and Theodosius, for the third time, Augusti (409).

[9][421] The same Augusti to Caecilianus, Praetorian Prefect. pr. We order that through the attention and vigilance of the defenders, landholders shall not be aggrieved by the tax-assessors with excessive measures and weights, but, when caught, the latter shall be sent to the court with the evidence of the fraud perpetrated. 1. We also permit this to be done: if Our provincials wish to attest their injuries and wrongs but are denied public record thereof by the defenders, they shall receive the liberty to post their complaint in writing, to the same effect as their deposition would have been, in the busier parts of the cities and to summon the scribes, tax officials (tabularii), and the other public officials who should be apprised of the matter, by whom their written complaint must be received and, even against the wish of the persons aforesaid, entered in the public records, the veracity of which may then be investigated. And once it has been confirmed, judicial force shall be unleashed upon those who are shown to have refused to complete the public records.

Given January 21, at Ravenna, in the consulship of Honorius, for the eighth time, and Theodosius, for the third time, Augusti (409).

[10] Emperors THEODOSIUS and VALENTINIAN Augusti to Cyrus, Praetorian Prefect. We decree that it shall be permitted to no defender, if he wishes to free himself from his public function, to do so unless he submits divine utterances (an imperial rescript) to the court of Your Sublimity. Both the provincial governors and other judges, or rather the violators of Our sacred oracle, shall suffer a fine of 30 pounds of gold, if imperial authority is neglected.

Given August 18, at Constantinople, in the consulship of the vir clarissimus Cyrus (441).

[11][422] Emperor ANASTASIUS Augustus to Eustathius, Praetorian Prefect. We order that only those persons shall be appointed to perform the duties of defenders who have been initiated in the holy mysteries of the orthodox faith and have demonstrated this specifically by declaration in the public records

[421] = C.Th. 11.8.3; combine with C. 1.4.9, 1.55.7, 1.55.8, 4.20.11, C.Th. 9.2.5–6, 9.3.7, 9.31.1, 9.36.2, 9.37.4.

[422] This constitution, which is lacking in the manuscripts, has been restored from the duplicate C. 1.4.19.

eos praecipimus ordinari, ut reverentissimorum episcoporum nec non clericorum et honoratorum ac possessorum et curialium decreto constituantur.

D. XIII k. Mai. Sabiniano et Theodoro conss.

LVI De Magistratibus Municipalibus

[1] Imp. Constantinus A. ad Florentium pp. Decuriones ad magistratum vel exactionem annonarum ante tres menses vel amplius nominari debent, ut, si querimonia eorum iusta videatur, sine impedimento in absolvendi locum alius subrogetur.

D. id. April. Constantinopoli Severo et Rufino conss.

[2] Impp. Valentinianus et Valens AA. ad Germanianum. Magistratus conficiendorum actorum habeant potestatem.

D. XIII k. Ian. Gratiano np. et Dagalaifo conss.

LVII De Officio Iuridici Alexandriae

[1] Impp. Leo et Anthemius AA. Alexandro duci et praefecto Augustali. Iubemus apud Alexandrinae dumtaxat clarissimae civitatis iuridicum licitum et concessum esse singulis quibusque volentibus donationis conscriptae sollemniter instrumenta reserare, eisdemque robur adiciet gestorum series apud eundem virum confecta, tamquam si apud virum clarissimum moderatorem provinciae vel magistratus vel defensorem plebis habita fuisse diceretur.

D. k. Sept. Constantinopoli Zenone et Marciano conss.

and depositions to be made solemnly under oath, in the presence of a most pious bishop of the orthodox faith. We order that defenders be appointed in such a way that they are installed by the resolution of the most reverend bishop and clergymen, men of rank, landholders, and curials.

Given April 19, in the consulship of Sabinianus and Theodorus (505).

Fifty-Sixth Title Municipal Magistrates

[1][423] Emperor CONSTANTINE Augustus to Florentius, Praetorian Prefect. Decurions should be nominated to a magistracy or for the collection of payments in kind (annonae) three months or more in advance, so that if their excuse appears just, another may be substituted without difficulty in the place of the person released.

Given April 13, at Constantinople,[424] in the consulship of Severus and Rufinus (323).

[2] Emperors VALENTINIAN and VALENS Augusti to Germanianus. Magistrates shall have the power to make public records (acta).

Given December 20, in the consulship of Gratian, Most Noble Boy, and Dagalaif (366).

Fifty-Seventh Title The Office of the Justice (Juridicus) of Alexandria[425]

[1][426] Emperors LEO and ANTHEMIUS Augusti to Alexander, Duke and Augustal Prefect. We order that every single person who wishes shall be allowed and permitted to register the documents for a gift in writing formally before the Justice of the Most Renowned City of Alexandria only; and the records made before the aforementioned magistrate shall confer the same validity on the documents as if they had been made before the vir clarissimus provincial governor, or the (municipal) magistrates, or the defender of the people.

Given September 1, at Constantinople, in the consulship of Zeno and Marcian (469).

[423] = C.Th. 12.1.8; combine with C.Th. 11.30.12.

[424] Constantinople did not yet exist at this date; it is possible that the compilers of the Theodosian Code substituted it for Byzantium (in which case this constitution could potentially have been issued by Licinius), or (perhaps more likely) that Constantine's name became corrupted in the subscription.

[425] See D. 1.20.

[426] Perhaps to be combined with C. 8.52.3 (but dated September 7).

Liber Secundus

I De Edendo

[1] Imp. Pius Antoninus A. Manilio. Ipse dispice, quemadmodum pecuniam, quam deposuisse te dicis, deberi tibi probes. nam quod desideras, ut rationes suas adversaria tua exhibeat, id ex causa ad iudicis officium pertinere solet.
PP. IIII k. Oct. Sabiniano II et Severo conss.

[2] Impp. Severus et Antoninus AA. Fausto. Is, apud quem res agitur, acta publica tam criminalia quam civilia exhiberi inspicienda ad investigandam veritatis fidem iubebit.
PP. non. Iul. Severo A. et Albino conss.

[3] Idem AA. Valenti. Edita actio speciem futurae litis demonstrat, quam emendari vel mutari licet, prout edicti perpetui monet auctoritas vel ius reddentis decernit aequitas.
D. III k. Sept. Severo III et Antonino AA. conss.

[4] Imp. Antoninus A. Epaphrodito. Qui accusare volunt, probationes habere debent, cum neque iuris neque aequitatis ratio permittat, ut alienorum instrumentorum inspiciendorum potestas fieri debeat. actore enim non probante qui convenitur, etsi nihil ipse praestarit, obtineat.

Second Book

edited by Bruce W. Frier

First Title Notice (of an Impending Action)[1]

[1] Emperor ANTONINUS PIUS Augustus to Manilius. It is your responsibility to find proof that money, which you say you deposited (with the defendant), is (now) owed to you. But as for what you request, namely that your adversary produce (exhibere) her accounts for you, this matter is normally part of the judge's function, (but only) for cause.[2]

Posted September 28, in the consulship of Sabinianus, for the second time, and Severus (155).

[2] Emperors SEVERUS and ANTONINUS Augusti to Faustus. The person before whom a lawsuit is tried will order production of public records, criminal as well as civil, in order to discover the likely truth.

Posted July 7, in the consulship of Severus Augustus and Albinus (194).

[3][3] The same Augusti to Valens. A notice of action (to the defendant; editio actionis), setting out the form of a future lawsuit, may be amended or changed, accordingly as the authority of the Perpetual Edict directs or the judge's sense of fairness decrees.

Given August 30, in the consulship of Severus, for the third time, and Antoninus, Augusti (202).

[4] Emperor ANTONINUS Augustus to Epaphroditus. Those wishing to bring suit (accusare) should have proof (of their case), since neither the logic of law (ratio iuris) nor that of fairness permits that they be granted power to inspect the documents of others. For if the plaintiff fails to prove his case, the defendant, though he shows nothing, will prevail.

[1] The constitutions in this title discuss notice of an impending action to the defendant (editio actionis; cf. D. 2.13), but also production of evidence in court before and during the trial. The Second Book's titles on civil procedure largely follow the Urban Praetor's Edict, but the procedure described in the constitutions is usually (and, after 342, exclusively; cf. C. 2.57.1) extraordinary cognition.

[2] That is, the plaintiff must initially offer prima facie proof of the claim; no process of pre-trial discovery allows using an opponent's records for this purpose. But a judge can order production of a defendant's records if doubt persists.

[3] Combine with C. 3.9.1.

PP. v id. Mart. duobus Aspris conss.

[5] Imp. Alexander A. Valentinianae. Non est novum eum a quo petitur pecunia implorare rationes creditoris, ut fides constare possit.

PP. VII id. Mart. Maximo II et Aeliano conss.

[6] Idem A. Uranio. Iustum est desiderium eius a quo petitur, licet nomine publico, ut rationibus publicis exhibitis constet, quantum sub nomine suo solutum sit.

PP. XVI k. Dec. Maximo II et Aeliano conss.

[7] Idem A. Valenti. Procurator privatae rationis instrumentorum, quae communia tibi esse dicis cum fisco, describendorum facultatem secundum morem fieri iubebit: et si quando res exegerit ad fidem petitionis tuae apud alium iudicem praebendam aliquid eorum proferri, desiderante eo qui convenitur, ut id fiat, praecipiet.

PP. x k. Mart. Fusco et Dextro conss.

[8] Idem A. Floro. Et quae a divo Antonino patre et quae a me rescripta sunt, cum iuris et aequitatis rationibus congruunt. nec enim diversa sunt vel discrepantia, quod multum intersit, ex parte eius, qui aliquid petit quique doli exceptione submoveri ab intentione petitionis suae potest, rationes promi reus desideret, quibus se posse instruere contendit (quod utique ipsa rei aequitas suadet), an vero ab eo a quo aliquid petitur actor desideret rationes exhiberi, quando hoc casu non oportet originem petitionis ex instrumentis eius qui convenitur fundari.

PP. k. Oct. Fusco et Dextro conss.

Posted March 11, in the consulship of the two Aspri (212).

[5] Emperor ALEXANDER Augustus to Valentiniana. When money is claimed from someone, it is not unusual that he may demand (to inspect) the accounts of his creditor, so that the truth can prevail.

Posted March 9, in the consulship of Maximus, for the second time, and Aelianus (223).

[6] The same Augustus to Uranius. A person who is sued, even on a public debt, properly requests that it be shown, through production of public account books, how much was paid on his account.[4]

Posted November 16, in the consulship of Maximus, for the second time, and Aelianus (223).

[7] The same Augustus to Valens. The Procurator of the Privy Purse (res privata) will order, in accord with custom, that opportunity be given (to you) to copy the documents that you say are common to you and the imperial Treasury (i.e., that relate to joint business); and if it should be required at any time that some portion of these documents be produced in order to show the validity of your claim before another judge, he will, upon demand from the defendant, direct this to be done.[5]

Posted February 20, in the consulship of Fuscus and Dexter (225).

[8] The same Augustus to Florus. What was said both in the rescripts of the deified Antoninus, my ancestor, and in my own rescript[6] accords with the precepts of law and of fairness. Nor are these (rescripts) at variance or inconsistent, for it makes a great deal of difference whether it is the defendant who is seeking production of accounts, by means of which he contends he can prepare his defense, from a person who sues for something or who in the premise of his claim can be defeated through the defense of fraud (exceptio doli), where the very fairness of the situation in any event favors (granting the request); or whether (on the other hand) it is the plaintiff who wants accounts produced by the person from whom something is demanded, since in this case the starting point of a claim ought not to be based on the documents of the person sued.

Posted October 1, in the consulship of Fuscus and Dexter (225).

[4] See C. 4.21.4.
[5] See Nov. 119 c. 3.
[6] See rescripts 1 and 5 above.

II De in Ius Vocando

[1] Imp. Alexander A. Tryphoni. Sicut bonis moribus convenit reverentiam manumissoris uxori praeberi, ita re exigente in ius eam sine permissu praetoris vocari prohibitum est.

PP. IIII k. April. Agricola et Clemente conss.

[2] Imp. Gordianus A. Nocturno. Venia edicti non petita patronum seu patronam eorumque parentes et liberos, heredes insuper, etsi extranei sint, a libertis seu liberis eorum non debere in ius vocari ius certissimum est: nec in ea re rusticitati venia praebeatur, cum naturali ratione honor eiusmodi personis debeatur. cum igitur confitearis patroni tui filium sine permissu praesidis in ius vocasse, poenam edicto perpetuo praestitutam rescripto tibi concedi temere desideras.

PP. VIII id. Nov. Gordiano A. et Aviola conss.

[3] Impp. Diocletianus et Maximianus AA. Roxanae. Qui in potestate patris agunt, adversus eos experiri non possunt. si igitur emancipata es, venia edicti petita hoc facere non prohiberis. quod et in matris persona observandum est.

PP. VIII id. Nov. Diocletiano III et Maximiano AA. conss.

[4] pr. Ὁ ἅπαξ αἰτιασάμενός τινα ἐν τῇ βασιλίδι πόλει ἢ ἐν ἐπαρχίαις μετὰ ὑπόμνησιν προσενεχθεῖσαν αὐτῷ μηκέτι τὸν αὐτὸν ὑπεύθυνον μηδὲ ἐγγράφως μηδὲ ἀγράφως αἰτιάσθω, τουτέστι μὴ ποιείτω κατ᾽ αὐτοῦ προσελεύσεις ἀγράφως, ἀλλὰ τῷ πρώτῳ δικαστῇ παραμενέτω. 1. Ὁ δὲ τὴν ὑπόμνησιν δεξάμενος εἰ καὶ εἰς ἑτέραν μετασταίη τάξιν, στρατευσάμενος τυχὸν ἢ κληρικὸς γενόμενος, ἀποκρινέσθω πάντως ἐν τῷ πρώτῳ δικαστηρίῳ τῷ κατὰ τὴν προτέραν αὐτοῦ τάξιν νομισθέντι προσφόρῳ, μηδεμίαν ἔχων φόρου παραγραφήν. 2. Ὁ δὲ ἅπαξ αἰτιασάμενος, ἐὰν μετὰ τὸ προσενεχθῆναι τὴν ὑπόμνησιν τῷ αἰτιαθέντι εἰς ἕτερον αὐτὸν καλέσῃ

Second Title Summoning to Court[7]

[1] Emperor ALEXANDER Augustus to Tryphon. It accords with good morals that deference is due (from a freedman) to the wife of his manumitter; so it is also forbidden that she be summoned (by the freedman) into court (vocatio in ius) unless the Praetor permits this when circumstances warrant.

Posted March 29, in the consulship of Agricola and Clemens (230).

[2] Emperor GORDIAN Augustus to Nocturnus. It is absolutely settled law that, if permission is not asked for under the Edict, a male or female patron or their parents and children, and also their heirs even if not family members, may not be summoned into court by freedmen or freedmen's children. Nor is boorish ignorance (rusticitas) in this matter to be excused, inasmuch as natural reason (naturalis ratio) requires respect for such persons. Since, therefore, you admit that without the governor's permission you summoned the son of your patron into court, you are rash to seek through a rescript remission of the punishment fixed by the Perpetual Edict.[8]

Posted November 6, in the consulship of Gordianus Augustus and Aviola (239).

[3] Emperors DIOCLETIAN and MAXIMIAN Augusti to Roxana. Children under a father's power cannot sue them (their fathers). It follows that if you are emancipated and have asked permission under the Edict, you are not forbidden to do so. This (rule) must also be observed with respect to a mother.

Posted November 6, in the consulship of Diocletian, for the third time, and Maximian, Augusti (287).

[4][9] pr. Anyone who, in this Imperial City or in the provinces, has once brought suit against another, shall not, after the complaint (libellus) has been delivered to him (the defendant), sue the same defendant again, either in writing or without writing; that is, he shall not orally bring a claim against him (before another judge), but shall remain before the prior judge. 1. If a defendant has received a complaint, then although he (thereafter) assumes a different (civil) status by having, for instance, assumed an office (militia) or entered the clergy, he shall, nevertheless, still answer before the prior court (i.e., the one before which he was summoned), which evidently had jurisdiction over him respecting his former status, and he shall not raise any objection to the jurisdiction of this court (over him). 2. If, however, a person has once brought

[7] In ius vocatio. See D. 2.4.

[8] Fifty gold pieces (Justinianic currency). See D. 2.4.23–25; Just. Inst. 4.16.3.

[9] This constitution, of uncertain date and authorship, is inserted here by the Basilika (7.8.29). See also C. 3.1.12.

δικαστήριον ἐπὶ ταῖς αὐταῖς αἰτίαις, καὶ τὸ ἀζήμιον ποιείτω τῷ αἰτιαθέντι καὶ τῆς δίκης ἐκπιπτέτω, εἰ καὶ δικαίαν εἶχεν ἀγωγήν.

III De Pactis

[1] Imp. Severus A. Philino. Condicionis incertum inter fratres non iniquis rationibus conventione finitum est. cum igitur verbis fideicommissi petitum a patre tuo profitearis, ut, si vita sine liberis decederet, hereditatem Licinio Frontoni restitueret, pactum eo tempore de sextante Frontoni dando, cum liberos Philinus non sustulerat, interpositum non idcirco potest iniquum videri, quod facta, sicut placuit, divisione diem suum, te filio eius superstite, functus est.
PP. VII k. Dec. Severo A. II et Victorino conss.

[2] Impp. Severus et Antoninus AA. Claudio. Post venditionem hereditatis a te factam, si creditores contra emptores actiones suas movisse probare potueris eosque eas spontanea suscepisse voluntate, exceptione taciti pacti non inutiliter defenderis.
PP. prid. id. Febr. Severo III et Antonino AA. conss.

[3] Idem AA. Restituto. Servus creditoris meliorem causam domini facere potest: in deterius autem reformare novo pacto non potest obligationem recte constitutam.
PP. VIII k. April. Severo III et Antonino AA. conss.

suit, and, after the defendant has received the complaint, he summons him into another court on the same matter, he shall indemnify the defendant, and his case, even if just, shall fail.

Third Title Informal Pacts[10]

[1] Emperor SEVERUS Augustus to Philinus. For not inequitable reasons, the uncertainties stemming from a (testamentary) condition have been settled through an agreement (conventio) between brothers.[11] You acknowledge that your father was requested, by the wording of a trust (fideicommissum; in a third party's will), that, if he should die childless, he restore the inheritance to Licinius Fronto (his brother). The pact (pactum), concluded at a time when (your father) Philinus had no children and to the effect that Licinius Fronto should receive a sixth (of the inheritance), cannot be considered unjust simply because, after the division was made as agreed, your father died leaving you as his survivor.

Posted November 25, in the consulship of Severus Augustus, for the second time,[12] and Victorinus (200).

[2] Emperors SEVERUS and ANTONINUS Augusti to Claudius. If you are able to prove that, after you sold an inheritance (that you had received), the creditors (of the estate) brought their actions against the purchasers who then voluntarily undertook them (i.e., defended these actions), you will effectually be protected (in actions then brought against you for the same debt) through the defense of an implied pact.[13]

Posted February 12, in the consulship of Severus, for the third time, and Antoninus, Augusti (202).

[3] The same Augusti to Restitutus. The slave of a creditor can better the cause of his master, but he cannot, through a new (unauthorized) pact, alter for the worse a well-founded obligation (owed to his master).

Posted March 25, in the consulship of Severus, for the third time, and Antoninus, Augusti (202).

[10] Pacta. See D. 2.14.

[11] As it appears, the petitioner's father Philinus and his uncle Licinius Fronto agreed that Fronto would receive, as a sort of advance payment, 1/6 of an estate they jointly inherited, since at that time Philinus was thought likely to die childless. The petitioner, also named Philinus, is unhappy because, as a result of the execution of this pact, he has received only 5/6 of the inheritance.

[12] Actually, this Consul was not the Emperor Severus, but the Senator Ti. Claudius Severus Proculus.

[13] See C. 4.39.2; D. 46.3.23.

[4] Idem AA. Valeriae. Postquam liti de praedio motae renuntiasti, causam finitam instaurari posse nulla ratio permittit.

PP. IIII id. Febr. Albino et Aemiliano conss.

[5] Imp. Antoninus A. Demagorae. Creditori tuo si partem pecuniae exsolvisti, de parte vero non petenda inter te et eum convenit ob causas negotiaque eius, tuo patrocinio fideque defensa, ea obligatione partim iure civili partim honorario liberatus es. nam exceptio perpetua pacti conventi vel doli residui petitionem repellit, cum et solutum per ignorantiam repeti potuisset.

PP. VIII k. Aug. Romae Antonino A. IIII et Balbino conss.

[6] Idem A. Iuliae Basiliae. Pacta, quae contra leges constitutionesque vel contra bonos mores fiunt, nullam vim habere indubitati iuris est.

PP. V k. Aug. Antonino A. IIII et Balbino conss.

[7] Idem A. Iulio Maximo. Debitori tuo si heres extitisti, actio, quam contra eum habuisti, adita hereditate confusa est. sed si eam hereditatem, posteaquam in iudicio obtinuisti, ei tradidisti, quem sententia superaveras, ea condicione pactoque, ut tam ceteris creditoribus quam tibi in eo, quod tibi deberetur, si eam hereditatem non adisses, satisfaceret, pacti conventionisque fides servanda est. quae si non servatur, ex stipulatu, si modo pacto subiecta est, actio dabitur.

PP. III k. Aug. Antonino A. IIII et Balbino conss.

[8] Imp. Alexander A. Aurelio Dionysio. Cum, posteaquam adversarius matris tuae victus esset, matrem tuam circumvenerit, ut ei caveret nullam se controversiam de servis moturam, id pactum mala fide factum irritum est, et cum ex ea conventione cum matre tua agi coeperit, iudex eam liberabit.

[4] The same Augusti to Valeria. After you (as part of a pact) renounced a suit (that you had) commenced concerning real estate, no logic permits a case once closed to be revived.

Posted February 10, in the consulship of Albinus and Aemilianus (206).

[5] Emperor ANTONINUS Augustus to Demagoras. If you have paid your creditor part of the money, but it was agreed between you and him that a part should not be claimed because you had defended his lawsuits and legal business by representing and supporting him, you are released from this obligation in part by the civil law and in part by the Praetorian. For the permanent defense that a pact had been made, or of deceit (dolus), defeats the claim for the remainder, since, even if paid by mistake, it could have been recovered.

Posted at Rome, July 25, in the consulship of Antoninus Augustus, for the fourth time, and Balbinus (213).

[6][14] The same Augustus to Julia Basilia. It is undoubted law that pacts made contrary to the statutes and constitutions, or contrary to good morals, have no force.

Posted July 28, in the consulship of Antoninus Augustus, for the fourth time, and Balbinus (213).

[7][15] The same Augustus to Julius Maximus. If you became heir to your debtor, the right of action that you had against him was merged (into the estate) after you entered on the inheritance. But if you obtained this inheritance in a trial, and you then transferred it to the person whom by the (court's) decision you had defeated, upon condition and under a pact that he should pay other creditors (of the estate) as well as yourself to the extent of the amount which would have been due to you had you not entered on the inheritance, the force (fides) of the pact and agreement must be observed. If it is not observed, an action will lie on the stipulation (for damages), provided it was added to the pact.

Posted July 30, in the consulship of Antoninus Augustus, for the fourth time, and Balbinus (213).

[8][16] Emperor ALEXANDER Augustus to Aurelius Dionysius. Since, after your mother's adversary was defeated (in a trial), he (allegedly) tricked her into providing by stipulation (cavere) that she would raise no question about the slaves (involved in the litigation), this pact, entered into in bad faith, is void; and when an action on that agreement is commenced against your mother, the judge will release her.

[14] = Consultatio 1.7, which inserts "by unwilling persons" after "made" and omits "or contrary to good morals."

[15] = C. Greg. 1.1.1.

[16] = Consultatio. 9.11 and 1.8, which omit "by stipulation" and add at the end: "because no one can make a pact concerning an adjudicated matter." Combine with C. 7.4.5. See also C. 2.4.32.

PP. prid. id. Sept. Alexandro A. cons.

[9] Idem A. Mucatrauli. Si pascenda pecora partiaria (id est ut fetus eorum portionibus, quibus placuit, inter dominum et pastorem dividantur) Apollinarem suscepisse probabitur, fidem pacto praestare per iudicem compelletur.

PP. IIII k. Oct. Alexandro A. cons.

[10] Idem A. Nicae. Legem, quam dixisti, cum dotem pro alumna dares, servari oportet. nec obesse tibi potuit, quod dici solet ex pacto actionem non nasci: tunc enim hoc iure utimur, cum pactum nudum est: alioquin cum pecunia datur et aliquid de reddenda ea convenit, utilis est condictio.

PP. III k. Mart. Albino et Maximo conss.

[11] Idem A. Capitoni. Ex conventione quidem, qua pactam novercam tuam cum patre tuo dicis, cum fundum in dotem daret, ut et tributa ipsa agnosceret et creditoribus, quibus fuerant praedia obligata, usuras solveret, actio tibi adversus eam competere non potest, et si pactum in stipulationem deductum probetur. sed si fundus aestimatus ita, ut pars instrumenti significat, in dotem datus est, ex vendito actio, ut placitis stetur, competit.

PP. non. Dec. ipso A. III et Dione II conss.

[12] Idem A. Flaccillae. Pacta novissima servari oportere tam iuris quam ipsius rei aequitas postulat. quapropter si conventione quae praecessit diversa pars usuram se non esse consensit, et maxime si, ut proponis, id etiam apud acta praesidis adseveravit, actionem, quae super prima conventione fuerat, exercere non prohiberis.

PP. III k. Mart. Agricola et Clemente conss.

Posted September 12, in the consulship of Alexander Augustus (222).

[9] The same Augustus to Mucatraules. If it will be proven that Apollinaris undertook to pasture herd animals for sharing – that is, that their offspring be divided between the owner and the herder in agreed-upon fractions – he will be compelled by the judge to observe the pact faithfully.[17]

Posted September 28, in the consulship of Alexander Augustus (222).

[10][18] The same Augustus to Nica. The terms that you provided in giving a dowry for your foster daughter must be observed. Nor can the objection be raised against you that, as is customarily said, no action arises from a pact; for we apply this rule (only) when there is a naked pact (pactum nudum). But when money is given with some agreement on its return, there is available a claim for restitution (utilis condictio).

Posted February 27, in the consulship of Albinus and Maximus (227).

[11][19] The same Augustus to Capito. You say that when your stepmother gave a farm as her dowry, it was agreed between her and your father that she would herself pay the taxes and the interest due to the creditors to whom the properties were obligated (as security for debt). You cannot have an action against her even if you prove the pact was reduced to a stipulation. But if the farm that was given as dowry was appraised in the manner indicated by a portion of the document, an action on sale lies to force compliance with the agreement.

Posted December 5, in the consulship of the Emperor, for the third time, and Dio, for the second time (229).

[12][20] The same Augustus to Flaccilla. Fairness – as much that of the law as of the matter at hand – requires that the last pacts to be made must be observed. Hence if the other side (in a lawsuit) agreed not to make use of a former agreement, and especially if, as you allege, he also so stated in the (provincial) governor's records (apud acta; i.e., in court), you are not prevented from bringing the action that lay on the first agreement.

Posted February 27, in the consulship of Agricola and Clemens (230).

[17] Compare D. 17.2.52.2–3.

[18] = C. 5.14.1 (but from Septimius Severus and Caracalla, 206). At this date the pact itself still could not be directly enforced, without a supporting stipulation.

[19] = C. 4.47.1 (but with the final ruling reversed), from which the reference to the land tax (tributa) was restored here by Krüger; see also C. 4.47.2.

[20] Combine with C. 3.42.4. The "first agreement" created a debt owed to Flacilla; by the second, she waived her right to sue on this debt; by the third, her debtor agreed in court not to raise the waiver. Contrast D. 2.14.17.1–2, 27.2; C. 4.45.2.

[13] Imp. Maximinus A. Marino. In bonae fidei contractibus ita demum ex pacto actio competit, si ex continenti fiat: nam quod postea placuit, id non petitionem, sed exceptionem parit.
PP. v id. Ian. Maximino A. et Africano conss.

[14] Imp. Gordianus A. Caecilio militi. Si pacto, quo poenam adversarium tuum promisisse proponis, si placito non stetisset, stipulatio subiecta est, ex stipulatu agens vel id, quod in conventionem devenerat, ut fiat, consequeris vel poenam stipulatione comprehensam more iudiciorum exiges. nam bona adversarii tui in te transferri citra sollemnem ordinem frustra deprecaris.
PP. k. April. Gordiano A. II et Pompeiano conss.

[15] Impp. Valerianus et Gallienus AA. et Valerianus nobilissimus C. Pactumeio. Pactum, quod dotali instrumento comprehensum est, ut, si pater vita fungeretur, ex aequa portione ea quae nubebat cum fratre heres patri suo esset, neque ullam obligationem contrahere nec libertatem testamenti faciendi mulieris patri potuit auferre.
PP. x k. Mart. Aemiliano et Basso conss.

[16] Impp. Diocletianus et Maximianus AA. Diaphanto. Cum proponas filios testamento scriptos heredes rogatos esse, ut qui primus rebus humanis eximeretur, alteri portionem hereditatis restitueret, quoniam precariam substitutionem fratrum consensu remissam adseris, fideicommissi persecutio cessat.
PP. IIII id. Febr. Maximo II et Aquilino conss.

[17] Idem AA. Deximacho. Pactum, quod bona fide interpositum docebitur, et si scriptura non existente aliis probationibus rei gestae veritas comprobari potest, praeses provinciae secundum ius custodiri efficiet.
PP. VIIII k. Iul. Maximo II et Aquilino conss.

[13] Emperor MAXIMINUS Augustus to Marinus. In the case of contracts based on good faith (bona fides), an action arises on a pact (made in connection with it) only if it occurs at the time of the transaction (ex continenti). For what is agreed on thereafter gives rise not to a claim but (only) to a defense.

Posted January 9, in the consulship of Maximinus Augustus and Africanus (236).

[14] Emperor GORDIAN Augustus to Caecilius, a soldier. If a pact was backed up by a stipulation in which, as you allege, your opponent promised a penalty if he did not abide by the agreement, in a lawsuit on this stipulation either you will obtain that which was included in the agreement or, in accord with judicial usage, you will collect the penalty incorporated in the stipulation. For you will have sought in vain that your opponent's property be transferred to you, (a demand that is) contrary to established procedure.[21]

Posted April 1, in the consulship of Gordian Augustus, for the second time, and Pompeianus (241).

[15] Emperors VALERIAN and GALLIENUS Augusti, and VALERIAN, the Most Noble Caesar, to Pactumeius. In a dowry document there was a pact to the effect that when her father died, the woman who was marrying (i.e., his daughter) should share her father's estate equally with her brother. This (pact) could neither create an obligation nor deprive the woman's father of his freedom to make his will (as he wished).

Posted February 20, in the consulship of Aemilianus and Bassus (259).

[16] Emperors DIOCLETIAN and MAXIMIAN Augusti to Diaphantus. You state that (two) sons, named heirs in a will, were asked (by the testator) that the one who first departed from human life (i.e., died) leave his share of the inheritance to the other. Since you further assert that the requested substitution (precatoria substitutio) was (later) remitted by agreement of the brothers, an action on the trust (fideicommissum) fails.

Posted February 10, in the consulship of Maximus, for the second time, and Aquilinus (286).

[17] The same Augusti to Deximachus. In accordance with law, the provincial governor will cause to be granted legal protection a pact that is shown to have been entered into in good faith, provided that, despite there being no written document, the truth of the transaction can be proven by other evidence.

Posted June 23, in the consulship of Maximus, for the second time, and Aquilinus (286).

[21] See C. 8.13.3. The soldier apparently wanted to seize the penalty without going to court first.

[18] Idem AA. Iulio et Aemilio. Si creditores vestros ex parte debiti admisisse quemquam vestrum pro sua persona persolventem probaveritis, aditus rector provinciae pro sua gravitate, ne alter pro altero exigatur, providebit.
PP. VII id. Ian. Diocletiano III et Maximiano AA. conss.

[19] Idem AA. Victoriano militi. Licet inter privatos huiusmodi scriptum, quo comprehenditur, ut is qui supervixerit alterius rebus potiatur, nec donationis quidem mortis causa gestae efficaciter speciem ostendat, tamen cum voluntas militum, quae super ultimo vitae spiritu deque familiaris rei decreto quoquo modo contemplatione mortis in scripturam deducitur, vim postremi iudicii obtineat proponasque te ac fratrem tuum ad discrimen proelii pergentes ob communem mortis fortunam invicem pactos esse, ut ad eum, qui superstes fuisset, res eius, cui casus finem vitae attulisset, pertinerent, existente condicione intellegitur ex fratris tui iudicio, quod principalium constitutionum prompto favore firmatur, etiam rerum eius compendium ad te delatum esse.
PP. XIII k. Dec. Sirmi ipsis IIII et III AA. conss.

[20] Idem AA. et CC. Martiali. Traditionibus et usucapionibus dominia rerum, non nudis pactis transferuntur.
PP. k. Ian. AA. conss.

[21] Idem AA. et CC. Eusebio. Cum proponas inter vos sine scriptura placuisse fratrum tuorum successiones aequis ex partibus dividi, et transactionis causa probari possit hanc intercessisse conventionem, exceptione te tueri potes, si possides: quod si adversarius tuus teneat, ex hoc placito nullam actionem esse natam, si tibi stipulatione non prospexisti, debes intellegere: nec adversario tuo transactione uti concedendum, nisi ea quae placita sunt paratus est adimplere.
PP. k. Mai. Thirallo AA. conss.

[18] The same Augusti to Julius and Aemilius. If you prove that, with respect to a portion of a debt, your creditors permitted either of you to pay it off on his own behalf,[22] the provincial governor, upon application, will, in accord with the dignity of his office, take care that neither is called upon to pay for the other.

Posted January 7, in the consulship of Diocletian, for the third time, and Maximianus, Augusti (287).

[19] The same Augusti to Victorianus, a soldier. Among private persons, a writing which provides that the survivor shall acquire the other's property does not effectively take even the form of a gift in contemplation of death (donatio mortis causa). Nonetheless, the wishes of a soldier with respect to his last breath of life and concerning the disposition (decretum) of his own property, if these are in any manner reduced to writing in contemplation of death, have the force of a final judgment (i.e., a will). You state that, as you proceeded into the hazard of battle, because of the shared risk of death you and your brother made a mutual pact with each other to the effect that should the life of one of you be ended by misfortune, his property would belong to the survivor. If that condition has (now) occurred, it is understood that, in accord with your brother's judgment as confirmed by the enthusiastic indulgence that imperial constitutions show (on this issue), you receive the benefit of his property.[23]

Posted November 19, at Sirmium, in the consulship of these Augusti, Consul for the fourth and third times, respectively (290).

[20][24] The same Augusti and the Caesars to Martial. The ownership of property is transferred by physical delivery (traditio) and by usucapion (prescription), but not by naked pacts (nuda pacta).

Posted January 1, in the consulship of the Augusti (293).

[21][25] The same Augusti and Caesars to Eusebius. You state that it was agreed among you, without a writing, to divide equally among you the inheritances received by your brothers, and it can be shown that this agreement was made as a settlement (transactio). You can, if you are in possession, protect yourself by this defense (of a pact). But if your adversary (now) holds (the property), you should know that no cause of action arose from this agreement if you did not protect yourself through a stipulation; (however,) your adversary is not allowed to take advantage of the settlement unless he is ready to fulfill the terms of the agreement.

Posted May 1, at Thirallum (Tzouroulon), in the consulship of the Augusti (293).

[22] That is, the creditors agreed to accept proportional payment although the debtors were originally liable jointly and severally.

[23] Although the general sense is clear, the wording of this rescript is very difficult; indeed, the Latin is a single sentence.

[24] Combine with C. 1.18.5, which dates the rescript to the previous day. Mancipation is omitted.

[25] Combine with C. 6.30.7 and 6.53.6.

[22] Idem AA. et CC. Archelao. Pactum curatoris recipere minorem quantitatem paciscentis adultae aetatis suffragium, ne noceat, efficiet. tutores enim et curatores exigentes pupillis et adultis debitum, non etiam remittentes praestant obligationis liberationem.

PP. XVIII k. Dec. Sirmi AA. conss.

[23] Idem AA. et CC. Honorato. Filius paciscendo vel debitum accipiendo nihil detrahit patris obligationi.

PP. XVII k. Dec. Sirmi AA. conss.

[24] Idem AA. et CC. Domnae. Si actionem legati vel fideicommissi, quam adversus heredes mariti quondam tui habuisti, te adfectione heredum aliis remisisse probetur, exceptionem pacti contra debitores instituenti actiones nocere tibi minime posse intellegis.

PP. XVII k. Ian. Sirmi AA. conss.

[25] Idem AA. et CC. Euhemero. Debitorum pactionibus creditorum petitio nec tolli nec mutari potest.

S. IIII k. Mai. Sirmi CC. conss.

[26] Idem AA. et CC. Corneliae. Pactum successorum debitoris ex lege duodecim tabularum aes alienum hereditarium pro portionibus quaesitis singulis ipso iure divisum in solidum unum obligare creditori non potest: quod et in honorario succedentibus iure locum habebit. de chirographis itaque communibus exhibendis cum coherede vel non perfectis in divisione placitis convenire quanti tua interest potes.

[22] The same Augusti and Caesars to Archelaus. The (legal) support given to those of adult age (who are under the charge of a curator) will result in (their incurring) no harm from the pact of a curator who agrees to accept a lesser amount (than was owed by his ward's debtor). For tutores and curatores provide release from an obligation when they collect what is owed to their minor and adult wards, but not when they grant remissions.

Posted November 14, at Sirmium, in the consulship of the Augusti (293).

[23] The same Augusti and Caesars to Honoratus. A son (in his father's power), by making a pact or by accepting payment for a debt, does not thereby (automatically) diminish an obligation due to his father.

Posted November 15, at Sirmium, in the consulship of the Augusti (293).

[24] The same Augusti and Caesars to Domna. If it is proven that, out of kindliness to the heirs, you released to some a right of action that accrued to you from a legacy or a trust against the heirs of your former husband, you do realize that a defense based on a pact (exceptio pacti) can hardly prejudice you in bringing actions against (the other) debtors (under the will).[26]

Posted December 16, at Sirmium, in the consulship of the Augusti (293).

[25] The same Augusti and Caesars to Euhemerus. The claim of creditors can neither be abolished nor modified by pacts among the debtors.

Written April 28, at Sirmium, in the consulship of the Caesars (294).

[26] The same Augusti and Caesars to Cornelia. A pact among the successors to a (deceased) debtor, to the effect that, in accord with the law of the Twelve Tables, the inherited debt be divided (among the heirs) by operation of law in proportion to the amount (of the estate) received by each, cannot obligate one (particular successor) to a creditor for the full amount (in solidum). The same rule applies also to successors under Praetorian law. Hence you can sue for production of promissory notes (chirographa) owned in common with your co-heir, or, if the agreements on the division (of the estate) were not executed, for your interest in the matter (i.e., damages).[27]

[26] The situation is obscure. This translation assumes that aliis refers to some of the heirs; the remaining heirs can still be sued on the testator's bequest to his former wife. Other translations are possible.

[27] The text is unclear, probably confused. Blume explains it this way: "The heirs could not, of course, make an agreement among themselves to the prejudice of creditors. In this case the heirs divided the property, and one of them agreed that he would pay all the estate's debts, and to that end got the bills due to the estate. He failed to pay. The other heirs thereupon had the right to bring an action for the return of their portion of the due bills, or an action for damages." Cornelia's co-heir had undertaken to pay all the estate's debts, and so held the promissory notes. For XII Tab. 5.9, see also C. 3.36.6.

PP. III id. Oct. Variani CC. conss.

[27] Idem AA. et CC. Aurelio Chresimo. Petens ex stipulatione, quae placiti servandi causa secuta est, seu antecessit pactum seu post statim interpositum sit, recte secundum se ferri sententiam postulat.
S. VI id. Nov. Heracleae CC. conss.

[28] Idem AA. et CC. Leontio. Si certis annis quod nudo pacto convenerat datum fuit, ad praestandum in posterum indebitum solutum obligare non potuit eum qui pactum fecit, nisi placitis stipulatio intercessit.
S. III non. Dec. Burtudizi CC. conss.

[29] Imp. Iustinianus A. Iohanni pp. pr. Si quis in conscribendo instrumento sese confessus fuerit non usurum fori proscriptione propter cingulum militiae suae vel dignitatis vel etiam sacerdotii praerogativam, licet ante dubitabatur, sive oportet eandem scripturam tenere et eum qui hoc pactus est non debere adversus suam conventionem venire, vel licentiam ei praestari decedere quidem a scriptura, suo autem iure uti: sancimus nemini licere adversus pacta sua venire et contrahentes decipere. 1. Si enim ipso edicto praetoris pacta conventa, quae neque contra leges nec dolo malo inita sunt, omnimodo observanda sunt, quare et in hac causa pacta non valent, cum alia regula est iuris antiqui omnes licentiam habere his quae pro se introducta sunt renuntiare? 2. Omnes itaque iudices nostri hoc in litibus observent, et huiusmodi observatio et ad pedaneos iudices et ad compromissarios et arbitros electos perveniat scituros, quod, si neglexerint, etiam litem suam facere intellegantur.
D. k. Sept. Constantinopoli post consulatum Lampadii et Orestae vv. cc.

[30] Idem A. Iohanni pp. pr. De quaestione tali a Caesariensi advocatione interrogati sumus: si[1] duabus vel pluribus personis spes alienae fuerat hereditatis ex cognatione forte ad eos devolvendae, pactaque inter eos inita sunt pro adventura hereditate, quibus specialiter declarabatur, si ille mortuus fuerit et hereditas ad eos perveniat, certos modos

[1] [si]

Posted October 13, at Variana, in the consulship of the Caesars (294).

[27] The same Augusti and Caesars to Aurelius Chresimus. A plaintiff suing on a stipulation that was added for the purpose of making a pact enforceable, whether this pact was made before or immediately after (the stipulation), rightly requests that the decision (sententia) (of the judge) be given in his favor.

Written November 8, at Heraclea, in the consulship of the Caesars (294).

[28] The same Augusti and Caesars to Leontius. If what was agreed upon in a naked pact (nudum pactum) was paid (till now) in the years prescribed, the person who made the pact cannot be obligated by this (fact) to pay in the future an unowed amount, unless a stipulation was added to the agreement.

Written December 3, at Burtudizum, in the consulship of the Caesars (294).[28]

[29] Emperor JUSTINIAN Augustus to John, Praetorian Prefect. pr.[29] If anyone has declared in a written document that he will not avail himself of a privilege of venue resulting from the rank (cingulum) of his office or of his standing, or even a clerical prerogative – although it was hitherto uncertain whether such a writing was binding and (so) the one who made the pact should not act against his own agreement, or whether he was accorded the freedom to depart from the writing and exercise his right – We decree that he shall not be permitted to go back on his agreement and deceive the other contracting parties. 1. For if, according to the Praetor's Edict itself, agreed-upon pacts, when neither contrary to statutes nor entered into deceitfully (dolo malo), must always be observed, why should pacts not be valid in this matter as well, since there is another rule of venerable law that all have the freedom to waive (privileges) that were introduced on their behalf? 2. So all Our judges shall observe this (rule) in lawsuits, and similar observance shall apply both to delegated judges (iudices pedanei) and to settlement arbitrators (compromissarii) and to those chosen as arbitrators, who should be aware that, if they fail to do so, they are also deemed to make the suit their own (litem suam facere).

Given September 1, at Constantinople, in the post-consulate of the viri clarissimi Lampidius and Orestes (531).

[30] The same Augustus to John, Praetorian Prefect. pr. We have been asked by the Society of Advocates (advocatio) in Caesarea about the following question: On the basis of kinship, two or more persons hoped that a third party's estate would perhaps come to them. As to the hoped-for inheritance, they joined in [28] Mommsen dates to November 3, 294.

[29] = C. 1.3.50 pr.

in eadem hereditate observari, vel si forte ad quosdam ex his hereditatis commodum pervenerit, certas pactiones evenire. et dubitabatur, si huiusmodi pacta servari oportet. 1. Faciebat autem eis quaestionem, quia adhuc superstite eo, de cuius hereditate sperabatur, huiusmodi pactio processit et quia non sunt ita confecta, quasi omnimodo hereditate ad eos perventura, sed sub duabus condicionibus composita sunt, si ille fuerit mortuus et si ad hereditatem vocentur hi qui pactionem fecerunt.

2. Sed nobis omnes huiusmodi pactiones odiosae videntur et plenae tristissimi et periculosi eventus. quare enim quodam vivente et ignorante de rebus eius quidam paciscentes convenerunt? 3. Secundum veteres itaque regulas sancimus omnimodo huiusmodi pacta, quae contra bonos mores inita sunt, repelli et nihil ex his pactionibus observari, nisi ipse forte, de cuius hereditate pactum est, voluntatem suam eis accommodaverit et in ea usque ad extremum vitae spatium perseveraverit: tunc etenim sublata acerbissima spe licebit eis illo sciente et iubente huiusmodi pactiones servare. 4. Quod etiam anterioribus legibus et constitutionibus non est incognitum, licet a nobis clarius est introductum. iubemus etenim neque donationes talium rerum neque hypothecas penitus esse admittendas neque alium quendam contractum, cum in alienis rebus contra domini voluntatem aliquid fieri vel pacisci secta temporum meorum non patitur.

D. k. Nov. Constantinopoli post consulatum Lampadii et Orestae vv. cc.

IIII De Transactionibus

[1] Imp. Antoninus A. Celerio. Neque pactio neque transactio cum quibusdam ex curatoribus sive tutoribus facta auxilio ceteris est in his, quae separatim communiterve gesserunt vel gerere debuerunt. cum igitur tres curatores habueris et cum duobus ex his transegeris, tertium convenire non prohiberis.

D. k. Mai. Gentiano et Basso conss.

[2] Idem A. Lutatiae. Cum te proponas cum sorore tua de hereditate transegisse et idpropter certam pecuniam te ei debere cavisse, etsi nulla fuisset quaestio hereditatis, tamen propter timorem litis transactione pacts whereby it was expressly declared that if he (the relative) died and the inheritance came to them, certain provisions obtained as to such inheritance; or if the benefit of the inheritance perhaps came (only) to some of them, certain (other) agreements arose. There was doubt whether pacts of this kind are held valid. 1. This raised a question in their minds because such an agreement occurred during the life of the person whose inheritance they hoped for, and because they (the pacts) were not made as though the inheritance would come to them in any case, but were adopted under two conditions: if he would die, and if those who made the pact were summoned as heirs.

2. But We consider all such agreements odious and charged with a most unhappy and perilous outcome. For why did some men agree on pacts concerning the property of a living person without his knowledge? 3. In accord with long-standing rules, therefore, We ordain that such pacts, entered into contrary to good morals, be always rejected, and that no aspect of these agreements be executed, unless, perhaps, the person about whose inheritance the pact was made bent his mind to them (i.e., accepted them) and remained of this view to the end of his life; for then this most malicious hope is not present, and they are permitted to observe such agreements with his knowledge and consent. 4. This (rule), though not unknown in previous statutes and constitutions, is more clearly enacted by Us. We order, accordingly, that neither gifts of such things nor their use as real security (hypothecae) be allowed in any form, nor any other contract, since the ethical code of my era does not tolerate that anything be done or agreed upon concerning another person's property against the owner's will.

Given November 1, at Constantinople, in the post-consulate of the viri clarissimi Lampadius and Orestes (531).

Fourth Title Settlements[30]

[1] Emperor Antoninus Augustus to Celerius. An agreement or a settlement (transactio) made with a portion of the curatores or tutores is of no help to the others in connection with business that they managed or should have managed separately or jointly. Since, therefore, you had three curatores and settled with two of them, you are not prevented from suing the third.

Given May 1, in the consulship of Gentianus and Bassus (211).

[2] The same Augustus to Lutatia. You state that you had entered into a settlement with your sister concerning an inheritance, and that on this account you promised to owe her a certain sum of money. Although no contention would (in fact) have arisen over the inheritance, still, because the settlement was made interposita pecunia recte cauta intellegitur. ex qua causa si fisco solvisses, repetere non posses: si non solvisses, iure convenireris.

[30] Transactiones, voluntary settlements among the parties out of court. See D. 2.15.

PP. III id. Aug. Antonino A. IIII et Balbino conss.

[3] Imp. Alexander A. Tulliae. Age cum Geminiano, quod pater eius curator tibi datus negotia tua gesserit, et si apud iudicem negabit se actione teneri, quoniam transactio et Aquiliana stipulatio interposita est, iudex contemplatione iudicii quod est bonae fidei quaeret, de quanta pecunia nominatim transactum sit: et si apparuerit de minore transactum, quantam pecuniam reliquam ex administratione curae deberi probatum fuerit, solvere eum iubebit, quod non in stipulationem Aquilianam obligationis curae tantum deductum est, quanti erat quantitas pecuniae quae debebatur.

D. prid. id. Aug. Maximo II et Aeliano conss.

[4] Idem A. Numidio. Actione administratae curae ab eo, qui legitimae aetatis annos complevit, in Aquilianam stipulationem deducta et per acceptilationem extincta nullam aliam superesse nisi de dolo intra concessa tempora non ambigitur, nisi specialiter etiam de dolo transactum est.

PP. II non. Mart. Alexandro A. II et Marcello conss.

[5] Idem A. ... evocato. Cum te transegisse cum herede quondam tutoris tui profitearis, si id post legitimam aetatem fecisti, frustra desideras, ut a placitis recedatur. licet enim, ut proponis, nullum instrumentum intercesserit, tamen si de fide contractus confessione tua constet, scriptura, quae probationem rei gestae solet continere, necessaria non est.

PP. k. Mart. Albino et Aemiliano conss.

in fear of litigation, the money is understood as properly promised. If on this account you had paid this to the Treasury (fiscus), you could not recover it; if you had not paid it, you could be sued at law.

Posted August 11, in the consulship of Antoninus Augustus, for the fourth time, and Balbinus (213).

[3] Emperor ALEXANDER Augustus to Tullia. Proceed to litigate with Geminianus because his father, appointed as your curator, managed your affairs. If he denies before the judge that he is liable in an action because a settlement and an Aquilian stipulation were entered into, the judge, in view of this being a good faith trial (iudicium bonae fidei), will investigate concerning how much money the settlement was expressly for; and if it appears the settlement was for less, he will order him to pay as much of the remaining money as is shown to be owing from administration of the curatorship, since the Aquilian stipulation did not include as much of the obligation from the curatorship as the amount of money that was owed.[31]

Given August 12, in the consulship of Maximus, Consul for the second time, and Aelianus (223).

[4] The same Augustus to Numidius. When an action on the administration of a curatorship has been reduced to an Aquilian stipulation by a person (a former ward) who has reached the statutory age of full majority (legitima aetas), and it has then been extinguished through a formal release (acceptilatio), there is no doubt that no other (cause of action) remains except that for deceit (dolus) within the permitted time – unless there was a special settlement also about deceit.

Posted March 6, in the consulship of Alexander Augustus, for the second time, and Marcellus (226).

[5] The same Augustus to a veteran. Since you admit that you settled with the heir of your former tutor, assuming you did so after reaching the statutory age, you request in vain to withdraw from the agreement. For although, as you state, no document was drawn up, still, if the integrity of the contract is revealed by your own admission, a writing, which customarily contains proof of what was done, is not necessary.

Posted March 1, in the consulship of Albinus and Aemilianus (227).

[31] An Aquilian stipulation was a stipulatory novation of a debt or debts, followed by a formal release (acceptilatio) of the debt or debts so novated. The meaning of the last clause is obscure, but evidently this settlement (unlike that in the next rescript) did not include the entire of the curator's obligation.

[6] Idem A. Pomponiis. pr. Cum mota inofficiosi querella matrem vestram cum diversa parte transegisse ita, ut partem bonorum susciperet et a lite discederet, proponatis, instaurari quidem semel omissam querellam per vos, qui matri heredes extitistis, iuris ratio non sinit. 1. Verum si fides placitis praestita non est, in id quod interest diversam partem recte convenietis: aut enim, si stipulatio conventioni subdita est, ex stipulatu actio competit, aut, si omissa verborum obligatio est, utilis actio, quae praescriptis verbis rem gestam demonstrat, danda est.

PP. VIII id. Ian. Agricola et Clemente conss.

[7] Imp. Gordianus A. Licinio Timotheo evocato. Transactionis placitum ab eo interpositum, cui causae actionem, non decisionem litis mandasti, nihil petitioni tuae derogavit.

PP. X k. Ian. Pio et Pontiano conss.

[8] Idem A. Iunio militi. De alimentis praeteritis si quaestio defertur, transigi potest, de futuris autem sine praetore seu praeside interposita transactio nulla auctoritate iuris censetur.

PP. XIIII k. Ian. Gordiano A. et Aviola conss.

[9] Idem A. Agrippino. Si super possessione, quae tibi quaesita est, cum quaestionem patereris a fratre uxoris tuae, pactum conventum et stipulatio inter vos, ut adlegas, interposita est, ut, si intra diem certum idem adversarius tuus decem aureos tibi numerasset, possessione ei cederes, vel, si eam inferre quantitatem non curasset, ulterius quaestionem non patereris, et is qui ita spopondit promisso satis non fecit, consequens est te ad quem res pertinet vim ab eo pati non debere: cuius rei gratia vir clarissimus praeses provinciae interpellatus vim prohibebit, praecipue cum, etiamsi in rem diversae parti actio competeret, huiusmodi pactione propter utilem exceptionem posset submoveri.

[6] The same Augustus to the Pomponii. pr. You state that after the complaint of an undutiful (will; querela inofficiosi testamenti) had been raised, your mother settled with the opposing party on terms that she receive part of the property (in the estate) and abandon the litigation. The logic of the law (ratio iuris) does not allow that the complaint, once abandoned, be renewed by you, your mother's heirs. 1. But if the agreement has not been honored, you may rightly sue the opposing party for your interest (id quod interest). For if a stipulation was added to the agreement, an action lies on the stipulation; but if the oral obligation (obligatio verborum; a stipulation) was omitted, then an analogous action (actio utilis), setting forth the transaction in special terms (praescriptis verbis), is to be granted.

Posted January 6, in the consulship of Agricola and Clemens (230).

[7][32] Emperor GORDIAN Augustus to Licinius Timotheus, a veteran. A settlement agreement made by a person to whom you mandated (mandare) the bringing of a lawsuit, (but) not its settlement, does not prejudice your own claim.

Posted December 23, in the consulship of Pius and Pontianus (238).

[8] The same Augustus to Junius, a soldier. If a dispute arises about past support payments (alimenta), it can be settled; but for future (payments) no settlement is sanctioned by legal authority without (the consent of) a Praetor or governor.[33]

Posted December 19, in the consulship of Gordianus Augustus and Aviola (239).

[9] The same Augustus to Agrippinus. Concerning a possession that was sought for you,[34] a dispute (quaestio) arose between you and your wife's brother. Thereafter, the two of you entered into an agreed-upon pact and (also), as you allege, a stipulation, to the effect that if your adversary paid you 10 gold pieces by a specified date, you would yield possession to him; or, if he did not provide for tendering this amount, you would not undergo further challenge (and so would win the dispute). If the person who made this formal promise (spondere) did not fulfill his promise, the outcome is that you, to whom the property belongs, should not suffer any violence from him. On this account the vir clarissimus governor of the province, when called upon, will prohibit violence, particularly since, although an action for property (actio in rem) is available to the opposing party, it can be defeated through the analogous defense (exceptio utilis) that arises from this sort of agreement.

[32] = C. Greg. Visig. 2.1. See C. 2.3.3 and 23.

[33] See D. 2.15.8 pr.

[34] Krüger, following Bas. 11.2.26 and its scholia, plausibly suggests: "Concerning a possession that was sought for you through your son from the estate of his mother" (Si super possessione quae tibi per filium tuum ex matris eius hereditate quaesita est).

PP. VI id. April. Gordiano A. II et Pompeiano conss.

[10] Imp. Philippus A. Apollophaniae. Fratris tui filiis de paterna successione ac statu etiam nunc contra fidem sanguinis itemque placitorum quaestionem inferre parum probe postulas. nullus etenim erit litium finis, si a transactionibus bona fide interpositis coeperit facile discedi.

PP. prid. k. April. Peregrino et Aemiliano conss.

[11] *Impp. Valerianus et Gallienus AA. et Valerianus nobilis*simus C. Gaiano militi. De fideicommisso a patre inter te et fratrem vicissim dato, si alter vestrum sine liberis excesserit vita, interposita transactio rata est, cum fratrum concordia remoto captandae mortis alterius voto improbabili retinetur. et non potest eo casu rescindi, tamquam circumventus sis, cum pacto tali consenseris, cum neque eam cui subveniri solet aetatem agere te proponas nec, si ageres, isdem illis de causis in integrum restitutionis auxilium impetrare deberes.

PP. XV k. Dec. Valeriano et Gallieno AA. utrisque II conss.

[12] Idem AA. Primo. Praeses provinciae aestimabit, utrum de dubia lite transactio inter te et civitatis tuae administratores facta sit, an ambitiose id, quod indubitate deberi posset, remissum sit. nam priore casu ratam manere transactionem iubebit, posteriore nocere civitati gratiam non sinet.

PP. XVI k. Mart. Aemiliano et Basso conss.

[13] Impp. Diocletianus et Maximianus AA. Proclae. pr. Interpositas metus causa transactiones ratas non haberi edicto perpetuo continetur. nec tamen quilibet metus ad rescindenda ea, quae consensu terminata sunt, sufficit, sed talem metum probari oportet, qui salutis periculum vel corporis cruciatum contineat. 1. Ad vim tamen vel dolum arguendum qualitas causae principalis non sufficit: unde si nihil tale probari

Posted April 8, in the consulship of Gordian Augustus, for the second time, and Pompeianus (241).

[10] Emperor PHILIP Augustus to Apollophania. Even now you disgracefully seek to raise a controversy with your brother's children concerning their inheritance from their father and their status – contrary not only to the loyalty owed to blood, but to the agreement. For there will be no end to litigation if it becomes easy to depart from settlements entered into in good faith.

Posted March 31, in the consulship of Peregrinus and Aemilianus (244).

[11] Emperors VALERIAN and GALLIENUS Augusti, and VALERIAN, the Most Noble Caesar, to Gaianus, a soldier. Concerning the trust (fideicommissum) imposed by your father between you and your brother reciprocally in the event that one of you departs from life childless, an interposed settlement is valid, since brotherly harmony is maintained by eliminating any immoral wish for the other's death.[35] Nor can it be rescinded here on the theory that you were tricked, since you agreed to this pact, and (also) because you were not of that (young) age that is customarily assisted (through restoration of rights); nor, (even) if you were (that young), should you obtain the aid of restoration of rights (restitutio in integrum), for these same reasons (of avoiding discord).

Posted November 17, in the consulship of Valerian and Gallienus, the Augusti, both for the second time (255).

[12][36] The same Augusti to Primus. The provincial governor will judge whether there was a (real) settlement between you and your city administrators concerning a doubtful lawsuit, or whether through favoritism (ambitiose) you were released from what could be an unquestionable debt (to the city). For in the former case he will order that the settlement remain valid; in the latter, he will not allow influence to harm the city.

Posted February 14, in the consulship of Aemilianus and Bassus (259).

[13] Emperors DIOCLETIAN and MAXIMIAN Augusti to Procla. pr. The Perpetual Edict provides that settlements made through fear (metus) are not held valid. However, not every sort of fear suffices to rescind what was concluded by agreement; the fear must be proven to be such as is based on risk to health or bodily pain. 1. The nature of the principal cause of action is insufficient (by itself) to show duress or deceit (vis vel dolus); so, if nothing of that sort [35] The fideicommissum requested each heir, if childless at death, to transfer the inheritance to the other. The brothers presumably divided the estate in order to avoid strife between them.

[36] Compare Consultatio 9.14.

potest, consensu quaestiones terminatas minime instaurari oportet. 2. Sed quoniam eum, cum quo te transegisse commemoras, ex ancilla tua natum servum esse adseveras, si vera sunt, quae precibus complexa es, alia ratio pactum reformat: nec enim dubii iuris est dominos cum servis suis paciscentes ex placitis teneri atque obligari non posse.

S. IIII non. April. Byzantii ipsis IIII et III AA. conss.

[14] Idem AA. Sopatrae. Si diversa pars contra placitum agere nititur, aequitatis ratio suadet refusa pecunia, cum et tu hoc desideras, causam ex integro agi.

PP. IIII non. Iul. ipsis IIII et III AA. conss.

[15] Idem AA. Pontio. Ut responsum congruum accipere possis, insere pacti exemplum: ita enim intellegemus, utrum sola conventio fuit, an etiam Aquiliana stipulatio nec non et acceptilatio secuta fuerit: quae si subdita esse illuxerit, nullam adversariae tuae petitionem hereditatis vel in rem specialem competere palam fiet.

PP. XV k. Aug. ipsis IIII et III AA. conss.

[16] Idem AA. et CC. Caecilio. Causas vel lites transactionibus legitimis finitas imperiali rescripto resuscitari non oportet.

S. V id. Mart. AA. conss.

[17] Idem AA. et CC. Marcello. Cum proponas ab ea, contra quam supplicas, litem quam tecum habuit transactione decisam eamque acceptis quae negotii dirimendi causa placuerat dari nunc de conventione resiluisse, ac petas vel pacto stari vel restitui data, perspicis, si quidem de his reddendis manente transactionis placito statim stipulatione, si contra fecerit, prospexisti et quinque et viginti annis maior fuit, quod exceptionem pacti et actionem datorum habeas: quod si nihil tale convenit, exceptio tibi, non etiam eorum quae dedisti repetitio competit securitate parta.

PP. V id. Iun. ipsis AA. V et IIII conss.

can be proven, it is scarcely right to renew controversies ended by agreement. 2. Since you allege, however, that the person with whom you say you settled was a slave born of your female slave, if these (allegations) contained in your petition are true, a second principle alters (legal consideration of) the pact; for the undoubted rule is that masters who form an agreement with their slaves cannot be held and obliged on the basis of the agreement.

Written April 2, at Byzantium, in the consulship of these Augusti, for the fourth and third time, respectively (290).

[14] The same Augusti to Sopatra. If your adversary attempts to sue contrary to an agreement, the logic of fairness impels that after you return the money payment (obtained in the settlement), the (principal) cause of action be litigated anew, if you also desire this.

Posted July 4, in the consulship of these Augusti, for the fourth and third time, respectively (290).

[15] The same Augusti to Pontius. To receive an appropriate response, enclose a copy of the pact. For in this way we will know whether there was just an agreement, or whether it was also accompanied by an Aquilian stipulation and a formal release (acceptilatio). If it becomes obvious that it was so accompanied, plainly your adversary's suit for the inheritance or for particular property does not lie.

Posted July 18, in the consulship of these Augusti, for the fourth and third time, respectively (290).

[16] The same Augusti and the Caesars to Caecilius. Cases or suits, (when) ended by lawful settlements, must not be revived through an imperial rescript.

Written March 11, in the consulship of the Augusti (293).

[17] The same Augusti and Caesars to Marcellus. You allege that the woman against whom you (now) plead ended by settlement a lawsuit she had with you, and that after accepting what was agreed be given her to end the matter, she has now strayed from the agreement. You seek either that the pact be upheld or that what was given be restored. You are aware that if indeed you provided by stipulation that the property be returned if she violated the agreement, while simultaneously leaving the settlement in force, (then) if she was over the age of 25, you have a defense on the pact (exceptio pacti) and an action for the property given. But if there was no such agreement, you have the defense, but, since you are protected, not also the right to reclaim what you gave.

Posted June 9, in the consulship of these Augusti (293).

[18] Idem AA. et CC. Valentiniano. Transigere vel pacisci de crimine capitali excepto adulterio non prohibitum est. in aliis autem publicis criminibus, quae sanguinis poenam non ingerunt, transigere non licet citra falsi accusationem.

S. III k. Sept. AA. conss.

[19] Idem AA. et CC. Irenaeo. Sub praetextu instrumenti post reperti transactionem bona fide finitam rescindi iura non patiuntur. sane si eam per se vel per alium subtractis, quibus veritas argui potuit, decisionem litis extorsisse probetur, si quidem actio superest, replicationis auxilio doli mali pacti exceptio removetur, si vero iam perempta est, infra constitutum tempus tantum actionem de dolo potes exercere.

S. XIIII k. Oct. Sirmi AA. conss.

[20] Idem AA. et CC. Antistiae. Non minorem auctoritatem transactionum quam rerum iudicatarum esse recta ratione placuit, si quidem nihil ita fidei congruit humanae, quam ea quae placuerant custodiri. nec enim ad rescindendum pactum sufficit, quod hoc secunda hora noctis intercessisse proponas, cum nullum tempus sanae mentis maioris quinque et viginti annis consensum repudiet.

S. IIII k. Oct. AA. conss.

[21] Idem AA. et CC. Geminiano. Cum ea, quae transactionis causa dari aut retineri convenit, velut emptorem eum quem accipere placuerat obtinere praescribitur, his quae simulate geruntur pro infectis habitis frustra ficti pretii postulatur numeratio.

S. V non. Oct. ipsis AA. conss.

[22] Idem AA. et CC. Alexandro. Si maior transegisti, ad rescindendam transactionem de dolo contestatio non sufficit.

S. k. Dec. AA. conss.

[23] Idem AA. et CC. Tatiano. Nec intentio creditorum Archimedori, cui alios successisse profiteris, si obligatus pro eo non fuisti, tenere potest. sed haec integro negotio tractari convenerat: nam cum iam

[18] The same Augusti and Caesars to Valentinianus. It is not forbidden to settle or make a pact concerning a criminal charge in a capital case, except for adultery. But it is not permitted to settle in other cases of public charges not carrying the death penalty, save for an accusation of falsification (falsum).[37]

Written August 30, in the consulship of the Augusti (293).

[19] The same Augusti and Caesars to Irenaeus. Law does not permit that a settlement made in good faith be rescinded under the pretext that some document was found thereafter. But if it is proved she (your adversary) wrested a settlement of the suit by pilfering, either herself or through a third party, (documents) through which the truth could be shown, then if an action still remains, the defense of a pact is blocked by the counterdefense of deceit (replicatio doli mali); but if it (the action) has now been consumed, you can use only an action for deceit (actio de dolo) within the time fixed (by law).

Written September 18, at Sirmium, in the consulship of the Augusti (293).

[20] The same Augusti and Caesars to Antistia. With good reason it has been accepted that settlements have the same force as adjudications, seeing that nothing so much harmonizes with good faith among men as that their agreements be upheld. Nor does it suffice for rescinding a pact that, as you say, it was made at the second hour of the night, since there is no time that invalidates the consent of a sane mind over 25 years old.

Written September 28, in the consulship of the Augusti (293).

[21] The same Augusti and Caesars to Geminianus. It was agreed that (specified) things be given or retained on account of a settlement. When it is expressly declared (in the settlement document) that the person who was to receive them under the settlement took them as if (he were) a buyer, then, since fictitious transactions are regarded as void, (actual) payment of the sham price is sought (from a judge) in vain.

Written October 3, in the consulship of these Augusti (293).

[22] The same Augusti and Caesars to Alexander. If you were an adult (maior) when you settled, a declaration before witnesses (contestatio) that deceit (dolus) occurred is insufficient to rescind the settlement.

Signed December 1, in the consulship of the Augusti (293).

[23] The same Augusti and Caesars to Tatianus. The claim of the creditors of Archimedorus, whose heirs, you say, were third parties (i.e., not you), cannot succeed (against you) if you were not obligated on his behalf. But it was proper quaestionem transactione decisam et a te dari placitam numeratam pecuniam proponas, huius indebiti soluti praetextu improbe tibi petitionem decerni postulas, cum, etsi tantum in stipulationem fuisset deducta, indebiti promissi velamento defendi non posses.

[37] This final clause has also been translated "without (citra) fear of prosecution for falsification."

D. VIII id. Mart. CC. conss.

[24] Idem AA. et CC. Victorino. Si quidem ex causa transactionis acceptis his quae instrumento continentur nihil amplius peti convenit, adversariam tuam exceptionis auxilio defendi perspicis. sin vero certam quantitatem quasi solam ab ea debitam reddere se debere sine litis decisione confessa est, tam eam quam residuam debiti partem petere minime prohiberis.

S. V non. April. Sirmi CC. conss.

[25] Idem AA. et CC. Marcellae et Cyrillae. Si maiores quinque et viginti annis cum patruo sive avunculo vestro transegistis vel ei debita donationis causa sine aliqua condicione remisistis, non idcirco, quod hoc huius hereditatis captandae causa, id est spe futurae successionis, vos fecisse proponatis, aliis ei succedentibus instaurari finita debent.

S. II id. April. CC. conss.

[26] Idem AA. et CC. Dionysiadae. Transactione matris filios eius non posse servos fieri notissimi iuris est.

S. id. April. CC. conss.

[27] Idem AA. et CC. Catoni. Sanam mente, licet aegram corpore recte transigere manifestum est, nec postulare debueras improbo desiderio placita rescindi valitudinis corporis adversae velamento.

S. VII id. Mai. CC. conss.

[28] Idem AA. et CC. Sapparutae. pr. Sive apud acta rectoris provinciae sive sine actis, scriptura intercedente vel non, transactio interposita est, hanc servari convenit. 1. Sed quoniam, ut certum quid accipias, convenisse te, licet sine scriptura, proponis nec huius rei causa that this be investigated when the business was (still) fresh. For at present, when, as you say, the dispute has been decided by a settlement and you made the agreed-upon money payment, you improperly request that you be given a claim (for restitution) on the pretense of a payment not owed (indebitum solutum), since, even if it (this agreement) had been reduced to a stipulation (rather than you paying the money), you could not be defended by the excuse that you promised money not owed.

Given March 8, in the consulship of the Caesars (294).

[24] The same Augusti and Caesars to Victorinus. If it was indeed agreed that, after receiving property as prescribed in a document arising from a settlement, nothing more was to be sought, you see that your opponent is protected by means of the defense (of a pact). But if, without a determination of the suit, she acknowledged that she ought to pay you a certain amount as (so she asserted) all that was due from her, you are scarcely forbidden to claim, not only that amount, but also the remainder due.

Written April 1,[38] at Sirmium, in the consulship of the Caesars (294).

[25] The same Augusti and Caesars to Marcella and Cyrilla. If, when more than 25 years old, you settled with your paternal or maternal uncle, or you released him from what he owed you, gratuitously and without any condition, matters that are closed should not be reopened for the reason you state, that you did this in order to win his inheritance, i.e., in hope of a future succession, when others (in fact then) succeeded him.

Written April 12, in the consulship of the Caesars (294).

[26] The same Augusti and Caesars to Dionysiadas. It is a very well known rule of law that through a mother's settlement her sons cannot become slaves.[39]

Written April 13, in the consulship of the Caesars (294).

[27] The same Augusti and Caesars to Cato. It is clear that a woman of sound mind, although sick in body, rightfully makes a settlement; nor should you have dishonestly requested to have the agreement rescinded on the excuse of bodily ill-health.

Written May 9, in the consulship of the Caesars (294).

[28] The same Augusti and Caesars to Sapparuta. pr. It is agreed that a settlement, once made, is observed, whether (it occurs) in the provincial governor's records (in court) or not, whether in writing or not. 1. But since you say that [38] Noting the oddity of the date, Mommsen suggests III non. Apr. = April 3, 294.

[39] See C. 4.43.

stipulationem secutam esse, quamvis ex pacto non potuit nasci actio, tamen rerum vindicatione pendente, si exceptio pacti opposita fuerit, doli mali vel in factum replicatione usa poteris ad obsequium placitorum adversarium urguere.

D. III non. Iul. CC. conss.

[29] Idem AA. et CC. Marciae. Sub praetextu specierum post repertarum generali transactione finita rescindi prohibent iura. error autem circa proprietatem rei apud alium extra personas transigentium tempore transactionis constitutae nihil potest nocere.

S. IIII k. Oct. CC. conss.

[30] Idem AA. et CC. Antonino. Transactione finita, cum ex partibus tuis magis dolum intercessisse quam eorum, contra quos preces fundis, confitearis, instaurare grave nec non criminosum tibi est.

S. V id. Oct. Crevi CC. conss.

[31] Idem AA. et CC. Proculo. Si de certa re pacto transactionis interposito hoc comprehensum erat 'nihil amplius peti', etsi non additum fuerat 'eo nomine', de ceteris quaestionibus integra permaneat actio.

PP. IIII id. Oct. Byzantii CC. conss.

[32] Idem AA. et CC. Cyrillo. Si causa cognita prolata sententia, sicut iure traditum est, appellationis vel in integrum restitutionis sollemnitate suspensa non est, super iudicato frustra transigi non est opinionis incertae. proinde si non Aquiliana stipulatione et acceptilatione subsecuta competentem tibi actionem peremisti, praeses provinciae usitato more legum rebus pridem iudicatis effectum adhibere curabit.

S. VIII k. Nov. CC. conss.

you agreed, though not in writing, to receive something definite, and that no stipulation was added for this matter, (then,) although no action could arise from a pact, still, if in the pending action to reclaim property the defense of a pact is interposed, by using a counterdefense of deceit or on the facts you can compel your adversary to carry out his agreement.[40]

Given July 5, in the consulship of the Caesars (294).

[29] The same Augusti and Caesars to Marcia. Law forbids that matters closed by a general settlement be reopened on the pretext of specific things later found. But no harm can come from a mistake as to ownership of property that was, at the time of the settlement, held by a person other than the compromising parties.

Written September 28, in the consulship of the Caesars (294).

[30] The same Augusti and Caesars to Antoninus. It is a serious matter, virtually criminal, for you to reopen matters closed by a settlement, granted that you admit that the deception (dolus) came more from your side than from that of those against whom you direct your petition.

Written October 11, at Crevum, in the consulship of the Caesars (294).

[31] The same Augusti and Caesars to Proculus. If, in a settlement pact made concerning specific property, it was included that "nothing more be sought" even without adding "on this account," a cause of action concerning other disputed matters remains unaffected.

Posted October 12, at Byzantium, in the consulship of the Caesars (294).[41]

[32] The same Augusti and Caesars to Cyrillus. It is not a matter of disputed (legal) opinion that if a case has been heard (causa cognita) and a verdict rendered (sententia prolata) according to law, or if it was suspended by the formal process of appeal or of restoration of rights, a settlement concerning an adjudicated matter is ineffective. Hence, if you have not eliminated your cause of action through an Aquilian stipulation and a formal release, the provincial governor will take care, in the usual manner of the law, to give effect to prior judgments.[42]

Written October 25, in the consulship of the Caesars (294).

[40] Blume: "In this case, a suit was compromised. The action was not lost in the same way as in law 6 h.t. Nor was the compromise carried out by one of the parties as in law 33 h.t. Hence the old suit could be pressed, or if it had not been brought could be commenced, and the defendant was condemned, unless he was willing to comply with the compromise. If willing, that ended the suit. In other words, the compromise could be enforced indirectly, though not directly."

[41] Mommsen gives November 10, 294.

[42] See D. 12.6.23.1; Greg. 2.11.4; Consultatio 9.15; but also D. 2.15.7 pr, 2.15.11.

[33] Idem AA. et CC. Euchrysio. pr. Si pro fundo quem petebas praedium certis finibus liberum dari transactionis causa placuit, nec eo tempore minor annis viginti quinque fuisti, licet hoc praedium obligatum post vel alienum pro parte fuerit probatum, instaurari decisam litem prohibent iura. 1. Ex stipulatione sane, si placita servari secuta est, vel, si non intercessit, praescriptis verbis actione civili subdita[ii] apud rectorem provinciae agere potes. 2. Si tamen ipsas res apud te constitutas, ob quarum quaestionem litis intercessit decisio, fiscus vel alius a te vindicavit, nihil petere potes.

S. v id. Nov. Melantiade CC. conss.

[34] Idem AA. et CC. Ptolemaidi. Cum donationis seu transactionis causa administratae tutelae debiti scientes vos obligationem fratri vestro remisisse proponatis nec umquam volenti dolus inferatur, frustra de dolo querimini, nec ad implendum promissum hereditatis propriae pollicitatione quisquam adstringitur.

PP. vi id. Nov. CC. conss.

[35] Idem AA. et CC. Ammonio. Transactionem, quae dominii translatione vel actione parata seu perempta finem accepit, cum eam amicis etiam intervenientibus re vera ostenditur processisse, metus velamento rescindi postulantis professio detegit improbitatem.

S. viiii k. Dec. Nicomediae CC. conss.

[36] Idem AA. et CC. Achilleo. Si cum liberis maior annis viginti quinque transegisti, quamvis dari tibi placita repraesentata necdum probentur nec offerant haec qui conveniuntur, ne quid amplius ab ipsis exigi possit, exceptionis proficit aequitas.

S. vi id. Dec. CC. conss.

[ii] [subdita]

[33] The same Augusti and Caesars to Euchrysius. pr. If, in place of a farm that you claimed, it was agreed as a settlement that you receive real property with set boundaries and free (from charges), and you were not then under 25 years old, then, although it is proved that the property was encumbered or partially a third party's, the laws forbid reopening a lawsuit that has been decided. 1. Of course, you can sue before the provincial governor on the stipulation if one was added that the agreement be observed, or, if no stipulation intervened, by a civil action with special terms (praescriptis verbis). 2. But if the Treasury or a third party (then) successfully claimed ownership (vindicavit) from you of property ascribed to you, the status of which the lawsuit's outcome had resolved, you cannot claim anything.

Written November 9, at Melantias, in the consulship of the Caesars (294).

[34] The same Augusti and Caesars to Ptolemais. Since you state that, either as a gift or a settlement, you knowingly remitted to your brother the obligation of a debt stemming from his management as a tutor, and (since) no deceit (dolus) is perpetrated on a willing victim, your complaint of deceit is futile. Nor does his donative promise (pollicitatio) of an inheritance from himself bind anyone to fulfill his promise.[43]

Posted November 8, in the consulship of the Caesars (294).

[35] The same Augusti and Caesars to Ammonius. The plaintiff's statement reveals its dishonesty (by asking) that a settlement, which resulted in transfer of ownership or in the grant or destruction of a cause of action, be rescinded on pretense of fear (metus), when it is shown that, in fact, it was even concluded with friends present.

Written November 23, at Nicomedia, in the consulship of the Caesars (294).

[36][44] The same Augusti and Caesars to Achilleus. If, when over 25 years old, you settled with free men, then, although the things agreed to be given to you are shown not yet to have been delivered, nor do the defendants tender them, (still) the fairness of a defense (stemming from the settlement) is available to prevent anything more being demanded (from you) by them.

Written December 8, in the consulship of the Caesars (294).

[43] On this second point, see C. 2.3.15, 30. This rescript more likely dates to November 9 (v id. Nov.).

[44] Combine with C. 6.23.14 and 6.42.29. The controversy was over an estate. Evidently Achilleus settled without obtaining a stipulation. See C. 2.3.21, 2.4.28. Cum liberis is supplied from the Basilika scholia (11.2.53).

[37] Idem AA. et CC. Basilissae. Promissis transactionis causa non impletis poenam in stipulationem deductam, si contra factum fuerit, exigi posse constitit.
S. XII k. Ian. Nicomediae CC. conss.

[38] Idem AA. et CC. Theodotiano. Transactio nullo dato vel retento seu promisso minime procedit.
S. VIII k. Ian. Nicomediae CC. conss.

[39] Idem AA. et CC. Marcianae. Quamvis eum qui pactus est statim paeniteat, transactio rescindi et lis instaurari non potest: et qui tibi suasit intra certum tempus licere a transactione recedi, falsum adseveravit.
S. d. V k. Ian. Sirmi CC. conss.

[40] Imppp. Gratianus Valentinianus et Theodosius AAA. Eutropio pp. Ubi pactum vel transactio scripta est atque Aquilianae stipulationis et acceptilationis vinculis firmitas iuris innexa est, aut subsecutis secundum leges accommodandus est consensus aut poena una cum his quae data probantur ante cognitionem causae, si et adversarius hoc maluerit, inferenda est.
D. III non. Iun. Constantinopoli Eucherio et Syagrio conss.

[41] Impp. Arcadius et Honorius AA. Rufino pp. pr. Si quis maior annis[iii] adversus pacta vel transactiones nullo cogentis imperio libero arbitrio et voluntate confecta putaverit esse veniendum vel interpellando iudicem vel supplicando principibus vel non implendo promissa, eas autem invocato dei omnipotentis nomine eo auctore solidaverit, non solum inuratur infamia, verum etiam actione privatus restituta poena, quae pactis probatur inserta, et rerum proprietate careat et emolumento, quod

[iii] annis <xxv>

[37] The same Augusti and Caesars to Basilissa. When promises made by virtue of a settlement are not carried out, it has been established that the penalty for violating the agreement, since it was reduced to a stipulation, can be claimed.

Written December 21, at Nicomedia, in the consulship of the Caesars (294).

[38][45] The same Augusti and Caesars to Theodotianus. A settlement has no validity at all when nothing has been given, kept back, or promised (by both parties).

Written December 25, at Nicomedia, in the consulship of the Caesars (294).

[39] The same Augusti and Caesars to Marciana. Even though a person who made a pact immediately regretted it, the settlement cannot be rescinded and the lawsuit restored. You were misled by whoever persuaded you that a settlement could be avoided within some set time period.

Written and given December 28, at Sirmium, in the consulship of the Caesars (294).[46]

[40][47] Emperors GRATIAN, VALENTINIAN and THEODOSIUS Augusti to Eutropius, Praetorian Prefect. When a pact or a settlement is in writing and it also has legal strength through the binding effect of an Aquilian stipulation and a formal release, either the agreement (of the parties) must be adapted to execution in accordance with its provisions, or, if the adversary also prefers this, a penalty must be paid along with (return of) what was shown to have been given (in reliance) before the case was considered.

Given June 3, at Constantinople, in the consulship of Eucherius and Syagrius (381).

[41][48] Emperors ARCADIUS and HONORIUS Augusti to Rufinus, Praetorian Prefect. pr. If a person entered into pacts or settlements when he was over 25 years old and under no duress, through his own free judgment and will, and he (now) thinks of acting against them either by appealing to a judge or by beseeching the Emperors or (simply) by not fulfilling his promises – (when) he [45] = C. 6.31.3 (end); combine with C. 2.6.4, 6.19.1. A surrender that lacked consideration still could be the promise of a gift, see 25 above; D. 2.15.1; C. 6.31.3.

[46] More likely 293 (Connolly).

[47] = C.Th. 2.9.2, which omits "and a formal release" and "if the adversary also prefers this," along with other variations. The sense is that both parties could agree to abandon the settlement, but only with restitution on both sides to the status quo ante; and any penalty under the settlement was then due.

[48] = C.Th. 2.9.3, with a different and somewhat better text.

ex pacto vel transactione illa fuerit consecutus: itaque omnia eorum mox commodo deputabuntur, qui intemerata pacti iura servaverint. 1. Eos etiam huius legis vel iactura dignos iubemus esse vel munere, qui nomina nostra placitis inserentes salutem principum confirmationem initarum esse iuraverint pactionum.

D. v id. Oct. Constantinopoli Olybrio et Probino conss.

[42] Impp. Leo et Anthemius AA. Erythrio pp. Si ex falsis instrumentis transactiones vel pactiones initae fuerint, quamvis iusiurandum his interpositum sit, etiam civiliter falso revelato eas retractari praecipimus: ita demum ut, si de plurimis causis vel capitulis eaedem pactiones initae fuerint, illa tantummodo causa vel pars retractetur, quae ex falso instrumento composita convicta fuerit, aliis capitulis firmis manentibus: nisi forte etiam de eo, quod falsum dicitur, controversia orta decisa sopiatur.

D. k. Iul. Constantinopoli Marciano cons.

[43] Imp. Anastasius A. Thomae pp. Illyrici. Iubemus in omnibus litigiis iam motis et pendentibus seu postea super servili vel adscripticia condicione movendis transactiones celebrandas vel iam celebratas, si non alio iuri cognito modo eas vacillare contigerit, vires suas obtinere nec ob hoc videri tenorem earum titubare, quod pro condicione servili vel adscripticia confectae sint.

D. xv k. Dec. Patricio et Hypatio conss.

V De Calculi Errore

[1] Impp. Diocletianus et Maximianus AA. et CC. Aurelio Quarto. Errorem calculi, sive ex uno contractu sive ex pluribus emerserit, veritati non adferre praeiudicium saepe constitutum est: unde rationes etiam confirmed them by invoking the name of God Almighty as a guarantor (auctor) – not only let him be branded with infamy (infamia), but also let him be stripped of his cause of action, pay any penalty shown to have been inserted in the pact, and lose both ownership of the property and the profit he obtained by the pact or settlement. So all these things are immediately counted as gain to those who preserved inviolate the pact's provisions. 1. We likewise order that those who use Our name in their agreements and swear that the safety of the Emperors is a guaranty of the pacts entered into, be deemed worthy of the loss or gain, respectively, under this law.[49]

Given October 11, at Constantinople, in the consulship of Olybrius and Probinus (395).

[42][50] Emperors LEO and ANTHEMIUS Augusti to Erythrius, Praetorian Prefect. If settlements or pacts were entered into because of forged documents, even though an oath was added to them, when the forgery is (subsequently) revealed even in a civil proceeding, We order them to be reopened, but with this limitation: if these same pacts were entered concerning numerous causes or subjects, only that cause or part is reopened which is demonstrated to have been agreed upon because of a forged document, and the other subjects remain intact; unless perhaps a controversy that has arisen concerning what is said to be forged is also settled and put to rest (through a pact or settlement).

Given July 1, at Constantinople, in the consulship of Marcianus (472).

[43][51] Emperor ANASTASIUS Augustus to Thomas, Praetorian Prefect of Illyricum. We order that, in all litigation already commenced and pending or hereafter commenced concerning the status of slaves or enrolled tenants (adscripticii), settlements that are undertaken hereafter or already undertaken have a strength of their own unless it happens they fail for some other reason recognized by law; nor does their substance totter because they were made concerning the status of slaves or those bound to the soil.

Given November 17, in the consulship of Patricius and Hypatius (500).

Fifth Title Mistake in Computation

[1] Emperors DIOCLETIAN and MAXIMIAN Augusti and the Caesars to Aurelius Quartus. It has often been decided (by imperial legislation) that a mistake in [49] See also C. 2.27.1 and C. 2.43.3.4. The following constitution modifies this one.

[50] Combine with C. 8.17.11.
[51] Combine with C. 2.7.21 (dated November 20), 7.39.5. This constitution modifies the rule in 13 and 26 above.

saepe computatas denuo retractari posse, si res iudicatae non sunt vel transactio non intervenit, explorati iuris est. sed et si per errorem calculi velut debitam quantitatem, cum esset indebita, promisisti, condictio liberationis tibi competit.

D. VI k. Mart. AA. conss.

[2] ...

VI De Postulando

[1] Imp. Antoninus A. Artemidoro. Cum a praefecto Aegypti perpetuo causas agere prohibitus non appellaveris, placitis obtempera.

PP. III k. Aug. Sabino II et Anullino conss.

[2] Imp. Alexander A. Polydoro. Nec ceterorum liberti, nedum mei quidem, si[iv] ita sunt litteris eruditi, ut patrocinia desiderantibus praestare possint, prohibentur hoc facere.

PP. non. Mart. Iuliano et Crispino conss.

[3] Imp. Gordianus A. Flaviano. Si sub specie honorarii, quod advocato usque ad certum modum deberi potuisset, eam quantitatem, quam desiderio complecteris, te daturum cavisti et, quasi mutuam pecuniam accepisses, eam te redditurum promisisti nec temporis spatio gesto negotio consensum ac fidem accommodasti, competenti exceptione non numeratae pecuniae tutus es et ex hac causa cautionem interpositam usitato more potes condicere.

PP. V id. Iun. Sabino II et Venusto conss.

[iv] [quidem], si <quidem>

computation, whether it arises from one contract or from many, does not prejudice the truth; and so it is a matter of settled law that accounts, even those repeatedly calculated, can be reopened anew if the matters are not (yet) adjudicated or there is no intervening settlement (transactio). But also if, through a mistake in computation, you promised a sum as owed when it was not owed, you have a claim for release (condictio liberationis).[52]

Given February 24, in the consulship of the Augusti (293).

Sixth Title Pleading in Court[53]

[1] Emperor ANTONINUS Augustus to Artemidorus. Since you did not appeal after the Prefect of Egypt permanently prohibited you from conducting cases, obey his orders.

Posted July 30, in the consulship of Sabinus, for the second time, and Anullinus (216).

[2] Emperor ALEXANDER Augustus to Polydorus. Neither the freedmen of other people nor my own, as long, of course, as they are sufficiently well educated that they can extend legal representation to those wanting it, are forbidden from doing so.

Posted March 7, in the consulship of Julian and Crispinus (224).

[3] Emperor GORDIAN Augustus to Flavianus. As a form of the honorarium that, up to a certain amount, could properly have been payable to an advocate, you provided (by stipulation) to pay the sum that you mention in your petition; and you (further) promised to "repay" this money with the fiction that you had (previously) received a loan. Within the time limit, you did not give your consent and acquiescence on the completed business. You are now protected by an appropriate defense that the money was not paid (exceptio non numeratae pecuniae), and for the same reason you can, in the usual manner, claim restitution of the (written) promise (cautio) that you gave.[54]

Posted June 9, in the consulship of Sabinus, for the second time, and Venustus (240).

[52] The terminology here is not classical. A second constitution on the subject is lost.

[53] Postulatio, a body of rules governing who may make a claim (for self or others) especially in a civil trial. See also D. 3.1.

[54] The petitioner's situation is a bit obscure; however, as Blume notes, "It seems clear that the due bill here [i.e., the cautio] was held to be voidable on the ground of services not rendered." A client's pre-trial promise to pay his advocate's honorarium was of doubtful validity (see, e.g., Pliny, Ep. 5.9.4), so the parties framed their promise as repayment of a fictitious loan.

[4] Impp. Diocletianus et Maximianus AA. et CC. Theodotiano. Velamento absentiae patroni causae rursum ad finitas quaestiones redire quis frustra conatur.

S. IIII k. Ian. Nicomediae CC. conss.

[5] Imp. Constantinus A. Helladio. Si qui advocatorum existimationi suae immensa atque illicita compendia praetulisse sub nomine honorariorum ex ipsis negotiis quae tuenda susceperint emolumentum sibi certae partis cum gravi damno litigatoris et depraedatione poscentes fuerint inventi, placuit, ut omnes, qui in huiusmodi scaevitate permanserint, ab hac professione penitus arceantur.

D. III k. April. Paulino et Iuliano conss.

[6] Impp. Valentinianus et Valens AA. ad Olybrium pu. pr. Quisquis vult esse causidicus, non idem in eodem negotio sit advocatus et iudex, quoniam aliquem inter arbitros et patronos oportet esse delectum. 1. Ante omnia autem universi advocati ita praebeant patrocinia iurgantibus, ut non ultra, quam litium poscit utilitas, in licentiam conviciandi et maledicendi temeritate*m* prorumpant: agant, quod causa desiderat: temperent ab iniuria. nam si quis adeo procax fuerit, ut non ratione, sed probris putet esse certandum, opinionis suae imminutione quatietur. nec enim conviventia commodanda est, ut quisquam negotio derelicto in adversarii sui contumeliam aut palam pergat aut subdole. 2. Praeterea nullum cum eo litigatore contractum, quem in propria recepit fide, ineat advocatus, nullam conferat pactionem. 3. Nemo ex his, quos licebit accipere vel decebit, aspernanter habeat, quod sibi semel officii gratia libero arbitrio obtulerit litigator. 4. Nemo ex industria protrahat iurgium.

5. Apud urbem autem Romam etiam honoratis, qui hoc putaverint eligendum, eo usque liceat orare, quousque maluerint, videlicet ut non ad turpe compendium stipemque deformem haec adripiatur occasio, sed laudis per eam augmenta quaerantur. nam si lucro pecuniaque capiantur, veluti abiecti atque degeneres inter vilissimos numerabuntur. 6. Quisquis igitur ex his, quos agere permisimus, vult esse causidicus, eam solam, quam sumit tempore agendi, sibi sciat esse personam, quousque causidicus est, nec putet quisquam honori suo aliquid esse detractum, cum ipse necessitatem elegerit standi et ipse contempserit ius sedendi.

[4][55] Emperors DIOCLETIAN and MAXIMIAN Augusti and the Caesars to Theodotianus. In vain does anyone attempt to use the absence of his legal representative (patronus) for a case as a basis to return again to (reopen) settled questions.

Given December 29, at Nicomedia, in the consulship of the Caesars (294).

[5][56] Emperor CONSTANTINE Augustus to Helladius. If any advocates are discovered to have preferred great and unlawful profit over their own good reputation, by demanding for themselves, as honoraria, the gain of a specified share from the very matter they undertook to protect – to the litigant's great loss and despoilment – it is decreed that all who persist in such knavishness shall be wholly banned from this profession.

Given March 30, in the consulship of Paulinus and Julian (325).

[6] Emperors VALENTINIAN and VALENS Augusti to Olybrius, Urban Prefect. pr.[57] Anyone who wishes to plead cases shall not act as advocate and judge in the same matter, since there must be some distinction between judge arbitrators and trial lawyers (patroni). 1. Before all, advocates as a group should furnish disputants with legal representation in a manner going no further than is demanded by the needs of their cases, (and) not breaking out into to licentious abuse and thoughtless slander. Let them do what the case requires, but abstain from insults. For if anyone is so shameless as to think that a lawsuit should be contested by reproaches and not by reason, he shall suffer loss of his good name. Nor is indulgence to be extended to anyone who abandons the case in hand and proceeds (instead) to blatant or covert invective against his adversary. 2. Further, an advocate should make no contract, nor enter any pact, with a person whom he accepts (as a client) in good faith. 3. Of those for whom it is permitted or proper to accept (an honorarium), none shall treat with disdain whatever a litigant has once freely offered him for his services. 4. Let no one purposefully protract a dispute.

5. In the city of Rome, those of the official class (honorati) who choose to do so are allowed to plead cases as much as they wish, provided they do not seize on this as a pretext for dishonorable gain or a shameful fee, but seek (only) to enhance their reputation thereby. For if they are motivated by thoughts of gain and money, they shall be counted among the lowest, as persons contemptible and unworthy. 6. But if any of those whom We have permitted to conduct cases wishes to plead one, he should know that this role he has assumed remains his only for as long as he pleads; nor should he consider his honor diminished, [55] = C. 6.19.1; combine with 2.4.38 and 6.31.3. Mommsen dates to December 25, 294.

[56] = C.Th. 2.10.3. Advocates may not pre-arrange to divide a trial award with their clients (champerty).

[57] Pr. = C.Th. 2.10.5 (posted August 21, probably correct). Combine constitution with C. 7.65.4.

PP. x k. Sept. Valentiniano et Valente AA. II conss.

[7] Idem AA. et Gratianus A. ad Olybrium pu. pr. Providendum est, ne hi, quos in foro aut meritum nobilissimos fecerit aut vetustas, in una parte consistant, aliam a rudibus atque tironibus necesse sit sustineri. 1. Atque ideo si in uno auditorio duo tantum prae ceteris fuerint vel plures, quorum fama sit hilarior, in iudicantis officio sit, ut par causidicorum distributio fiat et exaequetur partibus auxilium singulorum et aequa divisio procedat. 2. Si quis vero monitus a iudice ea excusatione, quae nequeat comprobari, cuicumque parti patrocinium denegaverit, careat foro, sciat etiam numquam sibi ad agendum copiam posse restitui. 3. Si quis autem ex litigatoribus detectus fuerit separatim tractasse cum pluribus et adversario suo tali fraude subtraxisse paris defensionis copiam, ostendet procul dubio iniquam a se litem foveri et auctoritatem iudicis a se lusam experietur.

D. k. Mart. Treviris Valentiniano et Valente III AA. conss.

[8] Impp. Leo et Anthemius AA. Nicostrato pp. Nemo vel in foro magnitudinis tuae vel in provinciali iudicio vel apud quemquam iudicem accedat ad togatorum consortium, nisi sacrosanctis catholicae religionis fuerit imbutus mysteriis. sin autem aliquid quoquo modo vel quadam machinatione factum vel attemptatum fuerit, officium quidem sublimitatis tuae centum librarum auri iacturam pro condemnatione sustineat, idem vero, quicumque ausus fuerit contra providum nostrae serenitatis decretum officium advocationis per subreptionem adripere et prohibitum patrocinium praestiterit, advocationis officio remotus stilum proscriptionis atque perpetui exilii specialiter sustinebit: scituris etiam provinciarum rectoribus, quod is, sub cuius administratione aliquid huiusmodi fuerit attemptatum, partis bonorum dimidiae proscriptionem et poenam exilii per quinquennium sustinebit.

D. prid. k. April. Constantinopoli Anthemio A. II cons.

since he has voluntarily chosen the necessity of rising (as an advocate) and has spurned the right to sit (as an adsessor with the judge).[58]

Posted August 23, in the consulship of Valentinian and Valens Augusti, (both) for the second time (368).[59]

[7] The same Augusti and GRATIAN Augustus to Olybrius, Urban Prefect. pr. Care must be taken that those (advocates) whom either merit or age has made famous in court are not all engaged on one side (of a lawsuit), making it necessary that the young and inexperienced defend the other side. 1. If, therefore, in a single courtroom there are, in comparison with the others, two or more (advocates) whose repute is more unclouded, the presiding judge's duty is to fairly distribute the pleaders so that the aid of the individual advocates is made equal for the parties and a fair division goes forward. 2. If anyone, after being appointed by a judge, denies representation to any party for a reason he cannot substantiate, he shall be deprived of (his right to appear in) court, and he should also know that the opportunity to conduct a case can never be restored to him. 3. If any litigant is found to have dealt separately with several (advocates), and by such fraud to have deprived his adversary of the opportunity for an equal defense, he indisputably shows that he furthers an unjust lawsuit; and he shall (therefore) experience the judge's authority, of which he made sport.

Given March 1, at Trier, in the consulship of Valentinian and Valens Augusti, for the third time (370).

[8][60] Emperors LEO and ANTHEMIUS Augusti to Nicostratus, Praetorian Prefect. No one shall be admitted to the Order of Advocates (togatorum consortium), either in the court of Your Greatness or in a provincial court or before any judge, unless he has been initiated in the holy mysteries of the Catholic faith. If, however, any such thing is done or attempted by any means or by some contrivance, the staff of Your Sublimity shall suffer the loss of 100 pounds of gold, if found guilty. He, though, who dares to seize the position of Advocate secretly, contrary to the prudent decree of Our Serenity, and provides forbidden patronage, shall be removed from his position as Advocate and suffer the sentence of confiscation and permanent exile. The provincial governors, too, must know that anyone under whose administration anything of this sort is attempted shall have half his property confiscated and be sent into exile for five years.

Given March 31, at Constantinople, in the consulship of Anthemius Augustus, for the second time (468).

[58] Compare C. 3.24.3.2–3. Blume: "Counselors of the judges, called assessors, sat with the regular judges. C. 1.51. And the referees appointed by the regular judges were frequently taken from among the advocates ... If they acted in either of these capacities, they could not at the same time act as counselor."

[59] Seeck dates to August 21, 370.

[60] = C. 1.4.15.

VII De Advocatis Diversorum Iudiciorum

[1] Imp. Antoninus A. Doloni. Si patronum causae praevaricatum putas et impleveris accusationem, non deerit adversus eum pro temeritate commissi sententia, atque ita de principali causa denuo quaeretur. quod si non docueris praevaricatum, et calumnia notaberis et rebus iudicatis, a quibus non est provocatum, stabitur.

PP. III k. Oct. Antonino A. IIII et Balbino conss.

[2] Imppp. Valens Gratianus et Valentinianus AAA. ad Antonium pp. Qui necessario patriae suae debent municipio functiones, eos decurionibus adgregatos nolumus evagari, permittentes tamen, ut in negotiis causidicorum fungantur officiis et in civitatibus propriis subeant munia curiarum, ita tamen, ut non contra rem publicam civitatis, in qua honorem hunc consecuti sunt, eis adesse permittatur.

D. XV k. Sept. Ravennae Valente VI et Valentiniano II AA. conss.

[3] Impp. Arcadius et Honorius AA. ad Africanum pu. Ne quis ex corpore togatorum, minime curialibus nexibus illigatus, provinciales suscipiat functiones, scilicet ut et ambientibus claudatur ingressus et invitis necessitas auferatur.

D. III non. Aug. Constantinopoli Arcadio IIII et Honorio III AA. conss.

[4] Impp. Honorius et Theodosius AA. Eustathio pp. Fori tui culminis et universorum iudiciorum advocati quidquid ex huiuscemodi professione vel ipsius occasione quaesierint vel quaesierunt, id post patris obitum praecipuum veluti peculium castrense ad exemplum militum proprio dominio valeant vindicare.

Seventh Title The Advocates of the Various Courts[61]

[1] Emperor ANTONINUS Augustus to Dolon. If you think that the advocate for your case has colluded (with the other side), and you prove the accusation, there will not be lacking a judgment against him in proportion to the rashness of his offense, and so the principal case will be heard anew. But if you do not show such collusion, you will be branded for vexatious litigation (calumnia), and the (principal) issue, unless appealed, will stand as adjudicated.

Posted September 29, in the consulship of Antoninus Augustus, for the fourth time, and Balbinus (213).

[2] Emperors VALENS, GRATIAN, and VALENTINIAN Augusti to Antonius, Praetorian Prefect (of Italy). As to those who necessarily owe public service to their home municipality, We do not want the ones included among the decurions to leave (their position). We permit them, however, to perform the duties of an advocate in legal matters while (simultaneously) undertaking the duties of decurions in their own cities, but with the proviso that they are not allowed to appear against the government of the city in which they obtained this honor.

Given August 18, at Ravenna, in the consulship of Valens, for the sixth time, and Valentinian, for the second time, Augusti (378).

[3][62] Emperors ARCADIUS and HONORIUS Augusti to Africanus, Urban Prefect. No one belonging to the Order of Advocates (corpus togatorum), least of all one bound by curial obligations, shall undertake provincial services, obviously in order that both the politically corrupt lack entrée and the unwilling not face compulsion.

Given August 3, at Constantinople, in the consulship of Arcadius, for the fourth time, and Honorius, for the third time, Augusti (396).

[4][63] Emperors HONORIUS and THEODOSIUS Augusti to Eustathius, Praetorian Prefect. Whatever (recompense) the advocates at the court of Your Highness, and of courts generally, have acquired or may acquire on the basis of their profession or in connection with it, this they shall be able to claim personal ownership of, particularly after their father's death, as a camp peculium (peculium castrense) modeled on that of soldiers.

[61] This title deals chiefly with the upper tier of trial lawyers, the Order of Advocates, a guild-like group (somewhat like barristers) formally attached to the main courts in several large Eastern cities; they became highly organized in the later Empire.

[62] = C.Th. 12.1.152, which omits "least of all one bound by curial obligations" – a phrase in any case awkward and difficult to translate.

[63] = C.Th. 2.10.6 (with a fuller text); combine with C. 1.51.7.

D. x k. April. Constantinopoli Honorio XIII et Theodosio x AA. conss.

[5] Impp. Theodosius et Valentinianus AA. Cyro pu. Quidquid animi largitate et munificentia praestitimus principali togatis per Orientem eminentissimae praefecturae reverentia studiorum, id sibi praesenti sanctione praestitum esse cognoscant patroni causarum illustris urbicariae praefecturae.

D. VII k. Ian. Constantinopoli Theodosio XII et Valentiniano II AA. conss.

[6] Idem AA. ad Florentium pp. Sancimus, ut advocatis, qui apud tuam magnificentiam causas acturi sunt, a nullo iudice, nec ab ipsa eminentissima praefectura, sollicitudo ulla penitus iniungatur: sed nec advocatis provinciarum vel spectabilium iudicum quisquis existimet aliquid iniungendum. nulla igitur togatis inspectio, nulla ingeratur peraequatio, nulla operis instructio, nulla discussio, nullum ratiocinium imponatur, nullum denique aliud eis mandetur praeter arbitrium in eodem dumtaxat loco ubi advocationis exercetur officium: quinquaginta librarum auri poena officio feriendo, quod legis istius regulas temerare temptaverit.

D. XIII k. Mai. Constantinopoli Theodosio A. XVII et Festo conss.

[7] Idem AA. Thalassio pp. per Illyricum. Isdem privilegiis isdemque immunitatibus potiri togam illustrissimae per Illyricum praefecturae, quibus fruitur toga per Orientem praetorianae sedis excelsae, decernimus.

D. VII id. Sept. Constantinopoli Theodosio A. XVII et Festo conss.

[8] Idem AA. Cyro pp. consuli designato. Cum advocatio praetoriana centum quinquaginta numero togatis minime vel imminuendo vel augendo concludatur, iubemus eos, qui ex his ad fisci patronatum pervenerint, a cohortis vel alterius vilioris condicionis nexibus cum liberis quandocumque genitis liberos custodiri postque tale officium depositum annumque completum advocatorum consortio abscedere cum comitiva consistoriana: omneque, quod togatis fori celsitudinis tuae

Given March 23, at Constantinople, in the consulship of Honorius, for the thirteenth time, and Theodosius, for the tenth time, Augusti (422).

[5] Emperors THEODOSIUS and VALENTINIAN Augusti to Cyrus, Urban Prefect. The trial advocates of the illustrious Urban Prefecture shall know (hereby) that whatever We, through esteem for their learning, have with liberality and princely munificence granted to the advocates of the Most Eminent Prefecture of the East, this by present ordinance is granted also to them.

Given December 26, at Constantinople, in the consulship of Theodosius, for the twelfth time, and Valentinian, for the second time, Augusti (426).

[6][64] The same Augusti to Florentius, Praetorian Prefect. Upon the advocates who will conduct cases before Your Magnificence, We ordain that no vexation whatsoever be imposed by any judge, nor (even) by the eminent Prefecture itself; nor shall anyone consider imposing anything on the advocates in (the courts of) the provinces or of the spectabiles judges. On advocates (togati) no duty may be imposed to inspect (property for taxation) or to equalize (taxes); there shall be required from them no construction of a public work, no audit of records (discussio), no rendering of accounts. In a word, nothing else shall be demanded of them except acting as a judge arbitrator (arbitrium), and this only in the same place where they exercise their office as advocates. Any official staff attempting to violate this law's rules shall be punished by a fine of 50 pounds of gold.

Given April 19, at Constantinople, in the consulship of Theodosius Augustus, for the seventeenth time, and Festus (439).

[7] The same Augusti to Thalassius, Praetorian Prefect of Illyricum. We decree that the advocate rank (toga) of the illustrious Prefecture of Illyricum shall obtain the same privileges and immunities as are enjoyed by the advocate rank of the exalted Praetorian seat (the Prefecture) of the East.

Given September 7, at Constantinople, in the consulship of Theodosius Augustus, for the seventeenth time, and Festus (439).

[8] The same Augusti to Cyrus, Praetorian Prefect and Consul Designate. Since the Order of Advocates of the Praetorian Prefecture is limited to 150, a number that is to be neither increased nor diminished, We order that that those of them who reach (the rank of) Advocate for the Treasury (fisci patronatus), together with their children whenever born, be protected from serving on the staff (of magistrates; cohors) or in any other low public position; and after relinquishment of the office and completion of a year, they shall leave the Order of quolibet casu quolibet adquiritur titulo, ut castrense sibimet vindicare nec patribus vel avis paternis earum rerum commodum adquirere legis istius auctoritate decernimus: his omnibus etiam ad urbicariae praefecturae advocationem trahendis.

[64] = Nov. Theod. 10.1.4. The services mentioned below are uncompensated public duties.

D. III k. Ian. Valentiniano A. V et Anatolio conss.

[9] Idem AA. Apollonio pp. Si quis de togatis fori celsitudinis tuae vel Illyricianae seu urbicariae praefecturae sive de his, qui in provincialibus iudiciis causarum patrocinium profitentur, electione tuae sedis regendae provinciae munus potestatemque susceperit, post peractam integre ac sine ulla opinionis labe administrationem ad illud officium, unde abstractus est et unde sibi vitae subsidia comparabat, remeandi habeat facultatem nec causas orare denuo quadam prohibeatur invidia.

D. XII k. Sept. Constantinopoli Eudoxio et Dioscoro conss.

[10] Impp. Valentinianus et Marcianus AA. Palladio pp. Binos, qui priores fori tuae sedis inveniuntur, ad patronatum fisci singulis quibusque annis accedere paribus dignitatis et privilegiorum insignibus ambiendos praecipimus, quibus antehac utebatur is, qui solus creabatur fisci patronus.

D. XIIII k. Iul. Constantinopoli Sporacio cons.

[11] Imp. Leo A. Viviano pp. pr. Nemini licere sancimus aliquem sub adsidendi colore statutis centum quinquaginta advocatis, quos sibi eminentissima praefectura in consilium adsumpserit, adgregare. 1. Non aliter vero consortio advocatorum tuae sedis aliquis societur, nisi prius in examine viri clarissimi rectoris provinciae, ex qua oriundus est, praesentibus cohortalibus gesta conficiat, quibus aperte pateat cohortali statui ac fortunae eundem minime subiacere, si praesens vir clarissimus rector provinciae fuerit in eius examine: si vero afuerit, apud defensorem

Advocates (consortium advocatorum) with the title of Count of the Imperial Council (comitiva consistoriana).[65] And We decree that by the authority of this statute all property which is acquired in any manner and on any legal basis by the advocates of the court of Your Highness, they (the advocates) claim ownership of for themselves as a camp (peculium), and do not acquire this property for the benefit of their fathers or paternal grandfathers. All these provisions shall extend also to the bar (advocatio) of the Urban Prefecture.

Given December 30, in the consulship of Valentinian Augustus, for the fifth time, and Anatolius (440).

[9] The same Augusti to Apollonius, Praetorian Prefect. If any of the advocates at the court of Your Highness or of the Illyrican or Urban Prefecture, or of those who take up representing cases in provincial courts, was selected by your office and undertook the duty and power of governing a province, he shall, after finishing his administration honestly and without any spot upon his reputation, have the opportunity to return to that position from which he was taken and from which he made his living, nor shall he, through any resentment, be prevented from once again pleading cases.

Given August 21, at Constantinople, in the consulship of Eudoxius and Dioscorus (442).

[10] Emperors VALENTINIAN and MARCIAN Augusti to Palladius, Praetorian Prefect. We direct that each year the two (advocates) found to be preeminent in the court of your office shall rise to become Advocates of the Treasury (patronatus fisci), each to be invested with equal insignia of the rank and privileges enjoyed by the advocate who previously was alone selected Treasury Advocate.

Given June 18, at Constantinople, in the consulship of Sporacius (452).

[11] Emperor LEO Augustus to Vivianus, Praetorian Prefect. pr. We ordain that no one be permitted to include anyone, on pretext of his being an adsessor, among the statutory number of 150 Advocates whom Your Eminent Prefecture chooses for its council. 1. Indeed, no one shall be admitted to the Order of Advocates of your office otherwise than if, in an examination by the vir clarissimus governor of the province of his birth, and in the presence of his subordinate officials (cohortales), he creates an official record making it clear that he (the candidate) is not in any way subject to the status and condition of a subordinate official; (this applies) if the vir clarissimus governor of the province is present at his examination, but if he is absent, he shall create the record before [65] See C. 12.10. Scholiasts on Bas. add that they were "made Senators" (senatores factos), correctly.

sui oppidi gesta conficiat. 2. Iuris peritos etiam doctores eorum iubemus iuratos sub gestorum testificatione depromere, esse eum, qui posthac subrogari voluerit, peritia iuris instructum: filios autem togatorum excellentiae tuae, qui vel nunc causas agunt vel futuris temporibus actitaverint, ceteris supernumerariis anteferri. 3. Illud insuper decernimus, ut etiam his, qui ultra centum quinquaginta advocatos eminentissimae tuae sedis reperiuntur, liceat et apud virum spectabilem proconsulem vel praefectum Augustalem vel comitem Orientis, viros etiam spectabiles vicarios et apud rectores provinciarum negotia perorare.

D. k. Febr. Constantinopoli Magno et Apollonio conss.

[12] Idem A. Eusebio pp. Illyrici. Sancimus patronum fisci iudicio celsitudinis tuae iam non quotannis, sed biennio pro vetere consuetudine finem officii sui sortiri: salvis eidem consortio privilegiis omnibus, quae a retro principibus meruit, manentibus.

D. x k. Mart. Constantinopoli Basilio et Viviano conss.

[13] Impp. Leo et Anthemius AA. Alexandro duci Aegyptiaci limitis et praef. Augustali. pr. Petitionem virorum disertissimorum advocatorum Alexandrinae splendidissimae civitatis, quam de fori sui matricula et fisci patrono obtulerunt, merito admittentes hac sanctione decernimus quinquaginta statutos haberi eorumque nomina pro tempore matriculae conficiendae inscribi et eos advocationis officium in iudicio tam viri spectabilis praefecti Augustalis quam viri spectabilis ducis Aegyptiaci limitis petentibus adhibere, ceteros vero ultra memoratum numerum constitutos apud alios iudices eiusdem Alexandrinae civitatis perorare, filiis scilicet statutorum in loco deficientium supernumerariis anteponendis: egredientem autem post biennium fisci patronum contemplatione laborum exconsulari moderatoris provinciae dignitate decorari: licentia facultateque ei non deneganda, cum usus exegerit, tam pro se quam pro filiis parentibus et uxoribus nec non etiam personis ex transverso latere usque ad quartum gradum constitutis patrocinium suum adhibere. 1. Quando autem fisci patronum mori contigerit, gradu eum sequentem sine ulla dilatione in loco eius subrogari, heredibus defuncti nihil exinde sibi commodi adquiri posse speraturis: cunctis privilegiis, the Defender of his city. 2. Likewise we order his teachers, as legal experts, to certify under oath, below the record's declaration, that the person who wishes thereafter to be chosen (as an Advocate) has been trained in legal expertise. But the sons of Your Excellency's Advocates, both those who now or shall in the future conduct cases, shall be preferred over other supernumeraries. 3. We further direct that the Advocates of your eminent office, above the number of 150, shall also be permitted to plead cases before the vir spectabilis Proconsul or the Augustal Prefect (in Egypt) or the Count of the East, and also the viri spectabiles (imperial) Vicars, and to plead legal business before provincial governors.

Given February 1, at Constantinople, in the consulship of Magnus and Apollonius (460).

[12] The same Augustus to Eusebius, Praetorian Prefect of Illyricum. We ordain that a Treasury Advocate in the court of Your Highness shall now no longer leave office at the end of a year, but (rather) after two years, in accord with long-standing custom. All the privileges of the same Order (of Advocates), which he earned from prior emperors, shall (otherwise) remain intact.

Given February 20, at Constantinople, in the consulship of Basilius and Vivianus (463).

[13] Emperors Leo and Anthemius Augusti to Alexander, Duke of the Egyptian Frontier and Augustal Prefect. pr. Deservedly granting the petition from the learned Advocates of the splendid city of Alexandria concerning their court's register (matricula) and the Treasury Advocate (fisci patronus), by this ordinance We decree that their number be fixed at fifty, and that their names be inscribed in a periodically updated register, and that to those who seek it they provide advocacy in the court both of the vir spectabilis Augustal Prefect (in Egypt) and of the vir spectabilis Duke of the Egyptian Frontier. But the others, appointed beyond this number, shall plead before the other judges of this same city of Alexandria, with the sons of the regular (Advocates) having preference over supernumeraries in replacing vacancies (among the fifty). The Treasury Advocate, on retiring from office after two years, shall be rewarded, in consideration for his services, with the rank of ex-consular provincial governor; nor shall he lose the freedom and ability, when occasion demands, to provide legal representation not just for himself, but for his children, parents, wives, and collateral relatives up to the fourth degree. 1. But when a Treasury Advocate happens to die (in office), the next in rank shall without delay be substituted in his place, and the deceased's heirs should have no expectation of quae hactenus habuisse noscuntur, nec non his, quae suggestio tuae magnitudinis continet, etiam in posterum intactis inviolatisque servandis, quatenus huiusmodi delato eis liberalitate nostrae serenitatis honore possint in otio et tranquillitate reliquum tempus vitae suae peragere, nulla eis invitis sollicitudine ingerenda.

D. XIII k. Sept. Anthemio cons.

[14] Idem AA. Callicrati pp. Illyrici. Advocati, qui dirimunt ambigua fata causarum suaeque defensionis viribus in rebus saepe publicis ac privatis lapsa erigunt, fatigata reparant, non minus provident humano generi, quam si proeliis atque vulneribus patriam parentesque salvarent. nec enim solos nostro imperio militare credimus illos, qui gladiis clupeis et thoracibus nituntur, sed etiam advocatos: militant namque causarum patroni, qui gloriosae vocis confisi munimine laborantium spem vitam et posteros defendunt.

D. V k. April. Constantinopoli Zenone et Marciano conss.

[15] Imp. Leo A. Dioscoro pp. pr. Post duos fisci patronos, qui ex anterioribus constitutionibus isdem beneficiis muniuntur, sexaginta quattuor togatos, qui in praesenti sunt, a primo usque ad sexagesimum quartum imperialibus beneficiis perfrui censemus, quibus fisci patroni liberique eorum honorati sunt. 1. His quoque illud adiciendum esse statuimus, ut, si quis patronatus fisci adeptus gradum fatalem diem obierit, universa totius anni solacia, ex quo hoc idem officium peragere coeperit, ad heredes seu successores suos, sive liberi sive extranei fuerint, transmittendi tam ex testamento quam ab intestato liberam habeat facultatem.

D. XVII k. Iun. Constantinopoli Marciano cons.

[16] Impp. Leo iunior et Zeno AA. Iustiniano pu. Ad similitudinem sexaginta quattuor advocatorum fori amplissimae praetorianae praefecturae quindecim tantum ex foro tuae magnitudinis, qui in praesenti deriving any benefit therefrom (in the replacement process). All the privileges which they (the Treasury Advocates) are known to have had previously, as well as those mentioned in the report of Your Greatness, shall be preserved intact and inviolate thereafter, such that when such an honor (as being a Treasury Advocate) has been conferred on them by the generosity of Our Serenity, they can pass the rest of their days in leisure and peace, without any anxiety (of a public duty) being imposed on them against their wish.[66]

Given August 20, in the consulship of Anthemius (468).

[14] The same Augusti to Callicrates, Praetorian Prefect of Illyricum. Advocates untangle the doubtful outcomes of cases and, by the strength of their arguments in matters private and often public (as well), raise up the fallen (causes) and restore the weakened ones; they serve humanity no less than if they saved their country and kin by battles and wounds. We consider Our empire to be defended not only by those who depend upon their swords and shields and cuirasses, but by advocates as well. For trial lawyers also fight, and, relying upon the strength of their illustrious eloquence, they defend the hopes, the life, and the posterity of those in distress.

Given March 28, at Constantinople, in the consulship of Zeno and Marcian (469).

[15] Emperor Leo Augustus to Dioscorus, Praetorian Prefect. pr. We hold that the sixty-four lawyers currently next in rank below the two Treasury Advocates – who, according to earlier constitutions,[67] are endowed with equal rights – shall, from the first to the sixty-fourth, enjoy the (same) imperial benefits as those that honor the Treasury Advocates and their children. 1. We have decided that this (benefit) as well should be added for them, that anyone who reaches the rank of Treasury Advocate and dies (in office), shall have the unrestricted right to transmit to his heirs or successors, whether they be offspring or external heirs, and both by will as well as upon intestacy, the whole compensation of the entire year in which he began to fill this office.

Given May 16,[68] at Constantinople, in the consulship of Marcianus (472).

[16] Emperors Leo II and Zeno Augusti to Justinian, Urban Prefect. Like the sixty-four Advocates of the court of the splendid Praetorian Prefecture, fifteen advocates only from the court of Your Greatness, those who at present are first in rank after the Treasury Advocate, shall, through the favor of Our Clemency,

[66] Blume: "It is apparent from this [ordinance] that the membership of the guild of advocates ordinarily advanced from the lowest to the highest rank therein in regular order, doubtless according to the time of entrance in the guild ... It would seem from this and other laws in this title, that when an advocate had filled the position of advocate of the imperial exchequer, he ceased to have the right to practice law, except for certain relatives and close connections."

[67] See C. 2.7.10.

[68] More likely December 16 (Seeck).

gradus primos obtinent, post fisci videlicet patronum, isdem privilegiis nostrae mansuetudinis beneficio perfruantur, quibus fisci patroni liberique eorum muniuntur.

D. XVII k. April. Constantinopoli Leone iuniore A. cons.

[17] Idem AA. Paulo pp. per Illyricum. pr. Iubemus advocationem fori tui culminis in centum quinquaginta, sicut antea constitutum fuerat, advocatos concludi eundemque numerum, quotiens vel professionis fine vel morte vel quocumque casu fuerit imminutus, electione magnificae tuae sedis impleri, ita ut in praesenti quidem et hinc usque ad biennium ad plenitudinem supra definiti numeri subrogandi sine ulla cohortalis aut cuiuslibet deterioris condicionis quaestione succedant: salva videlicet adversus eos apparitionibus si qua competit actione, quam certum est, postquam fisci patronatus officio impleto exierint, evanescere: post lapsum vero biennium foro tuae magnificae potestatis inseri postulantes non aliter, nisi sub gestorum confectione minime eos cohortali condicioni subiacere patefactum fuerit, admittantur. 1. Cuncta sane privilegia, quae magnificae per Orientem praefecturae advocatis ex divinis retro principum seu inclitae recordationis Leonis vel nostris sanctionibus indulta sunt, tuae quoque gloriosissimae sedis causidicis absque ulla discretione competere per hanc in aeternum valituram legem sancimus.

[18] Οὐδεὶς ἐπιτιμᾷ τοῖς ἐν τάξει οὖσι δικολόγοις, εἰ μὴ μόνον ὁ τῶν πραιτωρίων ἔπαρχος.

[19] Μήτε παρά τινι τῶν ἀρχόντων μήτε παρὰ διαιτηταῖς δύο συνήγοροι διδαχθέντες ἀναβαλλέσθωσαν τὴν τοῦ πράγματος κρίσιν προφάσει τρίτου δικολόγου, ἀλλ' ἀνυπερθέτως τὴν δίκην δικολογείτωσαν οἱ δύο παρόντες.

D. VI k. Ian. Constantinopoli Longino cons.

enjoy the same privileges as are provided to the Treasury Advocates and their children, Given March 16, at Constantinople, in the consulship of the Emperor Leo II Augustus (474).

[17] The same Augusti to Paulus, Praetorian Prefect of Illyricum. pr. We order that the bar (advocatio) of the court of Your Highness shall consist of 150 advocates, as was settled previously.[69] Whenever this number is reduced through the ending of a career or by death or by any other cause, it shall be filled out by the selection of your magnificent office, as follows. Now and for the next two years, successors shall be appointed to keep this number filled, without inquiring as to whether they are subordinate officials (cohortales) or of some lower status; however, their (former) offices (apparationes) obviously retain a cause of action against them, if any exists, (a right) which, it is clear, terminates after they fill the post of Treasury Advocate and retire. But after the passage of two years (from now), those requesting to be placed (as Advocates) in the court of Your Magnificent Power shall not otherwise be admitted unless it is made clear from the public record that they in no way have the status of subordinate officials. 1. We ordain that the range of privileges granted to Advocates of the magnificent Prefecture of the East through the holy ordinances of former emperors and especially of Leo of blessed memory, or through our own ordinances, shall, pursuant to this eternally valid law, apply also to the pleaders at your glorious seat without distinction.

(474).

[18][70] No one except for the Praetorian Prefect shall impose a fine on the advocates belonging to the Order (of Advocates in his court?).

[19][71] Neither before any of the governors nor before judge arbitrators shall two advocates who are arrayed (on one side of a case) delay decision of the case on the excuse of a third advocate (being absent); rather, the two who are present shall plead the case without a continuance.

Given December 27, at Constantinople, in the consulship of Longinus (486).

[69] See C. 2.7.10; the present constitution also refers to 12, 13, and 8. Seeck assigns it to March 16, 474.

[70] The original texts of this and the following constitutions are lost; the translation is of paraphrases in the Basilika and its scholia (8.1.29–30). Compare 8 and 11 pr. above. Lounghis et al. date this constitution between 474 and 486.

[71] Possibly to be combined with the previous constitution and C. 1.51.13, 2.12.27, 3.3.6, 3.10.1, and 7.51.5; C. 1.51.13 and 7.51.5 have different dates, however.

[20] Imp. Anastasius A. Eusebio magistro officiorum. pr. Suggestionem viri illustris comitis privatarum et proconsulis Asiae duximus admittendam, per quam nostrae serenitatis auribus intimavit fori sui advocatos communi petitione magnopere postulasse, ut, postquam advocationis deposuerint officium, dignitate quadam nostra liberalitate potiantur. 1. Iubemus itaque post depositum, ut dictum est, praefatum officium unumquemque eorum, qui in praesenti sunt vel postea matriculis eorum pro tempore fuerint inserti, clarissimi primi ordinis comitis perfrui dignitate, quatenus et tempore quietis fructum praeteritorum laborum consequantur proque fide atque industria erga clientes suos comprobata privatae condicionis hominum multitudine segregati clarissimis merito connumerentur.

D. II k. Ian. Constantinopoli Anastasio A. II cons.

[21] Idem A. Thomae pp. per Illyricum. Advocatos amplissimae tuae sedis, qui pro tempore ad fisci patroni gradum et officium provehuntur, una cum liberis iam natis vel postea procreandis ab omni cohortalis seu cuiuslibet deterioris condicionis vinculo immunes ac liberos cum patrimonio suo conservari praecipimus, cum constet hoc iam pridem tam advocatis amplissimae praetorianae per Orientem quam magnificae urbicariae praefecturae sacris constitutionibus esse indultum, et non dubium sit non tantum eas, sed etiam sublimissimae tuae sedis germanas esse potestates.

D. XII k. Dec. Patricio et Hypatio conss.

[22] Idem A. Constantino pp. pr. Iubemus pro tempore primatem advocatorum fori viri illustris comitis Orientis per biennium fisci patroni fungi officio et solacia sibi communi consensu deputata per idem biennium consequi, hoc quoque transacto professionem advocationis deponere: consortio videlicet eorundem advocatorum ad quadraginta tantummodo viros redigendo, ita ut, si qui superflui sunt iam eidem consortio sociati, de advocationis officio minime reiciantur, nemine alio eis adiciendo, donec quadraginta virorum numerum advocatorum consortium excedere contingat.

1. Ad haec eos, qui, prout statutum est, fisci patroni deposuerint officium, postea quoque non prohiberi singulos tam pro se quam pro

[20] Emperor Anastasius Augustus to Eusebius, Master of Offices. pr. We hold that We should comply with the report of the vir illustris Count of the Privy Purse and the Proconsul of Asia, through which he has communicated to the ears of Our Serenity the earnest request of the Advocates of his court, by general petition, that through Our generosity they acquire some title after retiring from the position of Advocate. 1. We therefore order that after their retirement, as has been said, from the aforementioned position, each one of them who currently are or will in the future be enrolled from time to time in their register, shall enjoy the rank of clarissimus Count of the first class, so that they may both reap in retirement the fruit of their past labors and, in return for their proven fidelity and hard work for their clients, may be distinguished from the crowd of men of private station and justly numbered among the clarissimi.

Given December 31, at Constantinople, in the consulship of Anastasius Augustus, for the second time (497).

[21][72] The same Augustus to Thomas, Praetorian Prefect of Illyricum. We direct that the Advocates of your high office who from time to time are promoted to the rank and office of Treasury Advocate, together with their children already born or conceived hereafter, shall be kept immune and free, along with their property, from any bond (linking them to the rank) of a subordinate official (cohortalis) or anyone of lesser status. For it is clear that this (privilege) had long since been granted by imperial constitutions to the advocates of the glorious Prefecture of the Orient as well as those of the magnificent Urban Prefecture,[73] and there is no doubt that not only their powers but (also) those of your high seat derive from the same source (germanas).

Given November 20, in the consulship of Patricius and Hypatius (500).

[22] The same Augustus to Constantinus, Praetorian Prefect. pr. We order that the current leader (primas) of the Advocates of the court of the vir illustris Count of the East shall fill the office of Treasury Advocate for two years, and shall receive for (those) two years the salary assigned to it by general assent, and, after this term is finished, retire from his profession of advocacy. However, the Order (consortium) of these same Advocates shall be reduced to just forty men, as follows: if there are now associates of this Order in excess (of that number), they are not at all to be ejected from the function of advocacy; but no one shall be added to them as long as the number of Advocates happens to exceed forty.

1. In addition, those who, as has been ordained, retire from the office of Treasury Advocate, are not forbidden afterwards each to act as an advocate not [72] Combine with C. 2.4.43 (dated November 17), 7.39.5.

[73] See laws 8 and 17.1 above.

iugali sua et socero et socru nec non genero et nuru liberisque propriis, colonis et servis ad se pertinentibus advocationis fungi officio. 2. Nec aediculas eorum metatorum onere molestari, si tamen in una tantummodo suaque domo singuli talem praerogativam sibi vindicare maluerint. 3. Pro sportulis praeterea modum, quem notitia nobis porrecta declarat, tam pro his quam pro colonis et servis eorum custodiri, neminique praeberi licentiam eundem modum circa sportularum exactionem contra eos excedendi.

4. Nec de cetero quemquam, antequam per statuta tempora legum eruditioni noscatur inhaesisse, supra dicto consortio sociari. 5. Et filios advocatorum vel adhuc in tali constitutorum officio vel eorum, qui fisci patronatum deposuerunt, superstitum vel mortuorum, extraneis ad idem officium accedentibus anteponi eique gratis et sine sumptibus sociari, si et ipsi, prout dispositum est, solito tempore legum doctrinam meruerint.

6. Ut autem his, qui fisci patroni officium adepti sunt vel fuerint, non tantum superstitibus, sed etiam morte praeventis prospiciatur, tam ad heredes fisci patroni, qui semel ad talem gradum vocatus sit, solacia eius transire hisque servari, quam ipsos, qui fisci patronatum iam deposuerunt vel postea deposuerint, minime cuiuslibet actus publici sollicitudinem nolentes subire compelli nec exhibitionis seu deductionis onere nisi speciali auctoritate nostra molestari et in provincia incusandos per sententiam viri spectabilis comitis Orientis utpote competentis iudicis conveniri atque litigare decernimus.

D. k. Iul. Constantinopoli Sabiniano et Theodoro conss.

[23] Idem A. Eustathio pp. pr. Laudabile vitaeque hominum necessarium advocationis officium maxime principalibus praemiis oportet remunerari. 1. Ideoque iubemus viros clarissimos fisci pro tempore patronos fori tuae celsitudinis sollemni die festivitatis kalendarum Ianuariarum ipsius tantummodo anni, per quem tale peragunt officium, inter spectabiles sacri nostri consistorii comites divina nostrae serenitatis manu puncti consequi solacium. 2. Et postquam tale deposuerint officium, si quidem filios ingenuos habeant, eos clarissimorum notariorum inseri consortio tribunorum, sacras solitas epistulas sine quadam suffragii solutione percepturos.

only for himself but for his wife, father- and mother-in-law, son- and daughter-in-law, and their children, and the bound tenants (coloni) and slaves belonging to him. 2. Their homes shall not be burdened with quartering soldiers (metata), provided they each wish to claim this privilege for only one house of their own. 3. Further, as to judicial fees (sportulae), the amount mentioned in the schedule that was presented to Us shall be observed in their case as well as in that of their bound tenants and slaves, and no one shall be given permission to exceed that quantity in exacting fees from them.[74]

4. Nor in the future shall anyone become a member of the above-mentioned Order before he is known to have applied himself to the study of law for the prescribed time. 5. The sons of Advocates – both of those still in this office and those who have retired as Treasury Advocates, whether surviving or dead – shall have preference over outsiders seeking entrance to this same office, and they shall become members free and without expense, provided that they too, as has been directed, gain instruction in the law in the customary time.

6. In order to provide for those who have attained or will attain the office of Treasury Advocate – not only the living, but also those cut off by death – We direct that not only shall the (unpaid) salary of a Treasury Advocate, once he has been called to that position, go to and be preserved for his heirs, but also that those who have already retired or who will retire from the office of Treasury Advocate shall in no way be compelled unwillingly to undertake the vexation of any public duty, nor, except by Our special authorization, be troubled with the burden of appearing in or being summoned before (any other court), but must be accused in (their own) province, and be sued and litigate, according to the verdict of the vir spectabilis Count of the East as the (only) appropriate judge.

Given July 1, at Constantinople, in the consulship of Sabinianus and Theodorus (505).

[23] The same Augustus to Eustathius, Praetorian Prefect. pr. The office of Advocate is a praiseworthy one, necessary to human life, and it should be highly recompensed with imperial rewards. 1. We therefore order that the viri clarissimi acting Treasury Advocates at the court of Your Highness shall receive, on the solemn New Year's Day celebration only in that year when they perform this office, and in the presence of the spectabiles Counts of Our Imperial Council, gifts[75] from the blessed hand of Our Serenity. 2. And after they lay down this office, their free-born sons, if they have any, shall be enrolled in the Order of Tribunes of the clarissimi Notaries, and shall receive the customary imperial letters patent without paying a recommendation fee (suffragium).

[74] On quartering, see C. 12.40; on sportulae, C. 3.2.

[75] Puncti solacia. The meaning is uncertain and the reading has been questioned.

3. Et si quis per sententiam sublimitatis tuae monitus super agnito debito vel agnita causa, quae ingeritur ei, confessionem exponere paratus sit, eam non arbitro delegato, sed tunc temporis fisci patronis vel alterutri eorum, si alter adesse non possit, pro more tamen solito sub actorum testificatione intimari. 4. Quotiensque de nuptiis quis sine dotalibus instrumentis mutuo contrahendi matrimonium animo celebratis super adfectu suo, liberis ex huiusmodi coniugio iam extantibus vel necdum procreatis, legitimis adlegationibus uti maluerit, eas apud eosdem pro tempore fisci patronos vel alterutrum, ut dictum est, eorum gestis intervenientibus commendari, ita videlicet, ut iuri cognitae adlegationes absentibus personis, si quae competunt, serventur intactae. 5. His insuper, quicumque apud viros gloriosos pro tempore consules mancipia sua libertate donare voluerint, antelatos fisci patronos ad easdem libertates peragendas propriam advocationis vocem accommodare: 6. Aliis nihilo minus privilegiis, quae iam pridem memoratis vel fisci patronis vel adhuc advocationis pro tempore peragentibus officium togatis diversis modis indulta sunt, ex hac etiam sanctione nostra in sua stabilitate duraturis.

D. XII k. Dec. Constantinopoli Areobindo et Messala conss.

[24] Idem A. Sergio pp. pr. Petitiones virorum disertissimorum fori praesidalis secundae Syriae provinciae advocatorum cum competenti moderatione censuimus admittendas et iubemus pro tempore primatem eorum per biennium fisci patroni fungi officio et solacia sibi communi consensu deputata per idem biennium consequi hocque transacto professionem advocationis deponere: consortio videlicet eorundem advocatorum ad triginta tantummodo viros redigendo, ita ut, si qui superflui sunt iam eidem consortio sociati, de advocationis officio minime reiciantur, nemine alio eis adiciendo, donec triginta virorum numerum advocatorum excedere consortium contingat.

1. Ad haec eos, qui, prout statutum est, fisci patroni deposuerint officium, postea quoque non prohiberi singulos tam pro se quam pro iugali sua et socero et socru nec non genero et nuru liberisque propriis, colonis et servis ad se pertinentibus advocationis fungi officio. 2. Nec aediculas eorum metatorum nomine molestari, si tamen in una tantummodo

3. If anyone is cited by verdict of Your Sublimity concerning an acknowledged debt or lawsuit brought against him, and he is ready to enter a confession,[76] this matter shall not be referred to a delegated judge arbitrator (arbiter delegatus), but (instead) to the acting Treasury Advocates, or to one of them if the other cannot attend, with a record made of what passes, in accord with usual custom. 4. With regard to a marriage entered into without dowry documents but with a mutual intent to contract marriage on the basis of their affection (super adfectu suo), whether there are now living children from this union or they are not yet conceived, whenever he (the husband) wishes to make legal declarations (of marriage), these (declarations) shall be executed before the acting Treasury Advocates, or one of them as has been said, by making this a matter of judicial record; but the legally recognized claims of absent persons, if there are any eligible, remain in full force, obviously. 5. Furthermore, to whoever wishes to grant freedom to his slaves before the then serving glorious Consuls, the esteemed Treasury Advocates are to be approached first in order to lend the voice of their advocacy for executing such manumissions. 6. Nevertheless, all other privileges which in various ways are now long since granted to the aforementioned Treasury Advocates or to Advocates still acting in this role, shall also, by virtue of this Our ordinance as well, remain in full force.

Given November 20, at Constantinople, in the consulship of Areobindus and Messala (506).

[24] The same Augustus to Sergius, Praetorian Prefect. pr. We have decided that the petitions from the learned Advocates of the governor's court of the second Syrian province should be granted, with due limitation.[77] We order that their acting leader (primas) shall fill the office of Treasury Advocate for two years, and shall receive for (those) two years the salary assigned to it by general assent, and, after this term is finished, retire from his profession of advocacy. However, the Order of these same Advocates shall be reduced to just thirty men, as follows: if there are now associates of this Order in excess (of that number), they are not at all to be ejected from the function of advocacy; but no one shall be added to them as long as the number of Advocates happens to exceed thirty.

1. In addition, those who, as has been ordained, retire from the office of Treasury Advocate, afterwards are not forbidden each to act as an advocate not only for himself but for his wife, father- and mother-in-law, son- and daughter-in-law, and their children, and the bound tenants (coloni) and slaves belonging to him. 2. Their homes shall not be burdened with quartering soldiers (metata), provided they each wish to claim this privilege only for one house of their own.

[76] See C. 7.39.7.5a. Blume: "Note that the fiscal advocates could make public records."
[77] The following provisions are adopted almost verbatim from C. 2.7.22 above.

suaque domo singuli talem praerogativam sibi vindicare maluerint. 3. Pro sportulis praeterea modum, quem notitia nobis porrecta declarat, tam pro his quam pro colonis et servis eorum custodiri, neminique praeberi licentiam eundem modum circa sportularum exactionem contra eos excedendi.

4. Nec de cetero quemquam, antequam per statuta tempora legum eruditioni noscatur inhaesisse, supra dicto consortio sociari. 5. Et filios advocatorum vel adhuc in tali constitutorum officio vel eorum, qui fisci patronatum deposuerunt, superstitum vel mortuorum, extraneis ad idem officium accedentibus anteponi eique gratis et sine sumptibus sociari, si et ipsi, prout dispositum est, solito tempore legum doctrinam meruerint.

6. Ut autem his, qui fisci patroni officium adepti sunt vel fuerint, non tantum superstitibus, sed etiam morte praeventis prospiciatur, tam ad heredes fisci patroni, qui semel ad talem gradum vocatus sit, solacia eius transire hisque servari, quam ipsos, qui fisci patronatum iam deposuerunt vel postea deposuerint, minime cuiuslibet actus publici sollicitudinem nolentes subire compelli nec exhibitionis seu deductionis onere, nisi speciali auctoritate nostra molestari et in provincia incusandos per sententias viri clarissimi provinciam in qua degunt moderantis, utpote competentis iudicis, conveniri atque litigare decernimus.

D. k. Dec. Anastasio et Agapito conss.

[25] Imp. Iustinus A. Marino pp. pr. Restituendae sunt clarissimis eloquentiae luminibus sexaginta auri librae, quas sub imperio Zenonis divae memoriae pedaneis deputatas arbitris nec non fideiussorum vires aestimantibus, tamen auferendas credidit parca posterioris subtilitas principis, ut iam liberalitate nostri numinis viri clarissimi fisci patroni praefatam auri summam sine fraude annis singulis consequantur, ab amplissima tua sede pari lance in utrumque dividendam. nam universis redditur, quod pro voto omnium primatibus indulgetur.

1. Sacras insuper epistulas, quibus adprobantur viri clarissimi tribuni praetoriani et notarii, non unius[v] tantum nomine, sed alterius quoque unius praestandas perspicimus, sive suos filios sive quos alios duxerint illustrandos. 2. Ad haec altiore beneficio codicillos, quibus illustris honoratur dignitas, consequantur, quos unius solum nomine eisdem viris facundissimis daturos nos pollicemur profuturos scilicet alteri eorum

[v] [unius]

3. Further, as to judicial fees (sportulae), the amount mentioned in the schedule that was presented to Us shall be observed in their case as well as in that of their bound tenants and slaves, and no one shall be given permission to exceed that quantity in exacting fees from them.

4. Nor in the future shall anyone become a member of the above-mentioned Order before he is known to have applied himself to the study of law for the prescribed time. 5. The sons of Advocates – both of those still in this office and those who have retired as Treasury Advocates, whether surviving or dead – shall have preference over outsiders seeking entrance to this same office, and they shall become members free and without expense, provided that they too, as has been directed, gain instruction in the law.

6. In order to provide for those who have attained or will attain the office of Treasury Advocate – not only the living, but also those cut off by death – We direct that not only shall the (unpaid) salary of a Treasury Advocate, once he has been called to that position, go to and be preserved for his heirs, but also that those who have already retired or who will retire from the office of Treasury Advocate shall in no way be compelled unwillingly to undertake the nuisance of any public duty, nor, except by Our special authorization, be troubled with the burden of appearing in or being summoned before (any other court), but must be accused in (their own) province, and be sued and litigate, according to the verdict of the vir clarissimus governor of the province in which they live, as the (only) appropriate judge.

Given December 1, in the consulship of Anastasius and Agapitus (517).

[25] Emperor JUSTIN Augustus to Marinus, Praetorian Prefect. pr. To the clarissimi luminaries of eloquence (the Treasury Advocates), there shall be restored the 60 pounds of gold that, in the reign of Zeno of blessed memory, were assigned to delegated judge advocates (arbitri pedanei) and to those examining the resources of sureties,[78] but from which the obsessive stinginess of a subsequent emperor deemed it best to deprive them. Now, through the generosity of Our Divine Majesty, the viri clarissimi Treasury Advocates shall, without evasion, receive each year the aforesaid sum, which is to be divided equally between the two by your high office. For whatever is bestowed on their leaders by the wishes of all, is (then) returned to all.

1. In addition, we provide that they be given imperial letters patent by which the viri clarissimi Praetorian Tribune and Notaries are confirmed (in their office), not just in the name of one (Treasury Advocate), but also in that of the other, whether they decide to honor their own sons or some others. 2. In addition, by a still greater favor, let them receive the diplomas (codicilli) honoring their illustrious rank – which we promise to grant to these eloquent men (the [78] See C. 3.3.6 (where Zeno's constitution is lost). Anastasius had removed this benefit.

altero concedente, seu qui[vi] ex provinciis suis vel ex amicis voluerint, in provinciis tamen degentibus.

3. Licentiam eis praeterea facimus binos homines annis singulis itidem offerendi nostram adoraturos purpuram, statutis inserendos praesentalibus domesticis, unum equitum, alterum scholae peditum, in vacantem eorum locum, qui defuncti sunt, nullo, dum supererant, de militia venumdanda pacto cum eis interposito, quorum eiusmodi conventiones intersunt, ita tamen, ut idem viri facundissimi, cum offerendos eosdem crediderint homines, bina solidorum pro singulis millia nihilque amplius noverint dependenda viris magnificis comitibus dicatissimorum domesticorum, id est equitum quidem pro eo, qui inter equites merit*urus* est, peditum autem pro eo, qui inter pedites inserendus est: solitis videlicet statim stipendiis nec non ceteris solaciis isdem tironibus deputandis sine quolibet alio dispendio.

4. Aliis etiam privilegiis potiantur, quae diversis temporibus consecuti sunt sive per augustos apices seu dispositiones et sententias amplissimae tuae sedis. nam qui novis digni iudicati sunt, ii multo magis in anterioribus quoque sunt adiuvandi.

D. k. Dec. Constantinopoli ipso A. et Eutherico conss.

[26] Idem A. Theodoro pu. pr. Per hanc legem decernimus, ne, antequam in octuaginta tantum virorum numerum fori tui culminis togatorum collegium deductum fuerit, adspirare quis qualibet arte concedatur aut possit, nisi vel eorum filii, qui triginta priorum obtinent numerum, facundiae studiis eruditi, gratis videlicet et sine ullo suffragio, aut fortasse exteri non ultra duos per annos singulos, facundia et ipsi conspicui taxati fuerint: nullo deinceps, postquam in octuaginta virorum numerum redacti fuerint, superare qualibet rursus ambitione vel astutia quantitatem ausuro.

1. Interdicenda quoque cunctis licentia praevertendi progressus seriem, quam ipsius temporis ordo suppeditat, et ut in mercatorum contractibus loca permutandi et adhuc tirones iam interesse veteribus.

2. Hoc etiam pronuntiandum censemus, ne quis ex his in aliis degat regionibus relicta observatione glorificae tuae sedis. noverint etenim,

[vi] [qui] <cui>

Treasury Advocates) in the name of one only, but to be of use to either with the other's consent, or to anyone from their provinces or from among their friends if residing in the provinces.

3. Further, we give them the power to present each year two men apiece, to do obeisance to Our Purple and to be enrolled in the established number of the palace guards (praesentales domestici),[79] one in the corps (schola) of cavalry and the other in that of infantry, in the vacant place of those who died – provided that, while they (the dead guards) lived, they made no agreement for sale of their place to those interested in such agreements, and provided that these same eloquent men know that, when they see fit to present the men, 2,000 solidi, and no more, must be paid for each to the viri magnifici Counts of the Devoted Household, i.e., (to the Count) of the cavalry for the one who will serve in the cavalry, as well as (to the Count) of the infantry for the one who will be enrolled among the infantry. The customary stipend and other compensations are to be assigned to these recruits without any further expense.

4. They (the Treasury Advocates) shall also have the other privileges they have obtained at various times, either by imperial letters (apices augusti) or by the orders and direction of your high office. For those deemed worthy of new (honors) are all the more to be aided in (retaining) earlier ones.

Given December 1, at Constantinople, in the consulship of the Augustus and Euthericus (519).

[26] The same Augustus to Theodorus, Urban Prefect. pr. By this statute we decree that until the College of Advocates (collegium togatorum) of the court of Your Highness has been reduced to eighty men in number, no one by any contrivance shall be allowed or be able to aspire (to join it), except the sons of the first thirty in rank (if they are) trained in the study of advocacy, (and they are to be admitted) free and without paying a recommendation fee (suffragium); or, perhaps, not more than two outsiders per year, they too being found outstanding in advocacy. After they have reduced the number to 80, no one shall again dare to increase the total by some collusion or contrivance.

1. Permission is removed from them as a group to invert the order of precedence from that given by the sequence of time itself (i.e., by seniority), and (thereby), as in merchants' contracts, to trade places, so as to place novices among the veterans.

2. We also deem it proper to make known that none of them shall abstain from appearance at your glorious court and live in other areas. Let them know that if anyone, after being named a trial advocate, sees fit to live away from this qui post nomen impetratum patroni litium ultra trium annorum spatium ex sacratissima hac urbe morandum duxerit, nec nuncupationem togati nec privilegia virorum eiusmodi concedenda sibi, ut nec repetitis ex industria praedictae sedis auctoritatibus protrahatur aut multiplicetur peregrinationis excursus.

[79] See C. 12.17.

3. Quorum omnium si quid vel minimum quocumque tempore fuerit violatum, viginti primates eiusdem ordinis et qui pro tempore sollicitudinem ab actis in amplitudinis tuae gerent officio, adiutores etiam eorum denis singuli libris auri ferientur, quod adversus imperialia consulta serenitatis nostrae tendentibus non statim obiecerint intercessionem legis praesentis aut non restiterint et omni nisu prohibuerint, ne quid temptetur contrarium: cum nec in administratores sublimissimae tuae sedis, si non intente custodierint disposita salutaria et, ut non temerentur, prospexerint, poena deerit decem auri librarum.

4. Sescenti autem aurei, quibus pro tempore fisci patronus fori tuae celsitudinis ad exemplum priorum temporum ex arca tui iudicii consolatur, ne post decursum celerem advocationis et labores gloriosos egenus exeat, non, ut saepe contigit, incerto die praestentur, sed cum[vii] medium iter pervenerint patrocinii rerum fiscalium, id est kalendis Octobribus, per annos singulos sine cunctatione solventur.

5. Quidquid insuper privilegiorum retro principum sacris adfatibus vel auctoritate tribunalis cuius interest huic eidem ordini datum ostenditur, inviolatum servari.

6. Cumque lite quisquam eorum pulsatus fuerit seu civilis causae[viii] certaminis aut criminalis quaestionis obtentu, hic vel in provinciis, cum per concessum tempus eorum adesse quemquam evenit, nullos exsecutores sportulas adsequi nec, qui controversiis movendis inserviunt aut excipiendo seu praeparando vel officio quolibet alio, quocumque nomine sumptum exigendum censere.

D. id. Febr. Constantinopoli Iustino A. II et Opilione conss.

[27] Idem A. Archelao pp. Nemo excepta Menandri fisci patroni persona speret de cetero permutationum saltibus superiore gradu captato fruiturum se beneficiis, quae patronis aerarii seu dum officium exhibent causis fiscalibus aut post expletum agmen impertita monstrantur.

D. XII k. Sept. Iustino A. II et Opilione conss.

[vii] cum <ad>
[viii] causa

Imperial City for more than three years, he shall be allowed neither the title of Advocate nor the privileges of these men, in order that trips abroad not be prolonged or multiplied through incessantly renewed leaves of absence (auctoritates) from the aforesaid court.

3. If at any time any of these provisions are violated even slightly, the twenty leaders (primates) of this Order (of Advocates), as well as those in the office of Your Magnificence who for the present exercise care for official records (ab actis) along with their assistants, shall each be penalized by (a fine of) 10 pounds of gold because they did not immediately interpose this law against those acting contrary to the imperial decrees of Our Serenity, or they did not resist and use every effort to prevent an attempted violation. Also if the administrators (the Urban Prefects) of Your Sublime Seat do not zealously guard these wholesome provisions and see to it that they are not violated, a fine of 10 pounds of gold will not be lacking against them.

4. The 600 aurei which, on the pattern of former times, the acting Treasury Advocate in the court of Your Highness receives as salary from the coffers of your tribunal in order that he not depart penniless after the swift completion of his advocacy and his glorious labors, shall not be paid, as often happens, on some indefinite date; rather, when they complete half their term as Treasury Advocate, i.e., on October 1, the money shall be paid each year without delay.

5. Whatever additional privileges are shown to have been given to this Order by the sacred rescripts of prior emperors or by the authority of the relevant tribunal (of the Urban Prefect) shall be preserved inviolate.

6. And when one of them is sued either because of a private dispute or on the pretext of a criminal investigation, whether here or in the provinces when any of them happens to be there during the permitted time, no process servers (exsecutores) shall receive fees (sportulae). Nor shall those who assist in setting litigation in motion, either by drafting or by preparing or in any other duty, consider demanding fees on any account.

Given February 13, at Constantinople, in the consulship of Justin Augustus, for the second time, and Opilio (524).

[27] The same Augustus to Archelaus, Praetorian Prefect. With the exception of the Treasury Advocate Menander, let no one (in the future) hope that if he has reached a higher grade (in the Order of Advocates) by cunning leaps and changes of place, he will enjoy the benefits ordained as accorded to Treasury Advocates, either while they are lending their services to Treasury cases or after completing their career.

Given August 21, in the consulship of Justin Augustus, for the second time, and Opilio (524).

[28] Ὁ αὐτὸς βασιλεύς. ...

[29] Imp. Iustinianus A. Iohanni pp. pr. De constitutione divinae recordationis Iustini patris nostri super togatis amplissimae tuae sedis prolata Illyriciani advocati postulaverunt a nobis eis clarum fieri, si locum etiam circa eos possit habere, sive cum commeatu sive sine commeatu iudicio eiusdem sublimitatis afuerint. 1. Sancimus itaque talem legem generaliter in persona eorum tenere, ut, si quis sine commeatu ultra continuum biennium afuerit vel cum commeatu ultra quinquennium, de matricula penitus aboleatur: nulla licentia ei danda gradum suum vindicare nec iterum viris disertissimis togatis eiusdem sedis adsistere. perfruantur igitur advocati eiusdem sublimitatis hac nostra generali sanctione.

VIII De Advocatis Fisci

[1] Imp. Antoninus A. Claudio. Cum te fisci causam agitasse proponas, quamvis te salarium percepisse neges, tamen placitis adquiesce. eos enim, qui causam fisci egissent, prohibitum est adversus fiscum patrocinium praestare.

PP. XIII k. Ian. Antonino A. IIII et Balbino conss.

[2] Impp. Valerianus et Gallienus AA. Frequenti. Potes auctoribus nobis adversus fiscum quoque patrocinium exhibere privatis, dum eam scilicet causam, quam tu, cum fisci advocatus fueras, forte tractasti, suscipere declines.

PP. VI k. Mart. Valeriano II et Gallieno AA. conss.

[3] Imp. Constantinus A. Aeliano proconsuli Africae. Fisci advocatus poenam metuens caveat, ne fiscalia commoda occultet neve nullo negotio existente fisci nomine privatis audeat calumnias commovere.

[28][80] <The same Augustus ...>

[29] Emperor Justinian Augustus to John, Praetorian Prefect. pr. With regard to the constitution of Our father Justin of blessed memory, enacted concerning the Advocates of Your High Court, the Society of Advocates (advocatio) of Illyricum have requested Us to clarify for them whether it can also apply to them if they are absent with or without authorized leave (commeatus) from the court of Your Sublimity. 1. Accordingly, We ordain that this law applies generally in their case (to the Advocates), such that if anyone is absent without leave for more than two straight years, or with leave for more than five, he shall be wholly stricken from the register (matricula). He shall not be given permission to claim his position, or again to assist the learned advocates of that court. Therefore let the advocates of Your Sublimity fully enjoy this Our general ordinance.

(531–534).

Eighth Title The Treasury Advocates[81]

[1] Emperor Antoninus Augustus to Claudius. Because you state that you pursued a case on behalf of the Treasury (fiscus), even though you deny receiving a stipend (for this service), still you must obey the rules: those who plead a Treasury case are forbidden to offer representation against the Treasury.

Posted December 20, in the consulship of Antoninus Augustus, for the fourth time, and Balbinus[82] (213).

[2] Emperors Valerian and Gallienus Augusti to Frequens. With our permission you can provide legal representation to private persons (who bring cases) against the Treasury as well, as long as you decline to take a case that you happen to have conducted while you were a Treasury Advocate.

Posted February 24, in the consulship of Valerian, for the second time, and Gallienus, Augusti (254).

[3][83] Emperor Constantine Augustus to Aelianus, Procounsul of Africa. Under pain of punishment, the Treasury Advocate must avoid covering up financial advantages to the Treasury and (on the other hand) daring to raise vexatious litigation (calumnia) in the Treasury's name against private individuals when there is no actual (legal) basis.

[80] A Greek constitution of Justin concerning the Advocates of the Eastern Prefecture is lost here, but it is referred to in the next one. The two laws had similar content. Lounghis et al. date this constitution to April 6, 529.

[81] Advocati fisci, a main subject of the previous title as well.

[82] Actually for the second time.

[83] = C.Th. 10.15.1; combine with C. 10.19.1, 12.61.1 (where the constitution adds that it was accepted at Carthage on February 15, 315), and C.Th. 1.12.1, 9.34.3 (AD 320), 11.1.2.

D. VI id. Nov. Treviris Constantino A. III et Licinio C. III conss.

[4] Imppp. Gratianus Valentinianus et Theodosius AAA. ad Ammianum comitem rerum privatarum. Rationales privatae rei causis vel sacri aerarii praesidentes examen praesente fisci advocato suscipiant.

PP. XVII k. Ian. Merobaude II et Saturnino conss.

VIIII De Errore Advocatorum vel Libellos seu Preces Concipientium

[1] Imp. Alexander A. Aureliae. Ea, quae advocati praesentibus his quorum causae aguntur adlegant, perinde habenda sunt, ac si ab ipsis dominis litium proferantur.

PP. k. Mart. Albino et Maximo conss.

[2] Imp. Gordianus A. Rogato militi. Errores eorum, qui desideria (id est preces) scribunt, veritati praeiudicium adferre non posse manifestum est. et ideo si condemnationem, cuius mentionem libello insertam esse proponis, manifeste probare potes non intercessisse, adlegationes tuas laedi non oportere is, qui super negotio disceptaturus est, non ignorat.

PP. X k. Iul. Pio et Pontiano conss.

[3] Impp. Diocletianus et Maximianus AA. et CC. Ulpiae. Sententiis finita negotia rescriptis revocari non oportet. nec enim quae constituta sunt, ut advocatorum error litigatoribus non noceat, tibi etiam opitulari possunt, cum te praesentem neque causae palam ex continenti, id est triduo proximo, contradixisse neque post sententiam appellationis remedio, si tibi haec displicebat, usam proponas.

D. VI k. Sept. Viminacii CC. conss.

Given November 8, at Trier, in the consulship of Constantine Augustus, for the third time, and the Caesar Licinius, for the third time (313).[84]

[4][85]Emperors GRATIAN, VALENTINIAN, and THEODOSIUS Augusti to Ammianus, Count of the Privy Purse. The Comptrollers (rationales) who preside in cases involving the Privy Purse (res privata) or the Imperial Treasury (aerarium sacrum) shall inquire into a case in the presence of the Treasury Advocate.

Posted December 16, in the consulship of Merobaudes, for the second time, and Saturninus (383).

Ninth Title A Mistake by Advocates or by Those Drawing Up Complaints and Supplications

[1] Emperor ALEXANDER Augustus to Aurelia. Whatever advocates allege in the presence of those whose cases they are conducting is to be considered the same as if stated by the litigants themselves.

Posted March 1, in the consulship of Albinus and Maximus (227).

[2] Emperor GORDIAN Augustus to Rogatus, a soldier. The mistakes of those drawing up requests, i.e., prayers (to the Emperor), obviously cannot prejudice the truth. So if you can clearly prove that the judicial condemnation, which you say was mentioned in your petition (libellus), never took place, the person who will determine the matter is not unaware that your allegations should not be harmed (i.e., undermined by the mistake).

Posted June 22, in the consulship of Pius and Pontianus (238).

[3] Emperors DIOCLETIAN and MAXIMIAN Augusti and the Caesars to Ulpia. Litigation that is ended by verdicts (i.e., final decisions) should not be reopened through rescripts. For the recognized rule that the mistake of their advocates does not injure litigants cannot help you, since you state that you were present (when the mistake was made), did not object at the time (ex continenti), i.e., within the next three days, and after the decision, if it displeased you, did not resort to the remedy of appeal.

Given August 27, at Viminacium, in the consulship of the Caesars (294).

84 Licinius was actually co-Emperor.
85 = C.Th. 11.30.41.

X Ut Quae Desunt Advocationi Partium Iudex Suppleat

[1] Impp. Diocletianus et Maximianus AA. ad Honoratum. Non dubitandum est iudici, si quid a litigatoribus vel ab his qui negotiis adsistunt minus fuerit dictum, id supplere et proferre, quod sciat legibus et iuri publico convenire.

S. XVI k. Mart. Diocletiano IIII et Maximiano III AA. conss.

XI De Causis, ex Quibus Infamia Alicui Inrogatur

[1] Impp. Severus et Antoninus AA. Manilio. Infamiae detrimentum minime tibi adfertur ob id solum, quod in carcerem coniectus es vel vincula tibi iussu legitimi iudicis iniecta sunt.

PP. sine die et consule.

[2] Idem AA. Verennio. Neque furti neque vi bonorum raptorum neque peculatus damnatus intellegi potest, qui, cum plus debiti nomine tributorum exegisset, in duplum a praeside condemnatus est.

PP. V id. Ian. Laterano et Rufino conss.

[3] Idem AA. Metrodoro. Etsi severior sententia dici debuit, tamen, cum proconsul vir clarissimus certis rationibus motus mitiorem sententiam dixerit et ordine decurionum te biennio abstinere iussit, transacto tempore non esse te in numero infamium palam est eo, quod ἐξ ἀντιδιαστολῆς post biennium remisisse tibi prohibitionem decurionatus iudex videtur.

PP. X k. Ian. Laterano et Rufino conss.

[4] Impp. Severus et Antoninus AA. Venustiano. Si Posidonium in tempus anni relegatum secundum sententiam non excessisse proconsulis

Tenth Title A Judge Shall Supply What the Advocates for Parties Omit

[1] Emperors DIOCLETIAN and MAXIMIAN Augusti to Honoratus. It should not be doubted that if anything is left unsaid by the litigants or by those assisting in (the conduct of) a trial (adsessores), the judge is to supply and bring forward what he knows to be in conformity with statutes and public law.

Given February 14, in the consulship of Diocletian, for the fourth time, and Maximian, for the third time, Augusti (290).

Eleventh Title For What Reason Infamy Will Be Visited on a Person[86]

[1][87] Emperors SEVERUS and ANTONINUS Augusti to Manilius. You will certainly not be visited with the burden of infamy (infamia) solely because you were thrown into prison or placed into chains by order of a lawful judge.

Posted without date or consul.

[2] The same Augusti to Verennius. A man cannot be understood as condemned for theft or robbery or embezzlement of public funds when he collected in taxes more than was owed and was condemned by a governor to pay double (the excess).[88]

Posted January 9, in the consulship of Lateranus and Rufinus (197).

[3] The same Augusti to Metrodorus. Although a harsher verdict should have been rendered, nonetheless the vir clarissimus Proconsul, influenced by definite reasons, imposed a milder verdict and ordered your exclusion from the order of decurions for two years. When this time has elapsed it is clear that you are not counted as one of the infamous. Au contraire, the judge seems to have released you from being excluded from the decurionate after the expiration of two years.[89]

Posted December 23, in the consulship of Lateranus and Rufinus (197).

[4] Emperors SEVERUS and ANTONINUS Augusti to Venustianus. If you prove that Posidonius, who was relegated for a year, did not (in fact) leave in accord [86] Infamia, legal infamy, resulted in various legal disabilities that were especially threatening to members of the upper classes. See D. 3.2.

[87] = C. Greg. 1.3.1, attributing the rescript to Severus alone.

[88] See C. 10.20.1.

[89] Blume: "The infamy attached to the sentence in the instant case lasted only as long as the party sentenced was debarred from [his] position. In some cases a sentence carried perpetual, in other, temporary, infamy."

probaveris, quinque annis exilio temporario damnandum inter infames haberi non oportet, quando sententiae severitas cum ceteris damnis transigere videatur.

PP. VI k. Mart. Saturnino et Gallo conss.

[5] Idem AA. Ambrosio. Decuriones quidem, item filios decurionum fustibus castigari prohibitum est: verum si iniuriam te fecisse proconsul vir clarissimus pronuntiavit, ignominia notatus es.

PP. k. Iul. Saturnino et Gallo conss.

[6] Idem AA. Iusto. Ad tempus in opus publicum dati pristinum quidem statum retinent, sed damno infamiae et post impletum tempus subiciuntur.

PP. VII id. Dec. Geta et Plautiano conss.

[7] Imp. Antoninus A. Demetrio. Nemo ob id, quod bonis paternis se abstinuit, infamis est.

PP. V id. Ian. Antonino A. et Geta utrisque II conss.

[8] Idem A. Ulpiae. Furti si condemnata es, citra verbera quoque fustium famae damnum subiisti. quod si res furtiva, quam alter subripuit apud te ignorantem comperta est, non laesit existimationem tuam sententia durior.

PP. X k. Mart. Antonino A. et Geta utrisque II conss.

[9] Idem A. Laeto. Neminem sequitur infamia ob defensa negotia publica patriae suae.

PP. XII k. Mart. Antonino A. et Geta utrisque III conss.

[10] Idem A. Severo. Iniuriarum ex persona quoque servi damnatus infamia notatur.

PP. IIII k. Aug. isdem conss.

with the Proconsul's decision, (although) he is to be condemned to a temporary exile for five years, he should not be numbered among the infamous since the harshness of the sentence, with the other losses, seems to effect a "settlement" (transigere).[90]

Posted February 24, in the consulship of Saturninus and Gallus (198).

[5] The same Augusti to Ambrosius. It is indeed forbidden to punish decurions and their sons with rods. But if the vir clarissimus Proconsul has adjudged you guilty of a (the deliberate delict of) outrage (iniuria), you are branded with infamy.

Posted July 1, in the consulship of Saturninus and Gallus (198).

[6] The same Augusti to Justus. Persons who are sentenced for a time to (performance of) public works retain their former (legal) status, to be sure, but are subjected to the disability of infamy even after the time expires.

Posted December 7, in the consulship of Geta and Plautianus (203).

[7] Emperor ANTONINUS Augustus to Demetrius. No one is infamous (simply) because he refrains from (accepting as an heir) his father's estate.

Posted January 9, in the consulship of Antoninus Augustus and Geta, each for the second time[91] (205).

[8] The same Augustus to Ulpia. If you were condemned for theft (although) without (being subjected to) a beating with rods, you underwent loss of reputation (i.e., became infamous). But if the stolen property was stolen by a third party and found on your property, and you were unaware of it, the rather severe sentence did no harm to your reputation.[92]

Posted February 20, in the consulship of the Emperor Antoninus and Geta, both for the second time (205).

[9] The same Augustus to Laetus. No one becomes infamous for having defended public lawsuits of his native city.

Posted February 18, in the consulship of Antoninus Augustus and Geta, both for the third time (208).

[10] The same Augustus to Severus. A person condemned for outrage (iniuria) inflicted also on a slave (belonging to another) is branded with infamy.[93]

Posted July 29, in the same consulship (208).

[90] Compare D. 3.2.13.7.

[91] Geta was actually for the first time. So also in 8 below.

[92] Under older Roman law, anyone on whose real property a stolen object was found was liable to its owner for three times the value of the stolen property: Gaius, 3.186, 191.

[93] See Gaius, 3.222; Ulpian, D. 47.10.1.3, 15.34.

[11] Imp. Alexander A. Irenaeo. Debitores qui bonis cesserint, licet ex ea causa bona eorum venierint, infames non fiunt.

PP. x k. Maias Maximo II et Aeliano conss.

[12] Idem A. Donato. Si te expilasse hereditatem sententia praesidis constitit, non ex eo, quod non et alia tibi poena inrogata est, furti improbioris infamiam evitasti.

PP. k. Iul. Iuliano II et Crispino conss.

[13] Idem A. Iuventio. Ea, quae pater testamento suo filios increpans scripsit, infames quidem filios iure non faciunt, sed apud bonos et graves opinionem eius, qui patri displicuit, onerant.

XIII k. Nov. ipso A. III et Dione conss.

[14] Imp. Gordianus A. Iovino. Nullam existimationis infamiam avunculus tuus pertimescat, ictibus fustium subiectus ob crimen habita quaestione, si sententia non praecessit ignominiae maculam inrogans.

PP. VI k. Sept. Pio et Pontiano conss.

[15] Idem A. Sulpiciae. Decreto amplissimi ordinis luctu feminarum deminuto tristior habitus ceteraque hoc genus insignia mulieribus remittuntur, non etiam intra tempus, quo lugere maritum moris est, matrimonium contrahere permittitur, cum etiam, si nuptias alias intra hoc tempus secuta est, tam ea quam is, qui sciens eam duxit uxorem, etiam si miles sit, perpetuo edicto labem pudoris contrahit.

PP. XVII k. Iul. Gordiano A. et Aviola conss.

[16] Idem A. Domitiano. Fustibus caesum, cui per praeconem ita dictum est: 'κατηγορίαν ἄνευ τινὸς δικαίας ὑποστάσεως οὕτως ἀγενὴς ὑπάρχων μὴ ἐνίστασο' ut calumniatorem videri notatum ideoque esse famosum manifestum est.

PP. III k. Aug. Sabino et Venusto conss.

[11] Emperor ALEXANDER Augustus to Irenaeus. Debtors who surrender their property (to their creditors, through cessio bonorum) do not become infamous even though their property is sold for this reason.[94]

Posted April 22, in the consulship of Maximus, for the second time, and Aelianus (223).

[12] The same Augustus to Donatus. If a governor's verdict established that you despoiled an inheritance, you did not escape infamy for this disgraceful theft just because no other punishment was imposed on you.

Posted July 1, in the consulship of Julian, for the second time, and Crispinus (224).

[13] The same Augustus to Juventius. A father's vituperations in his will against his sons do not, to be sure, make them legally infamous, but among good and respectable people they do burden the reputation of the person who displeased his father.

October 20, in the consulship of the Augustus, for the third time, and Dion (229).

[14][95] Emperor GORDIAN Augustus to Jovinus. Your maternal uncle, who following a criminal trial was subjected to a beating with rods, need not fear any infamy of his reputation if no verdict imposing the stain of infamy preceded (the beating).

Posted August 27, in the consulship of Pius and Pontianus (238).

[15] The same Augustus to Sulpicia. By decree of the noble order (the Senate), the mourning period for women has been diminished and they have been excused from (wearing) mourning clothes and other such symbols. But it is not also permitted (for a widow) to contract a (new) marriage during the customary period of mourning for her husband, since if she did contract another marriage within that time, she, as well as the man who knowingly married her even if he is a soldier, acquired the stain of infamy under the Perpetual Edict (edictum perpetuum).

Posted June 15, in the consulship of Gordian Augustus and Aviola (239).

[16] The same Augustus to Domitianus. Clearly, a person who was beaten with rods and to whom a herald said (in Greek): "Do not so impudently bring an accusation without just cause," is branded as a vexatious litigator and is therefore infamous.[96]

Posted July 30, in the consulship of Sabinus and Venustus (240).

[94] On cessio bonorum, see C. 7.71, D. 42.3. Undergoing cessio rendered one infamous.

[95] = C. Greg. 1.3.2, which omits "following a criminal trial." On the substance, see D. 3.2.22.

[96] See C. 9.46.8.1.

[17] Idem A. Magno. Verbum precibus insertum potius verecundiam onerare quam ullam existimationis maculam videtur adspergere. etenim cum non causa cognita dictum est 'συκοφαντεῖς', sed ad postulatum patroni interlocutione iudicis responsum sit, nequaquam hoc infamiam inrogat.

PP. VIII k. Oct. Attico et Praetextato conss.

[18] Idem A. Antiocho. Non damnatos quidem dumtaxat iniuriae, sed pactos quoque perpetuum infamat edictum. verum pactos eos demum, qui ullos adversariis nummos pro mala conscientia ex transactione numerassent, in hac causa placuit intellegi. ceterum simplex eius rei gratia integram existimationem illibatamque conservat. quod si iureiurando decisa contentio est, nemo dubitaverit, quin religionem absolutio iudicantis sequatur.

PP. XIIII k. Ian. Saeculare II et Donato conss.

[19] Impp. Carinus et Numerianus AA. Aristocrati. Interlocutio praesidis, quae indicta est, infamem eum de quo quaeris fecisse non videtur, cum non specialiter ob iniuriam vel admissam vim condemnatus, sed ita praesidis verbis gravatus est et admonitus, ut ad melioris vitae frugem se reformet.

PP. XVII k. Febr. Carino II et Numeriano AA. conss.

[20] Impp. Diocletianus et Maximianus AA. Fortunato. Improbum fenus exercentibus et usuras usurarum illicite exigentibus infamiae macula inroganda est.

PP. XVI k. Mart. ipsis IIII et III AA. conss.

[21] Idem AA. Statio. Si fratres tui minores dumtaxat aetate in ludicrae artis ostentatione spectaculum sui populo praebuerunt, inviolatum existimationem obtinent.

D. V k. Sept. ipsis AA. conss.

[22] Idem AA. et CC. Domitiano. Fidem rumpens societatis cum infamiae periculo suo nomine pro socio conventus ad faciendum satis urguetur.

D. VI id. Dec. Nicodemiae CC. conss.

[17] The same Augustus to Magnus. The phrase included in your supplication seems rather to lessen your self-respect than to besmirch your reputation. For when it was stated (in Greek): "You accuse vexatiously," without a trial being held, but this was the judge's interim response (interlocutio) to an advocate's request, it in no way leads to infamy.

Posted September 24, in the consulship of Atticus and Praetextus (242).

[18] The same Augustus to Antiochus.[97] The Perpetual Edict makes infamous not only those condemned for outrage (iniuria), but also those who made a pact (concerning it). Still, it is agreed that in this matter the only persons deemed to have entered a pact are those who, out of a bad conscience, had paid money to their adversaries pursuant to a settlement. But simple forgiveness (by the victim) of this act leaves (the offender's) reputation whole and unimpaired. So if the dispute is settled by an oath, no one would doubt that the oath results in a judge's acquittal (of the defendant).

Posted December 19, in the consulship of Saecularis and Donatus (260).

[19] Emperors CARINUS and NUMERIAN Augusti to Aristocrates. The interim decision given by the governor is not held to make the person whom you put on trial infamous, since he was not specifically condemned for outrage (iniuria) or admitted use of force, but (rather) was upbraided by the governor's words and admonished to turn to a better way of life.

Posted January 16, in the consulship of Carinus, for the second time, and Numerian, Augusti (284).

[20] Emperors DIOCLETIAN and MAXIMIAN Augusti to Fortunatus. The stain of infamy should brand those claiming a reprehensible rate of interest and those unlawfully demanding compound interest.

Posted February 14, in the consulship of the Augusti, for the fourth and third times, respectively (290).

[21] The same Augusti to Statius. If your brothers, while still minors in age, showed themselves off to the people in a stage performance, they keep their good name unscathed.

Given August 28, in the consulship of the Augusti themselves (290).

[22] The same Augusti and the Caesars to Domitianus. Someone who, at risk of infamy, breaks the trust due under a partnership, if (he is then) sued in his own name as a partner, is impelled to make satisfaction (to his partner).

Given December 8, at Nicodemia, in the consulship of the Caesars (294).

[97] To judge from the consular date, this rescript was in fact issued by the Emperors Valerian and Gallienus and the Caesar Valerian.

XII De Procuratoribus

[1] Divus Pius Severo. Cautio ratihabitionis tunc exigitur a procuratore, quotiens incertum est, an ei negotium mandatum est.
PP. IIII id. Oct. Gallicano et Vetere conss.

[2] Divi fratres Sextiliae. Cum rem pecuniariam esse dicas, potes per maritum tuum sollemnibus impletis appellationi adversariae respondere, cum appellationes pecuniariae etiam per procuratores exerceri ab utraque parte litigantium possunt.
Accepta VIII k. Aug. ipsis III et II conss.

[3] Impp. Severus et Antoninus AA. Pomponio. pr. Eum, qui res agit heredum, a quibus tibi deberi fideicommissum dicis, evoca ad praetorem virum clarissimum, qui aut respondere tibi cogetur aut administratione negotiorum secundum formam iurisdictionis prohibebitur. 1. Deliberabit autem praetor, si non defendat heredes, debeatne te mittere in possessionem, secutus iurisdictionem, quae exerceri adversus indefensos solet.
PP. X k. Sept. Cilone et Libone conss.

[4] Idem AA. Saturnino. Quia absente te iudicatum dicis, aequum est restitui tibi causae defensionem: nec oberit tibi, quod uxor tua interfuit iudicio aut etiam adquievit sententiae, cum aliena negotia per mulieres non aliter agi possunt, nisi in rem suam et proprium lucrum mandatae sunt eis actiones.
PP. prid. non. Ian. Apro et Maximo conss.

[5] Imp. Antoninus A. Pancratiae. Actionem ei, qui absentis nomine agere vult, si non eum defendat, denegari oportere iam edicto perpetuo expressum est.
PP. III k. Mart. duobus Aspris conss.

Twelfth Title Procurators[98]

[1] The deified Pius to Severus. A procurator must furnish a bond promising ratification (by his principal; cautio ratihabitionis) whenever it is uncertain whether the lawsuit was entrusted to him (by the principal).

Posted October 12, in the consulship of Gallicanus and Vetus (150).

[2] *The deified brothers (*Marcus Aurelius and Verus*) to Sextilia.* Since you say the matter is one of money (in a civil suit), you can, by observing the formalities, respond through your husband to the appeal by your adversary, since appeals involving money payments can also be brought to court through the procurators of litigants on either side.

Received July 25, in their consulship, for the third and second time, respectively (161).

[3] Emperors Severus and Antoninus Augusti to Pomponius. pr. Proceed to summon before the vir clarissimus Praetor the person managing the affairs of the heirs who, you allege, owe you a trust (fideicommissum). He (the procurator) is either compelled to answer you or is barred from managing (their) affairs, in accord with the jurisdictional norm (the Praetor's Edict). 1. Further, if he does not defend the heirs, the Praetor will consider whether he should put you into possession (of the trust property), observing the jurisdiction commonly exercised against persons who are not defended.

Posted August 23, in the consulship of Cilo and Libo (204).

[4] The same Augusti to Saturninus. Since you say that you were adjudged in your absence, the fair course is that the defense of the case be restored to you (through a retrial). Nor is it an impediment for you that your wife was present at the trial or even accepted the decision, since women cannot manage the affairs of others except when the rights of actions are mandated to them for their own interests or their own gain.

Posted January 4, in the consulship of Aper and Maximus (207).

[5] Emperor Antoninus Augustus to Pancratia. It was already stated in the Perpetual Edict that an action should be denied to a person wishing to sue in the name of another, if he does not (simultaneously) defend him (against any counterclaim).

Posted February 28, in the consulship of the two Aspri (212).

[98] The procuratores in this title are, almost exclusively, persons who, with or without a mandate, undertake to represent the interests of a litigant (in earlier law, usually an absent litigant) in a trial. See also D. 3.3. While the litigant is loosely designated a "principal," their relationship is not full modern agency.

[6] Idem A. Marciano. Reum criminis constitutum defensionem causae suscipere non posse, antequam purgarit innocentiam suam, incognitum non est.

D. VI k. Mart. Maximo II et Aeliano conss.

[7] Idem A. Macrino militi. Militem nec pro patre vel matre vel uxore nec ex sacro rescripto procuratorio nomine experiri oportet, cum neque defensionem alienam suscipere vel redimere negotia vel quasi suffragatorem accedere utilitate publica permittatur.

PP. VIII id. Mart. Maximo II et Aeliano conss.

[8] Idem A. Mansueto. Quod quis sibi debitum exigere tibi mandavit, ante litis contestationem tu alii petendum mandare non potes.

PP. VIII k. Sept. Maximo II et Aeliano conss.

[9] Idem A. Aufidio. Qui stipendia merent, suis negotiis superesse inoffensa disciplina possunt: nec potest dici eum, qui honesta et verecunda praecedente causa mandatas sibi actiones exercuerit, alieno negotio fungi, cum, licet *i*ntentio ex persona alterius bona fide sumatur, hunc tamen rem suam gerere non ambigitur. quod militibus meis interdici non modo absurdum, verum etiam iniquum est.

Sine die et consule.

[10] Idem A. Castriciae. Si procurator ad unam speciem constitutus officium mandati egressus est, id quod gessit nullum domino praeiudicium facere potuit. quod si plenam potestatem agendi habuit, rem iudicatam rescindi non oportet, cum, si quid fraude vel dolo egit, convenire eum more iudiciorum non prohiberis.

PP. III k. Mart. Albino et Maximo conss.

[6][99] The same Augustus to Marcianus. It is a not unfamiliar rule that a defendant accused of a crime cannot undertake the defense of (another's) case until he justifies his innocence (of the crime).

Given February 24, in the consulship of Maximus, for the second time, and Aelianus (223).

[7] The same Augustus to Macrinus, a soldier. A soldier must not act as a procurator (in a lawsuit) either for his father or mother or wife, even on the basis of an imperial rescript. In the public interest he is forbidden from taking up another's defense, purchasing (another's) legal business, or appearing as a supporter (in court).

Posted March 8, in the consulship of Maximus, for the second time, and Aelianus (223).

[8] The same Augustus to Mansuetus. If anyone has given you a mandate to collect a debt for him, before joinder of issue (litis contestatio) you cannot mandate conduct of the (resulting) lawsuit to a third party.

Posted August 25, in the consulship of Maximus, for the second time, and Aelianus (223).

[9] The same Augustus to Aufidius. Consistent with military discipline, soldiers on active service can attend to their own affairs. Nor can it be said that a person conducts another's business if, for proper and honest reasons, he prosecutes actions that were mandated to him, since, although the premise of the claim (intentio) is undertaken in good faith in another's name, there is no doubt that he is managing his own affairs. To forbid this to my soldiers would be not just bizarre but unfair.

Without date and consul.

[10] The same Augustus to Castricia. If a procurator was appointed for one specific purpose but then exceeded the bounds of his mandate, what he did could not prejudice the owner (who appointed him). But if he had complete power to act (for his principal), the adjudication should not be rescinded, since if he acted fraudulently or deceitfully, you are not prevented from suing him by the regular legal process.[100]

Posted February 27, in the consulship of Albinus and Maximus (227).

[99] = C. 10.60.1 in part. Their consular dates indicate that Alexander Severus was the author of this and the next six constitutions.

[100] This rescript deals with an ordinary procurator who is appointed to manage a principal's affairs (either one aspect or completely), and who, in the course of this management, enters into litigation on the principal's behalf. The central issue is authorization.

[11] Idem A. Sebastiano. pr. Neque tutores neque curatores ex sua persona in re pupilli vel adulescentis procuratorem facere possunt, sed actorem constituere debent. 1. Pupillus autem vel pupilla vel adultus vel adulta tam ad agendum quam ad defendendum tutore seu curatore interveniente procuratorem ordinare possunt. 2. Ipsi autem tutores et curatores post litis contestationem a se factam ad exemplum procuratorum, qui litem contestati sunt, dare procuratores non prohibentur.

PP. prid. id. Mai. Alexandro A. III et Dione conss.

[12] Idem A. Frontino militi. pr. Exigendi a filio tuo mandati, qui se defensioni tuae offerebat, duplici ratione necessitas non fuit, aut quod defendere quis sive libertus sive extraneus sine mandato potest (satisdatione tamen pro defensione praestita et alia procul dubio observatione subiecta), aut quod filius, etiamsi ultro actionem patris nomine dirigat, mandatum probare non cogitur. 1. Sane quod necdum legitimam aetatem idem filius tuus compleverat, ob hoc quidem depellere procuratione eum iudex non iniuste potuit. sed multo iustius fuit vel huiusmodi defensorem audire, quam absentem quasi contumacem et indefensum gravi condemnatione adficere.

V k. Oct. Agricola et Clementino conss.

[13] Imp. Gordianus A. Viciano militi. Ita demum super lite persequenda, quam tibi mater mandavit, actionem intendere potes, si, cum primo litem contestareris, non est tibi eo nomine opposita praescriptio militiae: quod nec, cum appellatio agitur, tibi obici poterit. nam si integra res est, ratio perpetui edicti acceptam tibi non permittit alieno nomine actionem intendere.

III id. Ian. Gordiano A. et Aviola conss.

[14] Idem A. Sabiniano. Non hoc minus sententia adversus te lata iuris ratione substitit, quod adversaria tua minor viginti quinque annis constituta causam suam marito sine curatore agendam mandavit. minoribus etenim aetas in damnis subvenire, non in rebus prospere gestis obesse consuevit.

PP. III non. Oct. Gordiano A. II et Pompeiano conss.

[11][101] The same Augustus to Sebastianus. pr. Neither tutores nor curatores can, by virtue of their roles (ex sua persona), appoint a procurator for the affairs of their minor or adult ward; instead, they ought to appoint a manager (actor). 1. A minor or adult ward of either sex can, however, with the consent of a tutor or curator, appoint a procurator both for bringing and for defending an action. 2. Even the tutores and curatores themselves, after they effect a joinder of issue (litis contestatio), are not prevented from appointing a procurator (to complete the trial), on the analogy of procurators who have joined issue.

Posted May 14, in the consulship of Alexander Augustus, for the third time, and Dio (229).

[12] The same Augustus to Frontinus, a soldier. pr. There was no need to require your son, who volunteered to defend you, to produce a mandate (from you, authorizing the defense), for two reasons. First, anyone – (even) a freedman or a third party – can defend (someone else) without a mandate, although obviously (only) after providing a security for the defense and observing other formalities. Second, a son, even if he voluntarily conducts an action in his father's name, is not compelled to prove a mandate. 1. Of course, because your son had not yet reached legal age, the judge could not unjustly reject his procuratorship on this basis. But it is much more just at least to hear such a defender, rather than to afflict an absent (defendant) with a burdensome condemnation on the ground that he is contumacious and undefended.

September 27, in the consulship of Agricola and Clementinus (230).

[13] Emperor Gordian Augustus to Vicianus, a soldier. In pursuing the lawsuit that your mother mandated to you, you can bring an action only if, on this account, an objection stemming from your military service is not specially raised against you when you first join issue (litis contestatio). It cannot be raised against you when an appeal is underway. For if the matter is (still) fresh, the logic of the Perpetual Edict does not allow you, in another's name, to bring an action that was accepted for you yourself.

January 11, in the consulship of the Emperor Gordian and Aviola (239).

[14] The same Augustus to Sabinianus. By legal reasoning, the decision rendered against you is not any the less valid because your adversary, a woman less than 25, mandated conduct of her case to her husband without (consulting) her curator. For their age normally helps those under 25 when they are harmed, but it doesn't hinder them when their affairs are managed well.

Posted October 5, in the consulship of Gordian Augustus, for the second time, and Pompeianus (241).

[101] = C. 5.61.1. The actor is a stand-in appointed for the trial with the court's consent: D. 26.9.6. Actores were frequently slaves; see C. 5.61.

[15] Impp. Diocletianus et Maximianus AA. et CC. Cornificio. Litem te redemisse contra bonos mores precibus manifeste professus es, cum procurationem quidem suscipere (quod officium gratuitum esse debet) non sit res illicita, huiusmodi autem officia non sine reprehensione suscipiantur.

PP. III non. April. AA. conss.

[16] Idem AA. et CC. Paconiae. Procuratorem vel actorem praedii, si non specialiter distrahendi mandatum accepit, ius rerum dominii vendendi non habere certum ac manifestum est. unde si non ex voluntate domini vendentibus his fundum comparasti, pervides improbum tuum desiderium esse dominium ex huiusmodi emptione tibi concedi desiderantis.

S. non. April. Byzantii AA. conss.

[17] Idem AA. et CC. Mardonio. Invitus procurationem suscipere nemo cogitur nec eandem ultra, nisi provocationis causa, extendere. sed nec defensionem absentis subire compellitur, cum fidem susceptam implere sufficiat.

PP. non. Iun. Philippopoli Diocletiano V et Maximiano IIII AA. conss.

[18] Idem AA. et CC. Dionysiae. Alienam suscipere defensionem virile officium est et ultra sexum muliebrem esse constat. filio itaque tuo, si pupillus est, tutorem pete.

S. XII k. Febr. Sirmi CC. conss.

[19] Idem AA. et CC. Firmo. Si pretium, quod[ix] actoribus alienis fundum vel servum citra mandatum tibi distrahentibus dedisti et neque praecessisse neque secuta contractum domini declaretur voluntas, in rem autem eius id pretium cessisse provinciae praeses causa cognita perspexerit, hoc tibi restitui iubebit.

S. prid. id. Mart. CC. conss.

[ix] [quod]

[15] Emperors DIOCLETIAN and MAXIMIAN Augusti and the Caesars to Cornificius. You openly admit in your petition that you purchased (a litigant's interest in) a lawsuit, contrary to good morals, since, to be sure, it is not illicit to act as procurator – an office that ought to be gratuitous – but duties of this sort are not undertaken without reproach.

Posted April 3, in the consulship of the Augusti (293).

[16] The same Augusti and Caesars to Paconia. It is settled law and obvious that a procurator or a manager (actor) of real property, unless he has received a special mandate to sell it, has no right to sell ownership of the property. So if you purchased a farm from these sellers without the owner's consent, you will clearly appreciate that your request seeking transfer to you of the ownership from such a sale is dishonest.[102]

Written April 5, at Byzantium, in the consulship of the Augusti (293).

[17] The same Augusti and Caesars to Mardonius. No one can be compelled to undertake a procuratorship against his will, nor to extend it further (than he agreed), unless because of an appeal.[103] Nor is anyone (charged with some particular business) compelled to undertake (in addition) the defense of an absent (principal), since it suffices that he faithfully execute the responsibility he undertook.

Posted June 5, at Philippopolis, in the consulship of Diocletian, for the fifth time, and Maximian, for the fourth time, Augusti (293).

[18] The same Augusti and Caesars to Dionysia. Undertaking the defense of others is a male function, and (so) it is agreed that this lies beyond the female sex. If your son is a minor ward (pupillus), ask his tutor (to arrange for a procurator).

Written January 21, at Sirmium, in the consulship of the Caesars (294).

[19] The same Augusti and Caesars to Firmus. If you paid the price to another person's managers (actores) who sold you a farm or a slave without a mandate (from the owner to do so), and the owner's consent is not shown to have preceded or followed the contract, the provincial governor, after hearing the case, will order the price restored to you if he finds that it accrued to his (the owner's) benefit.

Written March 14, in the consulship of the Caesars (294).

[102] See C. 4.35.12, 8.15.1.

[103] The scholia to the Basilika 8.2.91 state that the compilers added: "unless on account of an appeal." See C. 4.35.10.

[20] Idem AA. et CC. ad Verinum praesidem Syriae. Nihil arbitramur interesse, utrum ab initio an coepta iam lite negotium ad personam procuratoris transitum fecerit.

D. x k. Oct. Demesso CC. conss.

[21] Imp. Constantinus A. ad concilium provinciae Africae. pr. Maritus citra mandatum in rebus uxoris cum sollemni satisdatione et alia observatione intercedendi habeat liberam facultatem, ne feminae persequendae litis obtentu in contumeliam matronalis pudoris inreverenter inruant nec conventibus virorum vel iudiciis interesse cogantur. 1. Sin autem mandatum susceperit, licet maritus sit, id solum exsequi debet, quod procuratio emissa praescripserit.

PP. IIII id. Mart. Hadrumeto Constantino A. IIII et Licinio IIII conss.

[22] Idem A. ad Bassum pu. Procuratoribus institutis et post contestatam litem dominis effectis ii qui mandaverant non habeant facultatem negotia persequendi, nisi capitales inimicitiae vel morbus vel alia necessaria causa intercesserit: tunc enim etiam invitis his transferri lis potest.

D. XIII k. Iul. Constantino A. V et Licinio C. conss.

[23] Imp. Iulianus A. Secundo pp. Nulla dubitatio est post causam in iudicio agitatam utpote dominum litis procuratorem effectum etiam post excessum eius, qui agendam vel defendendam litem mandaverat, posse inchoatam causam iurgiumque finire, quippe cum et procuratorem posse eum instituere veteres iuris voluerunt conditores.

Lecta apud acta prid. non. Febr. Iuliano A. IIII et Sallustio conss.

[24] Imppp. Gratianus Valentinianus et Theodosius AAA. Pancratio pu. Licet in principio quaestionis persona debet inquiri procuratoris, [20] The same Augusti and Caesars to Verinus, Governor of Syria. We do not think it matters whether a matter was turned over to a procurator from the beginning of a lawsuit or once it has begun.

Given September 22, at Demessus, in the consulship of the Caesars (294).[104]

[21] Emperor CONSTANTINE Augustus to the Council of the Province of Africa. pr. A husband, (even) without a mandate, should have full power of representation in his wife's (judicial) affairs, (albeit) with the customary security bond and other formalities, so that women, under pretense of pursuing a lawsuit and in defiance of matronly modesty, do not boldly intrude, nor are compelled to attend assemblies of men or trials. 1.[105] But if anyone takes up a mandate, even if he is her husband, he ought to do only that which the given procuratorship requires.

Posted March 12, at Hadrumetum, in the consulship of Constantine Augustus, for the fourth time, and Licinius, for the fourth time (315).

[22] The same Augustus to Bassus, Urban Prefect. When procurators have been appointed (for a lawsuit) and then, after (and as a result of) joinder of issue, have become the owners (of the claims, in place of the original litigants), those who gave them the mandate lack the ability to prosecute the action (themselves), unless mortal disagreements or sickness or some other compelling reason has arisen. In such a case, the suit can be transferred (back to them) even against their (the procurators') will.

Given June 19, in the consulship of Constantine Augustus, for the fifth time, and the Caesar Licinius (319).

[23][106] Emperor JULIAN Augustus to Secundus, Praetorian Prefect. There is no doubt that after a case has been set in motion in a court (i.e., after joinder of issue), a procurator, inasmuch as he has become owner of the suit, can carry to conclusion the initiated case and the dispute even after the death of the person who gave him the mandate to bring or defend it, since, indeed, the ancient founders of the law wished that he could even appoint a procurator (in his own stead).

Read in the records on February 4, in the consulship of Julian Augustus, for the fourth time, and Sallust (363).

[24][107] Emperors GRATIAN, VALENTINIAN, and THEODOSIUS Augusti to Pancratius, Urban Prefect. Although, at the outset of a trial, a procurator [104] PLRE 1 Verinus 1 gives September 22, 305.

[105] = C.Th. 2.12.4, which reads "a procurator" for "anyone."
[106] = C.Th. 2.12.1, with some significant differences of wording; at the end, it adds: "and transfer the initiated matter to his heirs."
[107] = C.Th. 2.12.3; combine with C. 8.4.6. The Theodosian constitution is differently worded; the rule here is substantially a late imperial or Justinianic innovation. It applies only to procurators for plaintiffs.

an ad agendum negotium mandatum a domino litis habeat, tamen si falsus procurator inveniatur, nec dici controversiae solent nec potest esse iudicium.

D. prid. non. April. Constantinopoli Antonio et Syagrio conss.

[25] Imppp. Valentinianus Theodosius et Arcadius AAA. Tatiano pp. Quicumque praetorianae vel urbanae praefecturae sublimissimae fastigium vel magisterium militare vel consistorianae comitivae insignia meruerit dignitatis vel proconsulare ius dixerit aut vicarii fuerit administratione subfultus, si quid ab eo vel infertur iurgium vel refertur, procuratoris personam in negotii sui iura substituat. quod si quis sanctionis huius statuta transgressus iudiciis sese iurgaturus ingesserit, careat eius litis sorte, cuius non per procuratorem expectavit eventum. iudex nihilo minus, qui contra fecerit, noverit a se viginti libras auri, ab officio quoque suo tantundem ponderis exigendum.

D. XVIII k. Oct. Arcadio A. II et Rufino conss.

[26] Imppp. Arcadius Honorius et Theodosius AAA. Anthemio pp. In pecuniariis controversiis, etsi specialiter hoc praecepti vel sententiae minime designat auctoritas, passim unicuique, si tamen ita maluerit, per procuratorem respondendi tribuimus facultatem: nisi forte quosdam, iustiores nonnumquam ob causas, vehementior maximi iudicis vocabit auctoritas.

D. prid. id. Oct. Constantinopoli Arcadio A. et Probo conss.

[27] pr. Ἐπειδὴ συνέβαινε τοὺς αὐτοὺς ἐντολέας καὶ τῶν ἐνδοξοτάτων ἀρχόντων ὄντας καὶ τῶν λογιωτάτων διαιτητῶν εἶναι καὶ ἐντεῦθεν εἰκότως ὑπερθέσεις ἐγίνοντο ταῖς δίκαις, μὴ σχολαζόντων τῶν ἐντολέων καὶ τοῖς ἐνδοξοτάτοις ἄρχουσιν παραμένειν καὶ τοῖς διαιτηταῖς, ἐνομοθέτησεν ἐν should be asked whether he has a mandate for prosecuting the case from the owner of the suit, still, if he is (even later) discovered to be a false procurator, the controversy is customarily not pleaded, nor can the trial proceed.

Given April 4, at Constantinople, in the consulship of Antonius and Syagrius (382).

[25] Emperors VALENTINIAN, THEODOSIUS, and ARCADIUS Augusti to Tatianus, Praetorian Prefect. Those who have reached the heights of the sublime Praetorian or Urban Prefecture, or have become a Master of Soldiers (magister militum), or have earned the insignia of the rank of Count of the Imperial Council (comitiva consistoriana), or have declared the law as Proconsuls, or have occupied the office of a deputed governor (vicarius), shall, if they institute or defend a dispute, appoint a procurator to represent their rights in the matter. If anyone transgresses the rules of this ordinance and enters court to litigate, he shall lose the suit because he did not await its outcome through a procurator. Nonetheless, a judge who acts contrary hereto shall (also) know that 20 pounds of gold will be exacted from him and an equal amount also from his staff.[108]

Given September 14, in the consulship of Arcadius Augustus, for the second time, and Rufinus (392).[109]

[26] Emperors ARCADIUS, HONORIUS, and THEODOSIUS Augusti to Anthemius, Praetorian Prefect. In monetary disputes (i.e., private cases), although the specific authority of a rule or decision is lacking for this, We grant to everyone who wishes the ability to answer through a procurator, unless, perhaps, for unusually just reasons some individuals are (personally) summoned by the mighty authority of the highest judge (the Praetorian Prefect).

Given October 14, at Constantinople, in the consulship of Arcadius Augustus and Probus (406).

[27][110] pr. Since it has happened that the same persons serve as procurators both before the clarissimi governors and the learned (lower-level) judge arbitrators, and for this reason lawsuits are predictably delayed because the procurators cannot appear (simultaneously) before both the clarissimi governors and the [108] See also C. 9.35.11.

[109] Seeck dates to September 14, 391.

[110] This constitution, preserved only in a Greek synopsis from the Basilika (8.2.100) and its scholia, is of unknown date and origin, although it may have been originally combined with C. 2.7.19 and 3.3.6 of 486 or 487 (Zeno). Nonetheless, as Blume observed, the constitution is important because it "speaks of attorneys [advocati] and considers them the same as procurators [procuratores, ἐντολεῖς]. In the later times private individuals did not, ordinarily, act as procurators in a suit, but full power and authority was given attorneys to do and perform all duties that had formerly been performed by procurators, in addition to their ordinary duties as attorneys. In other words, the term procurator, when acting in a suit, was at this time the equivalent of the term attorney."

προοιμίοις ἡ διάταξις ἄλλους μὲν εἶναι ἐν τοῖς μεγίστοις δικαστηρίοις τῶν ἐνδοξοτάτων ἀρχόντων τοὺς ἐντολέας, ἄλλους δὲ τοὺς τοῖς αὐτῶν λογιωτάτοις διαιτηταῖς ὑπηρετουμένους ταῖς δίκαις. 1. Πάλιν δὲ ἵνα μὴ πολλάκις ὁ αὐτὸς ἐντολεὺς καὶ παρὰ τοῖς ἐνδοξοτάτοις ἐπάρχοις καὶ παρὰ τῷ ἐνδοξοτάτῳ ἄρχοντι δοθῇ καὶ ἐμποδίζηται πάλιν τὰ δικαστήρια, νομοθετεῖ μηδέποτε τὸν αὐτὸν ἐντολέα δύο ἐνδοξοτάτοις ἄρχουσι παραμένειν ἤτοι προσεδρεύειν.

2. Ἐπειδὴ καὶ συνέβαινεν ἢ τέμνοντος τὴν δίκην τοῦ διαιτητοῦ ἐκκλήτῳ χρήσασθαι τὸν καταδικασθέντα ἢ ἀποροῦντος τοῦ διαιτητοῦ πρὸς τὴν τομὴν τῆς ὑποθέσεως ἀναφορᾷ χρήσασθαι τὸν διαιτητὴν πρὸς τὸν ἐνδοξότατον ἄρχοντα, οὗτινός ἐστιν διαιτητής, καὶ ἐντεῦθεν ἡ δίκη ἡ ἀρχθεῖσα παρὰ διαιτητῇ λέγεται μεταφέρεσθαι παρὰ τῷ ἐνδοξοτάτῳ αὐτοῦ ἄρχοντι, νομοθετεῖ ἡ διάταξις μὴ τὸν ἀρξάμενον τῆς δίκης ἐντολέα παρὰ τῷ διαιτητῇ αὐτὸν περαιοῦν τὴν δίκην παρὰ τῷ ἐνδοξοτάτῳ ἄρχοντι, ἀλλὰ μετένταλμα γίνεσθαι παρ' αὐτοῦ πρὸς τὸν ἐντολέα τὸν τῷ ἐνδοξοτάτῳ ἄρχοντι παρεδρεύοντα, μηδεμιᾶς δαπάνης ὡς ἐπὶ προβολῇ ἐντολέως γινομένης ἐπὶ τούτῳ τῷ μετεντάλματι, μηδὲ καινῆς ἱκανοδοσίας διὰ τοῦτο τὸ μετένταλμα ἀπαιτουμένης· ἀλλὰ καὶ τὴν iudicatum solvi καὶ τὴν ratam rem οὕτως ἐξ ἀρχῆς ὑπαγορεύεσθαι, ὡς περιέχεσθαι αὐταῖς καὶ τὰ δαπανήματα τοῦ τοιούτου μετεντάλματος, ἵνα ὁ ἐγγυώμενος τὴν μίαν τούτων τῶν ἱκανοδοσιῶν ἐπερωτᾶται ὅτι "Ὁμολογῶ καὶ τοῦτον τὸν παρὰ τῷ διαιτητῇ ἐντολέα ἐπὶ τῇ iudicatum solvi (ἢ τῇ ratam rem) ἐγγεγυῆσθαι, καὶ εἰ συμβῇ ἐξ ἀναφορᾶς τοῦ διαιτητοῦ ἢ ἀπὸ ἐκκλήτου διδομένης κατὰ τῆς αὐτοῦ ψήφου μετενεχθῆναι τὴν δίκην εἰς τὸ μέγιστον δικαστήριον, οὗτινός ἐστιν ὁ διαιτητής, καὶ τὸν ἐκ μετεντάλματος μέλλοντα εἶναι ἐντολέα ἐν τῷ μεγίστῳ δικαστηρίῳ κατὰ τὸν ὅμοιον τρόπον ἐγγεγύημαι."

3. Ἐὰν γὰρ μὴ ταῦτα πάντα παραφυλαχθῇ, εἰ μὲν ἐνὶ τῶν μεγίστων δικαστηρίων ἡ νομοθεσία παραβαθείη τῷ προσφόρῳ σκρινίῳ, πέντε λιτρῶν χρυσίου καταθήσει ποινήν· εἰ δὲ παρὰ διαιτηταῖς ἡ νομοθεσία παραβαθείη, ὁ τῆς δίκης πληρωτὴς ὁ προσεδρεύων τῷ λογιωτάτῳ διαιτητῇ μιᾶς χρυσίου λίτρας ἀπαιτηθήσεται ποινήν, οἱ δὲ ἄλλοι δύο οἱ ἐκ τῶν τάξεων ἀφωρισμένοι τῷ διαιτητῇ ἤτοι ἐκ τῶν σχολῶν δύο χρυσίου λιτρῶν ἀπαιτηθήσονται πρόστιμον· αὐτὸς δὲ ἐντολεύς, ἀφ' οὗ τι παραβαθείη, πληγαῖς σωφρονιζέσθω παρὰ τοῦ ἄρχοντος ἢ τοῦ διαιτητοῦ, κεκωλυμένος τοῦ λοιποῦ ἐντολεὺς ἐν δικαστηρίῳ δίδοσθαι.

[28] pr. Ἐὰν ὁ ἐγγυητὴς τοῦ ἐντολέως μὴ ὁρίσῃ χρόνον καὶ εἴπῃ τυχὸν ὅτι 'ἐγγυῶμαι αὐτόν, κἂν τελευτήσῃ ἢ ἀφανὴς γένηται', καὶ συμβῇ τοῦτο judge arbitrators, this constitution ordained at its outset that some procurators serve in the high courts of the clarissimi governors, while other (different) ones provide judicial services to the learned judge arbitrators. 1. Next, to prevent the same procurator from frequently being appointed both before the clarissimi Prefects and before the clarissimus governor, thus again impeding the courts, it ordains that the same procurator never serve as a procurator or a judicial advisor (adsessor) with two clarissimi magistrates (simultaneously).

2. It has also happened that a condemned person has appealed after a judge arbitrator decided a case, or that the judge arbitrator, uncertain how to decide the case, has referred it to the clarissimus governor to whom he was subordinate; and so the suit, begun before the judge arbitrator, is transferred, as it were, to his clarissimus governor. The constitution therefore ordains that no procurator who begins a case before a judge arbitrator shall conclude it before the clarissimus governor. Rather, a transfer shall take place from him to a procurator serving the clarissimus governor, with no fee being charged for this transfer as though for the (original) appointment of a procurator, and with no new security bond being required on account of this transfer. Rather, let provision be made from the outset both for payment of any judgment and for ratification (by the principal), in such a way that the fees for such a transfer are also contained therein. The person who provides one of these bonds makes this guarantee (as follows): "On behalf of him (the procurator) prosecuting the suit before the judge arbitrator, I promise to fulfill my bond that the judgment be paid – or, that ratification be made (by my principal); and if, as a result of a judge arbitrator referring the case or an appeal made from his decision, it happens that the case devolves to the highest court above the judge arbitrator, I give bond in the same manner for him who by reason of the transfer will be the procurator in the highest court."

3. If all these provisions are not observed and if, in any of the highest courts, this law is violated by the relevant official staff, it shall pay a penalty of 5 pounds of gold. But if the law is violated before judge arbitrators, a penalty of one pound of gold shall be exacted from the most learned judge's advisor (adsessor) who prepared the trial; while from the other two who were assigned to the judge from his office ranks or from the schools, a fine of 2 pounds of gold shall be exacted. The procurator himself, by whom anything is neglected, shall be chastised with lashes by the governor or by the judge arbitrator, and (then) forbidden for the future from being a procurator in a court.

[28][111] pr. If the surety for a procurator does not define the term (of the suretyship), saying, for instance: "I am a surety for him even if he dies or fails

[111] The two sections of this constitution, which lacks date and authorship, derive from the Byzantine legal compendium called the Rhopai, 10.5 and 19.16.

γενέσθαι, ἐντος κ' ἡμερῶν ὀφείλει ἕτερον προβάλλεσθαι. 1. Ἐὰν τελευτήσῃ ἢ ἀφανὴς γένηται ὁ ἐπὶ δίκῃ παρά τινος δοθεὶς ἐντολεύς, μετὰ τὴν κ' ἡμέραν τοῦ προτιθεμένου παρὰ τοῦ ἄρχοντος διατάγματος περὶ τοῦ προβληθῆναι ἄλλον ἓξ μηνῶν ἔχει προθεσμίαν ὁ πρωτότυπος ἐν ἀπουσίᾳ ὢν πόρρω διακειμένης ἐπαρχίας εἰς τὸ ἕτερον προβάλλεσθαι ἢ αὐτὸς παραγενέσθαι. εἰ γὰρ μὴ ἔστι μακράν, ἐκ τοῦ ἄρχοντος ὁρίζεται προθεσμία.

XIII Ne Liceat Potentioribus Patrocinium Litigantibus Praestare vel Actiones in Se Transferre

[1] Impp. Diocletianus et Maximianus AA. et CC. Aristobulo salutem. pr. Divine admodum constituit divus Claudius consultissimus princeps parens noster, ut iactura causae adficerentur ii, qui sibi potentiorum patrocinium advocassent, ut hoc proposito metu iudiciariae lites potius suo marte discurrerent, quam potentiorem domorum opibus niterentur. 1. Quem palam est in tantum provincialium quaestionibus[x] esse commotum, ut huius sanctionis rectores provinciarum custodes et contemptae rei vindices fecerit, scilicet ut in actores seu procuratores in subsidia negotiorum vel usurpatos gratia vel redemptos severa sententia vindicarent. 2. Quare cum intersit et universe omnium et praecipue tenuiorum, qui saepe importunis potentium intercessionibus opprimuntur, inter litigatores audientiam tuam impertire debebis: nec metuas, ne praeiudices clarissimis viris, cum divus Claudius huius rei rectorem provinciae et disceptatorem et, si res postularet, ultorem specialiter fecerit.

D. IIII id. Sept. AA. conss.

[2] Impp. Honorius et Theodosius AA. Iohanni pp. Si cuiuscumque modi cautiones ad potentium fuerint delatae personas, debiti creditores iactura multentur. aperta enim credentium videtur esse voracitas, qui alios actionum suarum redimunt exactores.

D. V id. Iul. Ravenna Honorio XIII et Theodosio X AA. conss.

[x] questibus

to appear," and this (condition) occurs, then another (procurator) must be appointed within twenty days. 1. If someone appoints a procurator who dies or fails to appear, and the twentieth day has passed after the governor's decree to substitute a second (procurator), a principal who lives abroad in a distant province has a continuance of six months for either substituting another or appearing himself. If he is not far away, the continuance is determined by the governor.

Thirteenth Title Powerful Persons Shall Not Lend Legal Aid to Litigants or Transfer Actions to Themselves

[1] Emperors Diocletian and Maximian Augusti and the Caesars to Aristobulus, greetings. The deified Claudius, Our ancestor and an emperor most skilled in law, was quite inspired in providing that those who had sought for themselves the judicial support (patrocinium) of the powerful (potentiores) should be punished with loss of their case, so that, with this fear on their minds, trials would proceed on the basis of their own (internal) conflict, rather than being decided by the (relative) wealth of powerful families. 1. Obviously he was so deeply moved by the complaints from provincials that he made provincial governors the guardians of that ordinance and the avengers of its violation, namely, (ordering) that they should inflict severe punishment on managers (actores) or procurators who were used to bolster lawsuits whether for non-material consideration or for pay. 2. Therefore, since it is important generally to everyone, but especially to the disadvantaged (tenuiores) who are often oppressed by the cruel intervention of powerful persons, you should hold a hearing among the litigators. Do not fear harming notables (viri clarissimi), since the deified Claudius specially made the governor of a province both the judge of this matter and, if it requires, the avenger.

Given September 10, in the consulship of the Augusti (293).

[2][112] Emperors Honorius and Theodosius Augusti to John, Praetorian Prefect. If written promises of any kind are assigned to powerful persons, the creditors shall be punished by loss of their debt. For it looks like plain avarice on the part of creditors when they pay for others to collect on their own rights of action.

Given July 11, at Ravenna, in the consulship of Honorius, for the thirteenth time, and Theodosius, for the tenth time, Augusti (422).

[112] = C.Th. 2.13.1; combine with C. 4.4.1, 4.26.13, 8.15.8, 11.48.17, 12.60.4. Creditors assigned debt to more powerful persons in order to overbear their debtors.

XIIII De His, Qui Potentiorum Nomine Titulos Praediis Adfigunt vel Eorum Nomina in Lite Praetendunt

[1] Impp. Arcadius et Honorius AA. Messalae pp. pr. Animadvertimus plurimos iniustarum desperatione causarum potentium titulos et clarissimae privilegia dignitatis his, a quibus in ius vocantur, opponere. 1. Ac ne in fraudem legum adversariorumque terrorem his nominibus abutantur et titulis, qui huiusmodi dolo scientes conivent, adficiendi sunt publicae sententiae nota. 2. Quod si nullum in hac parte consensum praebuerint, ut libelli aut tituli eorum nominibus aedibus adfigantur alienis, eatenus in eos qui fecerint vindicetur, ut adfecti plumbo perpetuis metallorum suppliciis deputentur. 3. Quisquis igitur lite pulsatus, cum ipse et rei sit possessor et iuris et titulum illatae sollemniter pulsationis exceperit, contradictoriis libellis aut titulis alterius nomen crediderit ingerendum, eius possessionis aut causae, quam sub hac fraude aut retinere aut evitare temptaverit, amissione multetur nec repetendae actionis, etiam si ei probabilis negotii merita suffragantur, habeat facultatem. 4. Eos sane, qui se sponte alienis litibus inseri patiuntur, cum his neque proprietas neque possessio competat, veluti famae suae prodigos et calumniarum redemptores notari oportebit.

D. XV k. Dec. Mediolani Stilichone cons.

XV Ut Nemo Privatus Titulos Praediis Suis vel Alienis Imponat vel Vela Regalia Suspendat

[1] Impp. Honorius et Theodosius AA. Flaviano pp. Regiae maiestatis est, ut nostrae tantum domus et patrimonia titulorum inscriptione legantur. omnes igitur intellegant publico iuri esse deputandum id, cui nomen dominicum praescribitur.

D. III k. Dec. Ravennae Basso et Philippo conss.

Fourteenth Title Those Who Affix Real Estate Placards with the Names of the Powerful or Who Fraudulently Use Their Names in a Lawsuit

[1][113] Emperors ARCADIUS and HONORIUS Augusti to Messala, Praetorian Prefect. pr. We observe that many (defendants), losing hope of (winning) their unjust cases, confront plaintiffs with the placards (tituli) of powerful men and the privileges of clarissimus rank. 1. In order to prevent these names and placards being abused to evade the law and terrorize adversaries, those (influential men) who knowingly connive in such deceit are to be punished with the disgrace of a public verdict. 2. But if they did not consent to notices or placards in their names being affixed to the buildings of others, those who did this shall be punished to the extent of being flogged with lead and sent to permanent punishment in the mines. 3. Therefore if suit is brought against anyone, and he thinks that the name of a third party should be forced into the reply documents (libelli contradictorii) or notices despite the fact that he is the possessor both of the property and of the right to it and has received notice of the suit duly brought against him, he shall be punished by loss of the possession or claim which he tried to retain or avoid through this fraud, nor shall he have the ability to reopen the action even if the merits of the matter would support him. 4. Those, indeed, who voluntarily let themselves become involved in the lawsuits of others when they are entitled neither to ownership nor to possession, shall be branded as careless of their reputations and as the purchasers of vexatious litigation.

Given November 17, at Milan, in the consulship of Stilicho (400).

Fifteenth Title No Private Person Shall Fasten Placards to His or Another's Property nor Hang Up Royal Curtains

[1] Emperors HONORIUS and THEODOSIUS Augusti to Flavianus, Praetorian Prefect. It is a part of Imperial Majesty that only Our homes and property be designated with an inscription on placards (tituli, bearing Our name). All persons, therefore, shall know that any property on which the Imperial Name is inscribed must be regarded as under public law.[114]

Given November 29, at Ravenna, in the consulship of Bassus and Philippus (408).

[113] = C.Th. 2.14.1 (November 27, probably correct and preferred by Seeck); combine with C. 10.30.2, 11.74.2, 12.50.18, and possibly C.Th. 8.5.59 and 10.3.5. The fraud evidently consisted of getting influential men to post placards claiming title to real estate, in the expectation of frightening off rival claimants.

[114] So, if such placards are fraudulently placed on non-imperial property, it will be confiscated.

[2] Impp. Theodosius et Valentinianus AA. ad Florentium pp. pr. Ne quis vela regia suspendere vel titulum audeat sine praeceptione iudicis competentis rebus alienis imponere, quas quocumque modo qualiscumque persona possideat, licet non dominus, licet iniustus possessor ac temerarius invasor qui possidet doceatur. 1. Eum autem, qui hoc facere ausus fuerit, si plebeius est, ultimo subdi supplicio, si clarissimus vel curialis vel miles vel clericus, proscribendum deportandumque non solum civitate Romana, sed etiam libertate privari censemus, exsecutoresque huius legis omnes iudices esse oportere. 2. Deponendi autem vel frangendi titulos vel etiam conscindendi vela non solum eis, ad quorum praeiudicium tale aliquid contra fas contraque leges committitur, sed omnibus tam liberis quam servis sine metu calumniae vel accusatione criminis licentiam ministramus, decernentes iudices eorumque officia tricenis libris auri multari, si talem accusationem vel admittant vel depositam scribi concedant.

D. XV k. Iul. Constantinopoli Theodosio A. XVII et Festo conss.

XVI Ut Nemini Liceat Sine Iudicis Auctoritate Signa Imprimere Rebus, Quas Alius Tenet

[1] Imp. Probus A. Octaviano. Saepe rescriptum est ante sententiam signa rebus, quas aliquis tenebat, imprimi non oportere. et ideo ea rebus aut fructibus apud te constitutis illicite imposita poteris ipse licite detrahere, ut amotis his causa, quae ex officio tibi infertur, terminetur.

D. IIII k. Iul. Probo A. II et Lupo conss.

[2] Impp. Diocletianus et Maximianus AA. Craugasio. Rebus, quas alius detinet, imprimere signa nemini licet, etiam si suas vel obligatas sibi eas esse aliquis adfirmet.

[2] Emperors Theodosius and Valentinian Augusti to Florentius, Praetorian Prefect. pr. Without order from the appropriate judge, no one shall dare to hang up Royal curtains or a placard (claiming ownership in the Emperor's name) on another's property that anyone possesses in any manner, even if the person in possession is not an owner but a wrongful possessor or a willful intruder. 1. We decree, further, that if anyone dares to do this, he shall, if he is a plebeian, be subject to capital punishment; if he is of clarissimus or curial rank or a soldier or a cleric, he shall be stripped of property and deported, deprived not only of Roman citizenship but also of freedom; and all judges must act as the avengers of this law. 2. We also grant permission to take down or break the placards or even to cut down the curtains, and not just to those prejudiced when such a thing occurs contrary to religious law (fas) and statutes, but to all both free and slave, without fear of (a lawsuit over) vexatious litigation (calumnia) or a criminal accusation. We decree that judges and their staffs each be punished by (a penalty of) 30 pounds of gold if they either allow such an accusation or permit it to be written down after it is declared (orally).

Given June 17, at Constantinople, in the consulship of Theodosius Augustus, for the seventeenth time, and Festus (439).

Sixteenth Title No One Is Allowed, Without a Judge's Authority, to Place Seals on Property Held by Another

[1] Emperor Probus Augustus to Octavianus. Rescripts have often held that prior to the verdict (in a trial), seals (signa) are not to be placed on property that someone (else) was holding. And so if they were unlawfully placed on property or fruits (fructus) in your possession, you will be able to remove them lawfully, so that when they are removed, the case that was properly brought against you may be ended.[115]

Given June 28, in the consulship of Probus Augustus, for the second time, and Lupus (278).

[2] Emperors Diocletian and Maximian Augustus to Craugasius. No one is allowed to put seals on things that another is holding, even if he alleges they are his or obligated to him (as security for a debt).

[115] Seals were used to claim possession: e.g., D. 18.6.15.1. The issue here is self-help. The meaning of ex officio (here translated "properly") is uncertain, perhaps because details on the actual dispute are lacking.

XVII Ne Fiscus vel Res Publica Procurationem Alicui Patrocinii Causa in Lite Praestet

[1] Imp. Gordianus A. Legitimo et aliis. Rei publicae viribus adiuvari te sub obtentu quantitatis, quam eidem rei publicae debes, contra iuris rationem desideras.

PP. VIII id. Ian. Gordiano A. II et Pompeiano conss.

[2] Idem A. Tertullo. Cum adlegas partem rerum vel actionum dimidiam fisco, quo magis viribus eius protegaris, velle te donare, huiusmodi litium donationem admitti temporum meorum disciplina non patitur. unde ius tuum, si quod tibi competit, citra invidiam fisci mei tueri sollemniter cura.

S. VI non. Aug. Gordiano A. II et Pompeiano conss.

[3] Impp. Diocletianus et Maximianus AA. et CC. Amphioni. Abhorret saeculo nostro sub praetextu debiti procurationem contra privatos fiscum praestare.

D. VIII k. Ian. Philippopoli AA. conss.

[4] Idem AA. et CC. Achilli. Ad fraudem creditoribus faciendam invidiam fiscalem contra saeculi nostri tranquillitatem implorari non decet. redde itaque fisco nostro quod debes, ac si conventus velut a creditore fueris, quem tibi numerasse pecuniam negas, exceptione non numeratae pecuniae secundum leges uti potes.

D. XVI k. Ian. Sirmi CC. conss.

XVIII De Negotiis Gestis

[1] Impp. Severus et Antoninus AA. Sopatrae. Cum tutores filiorum tuorum suspectos faceres eisdemque tutores seu curatores peteres, munere

Seventeenth Title Neither the Treasury nor a Municipality Shall Provide Legal Representation by Acting as a Procurator in a Lawsuit

[1] Emperor GORDIAN Augustus to Legitimus and others. You seek (legal) support from the resources of a municipality (res publica),[116] using the excuse that you owe this amount to the same government. This is contrary to the logic of the law.

Posted January 6, in the consulship of Gordian Augustus, for the second time, and Pompeianus (241).

[2] The same Augustus to Tertullus. You allege that you wish to donate to the Treasury half of the property or of the rights of action so that you are better protected by its strength, but the policies of my age do not allow receiving such lawsuits as a gift. Arrange, therefore, to protect whatever right you have in the normal manner, without (causing) animosity toward my Treasury.

Given July 31 (?), in the consulship of Gordian Augustus, for the second time, and Pompeianus (241).

[3] Emperors DIOCLETIAN and MAXIMIAN Augusti and the Caesars to Amphion. It does not accord with Our era that the Treasury, under pretext of a debt (owed to it), act as a procurator against private persons.

Given December 25, at Philippopolis, in the consulship of the Augusti (293).[117]

[4] The same Augusti and Caesars to Achilles. It is improper and contrary to the serenity of Our era to beg, in defraud of creditors, that the Treasury incur animosity (by acting as your procurator). So pay to Our Treasury what you owe. If you are sued by someone claiming to be a creditor, and you deny he paid you the money (in the first place), according to the law you can use the defense that no money was paid you (exceptio non numeratae pecuniae).

Given December 17, at Sirmium, in the consulship of the Caesars (294).[118]

Eighteenth Title Management of Affairs[119]

[1] Emperors SEVERUS and ANTONINUS Augusti to Sopatra. When you raised suspicion against the tutores of your sons and sought (new) tutores or curatores

[116] Res publica probably refers to a municipality, but might mean the Roman government. Blume: "In this case, the city was asked to interfere evidently on the theory that payment to it would be made easier for the debtor if another creditor were defeated."

[117] Mommsen gives May 25, 293.

[118] Mommsen gives December 17, 293.

[119] Negotiorum gestio. This title is particularly concerned with "unauthorized agency," in which a volunteer transacts business on behalf of another person. See D. 3.5. The action permitted both a claim of expenses by the "agent" and a claim for losses suffered by the "principal" as a result of the management.

pietatis fungebaris: quae causa non admittit negotiorum gestorum actionem, ut sumptus, quos in ea lite fecisti, repetere possis, cum etiam, si quis pro adfectione domestica aliquos sumptus fecerit, nulla ratione eos petere potest.

PP. III non. Oct. Dextro et Prisco conss.

[2] Idem AA. Rufinae. Contra impuberes quoque, si negotia eorum urguentibus necessitatis rationibus utiliter gerantur, in quantum locupletiores facti sunt, dandam actionem ex utilitate ipsorum receptum est. quae tibi quoque iure decernetur, quod sumptus in pupillum, quem Romae tutorum petendorum gratia duxisti, fecisse te adlegas, si non matertera eiusdem[xi] se facere paratam propriis impendiis ostenderit.

PP. XV k. Febr. Laterano et Rufino conss.

[3] Idem AA. Hadriano. Sive pro fratre coherede pecuniam solvisti, negotiorum gestorum actione experiri potes, sive pignoris liberandi gratia debitum universum solvere coactus es, actionem eandem habebis vel iudicio familiae herciscundae, si non est inter vos redditum, eam quantitatem adsequeris.

PP. VIII k. Febr. Anullino et Frontone conss.

[4] Idem AA. Claudio. Qui pupillae negotia tutoris mandato suscepit, pro tutore negotia non videtur gessisse, sed negotiorum gestorum actione pupillae tenebitur.

PP. III non. Dec. Fabiano et Muciano conss.

[5] Idem AA. Trophimo. Officio nec minus obsequio liberti functus negotiorum gestorum actionem contra patroni filias pupillas habere non potes.

PP. XIII k. Iul. Geta et Plautiano conss.

[xi] eius idem

for them,[120] you were performing a duty of familial loyalty (munus pietatis). This reason bars (you from bringing) an action on management of affairs (negotiorum gestio) to gain recovery of the expenses you paid in this litigation, since likewise if someone has some expenses on the basis of family affection, by no logic can he claim them.

Posted October 5, in the consulship of Dexter and Priscus (196).

[2] The same Augusti to Rufina. Against minors (impuberes) as well, if their affairs are advantageously managed when urgent circumstances require, it is the accepted rule, on the basis of their interests, that an action be given to the extent they have been enriched. This was rightly decreed for you as well because you allege that you had expenses on a ward (pupillus) whom you took to obtain tutores at Rome, unless his maternal aunt shows that she was ready to do the same at her own expense.

Posted January 18, in the consulship of Lateranus and Rufinus (197).

[3] The same Augusti to Hadrianus. If you paid money on behalf of your brother and co-heir, you can bring an action on management of affairs. If you were compelled to pay the entire debt in order to release a pledge, you will have the same action, or, if there is no reimbursement between you, you will recover this amount in an action to divide the inheritance (actio familiae herciscundae).

Posted January 25, in the consulship of Anullinus and Fronto (199).

[4] The same Augusti to Claudius. Someone who undertakes the affairs of a ward (pupilla) on a mandate from her tutor is not held to have managed her affairs as a tutor (pro tutore), but will be liable to the ward in an action on management of affairs.

Posted December 3, in the consulship of Fabianus and Mucianus (201).

[5] The same Augusti to Trophimus. Since you are performing the duty (officium), not to mention the submission (obsequium), that is due from a freedman, you cannot have an action on management of affairs against the wards who are your patron's daughters (for paying expenses on their behalf).

Posted June 19, in the consulship of Geta and Plautianus (203).

[120] The Basilika scholia (17.2.1) indicate that Justinian added "tutores or."

[6] Idem AA. Gallo. Curatorem tibi quidem patris testamento datum dicis: quod non potest videri iure factum. quod si, ut proponis, administrationi se miscuit, negotiorum gestorum actio tam adversus eum quam contra heredes eius tibi competit.
PP. Apro et Maximo conss.

[7] Imp. Antoninus A. Euphratae. Si ab eo, qui negotia tua gessit, heres ex duabus unciis institutus es, etiamsi adeas hereditatem, in reliquis decem unciis adversus coheredem competit tibi petitio, si quam adversus defunctum habuisti actionem.
PP. VI id. Mart. Romae Sabino II et Anullino conss.

[8] Idem A. Severo. Adversus eos, qui negotia tua gesserunt, negotiorum gestorum iudicio civiliter consiste: nec tibi oberit, si propter occupationes militares eam litem tardius fuisses exsecutus, cum hoc genus actionis longi temporis praescriptione excludi non possit.
PP. VI k. Aug. Antonino A. et Advento conss.

[9] Idem A. Sallustio. Si pecuniam a debitore tuo Iulianus exegit eamque solutionem ratam habuisti, habes adversus eum negotiorum gestorum actionem.
PP. VIII k. Mart. Praesente et Extricato conss.

[10] Imp. Alexander A. Secundo et aliis. Si servum alienum non inutilem domino constitutum aegrum curastis et negotium utiliter gessistis, competenti vobis actione sumptus recuperare potestis.
PP. XII k. Dec. Alexandro A. cons.

[11] Idem A. Herenniae. Alimenta quidem, quae filiis tuis praestitisti, reddi tibi non iusta ratione postulas, cum id exigente materna pietate feceris. si quid autem in rebus eorum utiliter et probabili more impendisti, si non et hoc materna liberalitate, sed recipiendi animo fecisse ostenderis, id negotiorum gestorum actione consequi potes.

[6] The same Augusti to Gallus. You say that a curator was appointed for you in your father's will. This cannot be regarded as legally done. Still, if, as you allege, he (the curator) involved himself in the administration (of your affairs), you have an action on management of affairs against him as well as his heirs (if he has died).

Posted in the consulship of Aper and Maximus (207).

[7] Emperor ANTONINUS Augustus to Euphrata. If someone who managed your affairs instituted you as heir to two-twelfths of his estate, then although you enter on the inheritance, for the remaining ten-twelfths you have an action against your co-heir if you had any action against the deceased.

Posted March 10, at Rome, in the consulship of Sabinus, for the second time, and Anullinus (216).

[8] The same Augustus to Severus. Bring a civil action on management of affairs against those who managed your affairs. Nor will it prejudice you if, because of your military service, you raised the suit rather late, since this type of action cannot be barred by long-time prescription (praescriptio longi temporis).[121]

Posted July 27, in the consulship of Antoninus Augustus and Adventus (218).

[9][122] The same Augustus to Sallustius. If Julian collected money from your debtor and you ratified this payment, you have an action on management of affairs (negotiorum gestio) against him.

Posted February 22, in the consulship of Praesens and Extricatus (217).

[10] Emperor ALEXANDER Augustus to Secundus and others. If you cared for another person's sick slave who was (still) of some use to his master, and you managed the affair beneficially (to the master), you can recover your expenses by the appropriate action.

Posted November 20, in the consulship of Alexander Augustus (222).

[11] The same Augustus to Herennia. You have no legal basis to demand compensation for support payments (alimenta) to your sons, since you were required to do this by motherly devotion to them (materna pietas). But if you paid out anything on their affairs beneficially and in an acceptable manner, and you show you did this not out of maternal generosity but with the intent to be compensated, you can obtain this (expenditure) by suing on management of affairs.

[121] See C. 7.39.3. This constitution is probably from Elagabulus.

[122] = C. 8.37.3.1 (from Caracalla, addressed to Hadrian). Blume: "An action on mandate also was available where the principal ratified the acts."

PP. XII k. Febr. Albino et Maximo conss.

[12] Idem A. Theophilo. Si filius pro patre suo debitum solvit, nullam actionem ob eam solutionem habet, sive in potestate patris, cum solveret, fuit, sive sui iuris constitutus donandi animo pecuniam dedit. si igitur pater tuus sui iuris constitutus pro patre suo negotium gerens non praecedente mandato debitum eius solvit, negotiorum gestorum agere cum patruis tuis potes.

PP. k. Aug. Agricola et Clemente conss.

[13] Idem A. Aquilae. Quod in uxorem tuam aegram erogasti, non a socero repetere, sed adfectioni tuae debes expendere. in funus sane eius si quid eo nomine quasi recepturus erogasti, patrem, ad quem dos rediit, iure convenis.

PP. VIII k. Nov. Agricola et Clemente conss.

[14] Idem A. Rufo. Si mandatum solius mariti secutus tam ipsius quam uxoris eius negotia gessisti, tam tibi quam mulieri invicem negotiorum gestorum competit actio. ipsi sane qui mandavit adversus te mandati actio est: sed et tibi adversus eum contraria, si quid forte supererogasti.

PP. X k. Mart. Maximo II et Urbano conss.

[15] Imp. Gordianus A. Muciano. Si paterno adfectu privignas tuas aluisti seu mercedes pro his aliquas magistris expendisti, eius erogationis tibi nulla repetitio est. quod si ut repetiturus ea, quae in sumptum misisti, aliquid erogasti, negotiorum tibi gestorum intendenda actio est.

PP. VI id. Iul. Gordiano A. et Aviola conss.

[16] Impp. Gallus et Volusianus AA. Eutychiano. Si negotium sororis tuae gerens pro ea tributa solvisti, vel mandante ea vel rogante id fecisti, negotiorum gestorum actione vel mandati id, quod solvisse te constiterit, recipere poteris.

PP. XI k. Mai. Gallo et Volusiano conss.

Posted January 21, in the consulship of Albinus and Maximus (227).

[12] The same Augustus to Theophilus. If a son pays a debt for his father, he has no action concerning this payment, whether he was in his father's power when he paid, or when made sui iuris (i.e., after emancipation) he paid money as an intentional gift. If, therefore, your father, having become sui iuris, while managing his father's business paid his debt without a previous mandate (from your grandfather), you (as your father's successor) can sue your paternal uncles on management of affairs.[123]

Posted August 1, in the consulship of Agricola and Clemens (230).

[13] The same Augustus to Aquila. What you spent on your sick wife, you may not recover from your father-in-law, but should charge it to your affection. As to her funeral, however, if you spent anything on this account with the intent to recover, you rightly sue her father to whom her dowry returned.

Posted October 25, in the consulship of Agricola and Clemens (230).

[14] The same Augustus to Rufus. If, in carrying out a mandate only from a husband, you managed both his affairs and those of his wife, both you and she have reciprocal actions on management of affairs. The action on mandate against you goes, of course, to the giver of the mandate (the husband); but you (have) the counteraction against him if, say, you had additional expenses.

Posted February 20, in the consulship of Maximus, for the second time, and Urbanus (234).

[15] The same Augustus to Mucianus. If, out of paternal affection (paternus adfectus), you supported your stepdaughters or paid some fees to teachers on their behalf, you have no claim for return of this outlay. But if you paid something with the apparent intent to recover what you expended, you should bring an action on management of affairs.

Posted July 10, in the consulship of Gordian Augustus and Aviola (239).

[16] Emperors GALLUS and VOLUSIANUS Augusti to Eutychianus. If, in managing your sister's business, you paid taxes on her behalf, or you did this on her mandate or request, through an action on administration of affairs or on mandate you can recover what it is shown you paid.

Posted April 21, in the consulship of Gallus and Volusianus (252).

[123] As Blume observes, the constitution appears to contradict itself; the second sentence may have been altered to reverse the outcome. The uncles are evidently sued as heirs to their father, for shares.

[17] Impp. Diocletianus et Maximianus AA. et CC. Claudiae. Curatoris etiam successores negotiorum gestorum utili conventos actione tam dolum quam latam culpam praestare debere nec ad eos officium administrationis transire ideoque nullam alienandi eos res adultae potestatem habere convenit.

D. XIII k. Ian. Sirmi AA. conss.

[18] Idem AA. et CC. Pomponio. Ob negotium alienum gestum sumptuum factorum usuras praestari fides bona suasit: quo iure contra eos etiam, quorum te necessitate compulsum negotium gessisse proponis, per iudicium negotiorum gestorum uteris.

D. VIIII k. Ian. AA. conss.

[19] Idem AA. et CC. Alexandro. Ab uno herede pro solido re veluti communi venumdata de pretio coheres venditoris negotiorum gestorum ratam faciens venditionem agere potest.

D. id. Febr. Sirmi CC. conss.

[20] Idem AA. et CC. Octaviae. pr. Tutori vel curatori similis non habetur, qui citra mandatum negotium alienum sponte gerit, quippe superioribus quidem muneris necessitas administrationis finem, huic autem propria voluntas facit ac satis abunde sufficit, si cui vel in paucis amici labore consulatur. 1. Secundum quae super his quidem, quae nec tutor nec curator constitutus ultro quis administravit, cum non tantum dolum et latam culpam, sed et levem praestare necesse habeat, a te conveniri potest et ea, quae tibi ab eo deberi patuerit, cum usuris compelletur reddere. 2. De ceteris vero, quae ab aliis tui constituta iuris detenta exacta non sunt, ab hoc, qui nec agendi quidem propter exceptionis obstaculum facultatem habere potuit, exigi non potest: et idcirco adversus eos, quos res tuas tenere dicis, detorquere tuas petitiones debes.

D. VIII k. Mai. Sirmi CC. conss.

[17] Emperors DIOCLETIAN and MAXIMIAN Augusti and the Caesars to Claudia. It is agreed that the heirs of a curator, (if) sued in an analogous action on administration of affairs, should be liable for both deliberate misconduct (dolus) and serious fault (culpa lata), and that the duty of administration does not pass to them, and that, therefore, they had no power to alienate the property of an adult woman.[124]

Given December 20, at Sirmium, in the consulship of the Augusti (293).

[18] The same Augusti and Caesars to Pomponius. Good faith (bona fides) demands that interest be paid on your expenses in managing another's business. You will use this rule also in an action on management of affairs against those whose business you say you managed through necessity.

Given December 24, in the consulship of the Augusti (293).

[19][125] The same Augusti and Caesars to Alexander. When one heir sells as commonly owned a full interest in (inherited) property, the seller's co-heir, if he ratifies the sale, can sue on management of affairs for (his share of) the price.

Given February 13, at Sirmium, in the consulship of the Caesars (294).

[20] The same Augusti and Caesars to Octavia. pr. A tutor or curator is not held to resemble a person who without a mandate voluntarily manages another's affairs, in that for the former the duty of their office determines the bounds of their administration, while it is his own desire (that leads to this) for the latter, and it fully suffices if through a friend's efforts one's interests are considered even in a few matters (rather than generally). 1. Accordingly, if a person who is neither a tutor nor a curator voluntarily administers (your affairs), since he is necessarily responsible not just for deliberate misconduct and serious fault but also slight (fault; culpa levis),[126] he can be sued by you on these matters, and he will be compelled to return with interest what he is shown to owe you. 2. But as for other property that belonged to you but was detained by others and not recovered (by him), it cannot be demanded from a person who did not even have a right to sue because of the obstacle of a defense; and so you should turn your claims against those who, as you say, hold your property.

Given April 24, at Sirmium, in the consulship of the Caesars (294).

[124] Blume: "Here the heirs continued the business of the curator. They had no right to dispose of property. They were responsible, apparently, only for fraud or gross neglect, not ordinary negligence, as other agents without mandate." Culpa lata somewhat resembles gross negligence.

[125] = C. 3.36.20, possibly.

[126] See Paul, Sent. 1.4.1; D. 3.5.3.9.

[21] Idem AA. et CC. Mitrae. Si cognati tui servos suos manumiserunt, hoc, quod eos administrasse res vestras contendis, eorum impedimentum libertati fieri non potuit. quin autem ex actu praecedenti post manumissionem, si utriusque temporis administratio non conexa, sed separata sit, conveniri non posse procul dubio sit.

D. VI k. Oct. Viminacii CC. conss.

[22] Idem AA. et CC. Eulogio. Negotium gerentes alienum non interveniente speciali pacto casum fortuitum praestare non compelluntur.

D. XI k. Dec. CC. conss.

[23] Idem AA. et CC. Theodoro. Negotiis gestis non in rem, sed in personam est actio.

D. XII k. Dec. Nicomediae CC. conss.

[24] Imp. Iustinianus A. Iuliano pp. pr. Si quis nolente et specialiter prohibente domino rerum administrationi earum sese immiscuit, apud magnos auctores dubitabatur, si pro expensis, quae circa res factae sunt, talis negotiorum gestor habeat aliquam adversus dominum actionem. 1. Quam quibusdam pollicentibus directam vel utilem, aliis negantibus, in quibus et Salvius Iulianus fuit, haec decidentes sancimus, si contradixerit dominus et eum res suas administrare prohibuerit, secundum Iuliani sententiam nullam esse adversus eum contrariam actionem, scilicet post denuntiationem, quam ei dominus transmiserit nec concedens ei res eius attingere, licet res bene ab eo gestae sint. 2. Quid enim, si dominus adspexerit ab administratore multas expensas utiliter factas et tunc dolosa adsimulatione habita eum prohibuerit, ut neque anteriores expensas praestet? quod nullo patimur modo: sed ex quo die attestatio ad eum facta est vel in scriptis vel sine scriptis, sub testificatione tamen aliarum personarum, ex eo die pro faciendis meliorationibus nullam ei actionem competere, super anterioribus autem, si utiliter factae sunt, habere eum actionem contra dominum concedimus sua natura currentem.

D. XV k. Dec. Constantinopoli Lampadio et Oreste conss.

[21] The same Augusti and Caesars to Mitra. If your blood relatives manumitted their slaves, your contention that they (the slaves) administered your property could not become an obstacle to their freedom. What is more, it is beyond doubt that after their manumission they cannot be sued for an act preceding it if the administration is not continuous over both periods but divided.

Given September 26, at Viminacium, in the consulship of the Caesars (294).

[22] The same Augusti and Caesars to Eulogius. Those who manage another's business are not responsible, except by special agreement, for (loss caused by) unavoidable accident (casus fortuitus).

Given November 21, in the consulship of the Caesars (294).

[23][127] The same Augusti and Caesars to Theodorus. The action on management of affairs is in personam, not in rem.

Given November 20, at Nicomedia, in the consulship of the Caesars (294).

[24] Emperor JUSTINIAN Augustus to Julian, Praetorian Prefect. pr. If anyone intermeddled in administering property when its unwilling owner specifically forbade this, there was doubt among the most important (juristic) authorities whether such a manager of affairs would have any action against the owner for expenditures on the property. 1. Some promise him a direct or analogous action, and some deny one (altogether), among whom was Salvius Julianus. To decide these questions, We ordain that if the owner objects and prohibits him from administering his property, then in accord with Julian's opinion no counteraction lies against him – that is to say, after the owner transmits a notice to him and does not permit him to lay hands on his property even if he manages the matter well. 2. But what if the owner has watched the administrator making much beneficial expenditure, and then with deceitful pretense forbids him in order to avoid owing the previous expenditures? In no respect do We allow this. But from the day on which notice (of prohibition) was given to him – either in writing or without writing but with other persons as witnesses – from that day on, no action shall lie for making improvements. But as for prior ones, if they were beneficial, We allow him to have an action against the owner, (but) one limited in time by its nature.

Given November 17, at Constantinople, in the consulship of Lampadius and Orestes (530).

[127] Combine with C. 6.19.2.

XVIIII De His, Quae Vi Metusve Causa Gesta Sunt

[1] Imp. Alexander A. Felici. Persecutionem eorum, quae vi vel furto ablata sunt, etiam si postea interciderunt, integram esse iure responsum est.

PP. x k. Dec. Maximo II et Aeliano conss.

[2] Idem A. Alexandro. Cum te non solum cavisse, verum etiam solvisse pecuniam confitearis, qua ratione ut vim passus restitui quod illatum est postules, perspici non potest, quando verisimile non sit ad solutionem te properasse omissa querella de chirographo utpote per vim extorto, nisi et in solvendo vim te passum dicis.

PP. VI k. Iul. Alexandro A. II et Marcello conss.

[3] Imp. Gordianus A. Gaio. Si vi vel metu fundum avus tuus distrahere coactus est, etiamsi maxime emptor eum alii vendidit, si tamen tu avo tuo heres extitisti, ut tibi reddito a te pretio restituatur, postquam placuit in rem quoque dari actionem, secundum formam perpetui edicti adito praeside provinciae poteris postulare, si modo qui secundo loco comparavit longae possessionis praescriptione non fuerit munitus.

PP. VI id. Aug. Pio et Pontiano conss.

[4] Idem A. Primo et Eutycheti. Si per vim vel metum mortis aut cruciatus corporis venditio vobis extorta est et non postea eam consensu roborastis, iuxta perpetui formam edicti intra annum quidem agentes, quo experiundi potestas est, si res non restituatur, quadrupli referetis condemnationem, scilicet reddito a vobis pretio: post annum vero causa cognita eadem actio in simplum permittitur: quae causae cognitio eo pertinet, ut ita demum decernatur, si alia actio non sit.

PP. III non. Aug. Gordiano A. et Aviola conss.

Nineteenth Title Acts Done Through Force or Fear[128]

[1] Emperor ALEXANDER Augustus to Felix. It was rightfully responded (by jurists) that the (judicial) pursuit of property that was taken away by force or theft remains unimpaired even if it subsequently perished.[129]

Posted November 22, in the consulship of Maximus, for the second time, and Aelianus (223).

[2] The same Augustus to Alexander. Since you acknowledge that you not only formally promised the money, but also paid it, it is impossible to understand by what reasoning you demand that what was paid be restored to you as a victim of force. For it is improbable that you rushed to pay while failing to raise a complaint about the promissory note (chirographum) being extorted through force, unless (perhaps) you say that you were also forced to make the payment.

Posted June 26, in the consulship of Alexander Augustus, for the second time, and Marcellus (226).

[3] Emperor GORDIAN Augustus to Gaius. If through force or fear your grandfather was compelled to sell a farm, and even if, in particular, the buyer (then) sold it to a third party, nevertheless, if you became your grandfather's heir, you can – after it became settled that an action for property (actio in rem) be also given (to victims of force or fear) – approach the provincial governor and, in accord with the provision of the Perpetual Edict, demand its restoration after you repay the price, as long as the second purchaser is not protected by long-term prescription.

Posted August 8, in the consulship of Pius and Pontianus (238).

[4] The same Augustus to Primus and Eutyches. If a sale was extorted from you through force or fear of death or bodily torture, and thereafter you did not confirm it by agreement, if you bring suit, in accord with the provision of the Perpetual Edict, within a year from when the opportunity to sue arises, you will receive a condemnation for quadruple damages, so long, of course, as you return the price. But after a year the same action is permitted following an examination of the case, for simple damages; this examination has as its object that this action will be given only if no other lies.

Posted August 3, in the consulship of Gordian Augustus and Aviola (239).

[128] See D. 4.2.
[129] Blume: "i.e., the value [of the items] could be recovered if they perished."

[5] Idem A. Rufo militi. Non interest, a quo vis adhibita sit patri et patruo tuo, utrum ab emptore an vero sciente emptore ab alio, ut vi metuve possessionem vendere cogerentur. nam si adhibita vi compulsi sunt possessiones suas quae maiore valebant minimo distrahere, iurisdictionis tenore, ut id quod improbe factum est in priorem statum revolvatur, impetrabunt.

PP. VI k. Ian. Gordiano A. et Aviola conss.

[6] Impp. Diocletianus et Maximianus AA. et CC. Pollae. Ad invidiam alicui nocere nullam dignitatem oportet. unde intellegis, quod ad metum arguendum, per quem dicis initum esse contractum, senatoria dignitas adversarii tui sola non est idonea.

PP. III k. Mai. Heracliae CC. conss.

[7] Idem AA. et CC. Cotui. Si donationis vel transactionis vel stipulationis vel cuiuscumque alterius contractus obligationis confectum instrumentum metu mortis vel cruciatus corporis extortum vel capitales minas pertimescendo adito praeside provinciae probare poteris, hoc ratum haberi secundum edicti formam non patietur.

D. II non. Ian. AA. conss.

[8] Idem AA. et CC. Trophimo. Cum te domus et horti venditionem fecisse sub spe recipiendi, quod de frumento feceras, instrumentum vel timore, ne ad civilia munera nominareris, proponas et rescindi venditionem veluti metus causa factam desideres, intellegis ad ratum non habendum contractum metum huiusmodi prodesse non posse.

D. XI k. Sept. Viminacii AA. conss.

[9] Idem AA. et CC. Hymnodae. Metum non iactationibus tantum vel contestationibus, sed atrocitate facti probari convenit.

D. k. Dec. AA. conss.

[10] Idem AA. et CC. Faustinae. Accusationis institutae vel futurae metu alienationem seu promissionem factam rescindi postulantis improbum desiderium est.

D. VI k. Febr. CC. conss.

[5] The same Augustus to Rufus, a soldier. It makes no difference who used force on your father and your paternal uncle, whether the buyer or a third party with the buyer's knowledge, so as to compel them to sell a possession by force or fear. For if force was applied and they were compelled to sell their possessions for less than their value, they will, in conformity with the Praetor's Edict (tenore iurisdictionis), succeed in rolling back what was dishonestly done against their former situation.

Posted December 27, in the consulship of Gordian Augustus and Aviola (239).

[6] Emperors Diocletian and Maximian Augusti and the Caesars to Polla. No exalted rank should be a source of harm to the holder, by causing him to incur odium. So you understand that the senatorial rank of your adversary is not sufficient in itself to establish the fear that you say resulted in the contract.

Posted April 29, at Heraclea, in the consulship of the Caesars (294).[130]

[7] The same Augusti and Caesars to Cotus. If you can prove, after applying to the provincial governor, that a written instrument of gift or settlement or a stipulation or any other contractual obligation was extorted through fear of death or bodily torture or from fear of mortal threats, in accord with the Edict he will not allow this to be valid.

Given January 4, in the consulship of the Augusti (293).[131]

[8] The same Augusti and Caesars to Trophimus. You state that you sold your house and garden (either) in the hope of recovering a document you executed concerning grain or from fear of being selected for municipal duties, and you now seek that the sale be rescinded as made through fear. You understand that fear of this kind cannot be of significance for holding the contract void.

Given August 22, at Viminacium, in the consulship of the Augusti (293).

[9][132] The same Augusti and Caesars to Hymnoda. It is agreed that fear is proven not by (mere threatening) boasts or declarations, but by atrocious acts.

Given December 1, in the consulship of the Augusti (293).

[10] The same Augusti and Caesars to Faustina. It is a dishonest request to seek that a conveyance or promise be rescinded (because it was) made from fear of an accusation that has been instituted or will be.

Given January 27, in the consulship of the Caesars (294).

[130] Mommsen gives April 29, 293.
[131] Mommsen gives June 4, 293.
[132] Combine with C. 2.20.6, 2.31.2, 4.44.8 (addressee: Aurelia Euodia).

[11] Imp. Constantinus A. ad Euagrium pp. Si per impressionem quis aliquem metuens saltem in mediocri officio constitutum rei suae in eadem provincia vel loco, ubi tale officium peragit, sub venditionis titulo fecerit cessionem, et quod emptum fuerit reddatur et nihilo minus etiam pecunia retineatur: simili poena servanda, si qui vel coniugis vel amici nominibus abutentes praedam tamen sibi adquirunt.

D. x k. Oct. Aquileiae Constantino A. vii et Constantio conss.

[12] Impp. Honorius et Theodosius AA. ad populum. Venditiones donationes transactiones, quae per potentiam extortae sunt, praecipimus infirmari.

D. xiii k. Mart. Constantinopoli Honorio x et Theodosio vi AA. conss.

XX De Dolo Malo

[1] Impp. Severus et Antoninus AA. Clementinae. Si fideiussor a creditore pignora emit, oblata quantitat sortis et usurarum tibi dominium cum fructibus, quos bona fide percepit, consultius restituet, ne fidei ruptae gratia de dolo possit actio exerceri.

Accepta D. iii id. Mai. Plautiano et Geta conss.

[2] Imp. Antoninus A. Agrippae. De dolo actio, cum alia nulla competit, causa cognita permittitur.

D. non. Nov. Gentiano et Basso conss.

[3] Imp. Gordianus A. Aquilino. Non possunt obesse tibi tempora, quae in actione de dolo solent computari, quibus rei publicae causa, ut adlegas, occuparis: sed exinde tibi incipiet tempus cedere, ex quo muneribus liberatus facultatem agendi intra praestituta tempora coeperis obtinere.

PP. id. Aug. Sabino ii et Venusto conss.

[11] Emperor CONSTANTINE Augustus to Euagrius, Praetorian Prefect. If, from fear because of some oppression, a person cedes title of his property, ostensibly as a sale, to someone in even a low-level office, (if the property is located) in the same province or place where this official holds office, what is purchased shall be returned but nonetheless the money (i.e., the purchase price) shall be retained (by the seller). A similar penalty shall be inflicted if anyone, by improperly using the names of a wife or a friend, nevertheless acquires plunder for himself.[133]

Given September 22, at Aquileia, in the consulship of Constantine Augustus, for the seventh time, and Constantius (326).

[12][134] Emperors HONORIUS and THEODOSIUS Augustus to the people. We direct that sales, gifts, and settlements extorted by the powerful shall be deemed void.

Given February 17, at Constantinople, in the consulship of Honorius, for the tenth time, and Theodosius, for the sixth time, Augusti (415).

Twentieth Title Deceit[135]

[1] Emperors SEVERUS and ANTONINUS Augusti to Clementina. If your surety (fideiussor) purchased pledged property from your creditor, and you tendered to him (the surety) the amount of the principal with interest, he will advisedly restore to you ownership (of the pledges), along with the fruits (fructus) he took in good faith, in order to prevent an action on deceit (actio de dolo) being brought because of broken faith (fidei ruptae gratia).

Received and given May 13, in the consulship of Plautianus and Geta (203).

[2] Emperor ANTONINUS Augustus to Agrippa. The action on deceit is granted after examination of the case, if no other (action) lies.

Given November 5, in the consulship of Gentianus and Bassus (211).

[3] Emperor GORDIAN Augustus to Aquilinus. The time limits normally calculated in the action on deceit cannot be a problem for you if, as you allege, you were at the time occupied with public business.[136] Rather, the time will commence to run against you from the moment when you are freed from your duties and start to have the opportunity to sue within the time that is fixed.

Posted August 13, in the consulship of Sabinus, for the second time, and Venustus (240).

[133] See C. 1.53.1; also C. 5.2.1, 5.4.6, and 5.7.1. Because of the date, Constantinus is emended from Constantius; but Seeck dates to September 22, 340, while Barnes has November 22, 326(?).
[134] = C.Th. 3.1.9.
[135] Dolus malus, which the jurists closely associate also with fraud. See D. 4.3.
[136] The text here is apparently corrupt, but this is the sense. The man, doubtless, was away from home; at this date (see law 8 below), the action had to be brought within one year.

[4] Impp. Diocletianus et Maximianus AA. et CC. Menandrae. Cum proponas inter te et eum, quem in contubernio ancillam tuam sibi coniunxisse memorasti, placuisse, ut tibi pro eadem daret mancipium, intellegis, quod, si manumisisti vel ei tradidisti et ille manumisit, revocandae libertatis potestatem non habes, sed solum, si necdum statutum tempus excessit et fidem placiti rumpat, desiderare debes de dolo tibi decerni actionem. quod si penes te dominium eius remansit, adito praeside provinciae cum natis hanc potes recuperare, si nulla moveatur status quaestio.

D. III k. Mai. Heracliae CC. conss.

[5] Idem AA. et CC. Aphrodisiae. pr. Si superstite patre per emancipationem tui iuris effecta matri successisti rebusque tuis per legitimum tutorem patrem eundemque manumissorem administratis postea transegisti cum eo bona fide, perspicis, quod, si pactum tantum factum sit, petitio tua per exceptionem submovetur, si vero novatio legitimo modo intercessit et acceptilatio subsecuta est, nullam tibi iam superesse actionem. 1. Sane si laesa es immodice liberatione sollemniter per novationem atque acceptilationem tributa, non de dolo propter paternam verecundiam, sed in factum actio tibi tribuenda est.

D. id. Iun. AA. conss.

[6] Idem AA. et CC. Hymnodae. Dolum ex insidiis perspicuis probari convenit.

D. k. Dec. AA. conss.

[7] Idem AA. et CC. Sebastiano. Si maior quinque et viginti annis hereditatem fratris tui repudiasti, nulla tibi facultas eius adeundae relinquitur. sane si eius uxoris tibi substitutae dolo factum est, actionem de dolo contra eam exercere potes.

D. XVI k. Mai. CC. conss.

[4] Emperors D*IOCLETIAN and* M*AXIMUS Augusti and the Caesars to Menandra.* You state that, between you and the man who, so you recount, united your slave woman to himself in a domestic partnership (contubernium), it was agreed that he give a slave to you (as compensation) for her. You understand that if you manumitted her, or you handed her over to him and he manumitted her, you have no power to revoke her freedom; but if the prescribed time has not yet passed and he breaks his promise, you may only seek that the action on deceit be accorded you. If, however, you retained ownership of her, you can approach the provincial governor and recover her along with her children, provided no question as to her status (i.e., her freedom) is raised.

Given April 29, at Heraclea, in the consulship of the Caesars (294).[137]

[5] The same Augusti and Caesars to Aphrodisia. pr. During your father's lifetime, you were emancipated (by him) and became sui iuris, and you then succeeded your mother (as her heir); your property was administered through your father as your statutory tutor and emancipator, but thereafter you settled with him in good faith. You see that if just a pact (pactum, of settlement) was made, your claim is defeated through a defense (setting up the pact). But if a novation occurred in the prescribed manner and a formal release (acceptilatio) followed, no cause of action remains for you now. 1. Of course, if you were seriously damaged by a discharge granted in proper form through novation and formal release, you should be granted, not the action on deceit because of the respect due your father, but an action on the facts (actio in factum).[138]

Given June 13, in the consulship of the Augusti (293).

[6][139] The same Augusti and Caesars to Hymnoda. It is agreed that deceit must be proven by showing blatant trickery.

Given December 1, in the consulship of the Augusti (293).

[7] The same Augusti and Caesars to Sebastianus. If you rejected an inheritance from your brother when you were over 25 years old, you have left no opportunity (now) to accept it. Of course, if this occurred through the deceit of his wife who was the substitute (heir) for you, you can use the action on deceit against her.

Given April 16, in the consulship of the Caesars (294).

[137] Mommsen has April 29, 293.

[138] Blume: "Condemnation in an action for fraud involved infamy. That result was not deemed desirable in certain cases, and hence, instead of an action for fraud, an action on the facts (in factum) only, in which all mention of fraud was avoided, could be brought. That was true in actions by children against parents; by a freedman against his patron; by a plebeian against one of high rank." C. 5.12.1 and 2; C. 5.21.2; D. 4.3.11.

[139] Combine with C. 2.19.9, 2.31.2, 4.14.8 (addressee: Aurelia Euodia).

[8] Imp. Constantinus A. ad Symmachum vicarium. Optimum duximus non ex eo die, quo se quisque admissum dolum didicisse memoraverit, neque intra anni utilis tempus, sed potius ex eo die, quo adseritur commissus dolus, intra continuum biennium de dolo actionem moveri, sive afuerit sive praesto est is, qui dolum se passum esse conqueratur. omnes igitur sciant neque incipiendae post biennium neque ante completum biennium coeptae, post biennium finiendae doli actionis concessam licentiam.

D. VIII k. Aug. Naisso Constantino A. V et Licinio C. conss.

XXI De in Integrum Restitutione Minorum Viginti Quinque Annis

[1] Imp. Alexander A. Plotianae. Illud inspiciendum est, num inofficiosi querellae vel palam vel tacita dissimulatione sit renuntiatum. nec hoc autem in personam tuam cadere posse auxilium, quod aetati impertitur, ostendit.

D. V id. Iul. Maximo II et Aeliano conss.

[2] Idem A. Alexandro. Eo tempore, quo soror tua auxilio iuvabatur aetatis, si patris intestati bonorum possessionem accipere debuit, licet quinque filios superstites habuerit, non tamen ideo minus ad edicti praerogativam pertinet, scilicet si nunc per aetatem beneficium restitutionis largitur.

PP. VIII id. Aug. Pio et Pontiano conss.

[3] Impp. Diocletianus et Maximianus AA. et CC. Attiano. Si curatorem habens minor quinque et viginti annis post pupillarem aetatem res venum dedisti, hunc contractum servari non oportet, cum non absimilis ei habeatur minor curatorem habens, cui a praetore curatore dato bonis interdictum est. si vero sine curatore constitutus contractum fecisti, [8][140] Emperor CONSTANTINE Augustus to Symmachus, His Vicar. We hold it best that an action on deceit be raised not starting from the day when someone states he learned of the occurrence of deceit, nor within the space of an effective year (annus utilis), but rather within two continuous years starting from the day on which the deceit was allegedly committed, whether the person alleging the deceit is absent or at hand. So let all be on notice that no permission is given either to begin an action on deceit after two years, nor, if it is begun before two years, to finish it after two years.

Given July 25, at Naissus, in the consulship of Constantine Augustus, for the fifth time, and the Caesar Licinius (319).

Twenty-First Title Restoration of Rights to Those Less Than 25 Years Old[141]

[1] Emperor ALEXANDER Augustus to Plotiana. It must be examined (in many cases) whether a complaint about an undutiful (will; querella inofficiosi testamenti) was waived either expressly or implicitly through deliberate inattention. But the relief extended to (those below) the age (of 25) demonstrates that this rule cannot apply to you.

Given July 11, in the consulship of Maximus, for the second time, and Aelianus (223).

[2] The same Augustus to Alexander. If your sister, at the time when she was given relief because of her age, should have accepted possession of her intestate father's estate (but didn't) although she has five living sons, still she falls under the privilege of the Edict if the benefit of restoration because of age is now (still) available.[142]

Posted August 6, in the consulship of Pius and Pontianus (238).

[3] Emperors DIOCLETIAN and MAXIMIAN Augusti and the Caesars to Attianus. If you are under 25 years old and have a curator, and after reaching the age of adulthood (post pupillarem aetatem) you sold property (without his consent), this contract should not be upheld, since a person under 25 with a curator is

[140] = C.Th. 2.15.1.

[141] Restitutio in integrum, a praetorian remedy allowing restoration to a status quo ante. See D. 4.4. Restitutio in integrum is the subject of Titles 21 to 54.

[142] Blume: "The daughter here was doubtless emancipated. So she was required to ask for the right of possession of the inheritance, in order to receive any part of it ... The time for that was limited, and she failed to do so during that time. Nevertheless, if she was still a minor, she could still do so upon being restored to her rights. She evidently thought that she was prevented from doing so by reason of her children, who, next to her, were interested in the inheritance, and whose interests were, therefore, antagonistic." The consular date indicates that this rescript is actually from Gordian.

implorare in integrum restitutionem, si necdum tempora praefinita excesserint, causa cognita non prohiberis.

D. XIIII k. Mai. Heracliae AA. conss.

[4] Idem AA. et CC. Isidoro. Si minorem te quinque et viginti annis fuisse, cum contraheres, ostenderis, et tempora restitutionis praestituta excessisse ab adversario tuo comprobatum non fuerit, praeses provinciae in integrum restitutionis dare tibi auxilium debeat.

D. V k. Mai. Heracliae AA. conss.

[5] Idem AA. et CC. Rufo. pr. Minoribus in integrum restitutio, in quibus se captos probare possunt, etsi dolus adversarii non probetur, competit. 1. Ante impletum etiam quintum et vicesimum annum de his, in quibus se minores captos existimant, posse in integrum restitutionem implorare certissimi iuris est.

D. V k. Mai. Heracliae AA. conss.

[6] Idem AA. et CC. Sententiae. Si intra aetatem, cui succurri solet, in integrum restitutionis lis inchoata est nec ei a te renuntiatum est, mors eius, contra quem haec fuerat implorata, fraudi tibi esse non potest.

D. V k. Mai. Sirmi CC. conss.

[7] Idem AA. et CC. Severae. De tutela avunculi eiusdemque tutoris, cui falso aetate probata praestitisti liberationem, quem ignarum aetatis tuae non fuisse tam officium tutelae quam sanguinis proximitas arguit, si necdum statutum tempus excessit, ex causa in integrum restitutionis heredes eius convenire potes.

D. XI k. Aug. CC. conss.

[8] Impp. Honorius et Theodosius AA. Iuliano proconsuli Africae. Minoribus in his, quae vel praetermiserint vel ignoraverint, innumeris auctoritatibus constat esse consultum.

considered not unlike a person whom the Praetor gives a curator and prevents from (managing) his property. But if you made the contract without having a curator, you are not forbidden from seeking, after examination, restoration of your rights, provided the time for doing so has not elapsed.[143]

Given April 18, at Heraclea, in the consulship of the Augusti (293).

[4][144] The same Augusti and Caesars to Isidorus. If you show that you were under 25 years old when you made the contract, and your adversary does not prove that the time fixed for restoration of rights has elapsed, the provincial governor should give you the benefit of restoration of rights.

Given April 27, at Heraclea, in the consulship of the Augusti (293).

[5][145] The same Augusti and Caesars to Rufus. pr. Restoration of rights is available to those under 25 when they can prove they were overreached, even if the adversary's deceit is not proved. 1. It is also quite settled law that as to transactions in which they believe themselves overreached, they can seek restoration of rights before they complete their twenty-fifth year.

Given April 27, at Heraclea, in the consulship of the Augusti (293).

[6] The same Augusti and Caesars to Sententia. If you initiated a suit for restoration of rights while at the age to which help is usually extended, and you have not renounced it, the death of the person against whom you brought it cannot prejudice you.

Given April 27, at Sirmium, in the consulship of the Caesars (294).

[7] The same Augusti and Caesars to Severa. If the legal time has not yet elapsed, you can sue for restoration of rights against the heirs of your maternal uncle who was also your tutor, to whom, when your age was incorrectly certified, you gave a release concerning his guardianship; for his position as tutor as well as the closeness of his relationship makes clear he was not unaware of your (true) age.

Given July 22, in the consulship of the Caesars (294).

[8][146] Emperors Honorius and Theodosius Augusti to Julian, Proconsul of Africa. It is agreed by numerous authorities that concern is shown for those under 25 in matters that they overlook or are unaware of.

143 Blume: "The rescript established a new rule [under which] a transaction without consent of curator, if [the] minor had one, was absolutely void, needing no restitution."

144 Combine with C. 2.24.4.

145 Perhaps to be combined with C. 5.11.12 ("Written April 5") and C. 5.14.6 ("Given May 3").

146 = C.Th. 2.16.3 (which speaks of "women and minors"); combine with C. 3.6.3.

D. prid. non. Mart. Ravennae Constantio vc. cons.

[9] Imp. Zeno A. Aeliano pp. Non videtur circumscriptus esse minor, qui iure sit usus communi.

D. k. Ian. Basilio cons.

XXII De Filio Familias Minore

[1] Imp. Gordianus A. Candiano militi. Si frater tuus, cum mutuam pecuniam acciperet, in patris fuit potestate nec iussu eius nec contra senatus consultum contractum est, propter lubricum aetatis adversus eam cautionem in integrum restitutionem potuit postulare.

PP. III non. Oct. Pio et Pontiano conss.

[2] Idem A. Tryphoni militi. Filius familias, si minor viginti quinque annis pro extraneo fideiussit, in integrum restitutionem postulare non prohibetur. sed et si pro patre suo fideiussor extitit eique diem suum functo non successit, in integrum restitutionem postulare potest.

D. k. Iul. Gordiano A. II et Pompeiano conss.

XXIII De Fideiussoribus Minorum

[1] Impp. Severus et Antoninus AA. Myroni. Postquam in integrum aetatis beneficio restitutus es, periculum evictionis emptori, cui praedium ex bonis paternis vendidisti, praestare non cogeris. sed ea res fideiussores, qui pro te intervenerint, excusare non potest. quare mandati iudicio, si pecuniam solverint aut condemnati fuerint, convenieris, modo si eo quoque nomine restitutionis auxilio non iuvaris.

PP. VI k. Oct. Severo A. et Albino conss.

Given March 6, at Ravenna, in the consulship of the vir clarissimus Constantius (414).

[9][147] Emperor ZENO to Aelianus, Praetorian Prefect. A person under 25 is not held to have been defrauded when ordinary law was applied to him.

Given January 1, in the consulship of Basilius (480).

Twenty-Second Title A Son under 25 Who Is in His Father's Power

[1][148] Emperor GORDIAN Augustus to Candianus, a soldier. If your brother was in his father's power when he accepted a loan of money, and the contract was made neither by his (the father's) order nor contrary to the decree of the Senate,[149] because of his youthful lack of caution he could seek restoration of rights against the formal written promise (cautio).

Posted October 5, in the consulship of Pius and Pontianus (238).

[2] The same Augustus to Trypho, a soldier. If a son who was in his father's power and under 25 years old went surety for a non-family member, he is not forbidden from seeking restoration of rights. And even if he was surety for his own father, but did not inherit from him upon his death, he can seek restoration of rights.

Given July 1, in the consulship of Gordian Augustus, for the second time, and Pompeianus (241).

Twenty-Third Title The Sureties of Those Under 25

[1] Emperors SEVERUS and ANTONINUS Augusti to Myro. After you have been restored to your rights by benefit of age, you are not compelled to be responsible to the purchaser, to whom you sold real property from your father's estate, for the risk of eviction (by the true owner). But this fact cannot excuse the sureties who assumed liability for you. So if they pay money or are condemned, you may be sued by the action on mandate, provided you are not helped by the benefit of restoration of rights on this account as well.

Posted September 26, in the consulship of Severus Augustus and Albinus (194).

[147] Combine with C. 5.12.28, 5.75.6.

[148] Combine with C. 4.13.1 (addressee: Candidus).

[149] The SC Macedonianum forbade loans of money to sons under paternal power. See D. 14.6, C. 4.28.

[2] Impp. Diocletianus et Maximianus AA. Curioni. Si ea, quae tibi vendidit possessiones, interposito decreto praesidis aetatis tantummodo auxilio adiuvatur, non est dubium fideiussorem ex persona sua obnoxium esse contractui. verum si dolo malo apparuerit contractum interpositum esse, manifesti iuris est utique personae tam venditricis quam fideiussores consulendum esse.

S. VI k. Mai. Diocletiano III et Maximiano AA. Cons

XXIIII Si Tutor vel Curator Intervenerit

[1] Imp. Antoninus A. Marcianae. Si iam puberes utriusque sexus parentium hereditatem adistis, sed etiam nunc in ea aetate estis, ut eo, quod paternae hereditati vos obligastis, in integrum restitutionis auxilium accipere debeatis, adite per procuratores vestros praesidem provinciae. quod si legitimam aetatem implestis idque tempus, quo in integrum restitui possitis, excessit, curatores vestros, si adversus eos nondum experti estis, iudicio secundum formam iuris convenite.

PP. II non. April. Laeto et Cereale conss.

[2] Imp. Alexander A. Marcianae. Minoribus annis viginti quinque etiam in his, quae praesentibus tutoribus vel curatoribus in iudicio vel extra iudicium gesta fuerint, in integrum restitutionis auxilium superesse, si circumventi sunt, placuit.

[3] Impp. Diocletianus et Maximianus AA. Nicomedi. Etiam in his, quae minorum tutores vel curatores male gessisse probari possunt, licet personali actione a tutore vel curatore suum consequi possint, in integrum restitutionis auxilium eisdem minoribus dari iam pridem placuit.

D. IIII non. Mai. Maximo II et Aquilino conss.

[4] Idem AA. et CC. Isidoro. Si creditor non vestram personam, sed curatorum secutus cum ipsis contractum habuit et ab ipsis stipulatus est, nullam ei prorsus adversus vos actionem competere manifestum est.

V k. Mai. Heracliae AA. conss.

[2] Emperors DIOCLETIAN and MAXIMIAN Augusti to Curio. If the woman sold you her possessions and, by intervention of a governor's decree, she is aided only through the benefit given to her age (i.e., she was under 25), there is (nonetheless) no doubt that her surety is bound to the contract in his own right. But if it (also) appears that the contract was deceitfully made, it is evident law that the interests both of seller and surety must be considered.

Written April 26, in the consulship of Diocletian, for the third time, and Maximian, Augusti (287).

Twenty-Fourth Title If a Tutor or Curator Participates[150]

[1] Emperor ANTONINUS Augustus to Marciana. If you (the petitioner and her siblings) have entered on the inheritance from both your parents as adults, but are still young enough to receive the benefit of restoration of rights against obligating yourselves for the inheritance from your father, approach the provincial governor through your procurators. But if you are of legal age and the time has elapsed when you could be restored to your rights, sue your curatores by an action in accord with the legal rule, assuming you have not already sued them.

Posted April 4, in the consulship of Laetus and Cerealis (215).

[2] Emperor ALEXANDER Augustus to Marciana. It is accepted that the benefit of restoration of rights is available to persons under 25 years old even in those matters conducted in the presence of their tutores or curatores, whether in or out of court, if they were (in fact) taken advantage of.

[3] Emperors DIOCLETIAN and MAXIMIAN Augusti to Nicomedes. It has long been the accepted rule that the benefit of restoration of rights is accorded also as to matters which the tutores or curatores of those under 25 are proven to have badly managed, even though they (those under 25) can also recover their own (damages) from a tutor or curator through a personal action (actio personalis).

Given May 4, in the consulship of Maximus, for the second time, and Aquilinus (286).

[4][151] The same Augusti and the Caesars to Isidorus. If your creditor, looking not to you but to your curatores, made a contract with them and took a stipulation from them, obviously he has no right of action whatsoever against you.

April 27, at Heraclea, in the consulship of the Augusti (293).

[150] The issue in this title is the effect of a guardian's consent on restitutio in integrum.

[151] Combine with C. 2.21.4.

[5] Idem AA. et CC. Valentino. Etiam tutoribus vel curatoribus distrahentibus vel alias contrahentibus minores tam restitui rebus propriis quam tutorum vel curatorum damna sequi, nullo eis praeiudicio per electionem generando, placuit.

VI id. Dec. CC. conss.

XXV Si in Communi Eademque Causa in Integrum Restitutio Postuletur

[1] Impp. Diocletianus et Maximianus AA. et CC. Domitio Aphobio. Nec si maior quinque et viginti annis soror vestra fuit, vobis non mandantibus nec ratam transactionem habentibus de iure vestro quicquam minuere potuit. nam si cognitis quae gesserit his consensum post viginti et quinque annos aetatis commodastis, quamvis illa minor pro portione propria restitutionis auxilium implorare possit, vobis tamen ad communicandum edicti perpetui beneficium eius aetas patrocinari non potest.

S. III id. Aug. CC. conss.

XXVI Si Adversus Rem Iudicatam

[1] Imp. Alexander A. Iuliis. Minus ex tutelae iudicio consecuti de superfluo habere actionem ita potestis, si tempore iudicii minores annis fuistis et nunc beneficium aetatis vobis largitur. ceterum si post legitimam aetatem sententia prolata est, iterato eandem actionem de isdem speciebus inferre non potestis.

PP. V k. Febr. Pompeiano et Peligniano conss.

[2] Imp. Gordianus A. Serenae. Si, cum pater tuus te in sua potestate esse minimeque emancipationem a se factam valere diceret, pro consule super causa cognoscens te eius potestati subiectam pronuntiaverit, cum adversus eam sententiam in integrum restitui postules, is qui provinciam regit in impertienda cognitione suas partes secundum leges exhibebit.

PP. XV k. Dec. Pio et Pontiano conss.

[5] The same Augusti and Caesars to Valentinus. The accepted rule is that even when tutores or curatores make a sale or other contract (for their wards), those under 25 are restored to their own property and also claim damages (not otherwise satisfied) that are caused by their tutores or curatores, and no prejudice arises for them through choice of remedy.

December 8, in the consulship of the Caesars (294).

Twenty-Fifth Title If Restoration of Rights Is Sought in the Same Shared Case

[1][152] Emperors DIOCLETIAN and MAXIMIAN Augusti and the Caesars to Domitius Aphobius. Your sister, even if over 25 years old, could not in any way diminish your rights if you did not give her a mandate or ratify a settlement. For if you, knowing what she did, conferred your agreement concerning it after you reached 25, then although she, as a person below that age, could ask for restoration of rights as to her own portion, her age is of no legal help to you in participating in the benefit given by the Perpetual Edict.

Written August 11, in the consulship of the Caesars (294).

Twenty-Sixth Title If (Restoration of Rights Is Sought) Against an Adjudged Matter

[1] Emperor ALEXANDER Augustus to the Julii. If you received less (than was due) in a trial on tutelage, you can sue for the remainder (through restoration of right) only if you were not of age at the time of the trial and the benefit of age is at present bestowed on you. But if the verdict (in the trial on tutelage) was rendered after you reached legal age, you cannot again bring the same action concerning the same sort of things.[153]

Posted January 28, in the consulship of Pompeianus and Pelignianus (231).

[2] Emperor GORDIAN Augustus to Serena. When your father claimed that you were in his power and that his emancipation of you was in no way effective, the Proconsul who investigated the case pronounced you subject to his power. Since you now ask restoration of your rights against that decision, the provincial governor, in granting an investigation, will play his role in accord with the laws.[154]

Posted November 17, in the consulship of Pius and Pontianus (238).

[152] Combine with C. 4.51.4 (addressee: Domitius Aphobius), 8.42.18 (Domitius), both dated to February. Mommsen dates this constitution to February 11, 294.

[153] See C. 3.1.2.

[154] Compare C. 2.41.2.

[3] Imp. Philippus A. et Philippus C. Aelianae. Adversus sententiam eius, qui tunc vice principis iudicavit, in integrum restitutionis auxilium apud praetorem seu praesidem provinciae clarissimum virum flagitare nequaquam potes: nam adversus eius sententiam, qui vice principis cognovit, solus princeps restituet.

PP. XVIII k. Nov. Philippo A. et Titiano conss.

[4] Impp. Diocletianus et Maximianus AA. Urbano. Cum et minores vos esse adfirmetis et indefensos, nullum vobis praeiudicium fieri praeses provinciae pro sua gravitate curabit. nam si iusta defensione tutorum vel curatorum vobis adsistente aliquid statutum est, intellegitis in integrum restitutionis auxilium vobis esse necessarium: eodem obtinente etiam, si per procuratorem vestrum legitime ordinatum lis agitata est.

D. XVI k. Mai. Maximo et Aquilino conss.

[5] Idem AA. et CC. Marciano. In rem pupilli vel adulti contra tutores seu curatores a praeside lata sententia restitutionis auxilium non minus, quam si quid adversus eos fuisset statutum, implorare minores posse constat.

D. k. Nov. Nicomediae CC. conss.

XXVII Si Adversus Venditionem

[1] Imp. Alexander A. Florentino militi. Si minor annis viginti quinque emptori praedii cavisti nullam de cetero te esse controversiam facturum, idque etiam iureiurando corporaliter praestito servare confirmasti, neque perfidiae neque periurii me auctorem futurum sperare tibi debuisti.

D. VI k. Sept.

[2] Imp. Constantinus A. ad populum. In integrum restitutione minoribus adversus commenticias venditiones et adversus tutorum seu curatorum insidias sanctionum praesidio cautum esse non dubium est.

[3] Emperor Philip Augustus and the Caesar Philip to Aeliana. Before the Praetor or the vir clarissimus governor of the province you can in no wise claim the benefit of restoration of rights against the verdict of the person then judging as the Emperor's representative (vicarius). For against the verdict of a person trying a case as the Emperor's representative, only the Emperor will grant restoration.[155]

Posted October 15, in the consulship of Philip Augustus and Titianus (245).

[4] Emperors Diocletian and Maximian Augusti to Urbanus. Since you affirm that you are both under 25 and undefended, the provincial governor, in accord with his authority, will see to it that no disadvantage befalls you. For if any matter is determined when you are assisted by the legally proper defense of your tutores or curatores, you understand that you need the benefit of restoration of rights. The same is also true if the lawsuit was carried on through your legally appointed procurator.[156]

Given April 16, in the consulship of Maximus and Aquilinus (286).

[5] The same Augusti and Caesars to Marcianus. It is agreed that, when a governor's verdict against tutores or curatores negatively affects the property of a minor (pupillus) or an adult ward, those under 25 can seek the benefit of restoration no less than if something was decreed against them (personally).

Given November 1, at Nicomedia, in the consulship of the Caesars (294).

Twenty-Seventh Title If Against a Sale

[1] Emperor Alexander Augustus to Florentinus, a soldier. If, while under 25 years old, you gave the purchaser of real estate a formal promise that you would raise no controversy in the future, and you also confirmed your observance of this through an oath given corporally, you should not have hoped that I would assist your duplicity and false oath.[157]

Given August 27 (222–235).

[2][158] Emperor Constantine Augustus to the people. There is no doubt that by restoration of rights the protection of sanctions is accorded to those under 25 against fictitious sales, as also against the trickery of tutores or curatores.

[155] See C. 3.4.1.
[156] Blume: "If the minors were undefended, the decision was void, and no restitution of rights was needed. C. 7.43.6. If they were defended, restitution of rights might be had, the decision being only voidable."
[157] See C. 2.42.3.3–4. Similarly, of an oath given in the Emperor's name: C. 2.4.41–42.
[158] = C.Th. 2.16.1; combine with C. 5.37.22, 5.72.4, and perhaps 4.32.25. Actually issued in 329 (Seeck).

D. id. Mart. Sirmi ipso A. VII et C. conss.

XXVIII Si Adversus Venditionem Pignoris

[1] Impp. Diocletianus et Maximianus AA. Sabinae et aliis. Etiam adversus venditiones pignorum, quae a creditoribus fiunt, minoribus subveniri, si tamen magno detrimento adficiantur, iam pridem placuit. si igitur pignori captis praediis ac distractis enorme damnum ex huiusmodi venditione passos vos ostenderitis, praesertim cum hodieque vos minores esse adfirmetis, auxilium restitutionis vobis impertietur.

D. X k. Dec. Sirmi ipsis IIII et III AA. conss.

[2] Idem AA. et CC. Severae et Clementianae. pr. Rem, quam a patre vestro quondam creditor eius obligatam sibi distraxit, per aetatem vestram postulantium revocari desiderium non habet rationem. 1. Quod iuris est et si extraneo successistis: nam si creditor non bona fide versatus est, ipsum magis vel tutores sive curatores vestros, qui hanc venumdari passi sunt, convenite.

D. XIII k. Mai. Sirmi CC. conss.

XXVIIII Si Adversus Donationem

[1] Impp. Diocletianus et Maximianus AA. Theodotae. Si quae res ante nuptias congruenti moderatione a minore annis marito sponsaliorum tempore, etiam curatore praesente, tibi donatae sunt, obtentu aetatis non revocabuntur.

S. III non. Nov. Diocletiano A. et Aristobulo conss.

[2] Idem AA. et CC. Midae. pr. Si in te ac fratrem tuum emancipatos pater vester fecit donationem, in alium postea transferendo portionem eius nihil vobis abstulit: nec, si frater tuus sibi quaesiti praedii rustici partem donanti patri consensit, dominium ab eo discedere potuit propter senatus consulti auctoritatem, nec auxilium in integrum restitutionis in hac re necessarium est. 1. In aliis vero rebus, quae etiam sine decreti recitatione alienari possunt, si, postquam sibi donatae fuerint, Given March 15, at Sirmium, in the consulship of the Augustus himself, for the seventh time, and the Caesar <Constantius> (326).

Twenty-Eighth Title If Against the Sale of a Pledge

[1] Emperors Diocletian and Maximianus Augusti to Sabina and others. The long-standing rule is that help is given those under 25 even against the sales of pledges made by creditors, provided they (those under 25) are greatly harmed. So if you show that real estate was placed under a pledge and sold, and that you suffered great loss from such a sale, especially since you affirm that you are still under 25, the benefit of restoration will be granted to you.[159]

Given November 22, at Sirmium, in the consulship of the Augusti, for the fourth and third times, respectively (290).

[2] The same Augusti and Caesars to Severa and Clementiana. pr. Property once obligated (as a pledge) by your father was sold (after his death) by his creditor. The desire that underlies your request for a restoration on the basis of your age makes no sense. 1. This too is the law if you become heir to someone outside the family. For if the creditor did not act in good faith, sue him instead, or (else) your tutores or curatores who permitted sale of the property.

Given April 19, at Sirmium, in the consulship of the Caesars (294).

Twenty-Ninth Title If Against a Gift

[1][160] Emperors Diocletian and Maximian Augusti to Theodota. If at the time of your engagement (sponsalia) your husband was under 25 and in the presence of his curator he gave you property of appropriate amount, it cannot be reclaimed on the pretext of age.

Written November 3, in the consulship of the Emperor Diocletian and Aristobulus (285).

[2] The same Augusti and the Caesars to Midas. pr. If your father made a gift to you and your brother – both emancipated – he deprived you of nothing by later transferring a portion of it to a third party (the transfer being ineffective). Nor, if your brother consented to your father giving away part of the rural land that was acquired for himself (the brother), because of the authority of the decree of the Senate[161] he cannot lose ownership of it. The benefit of restoration of rights is not even needed in this case. 1. But as to other property that can be [159] See D. 20.5.7.1; also D. 4.4.9 pr. and C. 2.50.6.

[160] Combine with C. 5.71.8.

[161] The oratio Severi in D. 27.9.1, fixing conditions under which landed estates of minors could be sold. See also C. 8.53.24.

postea alii donanti eandem patri voluntatem in minore aetate accommodavit nec praestituta tempora restitutionis excessit, hoc auxilium implorare potest.

D. VIII k. Ian. AA. conss.

XXX Si Adversus Libertatem

[1] Impp. Severus et Antoninus AA. Anniae. Si post decretum praetoris viri clarissimi, qui fideicommissariam libertatem deberi pronuntiavit, Secundus, quem condicioni non paruisse conquereris, manumissus non est, aetas tua litis instaurationem admittit. quod si libertatem quamvis indebitam dedisti, non posse eam revocari intellegis, sed damnum, quod ob eam causam illatum est, iudicio negotiorum gestorum a curatoribus tuis esse sarciendum.

PP. II k. Iul. Laterano et Rufino conss.

[2] Imp. Gordianus A. Solanae. Etsi minor annis, ut adlegas, constituta servum tuum ab eo circumscripta in consilio manumisisti, tamen vindictae impositio, qua libertas iusta munitur, nec obtentu quidem aetatis rescindi potest. indemnitati vero tuae, a manumisso scilicet sarciendae, ab eo cuius iurisdictio est, quatenus iuris ratio permittit, consuli debet.

PP. VI id. Mart. Gordiano A. II et Pompeiano conss.

[3] Impp. Valerianus et Gallienus AA. Marthonae et Sabinillae. pr. Quos retrahi in servitutem postulatis, si non in consilio causa cognita, cum minores annis viginti fuissetis, manumisistis, non per in integrum restitutionem, sed ipso iure persequi potestis. quod si probata causa libertas praestita est, restitutio in integrum contra libertatem locum habere non potest. 1. Si tamen in ea re culpa seu fraude liberti eiusdemque curatoris ratio vestra laesa sit, sarciri damnum ab eo qui hoc intulit praeses provinciae curabit, non dubitaturus etiam graviorem exsecutionem adhibere, si quid tam aperta fraude commissum est, ut puniendum in liberto crimen deprehendatur.

PP. VIII k. Oct. Saeculare II et Donato conss.

transferred without invoking the decree, he can seek the benefit (of restoration) if, after the property was given to him, he thereafter, while (still) under 25, gave the same consent to his father to give it to a third party, provided the time fixed for restoration has not elapsed.

Given December 25, in the consulship of the Augusti (293).

Thirtieth Title If Against a Manumission

[1] Emperors Severus and Antoninus Augusti to Annia. Through a judicial decision (decretum), the vir clarissimus Praetor pronounced that freedom was owed (to a slave) on the basis of a trust (fideicommissum). If (your slave) Secundus, as you complain, did not fulfill a condition (imposed by the trust), and he has not (yet) been manumitted, then your age permits renewal of the litigation. But if you gave him freedom despite its not being owed, you understand that it cannot be revoked; the loss you suffered on that account you must recover through an action on management of affairs against your curatores.

Posted June 30, in the consulship of Lateranus and Rufinus (197).

[2] Emperor Gordian Augustus to Solana. Although, as you allege, you were under 25 when you were deceived by your slave and manumitted him in a family council (in consilio), nevertheless the application of the rod by which legal freedom is secured cannot be rescinded even on the pretext of age. But a court with jurisdiction should, insofar as the logic of the law permits, take care that you are indemnified, namely, by the person manumitted.

Posted March 10, in the consulship of Gordian Augustus, for the second time, and Pompeianus (241).

[3] Emperors Valerian and Gallienus Augusti to Marthona and Sabinilla. pr. Concerning those whom you ask be dragged back into slavery, if, when you were less than 20 years old, you manumitted them but not in a family council after an examination of the case, you can pursue them without resorting to restoration of rights, by (automatic) operation of law. 1. If, however, your interest in this matter was harmed by the fault or fraud of the freedman who is also your curator, the provincial governor will see to it that this loss is recompensed by the person who inflicted it, and he will not hesitate also to mete out an even harsher punishment if anything occurred with such open fraud that in the case of the freedman a crime deserving of punishment is detected.

Posted September 24, in the consulship of Saecularis, for the second time, and Donatus (260).

[4] Impp. Diocletianus et Maximianus AA. et CC. Tatiano. In iudicio de liberali causa sententiam pro libertate latam ne quidem praerogativa minoris aetatis sine appellatione posse rescindi ambigi non potest.

PP. VIII id. Ian. Nicomediae Diocletiano VIII et Maximiano VII conss.

XXXI Si Adversus Transactionem vel Divisionem Minor Restitui Velit

[1] Impp. Severus et Antoninus AA. Honorato. Cum in integrum pupilla restituta rescindi transactionem vel divisionem placuit, tu quoque actionibus, quas pridem habuisti, utaris.

[2] Impp. Diocletianus et Maximianus AA. et CC. Hymnodae. Si ex persona minorum in integrum restitutio adversus transactum propter aetatis auxilium imploretur, tibi quoque agenti ex integro vel replicatione contra exceptionem pacti vel, si peremptam constet pristinam obligationem, ex instauratione negotii tributa actione consulendum est.

D. k. Dec. CC. conss.

XXXII Si Adversus Solutionem a Debitore vel a Se Factam

[1] Impp. Diocletianus et Maximianus AA. et CC. Soteri. Exemplo ceterorum debitorum tutores etiam quae ex administratione tutelae debent curatoribus solventes liberantur, sed ante tempus in integrum restitutioni praestitutum edicto perpetuo permissum beneficium implorari et, an sit tribuendum, per causae cognitionem aestimari potest.

D. VI id. Febr. CC. conss.

[4] Emperors Diocletian and Maximian Augusti and the Caesars to Tatianus. It cannot be questioned that a verdict rendered in favor of freedom in a trial concerning liberty cannot be rescinded without an appeal, even because of the privilege given to those under 25.[162]

Posted January 6, at Nicomedia, in the consulship of Diocletian, for the eighth time, and Maximian, for the seventh time (303).

Thirty-First Title If Someone Under 25 Wants Restoration Against a Settlement or Partition

[1] Emperors Severus and Antoninus Augusti to Honoratus. Since the prevailing view is that a settlement or a partition (of property) is rescinded when a minor ward (pupilla) is restored to her rights, you too may use the rights of action you formerly had.

[2][163] Emperors Diocletian and Maximian Augusti and the Caesars to Hymnoda. If a restoration of rights against a settlement is requested on the part of those under 25 because of the aid extended to their age, your interests also, if you sue again, must be considered either through a counterdefense (replicatio) to the defense of a pact, or, if it is clear that the original obligation is extinguished, by giving you an action stemming from the transaction's reinstatement.

Given December 1, in the consulship of the Caesars (294).

Thirty-Second Title If Against a Payment Made by a Debtor Or by Himself

[1][164] Emperors Diocletian and Maximian Augusti and the Caesars to Soter. As with other debtors, tutores, too, are released when they pay to curatores what they owe on the administration of a tutorship, but, before the time granted for restoration of rights, the benefit allowed by the Perpetual Edict can be requested, and whether it should be granted can be evaluated through investigation of the case.

Given February 8, in the consulship of the Caesars (294).

[162] Blume: "The instant rescript seems at first blush to be inconsistent with C. 1 h.t. But there the judge merely declared that freedom was owing to the slave pursuant to what the testator had provided. This might be called quibbling with a principle of law, but there is, in fact, a distinction."

[163] Combine with C. 2.19.9, 2.20.6, 4.44.8 (addressee: Aurelia Euodia). Mommsen dates to December 1, 293.

[164] Combine with C. 2.45.2 (dated February 13). Blume: "Here a guardian settled with the curator; but that was not final. Restitution of rights might be obtained by the minors to set the release aside."

[2] Idem AA. et CC. Laurinae. Indebito legato, licet per errorem iuris a minore soluto, repetitionem ei decerni, si necdum tempus, quo restitutionis tribuitur auxilium, excesserit, rationis est.

D. XV k. April. Sirmi CC. conss.

XXXIII Si Adversus Dotem

[1] Imp. Alexander A. Valenti. Quoniam circumventam dicis sororem tuam omnia bona in dotem dedisse, an veritas adlegationi adsistat, si ad te hereditas sororis tuae vel bonorum possessio pertinuit et tempora nondum praeterierint, intra quae legibus conceditur ex persona defuncti postulare in integrum restitutionem, praeses provinciae praesente diversa parte examinabit.

D. VI id. Iul. Maximo et Paterno conss.

XXXIIII Si Adversus Delictum Suum

[1] Impp. Severus et Antoninus AA. Longino. In criminibus quidem aetatis suffragio minores non iuvantur: etenim malorum mores infirmitas animi non excusat. sed cum delictum non ex animo, sed ex contractu venit, noxa non committitur, etiamsi poenae causa pecuniae damnum inrogatur: et ideo minoribus et in hac causa in integrum restitutionis auxilium competit.

D. id. Oct. Severo II et Victorino conss.

[2] Impp. Diocletianus et Maximianus AA. et CC. Proculae. Licet in delictis aetate neminem excusari constet, matri tamen, quae filiis tutorem aetatis lubrico lapsa non petiit, eorum minime denegari successionem convenit, cum hoc in maioribus matribus tantum obtineat.

V non. Mart. CC. conss.

[2][165] The same Augusti and Caesars to Laurina. It is reasonable that the right to reclaim an unowed legacy, although through a mistake of law it was paid by someone under 25, is granted to him (the latter), provided that the time during which the benefit of restoration is given has not yet elapsed.

Given March 18, at Sirmium, in the consulship of the Caesars (294).

Thirty-Third Title If Against a Dowry

[1] Emperor ALEXANDER Augustus to Valens. You say that your sister, in giving all her property as a dowry, was overreached. If your sister's estate or the right to possess it (bonorum possessio) came to you, and the time has not yet elapsed during which the laws allow restoration of rights to be requested based on the legal position of the deceased, the provincial governor, in the presence of the other party, will examine whether this allegation conforms to the truth.

Given July 10, in the consulship of Maximus and Paternus (233).

Thirty-Fourth Title If Against His Own Delict

[1][166] Emperors SEVERUS and ANTONINUS Augusti to Longinus. In the case of crimes, indeed, those under 25 are not helped by the support given to (young) age. For infirmity of mind does not excuse the behavior of the wicked. But when a delict arises not from intent but on the basis of a contract, no offense is committed even if money damages are assessed as a penalty, and the benefit of restoration of rights is therefore also available to those under 25 in this case.

Given October 15, in the consulship of Severus, for the second time, and Victorinus (200).

[2] Emperors DIOCLETIAN and MAXIMIAN Augusti and the Caesars to Procula. Although it is clear that no one's delicts are excused by reason of age, still if through the carelessness of youth a mother (under 25) fails to seek a tutor for her sons, it is agreed that she is in no way denied succession to them; for that is true only for mothers who are of age.[167]

March 3, in the consulship of the Caesars (294).

[165] Combine with C. 7.2.11 (dated March 17, 293; the year is clearly an error).
[166] Combine with C. 2.36.1.
[167] See C. 6.56.3; Inst. 3.3.6.

XXXV Si Adversus Usucapionem

[1] Impp. Diocletianus et Maximianus AA. et CC. Isidorae. Contra eos, qui res minor*um* tenent, si usucapione dominium adquisierunt, restitutionis auxilium eis decerni debet.
D. k. Mai. Sirmi CC. conss.

XXXVI Si Adversus Fiscum

[1] Impp. Severus et Antoninus AA. Longino. Si Probus in minore aetate constitutus circumventus a Rufino dispensatore nostro venditionem rei praecipiti animo pretio longe minore contrahere festinavit, iuris publici fiscus noster in iure restitutionis sequetur auctoritatem.
D. id. Oct. Severo et Victorino conss.

[2] Imp. Alexander A. Antiocho et aliis. Si adversus privatos in integrum restitutionem tam tu quam fratres tui desideratis, praesidis provinciae viri clarissimi notio est isque causa cognita aestimabit, an auxilium quod imploratis conferri in vos debeat. quod si adversus fiscum id postulatis, intellegitis procuratorem meum una cum praeside, praesente fisci patrono, adire vos debere.
D. k. Aug. Alexandro A. II et Marcello conns.

[3] Impp. Diocletianus et Maximianus AA. et CC. Laurentio. pr. Edicto quidem divi Marci parentis nostri res minorum exceptae nihil tuum adiuvant desiderium, si quidem debiti causa patris minoris vel etiam ipsius praedia venumdata quinquennii praescriptionis nullam admittunt quaestionem. 1. Sed quoniam per collusionem sive fraudem tunc temporis procuratoris nostri nimis exiguo pretio fundum tuum cum mancipiis venumdatum adseveras, si aditus rationalis noster tuis adlegationibus adesse fidem nec servatam sollemnitatem hastarum animadverterit, fisco te satisfaciente revocata venditione fundum tibi restitui iubebit.
D. id. Febr. Sirmi CC. conss.

Thirty-Fifth Title If Against Usucapion

[1] Emperor DIOCLETIAN and MAXIMIAN Augusti and the Caesars to Isidora. The benefit of restoration should be accorded to them against persons who hold the property of those under 25 (even) if they acquired ownership through usucapion.

Given May 1, at Sirmium, in the consulship of the Caesars (294).

Thirty-Sixth Title If Against the Treasury

[1][168] Emperors SEVERUS and ANTONINUS Augusti to Longinus. If Probus, who is under 25, was overreached by Our Paymaster Rufinus, and he rashly hastened to sell his property for far too low a price, Our Treasury (fiscus) will follow the authority of (ordinary) public law as to the law of restoration of rights.

Given October 15, in the consulship of Severus and Victorinus (200).

[2] Emperor ALEXANDER Augustus to Antiochus and others. If you as well as your brothers request restoration of rights against private persons, the vir clarissimus governor of the province has jurisdiction, and after examining the case he will determine whether the help you seek should be given to you. But if you ask this against the Treasury, understand that you should apply to my Procurator along with the governor, in the presence of the Treasury Advocate.

Given August 1, in the consulship of Alexander Augustus, for the second time, and Marcellus (226).

[3] Emperors DIOCLETIAN and MAXIMIAN Augusti and the Caesars to Laurentius. pr. Although property of those under 25 was excepted in the Edict of the deified Marcus our parent,[169] this does not help your request at all, since, when real properties are sold for the debt of the young person's father or the young person himself, they allow no attack on the five-year prescription. 1. But since you assert that your farm, together with its slaves, was sold for an unduly low price through the collusion or fraud of Our then-serving Procurator, Our Comptroller (rationalis), if he is applied to and finds that your allegations are true and that the legal form of forced sales (hastae) was not observed, will order revocation of the sale and return of the farm to you after you satisfy the Treasury (as to the debt).

Given February 13, at Sirmium, in the consulship of the Caesars (294).

[168] Combine with C. 2.34.1.

[169] See Inst. 2.6.14. The Edict provided that, after five years, purchasers of property from the Treasury could repel a true owner through a defense. In the late Empire this defense was substantially strengthened.

XXXVII Si Adversus Creditorem

[1] Imp. Antoninus A. Prunico. Cum et ipse confitearis cum Zenodora minore viginti quinque annis contraxisse nec docere potuisse praetori viro clarissimo ex eo contractu locupletiorem factam, intellegis eam merito in integrum restitutam.

D. VI non. Mai. Messala et Sabino conss.

[2] Imp. Gordianus A. Gaiano. Si, ut adlegas, minor annis pecuniam fenori accepisti nec ea in rem tuam versa est, adversus cautionem, per quam eo nomine te obligasti, in integrum restitutionis auxilium potes sollemniter postulare.

PP. III non. Oct. Pio et Pontiano conss.

XXXVIII Si Ut Se Hereditate Abstineat

[1] Impp. Severus et Antoninus AA. Florentio et aliis. Si vos paternae hereditati non miscuistis, ob eam rem testificatio necessaria non fuit, cum fides veritatis verborum adminicula non desideret. quod si pro herede gessistis vel bonorum possessionem accepistis, propter aetatem, cui subveniri solet, in integrum restitutionis auxilium accipere debetis.

PP. V non. Mart. Saturnino et Gallo conss.

[2] Imp. Gordianus A. Herodotae. Si, cum avi tui testamento te heredem reliquissent, hereditates eorum non adisti, liberum tibi est repudiata paterna successione per in integrum restitutionis auxilium, quo te aetatis iure dicis esse munitam, hereditatem parentum tuorum, licet antea non adisti, nunc obtinere.

PP. III non. Febr. Gordiano A. II et Pompeiano conss.

Thirty-Seventh Title If Against a Creditor

[1] Emperor Antoninus Augustus to Prunicus. Since you yourself acknowledge that you made a contract with Zenodora who was under 25 years old, and that you could not show to the vir clarissimus Praetor that she was enriched by the contract, you understand that she was deservedly restored to her rights.

Given May 2, in the consulship of Messala and Sabinus (214).

[2] Emperor Gordian Augustus to Gaianus. If, as you allege, you were under 25 when you accepted money loaned at interest, and this (money) was not turned to your benefit (in rem tuam versa), you can duly seek the assistance of restoration of rights against the written promise (cautio) by which you obligated yourself on that account.

Posted October 5, in the consulship of Pius and Pontianus (238).

Thirty-Eighth Title If That He Abstain From an Inheritance[170]

[1][171] Emperors Severus and Antoninus Augusti to Florentius and others. If you refrained from involving yourself with your father's estate, on this matter a declaration before witnesses (that you were not accepting it) was unnecessary, since the evidence that truth provides requires no support from words. But if you acted as heir or accepted possession of the estate, you should receive the benefit of restoration of rights by virtue of your age, which is routinely assisted.

Posted March 3, in the consulship of Saturninus and Gallus (198).

[2] Emperor Gordian Augustus to Herodota. Your grandfathers appointed you heir by testament, but you did not accept the inheritance from them. Through the benefit of restoration of rights, by which you say you are protected by virtue of your age, you are now free, after refusing to succeed your father as heir, to obtain the inheritance of your forebears, although previously you did not accept it.

Posted February 3, in the consulship of the Emperor Gordian, for the second time, and Pompeianus (241).

[170] This Title confirms the (undated) change to the praetorian law of succession mentioned by Gaius, 2.157–158.

[171] = C. Greg. 2.4.1 (addressee Frontinus), which omits "or accepted possession of the estate."

XXXVIIII Si Ut Omissam Hereditatem vel Bonorum Possessionem vel Quid Aliud Adquirat

[1] Imp. Gordianus A. Protae. Minores viginti quinque annis non tantum in his, quae ex bonis propriis amiserunt, verum etiam si hereditatem sibi delatam non adierint, posse in integrum restitutionem postulare iam dudum placuit.
PP. id. Oct. Pio et Pontiano conss.

[2] Impp. Diocletianus et Maximianus AA. et CC. Sarapiadi. Ad bonorum possessionem in paternis rebus omissam minores in integrum restitutionis admitti beneficio iam pridem placuit. restituti autem decreto bona quae habuerunt mortis tempore patris debent conferre.
D. XVI k. Nov. Sirmi CC. conss.

XXXX In Quibus Causis in Integrum Restitutio Necessaria Non Est

[1] Imp. Alexander A. Mutato. Minoribus quinque et viginti annis, praesertim qui per tutores vel curatores non defenduntur, non obesse, si mortem defuncti non ulciscantur, innumeris divorum parentum meorum ac meis rescriptis continetur.
V id. Mai. Alexandro A. III et Dione conss.

[2] Impp. Valerianus et Gallienus AA. et Valerianus C. Theodotae. Adulescentiae tempus non imputari in id quinquennium liberis, cuius praescriptio seram inofficiosi moventibus quaestionem opponi solet, manifeste ante rescripsimus. impleta igitur aetate legitima non est in integrum restitutio necessaria, quia non integratio amissae causae his datur, sed integra ipsa causa servatur.

Thirty-Ninth Title If That He Acquire an Inheritance or Possession of an Estate Or Anything Else That He Has Failed to Accept

[1] Emperor GORDIAN Augustus to Prota. The long-accepted rule is that persons under 25 years old can seek restoration of rights not only if they suffer losses from their own property, but also if they do not enter on an inheritance left to them.

Posted October 15, in the consulship of Pius and Pontianus (238).

[2] Emperors DIOCLETIAN and MAXIMIAN Augusti and the Caesars to Sarapias. The long-accepted rule is that, through the benefit of restoration of rights, those under 25 are admitted to the possession of their father's estate that they (previously) failed to accept. But those who are restored by judicial decision should contribute the property they had when their father died.[172]

Given October 17, at Sirmium, in the consulship of the Caesars (294).

Fortieth Title Cases in Which Restoration of Rights Is Unnecessary

[1] Emperors ALEXANDER Augustus to Mutatus. Persons under 25 years old, especially those not defended through tutores or curatores, are not prejudiced if they do not avenge the decedent's death; this rule is found in countless rescripts of my deified parents as well as my own.[173]

Given May 11, in the consulship of Alexander Augustus, for the third time, and Dio (229).

[2][174] Emperors VALERIAN and GALLIENUS Augusti and Caesar VALERIAN to Theodota. We have held plainly by earlier rescript that the period when they were under 25 is not counted against children in determining the five-year period that is the usual basis of a defense (praescriptio) set up against those who raise too late the issue of an undutiful will. When legal age is reached, therefore, restoration of rights is unnecessary because no renewal of a lost claim is given them; rather, the claim itself is preserved intact.

[172] That is, the child cannot obtain a share of the father's estate without first contributing to the estate his or her independently acquired property (collatio bonorum). See D. 37.6; C. 6.20. In common law, hotchpot. Mommsen dates this constitution to October 17, 293.

[173] Blume: "Where a man was murdered, his heirs could not enter upon the inheritance till the murder was avenged. [See C. 6.35.] Minors, however, were excused. C. 6.35.6."

[174] Combine with C. 3.28.16. See D. 5.2.8.17, 5.3.7.1.

PP. II id. Aug. Tusco et Basso conss.

[3] Impp. Diocletianus et Maximianus AA. Decimo Caplusio. In minorum persona re ipsa et ex solo tempore tardae pretii solutionis recepto iure moram fieri creditum est, in his videlicet, quae moram desiderant, id est in bonae fidei contractibus et fideicommissis et in legato.

PP. XII k. Oct. ipsis IIII et III AA. conss.

[4] Idem AA. et CC. Stratonicae. Si tutor tuus, qui pro tutelari officio non caverat, iudicio expertus est, contra eum lata sententia iuri tuo officere non potuit, nec ea quae ab eo gesta sunt ullam firmitatem obtinent. frustra igitur in integrum restitutionis auxilium desideras, quando ea, quae ab eo gesta sunt, qui legitimae administrationis personam sustinere non potuit, ipso iure irrita sunt.

S. XVIII k. Ian. Nicomediae CC. conss.

[5] Imp. Iustinianus A. Iohanni pp. pr. Sancimus favore imperfectae aetatis exceptionem non numeratae pecuniae ab initio minoribus non currere, ne, dum in integrum restitutionem expectamus, aliquod emergat obstaculum, per quod huiusmodi beneficio minor uti non potest, ne substantia eius subvertatur. 1. Sed humanius et latius eandem legis interpretationem extendere, in omnibus casibus, in quibus vetera iura currere quidem temporales praescriptiones adversus minores concesserunt, per in integrum autem restitutionem eis subveniebant, eas ipso iure non currere. melius etenim est intacta iura eorum servari, quam post causam vulneratam remedium quaerere. videlicet exceptionibus triginta et quadraginta annorum in suo statu remanentibus.

D. k. Nov. Constantinopoli post cons. Lampadii et Orestis vv. cc.

XXXXI Qui et Adversus Quos in Integrum Restitui Non Possunt

[1] Imp. Alexander A. Cononidi. pr. In consilio quidem cognoscentis de restitutione in integrum esse oportet, num is, qui se minorem annis Posted August 12, in the consulship of Tuscus and Bassus (258).

[3][175] Emperors DIOCLETIAN and MAXIMIAN Augusti to Decimus Caplusius. In the case of those under 25, it is believed under accepted law that a delay (mora) arises from the fact itself and only from the time when the payment of price is late, obviously in those (legal arrangements) that consider delay, i.e., good faith contracts and trusts and for legacy.

Posted September 20, in the consulship of the Augusti, for the fourth and third times, respectively (290).

[4][176] The same Augusti and the Caesars to Stratonica. If your tutor, who gave no security for his tutelage, was involved in a lawsuit, a verdict against him cannot prejudice your rights, nor do his transactions have any validity. Hence you needlessly seek the benefit of restoration of rights, since the acts of a person who was unable to act as legal administrator are void by operation of law.

Written December 15, at Nicomedia, in the consulship of the Caesars (294).

[5] Emperor JUSTINIAN Augustus to John, Praetorian Prefect. pr. Out of goodwill for immature age, We ordain that the defense of money not having been paid (exceptio non numeratae pecuniae) does not begin running immediately for those under 25, lest, during the time when we await restoration of rights, some obstacle arise impeding the young person's ability to use such a benefit, resulting in their loss of property. 1. The more humane and generous course is to broaden this interpretation of the law in all cases where the ancient laws allowed time-restricted prescriptions to run against minors while assisting those under 25 through restoration of rights, (and instead to provide) that by operation of law such prescriptions not run (at all). For it is better that their rights be preserved intact, rather than seeking a remedy after their legal position is harmed. The defenses of thirty and forty years remain as formerly, however.[177]

Given November 1, at Constantinople, in the post-consulate of the viri clarissimi Lampadius and Orestes (531).

Forty-First Title To Whom and Against Whom There Can Be No Restoration of Rights

[1] Emperor ALEXANDER Augustus to Cononides. pr. In the council (consilium) of a person trying a case of restoration of rights, it should, of course, (be [175] Combine with C. 4.49.5 (whence Caplusius is restored). For minors, no notice or warning of default is required.

[176] = C. 5.42.3.1–2 (omitting "who was unable to act as legal administrator," and dated one day later); perhaps combine with C. 4.6.11. The constitution may actually have been issued in 294.

[177] On this, see C. 7.39.

laesum esse dicat, diligens pater familias fuerit actibusque publicis industrium se docuerit, ut lapsum eum per aetatem verisimile non sit. 1. Verum si causa cognita circumventus deprehendatur, propter hoc solum velut praescriptione a solito auxilio removeri non debet, quod urguentibus patriae necessitatibus decurio minor annis creatus sit vel propagandae suboli liberorum educatione prospexerit.

PP. x k. Oct. Lupo et Maximo conss.

[2] Imp. Iustinianus A. Iohanni pp. Cum apud veteres dubitabatur, an liberi parentes suos vel liberti patronos in querimoniam deducere possint quasi non rite in eos versatos, et quidam existimabant nullam esse contra huiusmodi personas in integrum restitutionem, pondere naturali vel patronali reverentia huiusmodi petulantiae refragante, nisi vel ex magna causa vel adversus turpem eorum personam, alii autem personarum quidem vel causae distinctionem respuendam esse censuerunt, tunc autem tantummodo dandam esse restitutionem putaverunt, cum minor ex sua simplicitate se deceptum, non ex dolo patris vel patroni circumscriptum esse dicat: quod, ut maneat in omnibus honor parentibus et patrono vel patronae illibatus atque intactus, sancimus nullo modo neque adversus parentes utriusque sexus neque adversus patronum vel patronam dari restitutionem. nam personarum reverentia omnem eis excludit restitutionem, cum procul dubio est etiam ipsas personas cavere, ne quid suae opinioni contrarium existat.

D. k. Sept. Constantinopoli post consulatum Lampadii et Orestae vv. cc.

XXXXII Si Minor Se Maiorem Dixerit vel Probatus Fuerit

[1] Imp. Alexander A. Maximianae. Si, cum minor annis viginti quinque esses, tabulis quae sunt[xii] tuarum professionum oblatis tibi aetatem quae sunt maior annis viginti quinque decepta probasti, in integrum restitutionem intra statutum legibus tempus etiam post impletam aetatem de

[xii] [quae sunt]<quasi> considered) whether the person alleging that he suffered harm when under 25 has been a careful paterfamilias and has shown himself conscientious in public dealings, making it unlikely he slipped by reason of his age. 1. Still, if after examination of the case he is found to have been taken advantage of, he should not be barred from the usual benefit – as it were by a defense (praescriptio) – for the sole reason that because of his native city's urgent needs he was named a decurion while (still) under 25, or because he provided for continuation of his line by raising children.[178]

Posted September 22, in the consulship of Lupus and Maximus (232).

[2] Emperor JUSTINIAN Augustus to John, Praetorian Prefect. Among our forefathers it was doubted whether children could bring a complaint against their parents, or freedmen against their patrons, because this was unbecoming treatment of them. Some thought there was no restoration of rights against such persons, since natural (parental) authority and the deference due to patrons militated against such impudence except either for a significant reason or against a reprehensible person. Others felt that a distinction based on persons or a case should be rejected, and they thought, moreover, that restoration should be given only when a someone under 25 alleges that he was deceived because of his own naiveté, but not (on an allegation) that he was taken advantage of by his father's or patron's deceit (dolus). In order, therefore, that the honor (due) to parents and patrons of either sex remain in all things undiminished and unimpaired, We ordain that under no circumstances shall restoration be granted either against parents of either sex or against patrons of either sex. For the respect that these persons owe excludes them from (obtaining) any restoration at all, since it is beyond doubt that these persons themselves (parents and patrons) will take care that nothing arise that negatively affects their good name.

Given September 1, at Constantinople, in the post-consulate of the viri clarissimi Lampadius and Orestes (531).

Forty-Second Title If a Person Under 25 Says He Is, or Is Shown to Be, of Age

[1] Emperor ALEXANDER Augustus to Maximiana. When you were under 25 years old, you were misled by documents delivered to you as your declarations (of birth) and gave proof (in court) that you were over 25. Even after you come of age, you can, within the time fixed by law, go before the official [178] Both these might suggest that the minor was able to look out for himself.

omnibus intra aetatem adversus te gestis postulare apud eum, cuius de ea re iurisdictio est, potes.

PP. XII k. April. Maximo II et Aeliano conss.

[2] Impp. Diocletianus et Maximianus AA. Vitalio. Si is, qui nunc minorem se adseverat, fallaci maioris aetatis mendacio te decepit, iuxta statuta iuris, cum errantibus, non etiam fallentibus minoribus publica iura subvenerunt, in integrum restitui non debet.

D. II k. Dec. Diocletiano III et Maximiano AA. conss.

[3] Idem AA. et CC. Theodotae. pr. Si alterius circumveniendi causa minor aetate maiorem te probare adspectu laboraveris, cum malitia suppleat aetatem, restitutionis auxilium tam sacris constitutionibus quam rescriptorum auctoritae denegari statutum est. 1. Quod si per iniuriam vel circumventionem adversarii hoc fuerit factum, durat beneficium, quo minoribus causa cognita subveniri solet. 2. Aditus itaque praeses provinciae probationis aetatis examinata causa, si tuum dolum non reppererit intercessisse, ac te minorem tunc fuisse probaveris, causa cognita in integrum restitui providebit.

3. Si tamen in instrumento per sacramenti religionem maiorem te esse adseverasti, non ignorare debes exclusum tibi esse in integrum restitutionis beneficium, nisi palam et evidenter ex instrumentorum prolatione, non per testium depositiones te fuisse minorem ostenderis. 4. Huiusmodi autem sacramento corporaliter praestito nullum tibi superesse auxilium perspicui iuris est.

D. XIII k. Oct. Sirmi AA. conss.

[4] Idem AA. et CC. Livio. Cum circa probandum annorum numerum apud rectorem provinciae erratum esse proponas et in huiusmodi causis etiam filiis familias minoribus subveniri admissum sit, ea quae in prece contulisti praesidem provinciae examinare convenit: qui se aestimata aetate tua maiorem annis falsa opinione te praesumpsisse ex probationum luce cognoverit, erga minoris personam fidem veri sequetur.

D. VI id. Dec. AA. conss.

with jurisdiction and ask for restoration of rights concerning everything done against you while you were (actually) under age.

Posted March 21, in the consulship of Maximus, for the second time, and Aelianus (223).

[2] Emperors Diocletian and Maximian Augusti to Vitalius. If the person who now asserts he is under 25 deceived you with a crafty lie as to his majority, in accord with legal precepts he is not to be restored to his rights, since public law has aided mistaken young persons, but not also deceitful ones.

Given November 30, in the consulship of Diocletian, for the third time, and Maximian, Augusti (287).

[3] The same Augusti and Caesars to Theodota. pr. If, to deceive someone, you were under 25 but strove to prove yourself of age by your appearance, then, since your roguery exaggerated your age, it has been determined, both by imperial constitutions as by the authority of rescripts, that the benefit of restoration is denied. 1. But if this occurred through the illicit conduct or trickery of your (trial) adversary, there remains the benefit by which those under 25 are customarily helped after the case is examined. 2. So when you go before the provincial governor and he examines the matter of the proof of your age, if he finds no evidence of your deceit (dolus) and you prove you were then under 25, he will see to it, after examining the case, that your rights are restored.

3. If, however, you asserted in a document, with the sanctity of an oath, that you were of age, you should not be unaware that you are barred from the benefit of reformation of rights unless you show clearly and convincingly through the production of documents, not by depositions of witnesses, that you were under 25. 4. Moreover if such an oath was given corporally, the law is unambiguous that no benefit survives for you.[179]

Given September 19, at Sirmium, in the consulship of the Caesars (293).

[4] The same Augusti and Caesars to Livius. Since you allege you were in error in proving your age before the provincial governor, and in such cases it is allowed to assist even children under 25 in a father's power, it is proper that the provincial governor examine the contents of your petition. If, after determining your age, he learns from the light shed by the proofs that you falsely believed yourself to be of age, he will follow evidence as to the truth regarding your status under 25 (and grant recovery).

Given December 8, in the consulship of the Augusti (293).

[179] As to an oath given personally, see C. 2.27.1. Blume: "An oath was taken corporally, after the adoption of Christianity, by laying hand on the Bible."

XXXXIII Si Saepius in Integrum Restitutio Postuletur

[1] Impp. Severus et Antoninus AA. Romano et aliis. Si post sententiam proconsulis contra vos latam desiderastis in integrum restitui nec obtinuistis, frustra, ut rursum ea quaestio in integrum restitutionis agitetur, desideratis: appellare enim debuistis, si vobis sententia displicebat. sed si adhuc in ea aetate estis, cui subveniri solet, appellandi ius vobis restituimus.

PP. v k. Aug. Cilone et Libone conss.

[2] Imp. Alexander A. Iusto militi. Quamquam curatores pupillae victi sunt, cum in integrum restitui pupillam desiderabant, cum tamen novis defensionibus causam instrui posse dicas, adeant curatores uxoris tuae et petant, ut causas in integrum restitutionis agant.

PP. v k. Aug. Alexandro A. II et Marcello conss.

[3] Imp. Philippus A. et Philippus C. Aniciae. In una eademque causa iteratum in integrum restitutionis auxilium non iure, nisi novae defensiones praetendantur, posci saepe rescriptum est.

PP. II k. Iul. Peregrino et Aemiliano conss.

XXXXIIII De His Qui Veniam Aetatis Impetraverunt

[1] Imp. Aurelianus A. Agathocleti. Eos, qui veniam aetatis impetraverunt, etiamsi minus idonee rem suam administrare videantur, in integrum restitutionis auxilium impetrare non posse manifestissimum est, ne qui cum eis contraheret principali auctoritate circumscriptus esse videatur.

PP. k. Iul. Aureliano A. et Capitolino conss.

Forty-Third Title If Restoration of Rights Is Requested Repeatedly

[1] Emperors SEVERUS and ANTONINUS Augusti to Romanus and others. After the Proconsul's verdict against you, if you sought and failed to obtain restoration of rights, you ask in vain that the question of restoration of rights be reopened; for you should have appealed if the verdict was unsatisfactory to you. But if you are still of an age that is customarily helped, We have restored to you the right of appeal.

Posted July 28, in the consulship of Cilo and Libo (204).

[2] Emperor ALEXANDER Augustus to Justus, a soldier. Although the curatores of a minor female ward (pupilla) were defeated when they sought restoration of her rights as someone under 25, still, since you say the case can be proven by new evidence, let the curatores of your wife approach (a judge) and seek to plead the case for restoration of rights.

Posted July 28, in the consulship of Alexander Augustus, for the second time, and Marcellus (226).

[3] Emperor PHILIP Augustus and Caesar PHILIP to Annicia. It has often been stated in rescripts that the benefit of restoration of rights cannot be legally sought again in one and the same case, except if new proofs are produced.

Posted June 30, in the consulship of Peregrinus and Aemilianus (244).

Forty-Fourth Title Those Who Have Received the Privilege of Full Majority[180]

[1] Emperor AURELIAN Augustus to Agathocles. It is very clear that those who have received the privilege of full majority, even if they are held to manage their property but poorly, cannot receive the benefit of restoration of rights, so that a person contracting with them not seem to be cheated by imperial authority.

Posted July 1,[181] in the consulship of the Emperor Aurelian and Capitolinus (274).

[180] Venia aetatis, a right giving sui iuris persons under age 25 the ability to transact business as adults, with some limitations. The salutations and subscriptions of the following constitutions have been much improved (as indicated) by Simon Corcoran (2016) on the basis of the Würzburg fragment.

[181] More likely June 24. The Würzburg fragment supports iteration for Aurelian (Corcoran).

[2] Imp. Constantinus A. ad Verinum pu. pr. Omnes adulescentes, qui honestate morum praediti paternam frugem vel avorum patrimonia gubernare cupiunt et super hoc imperiali auxilio indigere coeperint, ita demum aetatis veniam impetrare audeant, cum vicesimi anni metas impleverint, ita ut post impetratam aetatis veniam idem ipsi per se principale beneficium adlegantes non solum praescriptorum annorum numerum probent, sed etiam testibus idoneis advocatis morum suorum instituta probitatemque animi et testimonium vitae honestioris edoceant.

1. Feminas quoque, quas morum honestas mentisque sollertia commendat, cum octavum et decimum annum egressae fuerint, veniam aetatis impetrare sancimus. sed eas propter pudorem ac verecundiam feminarum in coetu publico demonstrari testibus non cogimus, sed percepta aetatis venia annos tantum probare testibus vel instrumentis, misso procuratore, concedimus, ut etiam ipsae in omnibus negotiis tale ius habeant, quale mares habere praescripsimus, ita tamen, ut praedia sine decreto non alienent.

2. Sed senatores quidem clarissimi viri in hac regia urbe commorantes apud sublimitatem tuam, ceteri vero apud praetorem, in provinciis autem omnes apud earum rectores de suis moribus et honestae perdoceant. 3. Hi vero, qui contra memoratam dispositionem veniam aetatis impetraverint, sciant eam nullas vires obtinere.

PP. III k. Iun. Romae Crispo II et Constantino II CC. conss.

[3] Imp. Iustinianus A. Menae pp. Eos, qui veniam aetatis principali clementia impetraverunt vel impetraverint, non solum alienationem, sed etiam hypothecam minime posse sine decreti interpositione rerum suarum immobilium facere iubemus, in quarum alienatione vel hypotheca decretum illis necessarium est, qui necdum veniam aetatis meruerunt, ut similis sit in ea parte condicio minorum omnium, sive petita sive non sit aetatis venia.

D. VIII id. April. Decio vc. cons.

[2][182] Emperor CONSTANTINE Augustus to Verinus, Urban Prefect. pr. All young adult males of honorable character who wish to manage their fathers' savings or their grandfathers' estates (that they inherited), and who begin to need imperial help in this connection, should venture to seek the privilege of full majority only when they have completed their twentieth year – provided that after the privilege of full majority is obtained, those alleging the imperial benefit not only appear in person to prove the prescribed number of years, but also show, by calling suitable witnesses, their honorable conduct, uprightness, and evidence of a creditable life.

1. As for women, if they are commended by their respectable morals and mental acuity, We ordain that they as well seek the privilege of full majority when they reach 18. But because of the modesty and shyness of women, We do not force these qualities to be proven by witnesses in a public gathering; rather, when the privilege of full majority is received, We allow them to prove only their age through witnesses or documents, and by using a procurator, so that they too have in all business the same rights as We have ordered men to have, provided that they not alienate land without a court decree.

2. But the viri clarissimi Senators who live in this Imperial City, appearing before Your Sublimity, shall provide proof as to their morals and integrity. Others (shall do so) before the Praetor;[183] and those in the provinces, before their governors. 3. But those who seek the privilege of full majority contrary to the aforesaid arrangement should know that it has no validity.

Posted May 30, at Rome, in the consulship of the Caesars Crispus, for the second time, and Constantine, for the second time (321).[184]

[3][185] Emperor JUSTINIAN Augustus to Menas, Praetorian Prefect. We order that those who have obtained or shall obtain the privilege of full majority through imperial benevolence shall have no right at all to effect not only an alienation but also a hypothec (hypotheca) of their immovable property, except through interposition of a court decree. In the alienation or hypothec of these things, a judicial decree (decretum) is required for those who have not yet earned the privilege of full majority, so that in this area the situation of all those under 25 is similar whether or not the privilege of full majority has been sought.

Given April 6, in the consulship of the vir clarissimus Decius (529).

[182] pr.-2 = C.Th. 2.17.1.
[183] The Plebeian Praetor (praetor plebis), see Nov. 13.
[184] Actually, 324, when Verinus was Urban Prefect and these Caesars were both Consuls for the third time. So Seeck.
[185] Combine with C. 5.74.3.

[4] Idem A. ad senatum. Si quis aliquid dari vel fieri voluerit et legitimae aetatis fecerit mentionem vel sic absolute dixerit 'perfectae aetatis', illam tantummodo aetatem intellectam esse videri volumus, quae ex viginti quinque annorum curriculis completur, non ab imperiali beneficio suppletur. et praecipue quidem in substitutionibus vel restitutionibus hoc intellegi sancimus: nihilo minus autem et in aliis, nisi specialiter quisquam addiderit ex venia aetatis velle aliquid procedere.

D. XI k. Aug. Constantinopoli Lampadio et Oreste vv. cc. conss.

XXXXV Si Maior Factus Ratum Habuerit

[1] Impp. Diocletianus et Maximianus AA. et CC. Eutychiano. Si inter minores quinque et viginti annis vel scriptura interposita vel sine scriptura facta sine dolo divisio est eamque post legitimam aetatem ratam fecerunt, manere integram debere convenit.

S. VIII k. Mai. AA. conss.

[2] Idem AA. et CC. Soteri. Qui post vicesimum quintum annum aetatis ea quae in minora aetate gesta sunt rata habuerunt, frustra rescissionem eorum postulant.

D. id. Febr. CC. conss.

XXXXVI Ubi Et Apud Quem Cognitio Restitutionis Agitanda Sit

[1] Imp. Antoninus A. Severo. Si quid a procuratore meo iudicatum est, id per in integrum restitutionem praesidis sententia non potest rescindi. princeps enim solus contra sententiam procuratorum suorum in integrum restituere solet.

PP. VI k. Dec. Laeto II et Cereale conss.

[2] Impp. Diocletianus et Maximianus AA. <et CC.> Aquilinae. Quoniam ea, quae in transactione dari placuerat, te tradidisse proponas, consequens est, si de his repetendis per in integrum restitutionem vel

[4][186] The same Augustus to the Senate. If anyone who wants something given or done mentions (he is) "of legal age" or just simply says (he is) "of full age," We wish this to be deemed to be understood only of the age completed by passage of 25 years, not of that supplied by imperial grant. And We ordain that this be especially understood in the case of substitutions (of heirs) and restorations (of rights); but not any the less in other matters as well, unless someone adds specifically that he wishes something to take place on the basis of the privilege of full majority.

Given July 22, at Constantinople, in the consulship of the viri clarissimi Lampadius and Orestes (530).

Forty-Fifth Title If He Ratifies After Reaching Full Majority

[1] Emperors DIOCLETIAN and MAXIMIAN Augusti and the Caesars to Eutychianus. Between those under 25 years old, if a division (of property) occurs without deceit (dolus), whether in writing or not, and they ratify it after (reaching) full majority, it is agreed that it should remain undisturbed.

Written April 24, in the consulship of the Augusti (293).

[2][187] The same Augusti and Caesars to Sotere. Those who after age 25 ratify things done (by them) beforehand, seek rescission of them in vain.

Given February 13, in the consulship of the Caesars (294).

Forty-Sixth Title Where and Before Whom a Review of Restoration Should Be Conducted

[1] Emperor ANTONINUS Augustus to Severus. If anything is adjudicated by my Procurator, it cannot be rescinded, through restoration of rights, by a governor's decision. For only the Emperor customarily restores rights contrary to (i.e., overruling) a decision of his Procurators.

Posted November 26,[188] in the consulship of Laetus, for the second time, and Cerealis (215).

[2] Emperors DIOCLETIAN and MAXIMIAN Augusti <and the Caesars> to Aquilina. Since you say that you handed over the property that it was agreed be given pursuant to a settlement, it follows that if you are thinking of suing for their return

[186] Combine with C. 3.38.12, 5.4.24, 5.20.2, 6.25.3, 8.41.8.

[187] Combine with C. 2.32.1 (dated February 8; this date is also preferable for this constitution).

[188] The manuscripts, however, have March 17, 215.

quamcumque aliam causam putaveris agendum, eius adire te provinciae praesidem, in qua domicilium habent quos convenis.

<S. XIII k. Oct. AA. Conss.>

[3] Imp. Iustinianus A. Iohanni pp. pr. Cum scimus esse dubitatum de restitutionibus, quae in integrum postulantur, sive tantummodo apud iudicem, cui aliqua iurisdictio est, examinari eas oportet, sive et apud pedaneos iudices, sive eas minores viginti quinque annis petierint sive maiores, secundum quod anterioribus sanctionibus vel veteris iuris vel nostris declaratum est: sancimus non solum apud iudices pro tribunali huiusmodi causae cognitiones proponi, sed etiam apud eos iudices, quos augusta dederit maiestas aut nostrae rei publicae administratores vel in hac regia civitate vel in provinciis, ut videatur ipse, qui iudicem destinaverit, utpote pro tribunali cognoscens et in integrum dare restitutionem et causas eius examinare: sic etenim non difficilis erit causarum examinatio.

1. Sed ne quis ita effuse intellectum nostrae constitutionis audeat esse trahendum, ut etiam apud compromissarios iudices vel arbitros ex communi sententia electos vel apud eos, qui dantur a iudicibus, qui propriam iurisdictionem non habent, sed tantummodo iudicandi facultatem, putet huiusmodi extendi sanctionem, cum hos generaliter volumus tales causas dirimere, qui vel certae administrationi, cui et iurisdictio adhaeret, praepositi sunt vel ab his fuerint dati, et multo magis si a nostra maiestate delegata eis causarum sit audientia. 2. Sed ne quid penitus dubitandum relinquatur, et hoc addendum esse censemus, ut eis tantum quos supra enumeravimus liceat de in integrum restitutione disceptare, sive hoc specialiter eis fuerit mandatum, quod et veteribus non fuerat incognitum, vel si generaliter iudices dati sunt, vel in aliis speciebus, inciderit autem quaedam quaestio restitutionis.

D. III k. Sept. Constantinopoli post consulatum Lampadii et Orestae vv. cc.

XXXXVII De Reputationibus, Quae Fiunt in Iudicio in Integrum Restitutionis

[1] Imp. Severus A. Tatiano. pr. Qui restituitur in integrum, sicut in damno morari non debet, ita nec in lucro: et ideo quidquid ad eum through restoration of rights or by some other remedy, you go before the governor of the province in which the defendants have their domicile.

Written September 19, in the consulship of the Augusti (293).[189]

[3] Emperor J*USTINIAN* Augustus to John, Praetorian Prefect. pr. We know that there is doubt concerning demands for restorations of rights, as to whether they should be examined only before a judge who has some (general) jurisdiction, or also before delegated (lower level) judges, whether those younger or older than 25 claim them, according to what was declared in previous ordinances either of old law or by us. We therefore ordain that hearings of such cases be held not only before judges in front of a tribunal (pro tribunali; in a court), but also before those judges whom Our August Majesty or the administrators of Our state appoint either in this Imperial City or in the provinces, so that the person appointing the judge, as if (he were himself) examining (the case) in front of his tribunal, may seem both to grant restoration of rights and to examine the reasons for it. In this way the examination of cases will not be difficult.

1. But let no one dare to broaden the meaning of our constitution so widely as to suppose that such an ordinance embraces also proceedings before private arbitration judges, or before arbitrators chosen by common agreement, or before those given by judges who do not have their own jurisdiction but only the power to decide cases. In general, we wish such cases to be determined only by those who either have a definite administrative position to which jurisdiction is attached, or are put in charge by them, and especially if their hearing of cases was delegated by Our Majesty. 2. But lest anything at all be left in doubt, We think this also should be added, that only those We listed above shall be permitted to decide on restoration of rights, whether this was specifically delegated to them – something not unknown even to the ancients – or if they were appointed as judges generally (for all types of cases), or in other types (of courts) where some question of restoration arises.[190]

Given August 30, at Constantinople, in the post-consulate of Lampadius and Orestes viri clarissimi (531).

Forty-Seventh Title Counterclaims Made in a Trial for Restoration of Rights

[1] Emperor S*EVERUS* Augustus to Tatianus. pr. Just as a person who receives restoration of rights should not delay in (recovering) loss, so, too, in (disgorging)

[189] Inscription and subscription are restored from the Würzburg fragment (Corcoran).

[190] Blume: "The term 'jurisdiction' expressed the unlimited power of administering the civil (as opposed to the criminal) law in the ordinary course of procedure … Municipal judges or magistrates could not give restitution of rights. D. 50.1.26.1. So, according to the foregoing law, arbitrators, as we commonly understand the term, could not do so." See also C. 3.1.5, 3.4.1.2.

pervenit vel ex emptione vel ex venditione vel ex alio contractu, hoc debet restituere. 1. Sed et si intercessor minor viginti quinque annis intervenit, in veterem debitorem debet restitui actio. 2. Sed et cum adiit minor hereditatem et restituitur, mox quidquid ad eum ex hereditate pervenit, debet praestare. 3. Verum et si quid dolo eius factum est, hoc eum praestare convenit.

Sine die et consule.

XXXXVIII Etiam per Procuratorem Causam in Integrum Restitutionis Agi Posse

[1] Imp. Alexander A. Liciniano. Causam in integrum restitutionis, si qua competit, etiam per procuratorem agi posse placet.

D. XIII k. Oct. Pompeiano et Peligno conss.

XXXXVIIII In Integrum Restitutione Postulata Ne Quid Novi Fiat

[1] Imp. Gordianus A. Secundino militi. Postulata in integrum restitutione omnia in suo statu esse debere, donec res finiatur, perspicui iuris est, idque curabit is, ad cuius partes ea res pertinet.

PP. XII k. Iul. Gordiano A. et Aviola conss.

L De Restitutione Militum et Eorum Qui Rei Publicae Causa Afuerunt

[1] Impp. Severus et Antoninus AA. Chiloni. Si Valerianus centurio cohortis duodecimae Alpinorum ante vita decessit, quam possessionem acciperet, heres eius ex persona defuncti restitutionis auxilium intra annum utilem ita recte implorabit, si Valerianus post exactos dies, quibus bonorum possessio defertur, in militia defunctus est.

PP. k. Nov. Laterano et Rufino conss.

profit. And so he should restore whatever came to him either from a purchase or sale or from another contract. 1. And if someone under 25 years old became a delegate (responsible for a third party's debt), the action against the former debtor should (also) be restored. 2. But also when someone under 25 enters on an inheritance and is restored (thus losing the inheritance), he should thereupon tender whatever he received from the inheritance. 3. But even if something occurred through his deceit (dolus), it is settled that he tenders this (as well).

Without date or consul.

Forty-Eighth Title A Case for Restoration of Rights Can Also Be Brought Through a Procurator

[1] Emperor ALEXANDER Augustus to Licinianus. It is settled law that a case of restoration of rights, if one lies, can also be brought through a procurator.

Given September 19,[191] in the consulship of Pompeianus and Pelignus (231).

Forty-Ninth Title After Restoration of Rights Is Requested, Nothing New Shall Be Done

[1] Emperor GORDIAN Augustus to Secundinus, a soldier. It is clear law that once restoration of rights has been requested, everything should remain in the status quo until the matter is concluded, and the person under whose care this matter belongs (i.e., the judge) shall see to this.

Posted June 20, in the consulship of Gordian Augustus and Aviola (239).

Fiftieth Title Restoration (of Rights) of Soldiers and of Those Absent on Public Business

[1] Emperors SEVERUS and ANTONINUS Augusti to Chilo. If Valerianus, a centurion of the Twelfth Alpine Cohort, died before he accepted possession (of an inheritance), his heir, acting as the deceased (centurion), will properly ask for the benefit of restoration within an effective (i.e., judicial) year (annus utilis), provided Valerianus died in service after the time at which (the right to) possession of the estate is conveyed (to him).

Posted November 1, in the consulship of Lateranus and Rufinus (197).

[191] Or September 16.

[2] Imp. Alexander A. Petronio centurioni. Si quid de bonis eorum, qui rei publicae causa absentes sunt, deminutum est actioneve qua competente eis aliquis liberatus fuit, in integrum restitutio perpetua iurisdictione intra annum utilem permittitur.

PP. XIII k. Nov. Alexandro A. cons.

[3] Idem A. Flavio Aristodemo militi. Quod tempore militiae de bonis alicuius possessum ab aliquo est, posteaquam is rei publicae causa abesse desiit, intra annum utilem amota praescriptione temporis medii possessionem vindicare permissum est: ultra autem ius possessoris laedere contra eum institutum non oportet.

PP. non. Ian. Maximo II et Aeliano conss.

[4] Imp. Gordianus A. Mestriano. Ignorare non debes eorum, qui rei publicae causa sine dolo malo absunt, si absentes boni viri arbitratu non defenduntur, bona tantum possideri, venditionem autem in id tempus differri, quo rei publicae causa abesse desierint.

D. XII k. Ian. Gordiano A. et Aviola conss.

[5] Idem A. Secundino militi. Neque rei publicae causa absentibus nec aliis maioribus ad titulum in integrum restitutionis pertinentibus praescriptionem quadriennii post factam a fisco venditionem obesse posse manifestum est.

PP. VI id. Mai. Sabino et Venusto conss.

[6] Impp. Valerianus et Gallienus AA. Germano centurioni. Si, cum militaribus laboribus operam dares, creditoris tui heredes possessiones sibi obligatas distraxerunt, poteris adito praeside provinciae in integrum restitutionem impetrare retractataque venditione recipies possessiones, oblato ante debito vel pretio, si minus debito fuisset.

PP. III non. April. Valeriano et Gallieno AA. conss.

[2] Emperor ALEXANDER Augustus to Petronius, a centurion. If there was any loss to the property of those absent on public business, or if someone was released from a relevant action (to the detriment of the absentee), by the Perpetual Edict restoration of rights is permitted to them within an effective year.

Posted October 20, in the consulship of Alexander Augustus (222).

[3] The same Augustus to Flavius Aristodemus, a soldier. When someone takes possession of the property of another (a soldier) during his military service, he (the soldier) is allowed to recover possession within a judicial year after he ends his absence on public business, the bar of the intervening time being removed.[192] But he must not otherwise harm a possessor's right that was established against him.

Posted January 5, in the consulship of Maximus, Consul for the second time, and Aelianus (223).

[4] Emperor GORDIAN Augustus to Mestrianus. You should not be unaware that property of those who, without deceit (sine dolo malo), are absent on public business, if the absentees are not defended up to the standards of an upright man (boni viri arbitratu), is only possessed, but its sale is deferred to the time when they cease to be absent on public business.

Given December 21, in the consulship of Gordian Augustus and Aviola (239).

[5] The same Augustus to Secundinus, a soldier. It is manifest that after a sale is made by the Treasury, the four[193] years' limitation (on bringing ownership claims) can prejudice neither those absent on public business, nor others, of age, who have a claim to restoration of rights.

Posted May 10, in the consulship of Sabinus and Venustus (240).

[6] Emperors VALERIAN and GALLIENUS Augusti to Germanus, a centurion. If, while you were engaged in military service, the heirs of your creditor sold your possessions that were obligated to them (as security for your debt), you can obtain restoration of your rights by going before the provincial governor. The sale will be cancelled and you will recover your possessions if you first pay either the debt or, if it is smaller than the debt, the price (for which the property sold).

Posted April 3, in the consulship of Valerian, for the second time, and Gallienus, Augusti (254).[194]

[192] See C. 7.35.2.
[193] Blume: "Substituted for 'five' by compilers on account of C. 7.37.2 and 3 … See C. 2.36.3."
[194] Subscription restored partially on the basis of the Würzburg fragment (Corcoran).

[7] Impp. Diocletianus et Maximianus AA. et CC. Marinae. Quae a patre geruntur, non decet pro disciplina militari a filiis ad irritum devocari, praesertim cum nec patrem tuum in rebus humanis agentem adfirmes conquestum fuisse super huiusmodi contractu.

PP. non. Feb. AA. conss.

[8] Imp. Iustinianus A. Menae pp. Sancimus his solis, qui in expeditionibus occupati sunt, ea tantummodo tempora, quae in eadem expeditione percurrunt, tam in exceptionibus declinandis quam in petendis in integrum restitutionibus eis opitulari: illis temporibus, per quae citra expeditionis necessitatem in aliis locis vel in suis aedibus degunt, minime eos ad vindicanda memorata privilegia adiuvantibus.

D. IIII id. April. Constantinopoli Decio vc. cons.

LI De Uxoribus Militum vel Eorum Qui Rei Publicae Causa Absunt

[1] Imp. Alexander A. Secundinae. Temporalibus actionibus exclusis mulieribus, quae cum maritis rei publicae causa absentibus peregrinatae sunt, ad exemplum militum subveniri solere non est ignotum.

PP. III non. Dec. Alexandro A. II et Marcello conss.

[2] Impp. Diocletianus et Maximianus AA. et CC. Quintiliano. Ei, quae diutissime fuit cum marito qui militiae operam daret, non officit praescriptio longi temporis: sed quia huiusmodi diutinae absentiae commenta callide adhibita atque composita obesse omnino non debent, decernimus, ut, si talis mulier domum ad se pertinere monstraverit, quae in absentia eius vendita est, refuso pretio, quod re vera solutum est, eandem recipiat.

D. VIII k. Dec. ipsis AA. conss.

[7] Emperors Diocletian and Maximian and the Caesars to Marina. It does not accord with military discipline that your father's transactions be rendered void by his sons, especially since you allege that your father, while still living, did not complain of such a contract.

Posted February 5, in the consulship of the Augusti (293).

[8][195] Emperor Justinian Augustus to Menas, Praetorian Prefect. We ordain that only those (soldiers) engaged in expeditions may be aided by the time occupied in the expedition, and by that time alone, both as to avoiding defenses (of prescription and limitation of actions) and as to claiming restorations of rights for themselves. The time during which they are not on expedition and while they live in other places or in their own houses, without being constrained by an expedition, will not avail them in claiming that privilege.

Given April 10, at Constantinople, in the consulship of the vir clarissimus Decius (529).

Fifty-First Title The Wives of Soldiers or of Those Absent on Public Business

[1] Emperor Alexander Augustus to Secundina. It is not unknown that, as to actions from which women are (normally) barred through time limitations (actiones temporales), relief is customarily extended, on the analogy of soldiers, to women who went abroad with their husbands while they were absent on public business.

Posted December 3, in the consulship of Alexander Augustus, for the second time, and Marcellus (226).

[2] Emperors Diocletian and Maximian Augusti and the Caesars to Quintilianus. Long-time prescription (praescriptio longi temporis) does not prejudice a woman who was long absent with her husband while he was performing military service. But since the fabrication of such long absences, cunningly contrived and elaborated, should be no cause of loss (to others), We decree that if such a woman proves that a house, sold in her absence, belongs to her, she may recover it by refunding the price that was actually paid.

Given November 24, in the consulship of the Augusti themselves (293).

[195] = C. 7.35.8 (April 1); combine with C. 6.21.17 (April 10). Lounghis et al. give April 6, 529. This constitution may post-date the Const. Summa (April 6).

LII De Temporibus in Integrum Restitutionis Tam Minorum Aliarumque Personarum, Quae Restitui Possunt, Quam Heredum Eorum

[1] Imp. Gordianus A. Pudenti militi. In his, in quibus laesus es, cum minor annis viginti quinque esses, toto militaris expeditionis tempore auxilium restitutionis postulare potes: tempus etenim post impletam minorem aetatem praestitutum ex die missionis iuxta rationem iuris computari debet.

PP. III non. Oct. Pio et Pontiano conss.

[2] Idem A. Secundino militi. Si intra legitimam aetatem vel, ea impleta, nondum exacto tempore praestituto pater tuus in fata concessit tuque ei heres extitisti et intra viginti quinque annos vel post eam aetatem intra id tempus, quod ad in integrum restitutionem defuncto supererat, nomen militiae dedisti, praeses provinciae causa cognita per in integrum restitutionem ex persona defuncti subveniri tibi providebit.

D. XI k. Nov. Pio et Pontiano conss.

[3] Idem A. Muciano militi. Si intra annos, quibus in integrum restitutionis auxilium indulgetur, constitutus es vel eo tempore nomen militiae dedisti et expeditione occupatus es, continuatum beneficium restitutionis per usucapionem, licet ante militiam suppleta sit, non patitur te dispendio rei familiaris adfligi.

D. VIIII k. Nov. Pio et Pontiano conss.

[4] Impp. Diocletianus et Maximianus AA. et CC. Dionysio. Ex persona fratrum, si tibi eorum quaesita successio est, potes contra quem supplicas agere, non ignorans, quod, si minores quinque et viginti annis militaverunt fratres tui atque in militia diem functi sunt, in integrum restitutionis eis tempus non cesserit, sed omne ad successorem transmiserint.

S. VIII k. Ian. Philippopoli CC. conss.

Fifty-Second Title The Time Within Which Those under 25, Other Persons Who Can Be Restored, and Their Heirs May Receive Restoration of Rights[196]

[1] Emperor GORDIAN to Pudens, a soldier. In connection with matters where you were harmed while under 25 years old, you can seek the benefit of restoration during the entire period of a military expedition. The time set (for bringing an action) after reaching full majority must be computed from the day of your dismissal, in accord with the logic of the law.[197]

Posted October 5, in the consulship of Pius and Pontianus (238).

[2] The same Augustus to Secundinus, a soldier. If your father died before reaching legal age, or thereafter but within the time set (for restoration of rights), and if you became his heir and enrolled in the military while under 25 years old, or after that age but within the time that remained to the deceased for claiming restoration of rights, the provincial governor will see to it, after examining the case, that you are assisted by restoration of rights, based on the legal position of the deceased.

Given October 22, in the consulship of Pius and Pontianus (238).

[3][198] The same Augustus to Mucianus, a soldier. If you are less than the age for which the benefit of reformation of rights is afforded, or if you enlisted as a soldier within that time and were engaged in an expedition, the uninterrupted benefit of restoration of rights does not allow you to be adversely affected by loss of your property through usucapion, even if it (the period of usucapion) was completed before your military service (ended).

Given October 24, in the consulship of Pius and Pontianus (238).

[4] Emperors DIOCLETIAN and MAXIMIAN Augusti and the Caesars to Dionysius. If you sued to inherit from your brothers, the action you bring against the defendant can be based on their legal position. Do not forget that if your brothers were under 25 years old, and they were enlisted in military service and died therein, the time for restoration of rights did not lapse for them, but they transmitted it in its entirety to their successor.

Written December 25, at Philippopolis, in the consulship of the Caesars (294).[199]

[196] The statute of limitations for restoration of rights was substantially altered by Justinian in law 7 below; earlier sources were then modified to reflect this change.

[197] See C. 2.50.3 and 8, 7.35.2. A grace period was evidently permitted for soldiers to make a claim after reaching age 25.

[198] Combine with C. 3.32.4 (addressee: Munianus; dated three days earlier).

[199] Mommsen dates to May 25, 293.

[5] Imp. Constantinus A. ad Bassum. pr. Ea, quae de temporibus in integrum restitutionum legibus cauta sunt, custodiri convenit, et si forte quis beneficio nostro aetatis veniam fuerit consecutus, ex eo die, quo indulgentia nostra in iudicio competenti fuerit intimata eique administratio rei propriae permissa, ut ad persequendas in integrum restitutionum finiendasque causas iure tempus habeat praestitutum, ita tamen, ut numquam minoribus viginti quinque annis constitutis de his, quae ante impetratam veniam aetatis gesserunt, auxilium in integrum restitutionis denegetur.

1. Si quando sane in minoris iura successerit minor, minime prohibeatur, cum quintum et vicesimum aetatis suae annum transierit, in integrum restitutionis beneficio uti tempore illibato. 2. Quod si maioris fuerit minor iura nactus, quantum ad eas pertinet causas, quas ex persona maioris fuerit consecutus, tantum temporis ad exponendas in integrum restitutionis decidendasque causas accipere debebit, quantum defuncto, cuius heres aut bonorum possessor docebitur extitisse, reliquum fuerat. 3. Cum vero maior successionem fuerit adeptus minoris, si quidem civili iure ab intestato vel ex testamento successerit, mox cum fuerit adita hereditas, si vero honorario iure, ex quo bonorum possessio fuerit accepta, examinando in integrum restitutionis negotio solida sine ulla diminutione tempora supputentur.

D. non. Oct. Romae Constantino A. et Licinio utrisque II conss.

[6] Idem A. ad Iulianum pu. pr. Petendae in integrum restitutionis temporibus observatis, si dilatio ab actore petatur, quae intra metas restitutionis valet artari, eandem quocumque flagitante causis cognitis tribui oportebit. sin vero eiusmodi postulantur curricula, quae intra spatium receptum angustari non queunt (quippe si in confinio legitimi temporis petantur, et eius terminos prorogabunt), dilationem petitori denegari conveniet: in eius enim arbitrio fuerat tunc inferre litigium, cum petitae dilationis mora spatio superstite posset includi.

1. Quod si defensio rei dilationis suffragium postulaverit, eandem adserta causa citra obstaculum temporis deferri sancimus, quia nequaquam in ipsius steterat potestate, quando litigio pulsaretur. dari igitur

[5][200] Emperor Constantine Augustus to Bassus<, Urban Prefect>. pr. It is settled that provisions made in the laws concerning the time for restoration of rights are preserved. And if through Our favor someone has perhaps received the privilege of full majority (venia aetatis), he shall have the legally set time for bringing and completing a case for restoration of rights, starting from the day on which Our benevolence was communicated to him in the proper court and he received the right to administer his own property – provided, however, that the benefit of restoration of rights shall never be denied to those under 25 years old as to things they transacted before receiving the privilege of full majority.

1. If at any time someone under 25 succeeds (as heir) to the rights of another person under 25, he shall not at all be prohibited, after he passes age 25, from enjoying the full time (granted) for the benefit of restoration of rights. 2. But if someone under 25 acquired the rights of full majority, then, so far as concerns the rights of action he acquired based on the legal position of full adulthood, the time he shall have for bringing and finishing cases of restoration of right is only such as remained to the decedent of whom he will be shown to be the heir or the possessor of the estate. 3. If, however, a person of full age (maior) acquires the inheritance of someone under 25, in examining the matter of restoration of rights the whole time period that the person under 25 had, without diminution, shall be counted, starting from when he (the heir) enters upon the inheritance if he succeeds by civil law (ius civile) either through intestacy or by a will, or from when he receives possession of the estate if he inherits under Praetorian law (ius honorarium).

Given October 7, at Rome, in the consulship of Constantine Augustus and Licinius, both for the second time (312).

[6][201] The same Augustus to Julian, Urban Prefect. pr. When the time limits set for asking a restoration of rights are observed, if the plaintiff seeks a continuance (dilatio) that can be squeezed within the (time) limits for restoration, after examination of the case it will be appropriately granted no matter who may ask for it. But if the time period requested is such that it cannot be confined within the established space of time – for instance, if it is sought near the end of the legal time and would extend its limits – then it will be appropriate to deny the plaintiff a continuance, since it was in his power to bring the litigation when the delay caused by the continuance he sought could be confined within the remaining space of time.

1. But if the defense of the case asks for the favor of a continuance, we ordain that if (good) cause is alleged, this delay shall be granted without reference to [200] = C.Th. 2.16.2, substantially altered by the compilers. The constitution's date is disputed; it is usually (e.g., by Seeck) assigned to July 25, 319, in the consulship of the Emperor Constantine, for the fifth time, and the Caesar Licinius. Bassus was Urban Prefect 317–319.

[201] = C.Th. 2.7.2.

debet, etsi impetrata dimensio sese ultra temporis definitionem proferat. qua dilatione, si a reo impetretur, etiam actor in requirendis probationibus uti minime prohibetur.

D. XIIII k. Aug. pp. Romae ad senatum Constantio et Maximo conss.

[7] Imp. Iustinianus A. Iohanni pp. pr. Supervacuam differentiam utilis anni in integrum restitutionis a nostra re publica separantes sancimus et in antiqua Roma et in hac alma urbe et in Italia et in aliis provinciis quadriennium continuum tantummodo numerari ex die, ex quo annus utilis currebat, et id tempus totius loci esse commune: ex differentia enim locorum aliquod induci discrimen satis nobis absurdum esse visum est.

1. Quod non solum in minorum restitutionibus, quibus utilis annus incipit currere, ex quo vicesimi sexti anni dies illuxerit, sed etiam in maiorum hoc idem adhiberi sancimus, ut et hic pro utili anno memorata continuatio temporis observetur ad interponendam contestationem finiendamque litem. 2. Et quemadmodum omnis minor aetas excipitur in minorum restitutionibus, ita et in maiorum tempus, in quo rei publicae causa afuerint vel aliis legitimis causis, quae veteribus legibus enumeratae sunt, fuerint occupati, omne praecipiatur, et sit non absimilis in hac parte minorum et maiorum restitutio.

D. k. Sept. Constantinopoli post consulatum Lampadii et Orestae vv. cc.

LIII Quibus ex Causis Maiores in Integrum Restituuntur

[1] Imp. Antoninus A. Aemiliano. Si propter officium legationis ad me bona fide factae absens et indefensus condemnatus es, instaurationem iudicii iure desideras, ut ex integro defensionibus tuis utaris. nam eos quoque qui legationis officio funguntur in eo privilegio esse, quo sunt qui rei publicae causa absunt, receptum est.

PP. V non. Mart. duobus Aspris conss.

the time limit, since it was by no means within his power when the litigation started. It should be given, therefore, even if the granted time runs beyond the set time. If the defendant obtains this continuance, the plaintiff is hardly forbidden to use it in gathering evidence.

Given July 19, posted at Rome to the Senate, in the consulship of Constantius and Maximus (327).

[7] Emperor JUSTINIAN Augustus to John, Praetorian Prefect. pr. Abolishing from our state the needless distinction of the effective year (annus utilis) for restoration of rights,[202] We ordain that both in old Rome and in this bountiful city (Constantinople) and in Italy and in the other provinces, only a continuous period of four years shall be counted from the day on which the judicial year began running, and this time shall be common everywhere. For it appeared absurd to us that some distinction be introduced because of difference of location.

1. We ordain that this be observed not only for restoration of the rights of those under 25, for whom the effective year begins to run from dawn of their twenty-sixth year, but also for those who are of age, so that here also, in place of the judicial year, the continuous period of time that is fixed above shall be observed for bringing and concluding a lawsuit. 2. And just as the entire period before they reach 25 is excepted in restoration for young persons, so too, in the case of those who are of age, the time shall all be taken into account during which they were absent on public business or were occupied in other legally recognized matters enumerated in the old statutes. In this respect, restoration for those under 25 and for persons who are of age shall not be dissimilar.

Given September 1, at Constantinople, in the post-consulate of the viri clarissimi Lampadius and Orestes (531).

Fifty-Third Title For What Reasons Rights Are Restored to Those Who Are of Age

[1] Emperor ANTONINUS Augustus to Aemilianus. If you were condemned (in a civil case) while absent on account of an embassy sent to me in good faith, and (therefore) undefended, you rightly seek renewal of the action so that you may employ your defenses afresh. For it is accepted law that those who conduct an embassy enjoy the privilege of those absent on public business.

Posted March 3, in the consulship of the two Aspri (212).

[202] Reference is to C.Th. 2.16.2 in its original form, prior to the modification made in C. 2.52.5.

[2] Idem A. Dionysio. Si idcirco apud arbitrum praesentiam tui facere non potuisti, quod sub custodia militari iussu praesidis detinebaris, idque in veritate esse praesidi provinciae probaveris, accipies causae instaurationem.

PP. XIII k. Oct. Laeto et Cereale conss.

[3] Impp. Diocletianus et Maximianus AA. Proculo decurioni. In contractibus, qui bonae fidei sunt, etiam maioribus officio iudicis causa cognita publica iura subveniunt.

D. non. Aug. Diocletiano A. II et Aristobulo conss.

[4] Idem AA. Prisciano. Res publica minorum iure uti solet ideoque auxilium restitutionis implorare potest.

D. II id. Nov. Diocletiano A. II et Aristobulo conss.

[5] Idem AA. et CC. Liciniano. Si ab hostibus cum patre ac matre captus, post his ibi defunctis legis Corneliae beneficio reversus successiones eorum quaesisti, exemplo utilis actionis quae in integrum restitutis datur cum exceptionis annuae quae huic obici solet obiectu res vindicare non prohiberis.

D. XVI k. Mai. CC. conss.

LIIII De Alienatione Iudicii Mutandi Causa Facta

[1] Impp. Diocletianus et Maximianus AA. et CC. Catulo. Cum in rem actioni possessio pariat adversarium, alienatione etiam iudicii mutandi causa celebrata in integrum restitutio edicto perpetuo permittatur,

[2] The same Augustus to Dionysius. If you were unable to make an appearance before a judge arbitrator because you were detained under military custody on a governor's order, and you prove to the province's governor that this is grounded on truth, you will receive reinstatement of your case.

Posted September 19, in the consulship of Laetus and Cerealis (215).

[3] Emperors DIOCLETIAN and MAXIMIAN Augusti to Proculus, a decurion. In good faith contracts, public law assists those of age as well, through the judge's discretion (officio iudicis) after examination of the case.

Given August 5, in the consulship of Diocletian Augustus, for the second time, and Aristobulus (285).

[4] The same Augusti to Priscianus. A city (res publica) customarily enjoys the right given those under 25 and so can ask for the benefit of restoration (of rights).

Given November 12, in the consulship of Diocletian Augustus, for the second time, and Aristobulus (285).

[5] The same Augusti and the Caesars to Licinianus. If you, along with your father and mother, were captured by the enemy, and after they died (in captivity) you returned and acquired their inheritance through the benefit of the Cornelian law,[203] you are not forbidden from claiming property on the model of the analogous action given to those restored to their rights, (but) subject to the obstacle of the one-year (statute of limitations) defense that is customarily interposed.[204]

Given April 16, in the consulship of the Caesars (294).

Fifty-Fourth Title Alienation for the Purpose of Changing a Lawsuit[205]

[1] Emperors DIOCLETIAN and MAXIMIAN Augusti and the Caesars to Catulus. Since the fact of possession creates the adversary for a property claim (actio in rem), and restoration of rights is permitted by the Perpetual Edict also when [203] The Lex Cornelia de captivis, a law of Sulla (82–80 BC) enforcing the wills of captives as if they were free at the time of their deaths.

[204] See also C. 8.50.9 and 18; C. 3.32.24. The parents would have been entitled to recover the property upon their return from captivity; the same right was given to their heir. The "year" was a judicial year. See also Ulpian, D. 28.3.6.12.

[205] See D. 4.7. Blume: "Not only did the law forbid transfer of property in litigation (C. 8.36), but also, with the exception of a few allowable cases, when parties were threatened with litigation, in order that the position of the other side might not be made worse. Transfers to the nobility were common in later imperial times and a constant danger. C. 2.13–14."

intellegis, quod si rem, ne secum agatur, qui possidebat venumdedit et emptori tradidit, quem elegeris conveniendi tibi tributam esse iure facultatem.

D. VI k. Dec. Viminacio CC. conss.

LV De Receptis

[1] Imp. Antoninus A. Nepotianae. Ex sententia arbitri ex compromisso iure perfecto aditi appellar*i* non posse saepe rescriptum est, quia nec iudicati actio inde praestari potest et ob hoc invicem poena promittitur, ut metu eius a placitis non recedatur. sed si ultra diem compromisso comprehensum iudicatum est, sententia nulla est, nec ullam poenam committit qui ei non paruerit.

PP. VIIII k. Aug. Romae Antonino A. IIII et Balbino conss.

[2] Imppp. Carus Carinus et Numerianus AAA. Clementi. Si contra compromissum adversarius tuus apud electum arbitrum praesentiam sui facere detrectavit, placitae poenae videtur obnoxius.

PP. VIII k. Ian. Caro et Carino conss.

[3] Impp. Diocletianus et Maximianus AA. et CC. Petroniae. Arbitrorum ex compromisso sententiae non obtemperans, si sordes vel evidens gratia eorum qui arbitrati sunt intercessit, adversus filiam tuam agentem ex stipulatu exceptione doli mali uti poteris. sed et ex doli clausula, quae compromissi stipulationi subici solet, filiam tuam convenire non vetaberis.

PP. III id. Ian. ipsis AA. conss.

[4] Imp. Iustinianus A. Demostheni pp. pr. Ne in arbitris cum sacramenti religione eligendis periurium committatur et detur licentia an alienation has been made to change a lawsuit, you understand that if the possessors sold property and delivered it to the buyer so that litigation (over it) not be with them, you have received the legal right to sue whom you wish (the seller or the buyer).

Given November 26, at Viminacium, in the consulship of the Caesars (294).[206]

Fifty-Fifth Title Private Arbitration[207]

[1] Emperor ANTONINUS Augustus to Nepotiana. It has often been stated in rescripts that no appeal lies from the verdict of an arbitrator (appointed) on the basis of a legally executed arbitration agreement (compromissum), because no action on the judgment (actio iudicati) can arise from it. A reciprocal penalty is (usually) promised on this account, so that through fear of it the agreement is not broken. But if the (arbitrator's) decision is rendered after the date included in the agreement, the verdict is void and the party disobeying it incurs no penalty.

Posted July 24, at Rome, in the consulship of Antoninus Augustus, for the fourth time, and Balbinus (213).

[2] Emperors CARUS, CARINUS, and NUMERIANUS Augusti to Clemens. If, contrary to the arbitration agreement, your adversary declines to make an appearance before the chosen arbitrator, he is held liable to the penalty agreed upon (for non-appearance).

Posted December 25, in the consulship of Carus and Carinus (283).

[3] Emperors DIOCLETIAN and MAXIMIAN Augusti and the Caesars to Petronia. If you disobey the verdict of arbitrators under an arbitration agreement, you will be able to use the defense of deceit (exceptio doli mali) against your daughter, who is suing on the (penalty) stipulation, if the arbitrators were guilty of corruption or obvious bias. But you will also not be forbidden from suing your daughter on the clause concerning deceit that is usually attached to the stipulation of an arbitration agreement.

Posted January 11, in the consulship of the Augusti themselves (290 or 293).

[4] Emperor JUSTINIAN Augustus to Demosthenes, Praetorian Prefect. pr. To prevent perjury being committed in selecting arbitrators under the sanction

[206] Mommsen dates to September 26, 294.

[207] Recepta arbitri; see D. 4.8. This is a private agreement to arbitrate a dispute, without official intervention. Blume: "The award of such arbitrator was, except as [provided below], of itself of no binding force and was no bar to a subsequent trial and legal decision of the case."

perfidis hominibus passim definitiones iudicum eludere, sanctissimo arbitrio et huiusmodi rem censemus esse componendam.

1. Si igitur inter actorem et reum nec non et ipsum iudicem fuerit consensum, ut cum sacramenti religione lis procedat, et ipsi quidem litigatores scriptis hoc suis manibus vel per publicas personas scripserint vel apud ipsum arbitrum in actis propria voce deposuerint, quod sacramentis praestitis arbiter electus est, hoc etiam addito, quod et ipse arbiter iuramentum praestitit super lite cum omni veritate dirimenda, eius definitionem validam omnimodo custodiri et neque reum neque actorem posse discedere, sed tenere omnifariam, quatenus oboedire ei compellantur.

2. Sin autem de arbitro quidem nihil tale fuerit vel compositum vel scriptum, ipsae autem partes litteris hoc manifestaverint, quod iuramenti nexibus se illigaverint, ut arbitri sententia stetur, et in praesenti casu omnimodo definitionem arbitri immutatam servari, litteris videlicet eorum similem vim obtinentibus, sive ab initio hoc fuerit ab his scriptum vel praefato modo depositum, dum arbiter eligebatur, sive post definitivam sententiam hoc scriptum inveniatur, quod cum sacramenti religione eius audientiam amplexi sunt vel quod ea quae statuta sunt adimplere iuraverunt.

3. Sed et si ipse solus arbiter hoc litigatoribus poscentibus et vel scriptis vel depositionibus, ut dictum est, manifestum facientibus praestiterit iuramentum, quod cum omni veritate liti libramenta imponat, similem esse etiam in praesenti casu prioribus eius definitionem et eam omnimodo legibus esse vallatam.

4. Et in his omnibus casibus liceat vel in factum vel condictionem ex lege vel in rem utilem instituere, secundum quod facti qualitas postulaverit.

5. Sin autem in scriptura quidem aut depositione nihil tale appareat, una autem pars edicat iuramentum esse praestitum, quatenus arbitrali stetur sententia, huiusmodi litigatorum vel solius arbitri sermones minime esse credendos, cum et, si quis iusiurandum datum esse non iudice supposito nec hoc scriptura partium testante concesserit, incerti certaminis compositio, quae inter homines imperitos saepe accidit, non of an oath, and license being (thereby) given to dishonest men everywhere to make sport of the decisions of judges, We deem that We should settle such a matter by a most authoritative pronouncement.

1. If, therefore, it is agreed between the plaintiff, the defendant, and the arbitrator himself that a suit shall proceed under the sanction of an oath, and the litigants themselves write this in their own hand or through public persons (i.e., notaries), or they state this in their own voices on the record (in actis) before the arbitrator, (namely) that the arbitrator was chosen under oaths administered (previously), and with this addition, that the arbitrator himself swears to decide the case with complete fidelity to the truth, (We deem) that this determination shall be valid and upheld in every way, and that neither the defendant nor the plaintiff can disregard it, but it shall constrain them in every way, to the extent that they are compelled to obey it.

2. If nothing of this sort was either formulated or written concerning the arbitrator, but the parties themselves make it known in writing that they bind themselves by the obligation of an oath to abide by the arbitrator's decision, also in this case the arbitrator's determination shall be enforced without change, since their writings evidently have a similar effect whether it was so written at the outset or orally stated in the aforesaid manner when the arbitrator was chosen, or (instead) after a definitive decision a writing is found that they have accepted his hearings under sanction of an oath or that they swear to carry out what is decided.

3. And if the arbitrator alone, upon demand of the litigants, and either by writing or, as aforesaid, by depositions making it manifest, swears that he will impose the scales (of justice) on the lawsuit with total fidelity to the truth, his determination in the present case is also similar to the earlier ones and shall be fortified by the laws in every way.

4. In all these cases it shall be permitted to bring either an action on the facts (in factum) or a claim for restitution under a statute (condictio ex lege), or an action analogous to one for property (in rem), according as the nature of the facts require.

5. If, however, nothing of this sort appears in writing or by oral deposition, but one party asserts that an oath was taken to the effect that the arbitrator's decision would be obeyed, such assertions by the litigators or by just the arbitrator should scarcely be credited, since also, if anyone admit that an oath was taken not in the judge's presence nor attested by the writing of the parties, the settlement of a debatable dispute – as often happens among inexperienced people – has no little strength for the matters determined, but in such a case aliquid robur iudicatis inferat, sed in huiusmodi casu haec obtineant, quae veteres super arbitris eligendis sanxerunt.

6. Si quis autem post arbitri definitionem subscripserit ἐμμένειν vel στοιχεῖν vel πληροῦν vel πάντα ποιεῖν vel διδόναι (Graecis enim vocabulis haec enarrare propter consuetudinem utilius visum est), etsi non adiecerit ὁμολογῶ, et sic omnimodo per actionem in factum eum compelli ea facere quibus consensit. qualis enim differentia est, si huiusmodi verbis etiam ὁμολογῶ adiciatur vel huiusmodi vocabulum transmittatur?

7. Si enim verba consueta stipulationum et subtilis, immo magis supervacua observatio ab aula[xiii] concessa est, nos, qui nuper legibus a nobis scriptis multa vitia stipulationum multasque ambages scrupulososque circuitus correximus, cur non et in huiusmodi scriptura totam formidinem veteris iuris amputamus, ut, si quis haec scripserit vel unum ex his, adquiescere eis compellatur et ea ad effectum omnimodo perducere? cum non est verisimile haec propter hoc scripsisse, ut tantum non contradicat, sed ut etiam ea impleat, adversus quae obviam ire non potest.

Recitata septimo miliario in novo consistorio palatii Iustiniani. D. III k. Nov. Decio vc. cons.

[5] Idem A. Iuliano pp. pr. Cum antea sancitum fuerat in arbitris eligendis, quos neque poena compromissi vallabat neque iudex dederat, sed nulla praecedente sententia communis electio, ut in illorum sententia stetur, procreabat, si quidem pro parte pulsata forma arbitralis procederet, exceptionem ei veluti pacti generari, sin autem pro actore calculus poneretur, nihil ex eo procedere ei praesidii: sancimus in eos arbitros, quos praediximus et quos talis consensus elegerit sub eo pacto in scriptis vel non in scriptis habito, ut eorum definitioni stetur, si quidem subscripserint, postquam definitio procedit, quod non displicet ambabus partibus eorum sententia, non solum reo exceptionem veluti pacti generari, sed etiam actori ex nostro numine in factum actionem, quatenus possit sententia eius exsecutioni mandari, sed in hac quidem

[xiii] [ab aula]<aboliri>

the provisions govern which the ancients ordained in regard to choosing arbitrators.[208]

6. But if underneath the arbitrator's decision anyone writes (in Greek) to "abide by," or "submit to," or "fulfill," or to "do" or "give all" – for it seems more helpful, on account of custom, to state these things in Greek words – then, although he does not add (in Greek) "I solemnly promise," he shall also be compelled in every way through an action on the facts (actio in factum) to do the things to which he consented. For what is the difference whether the word "I solemnly promise" is added to such words, or such a word is omitted?

7. For if abolition has been allowed for the routine words of stipulations, and the refined, or rather superfluous, observance (of the old rules), and We, in laws recently enacted by us,[209] have corrected the many faults of stipulations and their many circumlocutions and captious verbosity, why not also curtail the general fear of the ancient law in connection with such writing, so that a man who writes these (words) or one of them is compelled to abide by them and to carry them into effect in every way? For it is likely he wrote these things not just not to contradict them, but rather to carry out things to which he has no objection to offer.

Recited at the seventh milestone in the New Consistory of Justinian's Palace; given Octobèr 30, in the consulship of the vir clarissimus Decius (529).

[5][210] The same Augustus to Julian, Praetorian Prefect. pr. In choosing arbitrators who were neither supported by a penalty clause in the arbitration agreement nor appointed by a judge, but were, without a preceding (judge's) order, picked through a mutual consent to abide by their decision, it was formerly ordained that if the arbitrator's decision went in favor of the defendant, a defense like that on a pact arose for him; but if the reckoning favored the plaintiff, he received no protection from it. As to these arbitrators who are mentioned above and who were chosen through an agreement, under a pact either in writing or not, to stand by their decision, We (now) ordain that if, after the determination is made, they both subscribe that their verdict does [208] Sections 1–5 of this constitution were repealed by Nov. 82.11, of 539, which provides, in substance (Blume): "many, ignorant of the usages of courts, readily swear that they will abide by the decision of an arbitrator who does not know what is just, and then, forgetting their oath, and afflicted with damage, ask that the matter be re-examined. In order that such perjury may not be committed hereafter, no arbitrators shall hereafter be chosen under the sanction of an oath, but parties must stipulate for a penalty. If that is done, and a party does not want to abide by the decision, he must first pay the penalty agreed on, and he may then have the matter re-examined in (a regular) court. If no penalty has been agreed on, but the parties are satisfied with an oath, they will not be bound by the decision. All other laws on this subject aside from that relating to the oath, shall remain in effect."

[209] C. 6.23.25, 8.37.11.

[210] Combine with C. 4.20.20.

regia civitate ab officio eminentissimae praefecturae vel eius, cuius forum pars sequitur fugientis, in provinciis autem tam per moderatores quam apparitiones eorum, vel per iudices, quorum regimen pars pertimescat pulsata.

1. Sin autem minime quidem post sententiam subscripserint arbitri formam amplecti, sed silentio eam roboraverint et non intra decem dies proximos attestatio missa fuerit vel iudici vel adversariis ab alterutra parte, per quam manifestum fiat definitionem non esse amplectendam, tunc silentio partium sententiam roboratam esse et fugienti exceptionem et agenti memoratam actionem competere. 2. Altera autem parte recusante secundum praefatum modum et implere statuta minime cupiente nihil fieri praeiudicium neque pari vel exceptionem reo vel actori actionem, exceptis videlicet arbitris, qui cum sacramenti religione electi sunt secundum novellam nostri numinis constitutionem: tunc etenim ea omnia servari, quae lege nostra super huiusmodi audientia definita sunt.

3. Licet non ignoramus Iulii Pauli opinionem et aliorum prudentium certorum, qui tetigerunt quidem huiusmodi quaestionem, quam in praesenti adgredimur, non autem perfectissime peregerunt, sed usque ad quasdam temporales actiones standum esse existimaverunt, plenius tamen et generaliter definimus conventum in scriptis apud compromissum iudicem factum ita temporis interruptionem inducere, quasi in ordinario iudicio lis fuisset inchoata. 4. Ad haec generaliter sancimus in his, quae apud compromissarios acta sunt, si aliquod in factum respiciens vel professum est vel attestatum, posse eo et in ordinariis uti iudiciis.

D. VI k. April. Constantinopoli Lampadio et Oreste vv.cc. conss.

[6] Idem A. Iohanni pp. Sancimus mulieres suae pudicitiae memores et operum, quae eis natura permisit et a quibus eas iussit abstinere, licet summae atque optimae opinionis constitutae arbitrium in se susceperint vel, si fuerint patronae, inter libertos suam interposuerint audientiam, not displease them, then not only does a defense like that of a pact arise for the defendant, but also, pursuant to Our Divine Majesty, the plaintiff shall also have a right of action on the facts (in factum), to the end that this decision can be carried into effect – but in this Imperial City through the office staff of the eminent Prefecture or of the official with jurisdiction over the defendant, but in the provinces through the governors as well as their subordinates or through the judges to whose competence the defendant is subject.

1. Even if, moreover, the parties, after the decision, in no way subscribe to accepting the arbitrator's written plan, but (nevertheless) they confirm it by their silence, and within the next ten days neither party sends notification either to the arbitrator or to his adversaries whereby he makes it known that the decision ought not to be accepted, then by the silence of the parties the decision is corroborated, and the defendant shall have the defense and the plaintiff the aforementioned action. 2. But if either objects in the aforesaid manner and in no way desires to execute the decision, no prejudice shall result, nor shall a defense arise for the defendant or an action for the plaintiff, except indeed for arbitrators who were chosen under the sanction of an oath according to the new constitution of Our Divine Majesty,[211] for then all those things shall be determined by Our law concerning such a hearing.

3. Although We are not unaware of the opinion of Julius Paulus and of certain other jurists who touched upon the subject to which we pass at present, but who did not treat it very fully and thought that it should be limited to certain time-restricted actions (actiones temporales),[212] We, however, more fully and generally determine that the written summoning (of a defendant) before a settlement judge shall interrupt the time (for usucapion), just as if a suit had been commenced in an ordinary court. 4. In addition we ordain generally, concerning matters tried before settlement arbitrators, that if something respecting the facts is either admitted or attested, it can also be used in ordinary courts.[213]

Given March 27, at Constantinople, in the consulship of the viri clarissimi Lampadius and Orestes (530).

[6] The same Augustus to John, Praetorian Prefect. We ordain that women, mindful of their modesty, as well as of the work that nature has permitted them and of that from which it ordered them to abstain, be kept out of every judicial battle, even if they are of the most eminent and best repute and have undertaken an arbitration, or if they as patrons (of freedmen) provide their [211] Law 4.1–5 above, repealed by Nov. 82.11.

[212] Blume: "Refers to the rule, prevailing in classical law, that not the mere institution of a suit, but only joinder of issues, interrupted … the statute of limitations. In later law, [it] was interrupted when defendant was summoned."

[213] See C. 4.20.20.

ab omni iudiciali agmine separari, ut ex earum electione nulla poena, nulla pacti exceptio adversus iustos eorum conventores[xiv] habeatur.

D. k. Sept. Constantinopoli post consulatum Lampadii et Orestae.

LVI De Satisdando

[1] Impp. Diocletianus et Maximianus AA. et CC. pr. Non est iuris incerti eum, qui apud acta factus est agentis procurator, non compelli ratam rem dominum habiturum satisdare: hoc enim casu veluti praesentis procuratorem intervenire intellegendum est. 1. Itaque etsi postea mutata voluntate procuratorem esse noluerit, tamen iudicium, quo quasi procurator expertus est, iudex ratum habere debebit.

2. Sin autem ei ab adversario opposita fuerit in ipso litis exordio defensionis adlegatio, etiam ipse quasi absentis in hac parte procurator satisdationem super excipienda lite praestare cogitur, qua non praecedente lis quae ei mandata est ulterius procedere a iudice non conceditur.

3. Rei autem procurator vel defensor, etiam sub gestorum testificatione factus, in ipso litis limine iudicatum solvi satisdationem in omnibus causis praestare cogitur.

D. VIIII k. Nov. CC. conss.

LVII De Formulis et Impetratione Actionum Sublatis

[1] Impp. Constantius et Constans AA. Marcellino praesidi Phoenice. Iuris formulae aucupatione syllabarum insidiantes cunctorum actibus radicitus amputentur.

D. X k. Febr. Constantio III et Constante II AA. conss.

[xiv] [eorum conventores]<earum contemptores> own hearing among their freedmen. Therefore on the basis of their selection no penalty and no defense from a pact shall be had against those who rightly ignore them.

Given September 1, at Constantinople, in the post-consulate of Lampadius and Orestes (531).

Fifty-Sixth Title Giving a Surety[214]

[1] Emperors DIOCLETIAN and MAXIMIAN Augusti and the Caesars. pr. It is not unsettled law that a man who is appointed as the plaintiff's procurator in the judicial records (apud acta) is not compelled to give a surety that the owner will ratify the outcome, for in this case the procurator is understood as appearing as if for one present (in court). 1. Thus, although he (the plaintiff) later changes his mind and does not want him to be procurator, the judge should nonetheless uphold the judicial proceeding in which he acted as a procurator.

2. But if at the very outset of the case a claim (the basis for a counteraction) is interposed by the adversary (the defendant), then he, as though in this matter he were the procurator of an absent (principal), is forced to give a surety to undertake the suit (in connection with the defendant's claim), and unless this is done, the judge will not allow him to proceed with the suit mandated to him.

3. The procurator or defender (defensor) of the defendant, however, even one appointed with the proof of a record, is forced at the very threshold of the lawsuit to give a surety in all cases that a judgment will be paid.

Given October 24, in the consulship of the Caesars (294).

Fifty-Seventh Title The Abolition of Formulas and of the Obtaining of Actions

[1] Emperors CONSTANTIUS and CONSTANS Augusti to Marcellinus, Governor of Phoenicia. The legal formulas (iuris formulae), which entangle the affairs of everyone in their quibbling verses, shall be extirpated root and all.[215]

Given January 23, in the consulship of Constantius, for the third time, and Constans, for the second time, Augusti (342).

[214] See D. 2.8.

[215] The formulae are associated with the procedure of classical Roman law, replaced, at this date, by extraordinary cognition. Blume: "A general law, directing magistrates to try cases themselves, was enacted in 294 A.D. C. 3.3.2. That was the deathblow to the formula. The instant rescript shows, however, that notwithstanding that law, formulas continued to be issued."

[2] Impp. Theodosius et Valentinianus AA. Hierio pp. Nulli prorsus non impetratae actionis in maiore vel minore iudicio agenti opponatur exceptio, si aptam rei et proposito negotio competentem eam esse constiterit.

D. x k. Mart. Constantinopoli Tauro et Felice conss.

LVIII De Iureiurando Propter Calumniam Dando

[1] Imp. Iustinianus A. Demostheni pp. pr. In omnibus causis, sive propter litteras fuerit certatum sive propter instrumenta sive propter quicquam aliud, in quo necessitas probationis incumbit, sancimus non aliter easdem probationes praestare compelli, nisi prius qui eas exposcit iuramentum de calumnia praestaverit, quod non causa differendi huiusmodi proposuit adlegationes: nam sacramenti timore contentiosa litigantium instantia compescitur.

1. Ne autem perperam in quaestionem servorum quidam venientes sui animi crudelitatem exerceant, non aliter concedi eis qui quaestionem servorum exposcunt ad hoc venire vel a iudicibus audiri, nisi prius tactis sacrosanctis scripturis deponant, quod non odio servorum vel propter offensas coheredum ad hoc venerunt, sed quia aliter rerum hereditariarum veritatem exquirere vel ostendere non possunt.

D. xii k. Oct. Constantinopoli Decio vc. cons.

[2] Idem A. Iuliano pp. pr. Cum et iudices non aliter causas dirimere concessimus nisi sacrosanctis evangeliis propositis et patronos causarum in omni orbe terrarum, qui Romano imperio suppositus est, prius iurare et ita perferre causas disposuimus: necessarium duximus et praesentem legem ponere, per quam sancimus in omnibus litibus, quae fuerint post praesentem legem inchoatae, non aliter neque actorem neque fugientem in primordio litis exercere certamina, nisi post narrationem et responsionem, antequam utriusque partis advocati sacramentum legitimum praestent, ipsae principales personae subeant iusiurandum. et actor quidem iuret non calumniandi animo litem movisse, sed existimando bonam causam habere: reus autem non aliter suis adlegationibus utatur, nisi prius et ipse iuraverit, quod putans se bona instantia uti ad reluctandum pervenerit: et postea

[2][216] Emperors THEODOSIUS and VALENTINIAN Augusti to Hierius, Praetorian Prefect. The defense that no action (i.e., no formula) was formally obtained shall not be raised against anyone at all suing in any court, high or low, if it appears that it (the action actually granted them) is suited to the subject and proper to the matter at hand.

Given February 20, at Constantinople, in the consulship of Taurus and Felix (428).

Fifty-Eighth Title The Oath to Be Taken over Vexatious Litigation

[1][217] Emperor JUSTINIAN Augustus to Demosthenes, Praetorian Prefect. pr. In all cases, whether there is dispute over writings or documents or anything else for which there lies a requirement of proof, We ordain that these proofs need not otherwise be produced unless the party demanding them first takes an oath concerning vexatious litigation (calumnia), that he does not make such allegations to cause delay. For fear of an oath restrains the quarrelsome perseverance of litigants.

1. To prevent some persons who wrongfully resort to examining slaves (under torture) from giving vent to their mental cruelty, those who demand the examination of slaves shall not be permitted to resort to it or be heard by judges unless they first touch the Holy Scriptures and state that they do not resort to this through hatred for the slaves or because of the enmities of co-heirs, but because they cannot otherwise discover or show the truth concerning inherited property.

Given September 20, at Constantinople, in the consulship of the vir clarissimus Decius (529).

[2][218] The same Augustus to Julian, Praetorian Prefect. pr. Inasmuch as We have not allowed judges to dispose of cases unless with the Holy Gospels before them, and We also have provided that, throughout the world subject to Roman rule, trial advocates first take an oath before presenting their cases,[219] (so) We have also deemed it necessary to enact the present statute, through which We ordain that in all cases commenced after the enactment of this law, not otherwise shall the plaintiff or defendant engage in contest at the outset of the suit unless, after the complaint and the response (are made),[220] and before the advocates on either side take the statutory oath, the principals themselves

[216] = C.Th. 2.3.1; combine with C. 5.3.17, 5.4.22, 5.11.6, 6.18.1, 6.24.11, and 6.61.2.
[217] Combine with C. 9.41.18 (dated September 17, at Chalcedon).
[218] Combine with C. 3.1.15–16 (which have the constitution "given" on this date).
[219] For both provisions, C. 3.1.14.
[220] C. 3.9.1.

utriusque partis viros disertissimos advocatos, quod iam dispositum est a nobis, iusiurandum praestare, sacrosanctis videlicet evangeliis ante iudicem positis.

1. Sin autem vel dignitas vel sexus personae non concesserit eam ad iudicem pervenire, in domo litigantis sacramentum procedere, altera videlicet parte vel procuratore eius praesente. 2. Quod observari oportet et si tutores vel curatores vel aliae quaedam sint personae, quae administrationem alienarum rerum auctoritate legitima gerunt. convenit enim et ipsos iureiurando adfici, quia ipsi causam scientes ita ad eam perveniunt. neque enim pupillus neque adultus vel aliae huiusmodi personae, sed ipsi, qui pro eis tutelam vel curam vel aliam legitimam gerunt administrationem, scire possunt causam et ita ad iudicium pervenire eo, quod ex animi sui sententia iurent. 2a. Et licet vera causae natura alia forsitan est, tamen quod quisque credit et existimat, hoc esse iurandum: omnibus aliis iuramentis, quae vel ex praeteritis descendunt legibus vel a nobis disposita sunt, in sua firmitate duraturis.

3. Sin autem afuerit alterutra pars et per procuratorem causa agitur, non ante licentiam habeat actor litem exercendam suo procuratori mandare, nisi prius actis intervenientibus in provincia qua degit sacramentum calumniae subeat. 3a. Similique modo si reus afuerit et forsitan vel per iudicatum solvi stipulationem procuratorem ordinaverit vel defensor pro eo intervenerit, et ipse vel praesente actore per se vel per instructum procuratorem vel etiam absente eo, si hoc iudex perspexerit, inter acta iuramentum praestiterit, quod reum dare antea dispositum est.

4. Sed quia veremur, ne forsitan quidam collusione aliqua utentes remittere videantur sibi huiusmodi sacramentum et ex praedicta dissimulatione nostram sanctionem deludant, sancimus omnes iudices, licet ex compromisso cognoscant, vigorem suum exercentes, quia non pro commodo privatorum, sed pro communi utilitate praesentem legem posuimus, minime pati tale sacramentum remitti, sed omnimodo hoc et ab actore et a fugiente exigi, ne paulatim videatur huiusmodi res defraudari et sacramentum vel principalium personarum vel advocatorum ex quacumque parte mutilari.

5. Hoc etiam huic legi addendum esse sancimus, ut, si quis pro alio litem movere voluerit nullo mandato prolato, sed per fideiussionem ratam rem dominum habiturum suam personam firmaverit, ne vel ex hac machinatione lex circumscribi videatur, sancimus si quid tale in submit to an oath. The plaintiff, indeed, shall swear that he did not set the suit in motion vexatiously, but with the belief that he had a good case. The defendant shall not otherwise employ his own claims unless he also first swears that he came to resist while judging he has a good position. Afterwards the learned advocates of either side take the oath as now arranged by Us, the Holy Gospels having, of course, been placed before the judge.

1. If the rank or sex of a person does not permit going before a judge, the oath shall occur in the litigant's home, obviously in the presence of the other side or his procurator. 2. This shall also be observed if tutores or curatores or other persons are administering another's property with legal authority. It is proper that they too submit to an oath, since they enter the case knowing its character. For it is not a minor ward (pupillus) nor an adult one, or other such persons, but they themselves, (the ones who) conduct for them tutelage or curatorship or another lawful administration, who can know a case and enter a trial such that they swear in accord with their inner belief. 2a. And although the true nature of the case is perhaps different, nevertheless what each person believes and thinks must be sworn. All other oaths required either in past laws or by Us shall remain in force.

3. But if one of the parties is absent and the case is conducted through a procurator, the plaintiff shall not have permission to mandate conduct of the suit to his procurator unless he first submits to an oath on vexatious litigation as a matter of judicial record (actis interveniestibus) in the province where he lives. 3a. And in like manner if the defendant is absent and, say, either he appoints a procurator through a stipulation that a judgment will be paid or a defender (defensor) intercedes for him, he (the representative) as well, either in the presence of the plaintiff himself or through his (the plaintiff's) chosen procurator or even in his absence if the judge deems this best, shall on the record (inter acta) take the oath that was previously arranged for the defendant to take.

4. But because we fear that some persons, by use of some collusion, may seem to waive such an oath and by the aforesaid trickery evade our ordinance, We ordain that all judges, even if examining on the basis of an arbitration agreement (compromissum), shall through the exercise of their power – since We have enacted the instant law not for the advantage of private persons, but for the common benefit (pro communi utilitate) – in no way permit waiver of such an oath, but by every means demand it from the plaintiff and the defendant, lest such a thing as this (law) seem gradually to be cheated, and the oath of the principals or their advocates be maimed in any respect.

5. We ordain that this also be added to this statute, that if any person wishes to set in motion a suit for another without producing a mandate, but he confirms his role through a suretyship that the owner (of the claim) will ratify his posterum emerserit, sive pro una persona quis litem movere voluerit sive pro aliquo corpore vel vico vel alia universitate, fideiussionem quidem solitam praestare, litem autem ulterius minime procedere, nisi intra a iudice statuendum tempus faciat personas principales sacramentum subire, vel praesente adversario, si hoc maluerit, vel alio pro eo agente, vel penitus altera parte cessante inter acta apud defensorem locorum huiusmodi sacramentum vel ab ipso pro quo agitur vel plurima parte vel idonea universitatis procedat.

6. Quod si actor noluerit subire sacramentum calumniae et hoc legitime fuerit approbatum, non liceat ei penitus ad litem pervenire, sed cadat ab instituta actione quasi improbus litigator, et tristitia iudicum ei cum sancta interminatione occurrat et ab iudicio eum quam longissime expellat. 7. Sin autem reus hoc sacramentum subire recusaverit, in his capitulis, quae narratione comprehensa sunt, pro confesso habeatur et liceat iudici sententiam proferre, quemadmodum et ipsa rei qualitas suggesserit.

8. Sic enim non lites solum, sed etiam calumniatores minuentur, sic pro iudiciis putabunt sese omnes in sacrariis sisti. si enim et ipsae principales litigantium partes per iuramentum lites exerceant et causarum patroni praebeant sacramentum et ipsi iudices propositis sanctis scripturis tam causae totius faciant examinationem quam suum proferant arbitrium, quid aliud, nisi pro hominibus deum in omnibus causis iudicem esse credendum est? 8a. Antiqua itaque calumnia quiescente et eius ambagibus constitutio nostra dilucida et compendiosa in terris clareat omnibus et sit maximum dirimendarum causarum remedium.

9. Sed praedictum sacramentum in litibus quidem quae necdum sunt inchoatae praestari volumus in ipso litis primordio. 10. Sin autem causae adhuc pendentes inveniantur vel post litem contestatam et post solitas iudiciales cautelas iam praestitas, si quidem praesto fuerit utraque persona et in eadem civitate vel in territorio eius moratur, et in his litibus sacramentum locum habere et in primo post hanc legem ingressu compelli iusiurandum praestare. 11. Sin autem una pars afuerit, ne videatur propter absentiam personae lis differri et aliquid contrarium eveniat nostro proposito et, quod pro compendio litium introductum est, in adversariam figuram transformetur, iubemus praesentem quidem personam omnimodo dare sacramentum, absenti autem in pendentibus dumtaxat litibus secundum quod praedictum est hoc concedi. 12. Sin act, then in order that this law not seem to be circumvented even by such a scheme, We further ordain that if any such thing happens hereafter, whether someone wishes to institute an action for one person or for some corporate body or settlement (vicus) or other legal person (universitas), he shall indeed provide the customary suretyship, but the suit shall not otherwise proceed further unless, within the time prescribed by the judge, he (the judge) causes the principals to submit to an oath either in the adversary's presence if he prefers this or in that of another acting for him, or, if the other party is entirely missing, then such an oath shall be taken on the record (inter acta) before the Defender of the locality[221] either by the person for whom suit is brought or by the greater or (at least) an adequate portion of the legal person.

6. But if the plaintiff declines to submit to an oath on vexatious litigation and this (refusal) is legally proven, he shall in no wise be permitted to continue the suit; he shall drop from the instituted lawsuit as a dishonest litigant, and judicial harshness shall both visit upon him a godly warning and banish him as far as possible from the court. 7. If the defendant refuses to submit to this oath, he shall be considered as having confessed regarding the points contained in the (plaintiff's) complaint, and the judge may pronounce his verdict, according as the character of the matter suggests.

8. In this way not only lawsuits, but vexatious litigants will decline in number, and all persons will think they stand before, not courts, but religious shrines. For if the principal litigants carry on their suits under oath, and the trial advocates swear one, and the judges themselves both conduct their investigation of the entire case and render their judgment with the Holy Scriptures placed before them, what else is to be thought than that God, not men, is the judge in all cases? 8a. So, with the vexatious litigation of old and its subterfuges removed, let Our clear and succinct constitution shine throughout the earth, as the foremost remedy in the disposition of cases.

9. We wish the aforementioned oath to be taken in all lawsuits that have not already commenced, at the very beginning of the lawsuit. 10. If, moreover, cases still pending are discovered, even after joinder of issue (litis contestatio) and the giving of the usual judicial securities, then if each person is present and they live in the same city or territory, this (rule) is relevant in these lawsuits as well, and they shall be compelled to submit to the oath at the first appearance after this law. 11. But if one party is absent, to prevent the lawsuit being apparently delayed through the person's absence, and something (thus) occurring contrary to Our purpose, (so that) what was introduced to shorten lawsuits[222] is turned to the opposite result, We order that the party present indeed take the oath, but that it be waived for the absent one only in pending lawsuits, as [221] See C. 1.55 (defensores civitatium).

[222] See C. 3.1.13.

autem utraque principalis persona afuerit, ne diutius lites protelentur, etiam sine datione sacramenti lites pendentes suo decurrant tramite.

PP. x k. Mart. Constantinopoli post consulatum Lampadii et Orestis vv. cc.

aforementioned. 12. But if both principals are absent, then to avoid suits being delayed, the pending cases shall run on their (usual) course without the giving of an oath.[223]

Posted February 20, at Constantinople, in the post-consulate of the viri clarissimi Lampadius and Orestes (531).

[223] This constitution was subsequently modified by Nov. 49 (of 537) and Nov. 124.1 (of 544).

Liber Tertius

I De Iudiciis

[1] Impp. Severus et Antoninus AA. Clementi. Iudicio coepto usurarum stipulatio non est perempta. superest, ut debitorem eius temporis, quod non est in iudicium deductum, convenire possis.
PP. k. April. Antonino A. II et Geta II conss.

[2] Idem AA. Valerio. Licet iudice accepto cum tutore tuo egisti, ipso iure actio tutelae sublata non est: et ideo si rursus eundem iudicem petieris, contra utilem exceptionem rei iudicatae, si de specie de qua agis in iudicio priore tractatum non esse adlegas, non inutiliter replicatione doli mali uteris.
PP. VI k. Ian. Faustino et Rufo conss.

[3] Imp. Alexander A. Faustinae. Quotiens quaestio status bonorum disceptationi concurrit, nihil prohibet, quo magis apud eum quoque, qui alioquin super causa status cognoscere non possit, disceptatio terminetur.
PP. VI id. Febr. Iuliano II et Crispino conss.

Third Book

edited by Serena Connolly

First Title Trials[1]

[1][2] Emperors SEVERUS and ANTONINUS Augusti to Clemens. A stipulation for interest is not invalidated by the commencement of a trial. It remains the case, then, that you can sue a debtor for the interest for such time as was not included in the trial.

Posted April 1, in the consulship of Antoninus Augustus, for the second time, and Geta, for the second time (205).

[2] The same Augusti to Valerius. Although you went to law against your tutor and accepted a judge (after the joinder of issue), the (particular) action on tutelage was not taken away by the operation of the law itself; and, therefore, if you ask again for the same judge and if you allege that the specific issue concerning which you sued was not embraced in the former action, you can in your own interest pursue a counter-exception based on deceit (replicatio doli mali) against the analogous exception (raised by the defendant) of a double claim against him (utilis exceptio rei iudicatae).

Posted December 27, in the consulship of Faustinus and Rufus (210).

[3] Emperor ALEXANDER Augustus to Faustina. Whenever an investigation as to personal status is bound together with a dispute concerning property, nothing prevents determination of the dispute by a judge who otherwise cannot (independently) try a case involving the question of personal status.

Posted February 8, in the consulship of Julian, for the second time, and Crispinus (224).

[1] See D. 5.1.

[2] Blume: "A stipulation for interest was a separate stipulation from that for the principal (see D. 45.1.75.9), so there might be separate stipulations for interest for different periods (D. 45.1.140.1)."

[4] Idem A. Popilio. Si, cum tibi pretium praediorum a curatoribus comparatorum reputaretur et instrumenta emptionis traderentur, quaestionem omissae evictionis non movisti, intellegis semel finitam litem instaurari non oportere.

PP. k. Aug. Modesto et Probo conss.

[5] Imp. Gordianus A. Marcello. A iudice iudex delegatus iudicis dandi non habet potestatem, cum ipse iudiciario munere fungatur, nisi a principe iudex datus fuerit.

PP. IIII non. Sept. Pio et Pontiano conss.

[6] Idem A. Iuniae. Servus in iudicio interesse non potest nec, si condemnatio aliqua in personam eius facta sit, quod statutum est subsistit.

D. XV k. Sept. Gordiano A. et Aviola conss.

[7] Impp. Diocletianus et Maximianus AA. et CC. Irenae. Cum debitoris tui servum, tibi pignoris iure obligatum bona domini sui quondam rebus humanis exempti tenere profitearis, adversus eum dari tibi actiones contra ius postulas, si quidem inter servum et liberum consistere iudicium nullum possit. ad possessionem itaque pignorum magis officio iudicis venire te convenit quam illicita postulare.

S. XIIII k. Mai. Sirmi CC. conss.

[8] Impp. Constantinus et Licinius AA. ad Dionysium. Placuit in omnibus rebus praecipuam esse iustitiae aequitatisque quam stricti iuris rationem.

D. id. Mai. Volusiano et Anniano conss.

[9] Imp. Constantinus A. ad Maximum. Iudices oportet imprimis rei qualitatem plena inquisitione discutere et tunc utramque partem saepius interrogare, ne quid novi addere desiderent, cum hoc ipsum ad alterutram partem proficiat, sive definienda causa per iudicem sive ad maiorem potestatem referenda sit.

D. prid. id. Ian. Sirmi Crispo II et Constantino II CC. conss.

[4] The same Augustus to Popilius. If, while the cost to you of lands bought by your curatores was being calculated and the documents of purchase were being delivered, you did not initiate an investigation into the omission of (an agreement on liability for) eviction, you understand that a suit once completed should not be reopened.

Posted August 1, in the consulship of Modestus and Probus (238).

[5] Emperor GORDIAN Augustus to Marcellus. A judge appointed by another judge does not have the power in turn to appoint a judge, since he himself is to carry out the duty of a judge, unless he had been appointed judge by the Emperor.

Posted September 2, in the consulship of Pius and Pontianus (238).

[6] The same Augustus to Junia. A slave cannot be a party to an action; nor, if a judgment has been rendered against him, can the decision stand.

Given August 18, in the consulship of Gordian Augustus and Aviola (239).

[7] Emperors DIOCLETIAN and MAXIMIAN and the Caesars to Irena. Since you declare that the slave of your debtor, who was bound to you by the law of pledge, holds property of his former master, now taken away from human affairs (i.e., dead), you unlawfully ask for a right of action to be given to you against the slave, since it is not possible for any trial to exist between a slave and someone free-born. It is generally accepted, therefore, that you should approach the office of a judge seeking possession of the pledge, rather than asking for things that are not lawful.

Subscribed April 18, at Sirmium, in the consulship of the Caesars (294).

[8][3] Emperors CONSTANTINE and LICINIUS Augusti to Dionysius. We have determined that the foremost consideration in all things should be justice and equity, rather than the strict letter of the law.

Given May 15, in the consulship of Volusianus and Annianus (314).

[9][4] Emperor CONSTANTINE Augustus to Maximus. Judges should clear up as a priority the nature of the issue in question by full inquiry and should frequently ask both parties if they want to add anything new, since this is to the advantage of both parties, whether the cause is to be decided by the judge himself or is to be referred to a higher authority.

Given January 12, at Sirmium, in the consulship of Crispus, for the second time, and Constantine, for the second time, Caesars (321).

[3] Combine with C. 7.22.3 (May 13, probably correct: Seeck).

[4] = C.Th. 2.18.1; combine with C. 7.62.16. Or June 12 (Seeck).

[10] Idem A. ad Severum pu. Nulli prorsus audientia praebeatur, qui causae continentiam dividit et ex beneficii praerogativa id, quod in uno eodemque iudicio poterat terminari, apud diversos iudices voluerit ventilare: poena ei ex officio iudicis imminente, qui contra hanc supplicaverit sanctionem atque alium super possessione, alium super principali quaestione iudicem postulaverit.

D. III k. Aug. Paulino et Iuliano conss.

[11] Κατὰ τοὺς νόμους οἱ διοικηταὶ τὰς ὑποθέσεις τεμνέτωσαν πρὸς τὸ φαινόμενον αὐτοῖς δίκαιον καὶ μὴ φοβείτωσαν βασιλικὴν ἀντιγραφὴν παράνομόν τι ποιῆσαι αὐτοῖς κελεύουσαν ὡς ἀνίσχυρον.

[12] pr. Πάντες οἱ ἄρχοντες καὶ οἱ θεῖοι δικασταὶ συντόμως τὰς δίκας τεμνέτωσαν· κἂν τις δικαζομένων πολλάκις τῷ προσφόρῳ δικαστῇ προσελθὼν μὴ δι' ἀναγκαίαν αἰτίαν ὑπερτεθείη, προσίτω τῷ βασιλεῖ τὴν ἐκεῖθεν ἀναμένων βοήθειαν. 1. Εἰ δὲ καὶ παραιτεῖταί τις τὸν δικαστὴν εὐλόγως πρὸ προκατάρξεως, ἐκ θείας προσελεύσεως ἑτέρου τεύξεται δικαστοῦ ἢ συνδικαστοῦ ἢ καὶ ἀλόγως παραιτησάμενος ὠθισθήσεται· μετὰ προκάταρξιν, δικαστὴς ἕτερος ἢ συνδικαστὴς μὴ αἰτείσθω. 2. Παρ' ἑνὶ δὲ δικαστῇ τὸ πᾶν κινείσθω τῆς ὑποθέσεως· κἂν ἀπρόσφορος οὗτος ἐπί τινι δόξῃ κεφαλαίῳ, ἐξ οἰκείας ψήφου ἐπὶ τὸν πρόσφορον αὐτὸ παραπεμπέτω. δεύτερον γάρ τις ἢ πλέον αἰτιασάμενος καὶ τὰς ἐκ τῆς δευτέρας αἰτίας κατὰ τὸ διπλάσιον καταθήσει ζημίας καὶ ἐγγυῶν χωρὶς ἢ ἐξωμοσίας ἐκ τῆς δευτέρας ὑπομνήσεως παρὰ τῷ πρώτῳ κινήσει δικαστῇ.

[13] Imp. Iustinianus A. Iuliano pp. pr. Properandum nobis visum est, ne lites fiant paene immortales et vitae hominum modum excedant, cum criminales quidem causas iam nostra lex biennio conclusit et pecuniariae causae frequentiores sunt et saepe ipsae materiam criminibus creare noscuntur, praesentem legem super his orbi terrarum ponendam, nullis locorum vel temporum angustiis coartandam ponere.[i] 1.

[i] [ponere]

[10][5] The same Augustus to Severus, City Prefect. No hearing whatsoever shall be given to anyone who splits up the contents of a case and, being in receipt of a grant of special imperial favor, wants to air before different judges what could be decided in one trial. A penalty inflicted by the office of a judge hangs over the person who contrary to this enactment petitions the Emperor and demands one judge concerning possession and another concerning the principal matter for investigation (i.e., ownership).

Given July 30, in the consulship of Paulinus and Julian (325).

[11][6] Governors must decide cases according to statutes and following what seems to them to be just; nor need they fear any imperial rescript that commands them to do anything contrary to laws, since this is invalid.

[12] pr. All magistrates and judges appointed by the Emperor shall decide cases quickly; and if a litigant often calls upon the proper judge, but is held off by him without just cause, he may appeal to the Emperor and wait for relief from him. 1. If any party objects with good reason to a judge before joinder of issue (litis contestatio), by approaching the Emperor he will obtain another judge, or an additional one to sit with the former; but if he objects without good cause, he will be repulsed. For after joinder of issue, his request for a new judge or a supplementary judge will be denied. 2. A case shall, moreover, be tried in its entirety before one judge. If he appears to be incompetent (i.e., to lack jurisdiction) as to any of the main points, he shall, by his own order, have the cause transferred to the appropriate judge. A person who sues a second time or more, shall pay double the damages arising in connection with the second summons and must litigate the terms of the first suit, without sureties or swearing as to any obligation on the part of the defendant arising from his second summons to court.[7]

[13][8] Emperor Justinian Augustus to Julian, Praetorian Prefect. pr. Lest suits extend almost into infinite time and exceed the measure of a man's life, and since Our law has already fixed the period of two years for criminal cases, but civil cases are more frequent and often are known to furnish the material for

[5] = C.Th. 2.18.3. Seeck dates to May 23, 325.

[6] This constitution and the one that follows are restored from the Basilika (7.6.11–12). They are without subscription, but C. 3.1.12 probably dates to 527; see 13 below.

[7] Blume: "According to other provisions, such party also lost his case. C. 2.2.4; C. 7.17.7. That perhaps referred to the loss of the second case, compelling the party to prosecute the first case to the end, before the judge before whom that case was pending. See D. 5.1.20."

[8] Blume: "The ... law, directing that a suit should be finished in three years, applied only to ordinary civil suits. Criminal cases were required to be finished in two years after joinder of issue (C. 9.44); fiscal cases in six months after joinder of issue (C. 10.1.11); cases involving the question as to whether certain municipal duties should be performed, within three months. C. 10.32.54."

Censemus itaque omnes lites super pecuniis quantaecumque quantitatis, sive super condicionibus sive super iure civitatum seu privato fuerint illatae, super possessione vel dominio vel hypotheca seu servitutibus vel pro aliis quibusdam casibus, pro quibus hominibus contra se litigandum est, exceptis tantummodo causis, quae ad ius fiscale pertinent vel quae ad publicas respiciant functiones, non ultra triennii metas post litem contestatam esse protrahendas: sed omnes iudices, sive in hac alma urbe sive in provinciis maiorem seu minorem peragunt administrationem, sive in magistratibus positi sunt vel ex aula nostra dati vel a nostris proceribus delegati, non esse eis concedendum ulterius lites quam triennii spatio extendere. hoc etenim iudicialis magis esse potestatis nemo est qui ignoret: nam si ipsi voluerint[ii], nullus tam audax invenitur, qui possit invito iudice litem protelare.

2. Et si quidem pars actoris cessaverit, quatenus multiplici dilatione reus fatigetur, et triennii metae post litem contestatam iam prope finem veniant, ut semenstre tempus tantum ei supersit, licentia erit iudici per exsecutores negotii actorem requirere, parte fugiente ex una parte actoris absentiam incusante et iudicibus omnimodo suas aures huiusmodi quaestioni reserantibus, et si per tres vices hoc fuerit subsecutum, decem dierum spatio per unumquemque introitum destinato, et nec ita actoris pars fuerit inventa et neque per se neque per procuratorem instructum pervenerit, tunc iudicem negotii acta apud se confecta conspicere: 2a. Et si quidem nihil sufficiens actitatum est, ex quo possit termino causae certa fieri coniectura, non solum partem fugientem ab observatione iudicii relaxare, sed etiam in omnes expensas, quae consueto modo circa lites expenduntur, eum condemnare, vera quantitate earum sacramento fugientis manifestanda et omni cautela, quam super lite reus exposuit, reddenda: quae et si remanserit, viribus vacuabitur. 2b. Sin autem ex gestis apud se habitis parte actoris minime inventa possit invenire viam, ex qua manifestum ei fiat, quid statuendum sit, et absente actore, si eum meliorem causam habere perspexerit, pro eo ferre sententiam non moretur et praesentem reum absenti actori condemnare, expensis tantummodo litis, quas reus legitime se expendisse iuraverit, condemnatione excipiendis, quia hanc poenam actori et meliorem causam habenti propter solam absentiae contumaciam imponimus. 2c. Nullo penitus ei regressu ad eandem litem conservando: sed actor contumax cadat omnimodo lite, si reus absolvetur: sin vero aliqua condemnatio contra reum pro absente actore proferatur, quam forsitan criminal causes, it has seemed to Us advisable to hasten to enact the present law concerning these matters, which shall be in force everywhere, and whose force shall not be curtailed by any limits of place or time. 1. Hence, We order that all suits that have been brought concerning money of any amount, or concerning the status of any persons, or concerning any right of cities or of private persons, or concerning possession, ownership, pledge, servitudes, or certain other occurrences in regard to which men litigate one against the other, shall not be protracted beyond the period of three years from the joinder of issue, with the exception only of cases which concern the rights of the fisc or which relate to public duties. And no judges, whether they occupy high or low administrative positions in this Imperial City or in the provinces, whether they have been elected to magistracies or were put forward by the imperial court, or were consigned by Our highest officials, are permitted to protract suits beyond the period of three years. For there is no one who does not know that this matter rests primarily with the judges; for if judges should not be willing, there is no one audacious enough to protract a lawsuit against their wish.

[ii] noluerint

2. And if the plaintiff tarries for long enough that the defendant is wearied by several delays, and the bounds of three years after joinder of issue are almost reached, so that only six months remain to him, the judge, if the defendant should complain of the plaintiff's absence, may, through his subordinate officials, call on the latter to appear. Judges must by every means open their ears to complaints of this kind. If such a complaint has been lodged on three occasions, with a period of ten days between each filing, and the plaintiff is not then found, and fails to appear either personally or by an authorized procurator (ad litem), then may the judge examine the record in the case as to what has been done before him. 2a. If nothing sufficient has been done in court from which a correct interpretation of the facts may be made for judgment of the action, not only may the defendant be excused from appearing at court, but the plaintiff shall be condemned to pay all costs ordinarily incurred in suits, the true amount thereof to be determined by the oath of the defendant, and every security, furnished by the defendant in the suit, shall be returned; but if the security remains, it shall cease to have validity. 2b. If, from the archived records of the suit held before him, it is possible to find a way given the minimal involvement of the plaintiff, by which it becomes clear to him as to what should be decided, and if he perceives, in the plaintiff's absence, that the latter has the better cause, he shall not hesitate to render his decision in his favor and to condemn the defendant who is present (in favor of the plaintiff), excepting from the condemnation only those trial expenses which the defendant shall swear to have expended in compliance with the law, since We impose this penalty on the plaintiff even though he has the better cause solely on account of his contempt of the court through his disobedience, with the plaintiff having absolutely no opportunity to recommence the same case. 2c. But also, if the defendant is absolved, the disobedient plaintiff shall cease from every aspect of the case. However if in fact non sufficientem sibi actor putaverit fugitivus, nullo modo iterum eandem litem resuscitare concedimus. et haec quidem poena actori fiat imposita.

3. Sin autem reus afuerit et similis eius processerit requisitio, quemadmodum pro persona actoris ediximus, etiam absente eo eremodicium contrahatur et iudex, secundum quod veteribus legibus cautum est, ex una parte cum omni subtilitate causam requirat et, si obnoxius fuerit inventus, et contra absentem promere condemnationem non cesset, quae ad effectum perducatur: et per res et facultates fugientis victori satisfiat, sive ipse iudex ex sua iurisdictione hoc facere potest, sive per relationem ad maiorem iudicem hoc referatur et ex eo legitima via contra res contumacis aperiatur: nulla licentia ei vel alii personam eius solam praetendenti concedenda contradicendi, cum in possessionem ex huiusmodi causa actor mittitur: nec si reversus fuerit et voluerit fideiussiones dare et possessionem recuperare, audiatur: in huiusmodi etenim casibus omnem ei contradictionem excludimus.

4. Cum autem eremodicium ventilatur sive pro actore sive pro reo, examinatio sine ullo obstaculo celebretur. cum enim terribiles in medio proponuntur scripturae, litigatoris absentia dei praesentia repletur nec pertimescat iudex appellationis obstaculum, cum ei, qui contumaciter abesse noscitur, nulla est provocationis licentia, quod et in veteribus legibus esse statutum manifestissimi iuris est. 5. Huiusmodi autem sententia prope finem triennii proferatur, pro quo et praesentem legem induximus. si enim in anteriore tempore, in quo larga temporis superest dilatio et spes absenti relicta fuerit revertendi, alterutra pars cessaverit, in sola expensarum datione et absolutione forsitan praestetur poenalis sententia, non autem tunc mors litis et condemnatio in absentem introducatur, quae in his tantummodo casibus accidunt, in quibus triennii effluentis imminet formido.

6. Sive autem alterutra parte absente sive utraque praesente lis fuerit decisa, omnes iudices, qui sub imperio nostro constituti sunt, sciant in expensarum causa victum victori esse condemnandum, quantum pro solitis expensis litium iuraverit, non ignorantes, quod, si hoc praetermiserint, ipsi de proprio huiusmodi poenae subiacebunt et reddere eam parti laesae coartabuntur.

7. Et haec de alterutra parte litigantium contumaciter absente nobis statuere visum est ad aequitatis rationem omnia corrigentibus. 8. Sin autem utraque parte imminente et litem peragere cupiente iudex eam accipere noluerit vel propter amicitias vel inimicitias vel turpissimi lucri gratia vel per aliud quicquam vitium, quod miserrimis animis some judgment is rendered against the defendant in favor of the absent plaintiff, which the absentee happens to deem insufficient, again we grant him no right to reopen the same case. And indeed this penalty is imposed on the plaintiff.

3. If, on the other hand, the defendant should be absent and a search is undertaken for him similar to the process We have prescribed for the plaintiff, if he is still absent, he is considered inexcusably absent and the judge shall, as is provided by the ancient laws, carefully make an examination on one side only, and if he finds the defendant liable, he shall not hesitate to enter judgment against the absent person and he shall carry it into effect: he shall cause the victor to be satisfied out of the goods and property of the defendant, whether he can do this himself by virtue of his own authority or this matter shall be referred by a report to a higher court and thus a legal way shall be opened up to the goods of the person in contempt: no permission shall be given him, or some one else representing him, to raise an objection, when the plaintiff, by reason of the foregoing, is placed in possession of the defendant's property; nor shall such defendant be heard even if he returns and offers to give sureties and recover possession. For indeed in cases of this sort, We preclude him from raising any objection.

4. When the question of inexcusable absence is examined, whether on the part of the plaintiff or defendant, it shall be discussed in an examination without any hindrance. For since this is done with the awe-inspiring Scriptures present, the presence of God stands in place of the absence of the litigant; nor should the judge fear the obstacle of an appeal, when he, whose absence is known to be in contempt of the court, has no right of appeal, which, as is known, is also clearly set down in the ancient laws. 5. A decision of this kind, however, shall be rendered (only) near the end of the three-year period, in reference to which We have introduced the present law. For if either party has been tarrying at an earlier date, when ample time is left and the absent person has hopes of returning, then a decision concerning penalty shall be rendered only with reference to the payment of, or perhaps release from, expenses, and at that time the lawsuit is not dead nor the absent litigant condemned, for that shall happen only in those cases in which the end of the three-year period threatens.

6. Whether, moreover, a judgment of a suit is rendered in the absence of either party or in the presence of both, all the judges who have been appointed in Our empire must know that the losing party must be condemned to pay costs, as much as the winner has sworn for the usual expenses, not disregarding the fact that if they omit to do this, they themselves will substitute personally for a penalty of this sort and will be compelled to pay it to the injured party.

7. It has seemed best to Us to enact these provisions concerning the contemptuous absence of either party as We correct all things according to the standard of equity. 8. But if, moreover, both parties are present and desire to pursue a lawsuit but the judge refuses to take it up, or has himself dared to drag out the suit on account of friendship or hatred, or through most wicked bribery, or huiusmodi iudicum innasci potest, litem ipse ausus fuerit protelare et propter hoc triennium fuerit transactum, iudex, si quidem in magistratu positus est vel in maiore dignitate usque ad illustratus gradum, decem libras auri privatis nostris largitionibus inferre per scholam palatinam compellatur: sin autem iudex minor fuerit, trium librarum auri multa plectetur per eandem scholam exigenda et nostro aerario applicanda, et eo removendo alter iudex in locum eius subrogetur sub similis poenae formidine: his omnibus locum habentibus, cum unus iudex omnem causam ab initio peragat. 8a. Sin autem in medio triennio vel morte iudicis vel alia inrecusabili occasione iudicium fuerit mutatum, tunc, si quidem ex triennio annale tempus vel amplius residet, in quo alius iudex causae imponitur, intra reliquum tempus causa finiatur: sin autem minus quam annale sit, tunc omne quod deest repleatur, ut non in minore perfecti anni tempore litem possit subrogatus iudex tam discutere quam terminare.

9. Illo procul dubio observando, ut, si neque per alterutram litigantium partem vel per iudicem steterit, quominus lis suo Marte decurrat, sed per patronos causarum, licentia detur iudici et eos duarum librarum auri poena adficere per scholam palatinam exigenda et similiter publicis rationibus adgreganda, ipso videlicet iudice in sua sententia hoc ipsum manifestante, quod per patronos causae vel fugientis vel agentis dilatio facta est vel per omnes vel quosdem ex his: necessitate advocatis imponenda, ex quo litem peragendam susceperint, eam usque ad terminum, nisi lex vel iusta causa impediat, adimplere, ne ex eius recusatione fiat causae dilatio: honorariis scilicet a clientibus, qui dare possint, disertissimis togatis omnimodo praestandis et, si cessaverint, per exsecutores negotiorum exigendis, ne et per huiusmodi machinationem causae merita protrahantur, nisi ipse litigator alium pro alio patronum eligere maluerit.

10. Haec autem omnia in his nobis cauta sunt, quibus perfectae aetatis constitutis arbitrium suum pro omnibus causis sufficit. 11. Sin vero causae vel pupillorum vel adultorum sint vel aliorum sub cura agentium masculorum vel feminarum, ut per tutores vel curatores vel actores vel procuratores eorum agantur, et eorum desidia triennium fuerit elapsum et causa ceciderint, litem quidem nihilo minus suum habere vigorem, omnem autem iacturam, quae ex hac causa oritur, ad tutores et because of any other dereliction of duty which can arise in the most wretched mind of such a judge, and on account of this the three-year period has expired, the judge, if he occupies a magistrate's position, or a position of greater dignity up to that of a person who is a vir illustris, shall be compelled by the Palatine Corps to pay 10 pounds of gold to Our Privy Purse (rationes privatae); but if he is an inferior judge, he shall be punished by a fine of 3 pounds of gold, to be collected by the same corps and turned into Our Treasury (aerarium); and the judge must be removed and another substituted for him, under fear of a similar punishment. All these provisions apply when one judge presides over the entire litigation from the beginning. 8a. But if during the three-year period, either by reason of the death of the judge or some other unavoidable occurrence, there is a change of judge, then, if indeed one year or more remains of the three years during which another judge is substituted in the litigation, the litigation shall be terminated during the time remaining (of the three years); but if, however, less than one year remains, then the time which is thus lacking shall be added, since the substituted judge could not both examine and terminate the litigation in less than a full year.

9. Without doubt it is to be observed that if neither the litigants nor the judge were at fault that the suit did not run its course by its own strength, but the responsibility rests on the legal representatives (patroni), the judge shall have power to impose upon the latter a fine of 2 pounds of gold, to be collected by the Palatine Corps and likewise paid into the Public Accounts (rationes publicae), while the judge himself shall of course make clear in his decision the fact that the delay was caused by the representatives, either of the defendant or of the plaintiff, and by all or certain of them. For, from the time they undertake a case to be tried, the responsibility must be placed upon representatives to pursue it right through to its conclusion, unless prevented by the law[9] or other valid reason, so that no delay may occur through their refusal to act. Of course, the honorarium is by all means to be given to the learned lawyers by clients who are able to do so, and if clients are in default on this, it is to be collected by the clerk of the court responsible for the case, so that the essential points of the litigation are not be delayed through such trickery, unless the litigant himself should prefer to choose another advocate.

10. All of these things have been provided by Us in regard to those who, being confirmed as having reached full age, have sufficient judgment to guide them in all litigation. 11. But if in fact the litigation involves either minors under 14 years of age or adults under 25 years of age, or others under guardianship, either male or female, with the result that it is prosecuted in its entirety by their tutores, curatores, managers, or procurators, and if through the negligence of curatores et fideiussores eorum heredesque et res eorum et omnes, quorum in hac causa legitime interest, redundare: sin autem non sufficiat pupillis vel minoribus eorum substantia, tunc in quo fuerint detrimentum perpessi, in integrum restitutionis auxilium eis superesse.

[9] For example C. 3.1.14.4.

D. VI k. April. Constantinopoli Lampadio et Oreste vv. cc. conss.

[14] Idem A. Iuliano pp. pr. Rem non novam neque insolitam adgredimur, sed antiquis quidem legislatoribus placitam, cum vero contempta sit, non leve detrimentum causis inferentem. cui enim non est cognitum antiquos iudices non aliter iudicialem calculum accipere, nisi prius sacramentum praestitissent omnimodo sese cum veritate et legum observatione iudicium esse dispositururos? 1. Cum igitur et viam non inusitatam invenimus ambulandam et anteriores leges nostrae, quae de iuramentis positae sunt, non minimam suae utilitatis experientiam litigantibus praebuerunt et ideo ab omnibus merito collaudantur, ad hanc in perpetuum valituram legem pervenimus, per quam sancimus omnes iudices sive maiores sive minores, sive qui in administrationibus positi sunt vel in hac regia civitate vel in orbe terrarum, qui nostris gubernaculis regitur, sive eos, quibus nos audientiam committimus vel qui a maioribus iudicibus dantur vel qui ex iurisdictione sua iudicandi habent facultatem vel qui ex recepto (id est compromisso, quod iudicium imitatur) causas dirimendas suscipiunt vel qui arbitrium peragunt vel[iii] ex auctoritate sententiarum et partium consensu electi, et generaliter omnes omnino iudices Romani iuris disceptatores non aliter litium primordium accipere, nisi prius ante iudicialem sedem sacrosanctae deponantur scripturae: et hoc permaneat non solum in principio litis, sed etiam in omnibus cognitionibus usque ad ipsum terminum et definitivae sententiae recitationem.

2. Sic etenim attendentes ad sacrosanctas scripturas et dei praesentia consecrati ex maiore praesidio lites diriment scituri, quod non magis alios iudicant, quam ipsi iudicantur, cum etiam ipsis magis quam partibus terribile iudicium est, si litigatores quidem sub hominibus, ipsi autem deo inspectore adhibito causas perferunt trutinandas. 3. Et hoc quidem iusiurandum iudiciale sit omnibus notum et Romanis legibus optimum a nobis accedat incrementum et ab omnibus iudicibus observandum: et si praetereatur, contemptoribus periculosum sit.

iii [vel]

the latter the three-year period elapses and they fail in their litigation, nevertheless the judgment shall indeed retain its force, but the total loss which arises from the litigation shall fall on the tutores and curatores and their sureties, heirs, and property, and on all who have an interest in this litigation according to law. But if their entire property is not sufficient to make their loss good, then assistance in restoration to their rights will be available to the minors and young adults to the extent of their loss.

Given March 27, at Constantinople, in the consulship of the viri clarissimi Lampadius and Orestes (530).

[14] The same Augustus to Julian, Praetorian Prefect. pr. We come to a matter which is not new or unusual, which was in fact provided for by ancient legislators, and since it has indeed been willfully neglected, has injured suits greatly. For who does not know that ancient judges otherwise never undertook to pass judgment unless they had first taken an oath that in every way they would give judgment truthfully and heeding the statutory law? 1. While We, therefore, find a not unused path to be traveled, and while former laws of Ours that have been laid down concerning oaths have been proven to be of no little value to litigants, and are, therefore, justly praised by all, We come to this ever-enduring law, through which We ordain that all judges, whether high or low, or those who have been appointed to public offices in this Imperial City or anywhere in the world under Our sway, or those whom We have appointed to legal proceedings or to whom higher judges have delegated, and judges who have inherent jurisdiction to try cases or persons who have undertaken to settle a lawsuit as arbitrator by appointment (ex recepto) – that is, by an arbitration agreement (compromissum), similar to a trial – or persons who function as arbitrators chosen as such pursuant to a judicial order and the agreement of the parties, and generally absolutely all judges who decide cases under the Roman law, shall not undertake the opening stages of a lawsuit unless they have first placed the Holy Scriptures before the judicial seat: and this shall remain so not only from the beginning of the suit, but even during all the stages of examination through to the very end and the reading of the final decision.

2. For they may thus, paying heed to the Holy Scriptures and consecrated by the presence of God, decide suits with help from on high, knowing that they judge others no more than they are judged themselves, and that the trial is more dreadful for them than it is for the parties, if the litigants bring cases to be examined before men, but the judges try to decide them in the sight of God. 3. So let this judges' oath indeed be made known to all and let it be joined by Us as a splendid addition to the Roman laws to be observed by all judges: and if is neglected, let it be dangerous to its scorners.

4. Patroni autem causarum, qui utrique parti suum praestantes ingrediuntur auxilium, cum lis fuerit contestata, post narrationem propositam et contradictionem obiectam in qualicumque iudicio maiore seu minore vel apud arbitros sive ex compromisso vel aliter datos vel electos sacrosanctis evangeliis tactis iuramentum praestent, quod omni quidem virtute sua omnique ope quod iustum et verum existimaverint clientibus suis inferre procurent, nihil studii relinquentes, quod sibi possibile est, non autem credita sibi causa cognita, quod improba sit vel penitus desperata et ex mendacibus adlegationibus composita, ipsi scientes prudentesque mala conscientia liti patrocinantur, sed et si certamine procedente aliquid tale sibi cognitum fuerit, a causa recedant ab huiusmodi communione sese penitus separantes: hocque subsecuto nulla licentia concedatur spreto litigatori ad alterius advocati patrocinium convolare, ne melioribus contemptis improba advocatio subrogetur. 5. Sin autem plurimis patronis adhibitis et iuramento ab omnibus praestito quidam ex his causa procedente patrocinandum esse crediderint, quidam recusaverint, exeant quidem recusantes, volentes autem remaneant: causae etenim terminus manifestare poterit, qui timidius quique audacius iudicium vel reliquerint vel protulerint: nec in hac parte litigatoribus danda licentia alios pro recusantibus subrogare.

D. IIII k. April. Lampadio et Oreste vv. cc. conss.

[15] Idem A. Iuliano pp. Sancimus omnes iudices sive in hac florentissima civitate sive in provinciis, si quando absens persona citata postea apparuerit, non aliter ei iudicialem aditum revelare, sed omnem claudere ei iudiciorum copiam, nisi prius omnia damna restituat ex huiusmodi vitio adversariis eius inflicta sive circa ingressus litis sive circa honoraria advocatorum vel alias causas, quae in iudicio vertuntur: aestimatione iudicis quantitate eorum definienda, postquam iuratum ab eo fuerit qui fecit expensas: exsecutoribus negotiorum modis omnibus dispositiones eorum adimplentibus: scituris iudicibus nostris et exsecutoribus, quod, si hoc praetermiserint, ex sua substantia huiusmodi

4. Moreover, the representatives of a case, those who approach either party offering their help, once exposition of the case by both sides has taken place, after an account of the events has been presented and any objections leveled, whether it be before a high or low judge or before arbitrators under an arbitration agreement or who are otherwise appointed or chosen, take an oath while touching the Holy Scriptures that they will, with all the ability and power at their command, take pains to bring forward on behalf of their clients what they shall deem just and true, leaving nothing undone which is possible for them to do; that they do not knowingly or advisedly, and with a bad conscience, assist in a cause entrusted to them, which they know to be faithless, dishonest, without hope and made up of lying allegations, and that if they, during the course of the suit, become advised that such is the fact, they will withdraw from it and entirely sever their connection with it. And if this is done, a spurned litigant cannot reel in the services of another advocate, lest a dishonest advocacy displace a better one that was scorned. 5. If several representatives have been retained in the case and all have taken the oath, but some of them, during the proceedings, think that their aid should be extended to the client, while others object, then those that are unwilling should withdraw while those that are willing should remain; for the final stage of the litigation can prove which ones have either timidly or audaciously abandoned or protracted the case. In such an event the litigant shall have no right to substitute others for those who withdraw.

Given March 29, in the consulship of the viri clarissimi Lampadius and Orestes (530).[10]

[15][11] The same Augustus to Julian, Praetorian Prefect. We ordain that if at any time a person formally summoned to appear remains away at the time but appears later, the judges in this flourishing City or in the provinces shall in no way give him a hearing, but shall exclude him from all the facilities of the court unless he has first restored to his adversary the damage occasioned by such default, whether it has arisen from commencing the action, paying an honorarium to lawyers, or other causes which concern the case. The judge in his valuation shall fix the amount thereof after an oath has been taken by the person who incurred the expenses; and the court clerks (exsecutores) connected with the case shall in every way execute the wishes of the judge. Our judges and process-servers will know that if they omit to do this, they will be compelled to indemnify, out of their own property, the person injured for the amount of damage sustained. These provisions We also apply to delegated [10] After Krüger, Lounghis et al. date this constitution to March 27, 530.

[11] Combine with C. 2.58.2 and with 16 below. After Krüger, Lounghis et al. date to February 20, 531.

detrimentum laesis resarcire compellantur. quod et in pedaneis iudicibus observari censemus, licet non citati, sed requisiti litigatores mala conscientia afuerint.

D. x k. Mai. Constantinopoli post consulatum Lampadii et Orestis vv. cc.

[16] Idem A. Iuliano pp. Apertissimi iuris est licere litigatoribus iudices, antequam lis inchoetur, recusare, cum etiam ex generalibus formis sublimissimae tuae sedis statutum est necessitatem imponi iudice recusato partibus ad eligendos venire arbitros et sub audientia eorum sua iura proponere. licet enim ex imperiali numine iudex delegatus est, tamen quia sine suspicione omnes lites procedere nobis cordis est, liceat ei, qui suspectum iudicem putat, antequam lis inchoetur, eum recusare, ut ad alium curratur libello recusationis ei porrecto, cum post litem contestatam neque appellare posse ante definitivam sententiam iam statuimus neque recusare posse, ne lites in infinitum extendantur: eodem scilicet exsecutore necessitatem partibus per ordinarium iudicem et omne civile auxilium imponente et arbitros eligere et apud eos venire et sic litem apparente, quasi arbitri fuerint ab imperiali culmine delegati. quod et, si ab imperiali maiestate iudex delegatus non sit, sed ab alio culmine, obtinere censemus.

D. x k. Mart. Constantinopoli post consulatum Lampadii et Orestae vv. cc.

[17] Idem A. Iohanni pp. Certi iuris est, quod concessa est militaribus hominibus iudicandi facultas. quid enim obstaculi est homines, qui cuiusdam rei peritiam habent, de ea iudicare? cum scimus et militares magistratus et omnes tales homines per usum cottidianum iam esse approbatos, ut et audiant lites et eas dirimant et pro sui et legis scientia huiusmodi altercationibus fines imponant.

D. k. Nov. Constantinopoli post consulatum Lampadii et Orestis vv. cc.

[18] Idem A. Iohanni pp. Cum specialis iudex sive ab augusta fortuna sive ab iudiciali culmine in aliqua provincia, ubi incusatus degit, datus sit et una pars suspectum eum sibi esse dicit, ne forsitan absente persona judges (pedanei iudices), even though the litigants were absent with cognizance of their misdeed and were not summoned to appear (before a higher judge), but simply requested (to appear before a lower one).

Given April 22, at Constantinople, in the post-consulate of the viri clarissimi Lampadius and Orestes (531).

[16][12] The same Augustus to Julian, Praetorian Prefect. The law is most clear that litigants are permitted to object to judges before the lawsuit is initiated, since even the precepts of your sublime seat direct that when a judge is objected to, the parties must come to choose a judge arbitrator and submit their claims before him. For even though a judge has been assigned by Our Divine Majesty, still, since We are anxious that all trials shall be conducted without any suspicion, a party who is suspicious of a judge is permitted, before the judicial procedure is begun, to object to him, so that another may be chosen, after presenting a written objection to the former. We have already set down[13] that once issues have been joined no one can appeal till a final decision has been rendered nor object to a judge, in order that trials may not be drawn out to infinite time. Of course, the same clerk of the court shall require the parties, through an ordinary judge (i.e., a governor) and by all the available civil processes, to choose judge arbitrators and to appear before them, and for the suit to proceed in effect as though the judge arbitrators had been appointed by Our Imperial Highness. We believe that this shall also apply if the judge has been chosen not by Our Imperial Majesty, but by another high-ranking judge.

Given February 20, at Constantinople, in the post-consulate of the viri clarissimi Lampadius and Orestes (531).

[17] The same Augustus to John, Praetorian Prefect. It is unquestioned law that it has been granted to soldiers to act legally as judges. For what could be the objection to a person passing judgment in a matter with which he is thoroughly conversant, since We know that Masters of Soldiers and all men of that kind have already, by daily usage, been agreed to be appropriate for hearing and deciding suits and ending such disputes, according to their information and legal knowledge.

Given November 1, at Constantinople, in the post-consulate of the viri clarissimi Lampadius and Orestes (531).

[18] The same Augustus to John, Praetorian Prefect. When a judge assigned to a case (iudex specialis) has been appointed either by Imperial Favor or by the judicial Highness of the province where the defendant lives, and one of the parties

[12] Combine with C. 2.58.2 and with 15 above.
[13] See 12.1 above, and C. 7.62.36.

iudicis et in alia civitate eiusdem provinciae commorante compellatur longo itinere emenso recusationis libellum ei incusatus offerre, sancimus, si quidem praesto est praeses provinciae in illa civitate, ubi de ea re dubitatur, licere ei, qui suspectum sibi esse iudicem dicit, ipsum praesidem adire et hoc facere in actis manifestum: sin autem non est moderator provinciae in praefato loco, haec eadem apud defensorem locorum vel duumviros municipales gestis apud eos habitis celebrare et iudicem quidem eum recusare, ilico autem, id est intra triduum proximum, sine ulla dilatione compelli arbitrum vel arbitros eligere et apud eos litigare, ne et datus iudex removeatur et alter non eligatur: electione videlicet arbitri, si variatum inter partes fuerit, simili modo vel praesidis provinciae, si adest, vel defensoris locorum vel magistratuum municipii arbitrio dirimenda et exsecutore negotii, cui mandata est huiusmodi causae exactio, imminente et statuta ab arbitris effectui mancipante, nisi fuerit provocatum. tunc enim ipse, qui iudicem antea dedit qui suspectus visus est, appellatione trutinata formam causae imponat legitimam.

D. id. Nov. post consulatum Lampadii et Orestis vv. cc.

II De Sportulis et Sumptibus in Diversis Iudiciis Faciendis et de Exsecutoribus Litium

[1] Imppp. Gratianus Valentinianus et Theodosius AAA. ad Potitum vicarium. Quisquis fuerit exhibitus, usque ad negotii terminum ab eo apparitore, cui primum traditus fuit, observari eum decernimus: si qua praesumptione fuerit haec mansuetudinis nostrae posthabita praeceptio, primiscrinio qui iussa temeraverit quinque librarum auri condemnatione multando.

D. VIII k. Nov. Ausonio et Olybrio conss.

[2] Αὐτοκράτωρ Ἰουστινιανός Α ... δουκὶ Θηβαΐδος. pr. Οἱ τὰ διατάγματα κομίζοντες τῶν μελλόντων ἄρχειν πολιτικὴν ἢ στρατιωτικὴν ἀρχὴν δεκαπέντε μόνους χρυσοὺς ἐκ τῆς ἐπαρχίας κομιζέσθωσαν· εἰ δὲ πλέον says that he objects to the judge, lest the defendant be compelled to hand the written objection to the judge after undertaking a long journey if perchance he is absent and lives in another city of the same province, We ordain that if the governor is present in the city where the controversy about the matter arises, the party who says that he objects to the judge shall have the right to go before the governor himself and make this known for the official record (in actis). But if, however, there is no governor of the province in the aforementioned place, these same things he may repeat, before the local representative (defensor) or the duumvirs for the archived records of suits held before these officials, that he has refused a judge, but he must immediately, that is within the next three days, without any adjournment choose an appointed judge arbitrator or judge arbitrators and pursue his suit before them, so that the judge assigned may not be removed without another being chosen. Clearly, if the parties cannot agree, the judge arbitrator shall, in like manner, be chosen by the governor of the province, if he is present, otherwise by the local magistrate of the place or the municipal magistrates, and the court clerk to whom the enforcement of such cause is entrusted, advising and taking care that the decisions of the judge arbitrators are carried to effect, unless an appeal is taken. In such case the authority that appointed the suspect judge shall carefully examine the appeal and render a decision according to law.

Given November 13, at Constantinople, in the post-consulate of viri clarissimi Lampadius and Orestes (531).[14]

Second Title The Fees and Expenses Incurred in Various Courts, and the Clerks of the Court

[1][15] Emperors GRATIAN, VALENTINIAN, and THEODOSIUS Augusti to Potitus, Vicar. We order that if a person is called to court, up until the end of the case he shall be guarded by the subordinate official to whom he is first assigned. If this order of Our Clemency is considered of secondary importance under some presumption of authority, the imperial bureau chief (primiscrinius) who dared to violate Our order shall be punished by a fine of 5 pounds of gold.

Given October 25, in the consulship of Ausonius and Olybrius (379).

[2] Emperor JUSTINIAN Augustus to the Duke of the Thebaid.[16] pr. Those who present the edicts of those who are about to be civil or military magistrates shall not receive more than 15 gold pieces from the province. If they accept [14] Lounghis et al. date to November 1, 531.

[15] = C.Th. 8.8.2, with the date (uncertain; Seeck gives September 22).
[16] The inscription is restored from this and the next constitutions. The text is from Bas. 7.6.18. Lounghis et al. date to March 27, 530.

λάβωσι, τὸ τετραπλάσιον διδότωσαν μὴ δυνάμενοι πρὸς ἀπολογίαν προφέρειν, ὡς παρ' ἑκόντων τὸ περιττὸν εἰλήφασιν. 1. Ἀλλ' ἄχρι μὲν τῶν ἐνταῦθα γενικὴ ἡ διάταξις· λοιπὸν δὲ ἰδικὸν ὁρίζει πρόστιμον κατὰ τοῦ δουκὸς Θηβαΐδος, πρὸς ὃν ἀντεγράφη, καὶ τοὺς μετ' αὐτὸν τὴν αὐτὴν παραληψομένους ἀρχήν, εἰ μὴ τοὺς παραβαίνοντας τὴν νομοθεσίαν τὴν ὡρισμένην ἀπαιτοῦσι ποινήν.

[3] Idem A. Iuliano pp. pr. Omnibus iudicibus licentiam praestamus, sive his, quibus a nostro numine lites mandantur, illustribus vel spectabilibus vel clarissimis vel togatis fori cuiusque praefecturae vel aliis quibusdam, vel his, qui ex nostris iudicibus delegandas lites accipiunt, exsecutores si cessaverint causas eis instructas offerre, et removere ab exsecutione eos et alios idoneos supponere vel etiam multis adficere, sed si quidem illustres sint iudices, usque ad sex solidorum summam, sin autem alii, usque ad tres tantummodo aureos, et ad iudices quorum interest referre, quatenus militia exuti poenas luant corporales. 1. Nostris autem amplissimis iudicibus licentia sit et maiores poenas et corporales maculas exsecutoribus imponere, si male fuerint circa lites versati, ut sciant non esse causas a se deludendas nec lucri gratia aliquod eis vitium imponendum.

D. v k. April. Lampadio et Oreste conss.

[4] Ὁ αὐτὸς βασιλεὺς Ἰουλιανῷ ἐπάρχῳ πραιτωρίων. pr. Προαγορεύομεν ... Ὁ ἐγχειριζόμενος δημοσίας ἢ ἰδιωτικὰς χρείας παρὰ βασιλέως ἢ παρά τινος τῶν ἐνδοξοτάτων ἀρχόντων ὑπομιμνησκέτω μὲν τὸν ἐναγόμενον καὶ πρὶν ἐμφανίσαι αὐτῷ τὰς τοιαύτας κελεύσεις (ἔσθ' ὅτε γὰρ χρὴ ἀγνοεῖσθαι αὐτάς), μήτε δὲ συνηθείας λαμβανέτω παρ' αὐτοῦ μήτε ἐκβιβαζέτω αὐτόν, εἰ μὴ τὸ ἴσον τῆς θείας ἢ μεγίστης κελεύσεως ἐκδῷ αὐτῷ, ἐξ ἧς ὑπέμνησεν αὐτόν. 1. Εἰ δὲ ἄλλου τινὸς ἄρχοντος δημοσίαν ἢ ἰδιωτικὴν πρόσταξιν ἔχει ἢ τοῦ κατὰ χώραν ἄρχοντος, μὴ ἐκβιβαζέτω τὸν ἐναγόμενον μηδὲ more, they shall repay four times the amount thereof, and cannot bring in their defense the excuse that the excess obtained by them was voluntarily paid. 1. So far as these things are concerned, the constitution is general. But it fixes a special penalty against the duke of the Thebaid, to whom it is addressed, and against those who, after him, fill that same magistracy, if they do not demand the fixed fine from those who violate this law.

[3] The same Augustus to Julian, Praetorian Prefect. pr. We grant power to all Our judges, either those to whom lawsuits are entrusted by Our Divine Majesty – those who are viri illustres, spectabiles, or clarissimi, or advocates in the forum of every prefecture or certain others – or persons who have taken on cases assigned by Our judges: if the clerks of the court are negligent in laying the case fully argued and evidenced before them, both to remove them from their post and put in their place others who are suitable, or to punish them also by a fine, up to the sum of 6 solidi if imposed by a person of illustrious rank, and if imposed by others up to 3 solidi, and report it to the judges whom it concerns, so that shorn of their office the clerks may pay with corporal punishment. 1. Moreover, Our highest judges have the power to impose greater fines and inflict severer bodily punishment upon the clerks when the latter conduct themselves badly in connection with suits, so that they may know that suits are not to be made playthings by them, nor should they suffer as a result of any dereliction of duty motivated by greed.

Given March 28, in the consulship of Lampadius and Orestes (530).[17]

[4][18] The same Augustus to Julian, Praetorian Prefect. pr. We ordain that … a person who is entrusted by the Emperor or by one of Our glorious magistrates with (hearing) any public or private suits shall summon the defendant and before he communicates to him the orders (to conduct the trial) – for sometimes it is necessary that these not go into effect – he shall not take any perquisites from him, nor take him into custody, until he has given him a copy of the imperial or other high order pursuant to which he summons him. 1. If he has an order, relating to public or private affairs, from any other magistrate or of a governor, he shall not take the defendant into custody, nor take any perquisites from him, until he has first informed the governor (where the defendant is), so that he may be authorized to take the accused persons away

[17] Lounghis et al. date to between 527 and 530.

[18] Combine with law 5 below, and C. 10.30.1, 12.40.12, 12.63.2, and perhaps also 3.10.2 and 7.45.15. The inscription is restored from C. 1.4.26. Portions of the text (pr.-2, 6–8) derive from the Basilika (7.6.20); the remainder (3–5) is taken from C. 1.4.26.11–13.

συνηθείας κομιζέσθω, εἰ μὴ ἐμφανίσει πρότερον τῷ ἄρχοντι τῆς ἐπαρχίας, ὥστε δύνασθαι ἐκεῖθεν ἐκλαβεῖν τοὺς αἰτιαθέντας, καὶ βιβλίον αὐτοῖς ἐπιδοθείη ἢ γραφὴ ἐπὶ τῶν ἐγκληματικῶν.

2. Εἰ δὲ μὴ γενομένων τούτων ὑπόμνησιν προσφέρει ἢ συνηθείας ἀπαιτεῖ ὁ ἐκβιβαστής, ἐξέστω τῷ ἐναγομένῳ ἀπωθεῖσθαι αὐτόν. 3. Ἀλλ' οὐδὲ προφάσει ἐγγυητικῶν ζημίαις τοὺς ἡμετέρους ὑποτελεῖς ὑποβάλλεσθαι συγχωροῦμεν ἢ ὑπὲρ στάσεως ἐντολέως. ἀλλ' εἰ μὲν ἀκίνητον ἔχοιεν οὐσίαν ἀξιόχρεων οἱ ὑπομνησθέντες, ὅρκου γραμματεῖον ἐκτίθεσθαι μόνον· εἰ δὲ οὐκ ἔχοιεν, τηνικαῦτα μὲν ἐγγύην ἄχρι τῆς ἤδη κρατούσης ποσότητος παρέχειν, χωρὶς μέντοι ζημίας ἁπάσης. 4. Εἰ δὲ ἀμφισβητοῖεν οἱ πράκτορες περὶ τῆς τῶν ἐγγυητῶν ἀξιοπιστίας ἢ τῆς διωμοσίας, κοινῇ συνιόντα εἰς ταὐτὸ τὸν θεοφιλέστατον ἐπίσκοπον τόν τε πατέρα τόν τε ἔκδικον τῆς πόλεως κρίνειν τὸν ἀξιόπιστον φαινόμενον ἐγγυητὴν πρὸς τὴν τῆς ἐναγωγῆς ποσότητα, καὶ ἀνάγκην ἔχειν τὸν πράκτορα δέχεσθαι τοῦτον ἐγγυώμενον, μηδὲν κομιζόμενον ὑπὲρ ἐγγυητικοῦ ἢ ἐξωμοσίας. 5. Πλὴν εἰ μὴ ἐξ ἰδικῆς ἡμῶν ἢ τινος τῶν μεγίστων ἀρχόντων προστάξεως κελευσθείη τὸ πρόσωπον ἀγαγεῖν, ἐγγυητῇ μὴ καταπιστεύσας· τηνικαῦτα γὰρ ἄδεια ἔσται τῷ πράκτορι ἐγγυητὴν μὴ κομίζεσθαι καὶ τοῦτο μέντοι πράττειν χωρὶς ἁπάσης ζημίας.

6. Ὁ δὲ θεοφιλὴς τῶν τόπων ἐπίσκοπος, ἐὰν συγχωρήσῃ παραβαθῆναι τὸν νόμον ἢ μὴ μηνύσῃ κατὰ τοῦ παραβαίνοντος, καὶ τῷ θεῷ προσκρούει καὶ βασιλικῆς πειραθήσεται κινήσεως. 7. Ὁμοίως δὲ καὶ ὁ ἄρχων τῆς ἐπαρχίας, εἰ ῥᾳθυμήσει τοῦ νόμου, καὶ παύεται τῆς ἀρχῆς καὶ δημευθεὶς διηνεκῶς ἐξορίζεται. 8. Μὴ λαμβανέτωσαν δὲ οἱ ἐπιδιδόντες τὰ βιβλία ἢ τὰς γραφὰς πράκτορες καὶ τὰς ἐντυχίας ἢ τὰ συμβόλαια περαιτέρω τῆς διωρισμένης τῇ μετὰ ταῦτα διατάξει παραμυθίας ἢ παραβαίνοντες ὑποκείσθωσαν τοῖς ἐπιτιμίοις αὐτῆς.

D. VIII k. Iul. Chalcedone Lampadio et Oreste conss.

[5] Ὁ αὐτὸς βασιλεὺς Ἰουλιανῷ ἐπάρχῳ πραιτωρίων. Διάταξις ἔστι τοῦ ἡμετέρου βασιλέως, ἥτις τοῖς τῶν ὑποθέσεων ἐκβιβασταῖς λόγῳ σπορτούλων ῥητόν τι δίδοσθαι παρεκελεύσατο πρὸς τὴν ποσότητα τὴν τῷ βιβλίῳ τῆς αἰτιάσεως ἐμφερομένην· οἷον λόγου χάριν μέχρις ἑκατὸν νομισμάτων ὥρισε δίδοσθαι τὸ ἥμισυ τοῦ νομίσματος, εἰ δὲ μείζων εἴη ποσότης, πλείονα εἶναι καὶ τὰ σπόρτουλα.

D. VIII k. Iul. Chalcedone Lampadio et Oreste conss.

from there, and until the petition or criminal complaint shall be delivered to the defendants.

2. If the clerk of the court executes the summons or demands his fees without the aforementioned taking place, the defendant may resist him. 3. Moreover, We do not permit Our subjects to be subject to damages by reason of sureties or for the appointment of a procurator; instead, if those summoned have sufficient immovable property, they may furnish only an oath in writing; if however, they do not have sufficient (immovable property), then they must give surety up to the amount already in usage, but without any loss. 4. If the court clerks (exsecutores) doubt the reliability of the sureties or the oath, then the most reverend bishop, the Father, and the Defender of the City should meet jointly and choose a suitable surety for the amount of the suit, and the court clerk must accept this surety without taking anything for the giving of the surety or oath. 5. But unless he is ordered by a pragmatic sanction from Us or from one of the exalted Prefects to produce the person, having no faith in the surety, then the court clerk is at liberty not to accept the surety, and this too without any penalty.

6. If the reverend bishop of the place permits this law to be violated, or fails to report the violator, he will offend God and tempt imperial punishment. 7. So too, if the governor neglects this law, he shall be removed from his magistracy, his property shall be confiscated, and he will be perpetually banished. 8. The clerks of the court, moreover, who deliver the complaints or accusations and the petitions or documentary proofs, shall receive no emolument above that fixed in the following constitution, and if they do, they shall be subjected to the punishment therein fixed.

Given June 24, at Chalcedon, in the consulship of Lampadius and Orestes (530).

[5][19] The same Augustus to Julian, Praetorian Prefect. There is a constitution of Our emperor which directs that a definite amount be paid to the court clerk for the suit as fees in proportion to the sum included in the petition of the complaint; it provides, for instance, that one-half of 1 solidus shall be paid where the amount involved does not exceed 100 solidi; if the amount involved is greater, the fees are greater.

Given June 24, at Chalcedon, in the consulship of Lampadius and Orestes (530).

[19] Combine with law 4 above, and C. 10.30.1, 12.40.12, 12.63.2, and perhaps also 3.10.2 and 7.45.15.

[6] Ὁ αὐτὸς βασιλεύς. ...
D. k. Iun. Constantinopoli dn. Iustiniano pp. A. III cons.

III De Pedaneis Iudicibus

[1] Imp. Gordianus A. Vicanis. Procuratori nostro non vice praesidis agenti dandi iudices inter privatas personas non competere facultatem manifestum est: et ideo si, ut adlegatis, inter privatas personas is cuius meministis arbitros dandos putavit, sententia ab eis prolata nullo iure subsistit.
PP. k. Febr. Attico et Praetextato conss.

[2] Impp. Diocletianus et Maximianus AA. et CC. dicunt: pr. Placet nobis praesides de his causis, in quibus, quod ipsi non possent cognoscere, antehac pedaneos iudices dabant, notionis suae examen adhibere, ita tamen ut, si vel per occupationes publicas vel propter causarum multitudinem omnia huiusmodi negotia non potuerint cognoscere, iudices dandi habeant potestatem. 1. Quod non ita accipi convenit, ut etiam in his causis, in quibus solebant ex officio suo cognoscere, dandi iudices licentia permissa credatur: quod usque adeo in praesidum cognitione retinendum est, ut eorum iudicia non deminuta videantur, dum tamen de ingenuitate, super qua poterant et ante cognoscere, et de libertinitate praesides ipsi diiudicent.
D. XV k. Aug. CC. conss.

[3] Exemplum sacrarum litterarum eorundem AA. et CC. ad Serapionem. Placet, ut iudicibus, si quos gravitas tua disceptatores dederit, insinues, ut delegata sibi negotia lata sententia determinent: nec in his causis, in quibus pronuntiare debent et possunt, facultatem sibi remittendi patere ad iudicium praesidale cognoscant, maxime cum, et si iudicatio alicui litigatorum parti iniusta videatur, interponendae provocationis potestas a sententia ex omni causa prolata libera litigatoribus tribuatur.
D. VIII k. April. Antiochiae CC. conss.

[6] The same Augustus … <The substance is lost.>

Given June 1, at Constantinople, in the consulship of Our Lord Justinian, Ever Augustus, for the third time (533).

Third Title Delegated Judges[20]

[1][21] Emperor GORDIAN Augustus to the villagers. It is clear that Our procurator, when he is not also acting as governor, has no power to appoint judges for private persons; and, therefore, if, as you allege, the person whom you mention thought that he had the right to appoint judge arbitrators for private persons, the decision given by them has no legal force.

Posted February 1, in the consulship of Atticus and Praetextatus (242).

[2] Emperors DIOCLETIAN and MAXIMIAN and the Caesars say: pr. It is Our will that the governors themselves take cognizance of cases which they heretofore were accustomed to refer to delegated judges (iudices pedanei) because they could not themselves conduct the trials, with the proviso that they shall (still) have power to appoint judges if they are unable to conduct all the trials on account of public business or the multitude of cases. 1. This must not be construed to mean that they may appoint judges also in those cases that they were heretofore accustomed to try by virtue of their office. Such cases must be tried right at the level of the governors in order that their jurisdiction will not appear to be abridged. Meanwhile, however, cases concerning free birth, which they themselves heretofore could also previously try, and freedman status, the governors must decide themselves.

Given July 18, in the consulship of the Caesars (294).

[3] Copy of the imperial letter of the same Augusti and Caesars to Serapio. It is Our will that you inform any judges Your Eminence appoints as triers of a case, that they must determine the cases assigned to them by announcing their decision. Let them recognize that they have no right to refer back to the governor's court cases in which they should give a decision and have the power to do so, especially in view of the fact that even if the decision appears unjust to one of the litigants, he has the free right of appeal from the decision in every case.

Given March 25, at Antioch, in the consulship of the Caesars (294).[22]

[20] Pedanei iudices, "petty judges" or "referees" assigned by a judicial officer to hear mundane cases that he was unable to hear himself.

[21] Blume: "An imperial procurator had no jurisdiction in civil cases, but only in fiscal cases, and orders given by him, accordingly, in the former class of cases were absolutely void. But if the parties voluntarily submitted to his jurisdiction, the judgment given by him was valid. C. 3.13.1."

[22] Barnes gives March 25, 300.

[4] Idem AA. et CC. Firmino. Placuit, quotiens pedanei iudices dati post litem contestatam vel ad aliud iudicium necessario dirigantur vel publicae utilitatis ratione in alias provincias proficiscantur vel diem obierint atque his rationibus negotiis coeptis finis non possit adhiberi, alium in locum eorum iudicem tribui qui negotium examinet, ne eiusmodi casibus intervenientibus impedimentum aliquod in persequendis litibus adferatur.

D. x k. Dec. Dechioppe Diocletiano VIII et Maximiano VII AA. conss.

[5] Imp. Iulianus A. Secundo pp. Quaedam sunt negotia, in quibus superfluum est moderatorem expectare provinciae: ideoque pedaneos iudices, hoc est qui negotia humiliora disceptent, constituendi damus praesidibus potestatem.

D. v k. Aug. Antiochiae Mamertino et Nevitta conss.

[6] Αὐτοκράτωρ Ζήνων Α. ...

IIII Qui Pro Sua Iurisdictione Iudices Dare Darive Possunt

[1] Impp. Theodosius et Valentinianus AA. Cyro pp. pr. In causarum delegationibus illud consultissime praecipimus observari, ut ita valeant, si ad iurisdictionem pertineant delegantis. 1. Quod si quis alienae iurisdictionis causam crediderit delegandam, nec praecepto cognitorem datum parientiam accommodare censemus et, si contra leges obtemperaverit deleganti, omnia, quae ab ea delegatione geruntur, ita pro infectis haberi praecipimus, ac si ipsi qui delegaverant alienae iurisdictionis iudices resedissent, ut nec appellandi quidem necessitas victis adversus eas sententias imponatur. 2. Haec, nisi iudices a nobis specialiter delegantibus dati aliis causas delegaverint iudicandas: nam his delegantibus nullo personarum causarumve habito tractatu appellationum ad eos iure iudicia remeabunt.

D. XIII k. Iun. Valentiniano A. V et Anatolio conss.

[4] The same Augusti and Caesars to Firminus. It is Our will that whenever delegated judges, appointed after joinder of issue, are necessarily busy with another trial or leave for other provinces on public business or die, and on this account the case commenced cannot be finished, another judge shall be appointed in their place to try the case, so that no impediment to the progress of the case may be interposed by occasion of such accidents.

Given November 22, at Dechioppe (Ioppe?), in the consulship of Diocletian, for the eighth time, and Maximian, for the seventh time, Augusti (303).[23]

[5][24] Emperor JULIAN Augustus to Secundus, Praetorian Prefect. There are some cases which are not necessary to be tried by the governor of the province. Governors are, therefore, empowered to appoint delegate judges to try cases which are not important.Given July 28, at Antioch, in the consulship of Mamertinus and Nevitta (362).

[6][25] Empero ZENO Augustus. <The substance is lost.> (486 or 487).

Fourth Title Those Who Have Jurisdiction to Appoint Judges, and Those Who May Be Appointed as Such

[1][26] Emperors THEODOSIUS and VALENTINIAN Augusti to Cyrus, Praetorian Prefect. pr. We direct, after most careful deliberation, that the following be observed: assignments of cases for trial to another shall be valid if such cases are within the original jurisdiction of the person assigning them. 1. But if anyone should presume to delegate a case not within his original jurisdiction, We decree that the delegated judge should not submit himself to this decision, and if he complies with the one who delegated contrary to law, his acts done by virtue of such assignment We order to be considered as void, as if those who made the assignment had been sitting as judges in cases not within their jurisdiction; so that it shall not even be necessary for the defeated parties to appeal from the decisions. 2. These provisions shall prevail, unless judges specially appointed by Us have assigned cases to others; for if they have assigned cases, trials of appeal therein shall rightly go back (to be heard by) them without first discussing the persons or their cases.

Given May 20, in the consulship of Valentinian Augustus, for the fifth time, and Anatolius (440).

[23] Barnes gives November 22, 301, at Joppa.

[24] = C.Th. 1.16.8; see also CIL 3.459 with a fuller text.

[25] Originally combined with C. 1.51.13, 2.7.18–19, 2.12.27, 3.10.1, and 7.52.5; referred to in C. 2.7.25 pr. and Nov. 82.1.

[26] Combine with C. 7.62.32, 7.63.2 (with slightly different date).

V Ne Quis in Sua Causa Iudicet vel Sibi Ius Dicat

[1] Imppp. Valens Gratianus et Valentinianus AAA. ad Gracchum pu. Generali lege decernimus neminem sibi esse iudicem vel ius sibi dicere debere. in re enim propria iniquum admodum est alicui licentiam tribuere sententiae.

Lecta k. Dec. Valente v et Valentiniano AA. conss.

VI Qui Legitimam Personam in Iudiciis Habent vel Non

[1] Imp. Gordianus A. Candidae. Si, cum esses pupillaris aetatis, sine tutoris auctoritate cum adversario consisteres, praeses provinciae adversus te pronuntiavit, minime auctoritate iudicati nititur quod statutum est.

D. id. Dec. Gordiano A. et Aviola conss.

[2] Impp. Diocletianus et Maximianus AA. et CC. Aureliae Agemachae. In rebus, quae privati iudicii quaestionem habent, sicut pupillus tutore auctore et agere et conveniri potest, ita et adultus curatore consentiente litem et intendere et excipere debet.

D. xviiii k. Febr. CC. conss.

[3] Impp. Honorius et Theodosius AA. Iuliano proconsuli Africae. Momentariae possessionis actio exerceri potest per quamcumque personam. sub colore autem adipiscendae possessionis obrepticia petitio alteri obesse non debet, maxime cum absque conventione personae legitimae initiatum iurgium videatur. nihil autem opituletur conventio circa minorem habita, cum id rectius circa curatorem debuerit custodiri.

D. prid. non. Mart. Ravennae Constantio et Constante conss.

Fifth Title No One Shall Be Judge in His Own Case or Pass Judgment on Himself

[1][27] Emperors VALENS, GRATIAN, and VALENTINIAN Augusti to Gracchus, City Prefect. We direct by this general law that no one shall be a judge for himself or pass judgment on himself. For to give anyone power to render a decision in his own case is iniquitous.

Read December 1, in the consulship of Valens Augustus, for the fifth time, and Valentinian, Augusti (376).

Sixth Title Those Who Do and Do Not Have Legal Capacity in Court[28]

[1] Emperor GORDIAN Augustus to Candida. If the governor decided against you at a time when you were under the age of puberty and you appeared in court with your adversary (but) without consent of your tutor, what was decided there will be without judicial authority.

Given December 13, in the consulship of Gordian Augustus and Aviola (239).

[2][29] Emperors DIOCLETIAN and MAXIMIAN Augusti and the Caesars to Aurelia Agemacha. In civil cases, just as a minor under the age of puberty with the consent of his tutor may sue and be sued, so a minor over the age of puberty may sue and be sued in such a case with the consent of his curator.

Given January 14, in the consulship of the Caesars (294).

[3][30] Emperors HONORIUS and THEODOSIUS Augusti to Julian, Proconsul of Africa. The action for interim possession (possessio momentaria) may be brought by any person. But a fraudulent petition should not, under color of regaining possession, prejudice another (lawsuit), especially since the suit appears to have been started without summoning a person with legal capacity (persona legitima) in court. But (in any case) the summoning of a minor can be of no avail, inasmuch as such proceeding should be taken against his curator.

Given March 6, at Ravenna, in the consulship of Constantius and Constans (414).

[27] = C.Th. 2.2.1; combine with C. 4.20.10.
[28] Persona legitima is in this context the capacity to act for oneself in court.
[29] Combine with Frag. Vat. 326 (which omits Aurelia).
[30] = C.Th. 4.22.6. The action for interim possession was an interdictal action.

VII Ut Nemo Invitus Agere vel Accusare Cogatur

[1] Impp. Diocletianus et Maximianus AA. Camerio. Invitus agere vel accusare nemo cogitur.

D. id. Oct. Carino II et Numeriano conss.

VIII De Ordine Iudiciorum

[1] Impp. Severus et Antoninus AA. Marcellinae. Adite praesidem provinciae et ruptum esse testamentum Fabii Praesentis agnatione filii docete. neque enim impedit notionem eius, quod status quaestio in cognitione vertitur, etsi super causa status cognoscere non possit: pertinet enim ad officium iudicis qui de hereditate cognoscit universam incidentem quaestionem quae in iudicium devocatur examinare, quoniam non de ea, sed de hereditate pronuntiat.

D. XIII k. Dec. Geta et Plautiano conss.

[2] Imp. Antoninus A. Magnillae. Si quaestio tibi generis ab his, quos fratres patrueles esse dicis, non fit, adito praeside et accepto iudice familiae erciscundae experire. quod si de ea re quaestio erit, prius de nativitatis veritate secundum iuris formam quaeri idem vir clarissimus curae habebit.

PP. X k. Aug. Antonino A. IIII et Balbino conss.

[3] Impp. Valerianus et Gallienus AA. Demetrio. Cum civili disceptationi principaliter motae quaestio criminis inciderit vel crimini prius instituto civilis causa adiungitur, potest iudex eodem tempore utramque quaestionem sua sententia dirimere.

PP. non. ... Gallieno A. V et Faustino conss.

Seventh Title No One Shall Be Compelled to Bring a Civil or Criminal Action Against his Will

[1] Emperors DIOCLETIAN and MAXIMIAN Augusti to Camerius. No one shall be compelled to bring a civil or criminal action if he does not wish to do so.

Given October 15, in the consulship of Carinus, for the second time, and Numerianus (284).

Eighth Title The Order of Trials

[1][31] Emperors SEVERUS and ANTONINUS Augusti to Marcellina. Go before the provincial governor and show that the will of Fabius Praesens is voided by the birth of a posthumous son. The governor's investigation is not hindered by the fact that an investigation into personal status has been brought before him, although he cannot (independently) decide the question of personal status. For it is the duty of the judge hearing a suit concerning inheritance to try every incidental question connected with the subject, since he gives judgment not concerning the question of status but concerning the inheritance.

Given November 19, in the consulship of Geta and Plautianus (203).

[2] Emperor ANTONINUS Augustus to Magnilla. If no question as to your descent is raised by those who you say are paternal cousins, go before the governor and, a judge having been appointed, try the action on dividing an inheritance. But if they question your descent, then the same vir clarissimus (i.e. the governor) will take care that the truth of your birth is examined first according to the rules of law.

Posted July 23, in the consulship of Antoninus Augustus, for the fourth time, and Balbinus (213).

[3] Emperors VALERIAN and GALLIENUS Augusti to Demetrius. If an inquiry into crime incidentally arises in a civil suit, or if a criminal case is first commenced and a civil action is added, the judge has power to decide both the civil and criminal case at the same time.

Posted ..., in the consulship of Gallienus Augustus, for the fifth time, and Faustinus (262).

[31] Blume: "The rescript has been much disputed ... The rescript assumes that ordinarily the president did not have the power to investigate questions of freedom, but only if the question arose incidentally. The next law, and C. 7.19.1 and C. 7.19.3 assume that he had such power in the first instance. It is probable that the law was changed soon after this rescript."

[4] Imp. Constantinus A. ad Calpurnianum. Quoniam civili quaestione intermissa saepe fit, ut prius de crimine iudicetur, quod utpote maius merito minori praefertur: ex quo criminalis quaestio quocumque modo cessaverit, oportet civilem causam velut ex integro in iudicium deductam discingi, ut finis criminalis negotii ex eo die, quo inter partes fuerit lata sententia, initium civili tribuat quaestioni.

D. id. Mart. Nepotiano et Facundo conss.

VIIII De Litis Contestatione

[1] Impp. Severus et Antoninus AA. Valenti. Res in iudicium deducta non videtur, si tantum postulatio simplex celebrata sit vel actionis species ante iudicium reo cognita. inter litem enim contestatam et editam actionem permultum interest. lis enim tunc videtur contestata, cum iudex per narrationem negotii causam audire coeperit.

D. k. Sept. Severo III et Antonino AA. conss.

X De Plus Petitionibus

[1] Αὐτοκράτωρ Ζήνων Α. pr. Πᾶς τῶν ἐναγόντων καὶ ἄρρενες καὶ γυναῖκες πρὸ τῆς ὡρισμένης προθεσμίας τῶν χρεῶν ἐνάγοντες καὶ κατὰ τοῦτο τὸν ἐναγόμενον βλάπτοντες ἄλλον τοσοῦτον περιμενέτωσαν χρόνον, μηδένα τόκον ἐν τῷ μέσῳ λαμβάνοντες, ὅσον αὐτοὶ προφθάσαι τὴν προθεσμίαν ἐπεχείρησαν, καὶ τοῦ χρόνου δὲ τούτου παρατρέχοντος μὴ ἄλλως ἐναγέτωσαν, εἰ μὴ τὰ δαπανήματα τῆς πρώτης εἰσόδου τὰ ὑπὲρ τῆς μεθοδείας συμβάντα τῷ διαδίκῳ καταβάλωσιν. 1. Ἐὰν δὲ ἐπίτροποι ἢ κουράτωρες ἐν χρόνῳ ἢ ποσότητι πλέον ἐπιχειρήσωσιν ἀπαιτῆσαι τοὺς τῶν κηδευομένων χρεώστας, οὐδὲν καταβλαπτέσθωσαν οἱ ἐπιτροπευόμενοι ἢ κουρατωρευόμενοι, αὐτοὶ δὲ οἱ ἐπίτροποι ἢ κουράτωρες ἐπιγινωσκέτωσαν αὐτοῖς τὴν ἐντεῦθεν συμβαίνουσαν ζημίαν.

[4] Emperor Constantine Augustus to Calpurnianus. It often happens that a civil proceeding is interrupted in order to first inquire into a criminal accusation, which is done in order that the question of greater moment rightly be preferred to the lesser; wherefore when the criminal matter has been disposed of in whatever manner, the civil case must be decided as if brought into court anew, so that the end of the criminal process becomes, as it were, the beginning of the civil proceeding from the day that a decision between the parties has been rendered (in the criminal matter).

Given March 15, in the consulship of Nepotianus and Facundus (336).

Ninth Title Joinder of Issue

[1][32] Emperors SEVERUS and ANTONINUS Augusti to Valens. A matter is not brought into court simply if a mere request for summons has been made or if the defendant has been made acquainted, before the trial, with the kind of action which is brought. For there is a great difference between joinder of issue and notification of the suit. The issues appear to be joined only when the judge has commenced to hear the case by listening to the statement of facts.

Given September 1, in the consulship of Severus, for the third time, and Antoninus, Augusti (202)

Tenth Title Excessive (or Premature) Claims

[1][33] Emperor ZENO Augustus. pr. If a plaintiff, man or woman, commences an action before the appointed time for paying an obligation and thereby injures the defendant, he must wait for payment as long after the obligation is due as he tried to anticipate that time, and after the lapse of that time he must not bring another action until he has tendered to his adversary the latter's expenses in the former suit, which he caused through his craftiness. 1. If tutores or curatores, however, have attempted to demand premature or greater claims from debtors of their wards, their wards or charges shall not be injured as a result, but the tutores and curatores themselves shall undertake to pay to them the damage caused thereby.

[32] Combine with C. 2.1.3 (dated two days earlier). This constitution (probably heavily interpolated) refers to joinder of issue (litis contestatio) under extraordinary cognition. Blume: "When the [formulary procedure] was abolished, and cases were tried only under the extraordinary procedure, the old notion of joinder of issue necessarily disappeared, and with it some of its effects, and a different state of facts was fixed by Justinian to take the place of the old joinder of issue, namely the time when the case was stated in detail to the judge at the time when the case was commenced to be heard by him. See also C. 3.1.14.4."

2. Οἱ δὲ κληρονομιαῖα ἐκδικοῦντες πράγματα ἢ λόγους ἐπιτροπικοὺς ἢ κουρατωρείας ἀπαιτοῦντες καὶ οἱ κατὰ ἀφηλίκων ἢ μειζόνων περὶ διοικήσεως κινοῦντες ἢ παραθήκας ὑφ᾽ ἑτέρων δεδομένας ἀπαιτοῦντες ὡς αὐτοὶ τῶν παραθεμένων διάδοχοι γενόμενοι μηδὲν ἐκ τῆς ὑπεραπαιτήσεως ζημιούσθωσαν ὡς δικαίαν ἔχοντες τῆς ἀγνοίας αἰτίαν· τότε δὲ ὁ ὑπεραπαιτῶν ζημιούσθω, ὅτε προφανῶς ἠλέγχθη πλεονεκτῶν. 3. Εἰ δέ τις εἰς ἔλαττον τῆς ἀληθείας διετιμήσατο τὴν ἑαυτοῦ δίκην, μὴ προσεχέτω τούτῳ ὁ δικάζων, ἀλλὰ πρὸς τὴν ἀληθῆ ποσότητα τὴν ψῆφον ἐκφερέτω.

[2] Αὐτοκράτωρ Ἰουστινιανὸς Α. Ἐάν τις τῶν ἐναγόντων ἐν τῷ διαπεμπομένῳ παρ᾽ αὐτοῦ βιβλίῳ πλείονα ποσότητα τεθεικὼς πλείονος ζημίας αἴτιος τῷ αἰτιαθέντι γένηται, τριπλασίονα διδότω τὴν παρ᾽ αἰτίαν αὐτοῦ συμβᾶσαν τῷ διαδίκῳ ζημίαν. ἀληθὴς δὲ ποσότης τῆς ἐναγωγῆς νοείσθω, εἰς ἣν ὁ δικάζων ἐκφέρει τὴν ψῆφον.

[3] Imp. Iustinianus A. Iohanni pp. Odiosas contrahentium calliditates amputare properantes censemus, ut, si quis certa quantitate sibimet debita super ampliore pecunia per dolum et machinationem cautionem exegerit et ad iudicium debitorem vocaverit, si quidem ante inchoatam litem calliditatis eum paeniteat et veritatem debiti confessus fuerit, nullo eum dispendio praegravari: sin autem et liti praebuit exordium et in certaminibus negotii permanens arguatur de adiecta falsi quantitate, non solum ea, sed etiam toto debito eum fraudari: transactionibus scilicet et secundis confessionibus, sive insinuatae sint sive non, etiam in hoc casu suam obtinentibus firmitatem: talibus etenim cautionibus hoc obicere non oportet.

D. xv k. Nov. Constantinopoli post consulatum Lampadii et Orestis vv. cc. anno secundo.

XI De Dilationibus

[1] Impp. Diocletianus et Maximianus AA. et CC. dicunt: Quoniam plerumque evenit, ut iudex instrumentorum vel personarum gratia

2. But persons who demand inherited goods, or ask for an accounting by a tutor or curator, or bring action against persons under age or of age concerning management of affairs, or demand back deposits given by those to whom they have succeeded in the deposit, shall not be mulcted with damages for excessive or premature demands, since they are justly excused on account of want of knowledge. The person who makes excessive or premature demands shall be punished as often as he is clearly shown to have sought unlawful gain. 3. But if anyone sued for less than is truly due him, the judge shall disregard that and may in his judgment require the true amount.

(486 or 487).

[2][34] Emperor Justinian Augustus. If a plaintiff damages the defendant by inserting, in the complaint he sends, a greater amount than is due, he shall pay three times the amount of the damages caused to the defendant by his fault. The correct amount of the claim must be understood to be the amount for which the judge gives judgment.

[3] Emperor Justinian Augustus to John, Praetorian Prefect. We hasten to eradicate cheating among those involved in legal activity and decree that if anyone, through fraud and trickery, has demanded in payment for a debt a greater amount than is due him and has called the debtor into court, then, if he repents of his cheating before joinder of issue and admits the true amount, he shall not be unduly burdened with damages; but if, on the other hand, he joins issue, persists in his contentions, and is convicted of claiming a deliberately untrue amount, he shall lose not only the fraudulent amount, but the whole debt as well. Settlements made out of court (transactiones), however, and subsequent confessions (acknowledging the amount claimed), whether made a matter of record or not, shall bolster winning parties even in a case like this; for such acknowledgments of debt should not be contradicted.

Given October 18, at Constantinople, in the year following the consulship of the viri clarissimi Lampadius and Orestes (532).

Eleventh Title Continuances[35]

[1][36] Emperors Diocletian and Maximian Augusti and the Caesars say: pr. Since it often happens that a judge is necessarily compelled to grant

[33] The inscription is restored from Inst. 4.6.33e and 34, 4.12.10; combine with C. 3.3.6.

[34] This constitution is restored from Inst. 4.6.24 and 33e; combine, probably, with C. 3.2.5 (dated June 24, 530), but Lounghis et al. give a date between August 1, 527, and October 18, 532. Blume: "Fees were paid to the officer who served the summons in proportion to the amount demanded by the plaintiff. See C. 3.2."

[35] See D. 2.12.

dilationem dare rerum necessitate cogatur, spatium instructionis exhibendae postulatum dari conveniet. 1. Quod hac ratione arbitramur esse moderandum, ut, si ex ea provincia ubi lis agitur vel persona vel instrumenta poscentur, non amplius quam tres menses indulgeantur: si vero ex continentibus provinciis, sex menses custodiri iustitiae est: in transmarina autem dilatione novem menses computari oportebit. 2. Quod ita constitutum iudicantes sentire debebunt, ut hac ratione non sibi concessum intellegant dandae dilationis arbitrium, sed eandem dilationem, si rerum urguentissima ratio flagitaverit et necessitas desideratae instructionis exegerit, non facile amplius quam semel nec ulla trahendi arte sciant esse tribuendam.

D. XV k. April. CC. conss.

[2] Imp. Constantinus A. ad Ursum vicarium. Si quando quis rescriptum ad extraordinarium iudicem reportaverit, dilatio ei penitus deneganda est: illi autem, qui in iudicium vocatur, danda est ad probanda precum mendacia vel proferenda aliqua instrumenta vel testes, quoniam instructus esse non potuit, si praeter spem ad alienum iudicium trahitur.

D. II non. Mart. Volusiano et Anniano conss.

[3] Idem A. Profuturo praefecto annonae. Sive pars sive integra dilatio fuerit data, eo usque iudicis officium conquiescat, donec petiti temporis defluxerint curricula. feriae autem, sive repentinae sive sollemnes sint, dilationum temporibus non excipiantur, sed his connumerentur.

D. VII id. Febr. Sirmi Licinio V et Crispo conss.

[4] Idem A. ad Catullinum proconsulem Africae. A procedente iudice dilationem non convenit postulari, etiamsi utraque parte praesente continuances (dilationes) by reason of (the absence of) documents or persons, it is proper that the time requested for procuring proof be given. 1. We think that this should be regulated as follows: if the persons or documents sought are in the same province when the suit is pending, a continuance not exceeding three months should be given; if they are in an adjoining province, it is just that a delay of six months be granted; if they are in a transmarine province, a period of nine months should be allowed. 2. Those sitting in judgment ought to construe this decision as meaning that in this way they understand they do not have the power to grant a continuance at will, but know they may allow a delay only if the most urgent reason demands it and when need for the desired proof requires it, nor should it be readily granted more than once, nor for the purpose of dragging out the suit.

Given March 18 (294).

[2][37] Emperor CONSTANTINE Augustus to Ursus, Vicar. If anyone at any time produces an imperial rescript before a judge under extraordinary cognition, he shall be entirely denied the right to have the case continued. But a person who is summoned to appear in court must be granted a continuance to prove the falseness of the complaint or to produce documents or witnesses, since his case could not be prepared if he was unexpectedly dragged into a foreign (hostile) court.

Given March 6, in the consulship of Volusianus and Annianus (314).

[3] The same Augustus to Profuturus, Prefect of the Food Supply. Whether only a part or the entire time permitted for a continuance is granted, the judge in carrying out his duties must refrain from doing anything further in the case until the passage of time has run its course. Holidays, however, whether special or conventional, shall not be excepted from the time of the continuances, but shall be included therein.

Given February 7, at Sirmium, in the consulship of Licinius, for the fifth time, and Crispus (318).

[4] The same Augustus to Catullinus, Proconsul of Africa. No continuance should be asked from a judge when he is leaving to go out (i.e., not on his tribunal), even if it should be granted in the presence of both parties, since it cannot be given except after investigating the reason for it, and such an investigation cannot legally be considered upon a request made while the judge is off the bench, but only while he is on the bench; if the claim for continuance [36] Combine, as it seems, with C. 3.3.2 (different date), 7.53.8, and 7.62.6. See also D. 2.12.10; in D. 2.12.7, however, greater leniency is granted.

[37] = C.Th. 2.7.1.

tribuatur, cum non alias nisi causa cognita indulgeri queat et cognitio causae non interpellatione planaria, sed considente magis iudice legitime colligatur, et, si forte dilationis petitio fuerit improbata, suscepta quaestio per sententiam iudicis dirimatur.

D. v id. Febr. Sirmi Licinio v et Crispo conss.

[5] Idem A. ad Maximum. Cum a nobis fuerit ad appellationem consultationemve rescriptum, sive sit primo iudicio petita dilatio sive ea tributa non sit sive nec petita quidem, eam dare cuiquam non licebit eadem ratione, qua nec in iudiciis quidem cognitionum nostrarum dilatio tribui solet.

PP. Romae VIII k. April. Probiano et Iuliano conss.

[6] Impp. Constantius et Constans AA. ad Petronium vicarium Africae. Inter privatos et fiscum si aliqua lis mota fuerit, utrique parti petendae dilationis per defensores suos copia non est deneganda, si hoc commoditatis ratio postulaverit.

D. v id. April. Aquileiae Acyndino et Proculo conss.

[7] Impp. Arcadius et Honorius AA. Messalae pp. Nec de statu ac patrimonio litigantibus in transmarina etiam dilatione mensuum novem spatia egredi concedatur.

D. XII k. Dec. Theodoro cons.

XII De Feriis

[1] Impp. Constantius et Maximianus AA. et Severus et Maximinus nobilissimi CC. Verino. Quoniam consulis, an similis observantia a nobis adiciendarum feriarum, quae rebus feliciter gestis proveniunt, ad appellationum quoque tempora porrigenda sit, Verine carissime, rescribi placuit experientiae tuae, ut in causis provocationum iugiter et sine additamento eiuscemodi dierum tempora scias servari debere et supra dictorum dierum in appellationum causis minime fieri adiectionem.

D. non. ... Apollonio superioris Constantio V et Maximiano V CC. conss.

is perchance rejected, the suit that is begun may be decided by decision of the judge (soon after denial of postponement).

Given February 9, at Sirmium, in the consulship of Licinius, for the fifth time, and Crispus (318).

[5] The same Augustus to Maximus. When We (Emperors) have issued a rescript either for an appeal or on consultation, no continuance, whether asked for in the court of first instance and refused or not asked for at all (in that court), shall be granted to anyone, for the same reason that no continuance is customarily granted even in cases tried before and decided by Us.

Posted March 25, at Rome, in the consulship of Probianus and Iulianus (322).

[6][38] Emperors CONSTANTIUS and CONSTANS Augusti to Petronius, Vicar of Africa. If any suit is brought between private persons and the Treasury (fiscus), neither party shall be denied the opportunity to ask for postponement through their representatives, if good reasons require it.

Given April 9, at Aquileia, in the consulship of Acyndinus and Proculus (340).

[7][39] Emperors ARCADIUS and HONORIUS Augusti to Messala, Prateorian Prefect. A period of (more than) nine months shall not be allowed to those litigating about status or property, even for a continuance that is sought for collecting evidence from across the seas.

Given November 20, in the consulship of Theodorus (399).

Twelfth Title Holidays[40]

[1][41] Emperors CONSTANTINE and MAXIMIAN Augusti, and SEVERUS and MAXIMINUS, most noble Caesars, to Verinus. Since you ask, dearest Verinus, whether the observance of holidays that were added by Us as a consequence of fortunate events should be similarly extended also to the times regulating appeals, it has pleased Us to write to you, Our learned friend, so that you may know that the time fixed for appeals should be uninterrupted and without the addition of days of that kind; (hence) the addition of the days mentioned above cannot be made at all for cases of appeal.

Given ..., at Apollonius Superioris (Apollonopolis Magna?), in the consulship of Constantius, for the fifth time, and Maximian, for the fifth time, Caesars (305).[42]

[38] = C.Th. 2.6.5; combine with C.Th. 10.15.3.
[39] = C.Th. 2.7.3. More likely August 21, 399 (Seeck).
[40] See D. 2.12.
[41] See also C. 3.11.3.
[42] The subscript is partially restored and uncertain in its details. Barnes dates to November 5, 305(?).

[2] Imp. Constantinus A. Helpidio. Omnes iudices urbanaeque plebes et artium officia cunctarum venerabili die solis quiescant. ruri tamen positi agrorum culturae libere licenterque inserviant, quoniam frequenter evenit, ut non alio aptius die frumenta sulcis aut vineae scrobibus commendentur, ne occasione momenti pereat commoditas caelesti provisione concessa.

PP. v non. Mart. Crispo II et Constantino II conss.

[3] Idem A. ad Severum. A nullo iudice praesumi decet, ut auctoritate sua ferias aliquas condat. nec enim imperiales ferias vocari oportet, quas administrator edixerit, ac per hoc, si nomine eximuntur, etiam fructu carebunt.

D. id. April. Severo et Rufino conss.

[4] Imppp. Valentinianus Valens et Gratianus AAA. ad Olybrium pu. pr. Publicas ac fiscales causas tua sinceritas etiam feriatis geminis mensibus, hoc est sine aliqua intermissione, discingat. 1. Pistoriis quoque causis isdem diebus ratum in futurum examen adhibebit.

iiii non. Mai. Tyberiade Valentiniano np. et Victore conss.

[5] Idem AAA. Albuciano vicario Macedoniae. Quadraginta diebus, qui auspicio caerimoniarum paschale tempus anticipant, omnis cognitio inhibeatur criminalium quaestionum.

D. VI k. April. Thessalonicae Gratiano V et Theodosio AA. conss.

[6] Imppp. Valentinianus Theodosius et Arcadius AAA. Albino pu. pr. Omnes dies iubemus esse iuridicos. 1. Illos tantum manere feriarum dies fas erit, quos geminis mensibus ad requiem laboris indulgentior annus accepit aestivis fervoribus mitigandis et autumnis fetibus decerpendis. 2. Kalendarum quoque Ianuariarum consuetos dies otio mancipamus. 3. His adicimus natalicios dies urbium maximarum Romae atque Constantinopolis, quibus debent iura differri, qui[iv] et ab ipsis nata sunt, sacros quoque paschae dies, qui septeno vel praecedunt numero vel sequuntur, dies etiam natalis atque epiphaniorum Christi et quo

[iv] quia

[2] Emperor CONSTANTINE Augustus to Helpidius. All judges and the people in the city should rest, and the work in all crafts should cease, on holy Sunday. But the people in the country may freely and lawfully apply themselves to cultivating their fields, so that the benefit conferred by the providence of God may not perish in an instant, since it often happens that grain can be sown in the furrows and vines planted in the trenches on no better day.

Posted March 3,[43] in the consulship of Crispus, for the second time, and Constantine, for the second time (321).

[3] The same Augustus to Severus. No judge should presume to establish holidays on his own authority. And indeed holidays announced by the governor ought not to be called Imperial, and, deprived of that designation, they also lack its advantage (in leading to suspension of judicial activity).

Given April 13, at Sirmium, in the consulship of Severus and Rufinus (323).

[4] Emperors VALENTINIAN, VALENS, and GRATIAN Augusti to Olybrius, City Prefect. pr. Your Uprightness must decide public and treasury cases also in the two months of holiday, that is to say, without interruption. 1. Also, cases pertaining to bakers may in the future be lawfully tried during the same time.

Given May 4, at Tiberias, in the consulship of Valentinian, noble youth, and Victor (369).

[5][44] The same Augusti to Albucianus, Vicar of Macedonia. During the forty days which precede Easter with the beginning of ceremonies, all hearings of criminal cases will be suspended.

Given March 27, at Thessalonica, in the consulship of Gratian, for the fifth time, and Theodosius, Augusti (380).

[6][45] Emperors VALENTINIAN, THEODOSIUS, and ARCADIUS Augusti to Albinus, City Prefect. pr. We order that all days shall be days on which trials may proceed. 1. The only days of holiday are those that each year, for a period of two months, indulgently provide rest from labor, in order to mitigate the summer heat and to gather the autumnal fruits. 2. We also give over to leisure the customary opening days of the year. 3. We add to these the natal days of the great cities of Rome and Constantinople, during which legal matters, which owe their origin to them, should be deferred.

[43] More likely July 3, 321 (Seeck).
[44] = C.Th. 9. 35. 4 (ascribed to Gratian, Valentinian, and Theodosius).
[45] = C.Th. 2.8.19, with additions from C.Th. 2.8.18 and 15.5.5.

tempore commemoratio apostolicae passionis totius Christianitatis magistrae a cunctis iure celebratur: in quibus etiam praedictis sanctissimis diebus neque spectaculorum copiam reseramus. 4. In eadem observatione numeramus et dies solis, quos dominicos rite dixere maiores, qui repetito in se calculo revolvuntur. 5. Parem necesse est habere reverentiam, ut ne apud ipsos arbitros vel a iudicibus flagitatos vel sponte delectos ulla sit agnitio iurgiorum, nostris etiam diebus, qui vel lucis auspicia vel ortus imperii protulerunt. 6. In quindecim autem paschalibus diebus compulsio et annonariae functionis et omnium publicorum privatorumque debitorum differatur exactio.

D. VII id. Aug. Romae Timasio et Promoto conss.

[7] Idem AAA. Tatiano pp. Actus omnes seu publici seu privati diebus quindecim paschalibus conquiescant. in his tamen emancipandi et manumittendi cuncti licentiam habeant, et super his acta non prohibeantur.

D. VI k. Iun. Constantinopoli Arcadio A. II et Rufino conss.

[8] Impp. Honorius et Theodosius AA. Anthemio pp. Provinciarum iudices moneantur, ut in quaestionibus latronum et maxime Isaurorum nullum quadragesimae nec venerabilem pascharum diem existiment excipiendum, ne differatur sceleratorum proditio consiliorum, quae per latronum tormenta quaerenda est, cum facillime in hoc summi numinis speretur venia, per quod multorum salus et incolumitas procuratur.

D. V k. Mai. Constantinopoli Basso et Philippo conss.

[9] Impp. Leo et Anthemius AA. Armasio pp. pr. Dies festos, dies maiestati altissimae dedicatos nullis volumus voluptatibus occupari nec ullis exactionum vexationibus profanari. 1. Dominicum itaque diem semper honorabilem ita decernimus venerandum, ut a cunctis exsecutionibus excusetur, nulla quemquam urgueat admonitio, nulla fideiussionis flagitetur exactio, taceat apparitio, advocatio delitescat, sit idem dies a cognitionibus alienus, praeconis horrida vox silescat, respirent

We also add the holy paschal days, seven preceding and seven succeeding Easter, also the birthday of Christ and the day of Epiphany and the time during which the suffering of the apostles, an example to all Christianity, is rightly commemorated by all; and these aforementioned holy days shall not be open to shows. 4. Sundays, too, which the ancients rightly named the Lord's Days and which return at regular intervals, shall be put in this class. 5. An equal reverence shall be paid to the days which marked Our birth and the beginning of Our reign, and on these days no examination of disputes shall be made before arbitrators, whether appointed by judges upon request or by the choice of the parties. 6. During the fifteen days of Easter, the exaction of all taxes in kind and of all public and private debts shall be deferred.

Given August 7, at Rome, in the consulship of Timasius and Promotus (389).

[7][46] The same Augusti to Tatianus, Praetorian Prefect. All transactions, public or private, shall be suspended during the fifteen days of Easter. Emancipations and manumissions, however, and the enrollment and registration thereof, are not forbidden during these days.

Given May 27, at Constantinople, in the consulship of Arcadius Augustus, for the second time, and Rufinus (392).

[8][47] Emperors Honorius and Theodosius Augusti to Anthemius, Praetorian Prefect. Let the judges of the provinces be warned not to think that they should omit any of the forty days of Easter or even the holy day of Easter itself in examining bandits (under torture) and especially the Isaurians, so that the disclosure of criminal conspiracies, which is to be sought through the torture of bandits, may not be deferred, since for this purpose, through which the safety and peace of many is secured, pardon from the Almighty is unquestionably hoped for.

Given April 27,[48] in the consulship of Bassus and Philippus at Constantinople (408).

[9] Emperors Leo and Anthemius to Armasius, Praetorian Prefect. pr. We do not want the festal days, the days dedicated to the Highest Majesty, to be taken up with pleasures or profaned by vexatious demands. 1. We decree therefore that the holy Lord's Day shall always be honored and venerated and excused from all executions of judgments. No summons shall disturb anyone; no exaction for providing surety shall be made; the clerks of the court shall be silent; let [46] = C.Th. 2.8.21, with addition from C.Th. 2.8.1.

[47] = C.Th. 9.35.7.
[48] Possibly February 26, 408 (Seeck).

a controversiis litigantes, habeant foederis intervallum, ad se veniant adversarii non timentes, subeat animos vicaria paenitudo, pacta conferant, transactiones loquantur.

2. Nec tamen haec religiosi diei otia relaxantes obscaenis quemquam patimur voluptatibus detineri. nihil eodem die sibi vindicet scaena theatralis aut circense certamen aut ferarum lacrimosa spectacula: etiam si in nostrum ortum aut natalem celebranda sollemnitas inciderit, differatur. 3. Amissionem militiae, proscriptionem patrimonii sustinebit, si quis umquam hoc die festo spectaculis interesse vel cuiuscumque iudicis apparitor praetextu negotii publici seu privati haec quae hac lege statuta sunt crediderit temeranda.

D. V id. Dec. Constantinopoli Zenone et Marciano conss.

XIII De Iurisdictione Omnium Iudicum et de Foro Competenti

[1] Impp. Severus et Antoninus AA. Severo et aliis. pr. Non quidem fuit iudex procurator noster in lite privatorum: sed cum ipsi eum iudicem elegeritis et is consentientibus adversariis sententiam tulerit, intellegitis vos adquiescere debere rei ex consensu vestro iudicatae, cum et procurator iudicandi potestatem inter certas habeat personas et vos, incongruum eum esse vobis iudicem scientes, tamen audientiam eius elegistis. 1. Quod et in aliis similibus iudiciis tam in actionem proponentis quam in exceptionem opponentis persona locum habebit.

D. II id. Ian. Messala et Sabino conss.

[2] Impp. Diocletianus et Maximianus AA. et CC. Alexandro. Iuris ordinem converti postulas, ut non actor rei forum, sed reus actoris sequatur: nam ubi domicilium habet reus vel tempore contractus habuit, licet hoc postea transtulerit, ibi tantum eum conveniri oportet.

PP. VI k. Sept. AA. conss.

advocates retire from court; trials shall not be held on that day; the harsh voice of the auctioneer shall not be heard; litigants shall relax from controversies and have respite from their contracts; let adversaries come together without fear, let reciprocal penitence enter their minds; let pacts be made and settlements speak loudly.

2. But despite allowing this leisureliness on a day dedicated to God, We permit no one to give himself over to unseemly pleasures. The day shall not be open for the theater, the competition of the circus, or the tearful spectacle of wild beasts. If Our birthday or the day when We came to the throne should fall on Sunday, its celebration shall be deferred. 3. If anyone ever attends spectacles on that festal day, or if any clerk of a judge should believe that he can rashly violate the provisions of this law under the pretext of public or private business, he shall suffer the loss of his office and confiscation of his property.

Given December 9, at Constantinople, in the consulship of Zeno and Marcianus (469).

Thirteenth Title The Jurisdiction of All Judges, and the Appropriate Court

[1][49] Emperors SEVERUS and ANTONINUS Augusti to Severus and others. pr. Our procurator was not, indeed, an appropriate judge in private litigation. But since you yourselves chose him as a judge, and he, with the consent of your adversaries, rendered a decision, you understand that you must abide by his judgment of the matter rendered with your consent, since the procurator has the power of judging between specific individuals, and you, knowing that he was unsuitable to act as a judge for you, nevertheless chose him to conduct the proceedings. 1. This is true also in other similar trials, both with respect to the person bringing the action and the one putting forward the defense.

Given January 12, in the consulship of Messala and Sabinus (214).

[2] Emperors DIOCLETIAN and MAXIMIAN Augusti and the Caesars to Alexander. You are asking to reverse correct legal procedure (when you request) that the plaintiff should not follow the forum of the defendant, but the defendant the forum of the plaintiff; for the only place where the defendant can be summoned is where he has his domicile, or where he had it at the time of the making of the contract, even though he afterwards changed it.

Posted August 27, in the consulship of the Augusti (293).

[49] This rescript is actually from Caracalla, as the date below indicates.

[3] Idem AA. et CC. Iudae. Privatorum consensus iudicem non facit eum, qui nulli praeest iudicio, nec quod is statuit rei iudicatae continet auctoritatem.

S. VI k. Ian. AA. conss.

[4] Imp. Constantinus A. ad universos provinciales. Nemo post litem contestatam ordinariae sedis declinet examen, nec prius praefecti praetorio aut comitis Orientis vel alterius spectabilis iudicis imploret auxilium, sed appellatione legibus facta ad sacrum auditorium veniat.

PP. k. Oct. Basso et Ablabio conss.

[5] Impp. Arcadius et Honorius AA. Vincentio pp. Galliarum. pr. In criminali negotio rei forum accusator sequatur. 1. Is vero, qui suam causam sive criminalem sive civilem sine caelesti oraculo in vetito vocabit examine aut exsecutionem poposcerit militarem, actor quidem propositi negotii actione multetur, reus vero pro condemnato habeatur: et tribuni sive vicarii capitalem sibi animadversionem subeundam esse cognoscant, si vel suam vel militum exsecutionem interdictam praebuerint.

D. XV k. Ian. Mediolani Caesario et Attico conss.

[6] Impp. Honorius et Theodosius AA. Anthemio pp. Magisteriae potestati inter militares viros vel privato actore in reum militarem etiam civilium quaestionum audiendi concedimus facultatem, praesertim cum id ipsum e re esse litigantium videatur constetque militarem reum nisi a suo iudice nec exhiberi posse nec, si in culpa fuerit, coerceri.

D. V k. Mai. Constantinopoli Lucio vc. cons.

[7] Imp. Anastasius A. Constantino pp. pr. Periniquum et temerarium esse perspicimus eos, qui professiones aliquas seu negotiationes

[3] The same Augusti and Caesars to Juda. The consent of private persons does not make a judge out of a person who is not in charge of a court; nor does his decision have the force of a valid adjudication.

Written December 27, in the consulship of the Augusti (293).

[4][50] Emperor Constantine Augustus to all the provincials. No one shall, after joinder of issue (litis contestatio), decline a trial before the ordinary court, and prior to this he shall not implore the aid of the Praetorian Prefect, the Count of the East, or another judge who is a vir spectabilis, but he must come before the imperial court through an appeal (of the judgment once rendered) made according to law.

Posted October 1, in the consulship of Bassus and Ablabius (331).

[5] Emperors Arcadius and Honorius Augusti to Vicentius, Praetorian Prefect of Gaul. pr. In criminal cases, the accuser must follow the forum of the defendant. 1. And a person who brings his action, civil or criminal, into a prohibited court without the sanction of an imperial rescript, or who demands military enforcement, shall, if he is plaintiff, be punished by the loss of his action in the proposed suit, and if he is defendant shall be considered as condemned (by a judgment); and the Tribunes or the Deputies must know that they will suffer capital punishment if they provide the forbidden enforcement either in person or through the soldiers.[51]

Given December 18, at Milan, in the consulship of Caesarius and Atticus (397).

[6] Emperors Honorius and Theodosius Augusti to Anthemius, Praetorian Prefect. We give to the military command the power to hear civil cases between soldiers, or cases where the plaintiff is a person of private station and the defendant a soldier, especially since this itself accords with the position of the litigants, and it is agreed that a defendant who is in the military service, if he is at fault in anything, can only be produced before, and punished by, his own judge (i.e., a military judge).

Given April 27, at Constantinople, in the consulship of vir clarissimus Lucius (413).

[7] Emperor Anastasius Augustus to Constantinus, Praetorian Prefect. pr. We think it exceedingly iniquitous and rash for persons who are known [50] Possibly to combine with C. 1.21.3 (given August 1, posted September 1), with other constitutions cited there. Seeck dates to August 1, 331.

[51] Though Blume points out that according to "D. 2.5.2 pr., whenever a man was cited into court, he was compelled to obey the citation, whether the court had jurisdiction over him or not. He was required to go there and set up the defense of want of jurisidiction."

exercere noscuntur, iudicum, ad quos earundem professionum seu negotiationum cura pertinet, iurisdictionem et praeceptiones declinare conari. 1. Quapropter iubemus huiusmodi hominibus nec cuiuslibet[1] militiae seu cinguli vel dignitatis praerogativam in hac parte suppetere, sed eos, qui statutis in quacumque militia connumerati sunt vel fuerint seu dignitatem aliquam praetendunt, sine quadam fori praescriptione his iudicibus tam in publicis quam in privatis causis oboedire compelli, ad quorum sollicitudinem professionis seu negotiationis, quam praeter militiam, ut dictum est, exercent, gubernatio videtur respicere, ita tamen, ut ipsis nihilo minus iudicibus, sub quorum iurisdictione militia seu dignitas eorum constituta est, procul dubio respondeant. 2. His videlicet, quicumque contra eius tenorem venire temptaverint, militiae cingulo seu dignitatis honore pro tali conamine spoliandis.

D. XV k. Mart. Constantinopoli Probo et Avieno conss.

XIIII Quando Imperator Inter Pupillos vel Viduas vel Miserabiles Personas Cognoscat et Ne Exhibeantur

[1] Imp. Constantinus A. ad Andronicum. Si contra pupillos viduas vel diutino morbo fatigatos et debiles impetratum fuerit lenitatis nostrae iudicium, memorati a nullo nostrorum iudicum compellantur comitatui nostro sui copiam facere. quin immo intra provinciam, in qua litigator et testes vel instrumenta sunt, experiantur iurgandi fortunam atque omni cautela servetur, ne terminos provinciarum suarum cogantur excedere. 1. Quod si pupilli vel viduae aliique fortunae iniuria miserabiles iudicium nostrae serenitatis oraverint, praesertim cum alicuius potentiam perhorrescunt, cogantur eorum adversarii examini nostro sui copiam facere.

D. XV k. Iul. Constantinopoli Optato et Paulino conss.

to follow a profession or business to attempt to evade the jurisdiction and directions of judges under whose care such professions or businesses may be. 1. Hence We order that in this area the privilege of any imperial service, rank (cingulum), or station shall be of no avail to such persons. But those who are or shall be among the regularly constituted number of officials in any imperial office or who claim some station, if they lack a particular objection to the location of the court, are compelled in all cases, whether public or private, to obey the jurisdiction of the judges who have jurisdiction over the profession or business which they carry on, as has been said, outside of their public service. Nevertheless, they must certainly also answer before those judges who are confirmed to have jurisdiction over their office or station. 2. Persons who attempt to violate the tenor of this law shall, for such an attempt, be deprived of the rank of their service and the honor of their station.

Given February 15, at Constantinople, in the consulship of Probus and Avienus (502).

Fourteenth Title When the Emperor Judges Between Minors, Widows, and Sick People, and That They Shall Not Be Compelled to Appear

[1][52] Emperor Constantine Augustus to Andronicus. pr. If anyone obtains an order of Our Mildness against persons below the age of puberty, widows, or persons long afflicted and weak with disease, those mentioned shall not be compelled by any of Our judges to appear at Our court. They should try the dispute within the province within which the litigant, the witnesses, and the documents are, and every precaution shall be taken that they may not be compelled to go outside of their provinces. 1. But if those below the age of puberty, widows, and others who are wretched through the injuries of fate petition for a rescript from Our Serenity, especially when they fear someone's power, their adversaries shall be compelled to appear before Us for examination.

Given June 17, at Constantinople, in the consulship of Optatus and Paulinus (334).

[52] = C.Th. 1.22.2.

XV Ubi de Criminibus Agi Oportet

[1] Impp. Severus et Antoninus AA. Laurinae. Quaestiones eorum criminum, quae legibus aut extra ordinem coercentur, ubi commissa vel inchoata sunt vel ubi reperiuntur qui rei esse perhibentur criminis, perfici debere satis notum est.

PP. IIII non. Oct. Dextro II et Prisco conss.

[2] Idem AA. et CC. Nicae. Sciens liberum venumdando plagii crimen committit. ab eo itaque, qui super hoc queri potest, aditus competens iudex, si is, quem puerum ingenuum vendidisse proponis, ibi degit, causam cognoscet.

S. prid. non. Febr. Sirmi CC. conss.

XVI Ubi de Possessione Agi Oportet

[1] Impp. Valentinianus et Valens AA. ad Festum proconsulem Africae. Ubi aut vis facta dicitur aut momentaria possessio postulanda est, ibi loci iudicem adversus eum qui possessionem turbavit convenit iudicare.

D. VIII k. Iun. Gratiano nobilissimo puero et Dagalaifo conss.

XVII Ubi Fideicommissum Peti Oportet

[1] Impp. Severus et Antoninus AA. Demetrio. Fideicommissum ibi petendum esse, ubi hereditas relicta est, dubitari non oportet.

PP. VIII k. Sept. Cilone II et Libone conss.

Fifteenth Title Where Crimes Should Be Tried

[1] Emperor SEVERUS and ANTONINUS Augusti to Laurina. It is well known that an investigation into crimes that are punished by laws or under extraordinary cognition should be concluded where the offences have been committed or commenced, or where the persons who are said to be guilty are found.

Posted October 4, in the second consulship of Dexter and the consulship of Priscus (196).

[2] The same Augusti[53] and the Caesars to Nicas. He who knowingly sells a free person commits the crime of kidnapping (plagium). If the person who can make a complaint goes before the proper judge, the latter will try the case, providing that the accused, whom you allege to have sold the free-born boy, lives there.

Written February 4, at Sirmium, in the consulship of the Caesars (294).

Sixteenth Title Where Trials over Possession Should Be Conducted

[1][54] Emperors VALENTINIAN and VALENS Augusti to Festus, Proconsul of Africa. It is proper that the case against a person who has disturbed possession should be tried by the judge (either) of the place where force is said to have been used or where interim possession (momentaria possessio) is demanded.

Given May 25, in the consulship of Gratian, most excellent youth, and Dagalaifus (366).

Seventeenth Title Where a Testamentary Trust Should Be Demanded

[1] Emperors SEVERUS and ANTONINUS Augusti to Demetrius. There should be no doubt that a testamentary trust (fideicomissum) should be claimed in the place where the inheritance was left.[55]

Posted August 25, in the consulship of Cilo, for the second time, and Libo (204).

[53] Actually, Diocletian and Maximianus, as is clear from the date.
[54] See also C. 3.1.15.
[55] See D. 5.1.50; 10.

XVIII Ubi Conveniatur Qui Certo Loco Dare Promisit

[1] Imp. Alexander A. Heraclidae. Qui certo loco se soluturum pecuniam obligat, si solutioni satis non fecerit, arbitraria actione et in alio loco potest conveniri: in qua venit aestimatio, quod alterutrius interfuit suo loco potius quam in eo in quo petitur solvi.

D. VI id. Mart. Fusco II et Dextro conss.

XVIIII Ubi in Rem Actio Exerceri Debet

[1] Impp. Diocletianus et Maximianus AA. et CC. Pancratio. In rem actio non contra venditorem, sed contra possidentem competit. frustra itaque desideras non tecum congredi, sed cum auctore tuo dominium vindicantem, cum te possidere contendas. nam si denuntiasti ei qui tibi vendidit, intellegit evictionis periculum. nec enim iurisdictionis forma in eadem provincia constitutis tam petitore quam possessore ob auctoris personam, quem in alia provincia dicis consistere, debet immutari.

D. id. April. AA. conss.

[2] Imp. Constantinus A. ad universos provinciales. pr. Si quis alterius nomine quolibet modo possidens immobilem rem litem ab aliquo per in rem actionem sustineat, debet statim in iudicio dominum nominare, ut, sive in eadem civitate degat sive in agro sive in alia provincia sit, certo dierum spatio ab iudice finiendo eoque ad notionem eius perducendo, vel ipse in locis in quibus praedium situm est perveniens vel procuratorem mittens actoris intentiones excipiat. 1. Si vero post huiusmodi indultum tempus minime hoc quod dispositum est facere maluerit, tamquam lite quae ei ingeritur ex die, quo possessor ad iudicium vocatus est, ad interrumpendam longi temporis praescriptionem contestata iudex, utpote domino possessionis nec post huiusmodi humanitatem sui praesentiam faciente, edictis legitimis proponendis eum citare

Eighteenth Title Where a Person Should Be Summoned Who Has Promised to Pay at a Specified Place

[1] Emperor ALEXANDER Augustus to Heraclida. If a person who has promised to pay a sum of money at a definite place fails to do so, he may be summoned in another place through a discretionary action (actio arbitraria). In that action consideration is taken as to which of the respective parties benefits from having the money paid in their own location rather than in the place where the claim is brought.

Given March 10, in the consulship of Fuscus, for the second time, and Dexter (225).

Nineteenth Title Where an Action in Rem Must Be Tried

[1] Emperors DIOCLETIAN and MAXIMIAN Augusti and the Caesars to Pancratius. An action in rem must be brought not against the seller, but against the person (now) in possession. Since, therefore, you state that you are in possession, you ask in vain that the person who claims ownership should sue your seller rather than you. For, if you call as a witness the person who sold the property to you, he will understand that he takes the risk of eviction.[56] And in fact the rules concerning jurisdiction, when both the plaintiff and defendant live in the same province, should not be changed for either, because of the fact that, as you say, the vendor lives in another province.

Given April 13, in the consulship of the Augusti (293).

[2][57] Emperor CONSTANTINE Augustus to all provincials. pr. If a person, who in any manner possesses immovable property in the name of another, is sued in an action in rem, he must immediately tell the court the name of the owner, so that the latter, whether living in the same city, in the country, or in another province, may, within the space of a certain number of days to be fixed by the judge and brought to his knowledge, hear the claims of the plaintiff by himself coming to the place where the property is situated or by sending a procurator. 1. But if he prefers not at all to participate in this arrangement within the time given him, then, proceeding as if there had been joinder of the issue brought against him on the day on which the owner was called to court – in order to interrupt (acquisition of ownership through) long-time prescription (longi temporis praescriptio) – the judge, if the owner of the property does not present himself after he has been granted the favor of such time, shall cause him to be [56] On the implied warranty against eviction in case of sale of land, see C. 8.44.

[57] Combine with C. 1.21.3, and constitutions listed there; Seeck dates to August 1, 331. Blume: "This law does not appear in the Basilica. Its place was taken by Novel 69."

curabit et tunc in eadem voluntate eo permanente negotium summatim discutiens in possessionem rerum actorem mitti non differet, omni adlegatione absenti de principali quaestione servata.

D. x k. Aug. Basso et Ablabio conss.

[3] Imppp. Gratianus Valentinianus et Theodosius AAA. Actor rei forum, sive in rem sive in personam sit actio, sequitur. sed et in locis, in quibus res propter quas contenditur constitutae sunt, iubemus in rem actionem adversus possidentem moveri.

D. x k. Iul. Constantinopoli Arcadio et Bautone conss.

XX Ubi De Hereditate Agatur et Ubi Scripti Heredes in Possessionem Mitti Postulare Debent

[1] Impp. Valerianus et Gallienus AA. Messiae. Illic, ubi res hereditarias esse proponis, heredes in possessionem rerum hereditariarum mitti postulandum est. ubi autem domicilium habet qui convenitur vel, si ibi ubi res hereditariae sitae sunt degit, hereditatis erit controversia terminanda.

PP. VII k. Mai. Saeculare et Donato conss.

XXI Ubi Agi Oportet de Ratiociniis Tam Privatis Quam Publicis

[1] Impp. Diocletianus et Maximianus AA. et CC. Aurelio Gerontio. Eum, qui aliena negotia sive ex tutela sive quocumque alio titulo administravit, ubi haec gessit, rationem oportet reddere.

S. XIIII k. Sept. AA. conss.

[2] Impp. Honorius et Theodosius AA. Macedonio magistro militum. Nemo post depositum cingulum privatae vitae redditus ob negotium, quod militiae causa est ei exortum praestandi ratiocinii gratia eius summoned by lawful edicts. If the owner remains in the same state of mind after that, the judge, dispensing of the matter summarily, shall not delay having the plaintiff put in possession of the property, and shall keep for the absent party the right to litigate the allegations in the main case thereafter.

Given July 23, in the consulship of Bassus and Ablabius (331).

[3][58] Emperors GRATIAN, VALENTINIAN, and THEODOSIUS Augusti. The plaintiff follows the forum of the defendant in actions in rem and also in personam. But We order that actions in rem may also be brought against the possessor in the place where the property concerning which the contention arises is situated.

Given June 22, at Constantinople, in the consulship of Arcadius and Bauto (385).

Twentieth Title Where an Action Concerning an Inheritance is to Be Tried and Where the Appointed Heirs Should Demand to Be Put into Possession

[1][59] Emperors VALERIAN and GALLIENUS Augusti to Messia. A demand to put the heirs into possession of the property of the inheritance is to be made where you say the inheritance is situated. But a controversy about inheritance must be terminated in the place where the defendant has his domicile, or in the place where the inheritance is situated if the defendant lives there.

Posted April 25, in the consulship of Saecularis and Donatus (260).

Twenty-First Title Where an Action Concerning Public or Private Accounts Should Be Brought

[1][60] Emperors DIOCLETIAN and MAXIMIAN Augusti and the Caesars to Aurelius Gerontius. The person who has managed affairs for another, either as tutor or in some other capacity, should render an account where he conducted the business.

Written August 19, in the consulship of the Augusti (293).

[2] Emperors HONORIUS and THEODOSIUS Augusti to Macedonius, Master of Soldiers. No person can object to the jurisdiction of the court if he quits military service and returns to private life, and is now being brought to court by [58] This rescript modifies the rule in Frag. Vat. 326.

[59] Combine with C. 8.1.2. On the substance, see also C. 3.19.3, 6.33.
[60] Combine with C. 4.50.7 and 7.72.9.

numeri, in quo militavit vel quem ipse gessit a quocumque pulsatus fori praescriptionibus utatur. unumquemque enim super huiuscemodi causis, id est publicis, quas dum militaret exercuit, super ratiociniis militaribus, per quae suos contubernales adflixisse adseritur, in militari oportet iudicio respondere, in quo et instructio sufficiens et nota testimonia et verissima possunt documenta praestari.

D. prid. k. Iun. Constantinopoli Asclepiodoto et Mariniano conss.

XXII Ubi Causa Status Agi Debeat

[1] Imp. Alexander A. Aurelio Aristocrati. Quae a te, cum tibi serviret, refugit et in aliam provinciam se contulit, libertatem sibi vindicans non iniuria eo loco litigare compellenda est, unde quasi fugitiva recessit. ideoque remittere eam in qua serviret praeses provinciae qui eo loco ius repraesentat curae habebit: sed non ubi deprehensa est audiri debet.

PP. XIII k. Sept. Pompeiano et Peligno conss.

[2] Imp. Decius A. et Decius et Quintus CC. Felici. Procuratores nostros status causas examinare non posse omnibus notum est.

PP. k. Dec. Decio A. II et Grato conss.

[3] Impp. Diocletianus et Maximianus AA. et CC. Zenonidi. Si in possessione libertatis constituta es, cum in status etiam quaestione actor rei forum sequi debeat, ibi causam liberalem agi oportet, ubi consistit quae ancilla dicitur, licet senatoria dignitate actor decoretur.

D. prid. id. April. Byzantio AA. conss.

[4] Idem AA. et CC. Sisinniae. Si ex possessione servitutis in libertatem quis proclamat, ibi agi oportere status causam, ubi domicilium constitutum habet qui se dominum dicit, non est ambigui iuris.

D. II non. Mart. Byzantio CC. conss.

someone in a suit that has arisen from his military service and that requires him to render an account which he kept for the troop in which he served or which he commanded. For everyone should answer for public matters of this kind that he undertook while he was in service – i.e., for accounts which he kept for the soldiers – and by which he is claimed to have injured his comrades, in the military court where adequate evidence exists and where known witnesses and authentic documents may be produced.

Given May 31, at Constantinople, in the consulship of Asclepiodotus and Marinianus (423).

Twenty-Second Title Where an Action Concerning Personal Status Should Be Brought

[1] Emperor ALEXANDER Augustus to Aurelius Aristocratis. The woman who, while she worked as your slave, fled to another province and now claims freedom is not unjustly compelled to litigate the matter in the place from where she fled as a fugitive. Therefore, the governor, who is the highest legal authority where she is found, must take care that she is returned to the place where she worked as a slave; she must not be heard in the place where she is seized.

Posted August 20, in the consulship of Pompeianus and Pelignus (231).

[2] Emperor DECIUS Augustus and the Caesars DECIUS and QUINTUS to Felix. It is known to all that Our procurators cannot try cases involving personal status.

Posted December 1, in the consulship of Decius Augustus, for the second time, and Gratus (250).

[3] Emperors DIOCLETIAN and MAXIMIAN Augusti and the Caesars to Zenonides. If you are confirmed as being in possession of freedom, then since the plaintiff even in an action involving personal status must follow the forum of the defendant, the case concerning your liberty must be tried where you, the person who is claimed to be a female slave, are living, even though the plaintiff enjoys the rank of a senator.

Given April 12, at Byzantium, in the consulship of the Augusti (293).

[4] The same Augusti and Caesars to Sisinnia. There is no doubt in law that, if anyone in servitude claims liberty, the case concerning his personal status must be tried where the person who claims to be his master has an established domicile.

Given March 6, at Byzantium, in the consulship of the Caesars (294).

[5] Idem AA. et CC. Diogeni praesidi insularum. Iam dudum a nobis statutum est, ut, si quae causae libertinitatis et servitutis in provinciis inter fiscum et privatos exorerentur, ad rationalem vel magistrum privatae rei, hoc est unde mota est quaestio, remitterentur, si quae vero ingenuitatis essent, a rectore provinciae examinarentur.

D. IIII non. Aug. CC. conss.

[6] Imp. Iustinianus A. Menae pp. In litibus, in quibus utrum ingenuus an libertinus sit aliquis quaeritur, quinquennii divisionem, post quod divino auditorio opus esse veteres leges praecipiebant, in posterum cessare sancimus et huiusmodi lites etiam post memoratum tempus ad exemplum ceterarum vel in provinciis apud earum moderatores vel in hac alma urbe apud competentia maxima iudicia examinari. quod etiam, si clarissima persona super tali condicione vel etiam servili quaestionem patiatur, tenere censemus.

D. III non. Aug.

XXIII Ubi Quis de Curiali vel Cohortali Aliave Condicione Conveniatur

[1] Impp. Arcadius et Honorius AA. Florentino pu. Si quis vel curiae vel officiis iudicum aut aliis quibuscumque corporibus obnoxius intra provinciam ab his erit quos aufugerat comprehensus, non expectata eius iudicis notione, sub quo per ambitum coeperat militare, penitusque emendicati honoris praescriptione submota ab iudice, qui in locis aditus fuerit, audiatur manifestarumque rerum probatione convictus eorum societati quos declinaverat adgregetur.

D. XII k. Aug. Mediolani Caesario et Attico conss.

[2] Impp. Theodosius et Valentinianus AA. Cyro pp. pr. Hac perpetua lege sancimus provincialibus iudiciis non posse fori praescriptionem opponere eos, qui ad curiam vocantur vel cohortalibus deberi dicuntur officiis vel aliis corporibus obnoxii sunt, eos etiam, qui superexactiones

[5] The same Augusti and Caesars to Diogenes, Governor of the Islands. We decided long ago that if cases involving the status of freedmen or slaves arise between the Treasury and private persons, they must be referred to the Comptroller or the Master of the Privy Purse, that is to say, from the place where the suit originates; but if cases involve a question of free birth, they must be tried by the governor of the province.[61]

Given August 2, in the consulship of the Caesars (294).

[6] Emperor JUSTINIAN Augustus to Menas, Praetorian Prefect. The limitation of five years in suits involving the question as to whether someone is free-born or a freedman – after which an imperial hearing has become necessary according to the ancient laws – shall hereafter be abolished; after five years such suits shall be tried in the same manner as others: either in the provinces before their governors, or in this Imperial City before the proper high authorities. This shall apply even in a case commenced against a person who is clarissimus concerning that status or even servile condition.

Given August 3 (528 or 529).

Twenty-Third Title Where One May Be Sued Concerning His Status as a Decurion or Junior Official or Any Other Status

[1][62] Emperors ARCADIUS and HONORIUS Augusti to Florentinus, City Prefect. If a person has fled who is bound to a municipal council or to a judge's staff or to any other bodies within a province, but he is seized in that province by those he deserted, then without awaiting the investigation of the judge under whom he had commenced to serve, and ignoring his defense against removing the position of honor he had solicited, he shall be heard by the judge before whom he is taken in that region, and, if he is convicted by manifest proof of the situation, he shall be handed over to those whom he deserted.[63]

Given July 21, at Milan, in the consulship of Caesarius and Atticus (397).

[2][64] Emperors THEODOSIUS and VALENTINIAN Augusti to Cyrus, Praetorian Prefect. pr. By this ever-enduring law, We ordain that no objection as to venue can be raised before the provincial judges by decurions, junior officials, persons

[61] Though, as Blume points out, "If the question of freedom arose only incidentally, the fiscal officer had jurisdiction. C. 3.1.3."

[62] Combine with C. 10.32.48; C.Th. 6.2.15, 6.14.2, 12.1.153–155, which yield December 21, 391 as the correct date (so also Seeck).

[63] Blume: "As the soldiers were bound to the army, so many others were bound [obnoxius] to their service, particularly if such service was for the benefit of the state. Thus the apparitors of a president of the province, that is to say, the members of his official staff, were bound to their positions."

[64] = Nov. Theod. 7.1 pr., with influence from 7.2, 3, and 4. Seeck dates to September 21, 441.

vel concussiones perpetrasse firmentur: exceptis videlicet his qui armata militia praediti sunt, vel aliis qui speciali beneficio principali sese defendant, ita tamen ut, cui ex militaribus viris curiae nomen vel cohortalis officii quaestio ingeratur, rector provinciae super eius nomine tam ad sedem tuae magnificentiae quam ad magisteriam vel ad competentem referat potestatem, ut hi, qui velut debiti postulentur, provinciali iudicio destinati ibi eventum iudicii expectent, ubi iura moveri praecipiunt huiusmodi quaestiones. 1. Super publicis autem functionibus et debitis nemini liceat fori praescriptionem opponere praeter eos qui specialiter excepti sunt. 2. Ceteros excelsae tuae sedis et rectorum provinciarum in quolibet negotio declinare minime posse iudicium decernimus, ita ut, qui tam saluberrimam legem pertinaciter violare temptaverint, sciant a moderatoribus provinciarum adversus se tamquam in contumaces sententiam proferendam.

D. XI k. Oct. Constantinopoli Valentiniano A. V et Anatolio conss.

XXIIII Ubi Senatores vel Clarissimi Civiliter vel Criminaliter Conveniantur

[1] Imp. Constantinus A. ad Octavianum comitem Hispaniarum. Quicumque non illustris, sed tantum clarissima dignitate praeditus virginem rapuerit vel fines aliquos invaserit vel in aliqua culpa seu crimine fuerit deprehensus, statim intra provinciam in qua facinus perpetravit publicis legibus subiugetur nec fori praescriptione utatur. omnem enim huiusmodi honorem reatus excludit.

D. prid. non. Dec. Serdicae acc. V non. Mart. Cordubae Gallicano et Basso conss.

[2] Imppp. Valens Gratianus et Valentinianus AAA. ad senatum. Senatores in pecuniariis causis, sive in hac urbe sive in suburbanis degunt, in iudicio tam praetorianae quam urbicariae praefecturae nec non magistri officiorum (quotiens tamen ad eum nostrae pietatis emanaverit iussio), in provinciis vero ubi larem fovent aut ubi maiorem bonorum partem possident et adsidue versantur respondebunt.

D. k. Mart.

tied to any other body, or by those who are confirmed to be guilty of excessive exactions or of extortion, with the exception, of course, of persons who are in the armed military service, or others who are protected by some special imperial rescript. Provided, however, that when a soldier is claimed as a decurion or as junior official, the provincial governor shall report his name both to the office of Your Magnificence as well as to the Commander's office (magisteria) or to (another) appropriate authority, so that those who are claimed to be in arrears in their duty may be turned over to the provincial court, where such investigations are by law directed to be tried, and to await the outcome there.

1. If a person is sued for taxes or a public debt, he can raise no objection to the venue unless he is one of those who have been specially exempted. 2. As to any other individuals, they cannot decline to appear before the court of your high office or of the governors, so that whoever stubbornly violates this salutary law will be punished by the governors as contumacious persons.

Given September 21, at Constantinople, in the consulship of Valentinian Augustus, for the fifth time, and Anatolius (440).

Twenty-Fourth Title Where Senators or Those Holding the Title of Clarissimus May Be Sued Civilly or Criminally

[1][65] Emperor C*ONSTANTINE* Augustus to Octavianus, Count of Spain. If a person is not illustris, but only clarissimus,[66] and rapes a virgin or invades the property of another, or is apprehended in any wrongful or criminal behavior, he shall be immediately subjected to the public laws in the province wherein he perpetrated the crime, nor shall he have the right to object to the venue. For his status as an accused excludes such a position of honor.

Given December 4, at Serdica, and received March 3, at Córdoba, in the consulship of Gallicanus and Bassus (317).

[2][67] Emperors V*ALENS*, G*RATIAN*, and V*ALENTINIAN* Augusti to the Senate. In cases concerning money, senators who live in this city or its suburbs shall answer suits against them in the court of the Praetorian and city prefectures, as well as in that of the Master of the Offices – provided that Our Piety has given the latter an order to that effect; in the provinces, however, they shall answer where they have their hearth or possess the greater part of their property and where they usually live.

Given March 1 (376).

[65] = C.Th. 9.1.1.

[66] Blume: "The term 'senator,' generally speaking, was applicable to men of all the three ranks, honorable, worshipful, and illustrious ... The foregoing law deals only with persons whose title was that of honorable – clarissimus."

[67] Combine with C.Th. 9.1.13, which says the constitution was read in the Senate on February 11, 376; Seeck gives January 1, 376 for its origin.

[3] Imp. Zeno A. Arcadio pp. pr. Quotiens viro forte patricio vel ex patricio vel ei, quem praetorianae vel urbicariae amplissimae sedis administratio illustravit, vel consulari viro, quem tam ordinaria processio quam sacra nostrae pietatis pariter sublimavit oratio, quive magisteriae potestatis sudoribus clarus factus est, vel ei, qui magistri officiorum vel quaestoris officio functus aut sacri nostrae pietatis cubiculi praepositus post depositam administrationem senatorio ordini sociatus est, aut cui nostra serenitas domesticorum scholam regendam mandavit cuive sacros nostri numinis thesauros aut res privatas nostrae pietatis vel serenissimae Augustae nostrae coniugis gubernandas iniunxit, post depositam videlicet administrationem crimen publicum privatumve, cui tamen non per procuratorem respondere liceat, in hac alma urbe vel in provinciis commoranti ingeratur, nullius alterius iudicis nisi nostrae pietatis huiusmodi esse cognitionem vel sacri tantummodo cognitoris, cui nostra serenitas huiusmodi negotii audientiam vice sua sacris apicibus mittendis mandaverit, ita tamen, ut apud talem iudicem, nullius officii vel scholae intercedente ministerio, more atque habitu sacrarum consultationum absque ulla videlicet observatione dierum fatalium introductae causae, viris devotissimis sacri nostri scrinii libellensibus sollemnia implentibus, audiantur: eo qui in crimen vocatus erit, ne quas ante probationes iniurias patiatur, sedendi quoque in aliqua secretarii parte, quae iudicibus inferior, altercantibus vero superior esse videatur, habituro licentiam.

1. Adeo autem tantarum honores dignitatum duximus augendos, ut nec sacro quidem cognitori, nec postquam crimen fuerit patefactum, contra huiusmodi viros vel eorum substantias statuendi aliquid concedamus facultatem, sed hoc solummodo in huiusmodi viros vice quoque principis audituro licebit, ut intentatum apud se crimen, si patefactum fuisset, ad principalem referat notionem. 1a. Ultionis autem tantis inferendae dignitatibus modus non nisi in principis residebit arbitrio, cum sit certum oportere accusatoris calumniam (reo videlicet protinus absolvendo) inconsulta quoque nostra serenitate prout leges sanciunt coerceri, nisi forte accusator quoque non minoris quam reus sit dignitatis: in hoc namque casu super coercenda huiusmodi accusatoris calumnia non immerito consulenda erit principalis auctoritas.

[3][68] Emperor ZENO Augustus to Arcadius, Praetorian Prefect. pr. Whenever, after an office has been resigned, an accusation of a public or private crime that cannot be answered through a procurator is brought against a person living in this flourishing City (Constantinople) or in the provinces, and that person happens to be a patrician or ex-patrician, or one who is made illustris through the administration at senatorial rank of the Praetorian or city prefecture, or who is a consular made illustris through the customary advancement and by the imperial order of Our Piety, or who is made clarus by the hardship of the Commander's office (magisteria potestas), or who officiated as Master of the Offices or as Quaestor, or who has been at the head of Our sacred bedchamber and, after relinquishing the office, has been made a member of the senatorial order, or to whom Our Serenity has entrusted the management of the corps of the imperial bodyguard, or who had charge of the treasury of Our Divine Majesty or of Our Privy Purse or that of Our consort, the Serene Augusta – when such an accusation is brought, a trial shall be had only before Our Piety or an imperial judge to whom Our Serenity had, by imperial letters, delegated the hearing of the cases in his stead; provided that such cases shall be heard before such a judge without the help of members of any official staff or of any department, in the manner customary in connection with hearings on reports for imperial consultation and without observing the maximum number of trial days before a case must be brought up, and with the devoted secretaries of the bureau of petitions performing the customary services. And, lest the accused might be wronged, before proof is furnished he shall also have the right to sit in another part of the courtroom which is below that of the judges, but above that of the disputants.

1. We believe it proper, moreover, to increase the honor of such positions of rank such that We do not concede the right to the Emperor's appointed judge, even after the crime has been proven, to make any order against such men or against their property; but rather, the judge who hears the case in place of the Emperor shall report his findings as to the accusation laid before him, if it is indeed proven, to the Emperor. 1a. The measure of punishment to be meted out to persons of dignity rests solely in the discretion of the Emperor. However, it has been determined that if the prosecution was malicious, the accused of course is immediately absolved and the accuser must be punished as the law provides even without consulting Our Serenity, unless, perchance, the accuser also is not of a rank inferior to that of the defendant; for it is proper that in such a situation the Emperor should be consulted concerning the punishment for malicious prosecution of such an accuser.

[68] Combine with C. 12.1.17.

2. Viros autem illustres in hac inclita urbe degentes, qui sine administratione honorariis decorati fuerint codicillis, licet talem praerogativam nostrae iussionis meruerint, ut quod non egerint videantur egisse, in criminalibus causis magnificae tuae sedis et illustrissimae urbicariae praefecturae nec non etiam viri magnifici magistri officiorum (quotiens tamen ad eius iudicium specialis nostrae pietatis emanaverit iussio) sententiis respondere decernimus, ita ut huiusmodi viri sedendi quidem in cognitionibus dicendis minime sibi vindicent facultatem. 2a. Sciant autem ipsi quoque nec de se vel suis facultatibus iudicaturos aliquid nec probatis criminibus, nisi prius ad nostram pietatem rettulerint, posse statuere. 3. Quotiens autem viri illustres in provinciis constituti (non hi tamen, quorum cognitio ad nostram maiestatem vel ad vice nostri numinis auditurum pertineat) in querimoniam fuerint criminalem vocati, et sedendi, cum celebratur cognitio, in secretariis iudicantium ius consequantur et iudices patefactis quoque criminibus ferendis contra huiusmodi viros vel facultates eorum sententiis abstineant, dum nostrae pietatis ad suas meruerint relationes responsum: supplicio videlicet, quod accusatoribus patefacta eorum calumnia ingerendum est, nec apud provinciales iudices, si non, sicut superius dictum est, similem dignitatem habeant, differendo.

D. Constantinopoli.

XXV In Quibus Causis Militantes Fori Praescriptione Uti Non Possunt

[1] Impp. Theodosius et Valentinianus AA. Florentio pp. pr. Omnes omnino domesticos et agentes in rebus et quaecumque alia praetenditur militia vel dignitas sub moderatoribus provinciarum pro functionibus publicis respondere nulla fori praescriptione valitura sancimus, si hac qui exiguntur publica debita uti temptaverint. 1. Immo et in aliis privatis actionibus occupatos volumus respondere, qui per provincias *ne*gotiantur vel conductorum vocabulis, cum non armata militia praediti sunt, defenduntur, sive domorum divinarum sive virorum potentium seu cuiuslibet condicionis sunt conductores, nisi forte commeatum

2. Viri illustres, however, who reside in this Glorious City, and who, without actual administration of the office, have been awarded the honorary title only – so that they seem to have done what in fact they have not done – although by Our order they occupy a privileged position, shall in criminal cases obey the orders of Your Magnificent prefecture and of the illustrious city prefecture and of the magnificent Master of the Offices – in the latter case only when special imperial authority has been sent to his court by Our Piety – so that the accused in such cases cannot claim the right to be seated during the examination. 2a. But they themselves, too, may know that those who try them cannot make a definite order against them or their property, even when the crime is proven, until they have first reported to Our Piety. 3. But if viri illustres living in the provinces – but not those, however, whose cases are to be heard only before Our Divine Majesty or before a judge appointed in Our place – are summoned to a criminal investigation, they shall have the right, while the trial is in process, to be seated in the judicial chambers, and the judges, whenever the charges under consideration are proven, must refrain from making any definite order against them or their property till they receive an answer from Our Piety pursuant to their reports. Of course, the penalty to be meted out to accusers, whose malicious prosecution has been exposed, must not be deferred by the provincial judges, if, as has been said above, they are not of the same rank as the defendants.

Given at Constantinople (485–486?).[69]

Twenty-Fifth Title Situations in Which Persons in the Imperial Service May Not Raise Objection to the Venue

[1][70] Emperors THEODOSIUS and VALENTINIAN Augusti to Florentius, Praetorian Prefect. pr. We ordain that absolutely all the soldiers of the bodyguard and the imperial messengers and all persons who lay claim to any office or position of rank shall answer the summons of the provincial governors in connection with any public indebtedness, and no defense as to the venue shall prevail if sought by persons from whom public debts are demanded. 1. Those, too, must answer (in the province) who are engaged in actions concerning their private affairs, who are engaged in private business in the provinces, or who, while not belonging to the armed soldiery, are protected by the name of lessee, whether a lessee of property of the Crown or of influential persons or of any other status, unless, perchance, they show that they received leave

[69] Lounghis et al. date to 490.
[70] = Nov. Theod. 7.1. See also C. 3.13.7.

ad rem propriam componendam unius anni indutias ostenderint se accepisse. 2. Eadem forma servanda in his etiam, qui mercandi et militandi sacra beneficia meruerunt, ut etiam ipsi rectoribus provinciarum respondeant.

D. XIII k. Febr. Constantinopoli Theodosio A. XVII et Festo conss.

XXVI Ubi Causae Fiscales vel Divinae Domus Hominumque Eius Agantur

[1] Impp. Severus et Antoninus AA. Dioscoro. Non defensae mortis quaestionem apud procuratores nostros non oportere tractari quis ignorat, nec bona fisco peti posse, quam si de crimine constiterit apud eum, cui convictis poenam inrogare licet? plane defunctis homicidii reis apud procuratores quoque causam agendam esse ratio permittit.

PP. VII id. Mai. Laterano et Rufino conss.

[2] Idem AA. Aristae. Non animadvertimus, cur causam ad officium procuratorum nostrorum pertinentem ad proconsulis notionem advocare velis. nam cum hoc quaeratur, an pater tuus mortem sibi consciverit metu alicuius poenae ac propterea bona fisco debeant vindicari, iam non de crimine aut poena mortui, sed de bonis quaerendum est.

D. XII k. Oct. Apro et Maximo conss.

[3] Imp. Antoninus A. Heliodoro. Procurator meus, qui vice praesidis provinciae non fungitur, sicut exigere poenam desertae accusationis potest, ita iudicare, ut ea inferatur sententia sua, non potest.

D. X k. Sept. Laeto et Cereale conss.

of absence for a year in order to attend to their private affairs. 2. The same rule also applies to those who have received imperial permission to engage in trade while in the imperial service; they, too, shall answer the summons of the governors.

Given January 20, at Constantinople, in the consulship of Theodosius Augustus, for the seventeenth time, and Festus (439).

Twenty-Sixth Title Where Fiscal Cases or Those Pertaining to Imperial Property or to Men Belonging Thereto May Be Conducted

[1] Emperors SEVERUS and ANTONINUS Augusti to Dioscorus. Who is unaware that an investigation into a death which is unavenged by the heirs of the deceased cannot be held before Our procurators, and that the property cannot be claimed as confiscated property for the Treasury until the crime is proven to have been committed before the judge who has authority to inflict punishment on those convicted. Clearly, however, if those accused of homicide have died, the law reasonably allows for the case to be tried before the procurators.[71]

Posted May 9, in the consulship of Lateranus and Rufinus (197).

[2] The same Augusti to Arista. We do not see why you want a case that is within the jurisdiction of Our procurators taken before the Proconsul. For, when an investigation is made as to whether your father committed suicide on account of fear of some punishment, and whether, therefore, his property should be confiscated by the Treasury, the inquiry that is to be made relates not to the charge against the deceased or the punishment to be meted out to him, but to his property.

Given September 20, in the consulship of Aper and Maximus (207).

[3] Emperor ANTONINUS Augustus to Heliodorus. My procurator, who does not assume the function of a governor, although he can collect a penalty for abandoning an accusation, cannot judge that it should be imposed and enter his own decision.

Given September 1, in the consulship of Laetus and Cerealis (215).

[71] According to C. 6.35.1, an heir was obliged to avenge the murder before entering into the inheritance. But if the alleged murderers had died, a Treasury official could investigate whether the heir had entered into the inheritance before investigating the murder.

[4] Imp. Alexander A. Maximae. pr. Cum vendente procuratore meo emisse te praedia dicas, pretium eorum necessario solvere debes. 1. Cum his, quibus mandantibus eadem praedia emisse te et tradidisse dicas, agente te procurator meus, si eius audientiam elegeris, cognoscet, ut pecuniam quae pretii nomine tibi debetur et usuras quae fisco solvendae sunt consequi possis.

PP. IIII id. Oct. Maximo et Paterno conss.

[5] Imp. Constantinus A. ad Ursum. Ad fiscum pertinentes causas rationalis decidat, omnibus concussionibus prohibendis.

D. non. Febr. Constantino A. IIII et Licinio IIII conss.

[6] Idem A. ad Italicum. Si quis adversus conductorem nostrum aliquid agendum crediderit, viro illustri comiti rerum privatarum referri oportet, ne et iudici existimationis et officio eius salutis discrimen immineat.

D. k. Febr. ... conss.

[7] Idem A. ad Bulephorum rationalem summae rei. Dominicis colonis et patrimonialibus gravitatem tuam censuimus disceptatricem esse debere. duces enim et praepositos limitum et castrorum et rectores provinciarum evocandis et arcessendis colonis abstinere oportet.

D. XVI k. Mart. Limenio et Catullino conss.

[8] Idem A. ad Taurum pp. Cum aliquid colonus aut servus rei privatae nostrae contra disciplinam publicam adseratur perpetrare, ad iudicium rectoris provinciae venire cogendus est, sic videlicet, ut praesente rationali vel procuratore domus nostrae inter eum et accusatorem causa tractetur et, si facinus fuerit adprobatum, iuris severitas exseratur.

D. V non. Mart. Sirmi Datiano et Cereale conss.

[9] Impp. Valentinianus et Valens AA. ad Philippum vicarium. Universi fiduciam gerant, ut, cum quis eorum ab actore rerum privatarum

[4] Emperor Alexander Augustus to Maxima. pr. Since you say that you bought property at a sale held by my procurator, you necessarily must pay the price thereof. 1. If you as plaintiff litigate with those to whom you say that you transferred it, and at whose behest you bought it, my procurator will, if you choose to bring an action before his tribunal, come to a decision that you may be able to receive back the money which is due to you as the purchase money and the interest to be paid to the fisc.

Posted October 12, in the consulship of Maximus and Paternus (233).

[5] Emperor CONSTANTINE Augustus to Ursus. The Imperial Comptroller (rationalis) must decide all cases relating to the Treasury, and all extortion in connection with it is forbidden.

Given February 5, in the consulship of Constantine Augustus, for the fourth time, and Licinius, for the fourth time (315).

[6] The same Augustus[72] to Italicus. If anyone wants to bring an action against Our chief tenant (conductor), he must report to the vir illustris Count of the Privy Purse, lest the good name of the judge and the welfare of his official staff be endangered.

Given February 1 (January 25), at Bononia (Boulogne), in the consulship of Placidus and Romulus (343).

[7] The same Augustus to Bulephorus, Treasury Comptroller. We have decided that Your Eminence should act as judge for the tenants (coloni) on Our Privy Purse and patrimonial estates. Moreover, the heads of military districts and the leaders of the junior corps (duces et praepositi) of the boundaries and of the camps and the governors must refrain from summoning and citing them.

Given February 14, in the consulship of Limenius and Catullinus (349).

[8] The same Augustus to Taurus, Praetorian Prefect. When it is alleged that a tied tenant or slave (colonus aut servus) of the Privy Purse has violated any public regulation, he should be forced to go before the tribunal of the governor, and the matter between him and his accuser must be tried in the presence of Our Comptroller or the procurator of Our Household, and if the crime is proven, the severity of the law will be felt.

Given March 3, at Sirmium, in the consulship of Datianus and Cerealis (358).

[9][73] Emperors VALENTINIAN and VALENS Augusti to Philippus, Vicar. Everybody may trust in this: that if anyone has been wronged at the hands of an [72] Along with 7, actually issued by Constantius and Constans. The subscription is restored from C. 11.75.1: d. VIII k. Febr. Bononiae Placido et Romulo conss.: Seeck.

[73] = C.Th. 10.4.1 (Constantine; Heraclea; March 5, 313 or, more likely, 326: Seeck). The relation of Constantine's constitution to this one is uncertain, but neither Emperor was in Heraclea on July 5, 365.

nostrarum sive a procuratore fuerit vexatus iniuriis, super eius contumeliis vel depraedationibus deferre querimoniam sinceritati tuae vel rectori provinciae non dubitet et ad publicae sententiam vindictae sine aliqua trepidatione convolare. quae res cum fuerit certis probationibus declarata, sancimus et edicimus, ut, si in provincialem hanc audaciam quisquam moliri fuerit ausus, publice vivus concremetur.

D. III non. Iul. Heracliae Valentiniano et Valente AA. conss.

[10] Imppp. Gratianus Valentinianus et Theodosius AAA. ad Polemium pp. Nullum ex officio rationalis, qui exactioni vel chartis inserviat, in alio iudicio adduci oportet, nisi forte cuiuspiam caput accusatio legibus instituta pulsaverit.

D. III k. Mai. Arcadio et Bautone conss.

[11] Impp. Theodosius et Valentinianus AA. Artaxi praeposito sacri cubiculi. Hac lege sancimus, ut, sive agat domorum nostrarum colonus aut inquilinus aut servus seu pulsetur ab aliquo super criminali vel civili negotio, non alibi quam tui culminis ac viri spectabilis comitis domorum petatur examen: nullius adlegatione super fori praescriptione penitus admittenda.

D. V id. April. Eudoxio et Dioscoro conss.

XXVII Quando Liceat sine Iudice Unicuique Vindicare Se vel Publicam Devotionem

[1] Imppp. Valentinianus Theodosius et Arcadius AAA. ad provinciales. pr. Liberam resistendi cunctis tribuimus facultatem, ut quicumque militum vel privatorum ad agros nocturnus populator intraverit aut itinera frequentata insidiis adgressionis obsederit, permissa cuicumque licentia dignus ilico supplicio subiugetur ac mortem quam minabatur excipiat et id quod intendebat incurrat. melius enim est occurrere in tempore, quam post exitum vindicare. 1. Vestram igitur vobis agent of Our Privy Purse or by one of Our procurators, he should not hesitate to lodge a complaint about the insults to him or the depredations with Your Sincerity or the provincial governor, and he may without any fear of retribution ask for a decision involving public punishment. We ordain and proclaim that if it is clearly proven that (such agent or procurator) has dared to use such insolence toward a provincial, he shall be publicly burned alive.

Given July 5, at Heraclea, in the consulship of Valentinian and Valens Augusti (365).

[10] Emperors GRATIAN, VALENTINIAN, and THEODOSIUS Augusti to Polemius, Praetorian Prefect. No member of the official staff of the Comptroller who acts as collector or keeps the records should be forced to go before another tribunal, unless he happens to be accused of a capital crime according to law.

Given April 29, in the consulship of Arcadius and Bauto (385).[74]

[11][75] Emperors THEODOSIUS and VALENTINIAN Augusti to Artaxes, Grand Chamberlain (praepositus sacri cubiculi). We ordain by this law that if a tenant tied to the land or living in one of Our properties (colonus aut inquilinus) or a slave of Our estates sues or is sued by someone concerning a criminal or civil matter, no one may ask for an investigation to be held before any tribunal other than that of Your Highness or that of the vir spectabilis Count of the Household (comes domorum); no objection to the venue shall in any manner be entertained.

Given April 9, in the consulship of Eudoxius and Dioscorus (442).

Twenty-Seventh Title When One is Permitted, Without a Judge, to Avenge Oneself or (a Breach of) Public Fidelity

[1][76] Emperors VALENTINIAN, THEODOSIUS, and ARCADIUS Augusti to the Provincials. pr. We grant everyone the free right of offering resistance if a soldier or civilian should enter his fields as a nocturnal plunderer, or harass heavily used roads with the intention of robbery; permission is granted that he should be subjected to immediate punishment, and (so) receive the death and incur the danger that he himself threatened. For it is better to forestall, rather than to punish after the fact. 1. We therefore grant you permission to avenge

74 Seeck dates to April 29, 390.
75 This law bestows a privilege enjoyed exclusively by Cappadocians.
76 = C.Th. 9.14.2.

permittimus ultionem et, quod serum est punire iudicio, subiugamus edicto: nullus parcat militi, cui obviare telo oporteat ut latroni.

D. k. Iul. Tatiano et Symmacho conss.

[2] Imppp. Arcadius Honorius et Theodosius AAA. Hadriano pp. Opprimendorum desertorum facultatem provincialibus iure permittimus. qui si resistere ausi fuerint, in his velox ubicumque iubemus esse supplicium. cuncti etenim adversus latrones publicos desertoresque militiae ius sibi sciant pro quiete communi exercendae publicae ultionis indultum.

D. VI non. Oct. Theodosio A. et Rumorido conss.

XXVIII De Inofficioso Testamento

[1] Impp. Severus et Antoninus AA. Victorino. Cum de inofficioso matris suae testamento filius dicere velit adversus eum, qui ex causa fideicommissi hereditatem tenet, non est iniquum hoc ei accommodari, ut perinde fideicommissarius teneatur, ac si pro herede aut pro possessore possideret.

PP. V k. Iul. Falcone et Claro conss.

[2] Idem AA. Lucretio. Quamvis de inofficioso testamento acturum te bonorum possessionem accepisse proponas, tamen scriptis heredibus auferre possessionem incivile est.

D. IIII k. Dec. Dextro II et Prisco conss.

[3] Idem AA. Ianuario. pr. Si mater filiis duobus institutis tertio post testamentum suscepto, cum mutare idem testamentum potuisset, hoc facere neglexisset, merito utpote non iustis rationibus neglectus de inofficioso querellam instituere poterat. 1. Sed cum eam in puerperio vita cessisse proponas, repentini casus iniquitas per coniecturam maternae yourself, and whatever is too late to be punished in court We make subject to this edict. Let no one spare a soldier when he becomes a robber and must be fought off with weapons.

Given July 1, in the consulship of Tatianus and Symmachus (391).

[2][77] Emperors ARCADIUS, HONORIUS, and THEODOSIUS Augusti to Hadrianus, Praetorian Prefect. We rightly give provincials permission to seize deserters. Let swift punishment be inflicted on those who dare to resist. Let everyone know that provincials have the right, for the purpose of insuring public peace, to inflict public punishment upon robbers and deserters from the army.

Given October 2, in the consulships of the Theodosius Augustus and Rumoridus (403).

Twenty-Eighth Title An Undutiful Will[78]

[1] Emperors SEVERUS and ANTONINUS Augusti to Victorinus. When a son wishes to bring a claim that his mother's will is undutiful against the person who holds the inheritance by reason of a testamentary trust (fideicomissum), it is not unfair that he be accommodated, such that the heir charged with the trust may be held responsible just as though he held the inheritance as heir or as possessor.

Posted June 27, in the consulship of Falco and Clarus (193).

[2] The same Augusti to Lucretius. Although you say that when you received the right of the possession of the inheritance, you intended to commence a complaint to set aside a will as undutiful, nevertheless it is not right that possession be taken away from the heirs appointed in the will.[79]

Given November 28, in the consulship of Dexter, for the second time, and Priscus (196).

[3] The same Augusti to Januarius. pr. If a mother designated in her will two sons as heirs, and afterwards gave birth to a third, and neglected to change the will when she had opportunity to do so, he (the third son) deservedly could bring a complaint to set aside the will as undutiful, because he was disregarded therein for no just reason. 1. But since you say that she died at

[77] = C.Th. 7.18.14; combine with C.Th. 7.18.13.

[78] See D. 5.2.

[79] Blume: "The right of possession of an inheritance granted by the Praetor ordinarily carried with it the right to enforce actual possession by an interdict. C. 8.2. In the instant case, however, the right was granted merely so as to enable the party to commence the complaint. D. 5.2.8 pr."

pietatis emendanda est. quare filio tuo, cui nihil praeter maternum fatum imputari potest, perinde virilem portionem tribuendam esse censemus, ac si omnes filios heredes instituisset. 2. Sin autem heredes scripti extranei erant, tunc de inofficioso testamento actionem instituere non prohibetur.

PP. VIII k. Iul. Laterano et Rufino conss.

[4] Idem AA. Stotericho et aliis. Cum ex causa fideicommissi secundum decretum praetoris in libertate morati sitis, filios etiam susceperitis, quamvis postea domini vestri testamentum inofficiosum sit pronuntiatum agente filio, non est aequum fieri vobis libertatis quaestionem.

PP. VI id. Mart. Antonino III et Geta II conss.

[5] Imp. Antoninus A. Aelio. Si pater tuus post litem contestatam vel postquam propositum habuisset inofficiosum fratris testamentum dicere te herede relicto decessit, causam coeptam vel quocumque modo illi placitam exsequi non prohiberis.

PP. prid. non. Oct. Gentiano et Basso conss.

[6] Idem A. Ingenuo. Cum quaeritur, an filii de inofficioso patris testamento possint dicere, si quartam bonorum mortis tempore testator reliquit, inspicitur.

PP. VII k. Iul. Romae duobus Aspris conss.

[7] Idem A. Secundino. Neptem defuncti actione de inofficioso testamento, quamvis pater eius emancipatus fuerat defunctus, experiri posse ignorare non debes.

PP. VI k. Iul. Romae Laeto II et Cereale conss.

[8] Idem A. Florentino. pr. Parentibus arbitrium dividendae hereditatis inter liberos adimendum non est, dum non minus, qui pietatis sibi conscius est, partis quae intestato defuncto potuit ad eum pertinere quarta childbirth, the injustice of this sudden calamity is to be remedied by assuming that she intended to fulfill her duty as a mother. Therefore let an equal share be assigned to your son, against whom only maternal fate can have acted, as though she had designated all her sons as heirs. 2. If the designated heirs are strangers, then the son is not forbidden from commencing an action to set aside her undutiful will (in its entirety).

[v] inofficioso testamento

Posted June 24, in the consulship of Lateranus and Rufinus (197).

[4] The same Augusti to Soterichus and others. Since, pursuant to a testamentary trust, you lived in freedom according to a decree of the Praetor, and also gave birth to sons, although the will of your master was afterwards pronounced undutiful in an action brought by his son, it would be unjust for there to be an examination of your freedom.

Posted March 10, in the consulship of Antoninus, for the third time, and Geta, for the second time (208).

[5] Emperor ANTONINUS Augustus to Aelius. If your father died after joinder of issue or after he had showed cause to have his brother's will declared undutiful, and he left you as his heir, you are not prohibited from bringing to a conclusion the suit that was commenced, or in any manner determined by him to be commenced.

Posted October 6, in the consulship of Gentianus and Bassus (211).

[6][80] The same Augustus to Ingenuus. When the question is brought as to whether sons may bring a complaint to set a father's will aside as undutiful, it is considered whether the testator left a fourth part of the property that he had at the time of his death.[81]

Posted June 25, in the consulship of the two Aspri (212).

[7] The same Augustus to Secundinus. You should know that the granddaughter of the decedent may bring a complaint to set aside a will as undutiful, even though her father, who had been emancipated, had died.

Posted June 26, at Rome, in the consulship of Laetus, for the second time, and Cerealis (215).

[8][82] The same Augustus to Florentinus. pr. The choice of parents to divide the inheritance among their children must not be taken away, provided that a child, conscious of filial devotion (pietas), receives under the will of the parent

[80] Perhaps to be joined with C. Greg. Visig. 5.1.

[81] Blume: "Under law 30 of this title, if part, but not all, of the legal or birthright portion was left, only an action to supplement was given. Novel 18 increased this portion."

[82] Combine with C. 6.30.2.

ex iudicio parentis obtineat. 1. Qui autem agnovit iudicium defuncti eo, quod debitum paternum pro hereditaria parte persolvit vel alio legitimo modo, etiamsi minus quam ei debebatur relictum est, si is maior viginti quinque annis est, accusare ut inofficiosam voluntatem patris quam probavit non potest.

PP. VII id. Febr. Maximo II et Aeliano conss.

[9] Idem A. Romanae. De inofficioso testamento militis vel iure militari vel civili facto vel centurionis vel tribuni numeri nec filios posse queri ius certum est.

PP. id. Mai. Maximo II et Aeliano conss.

[10] Idem A. Quintiliano. Si heredum Quintiani, quem patrem tuum esse dicis, adversus quos de inofficioso testamento acturus eras, iure successionis bona ad fiscum pertinent, vel ipsius Quintiani bona utpote vacantia fiscus tenet, causam apud procuratorem meum agere potes.

PP. II id. Aug. Maximo II et Aeliano conss.

[11] Idem A. Ingenuo. In harenam non damnato, sed sua sponte harenario constituto legitimae successiones integrae sunt, sicuti civitas et libertas manet. sed si testamentum parens eius fecit, neque de inofficioso testamento accusatio neque bonorum possessio ei competit: nam talem filium merito quis indignum sua successione iudicat, nisi et ipse similis condicionis est.

PP. IIII k. Ian. Iuliano et Crispino conss.

[12] Idem A. Liciniano et Diogeniano. Si pater puellae, cuius vos curatores esse dicitis, filio ex semisse, ipsa autem ex triente et uxore ex reliquo sextante scriptis heredibus, fidei filiorum commisit, ut, si quis eorum intra viginti quinque annos aetatis decederet, superstitibus portionem suam restitueret, praeterea uxori, ut id, quod ex causa hereditatis ad eam pervenisset, filiis post mortem suam restitueret, fideicommisit, calumniosam inofficiosi actionem adversus iustum iudicium testatoris instituere non debetis, cum ex huiusmodi a fourth of the amount which he could have received in case of intestacy. 1. A child over 25 years of age, however, who has ratified the action of the deceased by paying the paternal debt in proportion to his inheritance or by some other lawful method, although he received less than his birthright portion, cannot question as undutiful his father's wishes, which he approved.

Posted February 7, in the consulship of Maximus, for the second time, and Aelianus (223).

[9] The same Augustus to Romana. The law is certain that sons cannot bring a complaint concerning undutiful wills of a soldier or of a centurion or tribune of a division of an army, whether the will is executed according to military or civil law.

Posted May 15, in the consulship of Maximus, for the second time, and Aelianus (223).

[10] The same Augustus to Quintilianus. If the property of the heirs of Quintianus – he was the man against whom you intended to bring an action to set aside the will of the deceased man claimed by you as your father – falls to the Treasury by right of succession, or if the Treasury holds the property of Quintianus himself as heirless (by escheat), you may commence the action before my procurator.

Posted August 12, in the consulship of Maximus, for the second time, and Aelianus (223).

[11] The same Augustus to Ingenuus. A person who is not condemned to the arena, but is established as a gladiator voluntarily, retains his legal rights of succession, as well as his citizenship and freedom. But if his parent made a will (that disinherits him), he can neither bring a complaint concerning an undutiful will, nor may he be granted the right of possession of the inheritance (against the will); for a testator may rightly consider such a son as unworthy of inheriting from him, unless he himself occupies the same status.

Posted December 29, in the consulship of Julian and Crispinus (224).

[12] The same Augustus to Licinius and Diogenianus. If the father of the girl, whose curatores you claim to be, left half of his property to his son, one-third to his daughter, and the remaining one-sixth to his wife, and requested through his will that if either of said children should die before reaching the age of 25 years, the portion of such deceased child should belong to the others, and also requested that the property which thanks to the inheritance should come to his widow, should, after her death, belong to the children, then you should not bring against (such) a just will the disparaging action to set the will aside fideicommissaria restitutione tam matris quam fratris eius portio ad eam poterat pervenire.

PP. non. Dec. Alexandro A. III et Dione conss.

[13] Imp. Gordianus A. Prisciano. Cum duobus heredibus institutis, uno ex quinque, altero ex septem unciis, adversus eum qui ex septem unciis heres scriptus fuerat iusta querella contendisse, ab altero autem victum fuisse adlegas, pro ea parte, qua resolutum est testamentum, cum iure intestati qui obtinuit succedat, neque legata neque fideicommissa debentur, quamvis libertates et directae competant et fideicommissariae praestari debeant.

PP. III k. Febr. Gordiano A. et Aviola conss.

[14] Idem A. Prisco. Eum, qui inofficiosi querellam delatam non tenuit, a falsi accusatione non submoveri placuit. idem observatur et si e contrario falsi crimine instituto victus postea de inofficioso actionem exercere maluerit.

PP. VI k. Dec. Gordiano A. et Aviola conss.

[15] Imp. Philippus A. et Philippus C. Aphrodisiae. Filiam praeteritam a matre ad successionem eius citra inofficiosi querellam adspirare non posse explorati iuris est.

PP. V k. Aug. Philippo A. et Titiano conss.

[16] Impp. Valerianus et Gallienus AA. et Valerianus nob. C. Theodotae. Contra maiores viginti quinque annorum duplicem actionem inferentes, primam, quasi testamentum non iure sit perfectum, alteram, quasi inofficiosum, licet iure perfectum, praescriptio ex prioris iudicii mora quinquennalis temporis non nascitur, quae officere non cessantibus non potest.

PP. id. Aug. Tusco et Basso conss.

[17] Impp. Carinus et Numerianus AA. Florae. Cum filium tuum te praeterita sororem heredem instituisse proponas, inofficiosi querellam apud praesidem provinciae persequi potes.

PP. prid. id. Febr. Carino II et Numeriano AA. conss.

as undutiful, since by reason of such testamentary trusts the portion of the mother as well as that of the brother may become the property of the daughter.

Posted December 5, in the consulship of Alexander Augustus, for the third time, and Dio (229).

[13] Emperor GORDIAN Augustus to Priscianus. When two heirs are named in the will, one receiving five-twelfths, the other seven-twelfths of the property, and you say that you prevailed in your complaint against the one receiving seven-twelfths, but were beaten by the one receiving five-twelfths, then neither legacies nor trusts are good against the portion as to which the will was annulled, since he who wins the suit inherits by the law of intestacy. But direct manumissions are valid and those given by way of trust must be made.

Posted January 30, in the consulship of Gordian Augustus and Aviola (239).

[14] The same Augustus to Priscus. It has been determined that a person who fails to win a suit to set a will aside as undutiful is not prohibited from presenting an allegation of forgery. The same holds true if, on the other hand, a man fails in an allegation he has brought for forgery and afterwards prefers to bring an action to have the will set aside as undutiful.

Posted November 26, in the consulship of Gordian Augustus and Aviola (239).

[15] Emperor PHILIP Augustus and PHILIP Caesar to Aphrodisia. It is a matter of existing law that a daughter, overlooked in a mother's will, cannot succeed to the property without a complaint to have the will set aside as undutiful.

Posted July 28, in the consulship of Philip Augustus and Titianus (245).

[16] Emperors VALERIAN and GALLIENUS Augusti and the noble Caesar VALERIAN to Theodota. When persons over 25 years of age bring two actions, one that the will has not been legally executed, the other that the will, though legally executed, is invalid because undutiful, the prescription of a five-year period (for complaints to have a will declared undutiful) does not apply when the delay is caused by the first action, since said prescription cannot operate against those who do not cease from their demands.

Posted August 13, in the consulship of Tuscus and Bassus (258).

[17] Emperors CARINUS and NUMERIAN Augusti to Flora. Since you say that your son has overlooked you in his will and has named his sister as his heir, you can bring an action before the governor to have the will set aside as undutiful.

Posted February 12, in the consulship of Carinus, for the second time, and Numerianus, Augusti (284).

[18] Impp. Diocletianus et Maximianus AA. Faustinae. Cum te pietatis religionem non violasse, sed mariti coniugium quod fueras sortita distrahere noluisse ac propterea offensum atque iratum patrem ad exheredationis notam prolapsum esse dicas, inofficiosi testamenti querellam inferre non vetaberis.

PP. Nicomediae XVI k. Mart. Maximo II et Aquilino conss.

[19] Idem AA. Apollinari. Si filia tua turpiter et cum flagitiosa foeditate vivit, ut a successione tua eam excludendam putes, si non inconsulto calore, sed ex meritis eius ad id odium incitatus es, postremi iudicii liberum arbitrium habebis.

D. XV k. Iul. Sirmi ipsis V et IIII AA. conss.

[20] Idem AA. et CC. Sabiniano. Filia in orbitate patris relicta cum marito, cui matre volente nupsit, colens concordiam iustas offensionis post eiusdem matris paenitentiam causas non praestat nec ex momentariis voluntatibus matris nupta atque vidua esse iure compellitur.

D. non. Ian. Sirmi CC. conss.

[21] Idem AA. et CC. Alexandro. Fratris vel sororis filii, patrui vel avunculi, amitae etiam et materterae testamentum inofficiosum frustra dicunt, cum nemo eorum qui ex transversa linea veniunt exceptis fratre et sorore ad inofficiosi querellam admittatur. de falso sane per accusationem criminis queri non prohibentur.

D. VI id. Febr. CC. conss.

[22] Idem AA. et CC. Statillae. pr. Si maritus tuus facto testamento te quidem ex asse scripsit heredem, filia autem quam habuit in potestate exheredata facta minime probetur nihilque ei relictum est neque iustas causas offensae praestitisse convincatur, eam de inofficioso testamento patris querentem totam hereditatem obtinere posse non ambigitur. 1. Quod si iam obtinuit vel postea vincat, quodcumque maritus mortis suae tempore debuisse tibi perhibetur, idem ab ea reddi oportet.

D. id. Febr. Sirmi CC. conss.

[18] Emperors Diocletian and Maximian Augusti to Faustina. Since you say that you did not violate your familial duty (pietatis religio), but that you were simply unwilling to dissolve the marriage entered into with your husband, because of which your offended and irate father stooped to disgracing you through disinheritance, you will not be prevented from bringing a complaint to have the will set aside as undutiful.

Posted February 14, at Nicomedia, in the consulship of Maximus, for the second time, and Aquilinus (286).

[19] The same Augusti to Apollinaris. If your daughter lives dishonestly and in shameful alliance, so that you feel that she should be excluded from inheriting from you, and if you have not been incited to that odious step by inconsiderate passion, but by her just deserts, you are at liberty to make your last will as you wish.

Given June 17, at Sirmium, in the consulship of Diocletian, for the fifth time, and Maximian, for the fourth time, Augusti (293).[83]

[20][84] The same Augusti and the Caesars to Sabinianus. A daughter bereft of her father, who marries a man with the consent of her mother, and lives in harmony with him, gives no just cause of offense if her mother afterwards regrets the marriage, and she cannot rightly be compelled to be married or be a widow according to the momentary caprice of her mother.

Given January 5, at Sirmium, in the consulship of the Caesars (294).

[21] The same Augusti and Caesars to Alexander. In vain the children of a brother or sister attack as undutiful the will of a paternal or maternal uncle and of a paternal or maternal aunt, since none of those who come from the collateral line, except brothers and sisters, are permitted to bring such complaint. Of course, they are not forbidden to complain of forgery by making an accusation of that crime.

Given February 8, in the consulship of the Caesars (294).

[22] The same Augusti and Caesars to Statilla. pr. If your husband named you (his wife) as his sole heir in his will, but by means of disinheritance showed disapproval of the daughter whom he had in his power, and if nothing was left her, and she is not shown to have given just cause for offense, then there is no doubt that she can obtain the whole estate in a complaint to have the will of her father set aside as undutiful. 1. But if she has already obtained it, or is hereafter awarded it, she must return to you whatever is shown to have been owing to you by your husband at the time of his death.[85]

Given February 13, at Sirmium, in the consulship of the Caesars (294).

[83] Mommsen gives December 18, 290.

[84] Combine with C. 5.12.17.

[85] See also C. 3.28.13; the daughter inherits on the rules of intestacy.

[23] Idem AA. et CC. Philippae. Testamenti factionem per testationem vos interdixisse matri profitentes iustitiam offensae manifeste testamini.
D. v id. Sept. CC. conss.

[24] Idem AA. et CC. Successo. Testamentum militis filii familias in castrensi peculio factum neque a patre neque a liberis eius per inofficiosi querellam rescindi potest.
D. III non. Dec. Nicomediae CC. conss.

[25] Idem AA. et CC. Menodoto. Filiis matrem, quae de mariti moribus secus suspicetur, ita posse consulere iure compertum est, ut eos sub hac condicione instituat heredes, si a patre emancipati fuerint, atque eo pacto secundum tabulas bonorum possessionem patrem cum re accipere non videri, qui condicioni minime obtemperavit, neque ei nomine filiorum inofficiosi eo modo actionem posse competere, quibus nullam iniuriam fecerit mater, sed potius putaverit providendum, restituere debet.
D. IIII non. Iul. Antiochiae Titiano et Nepotiano conss.

[26] Idem AA. et CC. Serapioni suo salutem. Ex tribus unciis herede instituto filio intra pubertatis annos directam non inutiliter a patre fieri substitutionem certum est.
D. V k. Sept. Nicomediae Diocletiano VIIII et Maximiano VIII AA. conss.

[27] Imp. Constantinus A. ad Lucrium Verinum. Fratres vel sorores uterini ab inofficiosi actione contra testamentum fratris vel sororis penitus arceantur: consanguinei autem durante vel non agnatione contra testamentum fratris sui vel sororis de inofficioso quaestionem movere possunt, si scripti heredes infamiae vel turpitudinis vel levis notae macula adsparguntur vel liberti, qui perperam et non bene merentes

[23] The same Augusti and Caesars to Philippa. You testify plainly that you gave just offense to your mother when you admit that before witnesses you forbade her to make a will.[86]

Given September 9, in the consulship of the Caesars (294).

[24] The same Augusti and the Caesars to Successus. The will of a son under paternal power who is a soldier, which disposes of the property he obtained in military service, cannot be annulled either by his father or by his children in a complaint to have the will declared undutiful.

Given December 3, at Nicomedia, in the consulship of the Caesars (294).

[25] The same Augusti and Caesars to Menodotus. It has been ascertained by law that a mother who looks with disfavor on the morals of her husband can rightly look after the interests of her children by designating them as her heirs upon condition that they shall be emancipated by their father. Thus a father who fails to comply with this condition seems not to have an effective right to possess the inheritance in accordance with the provisions of the will (secundum tabulas), nor in such case can he bring a complaint to have the will declared undutiful in the name of the children to whom the mother did no wrong, but for whom she rather wanted to provide properly.

Given July 4, at Antioch, in the consulship of Titianus and Nepotianus (301).

[26] The same Augusti and the Caesars to their Serapio, greetings. It is certain that a father who appoints his son as heir to three-twelfths of his estate may validly provide for direct substitution in case the son should die while under the age of puberty.[87]

Given August 28, at Nicomedia, in the consulship of Diocletian, for the ninth time, and Maximian, for the eighth time, Augusti (304).

[27][88] Emperor CONSTANTINE Augustus to Lucrius Verinus. Brothers and sisters who have the same mother only and not the same father are entirely excluded from the complaint of an undutiful will of their half-brothers or half-sisters. Those, however, who have the same father, can, during or after the continuance of the agnatic relationship, bring an action to annul the will of a brother or a sister as undutiful if the designated heirs are infamous, guilty of moral turpitude, or marked by some smaller stain, or if they are freedmen who have been appointed as heirs wrongly and without deserving it, having [86] Blume: "Persons who hindered another from making a will were considered unworthy persons to inherit from such other." See C. 6.34.

maximisque beneficiis suum patronum adsecuti instituti sunt, excepto servo necessario herede instituto.

D. id. April. Sirmio Constantino A. v et Licinio C. conss.

[28] Imp. Constantinus A. ad Claudium praesidem Daciae. pr. Liberi de inofficioso querellam contra testamentum parentum moventes probationes debent praestare, quod obsequium debitum iugiter, prout ipsius naturae religio flagitabat, parentibus adhibuerunt, nisi scripti heredes ostendere maluerint ingratos liberos contra parentes extitisse. 1. Sin autem mater contra filii testamentum inofficiosi actionem instituat, inquiri diligenter iubemus, utrum filius nulla ex iusta causa laesus matrem novissima laeserit voluntate nec luctuosam ei et legitimam reliquerit portionem, ut testamento remoto matri successio deferatur. 2. Si tamen mater inhonestis factis atque indecentibus machinationibus filium forte obsedit insidiisque eum vel clandestinis vel manifestis appetiit vel inimicis eius suas amicitias copulavit atque in aliis sic versata est, ut inimica eius potius quam mater crederetur, ut hoc probato invita etiam adquiescat filii voluntati.

D. viii id. Febr. Serdicae Crispo ii et Constantino ii CC. conss.

[29] Imp. Zeno A. Sebastiano pp. pr. Quoniam novella constitutio divi Leonis ante nuptias donationem a filio conferri ad similitudinem dotis quae a filia confertur praecepit, etiam ante nuptias donationem filio in quartam praecipimus imputari. 1. Eodemque modo cum mater pro filia dotem vel pro filio ante nuptias donationem vel avus paternus aut maternus vel avia paterna aut materna pro sua nepte vel pro suo nepote vel proavus itidem vel proavia paterna aut materna pro sua pronepte vel pro suo pronepote dederit, non tantum eandem dotem vel donationem conferri, verum etiam in quartam partem ad excludendam inofficiosi overborne their patrons with heavy favors, unless it be a case where a slave is appointed as a necessary heir (necessarius heres).

Given April 13, at Sirmium, in the consulship of Constantine Augustus, for the fifth time, and the Caesar Licinius (319).

[28][89] The same Augustus to Claudius, governor of Dacia. pr. Children who bring a complaint to set aside a parent's will as undutiful should prove that they have constantly exhibited toward parents that filial duty (obsequium) which the scruples of nature demand, unless the heirs designated in the will prefer to prove them to have been ungrateful children to their parents. 1. But if a mother brings such a complaint in relation to the will of a son, We direct you to make careful inquiry whether the latter offended his mother in his last will without just reason and failed to leave her the legal portion intended for her consolation, so that, if it is true, the will should be set aside and the succession awarded to the mother. 2. If, however, the mother, perchance, committed dishonorable acts and was guilty of evil machinations against her son, sought to entrap him secretly or openly, gave her friendship to his enemies, and did other things by reason of which she might be considered an enemy rather than a mother, then she must, on proof thereof, acquiesce even unwillingly in the wishes of her son.

Given February 6, at Serdica, in the consulship of Crispus, for the second time, and Constantine, for the second time, Caesars (321).

[29] Emperor Zeno Augustus to Sebastianus, Praetorian Prefect. pr. Since a recent novel of Leo of blessed memory[90] directs that a prenuptial gift (donatio ante nuptias) shall be given as a contribution by a son in the same manner as a dowry is given as a contribution by a daughter, We also direct that this prenuptial gift shall be charged to the son as part of his fourth (which he is entitled to receive from his father's estate). 1. Likewise, when a mother gives a dowry for a daughter or a prenuptial gift for a son, or when such gifts are made by a paternal or maternal grandfather or grandmother for a granddaughter or grandson, or by a paternal or maternal great-grandfather or great-grandmother for a great-granddaughter or great-grandson, not only do We want such a dowry or gift to be given as a contribution, but the dowry as well as the prenuptial gift shall also be charged to the fourth (the legal portion) so as to exclude any [87] This rescript is referring to pupillary substitution.

[88] = C.Th. 2.19.1 (319) and 3 (332).

[89] = C.Th. 2.19.2. The SC Tertullianum (c. 129 ce) allowed a mother to inherit from her children on intestacy.

[90] C. 6.20.17. This constitution describes "hotchpot" (collatio), whereby heirs notionally "contribute" certain personal assets to a decedent's estate before the shares in it are allocated. See C. 6.20.

querellam tam dotem datam quam ante nuptias donationem praefato modo volumus imputari, si ex substantia eius profecta sit, cuius de hereditate agitur.

D. k. Mai. ipso A. II conss.

[30] Imp. Iustinianus A. Menae pp. pr. Omnimodo testatorum voluntatibus prospicientes magnam et innumerabilem occasionem subvertendae eorum dispositionis amputare censemus et in certis casibus, in quibus de inofficiosis defunctorum testamentis vel alio modo subvertendis moveri solebat actio, certa et statuta lege tam mortuis consulere quam liberis eorum vel aliis personis, quibus eadem actio competere poterat: ut, sive adiciatur testamento de implenda legitima portione sive non, firmum quidem testamentum sit, liceat vero his personis, quae testamentum quasi inofficiosum vel alio modo subvertendum queri poterant, id quod minus portione legitima sibi relictum est ad implendam eam sine ullo gravamine vel mora exigere, si tamen non ingrati legitimis modis arguantur, cum eos scilicet ingratos circa se fuisse testator edixit: nam si nullam eorum quasi ingratorum fecerit mentionem, non licebit eius heredibus ingratos eos nominare et huiusmodi quaestionem introducere. et haec quidem de his personis statuimus, quarum mentionem testantes fecerint et aliquam eis quantitatem in hereditate vel legato vel fideicommisso, licet minorem legitima portione, reliquerint.

1. Sin vero vel praeterierint aliquam eorum personam iam natam vel ante testamentum quidem conceptam, adhuc vero in ventre constitutam, vel exheredatione vel alia eorum mentione facta nihil eis penitus reliquerint, tunc vetera iura locum habere sancimus, nullam ex praesenti promulgatione novationem vel permutationem acceptura.

2. Imputari vero filiis aliisque personis, quae dudum ad inofficiosi testamenti querellam vocabantur, in legitimam portionem et illa volumus, quae occasione militiae ex pecuniis mortui eisdem personis adquisitae posse lucrari eas manifestum est, eo quod talis sit militia, ut vendatur vel mortuo militante certa pecunia ad eius heredes perveniat, ita tamen, ut ille gradus eiusdem militiae inspiciatur, quem morte testatoris militans obtinet, ut tanta ei pecunia in legitimam portionem computetur, complaint of undutifulness, if it has come from the property of the person concerning whose inheritance a suit is brought.

Given May 1, in the consulship of the Augustus himself, for the second time (479).

[30][91] Emperor JUSTINIAN Augustus to Menas, Praetorian Prefect. pr. Seeking in every way to uphold the last wishes of testators, We think that We should demolish the main cause that gives an opportunity in numberless cases for nullifying them, and by fixed and ordained law to look after the interests of decedents and their descendants and other persons legally able to sue in certain cases in which an action was usually brought to have a will declared as undutiful or to have it overturned in some other manner. So that whether a provision for supplementing the birthright portion is added to a will or not, it shall remain in force, but the persons who could heretofore complain of an undutiful will or could overturn it in some manner may without hindrance and immediately demand that the legal portion be supplied to the extent that the provisions of the will are deficient therein, provided, however, that they are not, by legal proof, shown to be ungrateful persons when the testator has accused them of ingratitude towards him in his will – for if he makes no mention of such ingratitude, his appointed heirs cannot claim that they were ungrateful and cannot bring that matter into question. These provisions are made for persons whom testators have mentioned in the will, and to whom some property has been left, either as an inheritance, legacy, or testamentary trust, but in an amount which is less than the legal portion.

1. If testators, however, have entirely disregarded such a person, whether already born or conceived before the making of the will although still in the mother's womb, and have left them absolutely no property either by disinheriting them or otherwise mentioning them, then We decree that the ancient laws shall remain in full force, without incurring any addition or alteration as a result of the present provisions.

2. In the case of sons and other persons who have long been permitted to bring a complaint concerning undutiful wills, We wish that the sums paid for them by a testator for the purchase of a governmental position, which is clearly a gain to the recipient, that is to say, a position which may be sold or which entitles the heirs of the holder, upon his death, to a certain sum of money, shall be counted as part of the legal portions of these sons or other persons. In such case, however, that grade only shall be considered which the official has at the time of the death of the testator, and the person who obtained his position by means of the testator's money shall be charged only with that amount, as part quantam dari statutum est, si in eo gradu mortuus esset is, qui militiam ex pecuniis testatoris adeptus est.

[91] Combine with C. 6.23.24 and 6.41.1. In this and subsequent constitutions, Justinian clears up controversies that had lingered from classical jurisprudence.

3. Exceptis solis viris spectabilibus silentiariis sacri nostri palatii, quibus praestita iam specialia beneficia tam de aliis capitulis quam de pecuniis super memorata militia a parentibus eorum datis, ne in legitimam portionem eis computentur, rata esse praecipimus: in ceteris vero personis praedictam observationem tenere volumus.

D. k. Iun. Constantinopoli Iustiniano A. II cons.

[31] Idem A. Menae pp. Quae nuper ad testamenta conservanda nec facile retractanda sanximus, ut ratione Falcidiae minime illis personis derelicta, quae ad inofficiosi testamenti querellam ex prioribus vocabantur legibus, non periclitentur testamenta, sed quod deest legitimae portioni, id est quartae parti ab intestato successionis, tantum repleatur, exceptis illis quibus nihil in testamento derelictum est, in quibus prisca iura illibata servavimus, etiam ad testamenta sine scriptis facienda locum habere sancimus.

D. III id. Dec. Constantinopoli dn. Iustiniano pp. A. II cons.

[32] Idem A. Menae pp. Quoniam in prioribus sanctionibus illud statuimus, ut, si quid minus legitima portione his derelictum sit, qui ex antiquis legibus de inofficioso testamento actionem movere poterant, hoc repleatur nec occasione minoris quantitatis testamentum rescindatur, hoc in praesenti addendum esse censemus, ut, si condicionibus quibusdam vel dilationibus aut aliqua dispositione moram vel modum vel aliud gravamen introducente eorum iura, qui ad memoratam actionem vocabantur, minuta esse videantur, ipsa condicio vel dilatio vel alia dispositio moram vel quodcumque onus introducens tollatur et ita res procedat, quasi nihil eorum testamento additum esset.

D. II k. April. Constantinopoli Decio vc. cons.

of his legal portion, which his heirs would receive, under the law, in case he died in that grade.

3. Excepted herefrom only are the watchmen of the imperial palace, viri spectabiles. The special benefits already conferred on them in connection with other things, as well as money given them by their parents in connection with their position, shall remain in force, so that such money shall not be charged to them as part of their legal portion. But the foregoing provisions We wish to apply to all other persons.

Given June 1, at Constantinople, in the consulship of Justinian Augustus, for the second time (528).

[31][92] The same Augustus to Menas, Praetorian Prefect. The provisions recently made concerning upholding wills and not overturning them easily, shall apply also to wills made without writing – (namely) that wills should not be held invalid by reason of not leaving the Falcidian portion to persons who, under former laws, were authorized to bring complaint to have wills set aside as undutiful; rather, only the amount by which the legal portion, that is the fourth of the amount which an heir would receive upon intestacy, was deficient should be supplied, excepting from the law, however, persons to whom nothing is left and as to whom the ancient laws shall remain undisturbed.

Given December 11, at Constantinople, in the consulship of Our Lord Justinian, Ever Augustus, for the second time (528).

[32] The same Augustus to Menas, Praetorian Prefect. Since We decided in former ordinances[93] that if less than the legal portion is left to those who by virtue of ancient laws could bring an action to set aside a will as undutiful, this deficiency should be compensated and not furnish the occasion for annulling such a will, We think that We should add at present that if the rights of heirs who were permitted to bring such actions should appear to be diminished by reason of certain conditions, deferments, or other provisions involving conditions, delays, or other burden, such condition, deferment, or other provisions involving any delay or burden whatsoever shall be void, and the matter shall proceed as though none of these had been added to the will.

Given March 31, at Constantinople, in the consulship of the vir clarissimus Decius (529).

[92] Combine with C. 6.23.26. This constitution alludes to the one just before. It also incorrectly describes the fourth portion as the Falcidian.

[93] 30 and 31 above.

[33] Idem A. Demostheni pp. pr. Si quis suo testamento maximam quidem portionem libero derelinquat, minusculam autem alii vel aliis de sua stirpe progenitis, ipsam tamen legitimam sive in hereditate vel in legato vel in fideicommisso, ut non possit locus de inofficiosi testamenti[v] querellae fieri, et ille quidem, qui ex parvulo genitoris sui consequitur substantiam, eam suscipere maluerit, qui autem ex maiore parte eam amplexus est, sive unus vel si plures sint, non statim et sine contentioso proposito vel ulla mora eam restituere voluerit, sed expectato iudiciorum strepitu et multis variisque certaminibus habitis post longum tempus ex sententia iudicis vix eam reddiderit, crudelitatem eius competenti poena adgredimur, ut, si haec fuerint subsecuta, non tantum in quod testator voluit eum restituere condemnetur, sed etiam aliam tertiam partem quantitatis, quae fuerat in testamento derelicta, modis omnibus reddere, ut avaritia eius legitimis ictibus feriatur: aliis omnibus, quae in eodem testamento vel elogio scripta sunt, pro sui tenore ad effectum perducendis.

1. Legis autem veteris iniquitatem tollentes, ut non diutius erubescat posita, quam Iulius Paulus in suis scripsit quaestionibus, hanc piissimam adgredimur sanctionem. cum enim infantem suum non posse ingratum a matre sua vocari scripsit neque propter hoc ab ultima suae matris hereditate repelli, nisi hoc odio sui fecerit mariti, ex quo infans progenitus est, hoc iniquum iudicantes, ut alieno odio alius praegravetur, penitus delendum esse sancimus et huiusmodi causam liberis non tantum infantibus, sed etiam quamcumque aetatem agentibus opponi minime concedimus, cum possit sub condicione emancipationis hereditatem suam mater filio derelinquens et patris odium punire et iuri filii sui minime nocere nec suam naturam fallere. satis enim crudele nobis esse videtur eum qui non sentit ingratum existimari.

D. XV k. Oct. Chalcedone Decio vc. cons.

[34] Idem A. Iohanni pp. pr. Si quis filium suum exheredatum fecerit alio scripto herede, reliquerit autem ex eo nepotem vel vivum vel in ventre nurus suae constitutum, deliberante vero scripto herede filius decesserit, nulla hereditatis petitione ex nomine de inofficioso constituta vel praeparata omne adiutorium nepotem dereliquit. nec enim pater nepoti aliquod ius, cum decesserit, contra patris sui testamentum dereliquit, quia postea et adita est ab extraneo hereditas et supervixit

[33][94] The same Augustus to Demosthenes, Praetorian Prefect. pr. If a person, by his will, leaves the greater part (of his estate) to one child, and a small part to another or others of his offspring – sufficient, however, to be the legal portion either as an inheritance, legacy, or testamentary trust, so that no complaint to have the will set aside as undutiful may be brought, and the person who receives the small portion from his progenitor decides to accept it, but the person receiving the larger portion – or all of them if more than one – fails to deliver the smaller portion immediately and without contention and delay, but awaits a courtroom confrontation, raises many and various contentions, and then after a long time only grudgingly delivers it pursuant to a judicial order, We shall meet his cruel conduct with proper punishment, so that he shall, if such events arise, be condemned to deliver not only the portion which the testator directed to be delivered, but also to return in any way possible one-third of such amount so left by the will in addition thereto, so that his avarice will meet with proper punishment; all other provisions in the testament or last will, however, must be carried into effect, according to the tenor thereof.

1. We also make the following just provision and eliminate by its roots an iniquity contained in the ancient law, so that the law need no longer blush by reason of a statement which Julius Paulus makes in his Questions. For when he wrote that an infant cannot be called ungrateful by its mother and cannot, therefore, be disinherited by its mother unless it is done through hatred of her husband who is the father of the child, We, considering it unjust that one person should be wronged on account of hatred for another, ordain that such a situation shall be entirely nullified and in no way permitted to be set up, not only concerning infants, but also concerning all children of whatever age, since the mother can leave the inheritance to the child upon condition that it is to be emancipated and can thus at the same time punish the hatred of the father, without hurting the right of her child and violating her own nature. For it appears cruel to Us that a child who does not feel so, should be considered ungrateful.

Given September 17, at Chalcedon, in the consulship of the vir clarissimus Decius (529).

[34] The same Augustus to John, Praetorian Prefect. pr. If a testator disinherited his son, designating someone else as heir, but left a grandson through that son either living or confirmed as being in his mother's womb, and the son died while the designated heir was deliberating (whether to enter upon the inheritance or not) but before an action for the inheritance on the ground of the will's undutifulness had been commenced or prepared, the grandson had avo pater eius, ut neque ex lege Vellaea possit in locum patris sui succedere et rescindere testamentum. et hoc nonnulli iuris consulti in medio proponentes inhumane reliquerunt.

[94] Combine with C. 5.9.10.

1. Sed nos, qui omnes subiectos nostros et filios et nepotes habere existimamus adfectione paterna et imitatione, secundum quod possibile est omnium commodo *pro*spicientes iubemus in tali specie eadem iura nepoti dari, quae filius habebat, et nisi praeparatio facta est ad inofficiosi querellam instituendam, tamen posse nepotem eandem causam proponere: et si non heres apertissimis probationibus ostenderit ingratum patrem nepotis circa testatorem fuisse, testamento remoto ab intestato eum vocari, nisi certa quantitas patri eius minor parte legitima relicta est: tunc etenim secundum novellam nostri numinis constitutionem repletio quartae partis nepoti superest, si qua patri eius competebat: et perfruatur nostro beneficio a vetustate quidem neglectus, a nostro autem vigore recreatus, nisi pater adhuc superstes vel repudiavit querellam vel quinquennium tacuit, scilicet post aditam hereditatem.

D. III k. Aug. Constantinopoli post consulatum Lampadii et Orestae vv. cc.

[35] Idem A. Iohanni pp. pr. Si quando talis concessio imperialis processerit, per quam libera testamenti factio conceditur, nihil aliud videri principem concedere, nisi ut habeat consuetam et legitimam testamenti factionem. neque enim credendum est Romanum principem qui iura tuetur huiusmodi verbo totam observationem testamentorum multis vigiliis excogitatam atque inventam velle everti.

(until now) no redress. Because the father of the grandson, when he died, left no right to his son to question the will of his father, because the designated heir entered upon the inheritance only subsequently, and because the father survived the grandfather, the grandson cannot, under the Vellaean law,[95] take the place of the father and annul the will. Some of the jurists have published on this subject but have left it in a crude shape.

1. But We, who think that all Our subjects have paternal affection for their sons, and a similar affection for their grandsons, and desirous as We are to look after the welfare of all as nearly as that is possible, order that in such a case the grandson shall have the same rights as the son, and even if no complaint of the will's undutifulness has been prepared, the grandson may nevertheless commence the same action. And unless the heir appointed by the will shows clearly that the father of the grandson was ungrateful toward the testator, the will shall be annulled and the grandson shall inherit as on intestacy, unless a certain amount, less than the legal portion, was left to the father; for in such a case, according to the recent constitution of Our Divine Majesty,[96] there is left to the grandson the right – if it was pertinent to his father – to have the fourth supplemented by other property to make up the legal portion; so that he, long neglected by the ancients, but provided for anew by Our living force, may enjoy Our benefaction, unless his father, then living, either refused to institute the complaint, or was silent for the period of five years, after the inheritance was entered upon.

Given July 30, at Constantinople, in the post-consulate of the viri clarissimi Lampadius and Orestes (531).[97]

[35][98] The same Augustus to John, Praetorian Prefect. pr. Whenever an imperial rescript is obtained by which freedom to make a will is granted, the Emperor is seen thereby to grant nothing more than the right of making it according to the customary and legal manner. For it is not to be thought that a Roman emperor, who preserves the laws, would wish by a pronouncement of this sort to overturn the entire formality, carefully thought out and realized during many vigils, of making wills.

[95] Blume: "The Vellaean law [more exactly, the Lex Iunia Vellaea of 28 CE] is discussed in D. 28.2.29. The law provided a method whereby descendants born after the will might be disinherited. In the foregoing case, the son had been disinherited, but the grandson evidently had not been, and should have been, in accordance with the Vellaean law, if the son had died before the death of the grandfather, because he would have occupied his father's place … But inasmuch as the son died after the death of the grandfather, no disinheritance under the Vellaean law was necessary."

[96] 30 above.

[97] Lounghis et al. date to July 29, 531.

[98] Combine with 36 below and C. 6.28.4.

1. Illud etiam sancimus, ut, si quis a patre certas res vel pecunias accepisset et pactus fuisset, quatenus de inofficiosi querella adversus testamentum paternum minime ab eo moveretur, et post obitum patris filius cognito paterno testamento non agnoverit eius iudicium, sed oppugnandum putaverit, vetere iurgio exploso huiusmodi pacto filium minime gravari secundum Papiniani responsum, in quo definivit meritis filios ad paterna obsequia provocandos quam pactionibus adstringendos. 1a. Sed hoc ita admittimus, nisi transactiones ad heredes paternos filius celebraverit, in quibus apertissime iudicium patris agnoverit.

2. Et generaliter definimus, quando pater minus legitima portione filio reliquerit vel aliquid dederit vel mortis causa donatione vel inter vivos sub ea condicione, ut haec inter vivos donatio in quartam ei computetur, si filius post obitum patris hoc quod relictum vel datum est simpliciter agnoverit, forte et securitatem heredibus fecerit quod ei relictum est accepisse, non adiciens nullam sibi superesse de repletione quaestionem, nullum filium sibi facere praeiudicium, sed legitimam partem repleri, nisi hoc specialiter sive in apocha sive in transactione scripserit vel pactus fuerit, quod contentus relicta vel data parte de eo quod deest nullam habet quaestionem: tunc etenim omni exclusa querella paternum amplecti compellitur iudicium.

3. Quae omnis sanctio suas radices extendat non solum ad filium vel filiam, sed etiam ad omnes personas, quae de inofficioso querellam contra mortuorum ultima elogia possunt movere.

D. k. Sept. Constantinopoli post consulatum Lampadii et Orestae vv. cc.

[36] Idem A. Iohanni pp. pr. Scimus ante constitutionem fecisse, qua cautum est, si pater minorem debita portionem filio suo reliquisset, omnimodo, etsi non adiciatur viri boni arbitratu repleri filio, attamen ipso iure inesse eandem repletionem. 1. Quaerebatur itaque, si quis rem donatam vel inter vivos vel mortis causa vel in testamento relictam agnoverit et pro parte sua habuerit, deinde eadem res evicta vel tota vel pro parte fuerit, an debeat ex nostra constitutione pars legitima post

1. We ordain, also, putting to an end an ancient dispute, that if any one had received and agreed to specified property or money from his father under an agreement not to bring a complaint to set aside the father's will as undutiful, and the son, after his father's death and after learning of his father's will, fails to acknowledge it as valid, but thinks of having it attacked, his (previous) agreement shall not hinder him, in accord with a response of Papinian, in which he says that duty toward fathers (paterna obsequia) must be instilled in sons by deserving acts rather than by making such agreements binding. 1a. But We hereby permit this measure only upon condition that the son has not settled with the heirs appointed in the will, through which he overtly ratified the paternal act.

2. And We provide, generally, that whenever a father has left less than the legal portion to his son, or has given him a gift in anticipation of death (donatio mortis causa), or as one between the living (donatio inter vivos) upon condition that such a gift between the living should be counted as part of his birthright portion, and if the son, after his father's death, merely receives what has been left or given to him, and has, perchance, given a receipt to the heirs that he has received what has been left to him, without adding that there is no question of his legal portion being supplemented, then he shall not be prejudiced. But his legal portion shall be supplemented unless he has specially acknowledged or agreed in a receipt or in a settlement that he is content with what has been left or given him and that there is no question of a deficiency due him; in that case indeed every complaint is barred and he is compelled to abide by his father's will.

3. This law extends its purview not to only to a son or daughter, but also to all other persons who are able to bring a complaint to set aside a will as undutiful.

Given September 1, at Constantinople, in the post-consulship of the viri clarissimi Lampadius and Orestes (531).

[36][99] The same Augustus to John, Praetorian Prefect. pr. We know that We earlier enacted a constitution providing that if a father should leave less than the legal portion to his son, then though it has not been stated that the deficiency should be supplied by the standards of an upright man, nevertheless that same compensation for such a deficiency is, in all cases, part of that very law. 1. Hence, it has been asked whether, if a person has acknowledged and accepted as his portion a gift between the living (inter vivos) or one in anticipation of death (mortis causa) or one made by will, but was then legally evicted from all or part thereof, the deficiency in the birthright portion should, after the eviction, be supplied according to Our constitution; or, if legacies, testamentary requests or evictionem suppleri: vel si ex lege Falcidia minuantur legata vel fideicommissa vel mortis causa donationes, debet tamen ex hoc casu supplementum introduci: ne, dum totam Falcidiam accipere heres nititur, etiam totum commodum hereditatis amittat.

[99] Combine with 35 above, and C. 6.28.4. The principium alludes to 30 above.

1a. Sancimus itaque in omnibus istis casibus, sive in totum evictio subsequatur sive in partem, emendari vitium et vel aliam rem vel pecunias restitui vel repletionem fieri, nulla Falcidia interveniente, ut, sive ab initio minus fuerit derelictum sive extrinsecus qualiscumque causa interveniens aliquod gravamen imponat vel in quantitate vel in tempore, hoc modis omnibus repleri et nostrum iuvamen purum filiis inferri. 1b. Repletionem autem fieri ex ipsa substantia patris, non si quid ex aliis causis filius lucratus est vel ex substitutione vel ex iure adcrescendi, puta usus fructus: humanitatis etenim gratia sancimus ea quidem omnia quasi iure adventicio eum lucrari, repletionem autem ex rebus substantiae fieri. 1c. Cum autem quis extraneo herede instituto filio suo restituere eum hereditatem suam, cum moriatur, disposuerit, vel in tempus certum restitutionem distulerit, quia nostra constitutio, quae antea posita est, omnem dilationem omnem moram censuit esse abstrahendam, ut quarta pars pura et mox filio restituatur, in huiusmodi specie quid faciendum sit, dubitabatur. 1d. Sancimus itaque quartae quidem partis *restitut*ionem iam nunc celebrari non expectata nec morte heredis nec temporis intervallo, reliquum autem, quod post legitimam portionem restat, tunc restitui, quando testator disposuit. 1e. Sic etenim filius suam habebit portionem integram et qualem leges et nostra constitutio definivit, et scriptus heres commodum quod ei testator dereliquit cum legitimo moderamine sentiet.

2. Illud praeterea sancimus, ut tempora de inofficiosi querellae ab adita hereditate secundum Ulpiani opinionem currant, Herennii Modestini sententia recusata, qui a morte testatoris ilico cursum de inofficioso querellae temporibus dabat, ut non liceat heredi quando voluerit adire, ne per huiusmodi tramitem iterum filius defraudetur debito naturali. 2a. Sancimus itaque, ubi testator decesserit alio scripto herede et speratur de inofficioso querella, necessitatem habere scriptum heredem, si quidem praesto est in eadem commanens provincia, intra sex mensuum spatium, sin autem seorsum utraque pars in diversis provinciis degit, tunc intra annale tantummodo spatium simili modo per continuum a morte testatoris numerandum omnimodo gifts in anticipation of death are diminished by reason of the Falcidian law, the deficiency should nevertheless also be supplied in such a case – lest while the heir is trying to receive the whole Falcidian fourth, he (the son) might lose all the benefit of his inheritance.

1a. We accordingly ordain that in all such cases, whether the withholding takes place as to all or part of the property, the loss shall be made up, and other property or money shall be supplied, or the deficiency shall be made up, without regard to the Falcidian law, so that whether less than the legal portion was left in the beginning or some outside intervening cause burdens the legal portion, either in quantity or by time (of delivery), all this shall be made up, and Our help (through the law) is extended to the sons without burdens attached thereto. 1b. We ordain that the deficiency shall be supplied, moreover, out of the property of the father, not out of the property which the son has acquired from any other source – either by reason of being substituted as heir for someone or by right of accrual, for instance, from usufruct; for We ordain, in the spirit of benevolence, that all these things shall be considered as outside gain, and the deficiency must be made good out of the principal of the property (of the father). 1c. In view of the fact that Our constitution previously enacted forbids all delay and provides that a fourth (the legal portion) shall be turned over to his son (the son of the deceased) without burden to him and quickly, it has been questioned what is to be done if a testator designates a stranger as his heir, but provides further that in case of the stranger's death, the inheritance shall be turned over to the son, or that this shall be done at a certain time. 1d. We accordingly ordain that the legal fourth shall be delivered immediately, without waiting for the death of the heir or the lapse of time, but that the remainder over and above such legal portion shall be delivered at the time the testator has directed. 1e. For thus the son will have his portion undiminished and as the laws and Our constitution have defined, and the designated heir will enjoy the benefaction left him by the testator within legal limits.

2. We also ordain that the time for commencing a complaint against an undutiful will shall run from the time of (the designated heir) entering upon the inheritance, in accordance with the opinion of Ulpian, but against that of Herennius Modestinus, who proposed that the time for the complaint would run from the death of the testator and that the designated heir may not enter upon the inheritance when he pleases and again through that process defraud the son out of the property naturally due to him. 2a. And so We ordain that when the testator has died, having appointed a stranger as heir, and the son is awaiting the time to bring a complaint to set the will aside as undutiful, the designated heir must, if he is present and living in the same province, within six months enter upon the inheritance or make known his sentiment to the contrary, or if both parties live in different provinces, do likewise within an adire huiusmodi hereditatem, vel manifestare suam sententiam, quod hereditatem minime admittit: expeditus etenim ita tractatus inducitur filio memoratam movere querellam: sin vero scriptus heres intra statuta tempora minime adierit, per officium quidem iudicis scriptum compelli hoc facere. 2b. In medio tamen, id est a morte quidem testatoris, ante aditam autem hereditatem, etsi decesserit filius, huiusmodi querellam, licet non se praeparaverit, ad suam posteritatem transmittet, ad extraneos vero heredes tunc tantummodo, quando antiquis libris insertam faciat praeparationem.

D. k. Sept. Constantinopoli post consulatum Lampadii et Orestae vv. cc.

[37] Idem A. Iohanni pp. pr. Cum antiquis legibus declaratum est, ut militaria testamenta de inofficioso querellam evadant, multi alii casus emergunt, in quibus dubitationes exortas sopiri necesse est. 1. In castrensibus etenim peculiis introducta est et alia subdivisio et peculii triplex invenitur causa. vel enim paganum est peculium vel castrense vel quod medietatem inter utrumque obtinet, quod quasi castrense nuncupatur. 1a. In tali igitur peculio, quod quasi castrense appellatur, quibusdam personis licentia conceditur condere quidem testamenta, sed non quasi militibus quo voluerint modo, sed communi et licito et consueto ordine observando, quemadmodum constitutum fuerat in consulibus et praefectis legionum et praesidibus provinciarum et omnibus generaliter, qui in diversis dignitatibus vel administrationibus positi a nostra consequuntur manu vel ex publicis salariis quasdam largitates. 1b. Sed hae quidem personae testamenti faciendi habent potestatem in ipsis tamen tantummodo peculiis, quae iam enumerata sunt, id est quasi castrensibus. 1c. Sed et veterani, qui tempore quidem militiae sibi peculium adquisierunt, militiam autem deposuerunt, testari (licito tamen modo) non prohibentur.

1d. In his itaque omnibus quasi castrensibus peculiis dubitabatur, si contra huiusmodi testamenta de inofficioso querellam extendi oportet. 1e. Sed prior quaestio erat, si omnes qui quasi castrense peculium habent testari in hoc possint, quia non omnibus passim, sed quibusdam personis hoc privilegii loco concessum est: quia militibus quidem et veteranis testamenta facere in castrensi peculio undique concessum fuerat, sed militibus quidem in expeditione constitutis iure suo, veteranis autem iure communi: de aliis autem personis omnibus, quae non per speciale privilegium hoc acceperunt, si possint testari, dubitatum fuerat, ut puta viris disertissimis patronis causarum virisque devotissimis uninterrupted year from the death of the testator; thus the way will be opened for the son to commence his above-mentioned action. But if the designated heir fails to enter upon the inheritance within the time specified, he will be compelled to do so by the official staff of the judge. 2b. If the son dies in the meantime, that is, after the testator's death and before the inheritance is entered upon, such an action, though not prepared in the son's lifetime, he should pass on to his offspring; but in the case of heirs that are strangers, he may do so (only) when he has prepared for such an action according to the provisions of the ancient laws.

Given September 1, at Constantinople, in the post-consulate of the viri clarissimi Lampadius and Orestes (531).

[37][100] The same Augustus to John, Praetorian Prefect. pr. Since it is declared in ancient laws that military wills (testamenta militaria) are exempt from being attacked as undutiful, many cases have come up in which a doubt that has arisen must be settled. 1. For a subdivision had been added to military peculia, and there are in fact three kinds of peculium. It is either non-military or military, or – a class between the two – called quasi-military. 1a. As to the peculium called quasi-military, certain persons are permitted to make wills, not like soldiers in any manner they please, but in the ordinarily permitted and customary manner, as has been provided in the case of Consuls, Prefects of the Legions, governors, and all others who are placed in various ranks and offices and receive emoluments either at Our hands or from public salaries. 1b. Such persons may make testamentary disposition only of the peculium already mentioned, namely the quasi-military property. 1c. Veterans, too, who acquired peculium during the time of service, but who have left the service, are not forbidden to thus dispose of their property by a lawfully executed will.

1d. Now in these cases involving a quasi-military peculium doubts have arisen whether the complaint to set aside a will as undutiful should be permitted. 1e.[101] But a question to be answered first was whether all persons who have such a quasi-military peculium might thus dispose of it, since this privilege was not granted indiscriminately to everyone, but only to certain individuals. All soldiers and veterans had the right to dispose of their soldier's peculium – but soldiers on active service (could do so) in any manner they pleased, and veterans by the usual will. But whether other persons could do so, unless they received a special privilege, has been doubted – for instance, whether Our most learned advocates, the most dedicated clerks in the bureaus, imperial messengers, and also teachers of the liberal arts, chief physicians as well, and all others, in a word, those who receive public salaries or stipends, could do memorialibus et agentibus in rebus nec non magistris studiorum liberalium, archiatris quoque et omnibus omnino, qui salaria vel stipendia percipiunt publica. 1f. In his itaque omnibus sancimus, quia ad imitationem peculii castrensis quasi castrense peculium supervenit, omnibus, qui tale peculium possident, super ipsis tantummodo rebus, quae quasi castrensis peculii sunt, ultima condere (secundum leges tamen) posse elogia: hoc nihilo minus eis addito privilegio, ut neque eorum testamenta de inofficioso querella expugnentur. 1g. Si enim patronus adversus res, quas libertus eius ex castris quaesivit sui iuris indubitanter constitutus, praeteritus fuerit ab ingrato liberto, tamen contra eiusmodi peculium contra tabulas bonorum possessionem non habet secundum veterum legum sanctionem, quemadmodum oportet praefata peculia, quae ad instar castrensis peculii introducta sunt, de inofficioso querellae esse supposita?

[100] Combine with C. 1.3.49 and 1.5.22.
[101] Sections 1e–1f are epitomized in C. 6.22.12.

2. Sed haec obtinere oportet, donec in sacris parentum suorum constituti sunt hi qui quasi castrense peculium possident. si enim sui iuris efficiantur, procul dubio est eorum testamenta et pro ipsis rebus, quas antea ex quasi castrensi peculio habebant, posse de inofficioso querellam sustinere, cum neque nomen peculii permanet, sed aliis rebus confunditur et similem fortunam recipit, quemadmodum et ceterae res eorum, et unum congregatur ex omnibus patrimonium.

D. k. Sept. Constantinopoli post consulatum Lampadii et Orestae vv. cc.

XXVIIII De Inofficiosis Donationibus

[1] Imp. Philippus A. Nicanori et Papinianae. Si, ut adlegatis, mater vestra ad deludendam inofficiosi querellam paene universas facultates suas, dum ageret in rebus humanis, factis donationibus sive in quosdam liberos sive in extraneos exhausit ac postea vos ex duabus unciis fecit heredes easque legatis et fideicommissis exinanire gestivit, non iniuria iuxta formam super inofficioso testamento constitutorum subveniri vobis utpote quartam partem non habentibus desideratis.

PP. XIIII k. Sept. Philippo A. et Titiano conss.

[2] Impp. Valerianus et Gallienus AA. Aetiae. Pater si omne patrimonium suum impetu quodam immensae liberalitatis in filium effudit, aut in potestate is permansit, et arbitri familiae erciscundae officio congruit, ut tibi quartam debitae ab intestato portionis praestet incolumem, so. 1f. We ordain in regard to all these that since quasi-military peculium has arisen following the pattern of military peculia, for all persons who have such a peculium, with respect only to that property which is quasi-military, they may dispose of it in lawful manner by a last will; they are nevertheless granted the additional privilege that their wills may not be attacked as undutiful. 1g. For if a patron had been overlooked by his ungrateful freedman who is certainly sui iuris and whose property, according to the ancient laws, came from his military duty, and he (the patron) nevertheless has no right of possession of the inheritance contrary to the will of such freedman, why should the aforesaid peculium introduced on the pattern of the military peculium be subjected to complaint concerning undutiful wills?

2. But these provisions may apply only as long as persons who have quasi-military peculium are in the power of their parents. For when they become sui iuris, there is no doubt that their wills, even as to that peculium which they previously acquired as quasi-military, can be subject to complaint concerning undutiful wills, since then the name of "peculium" no longer applies, but such property then is intermingled with, and is subject to the same conditions as, the remainder of their property, and becomes one and the same property.

Given September 1, at Constantinople, in the post-consulate of the viri clarissimi Lampadius and Orestes (531).

Twenty-Ninth Title Undutiful Gifts

[1] Emperor P*HILIP Augustus to Nicanor and Papiniana.* If, as you allege, your mother, in order to frustrate a complaint seeking to have her will set aside as undutiful, during her lifetime almost exhausted all her property by making gifts either to certain of her children or to strangers, and afterwards made you heirs to two-twelfths of her property and wanted to reduce that to nothing through legacies and testamentary requests, you do not unjustly desire to be aided by the provisions of the constitutions made concerning undutiful wills, as not having received your legal portion.

Posted August 19, in the consulship of Philip Augustus and Titianus (245).

[2] Emperors V*ALERIAN and* G*ALLIENUS Augusti to Aetia.* If your father, by some impulse of extravagant generosity, gave all his property to his son, the latter either remained in the power of his father, in which case, in an action to divide, it behooves the judge to divide the property in such a way that you fully receive the fourth of the portion due on intestacy; or the son is emancipated, in which case, since a gift requires no outside help but is supported by its own aut emancipatus fuerit, et, quia donatio non indiget alieno adminiculo, sed suis viribus nititur, iuxta constitutiones is qui provinciam regit ad similitudinem inofficiosi querellae auxilium tibi aequitatis impertiet.

PP. VI k. Aug. Maximo II et Glabrione conss.

[3] Idem AA. Aeliano. Precibus quidem tuis proposita rescripta eos parentes denotant, qui, cum testamento facto vivi patrimonium suum immensis donationibus exinanissent, inane nomen heredum liberis reliquissent. sed ad intestatos quoque eadem ratio aequitatis extenditur.

PP. X k. Nov. ipsis IIII et III AA. conss.

[4] Impp. Diocletianus et Maximianus AA. Calpurniae Aristaenetae. Si filius tuus immoderatae liberalitatis effusione patrimonium suum exhausit, praesidis provinciae auxilio uteris, qui discussa fide veri, si in integrum restitutionem ex filii persona competere tibi ob improbabilem donationis enormitatem animadverterit, in removendis his quae perperam gesta sunt tibi subveniet. ideoque non est tibi necessarium adversus immodicas donationes auxilium ad instar inofficiosi testamenti.

PP. IIII id. Febr. Mediolani Maximo II et Aquilino conss.

[5] Idem AA. Cottabeo. Si totas facultates tuas per donationes vacuefecisti, quas in emancipatos filios contulisti, id, quod ad submovendas inofficiosi testamenti querellas non ingratis liberis relinqui necesse est, ex factis donationibus detractum, ut filii vel nepotes, qui postea ex quocumque legitimo matrimonio nati sunt, debitum bonorum subsidium consequantur, ad patrimonium tuum revertetur.

D. II k. Mart. Maximo II et Aquilino conss.

[6] Idem AA. Demetrianae. Cum donationibus in fratrem tuum collatis facultates patris tui exhaustas esse eundemque patrem vestrum ea quae superfuerant codicillis inter vos divisisse proponas, si voluntatem eius non agnovisti nec beneficio aetatis adversus haec iuvari poteris nec strength (i.e., it requires no confirmation), the governor will, according to the constitutions, extend equitable relief following the pattern of a complaint to set a will aside as undutiful.[102]

Posted July 27, in the consulship of Maximus, for the second time, and Glabrio (256).

[3] The same Augusti to Aelianus. The rescripts issued in answer to your petition specify only those parents who, after making a will, exhausted their property during their lifetime by large gifts, leaving to the children the meaningless name of heir. The same principle of equity extends also to parents who die intestate.

Posted October 23, in the consulship of the Augusti themselves, Consuls for the fourth and third times, respectively (257).

[4][103] Emperors DIOCLETIAN and MAXIMIAN Augusti to Calpurnia Aristaeneta. If your son exhausted his property through extravagant and lavish generosity, you may call the governor to your aid; and if on investigation of the basis of truth he finds that you, through your son, should have restitution of your rights as to the unreasonably large gifts, he will aid you by annulling the wrongful acts.[104] Hence, for the purpose of setting the immoderate gifts aside, you need no action similar to that of setting a will aside as undutiful.

Posted February 10, at Milan, in the consulship of Maximus, for the second time, and Aquilinus (286).

[5] The same Augusti to Cottabaeus. If you exhausted all your property through gifts you made to your emancipated sons, then whatever is required for forestalling the complaints of your children, who are not ungrateful, to set the will aside as undutiful, will be taken from the gifts made and returned as part of your property, so that your sons and grandsons, thereafter born in lawful marriage, may receive the amount legally due them from your property.

Given February 28, in the consulship of Maximus, for the second time, and Aquilinus (286).

[6] The same Augusti to Demetriana. When you say that the property of your father was exhausted through gifts made to your brother, and that he divided the remainder between you both in a codicil (to his will), then, if you have not recognized his will as valid, and you are unable to avail yourself of the right of [102] Gifts to unemancipated sons were generally invalid (C. 8.53.11), while gifts to emancipated sons were valid (C. 8.53.17).

[103] = Frag. Vat. 282; combine with C. 8.53.6.

[104] The son, being a minor, could have brought an action for restitutio in integrum.

tantum dos a patre data et fideicommissum continent, quantum ad submovendam querellam sufficiat, de enormitate donationum ad exemplum inofficiosi testamenti praeses provinciae iurisdictionis suae partes exhibebit.

PP. VI k. Mai. conss. ut supra.

[7] Idem AA. Aurelio Ammiano. Si mater tua ita patrimonium suum profunda liberalitate in fratrem tuum evisceratis opibus suis exhausit, ut quartae partis dimidium, quod ad excludendam inofficiosi testamenti querellam adversus te sufficeret, in his donationibus quas tibi largita est non habeas, quod immoderate gestum est revocabitur.

PP. V id. Mai. Maximo II et Aquilino conss.

[8] Idem AA. Auxanoni. pr. Si liqueat matrem tuam intervertendae quaestionis inofficiosi causa patrimonium suum donationibus in unum filium collatis exhausisse, cum adversus eorum cogitationes, qui consiliis supremum iudicium anticipare contendunt et actiones filiorum exhauriunt, aditum querellae ratio deposcat, quod donatum est pro ratione quartae ad instar inofficiosi testamenti convicti deminuetur. 1. Nam quod uxor a marito in se matrimonii tempore donationis causa collatum emancipato filio communi consentiente domino donavit, velut ex bonis patris, de cuius substantia prohibente matrimonio non potuit exire, datum accipi rationis est: in cuius bonis si idem consilium et eventus comprehendatur, lex, quam patrimonio matris ediximus, observabitur.

PP. III id. Sept. CC. conss.

[9] Imp. Constantius A. Olybrio. Non convenit dubitari, quod immodicarum donationum omnis querella ad similitudinem inofficiosi testamenti legibus fuerit introducta et sit in hoc actionis utriusque vel una causa vel similis aestimanda vel idem et temporibus et moribus.

D. XIIII k. Iun. Tauro et Florentio conss.

minority in these matters (since restitutio in integrum is inapplicable), and the dowry given you and the testamentary trust provided for you in the codicil are insufficiently large to remove your right of complaint over undutifulness, the governor will grant you an action against such gifts, following the pattern of a complaint for setting undutiful wills aside.

Posted April 26, in the consulship as above (286).

[7] The same Augusti to Ammianus. If your mother dissipated her property and bled dry her resources through her extravagant generosity to your brother, so that the gifts made to you do not amount to half of the fourth (the legal portion) – the amount that would be sufficient to exclude you from a complaint to set a will aside as undutiful – then her unlawful acts will be annulled.

Posted May 11, in the consulship of Maximus, for the second time, and Aquilinus (286).

[8] The same Augusti to Auxano. pr. If it seems clear that your mother, in order to frustrate a complaint to set her will aside as undutiful, exhausted her property by making gifts to one son, then, since justice demands (that you have) permission to complain against the plans of those who by their intrigues hasten to anticipate a last will and testament and take rights of action away from sons, the law will require you entering upon a complaint, namely that the gifts be diminished as the legal portion may require, following the pattern of a case in which a will is shown to be undutiful. 1. For the property which a wife, with the consent of the husband, gives to their common and emancipated son out of the property given to her by her husband as a gift during the time of the marriage, must rightly be considered as property given (to the son) from the husband's estate, from the substance of which it could not depart (into the wife's) on account of the marriage. If, however, the same (cunning) plan and result is discovered in connection with the husband's property, the same law is applicable as that which applies to the property of the mother.

Posted September 11, in the consulship of the Caesars (294).

[9][105] Emperor C*onstantius* Augustus to Olybrius. There is no doubt that the action concerning immoderate gifts has been introduced into the laws following the pattern of laws regarding undutiful wills, and in this respect both actions must be deemed as one or similar or the same, both as to time and conditions.

Given May 19, in the consulship of Taurus and Florentius (361).

[105] = C.Th. 2.20.1; combine with C.Th. 2.19.4.

XXX De Inofficiosis Dotibus

[1] Imp. Constantius A. ad Maximum praesidem Ciliciae. Cum omnia bona a matre tua dote dicantur exhausta, concordare legibus promptum est, ut ad exemplum inofficiosi testamenti adversus dotem immodicam exercendae actionis copia tribuatur et filiis conquerentibus emolumenta debita deferantur.

D. XIIII k. Ian. Sirmio Datiano et Cereale conss.

XXXI De Petitione Hereditatis

